Basketball revenue distribution slated

Checks totaling $31.5 million from the basketball fund of the NCAA revenue-distribution plan will be mailed to the Division I membership April 24.

The revenue plan distributes money from the NCAA's seven-year, $1 billion television contract with CBS to the membership through six different funds. The total distributed in 1992 will be $75,425,000.

Although the 1992 basketball fund is slightly larger than the $31.25 million distributed in 1991, the value per unit will be slightly smaller this year, NCAA Associate Executive Director Louis J. Spry said.

The units represent the number of games played by members of each conference in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship over the preceding six years.

The 1991 distribution reflected tournament appearances from 1985 to 1990. In that period, the value of each unit was made larger because

NCAA officials speak out on Kansas legislature proposal

By Ronald D. Mott
The NCAA News Staff

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz led a group that testified February 20 in opposition to a proposed bill in Kansas that would undercut the NCAA's enforcement process and cripple the NCAA's ability to apply its rules and regulations evenly throughout the membership.

The bill, the Athletic Association

Procedures Act, would block the NCAA from levying sanctions against an institution's athletics program, in whole or in part, if the punishment affects any persons who were not guilty of violating Association rules.

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, University of Kansas Director of Athletics Robert E. Frederick, former United States Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti and NCAA Associate Executive Director Stephen R. Morgan joined Schultz in urging the committee to reject the act, which was assigned to a subcommittee after the two-day hearings.

The Athletic Association Procedures Act is an amended version of a bill that passed in the Kansas Senate last year. The original bill sought to impose specific procedural requirements on the NCAA enforcement process rather than address the impact of penalties imposed upon a member institution.

"It wasn't long ago," Schultz told the committee, "prior to 1985, that there was a cry from the general public for very severe penalties: 'Do something about the cheaters, you're destroying intercollegiate athletics....' We now have the opinion of many that the penalties are too tough and those processes are unfair. The NCAA is very sensitive to the innocent people in all cases.

"Many times, in passing institutional penalties on, there are people who are affected that, perhaps, we don't intend to be affected. And this issue is not a new one to the NCAA. What can we do to provide penalties that will avoid this particular situation? The thought has been, 'Let's just penalize the coaches or the athletes involved.' The membership has come to the conclusion that if absolute proof of who would win in hypothetical matchups, but they're a powerful clue. "The race isn't always to the swiftest," Damon Runyon wrote, "but that's the way to bet."

James "Doc" Counsilman put together and coached the most dominant team in the history of American athletics.

And in the early 1970s, with Mark Spitz and Gary Hall as headliners and nine other Olympians for a supporting cast on his swimming team at Indiana University, Bloomington, Counsilman had the swiftest. On one of his teams, he was four-deep in backstrokers who had won U.S. national championships.

It was in that period that the stopwatch said Counsilman could take his Indiana team—the one

Divisions I, II establish records at Convention

Total attendance at the 1992 NCAA Convention in Anaheim, California, did not set a record, but both Divisions I and II had more members represented than ever before.

The overall attendance of 2,282 was the second highest in history but did not match the record 2,366 in Nashville, Tennessee, a year earlier. The past three Conventions are the only ones in the NCAA's 86 years to crack the 2,000 mark, starting with 2,171 in 1990 in Dallas.

The only Convention attendance records established in Anaheim were the 335 Division I members reprepresented, better than the 334 in Dallas in 1990, and the 210 Division II members in attendance, exceeding the 207 in Nashville in 1991. In addition, the Division I attendance represented 97.1 percent of all members of that division, tying the mark set in '90 in Dallas.

As usual, every Division I-AA member was at the Convention—116 of 116. There were two Division I-AA members missing, one an institution and one a conference (97 of 99). In Division I-AAA, eight were not there, seven of them conferences. So the Division I attendance represented 296 of the 298 active institu-

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill interim vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than March 18.

Men's and Women's Tennis Committee: Replacement for Robert H. Moore, formerly at Florida Atlantic University, no longer at a member institution. Appointee must be from Division II and must be a men's tennis representative.

Procedures still tentative

The complete list of Division I coaches certification procedures does not appear in this issue of The NCAA News, as promised in the February 19 issue.

The NCAA Division I Steering Committee reviewed actions taken during the Council's January meeting concerning proposed procedures for coaches certification and authorized the NCAA Administrative Committee to take action regarding the examinations' proposed passing grades. Because the Administrative Committee's next telephone conference is February 27, the coaches certification procedures have not been finalized.

As a result, the complete listing of the procedures will appear in the March 4 issue of the News.

Sportsmanship Day nearing

More than 2,500 elementary schools, middle schools, high schools, colleges and universities throughout the United States will participate in the second annual National Sportsmanship Day March 3.

Created by the Institute of International Sport, the day is designed to heighten awareness of the issues of ethics, fair play and sportsmanship within athletics and society.

Again this year, the institute has selected 23 Sports Ethics Fellows including NCAA President Judith M. Sweet who will gather February 29 through March 2 in Princeton, New Jersey, to share research relating to ethics and sportsmanship.

Nominations solicited for vacancies on three Council-appointed panels

Vacancies on the Men's and Women's Committees on Committees and the Nominating Committee will be filled by the NCAA Council during its April 13-15 meeting in Kansas City. Member institutions are invited to submit nominations for these vacancies, which must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, no later than March 18, 1992.

Following is a list of those whose terms expire, including those eligible and not eligible for reelection. Committee members' divisions, districts and regions, where applicable, are in parentheses.

Men's Committee on Committees Three-year term with no immediate reelection. Four expirations. Not eligible for reelection: Daniel G. Guerrero, California State University, Dominguez Hills (II-8), chair; David M. Hutter, Case Western Reserve University (III-at large); George Larry James, Stockton State College (III-2), and Stanley B. Sheriff, University of Hawaii (I-7).

The new chair must be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms [i.e., Paul S. Griffin, University of South Florida (I-3); Richard J. Hazelton, Trinity College (Connecticut), (III-at large); James A. Martin, Tuskegee University (II-at large), and James Vick, University of Texas at Austin (I-6)].

Women's Committee on Committees Three-year term with no immediate reelection. Four expirations. Not eligible for reelection: Harriett Crannell, Millikin University (III-at large); Carolyn Dixon, Texas Christian University (I-6), chair; Bettye Giles, University of Tennessee at Martin (II-3), and Marcia Saneholtz, Washington State University (I-8).

The new chair must be selected from among members who will be in the last year of their terms [i.e., Robertha Abney, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania (II-2); Janet D. Lucas, James Madison University (I-at large); Peggy Pruitt, Ohio University (I-4), and Joyce Wong, University of Rochester (III-at large)].

Nominating Committee One-year terms; limit of three years in a five-year period. Sixteen members, at least one from each district. Four members must be Council members whose terms do not expire in January 1993 (two from Division I and one each from Divisions II and III). Chair must be selected from among the four Council representatives. Members are listed below, by division and region.

Division I—Eight members, including at least two women. Two must be members of the NCAA Council. There must be two members from each Division I Council representation region.

Eligible for reelection only if selected as one of the Council representatives: Charles Cavagnaro, Memphis State University (I-Region 2-District 3), and Jim G. Malik, San Diego State University (I-Region 4-District 7).

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw requirements are met: R. Daniel Beebe, Ohio Valley Conference (I-Region 2-District 3); Del Brinkman, University of Kansas (I-Region 3-District 5); Linda G. Herman, Illinois State University (I Region 3 District 4); Robert W. Mullen, La Salle University (I-Region 1-District

2), and Sondra Norrell-Thomas, Howard University (I-Region 1-District 2).

Not eligible for reelection: Robert M. Sweazy, Texas Tech University (I-Region 4-District 6).

Division II—Four members, including at least one woman; one from each Division II Council representation region. One must be an NCAA Council member.

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw requirements are met: Louise Albrecht, Southern Connecticut State University (II-Region 1-District 1). There is one vacancy to be filled (created by the resignation of Janet Kittell, California State University, Chico). Appointee must be a Division II, Region 4 representative.

Not eligible for reelection: Dean Davenport, Ferris State University (II-Region 3-District 4), and Douglas T. Porter, Fort Valley State College (II-Region 2-District 3), who is not eligible because his term on the Council expires January 1993.

Division III Four members, including at least one woman; one from each Division III Council representation region. One must be an NCAA Council member.

Eligible for reelection if all bylaw requirements are met: James E. Foels, Oberlin College (II-Region 3-District 4), and Gregory L. Lockard, Montclair State College (III-Region 1-District 2).

Not eligible for reelection: Geraldine Knortz, Hamilton College (III-Region 2-District 2), and David A. Jacobs, Whittier College (III-Region 4-District 8), who is not eligible because his term on the Council expires January 1993.

Jacobs must be replaced as chair.

NCAA Bylaw 16.8—expenses provided by the institution for practice and competition

Practice

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.1, expenses may be paid for practice sessions only if they are associated with an away-from-home contest or conducted at a site located within the member institution's state or, if outside the state, no more than 100 miles from the institution's campus. (Note: In the sports of men's and women's skiing, a member institution may transport a team to a practice site beyond 100 miles out of state if necessitated by weather conditions.) In addition, during its October 25, 1990, conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that a member institution may not provide transportation (e.g., shuttle, van) to on-campus practice sites for student-athletes who reside on or off campus, except in unusual situations involving danger, inclement weather or other similar extenuating circumstances. The committee noted that it would remain permissible to transport student-athletes from a central on-campus site (e.g., the locker room) to on- or off-campus practice sites. The committee also determined that if a student-athlete provides his or her own transportation to attend practice at an on- or off-campus site, it would not be permissible for the institution to reimburse the student-athlete for transportation expenses. [Note: At the 1992 NCAA Convention, the membership voted to incorporate the above-mentioned Interpretations Committee decisions into the 1992-93 NCAA Manual (see I-47, Appendix F of the 1992 Convention Notice)]. Finally, per Bylaw 16.8.1.1.1, any practice on an extended road trip shall take place either at the competition site or on a direct route between two consecutive competition sites. It is not permissible for an institution to schedule practice sessions at other locations in order to provide entertainment opportunities for team members.

Competition

In accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.2, an institution may provide actual and necessary travel expenses (e.g., transportation, lodging and meals) to a student-athlete for participation in athletics competition, provided the student-athlete is representing the institution and is eligible for the competition. Such competition includes: (1) regularly scheduled intercollegiate athletics events; (2) NCAA championship events; (3) a certified postseason football game, and (4) other institutional competition permissible under NCAA legislation, including postseason events. During its February 14, 1991, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a member institution may provide actual and necessary expenses for a student-athlete to compete in noncollegiate, open events (i.e., an event that is not limited only to collegiate competitors or does not involve student-athletes scoring points for their respective institutions). Participation in such open events (other than competition set forth in Bylaw 16.8.1.3) must occur during the institution's playing and practice season, must be included in the student-athlete's maximum contest or date of competition limitations and would result in the student-athlete utilizing a season of competition.

Also, in accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.2.1, an eligible student-athlete may receive actual and necessary travel expenses to represent the institution in intercollegiate athletics competition, provided the student-athlete departs for the competition no earlier than 48 hours prior to and remains no more than 36 hours after an intercollegiate contest, even if the student-athlete does not return with the team. The travel expense restrictions do not apply in the following circumstances: (1) travel to and following contests in Hawaii or Alaska; (2) for institutions located in Hawaii and Alaska, travel to and following contests conducted in the 48 contiguous states; (3) travel prior to and following regular season competition that takes place during the institution's official vacation period; (4) travel prior to contests in NCAA championship events or certified postseason football games; (5) travel prior to and following in-season foreign competition (i.e., regular season competition in one or more countries on one trip during the prescribed playing season that may not occur more than once every four years), and (6) travel prior to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame benefit game or the American Football Coaches Retirement Trust benefit game.

Per Bylaw 16.8.1.3, an institution may provide actual and necessary expenses related to participation in the following activities: (1) established national championship events; (2) Olympic, Pan American and World University Games qualifying competition; (3) international competition approved by the NCAA Council, and (4) U.S. Olympic Committee Olympic Festival basketball and volleyball tryouts. During its August 22, 1990, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a member institution may provide expenses to student-athletes to participate in events mentioned in paragraphs 1, 2 and 4 above, only if the student-athlete is eligible for athletics competition at the institution at the time of participation in such events. In addition, during its October 24, 1991, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a member institution may provide expenses to a student-athlete to participate in a junior national championship event.

NCAA Bylaw 16.1.4.2.2—awards for NCAA championships participation

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.1.4.2.2, awards presented by the Association to student-athletes for participation in any NCAA championship event are not subject to any limitation on the value of the award. Any additional awards presented by an institution to its student-athletes for participation in an NCAA championship event are permitted, provided the total of any and all awards from the institution does not exceed $300. Also, per Bylaw 16.1.4.2.3, a most-valuable-player award may be presented to a student-athlete for his or her participation in an NCAA championship if the recipient is selected by a recognized organization approved by a member institution or conference. Each award must be approved by the institution (or conference) and may not exceed $250 in value. The awarding institution, conference or other organization may provide only one award for each event to each student-athlete.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services department as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office.

Committee seeks voice in future athlete health and safety issues

The Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, February 17-19, expressed interest in being involved in considerations regarding the welfare of student-athletes and in the proposed certification process on issues related to student-athletes' health and safety.

The committee noted that existing sports-sciences projects and programs, such as the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook and the Injury Surveillance System, may assist the Presidents Commission and NCAA Council in their work in these areas.

Much of the committee's discussion focused on guideline 2H of the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook, which deals with AIDS and intercollegiate athletics. The committee discussed recent AIDS statements issued by the United States

Olympic Committee and the National Basketball Association. The committee also met with John J. Kitchin of Swanson, Midgley, Gangwere, Clarke and Kitchin, the NCAA's legal counsel, to discuss legal matters.

As a result, the committee recommended that mandatory testing for the HIV virus not be instituted, but that a statement be added to the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook stating that when bleeding occurs during a contest, the game should be stopped at the earliest appropriate time, efforts should be made to stop the bleeding and, when the bleeding is stopped, the player may reenter the contest with approval of the team physician.

The committee agreed to develop by June 1992 further educational information for athletes, coaches, parents and others who are in need of up-to-date information regarding HIV/AIDS.

The committee also outlined plans to review the guidelines contained in the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook yearly but recommended publishing a new book in fall 1992 and every two years thereafter.

Regarding possible format changes in the handbook, the committee recommended that injury summary tables from the ISS be included in the next edition of the handbook.

The committee also discussed revisions in the handbook's guideline 2B, "Skin Examinations in Wrestling," in light of the NCAA Wrestling Committee's addition of ringworm (tinea corporis) to the list of skin infections that would be considered grounds for medical disqualification.

Injury Surveillance System

During its recent meeting, the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports restated its recommendation that the number of sports involved in the Injury Surveillance System be expanded but, in light of cost containment, ranked the sports in order of its desire to study them.

The sports, in order of rank, are cross country, track, field, diving, tennis and swimming. Some sports that had been proposed were dropped because of the low number of schools sponsoring them. Those retained were kept because of the relative high risk of injury and limited documentation of injuries in those sports.

The committee also recommended that the working definition of "injury" for ISS purposes be clarified to read: "A reportable injury in the ISS is defined as one that (1) occurred as a result of participation in an organized intercollegiate practice or game, (2) required medical attention by a team athletics trainer or physician, and (3) resulted in any restriction of the student-athlete's athletics participation or athletic performance for one or more days beyond the day of injury."

In other ISS-related action, the committee decided to retain oversight responsibility for the operation of the NCAA ISS but to leave responsibility for review of individual data reports to the national office staff. The committee also discussed the possibility of increasing awareness that ISS reports are available for use in various research studies.

Also, John Powell of Med Sports, Inc., met with the committee at the request of the Big Ten Conference to discuss the possibility of sharing data collected by his independent injury surveillance system with the NCAA ISS.

In other actions, the committee:

- Listened to a presentation by Michelle Laster-Bradley, a registered pharmacist from Auburn University, on the distribution of prescription drugs in college athletics programs.

- Commended members of the Women's Lacrosse Committee involved in the effort to develop standards for protective eyewear in that sport. The committee recommended a time line for completion of the work and asked for an update from the Women's Lacrosse Committee for its June meeting.

- Recommended that there be a column in each issue of the quarterly Sports Sciences Education Newsletter (which will be published as a supplement to The NCAA News) recognizing the committee's activities.

- Recommended that a review of the ongoing nutrition and eating disorders project be presented at the June meeting.

- Reviewed the annual report on catastrophic and fatal injuries in football and noted that these injuries remained low last year, but the need for education about use of the head as a weapon in football still exists.

- Recommended further review by the NCAA Council of issues regarding safety in cheerleading and of the committee's possible involvement in such issues.

Drug education and testing

The drug-education and drug-testing subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports has recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that the year-round drug-testing program be expanded to include Division I indoor and outdoor track and field in 1992-93 and that testing be limited to anabolic steroids, urine manipulators and diuretics.

Currently, year-round drug testing is done only in Division I football.

In other action, the subcommittee:

- Agreed to require student-athletes to produce identification when they enter the drug-testing room for the year-round program and noted that picture identification would be preferred but not required.

- Gave final approval to a new specimen-collection procedure and a new kit and noted that NCAA crew chiefs would be trained to use the new kit at their June meeting.

- Removed the required medical-history form from the drug-testing collection procedure.

- Approved funding for the NCAA to host an international conference on alcohol and other drug abuse January 23-26, 1993, in Kansas City, Missouri.

- Approved drug-testing program-development grants for California State University, Fresno, and the University of Virginia.

- Received an evaluation of NCAA drug-education regional workshops and agreed to sponsor additional Level 1 workshops in 1992-93; the subcommittee also agreed to design a Level 2 workshop for member schools that have instituted drug-education programs.

- Received an update on chewing tobacco projects in cooperation with the National Cancer Institute and Major League Baseball and agreed to support a survey of conferences on chewing tobacco policies and attitudes.

Women hoop fans, teams to learn of tourney brackets on ESPN

Women's basketball fans will be treated to 30 minutes of NCAA tournament information when NCAA Productions produces a bracket announcement show for ESPN at 12:30 p.m. Eastern time Sunday, March 15.

The show, hosted by television broadcasters Mimi Griffin and Drew Goodman, will be the first notification to teams that are selected for the Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

The NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee recently changed its notification process so that a team's first notice of participation in the tournament will be the bracket announcement show on ESPN. Later that day, the national office will send pertinent tournament information via facsimile machine to selected schools' sports information offices. Participating schools will not be called by committee representatives as in the past.

In addition to the ESPN show, CBS Sports will feature the women's bracket during half time of the Big East Conference's men's tournament championship final (between 1:15 and 1:30 p.m. Eastern time). CBS also will recap the bracket during half time of its Big Ten Conference men's game, following the Big East game.

ESPN discussed a live bracket announcement with the women's basketball committee at the committee's fall meeting. Since money was not allocated for such a production in 1992, the committee decided to reallocate some funds from the Rawlings official-ball contract.

Last year, using money earmarked by the Rawlings contract, NCAA Productions produced all eight regional semifinal games on broadcast television stations and Prime Network, a group of regional cable systems around the country that reaches approximately 26 million homes. This year Rawlings will fund NCAA Productions' telecasts of four of the regional semifinal games (double-headers from the East and West regionals). The games will air on Prime Network and, in some cases, on local outlets in areas that do not receive a Prime Network affiliate. The Rawlings money budgeted for the remaining four games will be used for the bracket announcement show.

"The basketball committee felt this was an excellent trade-off in terms of exposure," Patricia E. Bork, assistant executive director for championships, said. "The committee thought it was significantly more national exposure for all 48 teams selected to the championship."

Bork said three factors entered into the committee's decision to reallocate money for the selection show.

"First, those regional semifinals were competing with men's tournament games on the same night; second, we can't control when all of the women's telecasts are shown, and third, those telecasts sometimes were competing against each other."

As part of the official-ball contract, Rawlings next year will underwrite production costs for the televising of all eight regional semifinal games and the selection show.

"The important thing here is that we've more than tripled our announcement coverage in 1992," Bork said.

Broadcast schedule

Following is ESPN's and NCAA Productions' schedule of coverage for the Division I Women's Basketball Championship regional semifinals and finals, March 26 and 28:

East: University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia
Semifinals: 6:30 and 9 p.m. Eastern, NCAA Productions*
Final: 11 a.m. Eastern, ESPN

Midwest: University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado
Semifinals: 6 and 8:30 p.m. Mountain
Final: 7 p.m. Mountain, ESPN

Midwest: Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana

West: University of Washington, Seattle, Washington
Semifinals: 6:30 and 9 p.m. Pacific, NCAA Productions*

Semifinals: 6 and 8:30 p.m. Eastern
Final: 7:30 p.m. Eastern, ESPN

Final: 6 p.m. Pacific, ESPN (tape delayed at midnight Pacific time)

Spirit of Olympism doesn't end with the Games

The following is an excerpt from a speech delivered by Sinan Erdem, president of the Turkish Olympic Committee, from an address he delivered at the Olympic Congress of the USA in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

From Olympian magazine

Sports is a way to explore one's talents, perfect his or her training and prepare him or her for the ultimate test of all -- the Olympics.

The Olympic Games, therefore, should be presented only as a symbol. The Olympics is where all compete, on equal terms, for the glory. First for the glory of the individual. Then for the glory of sports.

This is what Olympism is all about.

A better body and a better mind for a better world.

And I am sure you will join me when I say that the Olympic Games are one of the biggest and most respected events for all the members of the human race to get together, forgetting their differences, pushing themselves beyond the limits of their ability, talent and even expectations.

We, as individuals or societies, easily adapt to unforeseen circumstances. We should also adapt ourselves to change with new ideas and happenings, erupting each and every day around us.

We should adapt ourselves with the changing winds of the times. We should not conform but harmonize these changes with the ideals of Olympism. If we fail to do so, if we forget to educate the world in the philosophy of Olympism, then we are doomed.

I am alarmed, but not scared.
I am restless, but not worried.

The Olympic Games are not dying, but Olympism is an unknown concept. Without Olympism, the Olympics are a giant sports organization and nothing else. Without Olympism, the Olympics will look like a beautiful human body without a spirit.

While the Olympics are held every four years, Olympism should be mentioned and practiced every day, everywhere and by everyone in the world.

We should set our short, medium and long-term goals; establish our priorities, set aside a decent budget and produce all the necessary information in print, tape or film forms and use the best channels of distribution in order to reach the special segments in each and every community.

This is not an impossible task.

Pessimism is the enemy.

Optimism, realism and pragmatism are the tools we can use.

We can and will do it.

Sooner the better.

There won't be a Roman emperor like Theodosius the Great, who ended the Classical Olympiad in 393 AD with a stroke of the pen.

If we let all these excesses go too far, then the Olympic Games, the Olympic Movement will wither away and collapse like a decadent giant by itself. And because of us.

But it won't happen. Because we are here to keep the spirit. The spirit of Olympism.

Is football's influence waning within NCAA?

By Charles M. Neinas
CFA Sidelines

Following the recent NCAA Convention, some high-profile basketball coaches such as Mike Krzyzewski of Duke University and Roy Williams of the University of Kansas, both good people, complained that the sport of basketball was not given proper consideration by the NCAA membership and inferred that the sport of football enjoyed a more privileged position.

I have news for Messrs. Krzyzewski, Williams and their colleagues. Football's influence in the NCAA has declined within recent years.

During the decade of the '80s, there were several changes in intercollegiate athletics, including the increased involvement of chief executive officers and the emergence of women's sports as an important element within the NCAA structure.

The NCAA Convention now attracts more than 2,000 delegates representing a divergence of views and philosophies. There was a time when attendance of 600 at an NCAA Convention was considered good and, in fact, the NCAA usually scheduled its annual meeting in conjunction with the American Football Coaches Association. That was at a time when many football coaches also served in the dual capacity of director of athletics.

As the administration of intercollegiate athletics has grown more complex and the position of athletics director has evolved into one requiring astute management skills on a full-time basis, the combination of director-coach has become a vanishing breed.

... (Nowadays) the coaches may be no different than special-interest groups lobbying Congress. What should be recognized, however, is that coaches and athletics administrators who are confronted with the daily responsibility for implementing and adhering to policies and rules have experience and knowledge and are in a position to help rather than hurt intercollegiate athletics.

... Because of football's popularity and prominence, it has become a prime target in the reform movement. Some believe that such action is overdue, while others, including myself, suggest that there already have been positive changes enacted and any future adjustments in football should be evaluated carefully.

For those who believe that football enjoys its once-exalted position within the NCAA, I can only say look again. Neither the NCAA president, Division I vice-president nor chair of the Presidents Commission represents a major football-playing university. This is not to question the qualifications of the individuals holding the aforementioned offices, but it does indicate the future course of the NCAA and recognizes the diminished influence of the sport of football within the organization.

Opinions

Recruiting precision overstated

Bob Cohn, columnist

The Arizona Republic

"Sure, recruiting is important. It probably is the lifeblood of any college athletics program because without players, you don't win. The problem is, in most cases, no one knows exactly how a high-school player will turn out. Not really. You don't know, and neither do all those experts who make a living evaluating and rating 17- and 18-year-olds, presuming to know what's going to happen when they leave home for the first time or break up with their girlfriends or can't get along with their position coach or decide they've got more of a future running track or simply find the next level of competition to be over their heads.

"Recruiting often is called an inexact science, but that's giving it too much credit. It's not a science at all, although the inexact part sounds about right. The original definition of science, according to Webster's, is the 'state or fact of knowing.' Recruiting is the state or fact of hoping."

Harvey Schiller, executive director
U.S. Olympic Committee

San Francisco Examiner

"The word amateur is obsolete."

Glen Mason, head football coach
University of Kansas

The Associated Press

"(Parents of recruits) all have this idea of the sleazy guy smoking a cigar and hiding in a dark hallway giving guys money to come to his school. But when they go through the process, they say, 'Hey, these coaches are pretty good guys. We don't have any problems sending our son there...'

"The problem is that perception is more important than the facts. Do we have problems? Yeah, but it seems like all the attention is focused on the problems. We isolate on them. There are far more positive things happening in college athletics. It's not even close. But the perception is the other way."

Daniel Ferritor, chancellor

University of Arkansas, Fayetteville

The Associated Press

"I don't think college athletics is rife with the kinds of problems that maybe some people on the street do, at least not at the institutions I deal with. The public is convinced that student-athletes never graduate, that student-athletes experience a curriculum that's different from regular students. But I look at ours, and about 30 percent of our athletes are majoring in business and about 30 percent in arts and science."

Albert M. Witte, faculty athletics representative
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville

Discussing a proposed "due process law" for college athletics in Mississippi.

"We simply cannot function under these types of restrictions. The people who support this legislation fail to tell us how we can comply with it. The net effect will be to protect people who violate NCAA rules."

Loss of Division I-A black head coaches causes concern

Division I-A has no black head coaches since three personnel moves after the end of the 1991 season.

Francis Peay was fired at Northwestern University; Willie Brown lost his position at California State University, Long Beach, when the institution dropped football, and Dennis Green left Stanford University to join the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League. No Black was chosen to fill those or other Division I-A vacancies.

Here are some reactions:

Rudy Washington, men's basketball coach
Drake University

USA Today

"We're seeing a resurgence of racism. It's kind of a resurgence of the '50s and '60s. Look around, and you see the David Duke thing. You see the resurgence of the Klan. You see more cross burnings....

"The only thing that creates change a lot of times is radical movements. Obviously, you have boycotts. We have, and always have had, a plan we can implement when we feel things are not going right. You try not to get to them. What we try to do is get to the table."

Ron Dickerson, Clemson University assistant coach
President, Black Coaches Association

Chicago Tribune

"It's truly frightening, speaking on behalf of every black assistant football coach. This is 1992, and we haven't progressed at all."

Bobby Turner, offensive coordinator

Purdue University

Chicago Tribune

"Most of us are hired to recruit....

"I feel like I've paid my dues. I've been around a lot of good organizations. Now if I don't get it, people can't say I haven't been a coordinator, and that I haven't worked under key people. I've done all the groundwork to make myself available. If there's someone better, I don't have a problem. But I can't live with being lied to. All I want is an opportunity."

James E. Delany, commissioner
Big Ten Conference

USA Today

"A sad statement. It's evidence of a closed system. It's evidence of a good-old-boy network, to some extent. It's evidence that we haven't made as much progress as we should have in this area.

"It should be on the agenda of the leadership. It's something that has to be addressed."

Richard D. Schultz,
NCAA executive director

USA Today

"Any time you see what little progress is being made going down the tubes, it's a major concern. The important thing we have to do from the national office is keep that in front of people, continue to make them aware of it....

"I don't think there's anything we can do legislatively to deal with the hiring practices of the institutions themselves. That's something they have to do with their own conscience."

Thurston E. Banks of Tennessee Technological University, an ex officio member of the NCAA Research Committee representing the Council, participates in the Research Committee's meeting February 17-19.

Committee approves proposals

The Research Committee agreed to recommend funding for 13 proposals for research projects at its February 17-19 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. Four of the approved proposals deal with governance and nine are sports-sciences projects.

Included in the studies recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee is "A Second Replication of a National Study of the Substance Use and Abuse Habits of College Student-Athletes," which will be done by three researchers from Michigan State University: William A. Anderson, associate professor of medical education research and development; Richard R. Albrecht, senior research assistant at the office of medical education research and development, and Douglas B. McKeag, professor of family medicine. The same researchers did the first two studies on the subject.

The other recommended proposals will be listed in a future issue of The NCAA News.

The Research Committee also set up a subcommittee to work with the Academic Requirements Committee on a study requested by the NCAA Council on new initial-eligibility rules. These new rules, effective in 1995, will increase the required number of core courses to 13 and set a minimum grade-point average of 2.500 (4.000 scale), while providing the opportunity to compensate for a lower grade-point average with a higher test score.

Those who will serve on the committee are Glenelle Halpin, chair of the Research Committee and alumni professor of educational psychology at Auburn University; Robert E. Stake, professor of educational psychology at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and Margaret Gatz, professor of psychology at the University of Southern California.

The U.S. Military Academy has the largest number of coaches (four) featured in "NCAA Basketball's Finest," the new publication setting forth the all-time great men's collegiate players and coaches — Harry Fisher, 1922-23 and 1925; Elmer Ripley, 1952-53; Bob Knight, 1966-71, and Mike Krzyzewski, 1976-1980. Thirteen institutions have three each in the book.

Conferences learn ins, outs of NCAA operations

Conferences have an opportunity to learn how the NCAA national office staff operates on a day-to-day basis through the Association's conference exchange program.

Entering its fourth year, the program is designed to bring members of a conference office staff to the NCAA for a 1½-day session. The conference staff meets with representatives of each NCAA department in an effort to understand the functions of all departments.

The goals of the program are to enhance the working relationship between the NCAA and member conferences, produce efficient utilization of NCAA resources, and give conference staff representatives the opportunity to put names of national office staff members with faces. All of this is accomplished by allowing conference staff members to participate in such activities as a legislative services staff meeting or a meeting with representatives of the championships or communications departments.

Understanding

"The key to this whole program is to have the conferences understand what we in the national office do on a daily basis," legislative assistant and program administrator Shane Lyons said. "The greatest advantage for a conference is to learn what departments handle what issues from an institution's standpoint and to understand the different responsibilities that lie within each department."

Twenty-six member conferences from Divisions I, II and III have visited the NCAA headquarters since the program's start in 1989. Patriot League Executive Director Carl F. Ullrich was a participant in 1991.

"The fact that the NCAA would sponsor and invite conference members for an inside look at the NCAA operation was heartwarming to me," Ullrich said. "I appreciated the opportunity and definitely feel better equipped to talk with our members about the NCAA office process."

Likes idea

After going through the program, Southern Conference Commissioner Wright Waters liked the idea so much that he took it home with him.

"The program was so good that we are going to do the same thing in our conference on a smaller scale," Waters said.

Conference visits are available on a first-come, first-served basis. The NCAA pays for meals and hotel accommodations for conference members while they are in Overland Park, Kansas. Conferences are responsible for transportation to the national office and while in the Overland Park area. The program attempts to schedule a conference visit once every four to six weeks.

Conferences that have participated in the program are urged to go through the process again if their staffs have experienced a great deal of turnover since the first visit.

Those interested in the exchange program should contact Lyons at the national office.

Who Says You Don't Get Any Breaks On The Road?

As the official airline for NCAA Championships, American Airlines offers NCAA teams a significant break on air fares. Basketball pairings on TV

The brackets for the 1992 Divisions II and III Men's Basketball Championships will be announced during press conferences that will be aired via satellite in March.

The first-round pairings and sites for the Division III championship will be announced at 7 p.m. Central time March 1 by Jeffrey L. Gamber, director of athletics at York College (Pennsylvania) and chair of the Division III Men's Basketball Committee.

The Division II championship bracket will be announced at 1:30 p.m. Central time March 8 by Alfred R. Mathews Jr., director of athletics at California State University, Hayward, and chair of the Division II Men's Basketball Committee.

Both announcements will be shown live via satellite on Galaxy VI, channel 5; the audio will be on 6.2 and 6.8.

"These bracket announcements have been conducted for several NCAA championships for the past few years and have proven extremely popular," said James A. Marchiony, NCAA director of communications.

Slope masters

After celebrating its first team championship in nine years last winter, the University of Colorado, Boulder, will defend that title at the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships March 4-7 in New Hampshire. See the preview of the championships on page 8.

Championships previews

Men's and women's rifle

West Virginia aims for fifth straight

Event: 1992 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championships.

Overview: West Virginia, which has won the team title the past four years, has won 51 consecutive regular-season matches. The Mountaineers are led by Ann-Marie Pfiffner, who was the 1991 air rifle champion and finished fifth in smallbore, and Garrett Smith, who was fourth in smallbore last year. Alaska Fairbanks, runner-up a year ago, returns most of its team this year but is led by two freshmen, Cory Brunetti in smallbore and Jennifer O'Neal in air rifle. Alaska Fairbanks didn't have a top-six finisher in smallbore last year but raised its qualifying score in that discipline by 80 points this season. Tennessee Tech, which last won the team title in 1982, is led by second-year coach Manny Goodman, who has all but one of last year's shooters back and has added two freshmen who have cracked the starting lineup.

Field: A maximum of 56 competitors will compete for individual titles in smallbore and air rifle. A maximum of eight teams will compete for the team championship, which will be won by the team with the highest combined smallbore and air rifle scores.

Dates and sites: The championships will be at Murray State March 6-7.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: West Virginia has won seven of nine championships since 1983. Murray State was the only other team to win during those years... Tennessee Tech won the first three championships (1980 through 1982)... Rifle is the only NCAA championship in which men and women compete against each other... Marsha Beasley, who has coached West Virginia to the last two championships, is the only woman to have coached an NCAA champion rifle team... Last year, for the second time in three years, the individual champions were both women... West Virginia leads in all-time individual champions with 10; Tennessee Tech is second with five.

Ann-Marie Pfiffner, one of two women who swept the individual titles last year, returns to defend her championship in air rifle for West Virginia, which is favored to win its fifth straight team championship.

What they are saying

Marsha Beasley, head coach
West Virginia

Defending champion

"The potential (for another championship) is there. It's interesting to me how different each team is year to year. We only had one graduate from last year's team and added two freshmen, but the personality of the team is entirely different. We are capable of winning again."

Randy Pitney, head coach
Alaska Fairbanks

"We have put a lot of effort into smallbore and have come up... The scores (in the championships) were in a slump for the past few years, but I think they'll be higher this year. I think we're in the ballpark of what the winning score will be."

Manny Goodman, head coach
Tennessee Tech

"If West Virginia keeps shooting the way they have been, I don't think anyone will knock them off. It's going to take someone shooting an exceptional score and them having an off day."

Division II wrestling

Schedule prepares Central Oklahoma

Event: 1992 Division II Wrestling Championships.

Overview: Central Oklahoma went 14-1 in dual meets, the only loss coming to Oklahoma, the 18th-ranked Division I team, 17-16. Central Oklahoma led the Sooners, 17-11, when Bronchos heavy-weight Fay Barnett was disqualified with one second left. The Bronchos lost a point when coach David James protested the call. North Dakota State posted a 16-0 dual mark, but coach Arthur Maughan says he is "a year away" from having a great team. Third-ranked Northern Colorado, coached by Maughan's son Jack, has four returning all-Americans.

Field: A total of 140 wrestlers will qualify from five regionals and one conference championship. Individual champions will be determined in the following weight classes: 118, 126, 134, 142, 150, 158, 167, 177, 190 and heavyweight (177-275). A team champion will be determined from the advancement points scored by wrestlers in the matches for the individual championships.

Dates and sites: Northern Colorado will host the 35th annual championships March 6-7.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Central Oklahoma has finished second the past two years... Two California schools that now compete in Division I, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo and Cal State Bakersfield, lead in all-time team championships with eight... Of schools currently in Division II, Portland State leads with three titles... Portland State's Tony Champion (177) will be shooting for his fourth consecutive individual title. Only two other wrestlers... Portland State's Dan Russell, who graduated last year, and Southern Illinois-Edwardsville's Tim Wright have won four championships. No Division I or III wrestler ever has won four times... Cal State Bakersfield and Northern Iowa, another school now in Division I, lead in individual championships with 30; Portland State is third with 21.

Three-time all-American Howard Moore (right) will lead top-ranked Central Oklahoma in search of its first Division II wrestling team title. Moore won the 167-pound title in 1990 and has been a key figure in the Bronchos' consecutive runner-up finishes the past two years.

What they are saying

David James, head coach
Central Oklahoma

Currently ranked No. 1

"We have tried to keep (our dual-meet success) in perspective. We wanted a schedule that would get us ready. We need to get across that this is a new season. Last year we had four all-Americans, but we had kids in the lineup that had a good season and not a good postseason. We need our placers to do better this year."

Arthur Maughan, head coach
North Dakota State

Currently ranked No. 2

"Having been in this a long time, normally by the time we get to nationals, our goal is to be one of the teams that has a legitimate chance to win. We hope to be one of those teams this year if we can qualify enough people. We won in 1988, but we finished second in other years when I thought we were as good or better."

Jack Maughan, head coach
Northern Colorado

Currently ranked No. 3

"We hope to move up (from third last year). That's why we put on a big push to host. It will hinge a lot on who we are able to qualify. We are in such a tough region. We have a shot at qualifying eight, but if we can qualify six or seven, we can win. It will be real close. Everyone is real balanced this year."

Division III wrestling

Augsburg shows potential against big-time foes

Event: 1992 Division III Wrestling Championships.

Overview: Defending champion Augsburg scored a 25-18 victory over West Virginia, then ranked 12th in Division I, at the National Team Duals. At one point, the Auggies led the Mountaineers, 21-0. Augsburg also nearly shocked then-No. 8 Nebraska, building a 16-3 lead before falling, 20-19. Second-ranked Brockport State finished the regular season 9-0 in duals and has three returning all-Americans. Third-ranked Augustana (Illinois) is 18-4 in dual meets.

Field: A total of 200 wrestlers will qualify from nine conference tournaments and one regional tournament. Individual champions will be determined in the following weight classes: 118, 126, 134, 142, 150, 158, 167, 177, 190 and heavyweight (177-275). A team champion will be determined from the advancement points scored by wrestlers in the matches for the individual championships.

Dates and sites: The championships will be at Trenton State March 6-7.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Augsburg ran away with last year's title, outscoring runner-up Trenton State, 92-59½. With the win, the Auggies became the first Division III team west of the Mississippi River to win a Division III wrestling team championship... Augsburg's win broke Ithaca's two-year reign as champion.

What they are saying

Jeff Swenson, head coach
Augsburg

Defending national champions, currently ranked No. 1

"Success-wise, this team has paralleled last year's up until this point, but I happen to feel that about five teams are capable of winning the championship. Being ranked No. 1 is somewhat flattering because other coaches vote on it, but we have only three all-Americans from last year returning (others have more)."

Don Murray, head coach
Brockport State

"We're as good as any of the teams in the top six. I really don't see any of them as the favorite. Whoever is hot on that day and can have six or seven all-Americans will win."

Kevin Puebla, head coach
Augustana (Illinois)

"We will probably have four guys seeded in the top three. We hope to make points by placing kids high. Augsburg has been there before and should do well. They have balance. Augsburg, Brockport State, Trenton State, John Carroll and Central (Iowa) could win."

Division III men's basketball

Early No. 1 team deals with mid-season setbacks

Event: 1992 Division III Men's Basketball Championship.

Overview: Franklin and Marshall claimed the No. 1 ranking after bolting to a 14-0 start. Two straight losses dropped the Diplomats to 12th in the poll, but coach Glenn Robinson's team has been slowly working its way back up through the rankings. Defending champion Wisconsin-Platteville and Calvin have taken turns occupying the No. 1 ranking in Franklin and Marshall's absence.

Field: The Division III Men's Basketball Championship provides for a maximum field of 40 teams. Each region is guaranteed a minimum of four teams and a maximum of six teams selected for the tournament. Seventeen conferences have been awarded automatic qualification. At-large teams will be selected by the Division III Men's Basketball Committee March 1.

Dates and sites: First- and second-round games will be played at on-campus sites March 5 and 7. Sectional play will be held on the campuses of competing institutions March 13-14. The semifinals, third-place game and championship game will be played March 20-21 at Wittenberg University.

Results: Scores and pairings from first- and second-round action will be published in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News. Sectional results will appear in the March 18 issue. Championship coverage will be published March 25.

Championship notes: In the tournament's 17-year history, only one team has successfully defended its title. North Park did it twice, winning its first championship in 1978 and then adding titles in 1979 and 1980.

Wisconsin-Platteville

Defending champion

"I think when you are talking about the tournament, there are so many things that go into tournament play—breaks here and there, your team's physical health. It's really like a whole new season. That's why not very many teams repeat. There are a lot of factors that come into play that you don't have control over. One bad night and you are finished."

Ed Douma, head coach

Calvin

Currently ranked No. 1

"I would say if you looked at the statistics, the team that is ranked No. 1 hasn't won the tournament every year either. In Division III, it's pretty wide open. There probably are 10 schools, maybe a few more, that would have an equal chance of winning this thing. There might even be some teams that aren't ranked that have a chance."

Glenn Robinson, head coach

Franklin and Marshall

1991 runner-up

"Not only is it difficult to defend, but it's also difficult to get back as one of the final four teams. One of the reasons is that one year you may be playing at home in the sectional, and the next year you are going to be playing away from home. The results are heavily in favor of the home team."

Franklin and Marshall senior Will Lasky (No. 44) is a candidate for all-America honors and made last year's all-tournament team at Wittenberg. Lasky averaged 20 points a game for the Diplomats in the 1991 championship.

Division III women's basketball

Consistent trio set for title challenge

Event: 1992 Division III Women's Basketball Championship.

Overview: Three teams have had a stranglehold on the top spots in the Division III poll. Defending champion St. Thomas (Minnesota), Capital and Southern Maine have been Nos. 1-2-3 in each poll. Through 68 games, the teams have combined for a 66-2 record.

Field: The Division III Women's Basketball Championship provides for a maximum field of 32 teams. At least one team from eight regions will be selected to participate. In addition, 10 conferences have been awarded automatic-qualification privileges. The remaining teams will be selected at large. Selection and notification will occur March 1.

Dates and sites: Regional competition will be March 6 or 7. Sectional play will be March 13-14. The semifinals and championship game will be March 20-21. All competition will be conducted on the campuses of competing institutions.

Results: Scores and pairings from regional competition will be published in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News. Sectional results will appear in the March 18 issue. Final results will be published in the March 25 issue of the News.

Championship notes: Elizabethtown owns the most championships, winning two in the tournament's 10-year history. The remaining eight titles are divided among eight teams. . . . Last year's 18-point St. Thomas victory margin was the largest in tournament history.

What they are saying

Ted Rivero, head coach

St. Thomas (Minnesota)

Defending champion, currently ranked No. 1

"We rely on the strength of our league to prepare us for the tournament. Our league has teams of various styles and differences. If we can compete successfully in the league, we will be prepared for teams we will meet in the tournament. Somebody from our league has gotten to the round of eight almost every year."

Dixie Jeffers, head coach

Capital

Currently ranked No. 2

"We have an experienced, very poised and mature team that likes to play both ends of the court."

Gary Fifield, head coach

Southern Maine

Currently ranked No. 3

"I think we are pretty balanced. We have three girls averaging in double figures. That's certainly one of our strengths. People can't concentrate on stopping one or two players. I think our schedule is probably tougher than anybody's, to be honest. The region is close enough so the top teams all play each other. Some of those schools in the region that have a chance to be ranked in the top 20 probably aren't because the region is so tough. I really feel very good about our schedule."

Men's and women's skiing

Both East, West provide balanced field

Event: 1992 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships.

Overview: There is more balance than usual this year in both the West and East. Utah, Colorado and New Mexico all have won invitational meets this winter, and Vermont, which typically dominates the East, has been challenged by Dartmouth in men's Alpine events and by Middlebury in women's slalom. With so much more balance, displacement by noncontenders could be a major factor. Vermont's Einar Boehmar in the slalom and Colorado's Bjorn Svensson in the freestyle will return to defend their individual-event championships.

Field: 160 competitors (80 men and 80 women).

Dates and sites: New Hampshire will serve as host for the eight events March 4-7. Alpine events will be held on the Mt. Tecumseh World Cup Trail, and the cross country events will be held at Waterville Valley.

Results: Championship results will appear in the March 11 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: After an eight-year hiatus, Colorado returned to the winner's circle in 1991. The Buffaloes, second only to Denver in number of team titles with 12, used depth and consistency to outlast defending champion Vermont.

What they are saying

Chip LaCasse, head coach

Vermont

1989, 1990 champion

"I think we're in a position to challenge for it. We lost last year because we couldn't stand up in the women's slalom. The name of the game in the championships is consistency, and that's what we're trying to concentrate on."

Pat Miller, head coach

Utah

1986, 1987, 1988 champion

"Out of eight events, we're skiing well in six. But your weaknesses really show up in the championships. That's why you have to concentrate so hard on your strengths."

Richard Rokos, head coach

Colorado

1991 champion

"It will be a lot more difficult for us to win this year than last year, which is not to say it was easy last year. But there is simply more balance, more competition than last year. On the hill, I think we will be able to show our strengths."

Terry Aldrich, head coach

Middlebury

"This is a very unpredictable year. Not only is competition better, but many of last year's top skiers are gone either to graduation or the Olympics. It's just more difficult to compare than usual."

Three losses may be best mark for '92 men's tournament field

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

It is now quite reasonable to suggest that for the first time since the first men's NCAA basketball championship in 1939, the tourney field will not have a single entrant with fewer than three losses.

Brown's 16-3 won-lost record was the best in the eight-team field entering the 1939 NCAA tournament (Brown lost its first game to Villanova).

Every year since, there has been at least one entrant with two or fewer losses. The average is close to three per year, even though the number has dwindled over the past several years as parity increased in Division I basketball.

Four teams—Duke, UCLA, Montana and Nevada-Las Vegas—had two losses each through February 25. Duke plays at UCLA March 1, then has North Carolina at home before the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. UCLA

Houston (1983), Georgetown (1985) and Duke (1986).

The 143 entrants with two or fewer losses were highly successful. They produced 23 champions vs. 30 for the other 1,380 entrants (two champions that entered with two losses—Kentucky in 1948 and Kansas in 1952—suffered a third loss to a noncollege foe in Olympic playoff action after the NCAA tourney). They won at a 73.2 percent pace (60-22) in regional title games, 63.3 percent (38-22) in the Final Four semifinals and 65.3 percent (25-13) in NCAA championship games. No doubt they will continue to be big winners. The point is, their numbers are dwindling.

From another angle, the percentage of entrants with two or fewer losses was 21.9 in the first 12 years of eight-team NCAA fields—21 of 96 entrants. During 24 years (starting in 1951) when the field was 16 to 25 teams, it was 14.4 percent—81 of 562. In 10 seasons starting in 1975, when it was 32 to 53 teams, it was down to 6.7 percent—28 of 417. And just 2.9 percent of the field—13 of 448 entrants—have come in with two-or-fewer losses in the last seven seasons of 64-team fields. That is parity.

First-year success

Montana, one of the two-loss teams, is headed by Blaine Taylor, in his first year as a head coach at the four-year level. He has a chance to reach the all-time top 10 for first-year success in Division I.

At 22-2 before a February 27 game at Boise State, Taylor can clinch it if his team loses no more than one game the rest of the way. Tenth place is held by Seattle's John Castellani at .880 on 22-3 in 1957. The only undefeated coach on the list is North Carolina's Norman Shepard at 23-0 in 1924. Taylor, 33, had been an assistant at Montana the last five seasons and played there.

Grandfatherly turnaround

Binghamton, a small university in central New York with no football team, no winning basketball team in six years and a chicken for a mascot, is going nutty over its basketball team and chanting, "We want Duke."

The Colonials have won 14 straight, 18 of their last 19, and may be headed for their first NCAA Division III tournament bid in history after winning fewer than 10 games each of the last four years and starting this season 1-5.

The reason for this turnaround? Meet Dick Baldwin, 70-year-old grandfather of five and charter member of the National Junior College Basketball Hall of Fame. He retired in 1987 at Broome Community College in New York with 879 wins (four more than Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, the all-time leader on the four-year level).

His career victory percentage was .752, so his current 19-6 for .750 through February 24 is right on the mark. Told that he is two games away from 900 wins, his reply was vintage Baldwin: "Let me know when I hit 1,000." (John Hartrick, Binghamton SID)

Short takes

Buffalo's women, in their first season in Division I, are leading the East Coast Conference and have a school-record 20 victories in 26 games through February 25. Florida Tech's Christine Keenan tied the women's Division II record by making 11 three-pointers vs. Flagler. Melissa Young of Gustavus Adolphus set a Division III mark by making all eight of her three-point tries vs. Macalester. Hamilton's Mike Smith has surpassed the Division III career rebounds record at 1,522 with three regular-season games left. Both the Oakland City men and women are champions this season in the Ohio Valley Athletic Conference. Fairleigh Dickinson-Madison's Simone Edwards set a Division III career mark with 583 free throws made.

Eligibility appeals

Eligibility Appeals (Other Than Those Involving Recruiting Violations)

		DIVISION I
NCAA Rule(s)	Facts		Result
B 14.3.2.1 and 14.3.4.3	During 1990-91 academic year, two student-athletes (SAs) (football) received athletics aid as partial qualifiers. SAs are no longer enrolled at university.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of aid. Institution will require SAs to repay impermissible aid received if SAs choose to reenroll.
B 12.5.1.1-(b)	Action photographs of SAs (football) were printed in conjunction with sponsor panels on institution's schedule card. University official erroneously believed photos were permissible.		Eligibility restored. Institution collected the impermissible schedule cards and will require the compliance officer to review all advertisements and promotional activities involving photographs of SAs.
B 16.12.2.2.2	Two SAs (football) made unauthorized telephone calls on institutional WATS line.		Eligibility restored upon fulfillment of institution's actions to require SAs to repay cost of telephone calls, be withheld from first regularly scheduled intercollegiate contest and forfeit complimentary ticket privileges for one game.
B 14.6.4.1.2 and 14.3.4.3	Transfer SA (men's track), a partial qualifier, competed in four indoor meets during transfer year in residence. Head coach mistakenly believed SA had been certified eligible to compete.		Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first four regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests of 1991-92 indoor track season. (Note: SA used entire season of competition in indoor track per B 14.2.4.1 due to limited participation.)
B 16.12.2.2.2	SAs (football) placed long-distance calls from telephone in academic study hall. SAs believed that calls would be billed to their student telephone charge cards; however, calls were billed to athletics department.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of cost of telephone calls.
B 16.02.3 and 16.12.2.1	Institution provided complimentary admissions to SAs (men's basketball) for family or friends to attend institution's postseason basketball banquet.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of cost of tickets.
B 14.6.4.1.2 and 14.3.4.3	Transfer SA (women's soccer) competed in one contest as partial qualifier.		Eligibility restored after SA completes year in residence. (Note: SA used entire season of competition per B 14.2.4.1 through limited participation.) Institution reprimanded head women's soccer coach for allowing SA to compete without checking eligibility list. Institution forfeited contests in which SA participated.
B 15.1 and 15.1.3	As a result of institutional error, SAs (football) received excessive financial aid from outside scholarship award sent to institution for disbursement.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of excessive aid.
B 12.5.1.3-(b)	SAs (men's basketball) photograph appeared on promotional brochure containing 1991-92 schedule and an advertisement for a commercial entity. SA had no knowledge of his photo being used.		Eligibility restored. Institution has issued letter of reprimand to athletics administrator responsible for violation.
B 14.8.5.2	SA (men's basketball) participated in two contests in unsanctioned summer basketball league. Institution conducted meeting at end of academic year in which legislation was discussed. SA did not recall discussion.		Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first two contests of 1991-92 season.
B 13.7.5.4	SA (men's basketball) received $30 as student host to entertain prospective student-athlete (PSA); institution required SA to repay excess money.		Eligibility restored. Institution privately reprimanded head men's basketball coach.
B 12.1.1-(a)	SA (ice hockey) participated as an amateur on his factory club team for two seasons. SA's job responsibility was to play ice hockey and he received monthly compensation. No professionals participated on the club team. SA did not participate in intercollegiate ice hockey during his first year in residence because he was a partial qualifier.		Eligibility restored after SA is charged with the loss of one season of competition.
B 12.1.1	SA (women's cross country) competed in road race and received $100 prize money for place finish.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of prize money.
B 12.2.3.2.3	In one year, prior to enrollment, foreign SA (men's soccer) participated with an amateur English soccer team that competed in an English semiprofessional soccer league. Neither SA nor members of SA's team were under contract with any professional team. SA never received compensation for his participation.		Eligibility restored.
B 14.3.1	SA (men's cross country), a nonrecruited partial qualifier, competed in one contest during year in residence.		Eligibility restored after SA completes year in residence. (Note: SA used entire season of competition per B 14.2.4.1 through limited participation.)
B 15.1 and 15.2.4	Two SAs (football and women's basketball) received excessive financial aid due to administrative error.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of excessive financial aid.
B 16.02.3 and 16.12.2.1	Transfer SA (men's basketball) was provided two complimentary admissions to previous institution's postseason basketball banquet for family or friends.		Eligibility restored upon repayment for cost of tickets.
B 16.12.2.1	SAs (football) sister received loan from representative of institution's athletics interests, who also was a family friend. SA was unaware of loan.		Eligibility restored upon repayment. Institution has required sister to repay $275 from impermissible loan received.
B 16.12.2.1	While returning from a tennis contest at initial institution, transfer SA (men's tennis) and other SAs were given permission from head coach to volunteer for a later airline flight and receive airline coupon.		Eligibility restored. Current institution required SA to donate value of coupon ($150) to a charitable organization.
B 16.12.2.1	While returning from institution's away contest via air travel, head men's tennis coach allowed several SAs (men's tennis) to volunteer for a later flight; each SA received an airline coupon.		Eligibility restored. Institution required SAs to either return the coupon or repay the value received in exchange for the coupon.
B 16.12.2.2.2	SA (football) received local automobile transportation from equipment manager to retrieve helmet for one practice; SA repaid value of transportation.		Eligibility restored.
B 15.2.7.1.1	During summer of 1991, SA (football) received $1,062 in athletically related summer school aid even though SA had not received any athletically related financial aid during previous academic year. SA received aid due to administrative error.		Eligibility restored upon repayment of $1,062 of financial aid. Institution revised procedures for awarding aid for summer classes.
B 16.11.2.1	While attending basketball banquet, SA (men's basketball) accepted cash prize from representative of institution's athletics interests, which the representative had won in a raffle conducted at the banquet.		Eligibility restored upon repayment. Institution required SA to return prize money.
B 16.02.3	Following a home football game, SA (football) received food and drink from representative of university's athletics interests at tailgate party.		Eligibility restored.
B 14.8.1.1	SAs (men's volleyball) competed in beach volleyball tournament after academic year had begun.		Eligibility restored after SAs are withheld from first regularly scheduled contest of 1991-92 season.
B 16.10.2.7	Head basketball coach provided SA (men's basketball) transportation from local airport to campus upon his return from summer break.		Eligibility restored. Institution required SA to repay cost of transportation.
B 16.10.2.1	SA (men's basketball) received impermissible transportation from another SA who rented a car using the credit card of a representative of the university's athletics interests. SA paid for costs associated with travel.		Eligibility restored.
B 16.12.2.2.2	SA (football) made many long-distance telephone calls over one-year period, the charges for which he billed to the football office.		Eligibility restored upon fulfillment of conditions imposed by institution. Institution required SA to repay cost of calls, be withheld from one intercollegiate contest and fulfill 100 hours of community service. Matter also was referred to dean of students.
B 12.5.2.1-(a)	SAs (men's swimming) name and picture were used in the advertisement of a commercial product. The advertisement appeared in campus student newspaper.		Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from one contest.
B 12.5.2.1	SAs (football and men's track) photograph was used in calendar produced by institution's marketing club. SA was not paid and was unaware that calendar would contain impermissible commercial coupons.		Eligibility restored upon fulfillment of conditions imposed by institution. Institution halted distribution of calendar and withheld SA from one football contest.
B 12.5.2.1	SAs (women's volleyball) photograph was submitted by friend for inclusion in calendar produced by institution's marketing club. SA was not paid and was unaware that calendar would contain impermissible commercial coupons.		Eligibility restored. Institution halted distribution of calendar.
B 16.02.3 and 16.12.2.1	SAs (wrestling) received meals at no cost to them while dining with PSA and official student host during PSA's official paid visit.		Eligibility restored. Institution required SAs to repay cost of meals. Head wrestling coach was issued written reprimand and placed on probation. Institution also eliminated one official paid campus visit in sport of wrestling during 1991-92 season, thereby permitting only five official visits in sport of wrestling.

Eligibility Appeals Extensions and Waivers

[Note: The NCAA Eligibility Committee has the authority to grant extensions of periods of eligibility under NCAA Bylaws 14.2.1.4 and 14.2.1.5; hardship waivers for student-athletes at independent institutions under Bylaw 14.2.5; satisfactory-progress waivers for student-athletes at independent institutions under Bylaw 14.5.5; and waivers of the transfer-residence requirement because of a discontinued academic program under Bylaw 14.6.5.3.3. Those extension and waiver requests granted on behalf of the Eligibility Committee now will be published in a separate section on a periodic basis in The NCAA News. (Extension requests have been published in past listings but now will be published as part of this separate listing.)]

In addition, under the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 14.2.5, seven hardship waivers have been granted to student-athletes at independent member institutions.

'Doc's' swift best, the Yankees, University of Notre Dame football — have done that? Only in a difficult-to-butress opinion.

That was 20 years ago. That was in the midst of a six-year Indiana reign as NCAA champion, a streak unmatched in the sport. That was in the midst of 20 straight Big Ten Conference swimming championships for Indiana, a streak unmatched in that league in any sport.

'Doc' gets due

Of late, Councilman — who retired as Indiana coach at the end of the 1989-90 season — has been recognized for a phase of his career overshadowed by his swimmers' success. The "Doc" by which James F. Councilman was known came from a Ph.D., which was just the start of a lifetime of learning and probing in the three fields he considered interdependent and fundamental for any coach, of any sport: the anatomical capabilities of the body, the developmental possibilities of instruction, and psychology.

At Indiana, he taught a graduate-level class: Advance Theory of Training, Top-Level Performers. "We'd go through the three areas and try to make them dovetail into each other," he said.

"The future is to become more scientific," he said, "but the average coach doesn't have to go out and read physiology and psychology books. He's got to learn the basic concepts of coaching.

"Of the three areas, probably the most important was psychology. If you have the proper psychology, you can read the rest out of a book or copy somebody else's workouts.

"You actually coach by concepts, not by specifics. You base all of your concepts on certain principles of training. Some people spend all their time studying the lactates, the pulse rate, the chemistry of the blood, and they neglect the principle of motivating the kids properly. Pretty soon they're so involved with test tubes and blood samples they have no feel for what the kids are doing, or when they're getting tired."

At the moment, Councilman said we are in the midst of a tremendous interest in sports medicine. "It still comes back to the coach being alert to all the other signs," he said. "If you spend too much time on research, you're not watching the kids. You can tell when kids are tired without taking the blood lactate.

"We're fighting a tremendous battle with researchers who say only one workout a day — you shouldn't work so hard. There's a principle: if you're going to train a person for distance, you have to superimpose stress on top of stress and not allow complete recovery. We're fighting the present trend of reducing the level of work to what we were doing 30 or 40 years ago."

The sport's bible

In the 1960s, Councilman came out with the book "The Science of Swimming." It was published worldwide, in virtually every language. It is as close to being the sport's bible as anything ever written. In retirement, Councilman is working on an update, but the basic principles are unchanged.

His studies continue, though, sometimes in odd laboratories.

"The most important thing in my life is to constantly do research. I never looked at it as research. I'm trying to answer questions. I've always had a tremendous curiosity about swimming. I watch a dog running along, hop in the water, and I watch his strokes. I've got a reputation as kind of a nut."

Hal Morris is chairman of Indiana's Department of Kinesiology. He took Councilman's course as an Indiana graduate student.

"Doc used a lot of film," Morris said. "One day he brought a film strip he played over and over, of a cat. This particular cat would be dropped, and of course the cat would land on all four feet. The high-speed film slowed this down. Here are all these macho coaches trying to figure out how this cat is going to land on its four feet.

"Doc stopped the film and talked about his curiosity about what the effect of the tail rotation was: 'For years, I've tried to figure this out, and I've tried to find a bobtailed cat. I couldn't find one.'

"He comes into class the next day with a film loop on a bobtailed cat, which looked strangely like the other one — with the tail cut off."

It wasn't until Councilman's longtime copartner in coaching, diving coach Hobie Billingsley, taught the class one day that the students had their anxieties eased. "He explained that Doc was driving one day and saw this bobtailed cat go across the street. He slammed on his brakes, went through a couple of back yards and finally caught this cat." (The finding from bobtailed cat research: The tail has nothing to do with the cat's in-air stabilizing.)

Another observation

Another Councilman observation had a profound effect in his sport.

"One day I was watching Mark Spitz swim the butterfly," Councilman said. "He put his hand in the water at a certain spot, and he pulled it out of the water in front of where it went in, which meant he wasn't pulling his hand backward. While his hand was going forward, he was still creating forward propulsion.

"In other words, your hand could be moving in the direction you're going and still creating propulsion. We always thought you had to push backward."

It was the key that led to application of a principle fundamental to flying, discovered long before flight by 18th-century Swiss mathematician-physicist Daniel Bernoulli. Councilman wrote a paper, applying "The Bernoulli Principle" to the teaching of swimming. The article "said that sometimes during the pull the hand moving forward is still creating propulsion because you're using it in a sculling motion," Councilman said. "That has revolutionized things.

"All the better swimmers used it (naturally). Prior to that nobody understood exactly why we used all the zigzag movements.

"We used to advocate that the hand should go straight back as you went straight forward, so you pulled right down the middle of your body. But swimmers were using all sorts of zigzag movements, and it turns out they were using the Bernoulli principle, which states that you get the lift effect.

"You look at a butterfly swimmer — he uses a big keyhole. He fixes his hands so he gets a lift effect, the same as a propeller. A propeller on a boat or an airplane never moves backward."

The article and the research involved won Councilman an award for the best scientific project in the area of physical education for the decade of the 1980s. But the most gratifying aspect of the discovery to him was its quick usage by fellow coaches.

"It's kind of surprising," he said. "They say techniques take about 25 years for a change. It didn't take that long, but it took a while."

Honored at home

Already in almost every Hall of Fame available to him as a swimming coach, Councilman was honored in a different way last fall — by the Indiana University School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, which he had continued to serve for almost a year after his retirement from coaching.

The dean of the school, Tony Mobley, presided at a departmental dinner intended to recognize not Councilman's already-spotlighted coaching, but his teaching.

"I know of no other person who is a world-class coach who has contributed to the research and the scientific body of knowledge that Doc has," Mobley said. "He may be unique in the world in all sports in that regard. It is that contribution, that academic and scholarly contribution, that we recognized."

Then, by intention, Mobley turned the evening over to relatively young staff members. "We decided not to have the old guys remember the old guys," Mobley said. "We decided to take a look at how the next generation remembers the contributions that Doc has made."

Joel Stager's tribute included something of a revelation, even to Councilman, whose academic pursuits in his 33 years at Indiana never included compilation of a "vita," a listing of published works. Stager found 123, ranging from magazine pieces to books.

Jesus Dapena called Councilman's application of the Bernoulli principle to swimming "probably the most important" achievement of Councilman's career because "it completely revolutionized how coaches functioned. That discovery alone would make somebody's career a very successful

one. That's just one of Doc's discoveries."

Morris remembered something else from that Councilman class he had taken. "There was a sign in his office at the swimming pool that said SYE. I asked him about that, and he said, 'You've got to deal with people every day. That was my cue, to Submerge Your Ego.'"

In 1979, at the age of 58, Councilman — an AAU champion breaststroker in his collegiate days — went back to competition and became the oldest person to swim the English Channel. His record has been broken, but the feat won't be forgotten. A highlight of the dinner was the unveiling of a lifesize sculpture of a swimmer at work — left arm curved high and powerfully, face turned to the side for a breath, an unbroken plane from the arm and body back to a lone foot, breaking the surface for an assisting kick.

The swimmer is Councilman, the work inspired by his 1979 swim of the English Channel. The sculptor says inspired is not an overstating word. David Sears is an unusual combination, an artist-coach, who remembers the day in 1979 when he read of the Councilman channel crossing in Sports Illustrated and was sufficiently moved that he clipped and saved the article.

"Over the years I would consistently pull it out and look at the photographs and think about the great effort, the great struggle that this man made, at that time.

"I really want this piece to symbolize more than just one event in a person's life. I'd like it to symbolize a lifetime of work.

"I hope it's unique enough that people will stop and look at it, at least glance at it. I hope that happens because I want them to think about a person, to recognize an individual. I want them to try to get the essence of the struggle that was written about in 1979. That struggle is the relationship we all have, as human beings. Each of us, every day, in our work in our communities, in our relationships, in our whole lives — we struggle.

"Hopefully, through the struggles that we have, and the efforts that we put forth, good things will happen and people's lives will be better. I think James Councilman gave that kind of effort to us all."

Fund-raising is underway now to finance a new swimming pool at Indiana. The sculpture will be on display there.

It was all fun, Councilman said. "When you love a sport like that," he said, "it's not work."

"I first learned to swim when I was 12 years old. After that I gave up everything else — for a time, unfortunately, including my studies. I graduated from high school in the lower two percent of my class. Fortunately, Ohio State permitted me to enter school and I got my degree there.

"It's a lot of fun. Swimming the channel was a lot of fun. It was pretty cold. But as soon as I got over that, I said, 'I'll come back when I'm 100.'" that happens, there are some institutions who will be very willing to make an individual athlete or an individual coach the scapegoat so that institution could compete for the basketball championship or in a bowl game regardless of what the circumstances were."

Civiletti, who sits on the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process, said the concerns of the NCAA's enforcement procedures have been two-fold.

"What is the alternative?" Civiletti asked. "The NCAA cannot expel a student, nor should it have the right to. The NCAA cannot bar someone from coaching for the rest of his career. They can't put anybody in jail. They can't fine anybody under the system. Their direct authority goes almost exclusively to the institutions. The NCAA is limited in its authority to imposing the penalties, whatever they may be or how severe or not, within the framework of what the university controls."

Frederick acknowledged innocent individuals could be affected by NCAA sanctions, but he said that it ultimately was in the best interests of the Association that government involvement in intercollegiate athletics be greatly limited.

"I have experienced the NCAA's enforcement proceedings, both as a student-athlete and as athletics director," he said. "In both situations, the problem preceded me, and I experienced the feeling of dealing with someone else's rules violations. We simply believe, however, that the best way to govern the NCAA is from within. We have the power to make the necessary changes, and we are in the process of doing that."

Title IX ruling received by Brooklyn

The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has issued a 46-page letter of findings in its 14-month investigation of the Brooklyn College intercollegiate athletics department.

OCR found that the college was not in compliance with Title IX in the accommodation of athletics interests and abilities of men and women and in the provision of equal opportunity for male and female athletes in a series of program areas. At the same time, OCR concluded that the college was in compliance with Title IX in the awarding of athletics financial assistance.

On the basis of a written assurance executed by the college, in which it agreed to take specific actions by specified dates to address the cited disparities, OCR found that the college was fulfilling its obligations under Title IX and closed the case.

The investigation stemmed from a complaint filed against the college in December 1990, which alleged that Brooklyn did not provide equal opportunities in athletics to female students in 17 program areas and that female student-athletes and their coaches were harassed.

In the awarding of athletics financial assistance, OCR found the college was in compliance with Title IX, which requires that the total amount of financial assistance made available to men and women student-athletes be substantially proportionate to their participation rates in the intercollegiate athletics program.

In 1989-90, male participants comprised 71.2 percent of Brooklyn athletics participants and received 71.6 percent of the aid awarded; the numbers for females were 28.8 percent and 28.4 percent, respectively. In 1990-91, the comparable figures were 70.4 percent and 74.4 percent for men, and 29.6 percent and 25.6 percent for women. Using statistical tests, OCR determined that the differences between the proportion of athletics financial assistance and participation rates were not significant.

In contrast, OCR concluded that the college's selection of sports and levels of competition did not effectively accommodate equally the athletics interests and abilities of its female students. Specifically, OCR found that the participation opportunities for men and women students were not substantially proportionate to their respective enrollments.

OCR determined that the college's pattern of reducing its athletics

19 units were voided when institutions used ineligible players.

For the 1986 through 1991 seasons (which determined this year's fund), 12 units were voided because of ineligible players. Further, Spry said, three more units were added in 1991 because of the play-in games that preceded the first round of the tournament.

Spry said the value of each unit will be $42,857, a decrease of $246 from the $43,103 per unit issued in 1991.

Looking ahead to 1993, Spry said Division I members can expect the value per unit to increase again since there will be no play-in preceding the 1992 tournament and because there will be only two voided units from 1986.

For the 1992 fund, the nine-member Atlantic Coast Conference earned the greatest number of units, 92. The 10-member Big East Conference had 85 while the 11-member Big Ten accumulated 82.

tions and 335 of the 345 members overall.

In Division II, 210 of the 241 total membership were registered, including 191 of the 218 active member institutions.

Division III had 240 of its 331 institutions represented; overall, 264 of the 369 Division III members had someone in attendance.

Records now

Including the three marks bettered or tied in Anaheim, the Convention attendance records now look like this:

- Total registrants — 2,366, Nashville, 1991.

- Organizations represented — 1,004, Nashville, 1991. There were 967 in Anaheim.

- Registered voters — 811, Nashville, 1991. There were 803 in Anaheim. The percentage of registered voters was 86.3, well under the 89.2 percent a year earlier.

- Active member institutions — 735, Nashville, 1991. There were 727 in Anaheim.

- Division I members — 335, Anaheim, 1992. Old record: 334, Dallas, Texas, 1990. Division I percentage — 97.1, Anaheim, 1992, and Dallas, 1990.

- Division II members — 210, Anaheim, 1992. Old record: 207, Nashville, 1991. Division II percentage — 89.6, Nashville, 1991. In Anaheim, it was 87.1.

- Division III members — 276, Nashville, 1991. There were 264 in Anaheim. Division III percentage — 76.7, Nashville, 1991. In Anaheim, it was 71.5.

- Chief executive officers — 236, Nashville, 1991. There were 213 in Anaheim, a corrected figure from the 212 reported in an earlier issue of The NCAA News. CEO preregistrations: 267, Nashville, 1991. This year's preregistration figure was 249.

Other data

The total registration figure of 2,282 included 1,882 from active member institutions, 145 from member conferences, 31 representing affiliated organizations, 13 from those holding corresponding memberships, 91 registered as visitors and 120 news media representatives.

All of those categories were lower than in Nashville except the conference representatives (up from 133) and affiliated members (up from 29).

As usual, only District 7 had perfect attendance among the eight geographical districts. That district, the smallest of the eight, had all 33 of its members there. The host district, District 8, was missing only one at 62 of 63, while District 6 had 43 of its 45 there.

The average number of delegates per active member institution was 2.59, down slightly from the 2.65 in 1991 but still the second highest ever.

By division and subdivision, the institutional averages were 4.70 in Division I-A, 3.32 in I-AA, 3.09 in I-AAA, 2.14 in Division II and 1.54 in Division III. All were down from the Nashville gathering except I-AAA (up slightly from 2.99) and Division III (up a tad from 1.52).

Finally, the total number of proposals acted upon by the Convention was 159, the lowest since 1986 in New Orleans when there were only 123. In 1991, there were 189 in Nashville, the fifth highest ever. Record: 257, St. Louis, Missouri, 1976.

Hearing set in Fullerton case

The Orange County Superior Court in California issued a continuance and scheduled a preliminary-injunction hearing February 27 in a lawsuit involving supporters of the women's volleyball program at California State University, Fullerton, and university athletics officials attempting to drop the program.

The court had set the preliminary-injunction hearing for February 20, but granted the extension to give both parties more time to prepare their cases.

Deborah Chin of the University of New Haven chairs the Division II Women's Volleyball Committee at its February 18-21 meeting

Volleyball standards produced

In complying with the Division II Championships Committee's directive that sports committees pre-determine the number of berths per region beginning with the 1993-94 championships, the Division II Women's Volleyball Committee has developed guidelines to be used in the selection of teams for championship participation.

The committee, at its annual meeting February 18-21 in Kansas City, Missouri, considered criteria for designating tournament berths. The committee will survey the membership for input regarding the guidelines.

Under the championships committee's directive, all sports committees for Division II championships shall assign team berths by region, either equally or according to criteria that consider the number of participating institutions within a region and the performance of the region's teams in previous championships. The directive includes the provision that the number of teams allocated to a region may be adjusted by the governing sports committee during the selection process if there is conclusive data that would permit the replacement of a team in a region with a team from another region.

Other highlights

In other actions, the Division II Women's Volleyball Committee:

- Agreed to support the National Association for Girls and Women in Sport (NAGWS) experimental rally-scoring rule, whereby each nondeciding game is scored in the traditional manner of awarding points to the serving team only and requires a two-point victory with no cap on scoring. The deciding game would be scored with the "rally-point" scoring system, in which either team can score on a serve; however, there still is no scoring cap in that game and a two-point victory still is required.

- Examined officials' fees and put in place a fee schedule for future consideration.

- Voted to recommend the California Collegiate Athletic Association and the North Central Intercollegiate Athletic Conference for automatic qualification after reviewing applications.

- Agreed to survey the membership to determine whether to recommend a change in the 1993 championship dates. The recommended dates would result in regional play during the weekend before the Thanksgiving holiday, with the championship finals two weekends later. In 1991, regional matches were held during the Thanksgiving holiday weekend and finals the following weekend.

- Supported a rule whereby individual sanctions for unsporting conduct by players and coaches would be cumulative for the match. Under the rule, an individual yellow card (warning) will be awarded for a first offense, while a second offense in the same match will result in the issuance of a red card (penalty).

- Will ask that the committee be increased from six to eight members to ensure the regional representation directed by the Division II Championships Committee.

- Will ask the NCAA Executive Committee to increase the championship bracket from 20 to 24 teams for 1992 and adjust the championship format to eight three-team regionals.

NCAA Record

He was a member of the institution's staff from 1951 until his retirement in 1988, serving the final 14 years of his tenure there as athletics director. Gardner also coached men's track for four decades, served as men's cross country coach, and was an assistant basketball and football coach.

CORRECTIONS

Due to a typographical error, a story in the February 19 issue of The NCAA News failed to report the correct dates for the 1992 College Football Forum. The forum was presented February 16-18 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Due to a reporting error, a story in the February 12 issue of The NCAA News on the cancellation of the women's volleyball program at Cal State Fullerton reported incorrectly that the school's football team has not won a game against Division I-A competition in three seasons. The team has won six games against I-A opponents—five in 1986 and one in 1991.

Ferris State plans 'belt-tightening'

Ferris State University has announced some "tough belt-tightening" measures to help lessen the sting of the pinch of the recession—including a half million dollar cut in the athletics budget.

Narbeth Emmanuel, vice-president for student affairs at Ferris State, recommended the reorganization of the institution's 18 intercollegiate sports. His report was forwarded to President Helen Popovich, who was scheduled to make final recommendations to the institution's Board of Control.

The proposed cut in athletics is part of $9 million in planned cuts at the university over the next three years, the institution announced.

An athletics task force completed a seven-month review of Ferris State's intercollegiate athletics program and concluded that "intercollegiate athletics have worth and can continue to be a valuable part of the educational experience and outreach mission. Ferris academic programs, of course, must receive top budget priority."

Seven of 18 sports programs would be eliminated if the task force's recommendations are adopted.

offerings did not show a history of program expansion that was demonstrably responsible to women, nor had Brooklyn conducted a survey of student interests, either during the year under investigation or in prior years.

In reviewing other program areas, OCR found equivalent travel and per diem allowance benefits but a lack of equivalence in a number of other areas.

OCR also investigated six incidents of alleged harassment of women's team members and their coaches and concluded that they did not constitute sexual harassment or create a sexually hostile environment.

Communications committee uneasy about publications

Expressing concern that an institution may gain recruiting advantages via independent publications, the NCAA Communications Committee has recommended that policies be developed regarding such relationships.

At its February 18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Recruiting Committee that it approve guidelines prohibiting institutions from endorsing independent publications that solely cover an institution's athletics program.

Specifically, the committee recommended that coaches and administrators at institutions should not publicly endorse a publication verbally or in print and that institutional staff members should not write for or receive remuneration from such publications.

It was the belief of the committee that these publications potentially provide recruiting advantages unavailable to institutions without access to such publications.

In another action, the committee voted to recommend that the NCAA Council sponsor legislation at the 1993 Convention reversing an October 1991 decision regarding third-party sale of institutional media guides.

In October 1991, the Council approved and referred to the committee an August 1991 decision of the NCAA Interpretations Committee that stated that it would not be permissible for a member institution or conference to utilize non-institutional outlets for the sale of an institution's or conference's media guide.

The committee's recommendation to reverse the decision was based on several points, including: (1) a belief that NCAA member institutions should have the right to sell their publications at any outlet they see fit; (2) NCAA Bylaw 12.5.1.7, which specifically permits the sale of institutional videos at noninstitutional outlets; (3) the fact that institutions or conferences receive no revenue from independent publications that contain names and likenesses of student athletes, and (4) the use by Host Creative Communications, Inc., of NCAA registered marks in pre-season publications, which contain names and likenesses of collegiate student-athletes and are sold at third-party outlets.

Other highlights

During its February 18 meeting, the Communications Committee also took the following actions:

- It recommended that the NCAA Interpretations Committee allow institutions that host NCAA championships to send posters promoting those championships to high schools outside a 50-mile radius. It was the sense of the committee that championship posters are not, and should not be, used for recruiting purposes and that some championships are held in locations in which a high school is not located within the 50-mile radius.

- It recommended that the NCAA Council sponsor legislation prohibiting the use of images of current student-athletes on items such as trading cards. The committee also will ask the Recruiting Committee to support the legislation and make its own recommendation to the Council.

- It suggested that the NCAA communications department develop a plan for the release of graduation-rate data, and that the release of the data be implemented according to that plan.

SACRED HEART UNIVERSITY

FAIRFIELD, CONNECTICUT

Head Coach
Women's Field Hockey and Lacrosse

As university athletic programs nationwide are confronted with budgetary reductions, Sacred Heart University has instead embarked on an aggressive athletic expansion plan. In 1989, Sacred Heart University sponsored eight intercollegiate sports in men's and women's basketball and volleyball, men's baseball and soccer and women's cross country, softball and volleyball. In the fall of 1990, new sports were introduced including football, men's lacrosse and women's soccer. In September of 1992, we will add men's and women's bowling and golf, men's cross country, as well as women's field hockey and lacrosse. To complement this extensive growth, the University has recently contracted a respected architectural firm to design a $13 million athletic-recreational complex in addition to other facilities on campus.

As we continue our aggressive expansion plan to build a premier program in NCAA Division II intercollegiate athletics, we are looking for an enthusiastic individual with athletic and administration experience to coach our new women's field hockey and lacrosse programs.

The Head Coach will recruit, coach, budget, schedule and advise student-athletes. Candidates must hold a bachelor's degree, possess knowledge of NCAA rules and regulations and have demonstrated effectiveness in the recruitment and retention of student-athletes. A keen interest and/or experience in women's field hockey and lacrosse, as well as strong interpersonal and communication skills are required for this exciting position. Qualified applicants may send a letter of application, resume and references by March 31, 1992, to:

Blindness doesn't hinder wrestler

Springfield College wrestler Craig Hedgecock is a welcome sight in that institution's NCAA Division II program. The 21-year-old is achieving success on the mat despite what seemingly is a glaring disadvantage: blindness.

Although Hedgecock has won half of his varsity matches against seeing opponents in the 167-pound class this season, he says his record is not as impressive as it sounds.

"When my opponent and I are on the mat, I can feel where everything is," Hedgecock told the Springfield (Massachusetts) Union-News recently. "A lot of people are amazed by it, but it's really no big deal."

Hedgecock, a sophomore, said he has some improving to do before he becomes a top-notch wrestler. He has analyzed his strengths and weaknesses and has set out to work on both.

"I'm more vulnerable when I'm on my feet," he said. "I feel more defensive on my feet, and I want to become more offensive."

Springfield coach Daryl Arroyo said Hedgecock's blindness is quickly forgotten by many, including opponents, when he's on the mat.

"I think because of the way he is, this has been no problem," Arroyo said. "He's been in the mainstream all along and he's a hard worker. On the mat, it's even."

Mars Hill coach gets pointer from fan

Mars Hill College men's basketball coach David Riggins received a pertinent tip during the first half of his team's February 12 game against Carson-Newman College.

After Lions' player Mark McLaughlin was whistled with his third foul at the 7:52 mark, Riggins was approached at the bench by an elderly Mars Hill fan. She struck up a conversation with Riggins and, as the coach later recalled: "She said, 'Coach Riggins, I want you to tell that referee that it is (Carson-Newman player) No. 00 who is doing all the pushing!"

Riggins told the fan that he already had complained to the official several times; satisfied with his response, she returned to her seat to cheer on the Lions, who eventually lost, 76-65.

Coach helps save life, gains friend

Don Armstrong, ice hockey coach at Roger Williams College, remembered the scene by the dumpster. It moved him, but not as quickly as he would have liked. So when he came upon the scene at the bridge, he knew it was time to act.

In January, Armstrong was driving when he saw a man seemingly in his 60s or 70s milling around a trash dumpster outside a pizza parlor. Armstrong said the man gave him a strange look when their eyes met. Armstrong drove out of view of the dumpster, and then decided to back

Wisconsin athlete gets major scare

Troy Vincent, an all-American football cornerback at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, is enjoying a year more filled with excitement than some lifetimes.

The 21-year-old senior had the opportunity to play in the Japan Bowl in Tokyo, a game for some of the nation's top collegiate seniors. He also was a guest at the Japanese state dinner at which President Bush collapsed. Vincent was eating just 10 feet away from Bush when the widely publicized incident occurred.

"I thought the worst," he told Brian Brehaus of Wisconsin's sports information office. "It happened so suddenly. I saw him grab his neck and start falling back. But no one seemed to notice. It was a crazy scene."

Vincent, who was the Big Ten Conference's 1991 codefensive player of the year, has since competed at the National Football League's scouting combines and turned in some eye-popping performances.

Troy Vincent of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, attended the recent Japanese state dinner where President Bush collapsed

up. When he did, he found that the man had dug through the dumpster and carted away a pizza box.

"... I said to myself, 'I blew it,'" Armstrong told The Providence Journal-Bulletin. "I had $5 in my pocket. I should have given it to him."

A week later, Armstrong happened upon a man sitting in a late-model car that was parked on a bridge. Seeing that the man seemed depressed, he knew he had to stop. After asking a few questions, Armstrong learned that the man was contemplating suicide because he had lost his job and his wife was ill.

Armstrong invited the man back to his office, where he arranged for a Roger Williams counselor to visit with the man. Bristol, Connecticut, police later were called and the man was admitted to a local hospital for psychiatric treatment.

"He's a good guy," Armstrong said. "Just a little down on his luck. He seems very upbeat now. You know, I could coach at Roger Williams for 10 years, and this may prove to be the highlight. I think I've made myself a friend."

Siena player has double-pinnacle day

Siena College student-athlete Bruce Schroeder reached two goals in the same day this season.

On January 2, the 6-foot-3-inch guard/forward scored his 1,000th career point and then learned that he had earned a perfect 4.000 grade-point average for the fall semester.

A squad full of overachievers

The Knox College men's basketball program may begin to develop a reputation as a magnet for bright high-school students.

This season, the Siwash roster lists four high-school valedictorians on the 14-man squad. They are Luke Pogue, Darren Smith, Fred Serven and Mike Ellingson.

"I know a lot of coaches struggle with the academic eligibility of their players and fortunately, that's something I've never had to worry about at Knox," said coach Tim Heimann, who in eight seasons at Knox has seen every one of his seniors graduate.

Student-athlete gets Russian fellowship

Robin Kunze, a junior guard on the Carleton College women's basketball team, received the Larson International Fellowship to travel this summer to Russia, where she will create and run a summer camp program for the children of an orphanage located in Sosnovka, a small community about 160 miles south of Moscow.

Last summer, Kunze, a Russian and physics major from Watertown, Minnesota, spent 3½ weeks as a volunteer in the Sosnovka orphanage, helping provide children with "positive, individual attention."
