Certification and recruiting top forum agenda

The development of an athletics certification program and recent NCAA legislation affecting football recruiting will be the major topics of discussion at the 1992 College Football Forum February 16-18 at the Hyatt Regency Crown Center in Kansas City, Missouri.

Joining approximately 50 of the nation's top sports journalists at the 16th annual event will be Daniel E. Ferritor, chancellor of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville; Douglas S. Hobbs, faculty athletics representative at the University of California, Los Angeles, and former Division I vice-president, and T. Jones, director of athletics at Texas Tech University.

This is the third consecutive year that the event has featured administrators as well as coaches. Previously, it was called the College Football Preview and was devoted to discussion of the coaches' teams and conferences.

Coaches scheduled to attend the forum are Bill Lewis, Georgia Institute of Technology; Al Luginbill, San Diego State University;

Daniel E. Ferritor

Douglas S. Hobbs

T. Jones

Glen Mason, University of Kansas; Paul Pasqualoni, Syracuse University; R. C. Slocum, Texas A&M University, and Gene Stallings, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa.

Two panels of coaches (Lewis, Pasqualoni and Slocum in one group and Luginbill, Mason and Stallings in the other) will meet with the media on the morning of February 17 to discuss legislative issues affecting coaches, including limitations on recruiting activities and permissible recruiters, coaching-staff limitations in Division I-A, and the ability of student-athletes to negotiate with pro teams without losing their amateur status.

The coaches also are expected to discuss their views on certification of coaches and a Division I-A football playoff.

In the afternoon, the administrators will discuss the development of an athletics certification program for NCAA institutions. The Council is considering legislation for the 1993 Convention that would establish a mandatory certification program based on information gathered through the NCAA's voluntary pilot program, which began in May 1990.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will kick off the final day of the forum with a 9 a.m. session, which will be followed by one-on-one interview opportunities.

Program in place, Allen staying put

By Steven R. Hagwell
The NCAA News Staff

Five years ago, Francis Allen was sitting in the office of Robert S. Devaney, director of athletics at the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, when Devaney asked Allen if he would like to relinquish his duties as men's gymnastics coach and join the Nebraska administration in a fund-raising capacity.

It was a natural move for Devaney. The most successful men's gymnastics coach in Nebraska history and one of the most successful in collegiate history, Allen had guided the Nebraska program from obscurity to national prominence. Add that he was colorful, enthusiastic, straightforward, determined and aggressive, and Allen had all the qualities to be as successful in fund-raising as he was in gymnastics.

Allen was flattered, but he declined. That, too, was a natural move. After all, Allen loved gymnastics and wanted to continue his association with the sport.

It is a decision neither party has regretted.

Premier coach

Currently in his 23rd year at the helm of the program, Allen is the premier men's gymnastics coach in the country. Seven NCAA titles; four runner-up finishes; 15 NCAA championship appearances, including 13 straight, and nine Big Eight Conference crowns are just a sample of what he has accomplished.

Sample is the key word, because according to Allen, the success Nebraska has enjoyed will continue in 1992. (Through January, Nebraska was the nation's top-rated team.)

"I would be surprised if we don't win the national championship," says Allen, a member of the Cornhuskers' 1963 and 1964 Big Eight Conference championship teams. "This team is doing very, very well, and I think this team believes it can do it. That's not to say we will win it because there are some excellent teams out there, and we still have to go out and perform. But I feel we can win it."

Such comments should not be discarded easily. In 1990, just before the start of the season, Allen boldly predicted that the Cornhuskers would win the NCAA title. They did. A year later, despite losing four all Americans and having a squad consisting of five freshmen, Allen said the Cornhuskers would contend again for the championship. They did, coming within two-tenths of one point of reaching the finals (Nebraska finished seventh overall).

'Because I believe'

"A lot of coaches are afraid to stick their necks out," says Allen. "If I say our team will win the (NCAA) title, it's because I believe we can. I don't worry about other teams... I can't control them. When I hear coaches talk about other teams and how good they are fundamentally... I hate listening to that. Why not talk about your own team? Why not say how good your own team is? What's wrong

Graduation-rate form planned for II and III

A form that Divisions II and III member institutions will use for reporting graduation-rate information in accordance with NCAA and Federal legislation is being developed by the NCAA Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24.

The NCAA Council recently decided that the Association will compile and submit to the Department of Education academic data required from all NCAA member institutions by the Federal Student Right-to-Know Act. That act directs institutions to report the data to the Department of Education, but permits the requirement to be waived for institutions that disclose "substantially comparable" graduation-rate data through an athletics conference or association.

See Graduation-rate, page 18

Cuts generate Title IX memo

Conditions under which university officials could violate Title IX requirements in the process of cutting intercollegiate athletics programs are noted in a draft memorandum recently circulated by the Department of Education for comment by educators and others.

The memorandum apparently was generated in response to controversies arising within the past year as a result of proposals by a number of institutions, including the College of William and Mary; the University of

See related story, page 17

Oklahoma, and California State University, Fullerton, to drop certain women's sports programs as part of cost-cutting efforts.

The draft memorandum, written by Michael L. Williams, assistant secretary for civil rights, states that one of the basic requirements of the Title IX regulation is that the rate of participation for male and female student-athletes has to be proportionate to male-female student enrollment. If that does not exist, Williams wrote that there must be a history or a continuing practice of program expansion for students of the underrepresented sex or the current program must equally accommodate the interests and abilities of male and female students.

It goes on to specify various circumstances in which program cuts might place an institution in violation of the law.

The draft memorandum contains no indication of how broadly it has been circulated or of when a final version might be released. NCAA legal counsel has submitted a number of suggestions to approve the text in order to describe Title IX requirements more specifically.

Legislators enter Nevada lawsuit

The legislative commission of the state of Nevada is seeking to file an amicus brief in the NCAA's suit over a Nevada law that prevents the Association from completing infractions cases in that state.

The Nevada law has established a restrictive set of judicial-like due process standards and also provides harsh financial penalties for failure to comply. The NCAA maintains the law violates the U.S. Constitution in several ways.

The case is scheduled to be heard March 13 in a Federal district court in Las Vegas, Nevada.

If Judge Howard McKibben permits the legislative commission to appear as an amicus curiae in the suit, those involved will be as follows:

- Plaintiff: NCAA. The Association filed the suit November 12. The infractions case in question involves the recruitment of former prep star Lloyd Daniels by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

- Defendants: Nevada-Las Vegas men's basketball coach Jerry Tar-

Sports medicine book updated and distributed

The fourth edition of the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook was mailed to directors of athletics, head athletics trainers and conference commissioners February 10. Athletics directors also were encouraged to give one of their copies to an appropriate team physician.

The handbook was developed by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports in 1981 to keep member institutions apprised of current trends and developments in sports medicine. The latest previous revision of this publication occurred in 1987.

The committee has given the handbook a new look by incorporating the four new guidelines that have been approved by the NCAA Council since the last revision (Guidelines for Helmet Fitting and Removal in Athletics, AIDS and Intercollegiate Athletics, Assessment of Body Composition, and Ergogenic Aids and Nutrition).

In addition, guidelines have been grouped into four general categories for easy reference: administrative issues, medical issues, special populations and equipment. An annual review of the publication is now a part of the competitive safeguards committee's duties. If necessary, a revised version of the handbook will be published annually.

The committee recommends that administrators, coaches, medical personnel and student-athletes review the handbook, which is designed to provide a foundation for a safe intercollegiate athletics program.

Additional copies of the handbook may be ordered from the NCAA circulation office

1992 NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook

(913/339-1900). The cost is $3.25 for Association members and $6.50 for nonmembers.

Questions about the guidelines or references should be directed to the NCAA sports sciences staff (913/339-1906).

Division II commissioners organize group

Commissioners of Division II conferences met during the NCAA Convention in Anaheim, California, to organize as a group.

Calling itself the NCAA Division II Commissioners, the group elected Bob Vanatta, commissioner of the Sunshine State Conference, as chair. He will serve in the post for two years.

Eight other commissioners of conferences in the division volunteered to serve on the new organization's steering committee. They are Leon G. Kerry of the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, Wallace Jackson of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, Elwood B. Hahn of the Great Northwest Conference, Charles A. Eberle of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference, Doug Echols of the South Atlantic Conference, Tom D. Morgan of the California Collegiate Athletic Conference, Kurt Patberg of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference and Christopher Bledsoe of the New York Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than March 2, 1992.

NCAA Council: Replacement for Albert E. Smith, formerly president of South Carolina State College, no longer at a member institution. Appointee must be a chief executive officer from Division I-AA South.

Football Rules Committee: Replacement for David M. Nelson, deceased, as a Division I member of the committee. Appointee must be from Division I.

Men's and Women's Tennis Committee: Replacement for Alan Cummings, Stanford University, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be from Division I.

Huskies regain Rose Bowl trophy

University of Washington campus police learned February 4 that the 1992 Rose Bowl trophy, stolen earlier from its display case in the Husky athletics department, was located in Vancouver, British Columbia, apparently after being taken by University of British Columbia students.

A Washington campus police spokesman told United Press International that the trophy was recovered by Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Committee examines foreign-student records

The Foreign Student Records Consultants spent most of their recent meeting discussing changes needed in the Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletics Eligibility as a result of the adoption of Proposal Nos. 14 and 16 at the 1992 Convention.

The consultants met January 31-February 1 in Park City, Utah.

"The biggest change likely will be differentiating between Divisions I and II," NCAA Director of Legislative Services Daniel T. Dutcher said. "That will have to occur with the new legislation."

"Core courses" is not a concept that readily applies in all foreign educational systems," Dutcher said. "Some countries can apply it in concept. But there are many other educational systems that are global based on an all-or-nothing approach."

With the global system, instruction in different areas is combined and culminates in the achievement of a completion document and an exit examination.

"It's the global system that will be the most problematic in reviewing Proposal Nos. 14 and 16," Dutcher said. "It will be necessary for the consultants to review the guide country-by-country to determine if changes are necessary."

In other action, the consultants:

- Will recommend to the Academic Requirements Committee that a proposal be sent to the NCAA Council to clarify that indexing (the use of a sliding scale for core-course requirements and achievement-test requirements) will not apply to the initial eligibility of foreign students.

- Reviewed the development of new countries that will be added to the guide as a result of recent world developments. "It appears that the breakup of countries like the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia, and the unification of Germany, won't have an immediate effect," Dutcher said. "But it is likely that secondary credentials issued by the new nations will begin to appear in the not too-distant future."

- Will recommend to the Academic Requirements Committee that it review the application of Bylaw 14.1.7.2 regarding the completion of three-year "baccalaureate" degrees that do not correspond directly to four-year baccalaureate degrees, by students who have not completed 12 years of secondary school. The consultants recommend forwarding an amendment to the Council to clarify that such situations must be reviewed on a case-by-case basis.

- Reviewed various editorial changes to the guide. The next edition of the guide will be available in May and will be effective in August 1993.

NCAA Bylaw 13.1.4.4—contacts subsequent to National Letter of Intent signing

In accordance with Bylaw 13.1.4.4, Divisions I and II member institutions should note that subsequent to the calendar day on which a prospect signs a National Letter of Intent, there are no limits on the number of contacts with the prospect, the prospect's relatives or legal guardian(s) by the institution with which the prospect has signed; however, the following conditions continue to apply:

1. Any contact at the prospect's educational institution in the sports of football and basketball must be confined to the permissible contact period and shall not exceed one visit per week.

2. In Division I only, no in-person, on- or off-campus contact may be made during a dead period in the applicable sports. [Note: With the adoption of 1992 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 138, Division II eliminated the restriction that no in-person, on- or off-campus contact may be made during a dead period subsequent to a prospect's signing of the National Letter of Intent.]

3. In Division I only, no in-person, on- or off-campus contact may be made with a nonqualifier enrolled in the first year of a two-year college.

4. In Division I, no on- or off-campus contact (including correspondence and telephone calls) may be made with the prospect by a representative of the institution's athletics interests, except those involving permissible preenrollment activities (e.g., a discussion of summer-employment arrangements). In Division II, no in-person, off-campus contacts may be made by a representative of the institution's athletics interests except those involving permissible preenrollment activities (e.g., a discussion of summer employment arrangements).

5. Contact at the site of a prospect's competition shall continue to be governed by the provisions of Bylaw 13.1.5.2, except that a contact with a prospect's relative or legal guardian(s) at the site of the prospect's competition is permitted. [Note: Such contact must occur during a permissible evaluation period, inasmuch as other prospects will be involved in the competition.]

NCAA Bylaws 13.2.4 and 13.2.5— arrangement of employment or educational loans for prospects

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.2.4.1, it is permissible for an institution to arrange employment for a prospect, provided the employment does not begin prior to the completion of the prospect's senior year in high school. Per Bylaw 13.2.4.2, an institution or its representatives may not provide a prospect free transportation to or from a summer job unless it is the employer's established policy to transport all employees to and from the job site. In addition, the provisions of Bylaw 13.2.5 permit an institution to arrange educational loans for a prospect, provided the loans are not made prior to the completion of the prospect's senior year in high school. Such loans must be from a regular lending agency and based on a regular repayment schedule. During its March 5, 1987, conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that a member institution may provide prospective student-athletes with detailed information regarding employment or a loan (e.g., specific salary or loan arrangements) prior to the completion of the prospective student-athlete's senior year in high school, provided the actual employment or acceptance of loan benefits does not occur prior to the completion of the prospective student-athlete's senior year in high school.

NCAA Bylaw 11.5—certification to recruit off campus

The provisions of Bylaw 11.5.1 (effective August 1, 1992), which permits only those coaches who have been certified to contact or evaluate prospective student-athletes off campus, are applicable to all Division I sports. Thus, a Division II or III institution that has a sport classified in Division I (see Bylaw 20.4.1.3) is subject to the provisions of Bylaw 11.5.1 in that sport. In addition, with the adoption of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 29, effective August 1, 1993, the provisions of Bylaw 11.5.1 also are applicable to all Division II sports.

NCAA Bylaw 15.2.6.3—employment earnings—year after eligibility exhausted Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 15.2.6.3, employment earnings of a student-athlete who has exhausted eligibility in a particular sport during the prior academic year are exempt from a student-athlete's individual financial aid limitations set forth in Bylaw 15.1.1 (i.e., the value of a full grant), provided the student-athlete subsequently does not practice or compete in intercollegiate athletics. It should be noted that the provisions of Bylaw 15.2.6.3 do not permit a student-athlete who exhausts eligibility during the fall term (e.g., soccer or football student-athlete) to exempt employment earnings during subsequent terms of that academic year in determining whether the student-athlete has reached his or her full grant-in-aid limit.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Olympic hockey program clings to college identity

By Theodore A. Breidenthal
The NCAA News Staff

Unlike the "Miracle on Ice" in 1980, when a bunch of college players won the hockey gold medal, the only miracle at the XVI Winter Games might be that college athletes are a part of our Olympic team at all.

The ever-increasing pressure to challenge the best athletes in the world with our best athletes, whether amateur or professional, has denied almost all U.S. college athletes the opportunity to compete in the Winter Olympics.

"Hockey is the only sport of the Winter Olympics that has a strong college identity," said Baaron Pittenger, executive director of USA Hockey, the governing body for U.S. amateur hockey and the organization responsible for organizing and training the U.S. Olympic hockey team.

"We will not have college athletes participating in the biathlon, skiing, luge, bobsled, figure skating or speed skating — no college participation in any of those sports this year. The hockey players, whether they are in school, just out of school or a year or two removed, are still remembered for their college hockey careers."

Pittenger said the changes from amateur to professional have had a major impact on the Olympic movement, making for a difficult adjustment period.

'Adjust with the times'

"When the breakdown began (from allowing only amateur athletes to allowing professional athletes to compete), I was opposed to the change. I think one of the things that has provided the appeal to the public over the years has been the Olympic dream and the opportunity to make the team. When it became inevitable that the change was going to take place, we had to adjust with the times. You just have to do the best that you can with the change."

As one of the country's foremost advocates of amateur athletics, William J. Cleary Jr., athletics director at Harvard University, is vehemently opposed to professionals participating in the Olympics.

"The Olympics are about the hopes and dreams of young people," said Cleary, who coached hockey at Harvard for 19 seasons, including a memorable season in 1989 when his team won the national championship. "I think we are losing that by using professionals."

'Never again'

"We will never again see a scene like Jim Craig in 1980 looking for his father in the stands with the flag draped around him or Mike Eruzione receiving his gold medal."

Pittenger said that Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, felt that the West was penalizing itself by using amateur athletes while the rest of the world was competing with professionals. "He wanted to see the best athletes from all countries available for the Olympic competition," Pittenger said.

"Since 1984, the USOC (United States Olympic Committee) has provided a growing amount of resources for postcollege athletes. That, and the breakdown of eligibility rules, has had a major impact on the absence of collegians on some of our Olympic teams. Sports like men's gymnastics and men's and women's volleyball are perfect examples of sports that have seen a steady upward averaging in the age of the athlete."

Twelve of the current 23 Team USA players competed at the collegiate level last season (see box). Of those 12, six have collegiate eligibility remaining, and two already have said they will return to college after the Olympics.

After three invitational select trial camps last summer, a 31-member preliminary team was selected. Evenually, 50 players were given a tryout as the team completed a difficult 56-game pre-Olympic North America tour in January with a 17-31-8 record. The average age of the players was 23. Most played college hockey and have signed professional contracts with National Hockey League clubs; however, most were earmarked for their parent club's minor-league team when the Olympic invitation was extended.

The National Hockey League schedule coincides with the Winter Olympics, and NHL owners have been reluctant to free their top players when a few points at the end of the season could determine a playoff berth.

Hockey won't change

Added Pittenger, "I think Olympic hockey is one of the sports that will remain as it is unless the National Hockey League chooses to close down during the Olympics, and I don't think that is going to happen. We will continue to develop our young players through the USA Hockey programs and our college programs."

Pittenger said that because most of the players are just out of college, it does put Team USA at a slight disadvantage. "Most of the teams that we will play in Albertville (France, site of the '92 Olympics) will have players that are more experienced and older than ours." Joining the United States in Pool A are Italy, Germany, Finland, Poland and Sweden.

Because of the age difference, Pittenger said you "can't expect to win. But that doesn't mean we can't compete or win. All you have to do is look at 1980."

"I thought our 1988 hockey team was good enough to win a medal.

And now, if you look at our junior world (18- and 19-year-olds from NCAA schools) teams the last two years, we have done extremely well. Our team finished fourth last year, so I think that proves we can compete internationally. The quality of the American hockey player is constantly getting better."

Cleary's first Olympic experience came in 1956 when the U.S. team won the silver medal in Cortina d'Ampezzo, Italy. "All our guys were amateurs, he said. "We were paid $15 a month to take care of our incidentals and we had a great time."

It's more than winning

"The biggest thrill was marching in the parade at the opening ceremonies. I was a young kid 21 years old — and here I was walking with USA on my jacket, and people were looking at us and cheering us. It was quite an experience to walk with the mighty Russians and the greatest athletes from all over the world. I was absolutely thrilled. No question, it was my most memorable Olympic experience, even greater than winning the gold medal at Squaw Valley in 1960."

Everything now seems to be win, win, win, Cleary said. But winning is not the most important motivation for participating in the Olympics, he said.

"Don't get me wrong," he said, "I want to win just as bad as the next guy, but it's not the end of the world if we don't. I think it's more gratifying when you do win."

"The most important thing is that we compete. I think we are taking away a chance for a lot of young people to compete and compete well for our country."

Divisions I-A, II set voting marks

Most NCAA Convention voting records were not changed at the 1992 gathering in Anaheim, California, but Division I-A and Division II each established new highs.

And the I-A members did it the hard way, by exceeding the highest possible vote in that subdivision.

How did that happen? Human error, apparently. The vote on Proposal No. 131-A, dealing with permissible recruiting contacts, was too close to call from the dais. So the Voting Committee swung into action to count voting paddles. The tallied result was 56 in favor and 61 against, or 117 total.

The problem: There were only 106 institutions and 10 conferences (including the Big East Conference, newly authorized as a I-A voter for that Convention) eligible to vote on a Division I-A issue. So somebody's paddle got counted twice, it would seem. And the record is 117, better than the old mark of 115 at the Dallas Convention in 1990.

Division II, meanwhile, continued a two-year attack on its voting marks by registering three counts higher than ever before and another two that tied the old mark of 196.

The new high in that division is 199, tallied twice in Anaheim — once on Proposal No. 45 and once on No. 46, both dealing with outside competition in that division. And the Division II members also marked up a 197 and two at 196, the latter tying the former high mark set in Nashville, Tennessee, in 1991.

In the last two Conventions, Division II has had no fewer than 37 counted votes that equalled or bettered its 1990 record of 187.

All of the other marks were unchanged.

212 CEOs at Convention, second highest total ever

A total of 212 chief executive officers of NCAA member institutions — the second highest total ever — attended the 1992 NCAA Convention in Anaheim.

That attendance figure trails only the 1991 count of 236 CEOs in NCAA Convention history and marks only the second time that more than 200 have attended. Before the 1991 gathering, the high mark was 199 CEOs at the special "integrity Convention" in the summer of 1985.

Other recent totals were 137 in 1989 at San Francisco and 169 in 1990 in Dallas.

Of the 212 total, 146 were from Division I institutions, representing nearly half (49.0 percent) of the 298 members in that division. A year earlier, 54.7 percent of the Division I CEOs (162 of 296) attended.

By subdivisions, 69 of the 106 CEOs in Division I-A were in Anaheim, for 65.1 percent. That was comparable to the 67 percent from that subdivision a year before.

Other counts: 38 of 89 in Division I-AA and 39 of 103 in Division I-AAA, both under the record highs of 46 and 45 established in 1991, plus 42 of 218 from Division II (the high was 52 a year before) and 24 of 331 in Division III. The Division III figure is believed to be the highest ever, although precise counts were not kept until the late 1980s.

For the membership as a whole, the 212 CEOs attending represented almost exactly 25 percent of all of the active member institutions (847). The 1991 figure was 28.5 percent.

- Total Convention vote: Record is 758, Nashville, 1991, three different times. High in Anaheim: 754 on Proposal No. 36 (Presidents Commission resolution regarding financial issues).

- Division I vote: Record is 330, Nashville, 1991, time-reduction proposal. High in Anaheim: 328 on Proposal No. 19 and again on No. 25-1, both dealing with satisfactory-progress requirements.

- Division I-AA vote: Record is 96, Dallas, 1990, spring football practice. High in Anaheim: 93 twice, on No. 54 (motion to reconsider) and on No. 55. Both dealt with restricted-earnings coaches.

- Division III vote: Record is 268, Nashville, 1991, on two different parts of that division's time-reduction proposal. High in Anaheim: 261 on No. 33-B, a part of the division's playing-season proposal.

CLASSROOM COACHES

Athletics 'teaching' could aid academics

By Paul C. Zolbrod

Ironically, while their athletics teams benefit from well-conditioned, highly motivated players attracted to sports as kids, U.S. colleges and universities enroll underachieving young adults unprepared for the rigors of the classroom.

As a college teacher in this post-literate, TV-saturated age, I wish more entering freshmen could construct sentences or handle equations the way college-bound athletes can tackle, jump or swing a bat.

Society expects these young people to become statesmen, engineers and problem solvers; yet many can't read a map, identify the subject of a sentence or calculate a square root. It is as if basketball players reported to their coaches unable to dribble while still expected to win games.

What kind of society is it, I find myself wondering, where kids learn to apply themselves for hours in the gym or on the field but have not been taught to sit intently at a desk diagramming sentences or adding fractions? Or for that matter, where fans may expect more of shortstops than parents expect of teachers—or teachers demand of students?

Believe it or not, good coaching can help. Just as college professors work with students to cultivate higher-order skills like syntheses and critical analysis, coaches engender complex players and sophisticated game strategy.

And just as coaches know that athletes must first practice and master an effective stroke or a firm swing, teachers should expect youngsters to begin with simple skills, to accept criticism, to defer gratification, to discipline themselves as they learn. Whether in winning on the field or succeeding in class, the deepest fulfillment comes from performing well, which means mastering fundamentals first.

Once you begin making them, useful comparisons between sports and today's classroom readily occur. Because many freshmen have done so little writing by the time they come to college, they believe they need only sit at a computer the night before an essay is due and throw words on a screen.

But a seasoned athlete has learned that games aren't played that way. A good writer knows in advance precisely what he or she wants to say and knows how to say it, too which means first laboring to develop an outline the way a team builds a game plan, or defining words and phrases one by one, the way a backfield runs a play over and over.

If we want our kids to learn as badly as young athletes want to wrestle or play tennis, we might experiment with methods coaches employ. We could instill in them the same intensity that a good team applies in a crucial game. We could point out to them that the rule of steady, patient practice prevails as readily in learning math as it does in passing the baton smoothly in a relay race.

As a college teacher formerly indifferent to sports, I gradually discovered that good athletes could discipline themselves to learn classroom fundamentals. They knew what it meant to try harder after getting beaten on a play, or to repeat a new move again and again. I simply reminded them how much alike study and practice are in mastering fundamentals.

In fact, I think teachers and coaches might even work together to improve education in America. They could develop joint seminars on teaching fundamentals, on motivating their student-athletes, on instilling desire. From coaches, teachers could learn how to help youngsters concentrate; from teachers, coaches could gain greater understanding of what the classroom requires. Perhaps they could swap ideas on teaching by developing tasks that might apply both in class and on the field.

Nobody likes drills, of course, but the way to progress beyond them is to master them first. Coaches know that already. Amidst all the rhetoric we have been hearing about educational reform, however, few educators these days seem to mention it.

Even spectators could join the movement to unite athletics and academics. Next time you watch your favorite team compete, try this: For a play or two, focus on one of the better athletes. Notice how he or she returns a serve or explodes off the starting block. Think about how much discipline and hard work has gone into that race. Then consider the implications if that were to happen in the classroom, too.

In fact, that's the way it should be on the assembly line, in the courtroom, in the machine room, at the drawing board, at corporate headquarters, at Mission Control. That's the way it should be wherever a well-trained person performs any function.

Fundamentals come first wherever success occurs. Only then does high performance follow. By cooperating, coaches and teachers can help considerably to make that happen, especially if academic achievement is to matter in our sports-happy culture the way that playing well does.

When it comes to basketball, it's time to take out the trash

By Vic Feuerherd
Wisconsin State Journal

One of the pleasures of watching college basketball is seeing the free-flowing elements of the playground in a disciplined atmosphere. But too much playground has crept into our nation's gyms.

In the vernacular of basketball, it's called trash talking, the derogatory comments directed at one player by another. It's an element of the game that perhaps fits the "survival of the fittest" mentality that permeates our nation's playgrounds. Now, the trash has spread so much that it is turning the physical and artistic college game into the sport's version of a landfill.

"I'm seeing more of it this year than any other year," said Northwestern University coach Bill Foster, a veteran of 32 years of college coaching. "It's something we have to get control of.... If we don't, it could lead to something dangerous."

That fear of the dangerous is one reason college basketball has made player decorum a point of emphasis for officials this year. The rule book points out that coaches and administrators are responsible for their players' behavior.

"It is not acceptable behavior, and we will do everything in our power to discourage it," University of Iowa coach Tom Davis said.

There is irony in that statement. It was one of Davis' players, Val Barnes, who put on one of the most blatant displays of trash talking seen this season.

Barnes met the University of Michigan's Jalen Rose at the free-throw line in a face-to-face fashion after the Wolverine freshman missed a critical foul shot late in a recent game at Iowa. Barnes was pulled away by an official, but his act, which according to the rules was worthy of a technical foul, went unpunished—by the official and Davis.

It was an artful illustration of what Purdue University coach Gene Keady says is the root of the problem.

"Coaches allow it and referees allow it," Keady said. "If another coach allows that, that's his business. My players are not going to do it if I know anything about it."

But players have to unlearn what some say is learned behavior. "It has a lot to do with the players' backgrounds," Michigan State University coach Jud Heathcote said. "They say that if a kid's from Detroit, it's part of his game."

Heathcote said he fought the battle over words with two of his former players—guard Steve Smith and forward Ken Redfield. Smith was a particularly notorious trash talker.

"Maybe they feel they have to assert themselves," Heathcote said. "Maybe you have to talk a game to get a game on the playground. It's part of how they play."

University of Wisconsin, Madison, coach Steve Yoder described players who play with their mouths as "childish and immature. There are a lot of immature players around the country," he said.

"I would want the message (to my players) to be not safe sex but no sex prior to marriage. That's my philosophy. That's my belief. Perhaps to some people, that may be considered old-fashioned. I don't know. That's the message I try to get across.

"I will say this: It gets tougher and tougher. It really does. And the longer you're in it, the more difficult it is."

"You tell (young athletes) about a (Bill) Bradley and how hard he worked, and they don't want to hear that at all but that's how he became a great player. He was quite limited in physical skills but was an unbelievable worker. That's very, very rare today. They don't want to be told things like how to play without the ball, screen, do things like that. They want to talk about spinning and dunking....

"The fun part (of recruiting) is going in the home, meeting the kid and the parents. It's great. The bad part is when they say they're not coming to your school and you'll have to play against them. Kids today don't really go to a school because of the school. It's 'I would play there because they had a lot of openings' or 'I went there because he went there.' The kids put themselves at a certain level, and it's always one level higher than they should be."

Better officials' pay sought

The NCAA Men's Soccer Committee will forward a request to the Executive Committee to increase officials' fees for soccer championships.

Currently, the referee makes $100 and the linesmen make $60 per contest in the preliminary rounds and $130 and $80, respectively, in the semifinals and finals. The committee is requesting increasing those fees to $120 and $80 for the preliminaries and $140 and $90 for the semifinals and finals.

The committee, at its February 4-7 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, also established criteria for rating teams for selection purposes.

Other committee actions, by division:

Division I: The Division I subcommittee reviewed applications from 20 conferences for automatic qualifications. The committee will recommend 11 conferences for automatic qualification, including the nine conferences that received automatic qualification in 1991, plus the Big Ten Conference and the Missouri Valley Conference. The committee will request a waiver of Bylaw 31.3.4.2 for the two new conferences because each has sponsored soccer for only two seasons.

Also:

- A change in the selection process will be recommended. Previously, each region received two berths plus the automatic qualifiers from that region. The new recommendation is to grant two berths, including the automatic qualifiers, per region. Further, the committee will recommend that the formula change to one automatic berth, plus automatic qualifiers, per region in 1993.

- Proposals were received from potential sites for the 1992 and 1993 championships. A recommendation will be announced in the February 19 issue of The NCAA News.

Division II: The Division II subcommittee will ask the Executive Committee to increase the bracket from 12 to 16 teams. The committee also will request a day of rest between the semifinals and finals.

Also, the subcommittee recommended automatic qualification for four of six conferences that applied. The California Collegiate Athletic Association, New England Collegiate Conference, Northern California Athletic Conference and Sunshine State Conference will receive automatic qualification for the 1992 championship.

Division III: The Division III subcommittee will request a change in the format of the championship to allow first- and second-round games to be played at the same site during the first weekend of the tournament. Currently, second- and third-round contests are played at the same site on the second weekend of the tournament. Under the request, the first and second rounds would continue to be grouped by region.

Also:

- The subcommittee will recommend the option of a day of rest between the semifinals and finals.

- The eight conferences that received automatic qualification last year, plus the Old Dominion Athletic Conference, were recommended for automatic qualification for the 1992 championship. Sixteen conferences applied.

Soccer rules committee addresses questions concerning 'dirty play'

In the interest of "cleaning up" play, the NCAA Men's and Women's Soccer Rules Committee toughened the penalties for a defender who stops an obvious goal-scoring opportunity by intentionally handling the ball or committing a direct free-kick foul.

The committee, at its annual committee meeting February 4-7 in Kansas City, Missouri, recommended an ejection for a player committing such a violation.

"This change addresses the situation of dirty play that the committee addressed last year with the one-vs.-goalkeeper shootout, without changing the flow of the game," said committee chair Anson Dorrance, head women's soccer coach at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. "This should greatly reduce the number of goal-scoring opportunities stopped by a violation."

The committee rescinded the one-vs.-goalkeeper shootout approved at last year's meeting, effective for the 1992 season. It was one of five rules rescinded. The lone rule approved with a 1992 effective date that was kept was the allowance for a television timeout following the 23rd minute of each half.

"Our goal last year was to solicit responses from coaches," Dorrance said. "We did that. Our focus this year was to clean up the game while making it more exciting."

Completed contest

The committee also allowed for a game that has surpassed the 70th minute to be declared a completed contest. All games halted by the official for reasons of inclement weather or disciplinary action will be considered suspended. The eventual outcome — resumption of play,

Other actions

In other actions, the rules committee:

- Will require that all facilities constructed or reconstructed after 1995 must be a minimum of 70 by 115 yards.

- Specified that the photographers' line should measure five feet from the end line beginning at the corners of the field.

- Reestablished the 10-second countdown at the end of each period.

- Rescinded sudden-death overtimes for all overtime periods. The first two overtimes will remain timed-overtime periods, with any subsequent overtimes being sudden death.

- Rescinded the no-offsidess rule within the opponent's 35-yard line.

- Defined goalkeeper possession to include parrying. If the goalkeeper can control the ball (parrying), his or her four allowable steps begin at that point. The goalkeeper will be penalized with an indirect free kick if the ball is picked up or handled after the four steps.

- Established a caution for a coach who verbally abuses the officials.

- Rescinded the rules limiting four players to a wall and five players in the penalty area on corner kicks.

- Proposed experimentation in four areas: (1) 15-yard minimum for establishing a wall in front of an indirect free kick, (2) giving time-keeping responsibilities to the referee on the field, (3) disallowing handling privileges on a back pass to the goalkeeper, and (4) loosening offsidess restrictions. In the final experiment, the committee is proposing eliminating Rule 5-2-b. This would eliminate a player who is in an offsidess position but not trying to gain an advantage from being flagged for an offsidess violation.

or replaying or counting the game as official, depending on the point during the game when the suspension occurred — will be up to the game authority.

If the game has progressed past the 70th minute and cannot be resumed, the game may be declared an official contest. If it has not progressed past the 70th minute and cannot be resumed, it is declared a terminated game that does not count as an official contest.

Other rules changes related to

"cleaning up" play included the elimination of a substitution for a player ejected during the half-time interval. Previously, a player ejected during half time could be replaced. With the new rule, if the player was on the field of play at the end of the first half, that player may not be substituted for and the team must compete a player short.

Also, a goalkeeper ejected during the penalty-kick shootout may be replaced only by one of the remaining players on the field.

Soccer talk

Among those participating in the NCAA Men's Soccer Committee meeting February 4-7 were (from left) Bruce Arena of the University of Virginia, committee chair James F. Dyer of the University of Maine, Richard G. Lowe of the University of North Texas and George S. Writer of Cornell University. See the story at the top of this page.

Women's committee sets new standard for soccer officials

The NCAA Women's Soccer Committee will require officials to work a minimum of four regular-season women's games to be eligible for championship assignments. The requirement doubles the previous minimum number of games required for consideration.

The committee met February 4-7 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Other committee actions, by division:

Division I: The Division I subcommittee discussed the feasibility of expanding the championship to 16 teams and voted to study the possibility of recommending expansion effective with the 1992 or 1993 championship.

Division II: The Division II subcommittee discussed the realignment of the geographic regions to reduce the cost of regular-season transportation. In addition, the committee reviewed the requirement that it predetermine the number of berths in each region as required by the Division II Championships Committee, effective with the 1992 championship.

Bracket expansion also was discussed and will be studied for future recommendation. The committee voted to treat NCAA/National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics dual members as full NCAA members when considering strength of schedule in the selection process for the championships.

Division III: The Division III subcommittee voted to move the states of Texas and Arkansas from the West region to the South. Kentucky was moved to the Great Lakes region.

Also:

- It reviewed 12 automatic-qualification applications. The Empire Athletic Association (formerly the Independent College Athletic Conference) and the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference were awarded automatic qualification for the 1992 championship.

- It voted to continue to provide two berths in each of the five regions, including the two automatic qualifiers. It noted, however, that it is studying the move toward a more regionalized format for the 1993 championship.

- In reviewing the selection process for the new 20-team bracket, the subcommittee indicated that it will rate teams regionally to develop the pairings for first-round games

(Wednesday after selections), taking into account proximity to the regional sites (Saturday and Sunday).

- In its desire to provide more parity within the five regions, Division III will recommend realignment of the geographic regions for the 1993 season as follows:

New England — Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut; New York — New York; South — New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas and Florida; Central — Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, West Virginia, and three institutions in Illinois (Illinois College, MacMurray College and Principia College), and West — five institutions in Illinois (University of Chicago, Knox College, Lake Forest College, Rockford College and Wheaton College), Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and California.

Institutional secondary infractions

This is the first appearance of a new monthly feature in The NCAA News—the publication of decisions regarding secondary infractions cases involving only institutional responsibility.

Once a secondary violation is confirmed, the case is processed under the direction of the assistant executive director for enforcement. It is first determined whether the case involves an eligibility issue and, if so, it is forwarded to NCAA Director of Eligibility Janet M. Justus and the NCAA eligibility staff for processing.

If there is no eligibility issue, NCAA Enforcement Representative Cynthia J. Gabel handles the case. The decisions reported here involve those cases in which there is no eligibility issue.

It is important to note that if an institution disagrees that the facts result in a violation, the stipulated facts first would be referred to the NCAA legislative services department for a determination of the application of NCAA legislation.

Most secondary cases are self-reported (either by the institution or through a conference office). Information related to secondary cases that is forwarded to the national office for review should include: (1) a description of the violation, including the rule citation; (2) the reasons the violation occurred; (3) the identity of the coaches, prospective and enrolled student-athletes, and other individuals involved in the violation; (4) any corrective and disciplinary actions taken by the institution and conference, and (5) any other information that should be considered in reviewing the case.

There are occasions, however, when information is relayed to the national office that indicates a possible secondary violation has occurred. In those instances, Gabel will correspond with an institutional representative in order to determine the facts of the matter and whether, indeed, a violation occurred.

In accordance with NCAA Bylaw 32.4, the case then is forwarded to a designated member of the NCAA Committee on Infractions who reviews the information and the NCAA enforcement staff's recommended action and determines whether to accept the recommendation or take another action. Under NCAA Bylaw 19.5.1, an institution has an opportunity to appeal the decision to the full NCAA Committee on Infractions.

The following is a summary of the secondary cases with only institutional responsibility that were completed during January. The information provided includes: the institution's division, how the violation was reported, the involved sport, the rule citation, the facts of the matter, any institutional or conference action, and action taken by the NCAA.

How reported	Sport	Citation	Facts	Institutional action	NCAA action
DIVISION I
NCAA Inquiry	Women's swimming	B 13.12.1 and 17.16.7.1.4.1	Head coach conducted one practice session at local swim club to which team members belonged. Several prospects also were members of the club. Institution's facility is under repair, so they were using club as an interim facility.	Notified coach to cease activities at club.	Required institution to submit in writing to NCAA what arrangements had been made to avoid recurrence in light of long-term repairs being made to campus facility.
Conference	Women's swimming	B 13.1.5.2	Head coach contacted prospect at site of competition on three occasions. Prospect had signed with the institution and had enrolled for the summer term prior to the contacts.	Reviewed legislation with coach.	No further action.
Conference	Women's basketball	B 13.9.1	Head and assistant coaches paid for meals for high-school coach and his wife during recruiting trip. Assistant coach and high-school coach are long-time friends.	High-school coach repaid cost of meals.	Required coaches to participate in rules review of Bylaw 13, with particular emphasis on Bylaw 13.9.
Conference	Men's track, outdoor	B 13.1.1.3	Assistant coach made telephone contact with a student-athlete from another member institution without obtaining permission from young man's institution. Contact was initiated to retrieve some borrowed equipment.	Issued written warning to assistant coach.	Student-athlete is ineligible at institution that improperly contacted him unless restored through NCAA eligibility appeals process.
Self-reported	Women's soccer	B 13.4.1	Assistant coach sent letter to prospect who was a sophomore in high school.		Required institution to admonish assistant coach to verify prospect's year in school prior to contact.
Conference	Men's track, outdoor	B 13.1.2.4-(b)	Head coach made telephone contact with prospect who was a junior in high school. Young man had filled out questionnaire indicating that he would graduate in May 1992.		No action.
Self-reported	Men's basketball	B 13.12.1	Assistant coaches watched prospects participating in AAU tournament on university's campus. Institution is not recruiting any of the senior players.	Scheduling of outside groups will be through director of athletics.	Required involved coaching staff members to review Bylaw 13.
Self-reported	Women's volleyball	B 13.1.5.2-(c)	Assistant coach had in-person contact at site of competition with prospect prior to her official release. Institution is not recruiting young woman.	Reprimanded coach and precluded him from recruiting activities.	No further action.
Conference	Women's tennis	B 13.4.1	Assistant coach contacted sophomore high-school prospect by letter. Coach assumed by her age that prospect was a junior.		Required institution to admonish assistant coach for her actions in the matter in order to avoid recurrence of similar violations.
Self-reported	Field hockey	B 13.1.2.4-(b)	Head coach contacted high-school junior prospect by telephone.	Reminded coaching staff that year in school should be verified prior to contact.	No further action.
Self-reported	Men's basketball	B 13.12.1	Prospect participated in passing drill during his official visit. Drill lasted 10 seconds, and prospect was arbitrarily chosen by visiting performer.		No action.
Self-reported	Women's basketball	B 13.1.2.3-(e)-(1)	Student-athlete contacted prospect by telephone from coach's office at direction of coach.	Reviewed legislation with all coaching staffs.	No further action.
Self-reported	Men's tennis	B 14.3.5.1	Student-athlete was allowed to participate prior to proper certification verification. Young man was otherwise eligible.	Reprimanded coach.	No further action.
Conference	Men's golf	B 13.1.2.4-(b)	Head coach contacted high-school junior. Coach was informed erroneously of young man's year in school by another coach.		Required institution to admonish coach to avoid similar violations.
DIVISIONS I AND II
Self-reported	Baseball, men's, basketball, football, men's volleyball, women's softball, women's track, men's soccer, men's swimming, women's swimming	15.3.5.1	Institution failed to notify student-athletes of nonrenewal of financial aid by July 1. Institution did meet deadline for those whose aid was being renewed. Institution notified nonrenewals of appeal opportunities.	Implemented new monitoring procedures.	Assessed fine of $1,000.
DIVISION I-A
Self-reported	Football	B 15.2.7.1.1	Student-athlete was awarded financial aid for summer term prior to his initial enrollment in institution.	Reprimanded involved athletics staff members. Eligibility certification will be required prior to awarding of financial aid.	Required institution to submit report to NCAA enforcement staff that outlines certification procedures implemented by institution in order to avoid recurrence of similar violation.
Conference	Football	B 17.7.6	Assistant coach coordinated five workouts for student-athlete during summer (in absence of conditioning coach). Student-athlete is no longer at institution and did not complete following workouts.	Reprimanded coach.	No further action.
Self-reported	Football	B 13.1.2.4-(b)	Two coaches had telephone contact with prospect during same week.	Reviewed legislation with coaching staff and cautioned involved coaches.	Required institution to submit report to NCAA that outlines monitoring procedures it is using to avoid recurrence of similar violation.
Conference	Football	B 13.2.2-(f)	Institution arranged for football jerseys to be personalized for eight prospects. Prospects paid for jerseys.	Discontinued making such arrangements.	No further action.
Conference	Football	B 13.2.1	Institution provided fruit baskets to prospects on flight to official visits.	Reviewed legislation with coaches. Discontinued provision of fruit baskets.	No further action.
Conference	Football	B 16.12.1.3.1-(a)	Student-athlete participated in slam-dunk contest and received plaque for his first-place finish. Student-athlete is no longer with team.	Student-athlete returned plaque. Institution will require future contests to utilize form that would identify athletes.	No further action.
Self-reported	Football, women's basketball	B 13.1.2.4-(b) and 14.1.5.1	Head and assistant women's basketball coaches contacted prospect prior to July 1 following her junior year in high school. Head and assistant football coaches both telephoned prospect on same day. Student-athlete practiced while not enrolled in full-time program of studies. (Student-athlete's enrollment was held out because of overdue tuition bill; was later allowed to enroll after payment of bill.)	Will require proper determination of class status prior to contacts. Will modify procedures in assigning telephone contacts to avoid recurrence of similar violation. Modified enrollment monitoring procedures.	No further action.
Conference	Football men's, outdoor track	B 13.1.2.4-(b)	Prospect was contacted by telephone on two occasions during same week. Young man was multisport prospect and was contacted once by each sport's coach.	Institution forfeited telephone contact with young man for one week.	No further action.

Ringworm placed on wrestling list

Ringworm will be included as an infectious skin condition and will be considered cause for medical disqualification in all divisions of NCAA wrestling championships competition this year.

Robert A. Bowsby, director of men's athletics at the University of Iowa and chair of the NCAA Wrestling Committee, said numerous cases of ringworm (tinea corporis) have been identified during medical checks before intercollegiate wrestling matches.

After the wrestling committee consulted with the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, it decided to add the condition to others that are cause for medical disqualification. The list appears on page 20 of the 1992 National Collegiate Championships Wrestling Handbook.

Higher education

Reduction could save taxpayers

A sharp reduction in Federal subsidy payments to banks making guaranteed student loans could save taxpayers nearly $500 million over five years, a recent Congressional report concluded.

The General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency, said $421 million could be saved from fiscal 1992 to 1996 while causing just a one percent drop in the volume of student loans from commercial lenders.

The report predicted that some small-scale lenders would likely drop out of the business of providing loans, but that state guaranty agencies would pick up the slack created by that loss.

Test coaching value questioned

High-school students who take classes on how to better their scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) are not likely to benefit that greatly from it, said the publishers of the test.

FairTest, a critic of standardized tests, told The Associated Press that the College Board, which sponsors the test, and the Educational Testing Service, which administers it, "deliberately underplay the effectiveness of coaching, to the detriment of students who could benefit from that knowledge."

FairTest claims coaching can help improve a student's score by 100, but the College Board maintains that coaching only minimally improves scores.

Injury bug takes bite out of Arkansas-Little Rock

By Ronald D. Mott
The NCAA News Staff

Everyone accepts the notion that injuries are a threat to the success of a season. Every team has them, but some groups are more fortunate than others.

When looking at the men's basketball program at University of Arkansas, Little Rock, this season, one begins to wonder if there is a dark cloud following the Trojans around.

Not only has the injury bug hit them, and hard, but other developments have helped reduce the team from the average 13-, 14- or 15-player roster to a squad with only seven healthy players.

The list goes like this:

- One player, who now appears to have jumped the gun, left school complaining of a lack of playing time, according to the school's sports information director.

- Another player was ruled academically ineligible after the fall semester.

- One was diagnosed as having a possible growth inside a heart artery.

- Another player suffered a torn retina.

- One player suffered a severely sprained ankle and another player a stress fracture of the foot.

It hasn't stopped there. Dennis White, an assistant coach, suffered a badly sprained ankle one day in practice because he was pressed into duty to help round out the five-on-five, so he has been seen hobbling to his spot on the team's bench flanked by crutches.

Coach Jim Platt has taken the reduction of his team in relatively smooth fashion. It didn't hurt that his team had won six of nine games through January 29 with the roster of seven healthy players. Two of those victories were upsets over the University of New Orleans and the University of South Alabama.

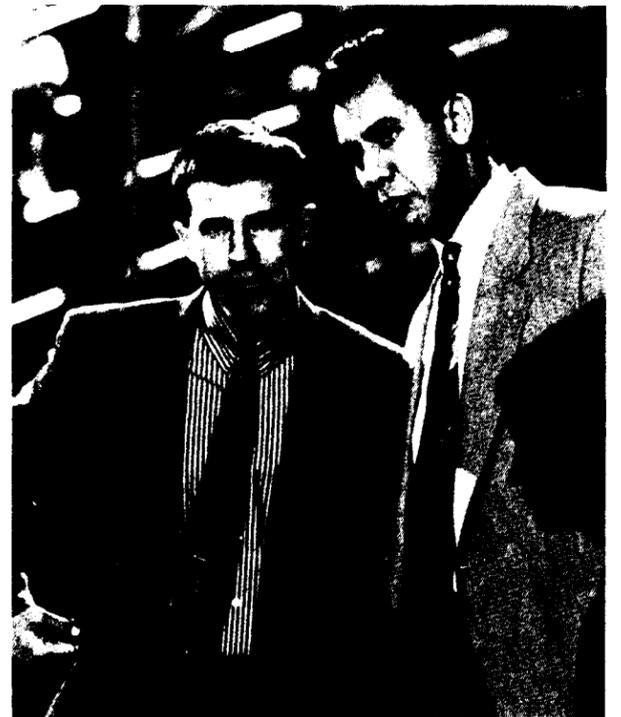

"That's to our kids' credit," Platt said. "Injuries are going to be part of the game. We feel fortunate at this point, but I don't think seven (players) is the way to get through a college basketball season. I think there have been some benefits in the qualities that the kids have developed in not having bigger numbers.

"Sometimes your perceptions about things like this are negative. But what it has taught me as a coach is that there are some positives that can come out of something like this. Hopefully, we can get through the rest of the way without getting anyone else hurt, but I'm starting to see us wear a little thin, physically and emotionally."

Platt was excited when his roster grew to eight players around the third week of January, but it didn't last long. Platt said he didn't expect to have more than 10 healthy players on the roster at any one time the rest of the way.

Platt said one of the difficulties the situation has created has been organizing team practices. "You can't get in five-on-five situations," he said. "So practice is a problem."

Asked if he was close to pressing himself into action to fill out the practices, Platt responded: "No way. We'd have to get down to playing one-on-one before that happens."

Florida Tech women prosper despite accident, pregnancies

By Laura E. Bollig
The NCAA News Staff

It's no surprise that John Reynolds finds a few gray hairs here and there. After all, the man is a basketball coach — the women's basketball coach at Florida Institute of Technology, to be exact.

Anyone who has been through what Reynolds and his team have been through the past two years can expect some premature graying.

Reynolds is in his fifth year at Florida Tech. His first squad went 12-17, the next 17-12. His 1989-90 team posted a record of 20-7. Heading into the 1990-91 season, Reynolds had reason to be optimistic for further improvement.

"Then we had two pregnancies and went 13-15," Reynolds said.

Christine Keenan and Mary Folliard, both starters for Reynolds, sat out the 1990-91 year during their pregnancies. Keenan had a baby girl in December 1990; Folliard delivered a son the following June.

"I've got a few more gray hairs because of that," Reynolds admitted.

Keenan and Folliard returned to the team in time for preseason practice last fall.

Serious accident

Reynolds added two junior college recruits from Canada to his roster in the off-season — 6-7 center Laurie Hockridge and 6-3 forward Candice Kliebrink.

Soon after they arrived on campus for the start of classes, Hockridge and Kliebrink were involved in a serious accident. They were crossing the street when a motorist ran a red light and hit both women.

The accident left Hockridge with a broken tibia and fibula and 550 stitches. She spent three days in intensive care and has had three operations to straighten her leg. Kliebrink suffered a dislocated hip, a fractured pelvis and compressed vertebrae. Both required a three-week hospital stay in Florida before returning to Canada.

While it looked as if their injuries were career-ending, Hockridge and Kliebrink have made incredible progress toward a complete recovery.

"The prognosis for both of them is that they will be back next year, ready to go," Reynolds said. "What made them worth recruiting was their determination. Both of them have an incredible desire to play this game. If anyone can come back,

"It's just a real heart-warming story how everyone rallied to help..."

— William Jurgens
Florida Institute of Technology athletics director

those two can."

Hockridge is back on campus. Kliebrink remains in Canada, undergoing physical therapy.

Community responds

Florida Tech athletics director William Jurgens said the Melbourne, Florida, community was phenomenal in its response to the accident.

"It's just a real heart-warming story how everyone rallied to help — the community, the churches. It's been a positive experience."

Reynolds, plucking gray hairs fast and furiously, agreed.

"The community responded to them as though they were family. There were people calling me constantly to see if there was something they could do. Their rooms were filled with flowers, and they had visitors constantly."

Both women, Reynolds said, showed tremendous spirit.

"This accident has never broken their spirits. As much as their bodies were broken up, their spirits never were," he said.

The remainder of the Florida Tech squad has shown that its collective spirit is mending, too. Stunned by the accident involving their teammates, the Lady Panthers regrouped and bolted to a 15-2 record in 17 games. Paulette King, a 5-9 forward, was the leading scorer in Division II through January 26, averaging 30.6 points per game. Keenan, a 5-8 guard, was the sixth-leading scorer in Division II, tallying 23.1 points per game. Florida Tech was averaging 95.1 points a contest, third in the country.

"We have the No. 1 offensive person in the country," Reynolds said. "I have yet to see someone who could stop Paulette King. She has scored more than 30 points 10 times this year.

Says Reynolds: "Ask me how I got Paulette King."

King, a native of Montego Bay, Jamaica, first attracted the attention of Florida Atlantic University coach Wayne Allen. Since Florida Atlantic is in the process of moving to Division I, Allen had to pass on King because of the age rule for Division I players. So Allen called Reynolds and told him about King.

'Game is for kids'

"We have to remember that this game is for the kids," Reynolds said. "Wayne's team was scheduled to play us twice. He didn't worry that she might beat his team. It's a tribute to him as a coach. Paulette scored 37 and 38 points against Florida Atlantic this year. That never fazed Wayne because he was sure he did the right thing for her. That may be the best thing I've seen as a coach."

The best thing Reynolds has seen this season has been the success of his team — success he attributes to adversity.

"Part of our success has been the ability to adapt to two very strange situations. One of the things I've learned out of this is that you have to learn to have fun day in and day out with this game.

"I've also learned that it is easier to win with great kids who are good athletes than with great athletes who are not good kids."

Florida Tech pair delivers on and off basketball court

Christine Keenan and Mary Folliard have a lot in common.

Both are starters for the Florida Institute of Technology basketball team. Keenan is a civil engineering major; Folliard is in aerospace engineering. Keenan is married to Brian Keenan, a member of the Florida Tech men's basketball team. Folliard married Tom Folliard, a former Panther player.

Oh, and there's another role they share.

They are mothers. As in, "Can someone watch my baby during shoot-around?"

"It's kind of funny because all we talk about are babies," Folliard said. "Everybody else on the team is just like, 'Here they go again.'"

Keenan agrees.

"It's nice to have somebody to relate to. If you talk about being up all night and having circles under your eyes the next day, nobody else would understand."

Folliard and Keenan sat out the 1990-91 season during their pregnancies. Keenan's daughter, Nadia, was born in December 1990. Thomas Folliard IV was born the following June.

With both back in the starting lineup, Florida Tech coach John Reynolds has a contender on his hands. Florida Tech lost only two games in its first 17 contests.

One pregnant player might create some stress for a coach, but two pregnancies in one year is enough to send a coach over the edge. Reynolds, however, knew what his young mothers were going through — in a way.

"I was married really young, so basically, what they went through, I had already been through," Reynolds said. "I have three kids. My oldest son is 21; I'm 39."

"The thing was, they weren't just two pregnant players. They are two very important people."

Both have made solid contributions to the team. Keenan was the Sunshine State Conference freshman of the year. Folliard was named to the conference all-tournament team as a junior.

Naturally, they were anxious about how they would perform — post-pregnancy.

"I had quite a few months to get back in shape," Keenan said. "I gained only 15 pounds, so it was not too bad."

Folliard was a different story.

"I had tons of problems. My first day of practice, I was 20 pounds heavier than I am now. It was my fault because I wasn't too active when I was pregnant. During the first three weeks of practice, I felt like there was an extra body running behind me. It was depressing. I was always a step behind, but now I'm back."

With two supportive husbands and some fantastic grandmothers, both women have managed to maintain their roles as both students and athletes. Babysitters are at a premium. Even Reynolds gets into the act.

"Sometimes Coach walks around with a baby while he's yelling at us in practice," Keenan said.

One thing Reynolds doesn't hear much of from his players these days is complaining.

"The one thing this has added to our team is an incredible maturity. Nobody can complain about how we have to practice. I've got two mothers who have to practice, study, go home and take care of a family."

That just about sums up a typical day for Florida Tech's basketball mommies.

"Long," Folliard said.

Governmental affairs report

The following is a review of recent Federal government activities affecting the NCAA membership. These reports are prepared by Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C. This report was presented to the NCAA Council during its January 5-6 meeting in Anaheim, California. Certain portions of this report may have been affected by subsequent events.

Congressional activity regarding intercollegiate athletics reform

Disclosure of athletics revenues and expenses. During markup of the higher education reauthorization bill (H.R. 3553) October 23, the House Committee on Education and Labor approved an amendment proposed by Rep. Paul Henry, R-Michigan, to require the audit and disclosure, on a per-sport basis, of revenues and expenses of intercollegiate athletics programs sponsored by institutions awarding athletically related financial aid. Chair William Ford, D-Michigan, who last year offered an amendment limiting the then-proposed Henry amendment to disclosure of football, basketball and all other sports combined supported the Henry amendment this year.

The Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources marked up its version of the higher education bill, S. 1150, October 30 and reported it without language comparable to the Henry amendment. Senate rules permit amendment of a bill during consideration by the full Senate, although no senator is known to be considering offering such an amendment.

Controversy over other provisions in the higher-education legislation resulted in the failure of either chamber to consider the legislation before Congress adjourned. The House and the Senate were expected to take up their respective measures shortly after Congress reconvened in January.

Review of athletics programs at service academies. On December 5, President Bush signed into law the Department of Defense Authorization Act for fiscal years 1992 and 1993. One provision of that law, which was included at the request of Sen. Robert Byrd, D-West Virginia, establishes a new national review board to examine the athletics programs at the three military service academies. The board is charged with reviewing on an annual basis all aspects of the athletics programs at those institutions, including the appropriateness of the balance between athletics and academics. In addition, the board is to "determine ways in which the administration of the athletics programs at the academies can serve as models for the administration of athletics programs at civilian institutions of higher education." The report accompanying the legislation states that the board should draw heavily on the recommendations of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics report issued earlier this year.

Other pending legislation. No action was taken on the variety of other measures relating to intercollegiate athletics. These bills include (1) the "Collegiate Athletics Reform Act," H.R. 3046, introduced in July by Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland; (2) the two measures (H.R. 3233 and H.R. 2243) introduced by Rep. Mervyn Dymally, D-California, to establish a National Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics; (3) the due process bill (H.R. 2157) introduced last May by Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-New York, and (4) Rep. Richard Neal's, D-Massachusetts, resolution (H. Con. Res. 119) expressing Congressional support for the Knight Commission recommendations.

Commerce subcommittee meeting. On October 29, staff of the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness met with Eric Ramsey, the former Auburn University football player, to discuss his allegations that Auburn coaches and alumni made payments to players. The subcommittee was expected to hold further hearings on intercollegiate athletics after Congress reconvened; announced topics include gender equity and distribution of NCAA revenues to member institutions.

Distribution of Lee Committee report. Shortly after the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process issued its report in late October, Rep. Alex McMillan, R-North Carolina, the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness, distributed the report on a "Dear Colleague" basis to members of that subcommittee, the Committee on Education and Labor and cosponsors of the pending due process bill (H.R. 2157). He has since sent a letter to NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, congratulating the NCAA on this initiative; subcommittee chairman Collins may send a similar letter before year-end.

Antigambling legislation

Congress adjourned without taking final action on the conference agreement on the omnibus crime bill (H.R. 3371), one provision of which would sharply limit the expansion of state gambling schemes based upon the outcome of professional or amateur sports events. By a narrow margin, the House passed the conference bill in the closing hours of the session on November 26, but the Senate—principally because of threats of a presidential veto and the resulting incapacity to pass a cloture motion took no action prior to adjourning.

The antigambling provision of the conference bill is almost identical to that contained in the original House bill: it prohibits all new state-sponsored or state-authorized sports gambling schemes, grandfathering the Oregon and Delaware professional sports lotteries and the Nevada "sports books," and providing a one-year "window" for New Jersey voters to authorize casino-based sports-book gambling in that state. The original House bill passed October 22 had given New Jersey a two-year window; the final New Jersey exception represented a compromise between the House version and the antigambling bill (S. 474), reported November 21 by the Senate Judiciary Committee that contained no New Jersey window.

The fate of the omnibus crime bill is at this point uncertain in that may become entangled in election-year maneuverings.

Tax treatment of bowl sponsorship and other income

Taxation of bowl sponsorship payments. In a recent technical advice memorandum, the Internal Revenue Service has ruled that the corporate sponsorship payments that the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association receives from Mobil Oil are subject to the unrelated business income tax. The IRS found that Mobil was paying for advertising, not merely making a contribution to the Cotton Bowl. In so ruling, it rejected arguments that the sponsorship represented more of a recognition of a donor's generosity than an instance of a substantial return benefit. The IRS issued a similar ruling to the John Hancock Bowl.

Taxation of advertising in college football programs. In a general counsel memorandum, the IRS concluded that the income that a state university received from the sale of advertising in the football programs for its home games was subject to unrelated business income tax. The unidentified university had contracted with a national advertising agency to sell reserved advertising positions in its football programs, although there was no correspondence or contract with the agency. The university gave the agency general guidelines concerning acceptable advertisements and received a single payment from the agency for the ads.

The IRS concluded that the agency's activities should be attributed to the university because the advertising sales were conducted in a manner that identified the advertising agency as the agent of the university and the university retained control over the agency. By attributing the agency's activities to the university, the university was deemed regularly to carry on the business of selling program advertising, which resulted in the conclusion that the income the university received from the relationship with the agency constituted unrelated business income.

Pending legislation. No action has been taken on the various proposals to exempt income from intercollegiate athletics events from the unrelated business income tax. These measures (which enjoy substantial cosponsorship in both chambers) include H.R. 2464, introduced last May by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Georgia, a senior member of the House Ways and Means Committee; H.R. 538, a predecessor measure to the Jenkins bill introduced in January by the late Silvio Conte, and S. 866, introduced in April by Sen. John Breaux, D-Louisiana, a member of the Senate Finance Committee. Similarly, no hearings have been scheduled on the contrary bill, H.R. 969, introduced in February by Rep. Henry, which would tax athletics-event broadcasting income, preferred-seating payments and booster club income as unrelated business income to a college or university.

Title IX

Compliance reviews. The Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights (OCR), has completed the on-site phase of the Title IX intercollegiate athletics compliance reviews now being conducted at six postsecondary institutions (Western Carolina University, Iowa State University, the University of Wyoming, Mendocino College, Oregon State University and the University of California, Santa Barbara). Letters of findings in these compliance reviews are expected to be issued during the first quarter of 1992. In addition, OCR will be conducting another three Title IX intercollegiate athletics compliance reviews during 1992. One has been initiated at Cerritos College in California; the other two institutions have not yet See Governmental affairs, page 10

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Tryouts

1. Member institution's coaches' involvement with a summer AAU basketball team. It is not permissible for an institution's coaching staff member to participate in coaching activities involving AAU basketball teams, regardless of the age of the participants involved in such teams. The committee recommended that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee revise the language in NCAA Bylaw 13.12.1.4 to reflect this interpretation. [Reference: Bylaw 13.12.1.4 (summer AAU basketball)]

Championships/postseason contests/bowl games

2. Beginning date for providing incidental expenses (i.e., $10 per diem). A member institution may provide a $10 per diem to each participating member of the institution's squad to cover unitemized incidental expenses only after the institution's team departs for or reports to the site of the postseason championship or bowl contest. [Reference: 16.8.1.5 (incidental expenses at championships and certified bowl games)]

Practice

3. Male students practicing with women's team. It is permissible for male students to engage in practice sessions with a women's team (and vice versa), provided the students are verified as eligible for practice in accordance with Bylaw 14.1.5.1 and have eligibility remaining under the five-year/10-semester rule. Under such circumstances, the institution does not utilize a contest or date of competition and the team is not considered a mixed team. [References: 14.1.5.1 (requirement for practice); 14.2.1 (five-year rule - Division I); 14.2.2 (10-semester rule - Divisions II and III); 18.02.2 and 18.2.8.3 (mixed team)]

1992 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 143

4. Disciplinary measures—television coverage. The provisions of 1992 Convention

Conferences No. 20 & 21
December 5 & 19, 1991

Proposal No. 143 do not prohibit footage from an institution's contest from being shown on an institution's coaches' show or as part of a sports segment during a news telecast. [References: 19.4.2.1 (disciplinary measures); 19.4.2.5 (television appearance limitations)]

Initial eligibility/core course

5. Appeal of NCAA Academic Requirements Committee decision regarding courses for the learning disabled or handicapped. A decision made by the Academic Requirements Committee in accordance with Bylaw 14.3.1.1.5 regarding core courses for the learning disabled or handicapped may not be appealed by a member institution to the Council. [References: 14.3.1.1.5 (other Council-authorized waivers); Ad Comm 6/5/86]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 127

6. Toll-free telephone calls. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 127 do not preclude an institution from establishing a toll-free (1-800) number outside of the athletics department (e.g., admissions department), provided the number is available to all prospective students. [Reference: 13.1.2.4 (b)-(2) (toll-free telephone calls)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 120

7. Off-campus housing and privately owned dormitories or apartment buildings. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 120 are applicable only if the institution arranges for its student-athletes to be housed in the off-campus, privately owned dormitories or apartment buildings. [References: 16.5.2.2 (athletics housing); 16.5.2.2.2 (athletics blocks)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 71-1

8. Equivalency computations. After consultation with the sponsor, the committee noted that the intent of Proposal No. 71-1 is to ensure that the method for determining equivalency computations per Bylaw 15.5.3.3 and minimum financial aid requirements per 20.9.1.2.1 is identical. The committee noted that the outcome of the vote on Proposal Nos. 72 and 73 will determine whether the method for determining equivalencies and minimum financial aid requirements shall be based only upon athletics financial aid awarded and administered by the institution's department of athletics, or whether the method shall include all institutional aid awarded and administered by the institution to a student athlete who is a counter. [References: 15.5.3.3 (equivalency computations); 20.9.1.2.1 (countable financial aid formula)]

1992 Convention Proposal Nos. 72 and 73

9. Division I membership requirements—athletics aid vs. countable aid. The committee reviewed 1992 Convention Proposal Nos. 72 and 73 and made the following determinations related to the distinction between athletics aid (or aid based on athletics ability) and countable aid as the terms are used in those proposals.

a. In Proposal No. 72, athletics aid is defined as unearned, nonrepayable financial aid awarded and administered by an institution's department of athletics (or at the recommendation of the department of athletics) and based on athletics ability (e.g., athletics scholarship). The committee noted that such aid would include any tuition waiver or room waiver (state or institutional waiver) administered at the institution's discretion related to the student-athlete's athletics ability.

b. In Proposal Nos. 72-1 and 73, once a student-athlete is a counter per 15.5, countable aid for purposes of meeting membership requirements per 20.9.1.2.1 includes only unearned nonrepayable countable financial aid administered by and awarded by the member institution, including aid not based on athletics ability. Such aid also includes tuition waivers or room waivers (state or institutional waivers) administered at the institution's discretion to a student-athlete. [References: 15.02.2 (athletics financial aid); 15.5.3.3 (equivalency computations); 20.9.1.2.1 (countable financial aid formula); IC 12/17/90, Item No. 18)]

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Entertainment/expenses—practice and competition
1. NCAA institutions located in Hawaii/

Alaska traveling to and from contests in contiguous 48 states. The Interpretations Committee recommended that the Council consider utilizing its authority in accordance with NCAA Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial amendment) to amend the provisions of 16.7.1.1-(a) and 16.8.1.2.1.1-(a) to indicate that travel restrictions also do not apply to NCAA institutions located in Hawaii and Alaska when such institutions are traveling prior to and following contests conducted in the 48 contiguous states. [Reference: 16.7.1.1-(a) and 16.8.1.2.1.1-(a) (exceptions - time limitations related to travel expenses)]

1992 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 7

2. Expenses for outside competition—bona fide amateur competition during Christmas and spring vacation periods. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 7 do not preclude a member institution from providing expenses for a student-athlete to participate in bona fide amateur competition during the Christmas vacation period that begins prior to the adjournment of the 1992 Convention, even if such competition does not conclude until subsequent to the adjournment of the Convention. [References: 14.02.6.1 (exempted events) and 16.8.1.3-(c) (other competition)]

Practice—daily, weekly hour limitations

3. Practice following competition during institution's official vacation period. It is not permissible for a member institution to conduct a practice session following a competition, including practice following a com-been notified that compliance reviews will be conducted.

OCR investigator's manual. As previously reported, representatives of several organizations, including the National Coalition for Women and Girls in Education, the Women's Sports Foundation, the National Education Association and the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport, have asked OCR to withdraw and revise the Title IX athletics investigator's manual issued in April 1990. The areas in which proposed changes are being sought include (1) the overall approach to athletics investigations, athletics financial assistance, effective accommodation of interests and abilities, and equivalence in other benefits and opportunities (coaching equipment and supplies, scheduling and travel, and per diem allowances).

Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights Michael Williams has agreed to revise the manual to (1) instruct investigators to interview interested persons in the broader community (not just administrators, coaches and athletes) to determine whether there are Title IX violations; (2) eliminate language in the manual suggesting that investigators must determine that athletes of one sex are being accorded "second-class status" in order for there to be a finding of discrimination, and (3) clarify the instructions for counting participants. He also said the "z" and "t" statistical tests used in determining whether athletics financial assistance allocations comply with Title IX will be reviewed, and OCR staff will meet with experts on the issue suggested by advocates of the change. In addition, he stated that OCR will issue a separate policy statement on coaches' compensation and will conduct additional research to determine the legal alternatives available to coaches of women's teams. Williams said he would prefer to provide an opportunity for external comments before modifying current policy in two important areas: accommodation of interests and abilities, and athletics financial assistance.

Remedies for violations of Title IX. On December 11, the U.S. Supreme Court heard oral argument in Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools, a case that raises the question of whether a student or employee may recover monetary damages for intentional violations of Title IX. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 11th Circuit ruled last year that compensatory damages for an alleged violation of Title IX could not be recovered. This decision is consistent with 7th Circuit decisions that damages are not available under Title IX, and at odds with a 1990 3rd Circuit decision that compensatory damages are recoverable for intentional violations of Title IX. The court is expected to issue a decision in the case by July.

Antidrug-abuse Legislation

Drug Testing. On November 12, the House Committee on Energy and Commerce reported H.R. 33, a comprehensive bill dealing with drug-testing procedures, and the bill was posted on the House calendar.

On November 21, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, introduced S. 2008, the "Quality Assurance in the Private Sector Drug-Testing Act." The legislation is substantially similar to legislation he introduced in the last Congress, although it is more detailed in describing certification standards for laboratories. With limited exceptions, it would prohibit random testing of employees other than sensitive employees, which includes professional athletes, and would prohibit disclosure, with limited exceptions, of the results of drug tests to anyone other than the individual being tested.

No action has been taken on a third drug-testing bill, H.R. 2422, introduced last spring by Rep. Gerald B. Solomon, R-New York, which would limit the circumstances in which drug testing may occur and restrict random drug testing to "sensitive" employees and professional athletes. According to Rep. Solomon's staff, he may introduce a companion measure to Sen. Hatch's more recent drug-testing bill.

Anabolic steroids. No action has been taken on H.R. 867, a bill introduced in February by Rep. William Hughes, D-New Jersey, which would establish penalties for physical trainers and coaches who induce athletes to use anabolic steroids.

National Youth Sports Program

On November 26, President Bush signed the fiscal year 1992 appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education (H.R. 3839), which provides an appropriation of $12 million for the 1992 NYSP, an increase over the 1991 level of $10.832 million.

Copyright and communications

Broadcasting of sports events. No action has been taken on the several measures to regulate telecasting of sports events. These bills include (1) the "Fairness to Fans Act of 1991" (H.R. 2976), introduced in July by Rep. Peter Kostmayer, D-Pennsylvania, which would require professional sports teams to televise most home games on free television in their local communities as a condition of the existing antitrust exemption permitting the pooling of their telecasting rights; (2) S. Res. 172, introduced in August by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pennsylvania, which expresses the sense of Congress that the immunity from antitrust liability now enjoyed by baseball and the antitrust exemption authorizing professional sports teams to pool their telecasting rights should be limited or rescinded, and (3) the "Public Access to National Sporting Events Act" (S. 1015), introduced in May by Sen. John McCain, R-Arizona, which would require that the live television transmission of the Super Bowl and World Series be available over-the-air on a national broadcast television network.

In addition, Rep. William Lipinski, D-Illinois, said early in December that he will introduce legislation that would ban pay-per-view telecasting of sports events held at public colleges and other facilities built or maintained with tax money. Rep. Lipinski's comments were prompted by reports that ABC was considering putting the University of Notre Dame-Pennsylvania State University football game on pay-per-view television. The game subsequently was carried on traditional "free" television.

1990 cable and satellite royalty fees. The Copyright Royalty Tribunal has not taken action to initiate proceedings to distribute the $164 million in 1990 cable royalty fees and the $3.2 million in 1990 satellite carrier royalty fees. Proceedings to distribute those fees are not expected to begin until the 1989 proceeding concludes.

1989 cable and satellite royalty fees. Hearings were held from September through December in the proceeding to distribute the $224 million in 1989 cable royalty fees. These "Phase I" hearings, which were to continue briefly in January 1992, focused on the shares to be allocated to major claimant groups. A decision in Phase I is expected to be issued by April 1992. Following completion of Phase I, "Phase II" proceedings to distribute fees within claimant groups may begin. After initially participating in the proceeding, three claimant groups—the Canadian claimants, National Public Radio and the music claimants—settled for the shares each received in the 1983 proceeding.

Proceedings to distribute the $2.6 million in 1989 satellite fees have not begun but are expected to begin in late spring. The tribunal has not ruled on whether the 1989 and 1990 satellite carrier royalty proceedings will be consolidated.

FTC complaint against the College Football Association

In late January, the Federal Trade Commission heard oral argument in the appeal of the dismissal of the FTC complaint against the College Football Association and Capital Cities/ABC Inc. In August, an administrative law judge dismissed the complaint after determining that the FTC does not have jurisdiction over the CFA because it is a non-profit organization.

Taxation of scholarships and interest paid on student loans.

No action has been taken on the seven bills that have been introduced to restore the deduction for interest paid on student loans and the exclusion from taxation for scholarships.

1992 Convention Proposal No. 20

4. Satisfactory progress—regular academic year. The Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 20 and determined the following:

a. The requirement that 75 percent of credit hours used by a student-athlete to fulfill satisfactory-progress requirements must be earned during the regular academic year applies to the minimum number of hours necessary to meet satisfactory-progress requirements and not to all credits earned by the student-athlete. For example, a student-athlete who earns 30 semester hours during the freshman year needs to earn only 18 (24 x .7518) of those hours during the regular academic year, since only 24 hours are required for satisfactory-progress purposes.

b. A student-athlete may utilize hours earned from any courses taken during a session subsequent to the opening of the institution's fall term until the conclusion of the institution's commencement exercises at the conclusion of the spring term in satisfying the requirement that 75 percent of the credit hours used by a student-athlete to fulfill satisfactory-progress requirements must be earned during the regular academic year. [Reference: 14.5.2.1 (regular academic year)]

c. A student-athlete who qualifies for an exception or waiver to the satisfactory-progress rule set forth in Bylaws 14.5.4 and 14.5.5 may prorate the 75-percent requirement based on the number of hours the student-athlete must earn to meet satisfactory-progress requirements. For example, a student-athlete beginning his or her second year of enrollment at the certifying institution who qualifies for a missed term during the freshman year must earn nine (12 x .759) of those hours during the regular academic year. The committee recommended that the Council consider sponsoring an amendment to Proposal No. 21 to provide limited waiver opportunities for student-athletes who do not meet the 75-percent requirement due to extenuating circumstances.

d. If the eligibility of the student-athlete is based on the 12-hours-per-term average of cumulative credit set forth in 14.5.2-(a), it is permissible for the student-athlete to bank credit hours during the academic year and utilize such hours in meeting the 75-percent requirement in subsequent years. For example, if a student-athlete must earn 48 hours during the student's first two academic years to meet satisfactory progress, the student must earn at least 36 (48 x .7536) of those hours during the regular academic year.

c. Hours earned at the certifying institution during the summer, including the summer prior to initial enrollment, may not be utilized to satisfy the requirement that 75 percent of credit hours used by a student-athlete to fulfill satisfactory-progress requirements must be earned during the regular academic year.

5. Satisfactory progress—fulfillment of degree requirements and minimum grade-point average. The committee reviewed the provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 21-B and determined the following:

a. The committee affirmed an NCAA Academic Requirements Committee interpretation that the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation is based on the institution's overall grade-point average required for graduation for purposes of meeting the requirements of this legislation.

b. If the institution does not have an overall grade-point average for graduation (i.e., the grade-point average requirements are specific to the student's degree program), it is permissible to utilize the lowest grade-point average required for any of the institution's degree programs in determining the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation for purposes of meeting the requirements of this legislation.

c. If a student-athlete is enrolled in a degree program that has a specific grade-point average requirement, it may be necessary to meet that requirement in determining whether the student-athlete is considered to be in "good academic standing" at that institution. [Reference: 14.5.2.1 (minimum grade-point average)]

6. Coaches athletically related income.

The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 28 apply only to full-time coaches (head or assistant) and restricted-earnings coaches, but are not applicable to other coaching staff members (e.g., volunteer coaches). In addition, all athletically related income and/or benefits from sources outside the institution (regardless of the amount) must receive the necessary written approval from the institution's chief executive officer. The committee recommended that the Council consider sponsoring an amendment to Proposal No. 28 to establish a minimum amount of income that must be received from any source before a coaching staff member must receive prior written approval from the institution's chief executive officer. 7. Cancellation of financial aid. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 68-1 preclude an institution from replacing a counter under the provisions of Bylaws 15.5.2.2 and 15.5.4.1 during the term in which the aid was graded or canceled. [Reference: 15.3.4.1(d) (graduation or cancellation permitted); 15.5.2.2 and 15.5.4.1 (voluntary withdrawal)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 69

8. Tuition awards—former student-athletes. The committee reviewed the provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 69 and determined the following:

a. An institution must provide the student-athlete with financial aid subsequent to the student-athlete exhausting eligibility until the student-athlete graduates only if the student-athlete has received a full athletics grant-in-aid during the academic year in which the student has exhausted his or her athletics eligibility.

b. If a student-athlete has received a full athletics grant while attending an institution other than the certifying institution, the certifying institution is not obligated to provide the student-athlete with financial aid subsequent to the student-athlete exhausting athletics eligibility at the certifying institution, unless the student-athlete has received a full athletics grant in aid from the certifying institution during the academic year in which the student-athlete has exhausted his or her athletics eligibility.

c. The provisions of Proposal No. 69-C are applicable only to a student-athlete who has received a full athletics grant-in-aid during the academic year in which the student has exhausted his or her athletics eligibility and not to a student-athlete who has received a combination of athletics aid and nonathletics aid that equals the value of a full grant-in-aid.

9. Divisions I and II playing and practice seasons—Individual sports. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 88 permit a coach to be involved with more than one student-athlete at a time during summer workout sessions (e.g., group workout), provided the request for such assistance is initiated by each of the student-athletes. [Reference: 17.02.1.2.2 (Divisions I and II—summer workout sessions in individual sports)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 18

10. Official visit prior to early signing period. The committee reviewed the provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 18 and determined the following:

a. It is necessary for the institution to receive an official academic transcript and a Form 48-H from the high school in order to verify that the prospect has satisfied the 2,000 grade-point average requirement in at least seven core courses.

b. Although the institution is not required to utilize a Form 48-C for purposes of certifying the prospect's eligibility under this proposal, it is necessary for the institution to utilize some form of written documentation verifying that the prospect has satisfied the core-curriculum and grade-point average requirements.

c. The test score utilized by the institution must be presented in writing through an official high-school or test agency document, but does not have to be received directly from the testing agency.

1992 Convention Proposal No. 34

11. Division I-AAA football. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 34-C do not preclude a member institution that has applied for Division I reclassification and is in the process of satisfying the two-year compliance period for Division I membership from being classified in Division I-AAA football. [Reference: 20.4.1.1.1 (Division I-AAA football eligibility)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 66

12. Maximum initial grants-in-aid—partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 66 do not preclude a partial qualifier or nonqualifier who is not eligible to receive athletically related aid in accordance with the proposal from receiving institutional aid unrelated to athletics subsequent to the first academic year in residence. [Reference: 15.5.6 (partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers)]

1992 Convention Proposal No. 52

13. Restricted-earnings coach—combination option. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 52 do allow a member institution to combine two restricted-earnings positions into one coaching position on two occasions during each academic year. [Note: The adoption of this proposal would render moot Interpretation I-4, Appendix E, page 191 of the Convention Official Notice.] In addition, an institution that combines three positions into one coaching position may not provide compensation to the remaining restricted-earnings coach that exceeds the limit set forth in Bylaw 11.02.3. [References: 11.7.2.3 (combination option); 11.02.3 (restricted-earnings coach)]

1992 Convention Proposal Nos. 54 and 55

14. Restricted-earnings coach—Division I-AA. The provisions of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 54 and 1992 Convention Proposal No. 55 are separate options related to the employment of restricted-earnings coaches. Thus, an institution must elect to utilize either the unlimited option set forth in Proposal No. 54 or the combination option set forth in Proposal No. 55, but may not utilize both options during the same academic year. [Reference: 11.7.3.1.5 (unlimited restricted-earnings coaches option); 11.7.3.3 (combination option)]

Liberty improves by 15½ games; within reach of national record

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Liberty, 17-4 in its first season in the Big South Conference, is the nation's most improved team in Division I men's basketball, with 16-4 Western Michigan of the Mid-American Athletic Conference in second place.

In its 11th season under coach Jeff Meyer, but only its fourth in Division I, Liberty is in second place in the Big South behind Radford (the nation's most-improved team in 1991). A year ago, Meyer's team was 5-23. Thus, 17-4 is a remarkable 15½ games up (12 more wins and 19 fewer defeats is 31; divide by two).

The Division I record is 16½, set by North Carolina A&T in 1978 and tied by Murray State in 1980. Western Michigan's 14½ games up (over 5-22) is good enough to lead the country most years. The same is true of Wagner's 13-game jump.

Basketball notes

Here are all teams up more than eight games, through February 10:

College	1991	1992	Imp.
Liberty	5-23	17-4	15½
Western Mich.	5-22	16-4	14½
Wagner	4-26	13-9	13
Nicholls St.	3-25	12-9	12½
Northwestern (Ia.)	6-22	12-8	10
Colgate	5-23	11-9	10
Iowa St.	12-19	17-5	9½
Illinois St.	5-23	10-9	9½
Rhode Island	11-17	16-4	9
Texas Tech	8-23	11-9	8½
Portland	5-23	10-11	8½

*Add wins above, losses below 1991; divide by two.

Liberty still was paying the dues of Division I membership last season with 17 road games last season, and it started three freshmen, a sophomore and a junior. "I was proud that our players were able to maintain loyalty to each other and to our program," Meyer said.

Even with his top eight scorers returning, the team is quite young, and Meyer felt at the start of the season his team might be a year away.

Now he can focus on the fact the Big South champion gets an automatic berth in the NCAA tournament: "This is a great opportunity for us."

Bob Donewald, former Illinois State head coach (six NCAA trips in 11 years) and assistant to Bob Knight at Indiana, is in only his third season at Western Michigan. Already, Western is assured of its first winning season in 10 years (15-14 in 1982), and with their team tied for first in the MAC, Western supporters can dream of a trip to the NCAA tournament. Its only previous NCAA trip came in 1976.

Short takes

Wisconsin-Milwaukee women's coach M. A. Kelling got her 250th career win, 70-64, over Missouri-Kansas City after trailing by 16 at half time, reports student assistant SID Mike Gallenberger.... Old Dominion SID Carol Hudson Jr. reports Old Dominion (25) and William and Mary (15) totaled an NCAA Division I record 40 points in a single overtime. A few nights later, Clemson scored a 17-point overtime victory over Georgia Tech. That is not a record, though. No record exists, but the widest margin we know of was Nebraska 85, Iowa State 67, December 30, 1949. Nebraska outscored the Cyclones, 19-1, in the extra period.... Chadron State SID Con Marshall reports his team made its first 31 free throws vs. Mesa State and hit 33 of 34 for the game. The Division II single-game record is 31-for-31.... Can anyone top this? Senior Patrick King, who came as a walk-on to the Bucknell junior varsity, leads the Patriot League in scoring (22.0) and both field-goal (62.3) and free-throw (83.5) accuracy, reports SID Bo Smolka.... The Cal State Northridge women ended a 25-game losing streak February 7.

Business

A shoe without a star

MVP Products, a Novi, Michigan, athletics shoe company, has set afoot on a new venture that it hopes catches on big.

It has begun test-marketing sneakers bearing the logos of nine area high schools and two colleges.

The shoes sell for about $60 per pair, and each participating school has an opportunity to share in the profits through licensing fees. The company is hoping to have a national line in place by March using the logos of colleges and universities, including the University of Southern California; Georgetown University; University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Duke University, and Jackson State University.

Company President Harold Martin said he started the firm in 1989 because of "a cry in the industry to have footwear that's more positive and educationally oriented," he told USA Today.

Mayor boosts Women's Final Four

Hoping to spur widespread interest in women's basketball, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley announced he is leading the effort to boost attendance at this year's Division I Women's Basketball Championship at the Sports Arena.

"We're proud Los Angeles has been chosen to host the games because we know we'll see the finest talent in women's basketball," Bradley said. "Many we expect will go on to Barcelona. This is a chance to get a preview of what the Olympics are going to be like."

Events surrounding the championship include elaborate opening ceremonies April 2 featuring young local athletes and sponsored entirely by major corporations, according to United Press International.

Ann Meyers, the former University of California, Los Angeles, all-American who competed in the 1976 Olympics, said the growing interest in women's basketball has forced the television networks and corporate sponsors to take notice.

"In 1978, when they did the first TV broadcast, it was on one-day tape delay," she said. This year's Women's Final Four will be broadcast live on CBS April 4 and 5.

Rhonda Windham, a former University of Southern California player who helped lead the Trojans to an NCAA title in 1984, said that since women collegiate athletes have no professional sports careers to look forward to, the public in general and women in particular should take special interest in supporting women basketball players.

"The only way women's basketball can continue to grow is if women make a statement and support it," Windham said. "I challenge all women's organizations, women's companies and women's sports to support it. Without their support it won't grow."

Bradley said 6,000 tickets already have been sold for the Women's Final Four. The Sports Arena seats 16,000.

SWC takes initiative on new organ-donor program

By P. David Pickle
Editor-in-Chief, The NCAA News

Fred Jacoby felt no pain. Only a terrible, bone-crushing fatigue told of how he was slowly dying. His once-healthy heart was drowning in his own fluids, and only a transplant could save him.

The commissioner of the Southwest Athletic Conference eventually got the new heart and with it renewed health but the months of uncertainty preceding the operation have led him to an active role in heightening the public's awareness of organ-transplant programs.

Starting with the current basketball season, SWC institutions will distribute organ-donor cards at key games. The league has approved a program that directs each member to designate one basketball, baseball and football game during each year at which organ-donor cards will be distributed.

"I have two goals in my life apart from my work," Jacoby said. "The first is to show people that there is nothing to fear in being a donor. A lot of people are scared of it. The second is to make people more aware of the need for donors."

Firsthand knowledge

Jacoby knows firsthand of the need. Advanced cardiomyopathy had filled his heart and lungs with potentially lethal fluids. His body bloated to the point that he couldn't get his foot to fit in his shoe. Lying down to sleep became a suffocating experience as greater amounts of the fluids collected in his lungs.

On May 26, 1989, Jacoby was "activated," the term that designates those in urgent need of a transplant. He was given a beeper and told to carry it with him everywhere he went.

(c) _____ My body for anatomical study		_____
_____		_____
<small>Specify organs and tissues for the purposes of transplantation, therapy, medical research or education</small>		This is a legal document under the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act and similar laws.

If a heart became available, he had to be at the hospital within two hours; the operation had to be performed within five hours of the death of the donor.

June passed without a donor. July was torrid, but Jacoby's feet grew colder from a lack of circulation. Late in August, while at home, Jacoby suffered a relapse and was rushed, unconscious, to the hospital. When he awoke, four doctors surrounded him.

"One of them told me I wasn't leaving the hospital until I had the operation," he said. "They were afraid that if I had another relapse, I wouldn't make it to the hospital in time."

He was elevated to the highest level of need for organ recipients and quietly began a 32-day ordeal of waiting.

Thirty percent

"My doctor told me that 93 percent of those who have the operation survive," Jacoby said, "but that 30 percent of the patients die before an organ becomes available."

"Well, after you sit there and wait for weeks, you begin to wonder if you're not one of the 30 percent."

Jacoby wasn't. He got his new heart on September 29, 1989. When he awoke, he was saturated with perspiration brought about by his revitalized circulatory system. After a while, he became aware that his feet, cold for two years, were warm once again.

On October 7, he went home. By the end of the month, he was driving. On November 1, he returned to the SWC office to work half days. By December 1, he was back full time.

Two years later, his health remains good, and now he's determined to give others the gift given to him.

Donor cards

The SWC has printed 425,000 donor cards with instructions for member institutions to distribute them at well-attended games. Members also have been requested to publicize the games in advance by notifying local newspapers, student newspapers and radio talk shows. If all cards are not distributed at the games, the institutions have been asked to use the leftovers in departmental mailings to season-ticket holders.

Jacoby has worked closely with Dallas-area organ-donor agencies to increase awareness in North Texas, but he wants the effort in intercollegiate athletics to become national. He admires the work of former University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, football coach Cal Stoll, another heart recipient, who has campaigned nationally for the cause.

Coincidentally, the same doctor operated on both Jacoby and Stoll, and the two have become friends. When the NCAA Final Four is played April 4 and 6 in Minneapolis, the Jacobys and the Stolls will meet for dinner.

With him, Jacoby will carry an organ-donor card. Although his heart is not usable, many other organs in his body could benefit people in need.

After all he's been through, Fred Jacoby feels for them from deep in his heart.

Requirement building volunteer spirit at Southern Cal

By Jim Perry

Once a week, about two dozen members of the University of Southern California track team men and women — get together to make sandwiches.

No, they're not planning a picnic. Instead, they take the sandwiches, along with fresh fruit and a giant cooler of fruit juice, to Skid Row, a slum area of Los Angeles, where they distribute the food to homeless people.

"I always leave there wishing that we had 50 bags of sandwiches instead of 10," senior women's discus and javelin thrower Teri Ortega says. "But there are limits. We can't feed everybody. However, I know that we're helping as many as we can, and I feel good about that."

While Jim Bush's track team is distributing food to the homeless, other Southern California athletes are visiting hospitals and nursing homes, aiding the handicapped, or teaching sports to disadvantaged inner-city children.

Volunteer work of some kind exists on most campuses, but what's going on at Southern California may be unique, because community-service work is a requirement for all scholarship athletes.

Each student-athlete must spend 10 hours in public-service work in his or her off-season — but they're finding that not only are they making a difference in people's lives, but they're enjoying it.

"It might be extra work, but once you get into it, it seems like you can't stop," says Reggie Perry, starting quarterback on the football team as a sophomore last fall. "It's a snowball effect, and you just want to keep doing it because of the feedback you get from people."

Perry, who speaks to high-school students about the importance of education and the danger of drugs, reached out and touched the older generation during Christmas vacation when he played Santa Claus at a retirement home in his hometown of Denison, Texas.

"It was fun for them, and it was fun for me," he says. "Just to see them smile made it worthwhile."

The administrator who is trying to develop a social conscience in his school's student-athletes is athletics director Mike McGee, who believes firmly that the extra effort is worth it.

"Our responsibilities extend far beyond developing athletics and academic prowess," McGee says. "They include the education of the whole person. We want to instill in our athletes the notion of public service and how you go about it."

"After a year, we're very happy with the program, and the creativity shown by the athletes and coaches has been remarkable. Our 10-hour requirement is only a minimum. In fact, almost all of the athletes have gone well beyond that."

Former Southern California track coach Ernie Bullard, now a special assistant to McGee, is the program's coordinator. He admits to some doubts about the plan before it began.

"From the beginning, we assumed it was a worthwhile project," Bullard says. "My one concern was how some of the coaches and athletes would react to it because it's extra work for all of them. But almost without exception, it has been well received. A lot of athletes and coaches have told me they thought it was beneficial for the athletes to do it."

It's been eye-opening, too. "Feeding the homeless has made me feel a lot more fortunate," Ortega says. "You hand out food to people who are living in cardboard boxes, and you come back to your apartment and turn on your TV and rest on your couch, and it makes you appreciate what you have a lot more. It's a dose of reality."

Some of the food the track team distributes is donated by a nearby market, and some of it is donated or purchased by the athletes and coaches themselves. But the team is still looking for a permanent sponsor.

"I think it costs only about $47 to feed 150 people each time," Ortega says. "Just a little amount of money can buy food for all those people it's truly incredible. And they're very appreciative. In a lot of cases, that may be the only food they have for that day, or for even longer."

While many of the Southern California athletes perform their community-service work as a team, others do it on their own. But they're monitored to make sure they do it.

"The main thing is, whether it's an individual project or a team project, everything has to be documented," Bullard says. "If it's by team, the coach monitors it. If it's one of the major organizations we work with, I get an update by fax every two or three weeks.

"If an athlete did it on his own with another organization, I need a note on letterhead from the person who supervised him, indicating he fulfilled his requirement. I haven't gotten one piece of communication saying someone didn't do what he or she was supposed to do. As far as I can tell, it's been very, very effective."

As McGee hoped, what began as a requirement is evolving into a lifelong passion.

"I think I'll be doing this forever," says Perry. "This is something that I really enjoy, and when you find something that you like, you tend to stick with it."

"I definitely plan to continue being a volunteer in some way," Ortega says, "and I don't think I would have done that without having been a part of this program."

"This experience has encouraged me to understand that there is a need for people to spend their time and, if need be, their money, to help others who are less fortunate."

Jim Perry is a former sports information director at the University of Southern California.

Community service

Delaware State women collect clothes for charity

For the second consecutive year, the Delaware State College women's basketball team collected clothes to donate to the Goodwill Industries of Delaware. Proceeds from the sale of the clothing will be used to train disadvantaged and disabled youths in Kent and Sussex Counties, the school said.

"We wanted to do something for the community," coach Honey Lamb-Bowman said. "The community has been good to us and God has been good to us, so we wanted to give something back. We try to instill (in our players) that self-esteem means a lot, but at the same time you should not be selfish. This teaches the players about the game of life. They give and know that someone will benefit from it."

Community service commission created

A new Federal Commission on National and Community Service presently is taking proposals from states, school districts, colleges and conservation corps that want to expand the community-service efforts of young people.

The commission's address is The National Press Club Building, Suite 428, 529 14th Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20045. The telephone number is 202/724-0600, and the fax number is 202/724-0608.

News Fact File

In 1983, a survey of chief executive officers, faculty athletics representatives and athletics directors showed that 90 percent wanted to continue to hold the NCAA Convention in the month of January, and only 12.8 percent wanted to move it to the third week of that month, rather than the second week. In 1990, 85.1 percent of the delegates favored retaining the current scheduling pattern.

Volleyball program supporters gain order to delay cancellation decision

By Steven R. Hagwell
The NCAA News Staff

Supporters of the women's volleyball team at California State University, Fullerton, have gained a temporary restraining order in an attempt to prevent the university from abolishing the program.

On February 3, one week after Cal State Fullerton announced its decision to discontinue its women's volleyball program, the Orange County Superior Court issued the order enjoining the school's president and athletics administration from taking any action.

The restraining order mandates that the women's volleyball team will continue operations until a preliminary injunction hearing February 20. Lawyers representing volleyball coach Jim Huffman and members of the Titans' volleyball team sought the order after Cal State Fullerton athletics officials announced January 28 that women's volleyball and men's gymnastics would be discontinued.

"We are glad the volleyball team remains intact," said Huffman's attorney, Kirk Boyd. "Our plans are to move forward aggressively in preparing for the February 20 hearing date, and we expect the court to grant an injunction so that the women's volleyball team can continue to prepare for its fall season."

The lawsuit is based on Article 5 of the California statutes, which states "that opportunities in athletics be provided on as nearly an equal basis to male and female students as is practicable, and that comparable incentives and encouragements be offered to females to engage in athletics."

"It's our argument that by cutting the volleyball program, the administration is in violation of state statutes," Huffman said. "If you take a look at the athletics department's budget figures, both in monetary terms and in scholarships, it's clear that equity is not being reached."

According to Huffman, Cal State Fullerton offered 17 varsity sports — nine for men and eight for women — involving approximately 268 males and 97 female student-athletes. Other university officials declined several opportunities to confirm those figures. The proposed cuts would reduce those figures three percent for men and 12 percent for women (the volleyball team is made up of 10 players). The cuts would also reduce the number of women's team sports to two (basketball and softball), compared to four for men (football, basketball, baseball and soccer).

"It's clear the university didn't take into consideration equal opportunities for women in team and individual sports when it made its decision," said Huffman, who took over the coaching duties three years ago. "There are 3,000 more women that attend the university than men and, yet men's sports receive three times as many scholarships and would have twice as many team sports. You have to take those figures into consideration... It's simply a matter of fairness."

Mel Franks, Cal State Fullerton's assistant director of athletics for media relations, said the decision to drop the women's volleyball and men's gymnastics programs came after athletics department officials analyzed the costs to promote all of the university's sports as regional and national competitors. The plan was endorsed by university president

Milton Gordon and the athletics council.

"The decision is the result of a three-month study," said Franks. "Each sport was evaluated on the same criteria, and it was the decision of the university to focus on maintaining the level of the five sports — men's and women's basketball, baseball, softball and women's gymnastics that have done well and continue to do well. Rather than try to throw more money into women's volleyball, it was decided to drop it and fund the other sports."

The criteria included emphasis on the sports sponsored by the NCAA and Big West Conference; competitive potential; scheduling opportunities; recruiting base; revenue potential and cost-effectiveness, and tradition on the campus.

The Titans volleyball team has compiled a 17-173 conference mark over the last 12 seasons and is 8-46 in Big West Conference play under Huffman. It never has qualified for the NCAA tournament. The team finished 9-27 overall last season and 4-14 in the Big West Conference.

The men's gymnastics program was a Division II power in the 1970s but has declined over the past several seasons. The Big West Conference does not sponsor the sport.

"You have to consider the region and area when offering and not offering sports," said Huffman. "Volleyball is one of the most popular sports in the state of California. There are more women playing volleyball in the state than any other sport with the exception of basketball."

The decision to drop volleyball comes one year after the university's athletics council, student senate and athletics officials voted to drop the football program. Gordon later rejected the move. The Titans football team posted a 2-9 mark in 1991 and has not defeated a Division I-A team in three seasons.

In announcing the university's decision to drop volleyball and men's gymnastics, athletics director Bill Shumard said the university "remains committed to Division I-A football with the new on-campus stadium and our marketing and scheduling abilities to determine its funding and competitive expectations."

"How can the university justify its decision to drop volleyball after reversing its decision about football?" Huffman asked. "We know the department is facing some tough financial times, but by dropping football and then bringing it back, they only increased their problems."

"We're not trying to run the athletics department. It's obvious the department can manage its own affairs. We feel that by dropping volleyball, the university is attempting to alleviate its financial problems, and we are the victims. They just can't violate the rights of women that way."

Football hall move likely within year

The College Football Hall of Fame more than likely will move from its Kings Mills, Ohio, home to another city this year, said Robert Casciola, executive director of the National Football Foundation, which maintains the 14-year-old hall.

The hall currently is closed to the public and is being used only for special events. During its winter schedule, the hall normally had been open to the public on weekends only and closed during the week, Casciola said. Kings Mill is near Cincinnati.

Attendance at the hall has not reached the levels that were anticipated when it opened, and Casciola said that more vocal efforts to publicize the hall will have to take place if it is to survive in another city.

"I think it never got the kind of attention that people thought it would," Casciola said. "Basically, wherever it goes, it has to be merchandised and marketed better. And it will be."

Casciola said letters were sent to various cities asking to determine interest in obtaining the hall. Some of the cities contacted are Atlanta, Georgia; Boston, Massachusetts; Dallas, Texas; Houston, Texas; Kansas City, Missouri; New Orleans, Louisiana; Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and South Bend, Indiana. Tampa, Florida, site of the annual Hall of Fame bowl game, also was contacted.

Casciola also said that Cincinnati has expressed an interest in keeping the hall, but that it was unlikely that it would stay in that city.

"Quite frankly, it probably will be moving," Casciola said. "I don't think there's a finger to be pointed. It's not Cincinnati's fault. They tried. We've all tried."

Division II voters approved Proposal 64 on roll call

The result of a vote that inadvertently was left out of the roll-call summary that appeared in the January 29 issue of The NCAA News appears below.

Delegates from Division II member institutions adopted Proposal No. 64, 116-74-1. The measure reduces permissible grants-in-aid in selected sports by 10 percent.

Proposal No. 64 was not designated for a roll-call vote prior to the 1992 Convention, but Division II delegates approved a motion to record the vote.

Also, the key that accompanied the voting summary in the January 29 issue failed to note that a vote involving Proposal No. 25 was on a motion in Division I to refer that satisfactory-progress proposal to the Academic Requirements Committee. The motion passed, 274-50.

The heading in the summary for that vote should have included the designation "MTR," for "motion to refer."

Graduation-rate

As a result, the NCAA will provide separate reporting forms for Division I institutions, which began reporting data to the Association last year, and for Divisions II and III institutions, which have until July 1, 1993, to submit the first report. The form that will be used by Divisions II and III institutions is considerably less detailed than that used in Division I.

The Federal act requires institutions awarding athletically related financial aid to report student-body and student-athlete graduation rates by July 1, 1993, and requires all institutions receiving Federal assistance to compile and report annually graduation rates for the student body as a whole, also by that date.

With its adoption of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24, the Association required Divisions I and II institutions to report graduation-rate data to the NCAA. Now, as a result of the Council's recent decision, the Association also will collect information required by the act from Division III institutions, in the interest of presenting a "united front" in fulfilling the act's reporting requirements.

Combining forms

Rather than requiring each division to use a separate reporting form, the Council approved a recommendation by the special committee to provide the same form to Divisions II and III institutions.

The plan is for each institution in those divisions to use only the portions of that form that are applicable to that institution. The form, which was discussed by the special committee at its February 6-7 meeting in New Orleans, Louisiana, will consist of six sections. Divisions II and III institutions that administer athletically related financial aid in a sport will complete all six sections, but those that do not administer athletically related aid will use only three sections of the form.

In comparison, the Division I form consists of 21 sections, of which only seven must be completed by Division I schools that do not administer athletically related aid.

The Divisions II and III form is significantly different from the sample reporting form that was distributed last year to Division II institutions to help prepare them for the first report in 1993. The revised form reflects an emphasis on the reporting of "persistence rates" through at least 1998 (see accompanying story at top-right corner of this page).

A subcommittee of the special committee will meet March 11 to review the new form. Plans are to mail the document to Divisions II and III member institutions in late spring or early summer of this year—a year ahead of the reporting deadline. That first report will cover students and student-athletes who first enrolled in the 1991-92 academic year.

Division I form

Meanwhile, Division I institutions' next reporting deadline is October 1, 1992. Beginning in 1993, Division I schools will join Divisions II and III schools in reporting the data by July 1, in accordance with the Federal act.

During its New Orleans meeting, the special committee also made recommendations pertaining to the Division I reporting form. As a result, the NCAA Administrative Committee was scheduled to consider a recommendation during its February 12 telephone conference to relieve Division I institutions of a requirement to resubmit data that already has been provided to the Association on the first Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form.

On the 1991-92 form, institutions provided data on classes that enrolled during 1983-84 and 1984-85. The special committee is recommending that this year's form request information only for the class that enrolled in 1985-86, that next year's form focus on 1986-87, and so on in the computation of the Government issues guidelines

The Federal Student Right-to-Know Act authorizes the U.S. Secretary of Education to permit institutions to submit graduation-rate data through an athletics conference or association, provided that the information is "substantially comparable" to the data required by the act.

However, the Department of Education has not yet issued the Notice of Proposed Rules (NPR) upon which the secretary would base any decision regarding whether data from Association members is substantially comparable.

The department has, however, issued a "safe harbors" letter, with the purpose of providing guidelines designed to help ensure that institutions will be in compliance with requirements when the NPR is published.

The letter indicates that July 1, 1998, is the first time that actual graduation rates must be reported by institutions that offer four-year degree programs.

In the meantime, a school would be required to report its annual "persistence rates." Such rates, in essence, would be reenrollment rates reflecting the percentage of students in a class who return each year to continue progress toward a degree.

As institutions collect that data for reporting, they will be building the database that will be needed for reporting the percentage of students in a given class who graduate within a six-year period, as required by the Federal act.

The NCAA Council has approved collecting "persistence-rate" information from Divisions II and III member institutions beginning with the class that first enrolled for the 1991-92 academic year. The data must be reported to the Association by Divisions II and III institutions no later than July 1, 1993.

Committee creating suitable form

The NCAA Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24 is preparing a form that will be used by member institutions to distribute graduation-rate information to recruits and others designated by NCAA and Federal legislation.

Bylaw 13.3.1.2 requires a Division I or II institution to provide recruits, their parents and the recruits' high-school and two-year college coaches with graduation-rate data. Recruits' guidance counselors also will receive the data as the result of the passage of Proposal No. 140 at the 1992 Convention. The requirement currently is in effect in Division I and will become effective July 1, 1993, in Division II.

Accordingly, the NCAA Council has approved development of a form for reporting graduation rates to those individuals. Instead of providing copies of the complete, 50-page Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form, institutions will be able to use a two-page form for that purpose.

The first page of that form will be a cover memorandum explaining the information provided in the report, and the second page will be a summary of the specific institution's graduation-rate information.

The form is to be provided to the recruit and the other specified parties once recruitment of an individual occurs, or upon request. However, the institution is not required to provide the data to any party other than those specified by Bylaw 13.3.1.2.

In a related matter, the Council also has approved a recommendation by the special committee that an institution's chief executive officer be provided the opportunity to review that institution's completed form for reporting graduation rates to recruits and others before the form is distributed in late spring.

rolling four-year average required by the legislation.

"That will shrink the size of the form significantly," said Daniel T. Dutcher, NCAA director of legislative services and a staff liaison to the special committee. "It also will reduce the possibility that some accounting error would be made and reported."

The form is expected to be mailed to Division I institutions in early May.

Computer help

To help with generating graduation-rate reports, the Council has approved the development of a computer software program for use by member institutions.

A version of the software is expected to be ready for distribution to Division I institutions by July 1, and versions will be developed for Divisions II and III institutions after that.

The software will be developed by personnel from the NCAA national office's administration, compliance services and business departments.

with that?

"Sometimes I apologize to my team for some of my comments and the pressure it puts on them," admits Allen. "But I believe that when they learn to accept pressure and work with it, the better they'll be."

His approach appears to work.

"We realize there are no definites," says sophomore Sumner Darling, who rejected full grants-in-aid from Stanford University and the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, to walk on at Nebraska. "When coach Allen makes statements about us winning the (NCAA) title, it puts some pressure on us, but it also shows how much he believes in us. That means a lot. It makes us want to do well for him."

There was a time when winning an NCAA title was the furthest thing from Allen's mind. In fact, simply qualifying for the championships was the ultimate goal. In Allen's first nine seasons, Nebraska qualified for the NCAA championships only twice (1975 and 1976). "We were on the bottom of the chart," recalls Allen. "It was a real low-key program, but we worked hard at improving."

Those efforts paid off in a big way in 1979 when Nebraska won its first national title. In the 11 years that followed, the Cornhuskers claimed six championships and four runner-up finishes. The only time Nebraska failed to finish first or second was 1984 (it finished fifth).

Learned how

"We finally learned how to do it," Allen says of Nebraska's success. "We finally learned you can't win without a name. I say 'we' because it's us (assistant coach Jim Howard), not just me. We went to every clinic we could teach in. We built the program from the inside out. In a lot of ways, it turned out to be the best thing that could have happened because now we know how to do it."

Allen and company also know how to host an NCAA championship. And they should. Nebraska's Devaney Sports Center has hosted seven of the last 12 Men's National Collegiate Gymnastics Championships and holds the NCAA championships-attendance record. In April, Nebraska will be the site of the 50th championships.

Winning the title before the home fans on the golden anniversary of the NCAA event is something Allen admits "would be very special."

Special enough to consider leaving the profession? No way.

"I never want to quit gymnastics," says Allen. "Whether I'm on the collegiate level or teaching young kids, I always want to be involved. Teaching gymnastics is very rewarding. So many people go through life looking for their niche. I found mine."

kanian, assistant coaches Tim Grulich and Ron Ganulin, and former Nevada-Las Vegas academic adviser Shelly Fischer. Originally, Nevada Gov. Bob Miller was listed as a defendant, but McKibben dismissed him from the case January 21.

• Nonallied intervener: University of Nevada regents. Before Miller was dismissed, McKibben ordered the university system of Nevada to be joined in the case. In early February, the regents filed a motion to be allowed to intervene without being named as either a defendant or on the side of the NCAA.

University counsel Don Klasic said the university system is seeking a ruling on part of the statute that he said conflicts with Nevada constitutional provisions giving that state's two universities sole jurisdiction over their own internal matters.

"The fear is that it's a step in the door," Klasic told The Associated Press. "They (the legislature) could start giving us rules on tenure, work load, that sort of thing."

• Friend of the court on behalf of the defendants: The Nevada legislative commission. The commission originally voted only to file briefs in the case, but a motion was filed February 7 to permit the commission to appear in the case, to file briefs and to present oral arguments as an amicus curiae. In the motion, Nevada deputy legislative counsel Kimberly Morgan said the outcome of the case will significantly affect the welfare of the public universities and taxpayers in the state.

Author King, wife save Maine swimming

Author Stephen King has written a new ending to a frightful situation for his alma mater's swimming and diving programs.

King and his wife, Tabitha, both University of Maine graduates, said they will donate the $30,000 needed to maintain varsity status for both teams in 1992-93, according to The Associated Press. The programs had been downgraded to club status as part of a $188,650 cut in the school's athletics budget.

While King's donation provides a one-year respite for the team, its long-term future remains in doubt.

Maine athletics officials said the school will try to raise the money needed to continue the program. King indicated that he would like to see the university keep the program alive and didn't rule out another donation.

King also has contributed $10,000 to construction of Mahaney Field House at the university.

Certification

will serve as moderator.

Charles McClendon, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association, also will attend.

Following are brief biographical sketches of the coaches and administrators who will participate in the 1992 College Football Forum.

Ferritor

In more than 18 years at Arkansas, Ferritor has served as vice-chancellor for academic affairs, president of the campus council and chair of the sociology department. His efforts were rewarded in 1986 when he was named chancellor.

Under Ferritor's leadership, the university has funded and completed a $13 million renovation of Old Main, the symbol of higher education in Arkansas. But he has focused most of his energies on the more than 14,000 students on campus and the quality of their education. This concern led him to establish the University Teaching Academy to foster excellence in the classroom.

He also has concentrated on improving the freshman-year experience for Arkansas students, joining university professors in teaching freshman-level classes. Under his guidance, freshman scholarships have increased to more than 1,200 per year, and the Arkansas Scholars program has been successful in recruiting the top state high-school students to the Fayetteville campus and keeping them there.

Ferritor was heavily involved in the university's participation in the NCAA's pilot certification program. The university, which completed its study last summer, was one of approximately 40 Division I institutions to conduct pilot programs that will be used as a basis for the NCAA Council to consider legislation to establish a mandatory certification program at the 1993 NCAA Convention.

In 1984, Ferritor received the University of Arkansas Alumni Association Faculty Achievement Award for teaching and research.

Hobbs

During his 15 years as UCLA's faculty athletics representative for both the men's and women's programs, Hobbs has handled a number of major assignments. He was NCAA Division I vice-president last year, one of the five officers composing the Administrative Committee. In this capacity, he chaired the NCAA Division I Steering Committee and was a member of the NCAA Executive Committee, which is responsible for the association's financial affairs and national-championships program.

Since his appointment in 1976, Hobbs twice has been president of the Pacific-10 Conference Council (1978-79 and 1987-88) and has served on the NCAA Council. He has been the chair of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee and the NCAA Council Subcommittees on Initial-Eligibility Waivers and Waivers for International Competition. He also has served on the Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals.

Working with faculty representatives of the other member schools, Hobbs helps shape matters of athletics policy and approve legislative action of the Pacific-10, as well as helping to determine the eligibility of student-athletes.

A member of UCLA's political science department since 1964 with a specialty in American constitutional law, Hobbs has won four teaching honors at the university: the 1968, 1975 and 1983 Pi Sigma Alpha Awards for distinguished teaching in political science and the UCLA Alumni Association's distinguished teaching award in 1969.

Jones

Entering his seventh year as athletics director at Texas Tech, Jones has used a background in business and athletics to build the resurgence of the 15 men's and women's sports he oversees. Interest in the football program has risen sharply the past few years, and the Raiders fielded nationally ranked teams in women's volleyball, women's basketball and baseball last year.

Jones has faced tough problems since joining the program in September 1985. Merging men's and women's programs under one umbrella, hiring new coaches, devising a football option-seat program, dealing with skyrocketing scholarship costs and ensuring all programs are being operated within NCAA guidelines are just a few of the challenges he has met.

Jones quarterbacked the University of Texas at Austin to the Southwest Athletic Conference title in 1952 while earning all-SWC honors. After receiving his bachelor's degree, Jones spent two years as a military officer before returning to Texas, where he served as an assistant coach for eight years. Following a stint in private business, Jones returned in 1980 as assistant athletics director. The Longhorn Hall of Honor member was elevated to associate athletics director before leaving Austin to become the first Texas Tech athletics director to head both the men's and women's departments.

Lewis

Six days after coaching East Carolina University to a dramatic 37-34 triumph over North Carolina State University in the 1992 Peach Bowl, Lewis was named head football coach at Georgia Tech.

Lewis compiled a 21-12-1 record in three seasons at East Carolina. His first East Carolina squad finished 5-5-1 in 1989, the first nonlosing season for the Pirates since 1983. His second Pirate team posted a 5-6 record but was just 11 points away from an eight-win campaign. This year's East Carolina team set a school record for victories (11) and earned its first bowl invitation since 1978. For his efforts, Lewis was named United Press International coach of the year.

He arrived at East Carolina after a nine-year stint as defensive backfield coach at the University of Georgia, where he was also defensive coordinator for the last eight years. Not only did Georgia go to nine bowl games during Lewis' tenure, but the Bulldogs also won three Southeastern Conference championships and the 1980 mythical national championship. He coached 23 all-SEC selections and seven all-Americans.

Before arriving at Georgia, Lewis was the head coach at the University of Wyoming. In three years, he led the Cowboys to a 13-21-1 record and had two players named to all-America squads.

A 29-year coaching veteran, Lewis also has been an assistant coach at Arkansas (1973-76), Wake Forest University (1969-70), the University of Pittsburgh (1966-68) and East Stroudsburg University of Pennsylvania (1963-65), his alma mater, in addition to a previous assistant's stint as defensive backs coach at Georgia Tech (1971-72).

Luginbill

In just three years as a collegiate head coach, Luginbill has transformed a program that had seen only one winning season in six years into a team on the verge of national prominence. He has led the San Diego State football squad to three consecutive winning seasons for the first time since 1977, capping his 1991 campaign by being named the Western Athletic Conference coach of the year.

After finishing 6-5-1 in his first year (1989), he took his 1990 squad to a 6-5 mark. This past season, the Aztecs finished 8-4-1 overall and 6-1-1 in the conference, good enough for a second-place finish and an appearance in the Freedom Bowl.

To many outside the San Diego area, Luginbill was an unknown quantity when he was named head coach in 1988. His last coaching assignment had come during the 1984 season, and he had served the previous three years as associate athletics director at San Diego State.

Although he had 17 years of football coaching experience, including three seasons as the defensive coordinator at Arizona State University, he never had been a major-college head coach. His sole head-coaching experience had come during one season at Pasadena (California) City College, when he directed the Lancers to an 11-1 record and the 1977 national junior college championship and was named the national junior college coach of the year.

Luginbill returned to the major-college ranks as a defensive backs coach at Wyoming in 1978 before going to Arizona State the next season. He coached the Sun Devil linebackers for three seasons before taking over as defensive coordinator.

Mason

When Mason took over as head coach at Kansas in 1988, he wasted little time injecting equal doses of confidence, toughness and competitiveness in his team and pushed the Jayhawks forward in the Big Eight Conference. Mason guided Kansas to a 6-5 record in 1991, which represented the school's first winning season since 1981. His achievements last year were recognized by the Big Eight coaches as he was named conference cocoach of the year.

Mason came to Kansas after two successful years at Kent State University. In his first year as Kent's head coach in 1986, the Golden Flashes finished 5-6 and in second place in the Mid-American Conference. For his efforts, Mason was named the MAC coach of the year. In 1987, Kent finished 7-4 its first winning season in more than a decade.

Mason began his coaching career in 1972 as a graduate assistant at Ball State University. After one year as an assistant at Allegheny College, Mason returned to Ball State for one season in 1974 as defensive line coach. He then moved on to Iowa State University as the offensive line coach for two seasons (1975 and 1976) under current Colorado State University coach Earle Bruce. In 1977, Mason joined the University of Illinois, Champaign, staff as offensive line coach.

In 1978, Mason returned to his alma mater, Ohio State University, where he spent the next eight seasons under Woody Hayes and Bruce. He coached the outside linebackers and offensive line before being promoted to offensive coordinator in 1980, where he served until 1986.

Pasqualoni

It has been quite a ride to the top for Pasqualoni. Five years ago, he was finishing a five-year stint as head coach and athletics director at Western Connecticut State University, a Division III institution. On January 9, 1991, Pasqualoni was named the 26th head football coach at Syracuse, then ranked 14th in all-time victories among major-college programs. Under Pasqualoni, it is now 13th.

Pasqualoni was the most victorious first-year coach in the 102-year history of Syracuse football. He was the only first-year Orange coach ever to take his team to a bowl. His 1991 Orangemen became just the fourth Syracuse team to reach double digits in wins.

Pasqualoni replaced Dick MacPherson, who became head coach of the New England Patriots. MacPherson brought Pasqualoni to Syracuse, hiring him in 1987 to coach the linebackers. Syracuse's record of 46-12-3 in the five years since Pasqualoni came on board is the ninth best in the country, and it is hardly coincidental that the Orangemen have been to five straight bowls.

He took his first collegiate coaching job as an assistant at Southern Connecticut State University in 1976. In 1980, he was elevated to defensive coordinator. After serving three seasons in that capacity, he left to become head coach and athletics director at Western Connecticut State. Pasqualoni's teams compiled a 34-17 record in his five seasons. His 1984 squad went 9-1, and his 1985 team went 10-2, winning the New England Football Conference championship and earning a spot in the NCAA Division III playoffs.

Slocum

In just three seasons as the Texas A&M head coach, Slocum has led his team to three bowl games and a 27-9-1 (.743) overall record. The 27 wins in consecutive years is the most by a beginning football coach in Texas A&M history.

This last season, Slocum led the Aggies to a 10-2 record, an SWC championship and a Mobil Cotton Bowl meeting with highly regarded Florida State University. The Aggies lost, 10-2, in a strange match-up featuring two top defenses and eight A&M turnovers.

Slocum has completed 19 seasons as an Aggie football coach, the longest tenure of any football coach in A&M history. He served as an Aggie assistant coach from 1972 through the 1980 season and from 1982 through the 1988 season.

A tight end and linebacker as a player at McNeese State University, Slocum was assigned to the offensive side of the ball in his first season with the Aggies. In 1973, he was switched to defense and helped mold one of the finest units in the nation. In 1979, Slocum was promoted to defensive coordinator.

John Robinson called Slocum to the University of Southern California to serve as the Trojans' defensive coordinator for the 1981 season. The Trojans ended the season ranked No. 1 in defense in the Pacific-10.

He returned to Texas A&M the next year and was promoted to assistant head coach in 1985. His defensive teams continued to shine until he was named head coach in 1988.

Stallings

Stallings enters his third season as head coach at Alabama with an 18-6-0 overall record. Of course, Stallings was no stranger to the storied Alabama football tradition; he had played and coached under legendary Crimson Tide coach Paul "Bear" Bryant. And his coaching credentials also include 14 years with former Dallas Cowboys head coach Tom Landry.

After completing his playing career at Texas A&M in 1956, Stallings remained at the school as a graduate assistant coach under Bryant. In 1958, he moved to Tuscaloosa as a full-time assistant coach on Bryant's staff. During his tenure at Alabama (1958-64), the Crimson Tide went 60-11-5, won a pair of Southeastern Conference championships and claimed two mythical national titles (1961 and 1964). The 1961 team finished 11-0-0.

Stallings' first head-coaching job came in 1965 when his alma mater, Texas A&M, called. The then 29-year-old Stallings returned to College Station, where he remained for seven seasons (1965-71), posting a 27-45-1 overall record.

Stallings' professional career began when he joined Landry's Cowboys in 1972, and he remained on the staff for 14 seasons through the 1985 campaign.

His NFL head-coaching debut came in 1987 with the St. Louis Cardinals. In the first year at Phoenix (1988), Stallings led the Cardinals' offense to a fourth-place NFL ranking. He compiled an overall NFL record of 23-34-1.

COACHES

Baseball Ted Conner announced his retirement at New Hampshire, effective the end of the 1992 season.

Baseball assistant Lew Kent named at Radford.

Men's basketball Neil Roberts resigned at Southern Utah State following his arrest in an alleged shoplifting incident. He has been charged with a misdemeanor theft, to which he has pled innocent. Mike Cohen resigned at Wichita State, effective the end of the season. He has been coach of the Shockers since 1989. Morningside's Jerry Schmutte given additional responsibilities as associate athletics director. Bill Green resigned at Indianapolis, effective the end of the season, to pursue other coaching and business opportunities. He has been there since the 1987-88 season.

Women's basketball Pam Wettig resigned at Iowa State, effective the end of the season. Terri Lasswell received a contract extension through the 1993-94 season at Northern Iowa.

Men's and women's cross country

Tom Henderson resigned as head of the men's program at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo to pursue personal and professional opportunities. He also coached men's track and field at the school. He has been a coach at the school for 11 years. Ted Farah appointed at Sacred Heart, which will begin sponsoring men's cross country next season. Farah, who also replaces women's coach Ed Swanson, currently is the indoor and outdoor track coach at Danbury (Connecticut) High School and head boys' and girls' cross country coach at Immaculata High in Danbury.

Football Tim Murphy received a contract extension through the 1996 season at Cincinnati, where his Bearcats finished the past season with a 4-7 record, including an upset victory over 1991 Fiesta Bowl champion Louisville. Morningside's Dave Dolch accepted additional responsibilities as athletics director. Bob Bartolomeo resigned at Butler to accept an assistant coaching position at Ball State, where he will coach inside linebackers. He was replaced by Ken LaRose, who has been an assistant the past eight years at Butler. In two seasons at Butler, Bartolomeo compiled a record of 14-7-1, including a 9-1 mark and a Midwest Intercollegiate Football Conference title in 1991. LaRose spent four years as an assistant at the high-school level before joining the Butler staff in 1984. John McKechnie promoted to cohead coach at Massachusetts after serving as associate head coach at the school. Hal Mumme appointed at Valdosta State, succeeding Mike Cavan, who resigned in December to coach at East Tennessee State. Mumme spent the past three seasons at Iowa Wesleyan, where his teams compiled a record of 24-11, including a 10-1 mark in 1991.

Charlie Giangrosso named at Thiel, where he led the Tomcats to their first winning season (5-4) since 1979 as interim head coach last season. He was previously head coach at St. Mary of the Plains (Kansas) and also was an assistant at five schools, including Thiel. Iowa's Hayden Fry granted a three-year contract extension through the 1997 season. In 13 years as coach of the Hawkeyes, Fry has registered a 100-51-5 record. Chuck Shelton resigned at Utah State to take over the program at Pacific (California).

John Audino appointed at Union (New York). Greg Polnasek selected at his alma mater, Wisconsin-Eau Claire. He previously had served as assistant coach, administrative assistant and recruiting coordinator at Illinois State.

Football assistants Steve Morton named offensive line coach at Washington. Scott Linehan named at Idaho, filling the vacancy created when Jim Senter resigned to become the regional development director at the school. Linehan was quarterbacks coach at Nevada-Las Vegas during the 1991 season. Richard Kent appointed linebackers coach at Troy State, replacing Kurt Crain, who accepted a similar position at Texas Christian. Kent spent four years as defensive coordinator at Catawba. Roger Hughes joined the staff at Dartmouth after three years at Cameron, where he was offensive coordinator and strength coach.

backers coach to defensive coordinator at Houston, replacing Ben Hurt, who becomes a special defensive assistant for the team. Also, Kenny Houston, secondary coach, announced his retirement and the contract of defensive ends coach Pat Donohue will not be renewed. Former NFL quarterback Jim Zorn hired as offensive coordinator at Utah State after serving three years as quarterbacks coach at Boise State. James Collis, Richard Flanders, Chuck Priore and Michael Toop joined the staff at Pennsylvania. Also, Ray Priore was retained from last year's staff but will move from linebackers to defensive line coach. Collis, who will coach quarterbacks and receivers, spent seven years at Connecticut, including the past three seasons as offensive coordinator. Flanders, who will handle the defensive secondary, was head coach at Dean Junior College in Franklin, Massachusetts, last year. Toop, who will serve as defensive coordinator and linebackers coach, spent five seasons at Colgate, where he coached linebackers and defensive backs. Chuck Priore, who most recently coached at Union (New York), becomes offensive coordinator.

Mike Cavanaugh selected at Murray State after spending four years as an assistant at Alma. He is replaced by Brian Zimmerman, who will also coach men's tennis at the school. Cavanaugh will coach either running backs or the offensive line at Murray State. Zimmerman has been a part-time assistant at the school three different times since 1982. Wisconsin offensive coordinator Russ Jacques was relieved of his duties. Perry Fewell named at Army.

Eric Jackson is on a six-month leave from Alma to serve as an assistant for the Nevada Aces of the Professional Spring Football League. Pat Blackburn hired at Cal State Northridge after spending the past three years coaching at the high-school level. Rusty Burns named quarterbacks coach at Georgia Tech. Bob Palcic, Ray Dorr and Gary Bernardi appointed at Southern California. Palcic will handle centers and offensive guards, and Dorr, the team's quarterbacks coach, will become offensive coordinator. Bernardi will coach tight ends and offensive tackles.

ton Southern. Jay Lennon hired as men's and women's coach at Sacred Heart, which will offer the sport beginning with the 1992-93 academic year. Women's lacrosse Lois G. Bowers announced her retirement at Gettysburg, effective the end of the 1992 season. She began at the school in 1969 as women's basketball coach. She has coached five different sports at the school, including swimming, field hockey and volleyball. Bowers has a combined record of 225-194-25 in those sports. In addition, she also served eight years as women's athletics coordinator.

Women's softball—Joan McDermott given additional responsibilities as associate athletics director at Morningside. Women's softball assistant—Maureen Tracy, the first player to be named to three Northeast Conference all-tournament teams while at Long Island-Brooklyn, appointed at her alma mater. She spent last season as a high-school coach. Men's tennis Brian Zimmerman appointed at Alma, replacing Mike Cavanaugh, who accepted an assistant football position at Murray State. Zimmerman will also serve as a football assistant at Alma.

Women's tennis—Beth Clark relinquished her duties at Saginaw Valley State to fill the women's volleyball coaching vacancy there. She was replaced by Misty Cramer, who will head the program that her mother coached from 1986 to 1989.

Men's and women's track and field Tom Henderson resigned at Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. He also coached men's cross country at the school, where he has been on the staff for 11 years. Dan Gibson will assume responsibilities at Alma on an acting basis while Eric Jackson is on a six-month leave to serve as an assistant for the Nevada Aces of the Professional Spring Football League. Jackson, who is also an assistant football coach at Alma, plans to return to the campus this fall.

Women's volleyball Chris Bertie resigned at Saginaw Valley State. She was the school's most-victorious volleyball coach. Bertie has been replaced by Beth Clark, who relinquished her duties as women's tennis coach at the school. David Rubio stepped down at Cal State Bakersfield to accept a position at Arizona. In the past five seasons at Cal State Bakersfield, Rubio's teams advanced three times to the final eight of the Division II Women's Volleyball Championship and won the title in 1989. He compiled a record of 120-65.

Morningside's Joan McDermott given additional responsibilities as associate athletics director. Marlon Sano named at Utah State, replacing Steve Carlat, who resigned in December. Sano becomes the fourth coach at the school since the program gained Division I status in 1976. Sano was most recently an assistant at Cal State Fullerton.

STAFF

Business manager—Tammy Holmquist resigned at Wisconsin. Sports information director Michael Meyer named at Charleston Southern.

CONFERENCES

Robyn Sharp, who has served as an administrative assistant in championships, drug testing and service bureau at the Big Eight Conference, promoted to senior woman administrator for the conference. She will serve as the primary liaison between the Big Eight and senior woman administrators at league institutions.

Jamie McCloskey resigned as associate commissioner of the Mid-American Athletic Conference to become associate athletics director at Florida. He also served as the MAC's assistant commissioner for compliance and a four-month stint as acting commissioner in 1990 during his five-year tenure there. The conference also announced the retirement of its supervisor of football officials, Jack McLain, who leaves a position he has held for 18 years. McLain has officiated college football for 35 years, 29 of which have been with the Mid-American Conference.

Steve Hurlbut, former assistant athletics director at Pennsylvania, named associate commissioner of the Northeast Conference. He has worked in intercollegiate athletics for 12 years and will direct the league's compliance program as well as head the 15 championships the conference administers.

Daniel B. "Tucker" DiEdwardo announced he will step down as commissioner of the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, a position he has held since 1989, to serve as the executive director of the Indiana Sports Corporation. DiEdwardo also worked in the NCAA national office for seven years, serving on the championships staff.

SPORTS SPONSORSHIP

Men's and women's swimming has returned to Rollins College after a 60-year-plus absence. The institution's two teams competed January 18 in a meet against Florida Atlantic.

Men's soccer will be reinstated at Massachusetts in 1992 with a $780,000 donation over the next five years from Boston-based World Class Soccer Camp. The men's soccer program was dropped following the 1991 season because of budget cutbacks.

Sacred Heart will add men's and women's golf, men's cross country, field hockey and women's lacrosse to its athletics program beginning with the 1992-93 academic year. The school also plans to offer varsity men's and women's bowling.

Cornell announced that it is dropping men's and women's fencing, men's and women's gymnastics, and freshman football by the fall of 1993 in an effort to reduce its athletics department budget by $600,000 over the next two years. The school also said it will cut $88,000 from its funding of men's and women's equestrian polo, lightweight football and men's squash.

DEATHS

Otto Pommerening, a former all-American football player at Michigan, died February 2 in Bloomfield Hills, Michigan. In 1925, he earned top honors as a tackle on Grantland Rice's all-America team and also made teams named by The Associated Press, United Press International and football coaches. John Compton, football offensive line coach at St. Norbert, was killed January 25 in a snowmobile accident near his home in Antigo, Wisconsin. He was 37. According to the school's sports information service, Compton lost control of the vehicle, which struck a tree.

Bobby Cannon, former four-sport letter-winner at Texas, died in Kerrville, Texas, at age 95. Cannon, who entered the school in 1915, earned letters in baseball, football, basketball and track. James M. Thompson, former head men's basketball coach at Howard, died January 18 in Washington at age 59. He also had served as registrar at District of Columbia.

Michigan dedicates building to Hartwig

The University of Michigan athletics department has dedicated one of its office buildings in honor of the Wolverines' first director of women's athletics, Marie Hartwig.

Hartwig retired from the women's athletics directorship in 1976 after a 44-year association at the institution.

The building currently houses the women's athletics coaches and administrators, the athletics ticket operation and the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

After war scare, player's life returns to normal

University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, men's basketball player Tarique Al-Iesa, who spent two years of high school in Kuwait, has been successful in putting the worries of the Persian Gulf war behind him and the pressing needs of helping his basketball team in front of him.

The 6-foot-7 Al-Iesa, whose father and grandfather were in Kuwait during the war, left Kuwait just two weeks before Saddam Hussein's army invaded the country.

"I was pretty nervous," Al-Iesa told The Oshkosh Northwestern. "I think it was nine months from when I last talked to him (his father) until I talked to him again (after the liberation)."

"I did fear the worst at times. But my grandmother and some of my other relatives had escaped, and they somehow got messages in and out."

Today on the hardwood, he is averaging more than 10 points and five rebounds a game.

"He's really done a great job," Wisconsin-Oshkosh coach Ted Van Dellen said. "When we first saw him, you could see he had some real skills underneath some rust."

Twin sisters make double impact on team

Betsy and Suzy Balogh are a long way from their Bismarck, North Dakota, roots, but with the pair competing for the women's ice hockey team at Rochester Institute of Technology, home probably seems less far away than it really is.

"Mom began skating us outside when we were about 4 or 5," Suzy said. "She put us in hockey after we started skating circles around her. Our brothers played so she just put us in with them. We went out on the ice and froze, just because it was fun."

Briefly in the News

A year ago, Tarique Al-Iesa worried about the fate of his father and grandfather in Kuwait

"We were the only girls in the league, except for this one girl, but she didn't last long," Betsy said. "Figure skating was more emphasized for girls. But our parents had a part in building the youth league in Bismarck."

These days, the twins are right at home on the ice rink for the Tigers.

"They both bring a lot to the team," coach Julie Handzel said. "They're very dedicated to the sport.

I think that helps them being so far from home having someone they're close to right there. They bicker like any sisters would, but they're very close."

Schoolmates wiping up backboards

When the basketball comes careening off of the rim during games involving either the men's or women's teams at Fitchburg State College, Jeff Black and Malane Perry are more likely than anyone else on the court to come down with the ball.

Both lead the nation in rebounding in Division III. Through games of February 2, Black was first in the nation at 17.4 rebounds per game and Perry led Division III women with 18.6 per contest.

Black and Perry agree that the key to their rebounding prowess is desire.

"I don't think I box out that well, but when the ball is coming down you have to go after it," Perry said. "A lot of times I feel I am going to get it and the other player is not."

Black added: "You have to have the desire. When the shot goes up, I have a feeling for where it will end up so I just go after it."

SMU to receive $500,000 gift

The Southern Methodist University athletics department will receive a total of $500,000 in gifts from Mr. and Mrs. Hal Browning of Dallas, Texas, over the next five years, the school announced.

The Mustang Club, the fundraising group at the school, will receive $100,000 for the 1991-92 academic year. In addition, the Brownings will establish the Mustang Challenge, in which they will donate $1 for every $2 donation made to the Mustang Club. A total of $50,000 annually has been committed to the program by the Brownings, beginning with the 1992-93 academic year.

Hal Browning also has established a football scholarship in memory of his late parents. The $50,000 annual donation, beginning with the 1992-93 academic year, is the lead gift in a program that will endow jersey numbers of the Southern Methodist football team.

He keeps going and going and going

Pace University senior forward Bert Brisbane is becoming an Iron Man of sorts these days. That's because he recently played in 10 consecutive basketball games from the starting tip to the final horn 415 consecutive minutes.

Brisbane is averaging 20.1 points, 8.5 rebounds and 3.2 assists per game. And, more impressively, he's averaging 40.4 minutes per game.

Maine AD begins attendance program

University of Maine athletics director Michael Ploszek has initiated a program to recognize and encourage academic achievement and dedication among students in grades seven through 12 in that state's schools.

The A-Plus Attendance Program will honor any student who earns straight A's in all subjects during a grading period or who earns perfect attendance during that grading period, the university announced. The students will receive free tickets to one of several selected University of Maine athletics events during the year.

Milestones

• Mankato State University men's ice hockey coach Don Brose gained his 400th career victory January 25 when his Mavericks shut out the University of Wisconsin, Superior, 4-0. Brose, in his 22nd year, led the Mavericks to a second-place finish at last year's NCAA Division III championships. . . . Ohio University wrestling coach Harry Houska chalked up his 200th career victory recently. In 24 years at the school, Houska has helped produce 11 all-Americans and one national champion, Andy Daniels, in 1978. Through January 20, Houska's career record stood at 201-107-9. . . . Herb Magee, men's basketball coach at Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science, reached his 500th career victory January 29. In his 25th season at the institution, Magee has compiled a record of 500-202. He was presented with the game ball by the school's president. Magee is the school's all-time leading scorer with 2,235 points from 1959 to 1963.

Sport management conference in June

The seventh annual conference of the North American Society for Sport Management will be held at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Conference Center June 3-6. Nearly 150 leaders in the field of sport management will be on hand to discuss the opportunities and challenges facing today's sports manager.

Tennessee's women's basketball coach Pat Summitt is tentatively scheduled to speak.

For more information on the event, call Dennie Ruth Kelley at 615/974-5111.

Delta State star Harris to join basketball hall

Former Delta State University basketball great Lusia Harris joined American Amateur Union star Nera White as the first women players elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Harris was one of seven individuals elected this year to the hall.

Elected as coaches were Lou Carnesecca of St. John's University (New York); former Marquette University coach Al McGuire; Jack Ramsay, whose 864 career victories with four NBA teams ranks second in league history and who also coached at St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania), and the late Phil Woolpert, who led the University of San Francisco to NCAA championships in 1955 and 1956.

Connie Hawkins, who briefly attended the University of Iowa, and Bob Lanier, who played at St. Bonaventure University, also were elected as players, along with Sergei Belov, a perennial star for the Soviet Union teams that won four European and two world championships and the gold medal at the 1972

Summer Olympics.

The nine will be installed May 11 in Springfield, Massachusetts, joining 179 individuals and four teams already in the hall.

The 36-year-old Harris, whose name is now Lusia Harris Stewart, said, "I never thought this day would come." She told The Associated Press she was pleased to be one of the first women players to be elected to the hall.

"I guess it was about time for it to happen, and I hope it will open the door for more women to be inducted. It's a great feeling," she said.

Only three women, one coach and two contributors, previously have been inducted. The coach is Margaret Wade, Harris' coach at Delta State.

Wade, 79, heard of Harris' selection in the extended care unit of Bolivar County (Mississippi) Hospital.

"I am thrilled for Lusia," Wade said. "I'm the only woman coach and now it's her turn."

Championships corner

Women's gymnastics: The NCAA Women's Gymnastics Committee is soliciting bids from member institutions interested in hosting the 1993 regionals and 1994 finals of the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships. Interested parties should contact Michelle A. Pond, assistant director of championships, at the national office. The deadline for submitting proposals is May 29, 1992.
