Gender-equity task force to go on a fast track

A proposed gender-equity task force is expected to work on an accelerated timetable in order to meet the NCAA's legislative deadline, according to NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz.

"I want this committee to conclude its work so that any required legislation can be considered at the 1993 Convention," Schultz said. "That means by the middle of August."

The idea of the task force was announced at a March 11 news conference at which the results of the NCAA's gender-equity survey were revealed. Reaction to the creation of the task force was favorable, especially among women's rights advocates.

Schultz said the task force probably would contain nine to 12 individuals.

Diversity

"That would include people within the membership who represent divergent groups — from excellent athletics administrators to strong women's rights advocates," Schultz said. "Also, I anticipate there will be people from outside — advocacy groups, possibly a Congressman. We need to be very careful to come up with the right group."

The formation of the task force is on the March 25 agenda of the NCAA Administrative Committee, but Schultz said that may be too early to have all the appointees in place.

Once assembled, Schultz said he foresees

Title IX only part of gender equity

When the NCAA announced the results of the gender-equity survey March 11, the question arose as to the distinction between Title IX compliance and gender equity.

"Gender equity is not Title IX, and Title IX is not gender equity," Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said at the news conference announcing the results of the survey.

In general, those involved with both topics say the distinction is that gender equity is a philosophical consideration while Title IX is strictly legal. Member institutions may meet compliance standards for Title IX, Schultz said, but they may not have gender equity in their programs.

For example, Schultz cited a common misconception: that the primary thrust of Title IX is a demand for dollar-for-dollar comparability for men's and women's

U.S. district judge hears Nevada case

The NCAA enforcement process cannot survive if it is forced to meet legal due process standards that vary from state to state, an attorney for the Association said in a hearing before a Federal judge in Nevada.

Federal District Judge Howard McKibben conducted a 2½-hour hearing March 13 on the NCAA's suit against a Nevada law that in its application would prevent the Association from proceeding with an infractions case in that state and elsewhere. The statute imposes a direct burden on commerce, Association attorney John J. Kitchin said.

"The NCAA simply can't comply with a lot of these things," Kitchin said. "We can't operate the way the membership wants us to operate without having uniform procedures."

Judge's comments

It is uncertain when a ruling will be issued, but McKibben did make several observations during the hearing.

Addressing the matter of which legislative authority would appear to have authority over the NCAA's enforcement process, the judge said: "From a legal standpoint, it really belongs to Congress, doesn't it?"

Reacting to the concern that meeting 50 different sets of due process standards would be impossible, he said: "If you have legislation in all 50 states — all with different standards — how can the NCAA possibly comply with all those different standards?"

The suit came about because the NCAA cannot complete an infractions case involving the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. Attorneys for the Nevada legislature made a brief defense of the law during the hearing, but lawyers for former Nevada-Las Vegas men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian were most active in defending the statute.

"All they (the NCAA) have to do is put due process in themselves, and they won't have 50 states passing different legislation," said Terry

Poll shows improvement in college sports' image

A survey indicates a 31 percent improvement since 1989 in the number of people who believe college sports are "out of control" in the United States.

Pollster Louis Harris, working on behalf of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, found that 47 percent of those surveyed believed that college sports are "out of control," compared to a 78 percent "yes" response to the same question three years ago.

Among the 62 percent of the public that regularly follows college sports, Harris said the number who believed college sports was not in control had dropped from 75 percent to 49 percent.

"By any measure," Harris concluded, "a dramatic decline has taken place in the number of adults and sports fans who feel that college sports are 'out of control.'"

Citadel's Watts joins NCAA Council

Retired U.S. Air Force Lt. Gen. Claudius E. "Bud" Watts III, superintendent of The Citadel, has been appointed to the NCAA Council.

He replaces Albert E. Smith, who has left the presidency at South Carolina State College.

Watts, a 1958 Citadel graduate whose father and son also attended the institution, became president there in August 1989. That year, he retired from active duty in the Air Force. He had served as comptroller of the Air Force since 1986.

After receiving an Air Force commission upon his graduation at Citadel, Watts embarked on a military career in which he flew 276 combat missions in Southeast Asia from 1967 to 1968 and held commands with the 438th Military Airlift Group and 63rd Military Airlift Wing.

He also served as director of the budget at Air Force headquarters in Washington, D.C., from 1984 to 1985 and as senior military assistant to the deputy secretary of defense from 1985 until his appointment as comptroller.

After his graduation at Citadel, where he earned a bachelor of arts degree in political science, Watts attended the London School of Economics and Political Science as a Fulbright scholar and later earned a master of business administration degree at Stanford University. He also is a graduate of the Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and the National War College, and he completed Harvard University's Program for Senior Managers in Government.

Among the 44 awards and decorations he received during his career are the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, the Air Force Distinguished Service Medal, two awards of the Legion of Merit and the Distinguished Flying Cross with two oak leaf clusters.

Nevada-Las Vegas players lose case

A Nevada state district judge ruled March 11 against players from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, who were seeking to compel the NCAA to consider their team for participation in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Nevada-Las Vegas had been ruled ineligible for this year's event as punishment in an extended infractions case involving Nevada-Las Vegas men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian. The penalty originally was to be enforced in 1991, but Nevada-Las Vegas and the NCAA agreed to defer the sanction until this season.

"My first instinct was to rush in here and right a wrong," said Judge Donald Mosley, "but there must be a legal reason for doing what I'm doing."

Mosley expressed concern that the current athletes are affected by actions that occurred when they were children but added: "It wouldn't be fair if the 64th team that made the tournament would be bumped because I allowed UNLV access to the tournament. If this 64th team has good merits and is eligible to make the tournament, why should a team such as Nevada-Las Vegas ruin a chance for a team that barely makes it into the postseason?"

Mosley said the players had little chance of winning in a trial.

The players had gained a temporary injunction that allowed them to continue practicing until the hearing. The team finished the season with a 26-2 record and a 23-game winning streak.

Earlier, Nevada-Las Vegas President Robert C. Maxson had emphasized that an invitation to the NCAA tournament is directed to the institution and not the players. He had said the university would decline an invitation if one were offered.

Ruling pending in Fullerton volleyball suit

The Orange County Superior Court in California held a preliminary-injunction hearing March 12 on a lawsuit by supporters of the California State University, Fullerton, women's volleyball program.

The program's supporters are seeking reinstatement of the sport at Cal State Fullerton, which dropped the women's volleyball and men's gymnastics programs in late January after a three-month study of the costs of promoting all of the university's sports as regional and national competitors. The suit alleges that Cal State Fullerton is in violation of state statutes requiring that athletics opportunities be offered on as nearly an equal basis as practicable to male and female students.

Superior Court Judge Floyd Schenk said during the hearing that, after reviewing declarations from both parties, he would rule on the case at an unspecified date.

Altitude formula can boost runners to new heights

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News Staff

In 1989, Callie Calhoun of the U.S. Air Force Academy ran her fastest 5,000 meters at 17:22.04, 6.74 seconds slower than the standard needed to get into the Division II Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships. Yet Calhoun finished sixth in the 5,000-meter run at the national meet.

She didn't sneak in under a different name. She didn't jump in from the infield during the race.

Calhoun took advantage of the altitude adjustment for qualifying purposes for races 1,500 meters or longer. She ran her qualifying race in Pocatello, Idaho, where the elevation of 4,465 feet allows for an adjustment of 21.7 seconds. Therefore, her 17:22.04 converted to a 17:00.34, easily good enough to qualify.

Anyone who has spent time in the mountains understands how the high altitude can make it harder to breathe. But does it make that much difference in times turned in by competitive athletes? Yes, says William C. Adams, a professor of physical education in the human-performance laboratory at the University of California, Davis.

Constant disadvantage

Adams determines altitude adjustments annually for the NCAA, based on a formula that incorporates altitude, length of the race and the qualifying standard for that year.

"Altitude represents a constant deterrent to distance running performance, whereas other environmental effects on track and field performance—i.e., temperature, high humidity, wind, rain and snow—are variable," Adams said. "This means that the distance runner who resides and competes at altitude is at a constant disadvantage."

"If that distance runner lives and competes at sea level, he or she may be deterred by high temperature and/or humidity during the day. But this effect can be almost totally obviated by holding meets at night."

Adams was raised in Florida but was a competitive track and cross country athlete in Albuquerque, New Mexico, at an elevation of approximately 5,000 feet. He knew firsthand of the effects of altitude on distance running. His principal scientific study over the past 20 years has been in the environmental aspects of exercise physiology.

His theory

His theory is based on the reduction of oxygen pressure at higher altitudes and a decrease in aerobic endurance performance.

A given amount of air at 5,000 feet has significantly fewer oxygen particles than the same amount of air at sea level. Therefore, when athletes are trying to supply air to their lungs at 5,000 feet, it is more difficult because not as much oxygen is available. It's kind of like the dollar-bill booth at the carnival: If fewer bills are flying around in the booth, the chances of grabbing many bills are worse.

An altitude-adjustment formula helped track and cross country titlist Callie Calhoun of the U.S. Air Force Academy qualify for championships competition

The process is further complicated by the fact that longer races increase the aerobic energy demand. For example, at 1,500 meters, there is about 60 percent aerobic energy demand, while the demand is 98 percent at 10,000 meters. Simply put, the higher the elevation, the fewer the oxygen particles per unit of air; the longer the race, the more important this process becomes.

Conversely, Alan said sprinters don't suffer from the effects of altitude because of the limited time they are exposed to those effects. In fact, sprinters actually benefit slightly at altitude because of reduced air density—the air pressure at 5,000 feet is significantly less than that at sea level. With the reduced pressure, the air particles will be less densely packed and sprinters will have less resistance moving through the particles.

Originally, Adams came up with a table based on elevations ranging from 3,000 to 4,250 feet; 4,250 to 6,500 feet, and greater than 6,500 feet. But altitude differences from location to location made those scales too inexact. Student-athletes running at 4,249 feet would be better off than before adjustments were used, but they still would be at a disadvantage to their counterparts running at 3,000 feet.

His formula

So Adams devised a formula:

$$y = .022 + 5.256E - 4x + 8.3290E - 8x^2$$

(where "y" is the adjustment percentage,

"E" is elevation and "x" is the distance of the race).

And that is just for the 1,500 meters for men. There are seven other formulas. Women's races have a higher percentage because women require a longer period of time to run the same distances and therefore are subjected to the altitude effect longer.

Also, the adjustment is curvilinear depending on altitude, despite the fact that the partial pressure of oxygen particles drops in near linear fashion. This is because there is an increasingly greater rate of impaired hemoglobin loading of oxygen in the lungs as altitude increases. In other words, the effect on oxygen pick-up in the lungs at 7,000 feet is more than double that at 3,500 feet.

Adams first presented his research to the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee in June 1985. After much discussion, the adjustments were included in the qualifying standards beginning in 1988. There was some reluctance to give one sector of the country an adjustment, but an economic factor helped decide the issue: Student-athletes at higher elevations ended up chalking up more travel miles to compete at locations where qualification was more possible.

Adams says there is no way to test whether his formula is accurate other than empirical evidence. That evidence, since implementation in 1988, shows that student-athletes who qualify using the adjusted standards reach the finals or place in the upper half of the field more than 50 percent of the time.

Calhoun is a good example. She is a two-time national champion indoors and a two-time champion outdoors. And without Adams' formula, she might never have made the field.

Byers scholarship finalists announced

Three men and three women student-athletes are finalists for the two Walter Byers Scholarships that will be awarded this month by the Association.

The finalists, who were selected by the Walter Byers Scholarship Committee, will travel to Chicago for interviews with the committee March 23. The two recipients of the annual awards are expected to be named that day.

All three men who are finalists are cross country and track athletes—Matthew A. Deardorff of Bucknell University, David M. Honca of North Carolina State University and Christopher J. Nelson of the U.S. Air Force Academy.

The women finalists are Lisa Arel, a gymnast at Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Sigall Kassutto, a gymnast at the University of California, Berkeley, and Catherine Sharkey, a lacrosse player at Yale University.

Each Byers scholar receives a $10,000 scholarship from the Association

The awards were established in 1988 to recognize the contributions of the former NCAA executive director by encouraging excellence in academic performance by student-athletes.

Award recipients are required to have a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale), show evidence of superior character and leadership, and demonstrate that participation in athletics has been a positive influence on personal and intellectual development, among other qualifications.

Win column was empty, but progress was made

By Robin Miller
The Indianapolis Star

Prairie View A&M University didn't offer any athletics scholarships for football or basketball for 1991-92. Or much resistance.

In what has to be a record for mass futility, the Panthers' major sports teams finished a combined 0-63 this season 0-11 on the gridiron, 0-27 in men's hoops and 0-25 in women's basketball.

Sounds like a perfect feeder system for the Colts and Pacers, doesn't it?

But this tiny Texas university in the all-black Southwestern Athletic Conference is taking its lumps in stride and performing with a lot of success in other areas.

"I realize we've provided ESPN and CNN with some feature material, but we all get a little weary of hearing about it," said Prairie View A&M President Julius Becton. "These kids don't get any financial assistance, but they played hard, and that's all you can ask."

"And nobody ever calls to ask about our graduation rate or our track team. Our women's track team has won nine consecutive outdoor NAIA championships, and we graduate 65 percent of our student-athletes."

The school that boasts Zelmo Beaty, Otis Taylor and Ken Houston among its alumni got a financial reevaluation when Becton arrived in 1989.

"I reduced athletics from 11 to two sports when I arrived because the quality of life was going down," continued Becton, who discontinued football for one year before bringing it back in 1991. "I saw that over a five-year period, we spent $3.5 million on athletics, and our housing and academics were suffering."

"I didn't like that direction so I changed it. Today, our athletics budget isn't very much, but our housing and education are much better."

Of course, competing against the likes of Mississippi Valley State University is tough enough without the burden of no scholarships.

"We are the only school in our conference that doesn't give scholarships, but that's a crutch," said Barbara Jacket, Prairie View A&M's athletics director. "We don't need excuses.... We need money from our alumni, supporters and friends."

"These kids here are good but most of them are poor, and we need the full support of our community if we want athletics scholarships."

Jacket, a 27-year employee at Prairie View A&M who will coach the U.S. women's track and field team in the upcoming Summer Olympics, says the student body was more supportive than sarcastic.

"Our kids weren't ridiculed by our fans, and we had good crowds because I think everyone realizes what these kids are up against," said Jacket, who competed against good friend

Wilma Rudolph in her college days. "I mean, we're all upset we didn't win any games."

"But realistically, we're young and we're going to get better."

The toughest job in college athletics belongs to Jacqueline Davis, Prairie View A&M's first-year sports information director. She had to take notes of 63 losing press conferences and try to sound semi-upbeat.

Fortunately, Davis previously worked for the United Way. "I didn't come into this job blindfolded.... I knew it wouldn't be easy," declared Davis, an '88 grad of Prairie View A&M. "A lot of media seem to feel sorry for us, but our kids don't mope around."

"They're not handicapped by the negatives, and they know this is a rebuilding, regrouping process. They've already been as down as you can be, and they know it's a matter of time and motivation."

To which Becton said, "I'm going to meet with our basketball teams to thank them for carrying our colors. We've graduated a lot of engineers and nurses in the past and our athletes may not be the best just yet, but most of them get an education."

"And I'll always believe that's more important than the final score."

Before hanging up, Becton added: "You can tell ESPN our baseball team is 7-4 in case they want to do a story."

And Davis would probably hand deliver it.

Ashe: It's time to exceed the minimum

Arthur Ashe, writer and commentator
The Chronicle of Higher Education

On the hypocrisy of colleges with predominantly black football and basketball teams and predominantly white student bodies:

"The message is simple: You love us as athletes, but you are indifferent about us academically. You are more willing to provide academic counselors and tutors to help several dozen athletes stay eligible, but you're not willing to take more black nonathletes who will be better prepared than the athletes and have a better chance of graduating."

"The colleges have helped reinforce the very strong perception that one will have a very good chance in life if you pursue a career in sports. But it's just not so for most people...."

"It's time to stop making excuses and demand excellence from these kids. I have unshakable faith that they can do the work."

On the minimum SAT score of 700, an NCAA initial-eligibility requirement:

"(Standardized tests do have a bias against minorities), but at the level of 700, cultural bias has got nothing to do with it. You can either read and write fairly well, or you cannot."

On the effects of Proposition 48 and stricter initial-eligibility legislation adopted at the 1992 NCAA Convention:

"The naysayers all said this is going to cut out generations of black kids. But from the evidence of Prop 48, the people who think like I do are not looking too bad right now."

"Yes, some black kids are going to be hurt when they make the switch. But it doesn't start for another three years, and we're putting ninth- and 10th-graders on notice now: 'Look, this is what you've got to do if you want to play in Division I in 1996....'

"The rules that the NCAA makes for the lucky few also motivate the 90 percent who don't make it. They put aside everything else for a shot at the Final Four or the Rose Bowl. But what does society do with a ninth-grader, black or white, who knows that he only has to have a 2.000 (grade-point average, 4.000 scale) and a deadly jump shot to get to college, and then finds out four years later that he isn't going to play college sports?"

On the future:

"I cannot believe that we are willing to have our kids settle for aiming at a set of numbers that are much below the national average. Black America stands to lose another generation of our young men unless they are helped to learn as well as play ball. I don't think anybody wants that."

Temple University

The Chronicle of Higher Education

"(Arthur Ashe) is well-meaning, but he's inexperienced at what we're talking about."

"I'm an old codger. I don't plea bargain. But I do understand with the limitations placed on the NCAA staff to get evidence, in a sense, you're bargaining."

"Right now, it's almost impossible to make rules that would enforce proper conduct in Division I. The prize and the reward are so great—for the university, the players and the coaches—that it's just too tempting. It means so much to the community. Too many people are out there struggling to get what they can't get."

Providence Journal

"I made a survey involving 2,000 students at nine colleges and universities in six states. The bottom line was that 25 percent of the students surveyed gamble on a weekly basis, and six percent met the criteria for being pathological gamblers...."

"We're seeing case after case involving college kids. Half. Maybe more. It's up there."

"Some kids bet every night because, every night, there's a chance they can win money, and they don't want to miss out. If they don't bet a game, and the team they like wins, they're hummed out."

"What coaches do during tournament games is manage what they've prepared for, implementing their plan. If a team isn't prepared, a coach makes little difference during the game. You also have to be able to regain consistency when a team gets that dead-fish look in their eyes."

Reaction to the NCAA survey on gender equity:

Judith M. Sweet, NCAA president

"The response rate to the survey indicates the membership cares. The NCAA has assumed a leadership role in helping members address gender equity."

"The survey is an important first step, but the most important thing is the follow-up."

Phyllis L. Howlett, chair
NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics

"If the task force does what we anticipate, there may be some controls that come out of it...."

"When the task force begins its work, everything is on the table."

Ellen Vargyas, Women's Law Center

USA Today

"This is the most complete set of data. And it's incredibly damning.... I give the NCAA credit for finally looking into this issue. Now, I hope they'll exercise some leadership."

Bob Todd, interim athletics director
University of Illinois, Champaign

"It's a tough problem. On the one hand, you've got cost containment, and on the other, you've got gender equity. Those two are in conflict. You can't easily add sports, and you don't want to cut men's sports. There aren't many simple solutions."

Christine Grant, women's athletics director
University of Iowa

USA Today

"I know (the numbers) are all bad. It confirmed everything we thought. Men have more sports, men have more participants, more scholarships, more coaches. Men's coaches are better-paid."

Vivian Acosta, professor
Brooklyn College

USA Today

"The NCAA should take a very strong stand that members must adopt compliance or they can't belong. If you're not in compliance, you don't play NCAA events."

State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 23 bills from 16 states. The report includes 12 bills that have been introduced, and 11 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (March 4 issue of The NCAA News). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of March 12, 1992. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on line and are not included.

The NCAA had not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Giles, attorney for Tarkanian. "That's why the states are acting. They have to act to protect their citizens."

Giles was referring to three other states that have enacted laws that require the NCAA to meet varying standards of judicial-like due process.

The Association has maintained that as a private organization, it cannot be expected to meet all courtroom-like due process standards provided by the U.S. Constitution, although the Association's existing procedures do provide fair hearing standards. However, legal due process (and the Nevada law) calls for cross-examination of witnesses. The NCAA a private organization with no subpoena power cannot compel witnesses to appear.

Modifications

NCAA attorneys noted that steps have been taken to improve the Association's enforcement process, and McKibben agreed that modifications were necessary. "The process needs some changes," he said. "That's a given here."

The NCAA Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process last year recommended a series of changes in the Association's enforcement procedures. At its January meeting, the NCAA Council authorized the Committee on Infractions to proceed with implementing those changes that do not require approval of the membership. Currently, the committee is implementing the following new procedures:

- An enhanced preliminary notice in each major infractions case for the chief executive officer at an involved institution.

- Expedited hearings to enable an institution and the enforcement staff to come to the committee at an earlier stage in the investigative process with a proposed resolution of the case. This will provide for "summary disposition" in appropriate major cases.

- Liberalized use of tape recordings and the availability of such recordings to involved parties at sites other than the NCAA headquarters.

- Availability of transcripts of all infractions hearings to all parties with standing to appeal a decision of the committee.

- The hiring of a staff independent of the NCAA enforcement department to assist the committee with scheduling and conducting hearings, writing reports and handling the public announcement of those reports.

- A conflict-of-interest policy for the infractions committee, its staff and the enforcement department.

- Announcements of Committee on Infractions decisions by the committee chair rather than by NCAA staff.

Two major recommendations of the special committee - the use of an independent hearing officer to rule in those cases not decided by summary disposition and the initiation of open hearings must be approved by the NCAA Convention.

NCAA attorney James McLarney emphasized the significance of the changes, implemented since the 1970s: "You wouldn't even recognize some of them as being the same rules today."

In a related matter, a subcommittee in the Kansas House of Representatives recommended that the legislature take no action on a proposed due process law in that state.

The subcommittee said that although reform is needed in the NCAA enforcement process, it would be better for the NCAA itself to make the changes. It suggested that the House Federal and State Affairs Committee review the NCAA's progress next year and revive the legislation if it considers such action necessary.

Settlement met in coach's firing at Toledo

An agreement between former University of Toledo football coach Dan Simrell and the university calls for the dismissed coach to receive $50,000, according to United Press International.

The agreement reached does not include money for Simrell's legal fees.

Simrell, the university's most successful football coach, sued the institution in the Ohio Court of Claims, charging he was unjustly fired by athletics director Allen R. Bohl after the 1989 season.

Simrell said that after his firing, the university agreed to pay him

$62,834 a year as a consultant, pay for his participation in the Public Employees Retirement System and continue his insurance benefits. But Simrell said the university reneged on the deal.

Simrell is now an assistant coach at West Virginia University.

Student-athletes promote reading

Pembroke State University men's basketball players haven't just read play books this season; they have also been traveling to nearby elementary and junior high schools to sell students in grades four through seven on the importance of reading.

The program is cosponsored by Pembroke State and the Public Schools of Robeson (North Carolina) County. During each visit, one of the players gives an oral report of a book he has read that comes from a list of recommended readings for a particular grade level.

Trinity student-athlete involved with posse

Jodi Falcigno, a basketball and softball player at Trinity (Connecticut), is one of 35 students participating in the Trinity College Neighborhood Posse, an off-shoot of the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program.

Two days each week, Falcigno, who is majoring in education, visits her "little brother," six-year old Elias Morales, and other Hartford, Connecticut, children. They spend roughly two hours with one another during each session to discuss the younger's academic progress.

"We're responsible for academic work," Falcigno told the Hartford Courant. "We contact their teachers to see where they have trouble. I make up math problems and help Elias with his penmanship. It's good practice for when I become a teacher."

Championship previews

Division I men's ice hockey

Twelve teams will give new regional format a try

Event: 1992 Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Overview: Michigan has a very young team but won eight of its last nine games and claimed the Central Collegiate Hockey Association title. Senior forward Denny Felsner leads the country in scoring with 80 points (34 goals, 46 assists). Minnesota won the Western Collegiate Hockey Association league title by 12 points as it finished with a 26-6 conference record. The Golden Gophers are led by Larry Olimb, who has scored 64 points (20 goals, 44 assists), and goaltender Jeff Stolp (24-6 record, 2.87 goals-against average). Top-ranked Maine wrapped up its first regular-season Hockey East title since 1988 and second in history. The Black Bears are led by Hockey East player of the year Scott Pellerin, who has scored 55 points (30 goals, 25 assists), and Jean-Yves Roy, who also has 55 points (31 goals, 24 assists).

Field: Twelve berths will be filled March 22. Automatic-qualification privileges have been granted to the champions of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Hockey East, and the Central Collegiate Hockey and Western Collegiate Hockey Associations. The remaining eight at-large selections will include at least one school that is not a member of an automatic-qualification conference.

Dates and sites: Six teams will be assigned to each of two regionals. The East regional in Providence, Rhode Island, will be played March 26 and 28, while the West regional in Detroit, Michigan, will be played March 27 and 29. The two highest-seeded teams at each regional site will receive first-round byes. Four winners of regional games will advance to the semifinals and finals in Albany, New York, April 2 and 4. The entire championship will utilize a single-elimination format.

Results: Championship results will appear in the April 8 issue of The NCAA News.

Television coverage: The semifinal games will be produced by NCAA Productions and televised live on most Prime Sports Network affiliates. The championship game will be televised live by ESPN April 4 at 8 p.m. Eastern time.

Championship note: This year marks the 45th anniversary of the championship.

What they are saying

Gordon "Red" Berenson, head coach Michigan

Currently ranked No. 2, seven-time champion

"What I like about the new format (two six-team regionals with two winners advancing from each regional) is it's different. The tournament is always a challenge, but it's the type of format that could provide more upsets, especially in the regionals. On the other hand, we are going to play fewer games. I don't like that it takes the playoffs off campus; the on-campus experience is really great for the student-athlete, really special. I think the fewer games might end up costing the NCAA money, whether the crowds are there or not. I also think it breaks the tradition in hockey where most playoffs are decided by a series, at least up to a certain point. I like the idea of the regionals, but I don't like that six seeds in the West and six seeds in the East are selected. This year four of the top five teams are Western teams."

Doug Woog, head coach Minnesota

Currently ranked No. 3, three-time champion

"One of the important things we have now is a format that is consistent, with predetermined regional sites and single elimination all the way through. We need to be consistent so the fans will know how to follow it and the media will know how to cover it. From a spectator standpoint, I think there is a lot of appeal with this format. The fans know ahead of time where the regional and championship sites are, and they can get their tickets ahead of time. I think one of the bad things about the new format is that teams earn the home-ice advantage during the regular-season. Now the people who support the individual programs will not get to see their teams on campus. I think developing regional centers for the championship, though, will make sense in the long haul and be good for college hockey."

Division I men's swimming

Stanford blocks lane to Texas' fifth straight championship

Event: 1992 Division I Men's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: Four-time defending champion Texas attempts to become the third team in Division I men's swimming history to win five consecutive titles. Indiana, which claimed six titles from 1968 to 1973, and Michigan, which won five straight from 1937 to 1941, are the only teams to accomplish the feat. Stanford, the No. 1-ranked team in the final College Swimming Coaches Association of America regular-season poll and runner-up at the 1991 championships, offers the biggest challenge to the Longhorns' reign. Southern California and Florida, Nos. 2 and 3, and Tennessee and Michigan, tied at No. 4, should be among the teams fighting for a top-five spot.

Field: The maximum number of participants allowed is 270. All qualifiers who have met the "A" time standard in an individual event will be admitted into the meet; those who have met the "B" time standard in an individual event will be considered until the event is filled. No team shall be allowed more than 18 actual competitors. (Note: An entrant who swims will be counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives will be counted as one competitor and an entrant who dives only will be counted as one-half a competitor in the total team limit.)

Dates and sites: The championships will be March 26-28 at the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Results: Championships results will appear in The NCAA News April 1.

Championships notes: Texas, Stanford and Florida are the only teams to win a title in the past nine years. Before Texas, Stanford won three straight titles (1985 to 1987) and Florida claimed two (1983 and 1984)...1992 marks the fifth time in seven years that Indianapolis has been the site of the championships...Southern Cal has been runner-up at three of the past five championships...Texas has won the past four 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays...Iowa senior Artur Wojdat has won three consecutive 500-yard freestyle titles. No man has won four straight.

What they are saying

Skip Kenney, head coach Stanford

1991 runner-up, currently ranked No. 1

"There's a lot to be said about knowing how to win and Texas knows how... They've done it the last four years. Trying to overcome that hurdle is something we, and everyone else, is looking at. It's going to take a hell of a meet for anyone to change the top spot. For us to have any chance (at winning the title), it's crucial that we do something in the relays, and that's where Texas has done so well."

Peter Daland, head coach Southern Cal

Currently ranked No. 2

"We figure Stanford is the overwhelming favorite—it could win the meet by 100 points. It simply has too many great three-event athletes. Texas, being four-time defending champions, is strong and should make a last-ditch effort. After that, it should be a heavy battle for the other places. Personally, I see Michigan, Cal, Florida and possibly us. Another very strong group includes UCLA, Arizona, Arizona State and Southern Methodist. A team that looks like it could finish third could very well end up seventh."

Skip Foster, head coach Florida

Currently ranked No. 3

"Between the new rules and restrictions that have been implemented and having the Olympic trials during the first week of March, we're just hoping to go and make a decent showing. This has definitely been the longest season in all of my years of coaching. I think the teams that tried to prepare swimmers with a legitimate shot at the Olympics and trained toward those goals and didn't worry about the NCAAs are definitely going to be hurt. Those teams that ignored the trials and trained for the NCAAs are going to be much better prepared and in better position to do well."

Walder's double leads Arkansas to ninth straight men's indoor title

Erick Walder became the third athlete to win the long jump and triple jump in the same year and led Arkansas to its ninth straight Division I Men's Indoor Track Championships team title March 13 and 14 at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis, Indiana.

The Razorbacks edged Clemson, 53-46.

The championship tied the Razorbacks with Yale golf, Southern California outdoor track and Iowa wrestling for the most consecutive championships in Division I men's history.

Walder became the first jumper since Michael Conley of Arkansas in 1984 and 1985 to record the long jump/triple jump double. The only other athlete to do it was UTEP's Bob Beamon in 1968, the year he set the world record in the long jump at the Olympics.

Walder's victories were the only individual titles for the Razorbacks, who increased their lead in all-time indoor team championships to two over second-best UTEP.

Allen Johnson of North Carolina set a meet record with a 7.07 in the 55-meter hurdles. Also, Baylor's 1,600-meter relay team ran a 3:04.89 to eclipse the old record by 1.35 seconds.

Florida's depth buries Division I women's indoor field

Powerful Gators nearly double second-place total

Florida didn't get the sweep in the sprints that many had expected behind world-record-holder Michelle Freeman, but the Gators still had enough depth to claim their first Division I Women's Indoor Track Championships team title March 13-14 at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Freeman, who broke the world record in the 55-meter hurdles at the Southeastern Conference meet, set a meet record in the preliminaries when she ran a 7.41. But she hit the fourth hurdle in the final and stumbled across the finish line in fourth. She also placed second in the 55-meter dash.

But with a victorious 1,600-meter relay team and Leah Kirklin's victory in the triple jump, the Gators nearly doubled the points of their closest competition. They finished with 50 points to runner-up Stanford's 26.

Kirklin was one of two repeat champions. Arizona State's Maicel Malone won the 400-meter dash for the third consecutive year.

St. Augustine's breezes to sixth consecutive indoor crown

The St. Augustine's Falcons continued to make a shambles of Division II men's track competition, winning their sixth straight indoor team championship and fourth straight outright.

The Falcons scored 81 points, third highest in the seven-year history of the meet, and won by 57 points, the third largest margin ever. The meet was held at Saginaw Valley State March 13-14.

St. Augustine's won five events, including repeat victories by Antonio Pettigrew (400-meter dash), Mark Mason (long jump), Keith Holley (triple jump) and the 1,600-meter-relay team. James Shelton was the lone first-time winner for the school, but he replaced the Falcons' Darrin Moore as the winner of the high jump.

The Falcons also took second in the long jump (Holley), triple jump (Emmitt Higgins) and the shot put (Burnice Cross).

Wendell Edwards of Abilene Christian claimed his second title in the 55-meter hurdles, which he also won in 1990.

St. Augustine's remains the only Division II institution to win more than one team championship. It now has won 24 individual titles 17 more than the next-best team, Abilene Christian.

Alabama A&M women romp to title

Alabama A&M didn't have a great deal of depth heading into the Division II Women's Indoor Track Championships at Saginaw Valley State March 13-14. But then again, the Lady Bulldogs didn't need much.

Behind Taiwo Aladefa's meet record in the 55-meter hurdles, Tameka Hutchins' meet record in the long jump and the exploits of the Akinremi sisters (Omotayo, Omolade and Taiye), the Lady Bulldogs won four events and placed second in three others for 64 of their 67 championship-winning points. It was Alabama A&M's first team title.

Four-time defending champion Abilene Christian finished in a tie for second.

Besides Aladefa's and Hutchins' victories, Omotayo Akinremi edged her sister, Omolade, by .13 seconds to win the 400-meter dash. The third sister, Taiye, finished fifth and Shelly Beckford finished sixth to score Alabama A&M's other three points.

Christy Opara of Cal State Los Angeles also set a meet record. Her 6.77 in the 55-meter dash was .03 faster than Tracy Mayfield of Abilene Christian in 1988.

Pittsburg State's Christie Allen won her second individual title of the school year, following up the Division II cross country title she won last fall with a victory in the 1,500-meter run.

Wisconsin-La Crosse runs to Division III title

Wisconsin-La Crosse won just one individual championship to Lincoln's (Pennsylvania) three, but the Eagles still captured their second straight team title at the Division III Men's Indoor Track Championships March 13 and 14.

Bill Schroeder's victory in the triple jump led the Eagles to a 57-49 victory over runner-up Lincoln (Pennsylvania) at Wisconsin-Stevens Point.

Four meet records were set at the championships. DeWayne Stevens of Montclair State won the 400-meter dash in 47.73, surpassing the old mark by .15 seconds. Leonard Jones of St. Thomas (Minnesota) was one of three high jumpers to clear 7-1/4. It was the first time anyone had cleared seven feet in the Division III championships. Jones won on fewest misses.

Chad Thomas of Muskingum set a pole vault record by more than half a foot. Also, Dan Schmidt of Wisconsin-Eau Claire surpassed the record in the 35-pound weight throw by 20 inches.

Schroeder, who finished second to teammate Dean Cash in last year's championship, edged Jones by 3 1/2 inches. Cash finished third. Schroeder also provided the Eagles' only second-place finish, finishing behind Jones in the high jump. But plenty of support points gave the Eagles their second straight title.

Other titlists included Sandu Rebenciuc of Augustana (Illinois), who followed his victory in last fall's Division III cross country meet with an indoor 1,500-meter championship.

Christopher Newport women sprint to another championship

Antoinette Bass won in the 55-meter hurdles to capture Christopher Newport's only individual championship, but the Lady Captains claimed three seconds and two thirds to edge Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 46-41, in the Division III Women's Indoor Track Championships at Wisconsin-Stevens Point March 13 and 14.

Bass finished second in the 55-meter dash and the triple jump to score 26 of her team's points. The 1,600-meter-relay team also claimed second place.

The team championship was the Lady Captains' fourth in five years. They won three straight times from 1988 to 1990 behind 12-time individual champion Sheila Trice. It was the third straight runner-up finish for Wisconsin-Oshkosh, which never has won the championship.

Eleena Zhelezov of Brandeis was the only two-time individual winner. Zhelezov won the long jump and the triple jump.

Kim Oden of Nebraska Wesleyan scored the most points, winning the high jump and finishing second in the 55-meter hurdles, fourth in the long jump and fifth in the triple jump. Oden has won all three of Nebraska Wesleyan's individual indoor championships and all five outdoor individual titles for the Plainswomen.

One of runner-up Wisconsin-Oshkosh's two individual titles came in the 1,500-meter run from Laura Horejs, who also won the Division III women's cross country title last fall.

Cal State Bakersfield swimmers leave foes in their wake

Ondrej Bures and Jim Hassett each won three individual titles and Cal State Bakersfield set scoring and margin-of-victory records in cruising to its seventh consecutive Division II men's swimming and diving team title March 11-14 at North Dakota.

Winning nine of 15 individual events and two of five relays, coach Ernie Maglisco's Roadrunners amassed a championships-record 910 points in beating the field by 429 points. The score eclipsed the meet record of 853½ points set by the Roadrunners at the 1991 championships, while the margin of triumph smashed the previous mark of 233½ points, set by Maglisco's 1987 squad.

The title was Cal State Bakersfield's seventh overall and the 11th for Maglisco, who also won three championships at Cal State Chico and one at Oakland before taking over the Roadrunner program.

Clarion, bolstered by a strong diving corps that placed four divers in the one-meter and five in the three-meter event, registered 481 points to finish second. The showing was Clarion's highest ever and ended Oakland's string of five consecutive runner-up finishes. Oakland, which claimed five individual titles and two relays, totaled 480½ points to place third. UC Davis (368) and Shippensburg (277) rounded out the top five.

Bures, who captured a Division II meet-record four individual titles at the 1990 championships, claimed the 200-yard butterfly, 1,650-yard freestyle and 400-yard individual medley. His butterfly time of 1:48.39 broke his own meet record of 1:48.40, set in 1990. Bures now has won seven individual titles, tying him for fourth on the Division II all-time list.

Hassett, the defending champion in the 200- and 500-yard freestyles, was one of five champions from last year to repeat, posting top times of 1:37.47 in the 200 and 4:26.72 in the 500. He also claimed the 200-yard backstroke title, touching the wall in 1:50.34.

In addition to his individual performances, Hassett also played a role in helping the Roadrunners to first-place finishes in the 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays. The victory in the 400 came in record time as Cal State Bakersfield finished in 2:58.90, shattering its own record of 2:59.42 (set in 1986).

David Huston and Petr Kladiva accounted for the Roadrunners' other individual victories, successfully defending titles in the 200-yard breaststroke and 50-yard freestyle, respectively. Huston also won the 100-yard breaststroke title.

In other performances, Oakland's Eric Mellquham won the 100-yard butterfly after setting a meet record in the preliminaries of that event. He also helped the Pioneers to a record finish in the 400-yard medley relay.

Oakland's Doug Allen and Marc Hairston both won their second straight titles in the 200-yard individual medley and one-meter diving, respectively. Clarion's Matt Benton won the three-meter diving event.

Another championship for Oakland swimmers

Oakland became the second team in Division II women's swimming and diving history to win three consecutive NCAA team titles, accomplishing the feat March 11-14 at North Dakota.

Placing at least three swimmers in the finals of seven individual events, Oakland scored a meet-record 621½ points to easily outdistance runner-up Northern Michigan, which had 475 points. Coach Tracy Huth's Pioneers smashed their own meet record of 566½ points, set last year.

Florida Atlantic, second in 1991, placed third with 376, while North Dakota (330) and Clarion (316) finished fourth and fifth, respectively.

The Pioneers' depth they totaled 16 top-five finishes was evident in that Amy Comerford (100-yard backstroke) and Ingrid Bartnik (three-meter diving) were the lone Oakland individual titlists. Comerford's victory came in a record-breaking 55.49, shattering the previous mark of 57.34 set by Chris Breedy of Cal State Northridge in 1988.

While the Pioneers virtually were shut out in the individual events, they did win three relay titles—the 200- and 400-yard freestyles and 200-yard medley. Comerford and Laura Fischer led the way, competing on all three winning squads.

As was the case in 1991 when Northern Michigan's Kirsten Silvester won four titles, a Wildcat swimmer found herself in the individual spotlight. This time, it was freshman Tea Cerkvnik.

Cerkvnik won the 50-, 100- and 200-yard freestyle titles. She also swam a leg on the Wildcats' title-winning 800-yard freestyle and 400-yard medley relays. The performance tied her with four others for second place on the all-time list for most individual titles (three) in a year.

Noemi Lung of Florida Atlantic joined Cerkvnik as a three-time winner. She successfully defended her titles in the 200- and 400-yard individual medleys, breaking her own record in the 200 with a time of 2:03.62. The only swimmer to successfully defend a title this year, she also claimed the 200-yard breaststroke crown.

Northern Michigan's Jennifer Kleemann was the only other swimmer to win more than one title, claiming the 200-yard backstroke and 500-yard freestyle. The backstroke title came in record fashion as Kleemann touched the wall in 2:01.14.

First-time individual champions included Lawren Everingham of Cal State Bakersfield (one-meter diving), Clarion's Becky Jushchshyn (100-yard breaststroke), Shelly Ebbinghausen of North Dakota (100-yard butterfly), Northern Michigan's May Tan (200-yard butterfly) and Teresa Stratman of Northern Colorado (1,650-yard freestyle).

Same song, ninth verse: Kenyon women dunk swim field

Seven different Kenyon swimmers won individual titles and the Ladies swept the five relay events to coast to their ninth consecutive NCAA Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 12-14 at Buffalo.

Winning 10 of 15 individual events, coach Jim Steen's squad shattered meet records for points and margin of victory in recording the most lopsided victory in Division III women's swimming history. The Ladies scored 750 points, 342 more than runner-up UC San Diego (408).

The point total surpassed the previous high of 713, set by Kenyon in 1986, and the margin of victory was 9½ points better than the 332½-point triumph registered by Steen's 1989 squad.

UC San Diego's second-place showing was its fifth in a row and sixth in seven years. Williams (279), which claimed three individual titles, placed third for the second straight year, while Ithaca (226½) and Denison (223) claimed fourth and fifth.

Jennifer Carter and Carla Ainsworth led the way for the Ladies as both won two individual crowns and participated on four winning relays. Carter won her second straight crown in the 200-yard breaststroke and 200-yard individual medley, while Ainsworth was a first-time winner, claiming the 100- and 200-yard freestyles. Ainsworth's time of 1:51.80 in the 200 freestyle broke the meet record of 1:52.36 set by Kenyon's Kami Mathews in 1991.

Both swimmers played a role in guiding Kenyon to victory in the 400- and 800-yard freestyles and the 400-yard medley relay. Ainsworth also competed on the 200-yard freestyle relay team, while Carter also participated in the 200-yard medley relay.

Jessica Berkowitz also captured two individual events for Steen's squad, successfully defending her 1991 title in the 1,650-yard freestyle and also winning the 500-yard freestyle.

Tasha Willis and Kristie Stacy also were multiple winners for Kenyon. Willis claimed the 50-yard freestyle and also swam on the squad's 200-, 400- and 800-yard freestyle relays, while Stacy won the 100-yard butterfly for the second straight year and was a member of the Ladies' 200- and 400-yard medley relays.

Leah Ceperley, champion in the 400-yard individual medley, and Ann Kelley, who won the one-meter diving event, were the Ladies' other title winners.

Williams' Kari Andersson and Patricia Althoff played prominent roles in the Ephs' third-place finish. Andersson claimed both the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events, while Althoff won the three-meter diving.

Emory's Kendal Hansen and Dawn Hoving also won individual events. Hansen won her second straight 100-yard breaststroke title, while Hoving swam to victory in the 200-yard butterfly.

Duke, Kansas, Ohio State and UCLA each enjoy No. 1 seed for second time

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

Defending champion Duke, Kansas, Ohio State and UCLA are the No. 1 seeds in the 54th Division I Men's Basketball Championship, with Duke seeking to become the first repeat champion since UCLA won seven consecutive championships through 1973.

Each of the top four is a No. 1 seed for only the second time since team seeding began in 1979. Ohio State also was a No. 1 seed last year, Duke and Kansas in 1986, and UCLA in 1979. Only four No. 1 seeds won the championship over the 13 years of team seeding, although teams seeded in the top three have won 10 championships and finished second 12 times. At least one No. 1 seed has reached the Final Four every year except 1980 (Nos. 2-5-6-8). At the other extreme is 1991's 1-1-2-3 Final Four.

Top coaches

The field includes most of the nation's top coaches and many among the all-time leaders.

North Carolina's Dean Smith, leader among active coaches with 738 career victories, is tied with UCLA's legendary John

Basketball notes

Wooden at 47 career NCAA tournament wins. Indiana's Bob Knight has won three championships, a total surpassed only by Wooden (10) and Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp (four). Louisville's Denny Crum has won two titles and several others in this field have coached one NCAA title team — Smith, Duke's Mike Krzyzewski, UTEP's Don Haskins, Michigan State's Jud Heathcote, Michigan's Steve Fisher and Georgetown's John Thompson.

Kentucky's Rick Pitino becomes the ninth coach to take three different teams to the NCAA tournament (Providence and Boston U. previously). Oklahoma State's Eddie Sutton remains the only coach to take four. And of nine coaches to take two different teams to the Final Four, only Arizona's Lute Olson is in the 1992 field.

First in 100 years

Part of the Division I tournament will be played for the first time this year in the state where the game was invented 100 years ago. The Centrum in Worcester, Massachusetts, is a first- and second-round site. Another 1992 arena new to the NCAA is the Bradley Center in Milwaukee. The Omni in Atlanta will move from sixth to third at 55 games on the list of tournament games hosted, behind Municipal Auditorium in Kansas City (83) and New York's old Madison Square Garden III (71).

Best performers

The Atlantic Coast Conference holds a one-game lead, 176-175, over the Big Ten in all-time NCAA tournament wins, while the Big Ten leads with 30 Final Four teams. The Pacific-10 leads with 10 titles, all by UCLA.

The top eight colleges in Final Four appearances all are in the 1992 field, in which Duke at 28-2 is the only team with fewer than three losses in this age of parity.

No. 1 seed history

North Carolina and Georgetown lead with five No. 1-seeded teams each since team seeding began in 1979. Oklahoma and DePaul are next with four each and four colleges have had three each — Virginia, Kentucky, St. John's (New York) and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Those eight colleges, all among the game's top winners since 1979, account for 30 No. 1-seeded teams — more than the rest of the country combined — but only three NCAA crowns in that span — North Carolina in 1982, Georgetown in 1984 and Nevada-Las Vegas in 1990. Six have had two each — Arizona, Louisiana State and the 1992 quartet of Duke, Kansas, Ohio State and UCLA. Fourteen colleges have had one each.

Among conferences, the Big East and Atlantic Coast lead the way, each with 10 No. 1-seeded teams; the Big Ten has had seven, Big Eight six, Southeastern and Pacific-10 five each, Big West three, Southwest Athletic two, and the Metropolitan, Missouri Valley and Atlantic 10 one each. All independents have had five.

First time, long time

Four colleges — Campbell, Delaware, Eastern Illinois and Tulane — are in the Division I men's championship for the first time, bringing the all-time total to 240 colleges. Massachusetts' only other NCAA trip was in 1962, Fordham has not gone since 1971 and Cincinnati last participated in 1977.

Twelve coaches are taking a team to the NCAA for the first time in their careers. They are Campbell's Billy Lee, Delaware's Steve Steinwedel, Eastern Illinois' Rick Samuels, Fordham's Nick Macarchuck, Howard's Butch Beard, Massachusetts' John Calipari, Miami's (Ohio) Joby Wright,

Who's who of women's coaches in action

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant Statistics Coordinator

Nearly every one of the top coaching names in the 10-year history of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship will be present with the 48 teams involved in the 1992 championship. Coaches of the past seven championships are on hand — Tennessee's Pat Summitt (1987, 1989 and 1991), Stanford's Tara VanDerveer (1990), Louisiana Tech's Leon Barmore (1988), Texas' Jody Conradt (1986) and Southern California's Marianne Stanley (at Old Dominion in 1985).

The winners of the first titles are missing, but Barmore was a top assistant to Sonja Hogg with Louisiana Tech's 1982 titlists. The field also includes four coaches who have reached the championship game — Iowa's Vivian Stringer (at Cheyney in 1982), Barmore (as cohead coach in 1983 and head coach in 1987), Tennessee's Summitt in 1984 and Virginia's Debbie Ryan in 1991.

Maryland's Chris Weller, Connecticut's Geno Auremma and Western Kentucky's Paul Sanderford also have had Women's Final Four teams.

In all, coaches in the 1992 tournament have accounted for 27 of 40 team appearances in the Women's Final Four. Two of this year's coaches — Mississippi's Van Chancellor and Tennessee's Summitt — have led teams to all 11 tournaments.

Top winners emerge

In tournament coaching, Summitt has the most victories with 33, and Louisiana Tech's Barmore is next with 26. Summitt also has the best tourney winning percentage with a 33-7 (.825) record, edging Louisiana Tech's Hogg at 14-3 (.824). Next, in order, are Southwest Texas State's Linda Sharp (formerly at Southern California) at 19-5 (.792), Barmore at 26-8 (.765) and Southern California's Stanley (formerly at Old Dominion and Pennsylvania) at 13-5 (.722).

Summitt, the most dominant coach in NCAA tournament history, tops all coaches in Women's Final Four appearances with seven, followed by Barmore's six. Next are Auburn's Joe Ciampi, Hogg and Sharp, with three each. Summitt also leads in most tournament games with 40, ahead of Barmore with 34, Arizona's Joan Bonvicini (formerly at Long Beach State) and Ciampi with 28, and Texas' Conradt with 27.

Four in all 11

Four teams now have been in all 11 Division I women's tournaments. They are Louisiana Tech, Tennessee, Long Beach State and Mississippi.

Two teams are making a 10th appearance — Penn State and Texas. Four teams are in for the ninth time — Maryland, Old Dominion, Southern California and Virginia.

Twenty-six teams return from the 1991 bracket to do battle for the 1992 title. The Midwest region has nine teams back from the 1991 tournament. Defending champion Tennessee heads the list of six former champion schools in the 1992 field.

First-time teams, coaches

Six schools are in the women's tournament for the first time — Creighton, Notre Dame, UC Santa Barbara, Santa Clara, Vermont and Wisconsin. Another, St. Peter's, is making its first appearance since the first tournament in 1982. Arizona State is back for the first time since 1983.

The chart on page 14 shows that nine coaches are in the tournament for the first time. They are Alabama's Rick Moody, UC Santa Barbara's Mark French, Creighton's Bruce Rasmussen, Houston's Jessie Kenlaw, Long Beach

No. 1 seeds

Montana's Blaine Taylor, Murray State's Edgar Scott, Old Dominion's Oliver Purnell, Southwestern Louisiana's Marty Fletcher and Tulane's Perry Clark.

Taylor and Scott are in their first season as a head coach at the four-year level. Calipari is the youngest of the 12—in fact, youngest in the field of 64—at 33. Taylor and Purnell are taking their alma maters.

Coaches who played

The only new coach who also played in the NCAA Division I tournament is Beard, who averaged 18.3 points and 6.8 rebounds for Louisville in four tournament games, two each in 1967 and 1968.

His team lost in the regional semifinals each year and split a pair of regional third-place games. He brings to 78 the number of coaches who also played in the tournament, including 15 others in the current field. Among them are Knight and Smith, the only two ever to both play and coach in a championship game.

Upset history

Richmond in 1991 under Dick

Tarrant became the first 15th-seeded team to win in the first round (it lost in the second round). Tarrant's 1988 Richmond team was the first (and still only) 13th seed to win in the second round and thus make the Sweet 16.

In 1986, Cleveland State under Kevin Mackey was the first (and still only) 14th seed to reach the Sweet 16. No. 16th seed has won. Seven No. 14 seeds and six No. 13s have won in the first round. There were no seeds below 12 until the advent of the 64-team field in 1985.

There have been 89 major upsets in the 13 years of seeding. We define a major upset as involving at least five places in the seeding, such as 11-over-6 or 7-over-2. This means the two teams were at least 16 places apart in the rankings used for seeding, since there are four teams for each seeding number. Three major upsets came in the national-championship game—North Carolina State (6) over Houston (1) in 1983, Villanova (8) over Georgetown (1) in 1985 and Kansas (6) over Oklahoma (1) in 1988.

10 tournaments, was not picked in 1992.

In the 11-year history of the tourney, the SEC holds a commanding lead with 61 total selections.

Undefeated teams scarce

Texas' 1986 championship team (34-0) is the only squad to make it through the entire season undefeated since NCAA women's championships began in 1982. Louisiana Tech in 1990 was the only other undefeated team to enter the tournament until Vermont (29-0) this year.

Since 1982, 15 teams have entered the tournament with only one loss and 39 have started with two losses. Among the 15 one-loss teams, two—Louisiana Tech in 1982 and Stanford in 1990—won the national title. Among the two-loss squads, three—Southern California in 1983, Louisiana Tech in 1988 and Tennessee in 1989—went on to become champions.

On the other side, Notre Dame this year is the only team to enter the tournament with a losing record (14-16).

Women's tourney trends

In the past 10 years of the women's tournament, the trends have stayed steady in most categories but several areas have changed. In field-goal shooting, both teams combined averaged nearly five more made per game in 1982 (59.29) than in 1991 (54.98) and attempted almost three more field goals per game (126.42 to 123.94); while accuracy was down from 46.90 percent in 1982 to 44.36 in 1991.

The reason for this drop in percentage is probably the addition of three-point shots to the mix in 1988. Tournament three-pointers made have risen from 3.79 per game by both teams in 1988 to 5.98 in 1991, while three-point attempts are up from 10.74 to 18 per game last year. The percentage, however, has gone down from 35.32 to 33.22 in the past four years.

Free-throw accuracy is virtually identical (68.27 to 69.43) and rebounding is very similar (80.55 to 81.17), while assists, turnovers, blocked shots and steals are almost exactly the same. Scoring, despite the addition of the three-pointers, has dropped from 147.45 points per game, both teams, in 1982 to 143.72 in 1991.

Bennett heads academic team

Two school record-holders have been named academic all-Americans of the year for the 1991-92 season.

Tony Bennett, Wisconsin-Green Bay's all-time leading scorer, was named GTE's academic all-American of the year in the university division. Jerry Meyer, David Lipscomb's all-time assist leader, was selected for the same honor in the college division.

Bennett has averaged more than 19 points and five assists per game for the Phoenix this season. Currently, he is eight points shy of becoming the Mid-Continent Conference's all-time leading scorer. Wisconsin-Green Bay finished the regular season with a 25-4 record. Bennett, a senior guard, led the Phoenix to its first NCAA tournament appearance last year.

Meyer averages 12.7 points per game and 10.6 assists per game for David Lipscomb. The junior guard has 1,149 career assists. The Bison finished the regular season with a 30-4 record.

DePaul's Stephen Howard was selected to the university division's first team for the second year in a row. Howard, a senior forward, is one of only two DePaul players to rank in the top seven in career scoring and rebounds.

Sports law

A Louisiana court of appeals reversed a trial court judgment that awarded $275,598 to former Southeastern Louisiana University athletics director Robert E. Brodhead.

Brodhead was employed for 10 months when Southeastern Louisiana terminated his employment. Brodhead claimed he entered into an oral employment contract.

The court of appeals held that under the facts of the case, there was no meeting of the minds and therefore the contract of employment for the set duration was void of consent.

Also, under Louisiana law, a new university employee must receive the approval of the Southeastern Louisiana president and the board of trustees. The court held that the board approved only a one-year contract, which was never accepted by Brodhead.

Compliance briefs

General Information

Coaches certification: Materials related to the NCAA coaches certification program were mailed February 28 to conference commissioners. On March 6, the Scranton answer sheets (to be used exclusively by test participants to record their answers during the recruiting examination) also were mailed to conference commissioners. Conferences may begin administering the recruiting examination at any time.

Conference and institutional compliance coordinators are encouraged to provide coaches with copies of the recruiting-test outline, the listing of legislative proposals and interpretations to be incorporated in the 1992-93 NCAA Manual, the applicable sections of the Official Notice of the 1992 NCAA Convention and the 1992 Convention voting summary that appeared in the January 15 issue of The NCAA News.

Some compliance coordinators have planned rules-education sessions (including training sessions on referencing the Manual and utilizing the permissible materials during the administration of the examination effectively) to help coaches in their study efforts.

The 1992-93 NCAA Manual and NCAA Division I Operating Manual will be available immediately after March 16 and April 10, respectively. Since the legislation identified in the listing of legislative proposals and interpretations, the Official Notice of the 1992 NCAA Convention and the 1992 Convention voting summary will be incorporated in the 1992-93 Manual, test participants would need only to use the Manual during the administration of the examination.

In this regard, consider ordering the 1992-93 Manual as soon as possible.

Upcoming meetings

Attention: registration and admissions administrators. National-office staff members from the legislative services and compliance services departments will be involved in the annual meeting of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO). The AACRAO annual meeting

(which provides a forum for the exchange of ideas and technology in higher-education administration) will be conducted in Dallas, Texas, April 19-24.

1992 NCAA regional seminars: Regional rules-compliance seminars will be conducted May 6-8 in New Orleans, Louisiana; May 27-29 in San Diego, California; June 17-19 in Chicago, Illinois, and June 25-27 in Baltimore, Maryland. The primary objective of the seminars is to provide current information regarding legislation and key interpretations in specific topic areas and to emphasize and discuss the roles of key campus constituents as they relate to the concept of institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs.

To encourage interactive sessions, a round-table discussion format will be used on the first day to share successful compliance strategies and to discuss issues relating to institutional control. The second day will include presentations by representatives from campus and conference offices regarding such topics as rules-education programs and the campus interpretive process, the coaches certification program, sharing compliance responsibilities with other campus administrators, involvement in a self-study, the role of the faculty and faculty athletics representative in establishing institutional control, and monitoring playing and practice seasons.

Each presentation will be followed by brief round-table discussions and a questions-and-answers session.

Individuals interested in presenting or serving as round-table leaders should contact Kevin C. Lennon, director of compliance services.

Higher education

Students take revised tests

In recent weeks, 257,000 juniors in 2,400 high schools across the United States and around the world tried early versions of revised college admissions tests, the College Board announced March 9.

They participated in the latest round of "field trials" of the College Board's new SAT-I reasoning tests, SAT-II subject tests and Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test. These tests will begin replacing current College Board admissions tests in 1993.

"We were delighted by the number of volunteers for these trials," said Donald M. Stewart, president of the College Board. "We needed 70,000 students, but attracted more than three times that number from all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Canada, Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, France, Germany, England, Japan and Korea."

Washington State building a gender-equity model

By Ronald D. Mott
The NCAA News Staff

The telephone in Washington State University athletics director Jim Livengood's office stays busy these days. Not only does he have the everyday responsibilities of being an athletics director, but Livengood increasingly is being sought for advice about gender equity in intercollegiate athletics.

On the Washington State campus, the number of males and females participating and the number of scholarships awarded in the intercollegiate athletics program are within one percent of the 53- to 47-percent male-to-female mix of the school's overall student-body population. Such a ratio is what many institutions are seeking to achieve as discussion of the gender-equity issue continues.

In 1987, the Washington state Supreme Court reversed a 1982 lower-court ruling that allowed Washington State to disregard football in its counting measures to achieve athletics participation numbers that mirrored its undergraduate gender ratios.

Finding a way

Faced with a mandate to include football in its counting, Washington State had to find a way to increase the number of female participants and scholarships. To this end, women's soccer and crew were elevated to intercollegiate athletics status from the club level. At the same time, men's golf and tennis programs at the institution remained on half-support funding in terms of scholarships, Livengood said.

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet cited Washington State's innovative approach during a March 11 news conference at which the results of the NCAA gender-equity survey were announced.

"In spring of '88, we began working on this and decided that we were going to have to fully fund all women's programs," Livengood said. "We were talking about adding two programs and possibly three. In 1989, we added women's soccer, and in 1990, we added women's crew."

These measures have not been achieved without costs, however monetary and otherwise. Livengood said men's soccer and crew remain club sports at the institution, and supporters of those teams frequently ask about the possibility of making them intercollegiate sports.

"There has been some pressure," Livengood said. "But there is a good understanding. I have representatives of those club teams asking about that. Those club teams are very close, and they feel that this is a great opportunity for the women here."

By adding the two sports, Washington State increased its number of women's sports to nine, compared to the seven offered for men.

Changing attitudes

Livengood said that to achieve gender equity, institutions need to realize that they must increase the number of sports offered for women and that it will involve some costs. But more than that, Livengood said, attitudes need to change concerning women's athletics.

"Very simply, we need to get away from the way we used to look at things," he said. "If you (continue to) do that, there is no way to look at a vision of the future. I don't think it is strictly a financial thing. There's no question that it will be perceived as a pinch. Money is tight. This is a very delicate subject, and it's just not going to go away."

In addition to stepping up its commitment to women's athletics, Livengood said Washington State made concerted efforts to attract more females to coaching positions with the institution's women's sports teams. Seven of the nine head coaches of the women's teams are females.

"We felt that was one of the things in gender equity that we needed to look at," he said. "I don't have any problems with men coaching women's teams, but we always talk about increasing coaching opportunities for women. We need to do more than give lip service to that."

Title IX

IX, it promises to be more challenging to define what gender equity requires.

programs. That, however, is not the case and might be considered a gender-equity issue rather than one involving Title IX, which primarily deals with participation opportunities.

"Gender equity is more than a financial issue," Schultz said. "It's a moral issue as well."

Although it is not difficult to distinguish gender equity from Title

An example

Livengood said he doesn't want the program at Washington State to appear to represent a panacea for intercollegiate athletics, but he does believe it provides an example of how gender equity might be achieved. Without the support of one's state, athletics administrators, students, faculty and program supporters, gender equity is much more difficult to attain, Livengood believes.

"We've had tremendous support from our university," he said. "The state legislature has been phenomenal. Our lawmakers need to be applauded for that. It's so complex because it's hard to achieve gender equity without some costs attached. I've got a boy and a girl, and they both participate in athletics. I'm for young people having an opportunity."

IX, it promises to be more challenging to define what gender equity requires.

"There is not a commonly accepted idea of what gender equity is," said Phyllis L. Howlett, chair of the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics, "and for the purposes of the NCAA, we have to define that. One of the first jobs of the (proposed) task force on gender equity) is to define it."

Gender-equity

the task force not as a study group but rather as a "solution group." He acknowledged that getting individuals from such different backgrounds to agree on solutions could be a problem but added that he hopes "we can find people who are interested in being proactive and they can come up with a majority agreement."

Funding a key

In particular, he believes a key area for the task force involves identifying alternative funding solutions for women's athletics programs.

"In the past," he said at the March 11 news conference, "the burden has been on the athletics department and especially on the football and men's basketball programs. That's not the right way to do it."

Schultz said that funding originating only from athletics departments has not resulted in the growth of women's programs but rather in the elimination of specific sports programs for both men and women.

"This is a commitment the university is going to have to make," he said. One possibility, he said, is that state legislatures may be asked to provide funding for women's programs at public universities while private institutions might need to solicit donations for this purpose.

"These are very difficult times," he said, "and getting new money from the state or the university poses a real challenge. I think that state by state, we will have to build a real case for this."

As for NCAA legislation, Schultz said he had no preconceived notions, but he said the most likely approach would be to stipulate gender-equity and Title IX guidelines with which institutions would have to comply for membership in the organization.

Big Ten Conference assistant commissioner Phyllis L. Howlett, chair of the Committee on Women's Athletics, and NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz announce the results of the NCAA gender-equity survey at a March 11 news conference

Yale crew team rescued from bay

Nineteen members of Yale University's crew team were rescued from Tampa Bay in Florida after a wave swamped their two boats March 16.

The rowers were spotted off Tampa's Davis Island clinging to their overturned sculls and a buoy. Nine were briefly examined at Tampa General Hospital for possible exposure in the 64-degree water.

"A wave caused by the high winds apparently swamped both boats," Aubrey Grant, deputy chief of fire-rescue operations, told The Associated Press. "It was cold and most of them were only wearing shorts and no shirts."

Yale's crew team was training during spring break at the University of Tampa.

Academic hall of fame finalists selected

Lynette Woodard, Lee Roy Selmon, Mike Gminski and the late Alan Ameche head a list of 26 finalists for induction into the GTE Academic All-America Hall of Fame. Four of the 26 will be inducted May 1 in Durham, North Carolina.

GTE, in cooperation with the College Sports Information Directors of America, established the hall of fame in 1988 to honor former college student-athletes who have attained high achievement in their professions and have made substantial contributions to their communities. The finalists are academic all-Americans who graduated at least 10 years ago.

Ameche (University of Wisconsin, Madison, 1955) was the 1954 Heisman Trophy winner and a two-time all-American fullback. He is best known for scoring the winning touchdown in the 1958 NFL Championship game to lift the Baltimore Colts to victory over the New York Giants. He carried a 3.200 grade-point average (4.000 scale) at Wisconsin.

Woodard (University of Kansas, 1981), who became the first woman to play with the Harlem Globetrotters, scored 3,649 points during her career and was a four-time all-American. She was cocaptain of the 1984 U.S. Olympic gold medal team and had a 3.160 GPA at Kansas.

Selmon (University of Oklahoma, 1975) dominated offensive lines for years as a defensive lineman for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, where he was a six-time NFL All-Pro. He was a two-time all-American as a Sooner and won the Outland and Lombardi trophies in 1975.

Gminski (Duke University, 1980), a 12-year veteran NBA player currently with the Charlotte Hornets, helped lead the Blue Devils to the 1978 NCAA Division I championship game (94-88 loss to the University of Kentucky) and is second on Duke's all-time scoring list and is the all-time leader in rebounds. Gminski, who had a 3.390 GPA, also played for Philadelphia and New Jersey in the NBA.

The other finalists are: Rick Cerrone, Seton Hall University, 1976; Keith Hungate, Kansas State University, 1972; Julie Biermann, College of Mount St. Joseph, 1980; Jay Buckley, Duke, 1964; Doug Collins, Illinois State University, 1973; Nancy Egerton, Niagara University, 1981; Bill Hosket, Ohio State University, 1968; Danny Schayes, Syracuse University, 1981.

David Casper, University of Notre Dame, 1974; Francis Curci, University of Miami (Florida), 1960; Mark Dienhart, University of St. Thomas (Minnesota), 1975; Thomas Gatewood, Notre Dame, 1972; Jim Grabowski, University of Illinois, Champaign, 1966; Randy Gradishar, Ohio State, 1974; Randy Lee Hall, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, 1975; Richard Jones, Virginia Military Institute, 1980; Jeff Lewis, University of Georgia, 1978; Blanche Martin, Michigan State University, 1959; Paul McDonald, University of Southern California, 1980; Jack Mildren, Oklahoma, 1972, and John Sciarra, University of California, Los Angeles, 1976.

Appeals subcommittee upholds eligibility ruling

The NCAA Council Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals has affirmed an Eligibility Committee decision in a drug-testing case in which a student-athlete tested positive for steroid use.

The athlete was charged with the loss of a season of intercollegiate competition and at least a 365-day period of ineligibility. The subcommittee's decision March 6 affirmed the Eligibility Committee's policy regarding "redshirt" student-athletes as described in the June 12, 1991, issue of The NCAA News.

In the case, a Division I football student-athlete tested positive for steroids at the beginning of the 1990 football season and did not compete in any contests during that season. In accordance with NCAA Bylaw 18.4.1.5.1, the institution withheld the student-athlete from all competition for the minimum 365-day period, and the student-athlete was retested negative by the NCAA. The institution appealed for immediate restoration of the student-athlete's eligibility at the conclusion of the 365-day period of ineligibility.

The Eligibility Committee noted that the intent of NCAA legislation is that student-athletes who test positive for any drug on the NCAA's banned-substance list lose a season of competition and must be withheld from competition a minimum of 365 days.

Accordingly, the Eligibility Committee concluded that a "redshirt" student-athlete who tests positive shall be charged one season of competition to ensure consistent treatment with student-athletes who test positive while participating during the season.

On appeal, the Council subcommittee agreed with the Eligibility Committee and affirmed the decision.

"In making this decision, the subcommittee recognized that testing positive for steroid use is a serious violation that results in severe consequences and that student-athletes who are involved in similar violations should suffer similar consequences," said Charles Cavagnaro,

Videos/books

A tape called "Athletes for Sexual Responsibility: Rape Awareness," has been produced by Sandra L. Caron, assistant professor of Family Relations and Margaret Zillioux, associate athletics director for academic support services at the University of Maine.

The 26-minute videotape uses Maine student-athletes as role models and actors who portray characters in damaging or potentially harmful sexual situations who then engage the audience to explore positive alternatives. It is comprised of three vignettes: "The Date", "The Morning After" and "Talking with Friends."

To order a copy of the videotape, send a check or money order for $80 per copy payable to: The University of Maine, "Athletes for Sexual Responsibility", 141 Memorial Gymnasium, University of Maine, Orono, Maine 04469; or call Sandra Caron at 207/581-3138.

Polls shows

Harris said that although the reduction in the belief that college sports are out of control has taken place among all segments of the population, it is especially pronounced in the South, among small-town people, people under age 30, high-school graduates, lower-middle income people, Blacks and Hispanics.

The reaction to a variety of other statements or questions that had been posed in 1989 indicated that the image of college athletics has improved, although the progress was not as pronounced as with the question of control.

Some examples:

- "Too many cases of serious rule violations by leading college athletics departments have undermined the traditional role of universities as places where young people learn ethics and integrity": 1989—77 percent agreed; 1992—73 percent.

- "Too many colleges admit athletes on the promise that all they have to do is be a star and they would make a lot of money playing for the pros when they get out, which is mainly false since only about one percent end up playing for the pros and making big money": 1989—78 percent agreed; 1992—70 percent.

- "Colleges are at fault for being too money-greedy on athletics and for taking the easy way out, which is to make having winning teams one of the top priorities of the university": 1989—87 percent agreed; 1992—70 percent.

- "With television exposure so widespread, college athletics have become a big-money proposition (that is) being corrupted": 1989—85 percent agreed; 1992—70 percent.

- "Can colleges put their own houses in order with new and stiffer rules governing intercollegiate athletics or would they only clean things up when there is legislation that tells them what to do and not to do": 1989—49 percent believe colleges could do the job themselves, 46 did not; 1992—43 percent believe colleges can do the job themselves, 42 percent do not.

Then, in a February 4 contest vs. Iona College, Harris set a school single-season assist record when she surpassed the 190 by Kelly Greenberg in 1989.

In the team's next game, a February 8 matchup opposite Siena College, she set the school's all-time assists mark, eclipsing the record of 512 that was held by Greenberg.

Coach calls players 'pigs'—they agree

University of Miami (Florida) women's basketball coach Ferne Labati has taken to calling her players "pigs" and they take it as a compliment.

According to Labati, hogs are totally committed to giving up their lives to become ham, while half-hearted chickens merely sit around and lay eggs.

whether you want to be partially committed or totally committed," she told The Associated Press. "The pig is totally committed."

String of success snapped at Williams

Not since the winter of 1990 had any of the athletics teams at Williams College finished their respective seasons with a record below .500, until a 3-2 loss to Holy Cross left this year's Eph hockey team with a season record of 10-11-2. A string of 50 consecutive varsity teams posting winning seasons was ended.

Williams fields 30 teams (16 men and 14 women) for its 2,000 students. The 1990-91 academic year was the first time this century that all 30 varsity teams posted a winning record. The only other time all varsity teams at Williams bettered the .500 mark was in 1899, when the college had four teams.
