Everybody in!

Stanford University women's swimming coach Richard Quick (right) is a veteran of championship celebration—he has won seven Division I team titles in his career, including the one he claimed at the Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 19-21 at the University of Texas at Austin. Quick, however, is no solitary celebrator; when he took his traditional dunking at the end of the meet, he took team and staff members with him. See championships results beginning on page 6.

Extensive agenda facing presidents

The NCAA Presidents Commission begins its work for the year when it conducts its annual spring meeting April 1-2 in Dallas, Texas, with three Commission subcommittees getting a head start with meetings March 31 at the same site to discuss strategic planning, the role of the Commission itself and ways to strengthen the role of chief executive officers in athletics matters.

The Commission's major topics for the year fall under the heading identified last fall by its Subcommittee on Strategic Planning as the next area of emphasis: institutional responsibility and presidential control in college athletics.

Thus, the highlights of the spring meeting promise to include:

- The proposed certification process. See Extensive agenda, page 23

Nominating committee set

The nominating committee responsible for selecting chief executive officers to serve on the NCAA Presidents Commission has been appointed by Commission Chair Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien, chancellor of the University of New Orleans.

In keeping with the policy observed since the Commission's founding in 1984, O'Brien appointed eight Commission members whose terms do not expire this year to serve on the committee. All membership divisions and subdivisions and all NCAA geographical regions are represented.

O'Brien named Jon C. Strauss, See Nominating, page 23

Certification legislation enters review process

The NCAA Special Committee on Certification has reviewed a draft of legislation that would create an institutional certification program if it is adopted by the 1993 NCAA Convention.

Meeting March 16-17, the special committee also reviewed written comments solicited from the membership and considered several legal ramifications of the proposed program.

The NCAA Presidents Commission will examine the draft of the legislation, as well as the special committee's final report, at its April

1-2 meeting, and the NCAA Council will review both when it meets 13-15.

Every five years

The program calls for each Division I member to complete at least once every five years a verified and evaluated institutional self-study. This self-study is to encompass seven basic areas—institutional mission, institutional control and presidential authority, fiscal integrity, academic integrity, conduct of student-athletes and athletics personnel, commitment to rules compliance, and student-athlete experience.

As proposed, external peer-review teams would examine the self-study of each institution. If the self-study is judged unsatisfactory and the institution is unable to correct the specified problems within a reasonable period of time, the institution could be placed in a probationary status for a period of up to one year. If problems still are not addressed properly, privileges as an active NCAA member could be reduced gradually through reclassification into restricted or corresponding membership.

Transfer provision

In its review of the plan, the special committee agreed with a suggestion from NCAA legal counsel that would allow student-athletes to transfer to another institution without loss of eligibility if the student-athlete's original institution is placed in a membership category that renders the institution ineligible for NCAA championship competition for the duration of the student-athlete's eligibility. The proposal is similar to legislation in place involving student-athletes who are affected

Cryer bucks tradition, ropes a new career

Lewis A. Cryer never called a meeting of the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Council together like this: "Yiiii haaaaa! Git along, little dogies." But this former Division I vice-president, who now is the commissioner of the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, says he could really run herd on those meetings.

Where are they now?

"I roped them and herded them right down the agenda," he joked.

Cryer hasn't followed a typical agenda for the up-and-coming executive.

From San Luis Obispo, Cryer went to Stockton, California, where he was the assistant athletics director at the University of the Pacific (California), and then to the University of Oregon, where he was the associate director of athletics.

His next step was more like a large leap. Without any experience as an athletics director, Cryer was named the commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, later renamed the Big West Conference. It was there that Cryer became involved in the NCAA structure.

Committee considering deregulation

In carrying out one of its main duties, the NCAA Legislative Review Committee is examining approaches to deregulation — specifically, reducing the size and complexity of the 473-page NCAA Manual.

Solutions to these problems were the focus of the committee's March 16-18 meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina.

The committee will offer to the NCAA Council in April the following approaches for cutting the Manual down in size and for simplifying the rules as they appear in the book:

- One option the committee will suggest to the Council is to eliminate duplication. Specific legislation is repeated several times in the Manual. The best example of replication is in the playing and practice-seasons legislation in Bylaw 17. Currently, much of the legislation is repeated 20 times — once in each sport section.

That option would reduce the number of pages in the Manual by taking a different approach to organizing information. All general information concerning playing and practice seasons would be organized at the beginning of Bylaw 17, and only differences from sport to sport would be mentioned in each sport section.

- Another option forwarded to the Council is simplification of the legislation contained in the Manual. An example of simplification would be to eliminate exceptions to the transfer rule outlined in Bylaw 14. Eight pages in the 1992-93 Manual are devoted to the transfer regulation, with the majority of that space outlining exceptions to the rule. If all exceptions were eliminated, the transfer rule would be simpler to

Other highlights

In other action at its recent meeting, the NCAA Legislative Review Committee:

- Discussed the issue of adopting rules on a sport-by-sport basis. NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz mentioned in his "State of the Association" address at the 1992 NCAA Convention the possibility of federating rules on a sport-by-sport basis. His thoughts originated from a coaches' meeting conducted by the NCAA last April in Kansas City, Missouri.

The committee will advise the Council that it believes a mechanism for adopting rules on a sport-by-sport basis exists and that expanded use of the mechanism is worth reviewing.

Playing and practice-seasons legislation in Bylaw 17 can be adopted on a sport-by-sport basis; the committee said expanding this process beyond Bylaw 17 should be considered carefully and initially should be done only for playing and practice-seasons rules and recruiting regulations.

The committee said that only if that effort is successful should the process be expanded to include other areas of legislation.

understand and to apply. Such changes require legislative action by the NCAA Convention.

- The final option the committee discussed is to eliminate obsolete and unnecessary legislation.

"The committee will ask the Council for direction as to whether deregulation is worth pursuing, and if so, what direction should be taken in pursuing it," said Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services and staff liaison to the committee.

Mitchell said the committee will wait for the Council's reactions before planning a course of action for reducing the size and complexity of the Manual.

Elmira athlete's condition improved

Mike McNamara, a sophomore ice hockey player at Elmira College, regained consciousness March 19, five days after he hit his head on the ice during an NCAA Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship quarterfinal game against State University College at Plattsburgh.

The 21-year old McNamara, who fell to the ice after a legal check by a Plattsburgh defenseman, suffered severe trauma to his head that resulted in bleeding between the brain and skull, Elmira's athletics trainer John Oliphant told The Associated Press. McNamara had no pulse for almost a minute while Oliphant performed cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

He was listed in satisfactory and stable condition March 23 at Champlain Valley Physicians Hospital Medical Center in Plattsburgh, New York.

Oliphant said the severity of McNamara's injury likely would have been worse had he not been wearing a helmet, which is required by NCAA rules.

1992 Column No. 13

Bylaw 30.10.5-(g) — May evaluation period — Division I football

Division I institutions should note that the NCAA Administrative Committee, during its March 11, 1992, conference, utilized its authority per NCAA Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to amend the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 30.10.5-(g) to indicate that an institution has the discretion to count Saturdays in the 15-consecutive day evaluation period during the month of May. The committee took such action on the recommendation of the NCAA Interpretations Committee to reflect the intent of the sponsors of 1992 Convention Proposal No. 136 to permit (but not mandate) institutions to count Saturdays in the 15-consecutive day evaluation period in the month of May.

Bylaws 14.3.2.4 and 14.3.2.5 — nonqualifier/partial qualifier — practice activities, outside competition

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that a student-athlete who is not a qualifier and who, therefore, is not eligible for practice may not attend any practice sessions in any capacity, nor any meeting characterized as practice under Bylaw 17.02.12. During its February 25, 1992, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a nonqualifier/partial qualifier may not sit with an institution's team (e.g., on the bench, in the dugout, on the sidelines) during any contest in which the member institution's team participates. In addition, during the first year of enrollment, a partial qualifier or nonqualifier is not permitted to participate in practice activities or engage in competition on an institutional club team or an outside sports team. A partial qualifier or nonqualifier may, however, participate in the institution's intramural program (provided the intramural team is not coached by a member of the institution's athletics department staff).

Bylaw 13.1.2.4-(b) — telephone contact

Divisions I and II member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.1.2.4-(b), it is not permissible for institutional staff members to telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) prior to July 1 following the prospect's completion of the junior year in high school; thereafter, staff members shall not telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) more than once per week. Staff members are not subject to the once-per-week limitation and, thus, may make unlimited telephone calls to prospective student-athletes during the following periods: (1) during the five days immediately preceding the prospect's official visit to that institution; (2) during the day of a permissible in-person, off-campus contact, provided the call is made from the prospect's home community; (3) on the initial date for signing the National Letter of Intent and during the two days immediately following the initial signing date; (4) in the sport of Division I football only, during the period 48 hours prior to and 48 hours after 8 a.m. on the initial signing date for the National Letter of Intent, and (5) subsequent to the prospect's signing of a National Letter of Intent with that institution.

In Division I, institutional staff members may accept collect telephone calls placed by prospective student-athletes, provided the calls are placed not earlier than July 1 following completion of the prospect's junior year in high school. An institution may not utilize a toll-free (1-800) number to receive telephone calls from prospective student-athletes, prospects' parents or legal guardians. The NCAA Council, during its January 6, 1992, meeting, determined that a Division I institution may continue to utilize a toll-free (1-800) number outside of the athletics department (e.g., admissions department), provided the toll-free number is available to all prospective students. In Division II, institutional staff members may accept collect telephone calls and may utilize a toll-free (1-800) number to receive telephone calls placed by prospective student-athletes, prospects' parents or legal guardians at any time.

In both Divisions I and II, institutional staff members may receive telephone calls placed by a prospect at the prospect's own expense at any time (including prior to July 1 following the prospect's junior year in high school). There is no restriction on the content of the conversation that may occur during telephone calls placed at the prospect's own expense. Finally, Divisions I and II staff members are not permitted to telephone a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) during the conduct of any of the institution's intercollegiate athletics contests in that sport.

If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Knight follow-up commends NCAA

The Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics urged Congress and state legislatures March 17 to "stand aside while college and university leaders complete the job" of reforming college sports.

The commission, in a follow-up to the initial report it issued a year ago, said "substantial progress" has been made. It said 10 of its 20 recommendations, on such issues as coaches' incomes and athletes' grades, have been adopted by the NCAA.

"College sports are far different today than they were a year ago, so this is no time for detours through the courtroom, the state capitol, or the halls of Congress," the report said.

"We urge our colleagues in the world of intercollegiate athletics to persevere," the commission said. "Equally important, we ask our friends in the world of public policy and legislation to stand aside while college and university leaders complete the job."

Dissenting opinion

U.S. Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, a member of the commission, agreed that as a result of the commission's work "college presidents have far more control of college sports than ever before."

However, McMillen disagreed with the report's "assertion that the Federal government does not have a positive role to play in the reform process."

McMillen is the sponsor of legislation that would grant the NCAA a five-year antitrust exemption for football and basketball and an exemption for the Association and its member institutions from the unrelated business income tax, provided that the NCAA complies with a number of conditions including adoption of a new revenue-distribution plan.

McMillen's bill would reverse a 1984 Supreme Court decision permitting universities to negotiate freely for broadcast rights.

"Until that ruling is overturned by Congress, and college presidents have the tools they need to distribute the wealth more evenly, the pattern of abuse will continue," McMillen said. "Until educational goals, instead of economic goals, guide our college sports programs, higher education will continue to skirt the legal definition of a full-scale business."

But the latest Knight Commission report commended the NCAA for actions at the Association's 1991 and 1992 Conventions that embraced goals set forth last year by the panel.

Those sessions produced NCAA rules changes that, among other actions, tighten athletes' admission standards as well as requirements for academic progress during their college careers.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, cochair of the Knight Commission and president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame, told The Associated Press: "It was appropriate to focus attention on academic reforms first. . . . Now we look forward to the same kind of progress in other important areas, particularly certification."

Potential pitfalls

The panel, however, said that progress still faces potential pitfalls.

One of these, it said, is "the temptation to 'fine tune' out of existence the reforms" already enacted. It noted there have been several requests to the NCAA for "special consideration"—meaning exemptions from the new rules for one reason or another. "Individually, these exceptions may have merit, (but) collectively they overwhelm reform," the commission said.

The panel also warned against Federal or state legislative attempts to control collegiate athletics standards, saying they "threaten more harm than good" and are a "poor precedent for dealing with the private sector, profit or nonprofit."

Similarly, the commission noted with disapproval that four states already have passed laws preventing the NCAA from enforcing its new rules within their borders without local court approval, and that six other states are considering such restrictions.

The panel said, "If national governing bodies for intercollegiate athletics cannot ensure fair play through common compliance procedures across 50 states... nationwide intercollegiate competition as we have known it will not survive."

The commission particularly endorsed new NCAA rules that:

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh

- Require Division I athletes to complete fixed percentages of the requirements for a degree in order to compete in their third, fourth and fifth years of enrollment.

- Require those same athletes to have 90 and 95 percent of the minimum grades necessary to graduate in order to compete in their third and fourth years, respectively.

- Order coaches to obtain written approval from their college presidents for all athletically related income.

- Prohibit athletes from taking more than one-fourth of their required annual coursework in summer school.

Committee considers rule to allow continued eligibility after pro draft

Student-athletes who declare themselves eligible for a professional league's draft may have the option of retaining their collegiate eligibility if legislation proposed by the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee is adopted.

At its annual meeting March 15-17 in New Orleans, Louisiana, the committee voted to recommend that the NCAA Council sponsor legislation that would allow student-athletes (specifically underclassmen) to enter a professional draft in a particular sport and be allowed 30 days after selection in the draft to make a decision to turn professional or return to school.

If the student-athlete decides to turn professional, he or she then would forfeit any remaining eligibility; however, a decision to return to school would permit the student-athlete to retain all remaining eligibility without penalty. Under such a plan, the student-athlete still would not be permitted to retain an agent.

Current rule

Currently, under NCAA Bylaw 12.2.4.2, a student-athlete loses collegiate eligibility in a particular sport when that individual asks to be placed on the draft list or supplemental draft list of a professional league in that sport. That is true regardless of whether the student-athlete withdraws his or her name from the draft list before the actual draft; remains on the list but is not drafted, or is drafted but does not sign an agreement with any professional athletics team.

In recommending the proposal, it was the committee's position that student-athletes, particularly in the sports of basketball and football, should have the opportunity to determine their market value with a professional organization through entering that professional league's draft.

Individuals in the sports of basketball and football now must provide written consent to be drafted. By doing so, they render themselves ineligible. By comparison, individuals in the sports of baseball and ice hockey are drafted without their consent and have an opportunity to gauge their market value—by learning of their place in the draft—without jeopardizing their eligibility.

Other highlights

In other actions at its recent meeting, the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee:

- Recommended to the NCAA Council that national forums be conducted for student-athletes (specifically underclassmen) with professional potential to provide them with insight into and information about various aspects of professional athletics.

- Met with National Hockey League officials to discuss NCAA legislation pertaining to Canada's Major Junior A League. Currently, a player who has participated on the Major Junior A level is not eligible to participate at a member institution.

- Declined to support the creation of group tryouts for draft-eligible student-athletes for all sports, similar to the National Football League's combine. Such action would require an amendment to Bylaws 12.2.1.1 and 12.2.1.2.

- Recommended that the Council sponsor a revision of Bylaw 12.6.1.4 permitting member institutions' athletics programs to receive donations in kind (e.g., equipment, apparel) from professional sports organizations. Currently, donations are permissible only if the money is placed in the institution's general fund and used for purposes other than athletics, or the money is placed in the institution's general scholarship fund and commingled with funds for the assistance of all students generally.

- Asked that the Council approve a revision to Bylaw 11.1.5 that would allow member institutions' coaches to "market"—without compensation—a student-athlete to an agent or professional team. Such action currently is prohibited.

- Recommended to the Council that it sponsor legislation liberalizing Bylaw 12.6.1.6.1 so that member institutions would be allowed to conduct an athletics event in conjunction with a professional team's contest.

- Referred the issue of banning tobacco from all collegiate athletics contests to the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports for review. The Professional Sports Liaison Committee supports the concept.

- Approved recommendations by its summer baseball subcommittee regarding amendments to Bylaw 30.12.6 related to employment opportunities and planning and schedule requirements.

- Met with Major League Baseball representatives and college baseball representatives regarding new draft regulations recently approved by Major League Baseball owners (see March 11 issue of The NCAA News). The regulations provide that a team that drafts a player owns his professional rights for a period of five years.

Rewire football recruiting before it short circuits

By Bill Meyers
Assistant football coach
University of Pittsburgh

One of the many diverse functions of the NCAA is the task of regulating college football. Given the wide range of structural problems that currently exists at the Division I-A level, it's obviously easier said than done.

But if the NCAA's goal is to maintain a level playing field for the 106 Division I-A programs; if the idea is to create a healthier climate on campuses for young student-athletes; if its design is to improve the academic environment, diminish fiscal irresponsibility and help reduce the alarming number of embarrassing off-the-field incidents that recently have plagued college football, then the time has come to completely rewire the football recruiting process.

No one magic elixir can be all things to all people associated with college football. But those who care about the game and the young people who play it no longer can look for a quick fix or a finger-in-the-dike approach to restructuring the system. With a reform movement in the air for all of college athletics, it is time for the NCAA to look well into the 21st century and take some steps now to improve the recruiting process that will remain viable in the decades to come.

Even the casual reader of the sports pages knows there are pervasive problems in college football, ranging from academic and financial abuses to improper social and ethical conduct. College football's many problems are manifested by this sobering statistic: In the three years before 1991, 51 of 106 Division I-A head coaching jobs changed hands. Thirty-three of those 51 changes—more than half—were the result of firings.

The frequency and normal timing of those coaching

He also has coached at Santa Clara University and the University of California, Berkeley. He is a 1972 graduate of Stanford University, where he played on two Rose Bowl champions.

changes underscores a hidden, yet dramatic, flaw in the current recruiting process.

Head coaches who are hired during the heavy recruiting season, which for most programs is in December and January, almost always have difficulty salvaging a successful recruiting class for that year. Consequently, some newly hired head coaches who begin their duties late in the recruiting process may be more tempted to take a chance on an academically (or socially) risky prospect than they otherwise would be.

Coaches tend to be hired because of a predecessor's inability to win enough games. In many cases, a new coach initially will receive a four- or five-year contract so that any comprehensive evaluation of his coaching ability will allow him to be judged based on his assembly of a team composed entirely of his own recruits.

Those fourth and fifth years of a coach's tenure—depending on the degree of redshirting being done in the program—are when the players in a coach's first recruiting class become seniors. But often a coach's first senior class, the one on which he depends for leadership, is actually his weakest class because of his initial late start in recruiting.

Of course, if the coach doesn't succeed on the field, he is destined to be fired. Then the cycle begins all over again. That's great for realtors and the moving industry. But it's bad business and fiscally unsound for colleges to fire, pay off, hire and move entire coaching staffs every four or five years.

Can anything be done about all of this?

The answer is yes.

First, the official contact periods designated for recruiting high-school seniors should be moved from the current period (early December to early February) to the early spring (March and April, for instance). This would allow coaches and college admissions offices to more accurately evaluate prospective student-athletes because the high-school senior's fall transcript—as well as any November, December or January SAT scores—would be more readily available for analysis.

This change would prove especially helpful in evaluating the potential of marginal students to succeed and in predicting their capacity to improve. It also would remove coaches who are hired in December or January from behind the recruiting eight ball and give them a chance to more effectively organize and plan their first—and often most important—recruiting class.

Another benefit: Moving the contact period to the spring would permit coaches at colleges that have earned bowl invitations to prepare and enjoy the fruits of their labor unencumbered by the present simultaneous burden of full-fledged recruiting.

Boisterous crowds need more control

I am disturbed by an increasing lack of respect shown by college basketball fans.

It is not surprising these days to watch players taunt each other and the officials. Many players even admit that such behavior is condoned by the coaches. Fans at hockey games cheer excessively when fights break out, and now the same behavior is gaining momentum on the basketball court.

Letter to the editor

This year, I attended a number of Big East Conference games. The fans often responded in what I consider an inappropriate manner.

When an opposing player missed a shot, in addition to and instead of "airball," a profane expletive often was substituted. When an official made a call that the fans did not approve of, the choice of language was scurrilous.

The examples are endless, but they seem to be increasingly accepted by the majority of fans, players, coaches and officials. Television carries the chants and antics to the home, enabling the voices to range far beyond the playing arena.

If a technical can be given for fans throwing cups or paper onto the court, why can't a technical foul be assessed when fans display a lack of civility?

I advocate this rule to help the game of basketball and to help prevent American fans from becoming like their foreign counterparts. Foul mouths are reproachful and deserve a foul call.

"It's a difficult thing. But belly-aching won't do a bit of good. In fact, it would only make things worse. I don't want to come off like a crybaby because that's exactly what I'm not and exactly what I don't want our players to be. It's not the end of the world."

Northwestern University

Chicago Tribune

"The new rules give me a better chance than the other guys (former Northwestern coaches) had. The reduction in scholarships from 95 to 85 over the next several years means there will be 10 more players available to me."

"The reduction in visits this year from 85 to 70 means there are 15 players who couldn't visit Notre Dame or Ohio State or Michigan."

"Also, the increasing academic standard, while it reduces the talent pool, in some ways helps us. I find that the better the student, the wider his scope. If I can talk to players who want to see beyond four or five years and see the next 35 to 40 years, I have a product no one else has."

"I've always had a certain fascination with Northwestern. When I was growing up in St. Louis, they were ranked No. 1 in the country. I was familiar with their academics. I knew what a Northwestern education could do. Unfortunately, I wasn't bright enough to go there."

Roy F. Kramer, chair

"If it involves staying up half the night, we stay through that process. There's a lot of work, a lot of sweat and a lot of red eyes when we finish on Sunday. We've got to be able to look ourselves in the mirror the next morning and say we did the best possible job we could."

Stewart Watkins, basketball player
Morehouse College

The Atlanta Journal

"Academics come before athletics. As a matter of fact, it's more competitive in the classroom than it is on the basketball court. Most of the students were in the top 10 percent of their high-school classes, so it's a battle day in and day out. You've got to be on your toes in that kind of environment.

"An athlete doesn't get any special treatment, and I like that."

Chris Mortensen, columnist

The Sporting News

"It is clear that the trust between college (football) coaches and NFL scouts is deteriorating. College coaches don't want their films of players to be removed or duplicated because they think all scouts are grading their underclassmen."

"Well, that isn't such a bad idea."

"For the most part, NFL scouts and coaches aren't interested in underclassmen, and a better evaluation might lead to better communication. In other words, NFL scouts just might be able to convince a player that he is wasting his time and lowering his value by leaving school early."

"But the bottom line is, as (NFL Commissioner) Paul Tagliabue noted and as the NCAA itself has testified before Congress, the players' rights come first. Any college student has the inalienable right to pursue work at any time. No law requires a student to stay in school before he or she seeks employment. That includes football players."

"If they make a bad decision, they have to pay for it. It is one of the first lessons of life."

Nolan Richardson, men's basketball coach
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville

The Sporting News

"You guys in the media put too much emphasis on the coaches. (Coaches) don't worry about the coaches. As you go down the road in the tournament, you're going to see better and better athletes."

Rewire football

If the official contact period for seniors were moved to the spring, another anachronism in the current system—the spring recruiting of high-school juniors—could be eliminated. And spring recruiting as it exists now is another warp in the recruiting process, an expensive extravagance with questionable value.

Under the present rules, coaches may visit high schools in the spring and look at film or videotape of a junior prospect (or watch him play baseball or compete in track and field). But there can be no physical contact between the college coach and the high-school junior during the spring. So we have coaches flying all over the country and running up their expense accounts when virtually the same function (viewing film and tape) could be accomplished via the mail without leaving the office—at significant cost savings.

Moving the senior contact period to March and April also would conflict with spring football at the college level. But that is no problem at all. Spring football could be easily eliminated and fall practice could be extended by one week.

Spring football certainly is not a necessity. First of all, it inhibits the ability of some players to focus on their studies in the off-season. In the current system, underclassmen worry about securing a spot on the depth chart in the spring to increase their odds of playing in the fall. Instead of expending energy on their own academic progress, term papers and finals, players are concerned about pleasing their coaches during spring drills.

And there is the injury factor.

The NCAA has kept statistics regarding football injuries in the spring and fall, calculated on the basis of numbers of practice exposures and by injuries per 1,000.

During the three-year period from 1988 to 1990, the NCAA found that despite having more than 700,000 fewer practice exposures, spring football produced more than twice the number of injuries per 1,000 exposures as in the fall. (There are two reasons for this: First, coaches generally have more physically intensive practices in the spring. Second, the overall physical condition of the squad is nowhere near the peak achieved in the fall.)

Most Division I-A programs have excellent strength and conditioning coaches, and many of them believe spring football is actually a detriment to the physical conditioning cycle ideal for today's college football player. Because of spring football, a player's individual workout program changes from building strength and conditioning to one of maintaining in-season levels. That not only interrupts the conditioning cycle but actually sets it back.

The addition of a week of practice in the fall in place of spring football would not significantly inhibit the teaching process. With 13 additional cohesive, uninterrupted practices in the fall—only two fewer than the 15 now allotted in the spring—the objectives coaches usually strive for in the spring could be attained in the fall.

The extension of fall camp also could accelerate the integration of incoming freshmen into the university structure, particularly if the current three-day combined orientation for both football and academics were altered to allow several days of uninterrupted academics-only orientation for freshmen.

By giving the incoming freshmen a head start both in their academic indoctrination and in their football preparation, we would be improving their odds to succeed both on and off the field. And that, after all, is what the caretakers of college football should be concerned with most.

Big Ten puts marketing effort in place

The Big Ten Conference and its 11 member universities have joined in the development of a cross-licensing program that will enable the conference to take advantage of marketing upscale, high-quality merchandise through the joint use of Big Ten member names, mascots and logos and the Big Ten Conference logo.

"We are pleased that we now have a mechanism in place that will enhance our image and allow us to promote our valuable name and mark," said Charles Waddell, Big Ten assistant commissioner, who is coordinating the cross-licensing program. He said there has been increased interest in the commercial use of the Big Ten logo since it was introduced last year.

The new Big Ten mark incorporated the number "11" in its design to reflect the addition of Pennsylvania State University to the conference.

Merchandise that combines the school's logos with the conference logo is expected in the marketplace this year. In addition to joint-logo merchandise, items carrying the Big Ten mark only will be available.

The program is coordinated by the Licensing Resource Group (LRG), which successfully bid for the contract last fall. LRG, a licensing management service in Iowa City, Iowa, hopes to develop outlets and Big Ten retail-concept shops.

"The time is right to create a 'shop' concept for the Big Ten," Dickie Van Meter, a partner in LRG, said. "Other athletics entities have enjoyed great success with the concept-shop format, and we think consumers will react positively to the idea, which draws together the merchandising power of the Big Ten under one roof."

Similar cross-licensing programs have been established by the Ivy Group and Southeastern Conference.

Cardinal swimmers grab Division I women's title

Summer Sanders smashed three meet and two American records and competed on two record-breaking relay teams to lead Stanford to its third Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 19-21 at Texas.

Runners-up at the 1990 and 1991 meets, Stanford accumulated 735½ points, the second highest total in meet history, to outdistance two-time defending champion and seven-time team titlist Texas in a meet highlighted by 11 record-breaking performances, including 10 American marks.

Stanford, which rebounded after falling behind by 38½ points on the first day, smashed eight records to give coach Richard Quick his second team title at Stanford and seventh of his career. Quick coached Texas to five consecutive titles from 1984 to 1988 before joining the Cardinal.

Florida finished third with 294½ points, while Southern Methodist and Arizona rounded out the top five. Florida's third-place finish, coupled with the one-two showing by Stanford and Texas, made it 10 consecutive years that the trio has claimed the top three spots.

Sanders, who was named outstanding swimmer of the meet for the second consecutive year, set meet records in the 200-yard butterfly (where she finished nearly four seconds ahead of her nearest competitor) and 200- and 400-yard individual medleys. The butterfly mark eclipsed her own meet record of 1:54.17, set last year.

In the individual medleys, Sanders set both meet and American records. Clocking in at 1:55.54 in the 200, Sanders surpassed her own American record of 1:57.02. Her time of 4:02.28 in the 400 was nearly three seconds better than her meet record of last year and cut 2.35 seconds off the American standard set by Tracy Caulkins in 1981.

Swimming the third leg of the 200 and 400 yard medley relays, Sanders helped Stanford to meet- and American-record times of 1:38.68 and 3:35.64, respectively. Stanford's 200-yard medley time was its second record in that event in two days; the Cardinal's time of 1:39.88 in the preliminaries broke the previous meet mark of 1:39.88 by Texas in 1987. Meanwhile, Stanford's 400 medley relay time cut more than two seconds off the American mark of 3:38.17, set by the Cardinal in 1987.

Jenny Thompson and Lea Loveless joined Sanders on the 200-yard medley relay team and also guided the Cardinal 800-yard freestyle relay team to an American record, in addition to setting their own individual marks.

Competing in her first NCAA championships, Thompson became the first Cardinal swimmer to win both the 50- and 100-yard freestyles since Jenna Johnson in 1987. Thompson's time of 47.61 in the 100 surpassed the meet record of 48.26 set by Florida's Dara Torres in 1988 and eclipsed the American record of 48.20 set by Angel Myers in 1988.

Loveless captured the 100-yard backstroke title, then shattered the meet record at that length while competing for the Cardinal in the 400-yard medley relay. Loveless' 52.79 during a preliminary of the medley relay competition beat the American record of 53.98 set by Betsy Mitchell of Texas in 1987.

In the 800-yard freestyle relay, Thompson and Loveless combined with Karen Kraemer and Janel Jorgensen to complete the event in 7:04.06, nearly three seconds better than the American mark of 7:06.56 set by Florida in 1988.

Standouts Crissy Ahmann-Leighton of Arizona, Nicole Haislett of Florida and Whitney Hedgepeth of Texas also won titles in record-breaking fashion. Ahmann-Leighton, winner of the 1991 100-yard butterfly and American-record-holder, became the first American woman to finish in under 52 seconds in that event with a 51.75 time.

Haislett became the first American woman to break 1:44.00 in the 200-yard freestyle, touching the wall in 1:43.28. She shattered the meet record of 1:44.78 set by Mitzi Kremer of Clemson in 1989 and Cynthia Woodhead's 1979 American mark of 1:44.10. Haislett became the first swimmer in the meet to win that event twice in a row.

Hedgepeth set an American record during the preliminaries of the 200-yard backstroke, then reset the mark in the final, clocking in at 1:52.98. She beat the mark of 1:55.16 set by Texas' Mitchell in 1988.

Kenyon swimmers win 13th in a row

No. 13 unlucky?

Maybe, but you wouldn't think so based on the performance Kenyon turned in at the NCAA Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 19-21 at Buffalo.

Led by John Landreth and Brian Dowdall, coach Jim Steen's squad avoided all misfortune to register 646 points—285 more than runner-up UC San Diego—and coast to its 13th consecutive team title.

The point and margin-of-victory totals were the second highest in meet history. Kenyon recorded 653½ points in winning the 1990 title and last year's team won by 313½ points.

UC San Diego's second-place finish was its third in four years. Denison, under the guidance of former Kenyon standout Gregg Parini, was third, while Hope, Allegheny and St. Olaf filled out the top six. Wisconsin-Stevens Point, which returned to the championships for the first time since 1984, was seventh.

Landreth, who earned swimmer-of-the-meet honors, won the 100-yard butterfly and repeated as champion in the 200-yard individual medley. He also swam on each of Kenyon's four winning relay teams, including the Lords' 400-yard medley relay team, which posted a meet-record time of 3:21.62. The mark bettered UC San Diego's two-year-old record by more than two seconds.

Dowdall tied a meet record with three individual titles, repeating in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles and adding a record-time victory in the 100-yard butterfly to his list of accomplishments. He also swam on three winning relay teams, including the 400-yard medley.

John Cave and Chad Stedman also claimed titles for the Lords. Cave, who teamed with Landreth and Dowdall in the record-breaking 400-yard medley relay, became the first Kenyon swimmer to win the 200-yard breaststroke. Stedman earned his first career title by beating the 1,650-yard freestyle field by nearly five seconds.

While Kenyon dominated the meet, several notable performances were turned in by non-Kenyon swimmers.

Louis Petto of New Paltz State headed the list, winning the 200- and 500-yard freestyles. The titles were the first for a New Paltz State swimmer in Division III championships history and marked a remarkable improvement for Petto, who finished 16th in the 200 and ninth in the 500 last year.

Joseph Turi became John Carroll's first swimming titlist, winning the 100-yard breaststroke.

Massachusetts-Dartmouth's Thomas Egan won both diving events to earn diver-of-the-meet honors.

Jay Gindin of Case Reserve edged Landreth by .09 seconds to win the 200-yard butterfly and, in the process, end Kenyon's three-year reign in that event.

UC San Diego's 200-yard freestyle relay team prevented a Kenyon sweep of the relay events. The Tritons' triumph marked the first time in that event's five-year history that a team other than Kenyon has won.

Calvin relies on superior defense to gain Division III basketball title

Calvin's Steve Honderd scored a game-high 25 points and held Rochester standout Chris Fite to just 11 to lead his Knights to a 62-49 victory and their first NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship title.

The championship was held March 21 at Wittenberg.

Honderd, the tournament's most outstanding player, was eight of 14 from the field and nine of 11 from the line, but more importantly, he held Fite scoreless from the field in the first half. Fite, the 1990 tournament's most outstanding player, was averaging 21.0 points entering the game.

Calvin led by as many as 10 points in the first half. Rochester pulled to within six with 57 seconds remaining in the first period as Fite hit two free throws. Honderd answered with two free throws at the 35-second mark to give Calvin a 32-24 half-time lead.

The Knights stretched their lead to 14 early in the second half, leading, 40-26, with just over 16 minutes remaining. Rochester cut the margin to five, 49-44, on a jumper by Martin Ryan with 4:25 left in the game. Calvin answered with a 13-5 run to close out the game. The Knights connected on seven of eight free throws in that stretch.

Mike LeFebvre scored 12 points for Calvin. Kyle Meeker led Rochester with 13 points.

Calvin ended its season with a 31-1 record. Rochester finished with a 28-3 mark. Calvin defeated Jersey City State, 81-40, in the semifinals, while Rochester beat Wisconsin-Platteville, 61-48, to advance to the final game.

Wisconsin-Platteville won the third-place game, defeating Jersey City State, 72-61.

Joining Honderd on the all-tournament team were teammates LeFebvre and Matt Harrison and Fite and Meeker.

Alma women win institution's first NCAA championship

Lauri LeBeau scored 15 of her 23 points in the second half, leading Alma to a 79-75 victory over host Moravian for the NCAA Division III Women's Basketball Championship. The win was the Scots' first NCAA team championship in any sport.

The championship was March 21 at Moravian.

Alma trailed Moravian, 43-40, at half time. The Greyhounds increased their lead to five, 62-57, with just over 10 minutes remaining in the game, but LeBeau hit a layup and a three-pointer from the right wing to tie the score at 62-62.

Moravian went back up by three on a three-pointer by Susan Zimmerman and a basket by Kathy Beck. LeBeau tied the score again at 67-67 with two free throws at the 4:33 mark. Moravian's Amy Endler countered with two free throws, but LeBeau's 10-foot jumper sparked a 6-0 run that put Alma up for good. Free throws by Colleen Wruble with five seconds left provided the final margin.

The win by Alma, 24-3, snapped Moravian's 42-game home-court win streak.

In addition to LeBeau's 23 points, Alma got 20 points and 10 rebounds from Katie Mans. Moravian, 31-2, was led by Beck's 23 points and Zimmerman's 18 points.

Iowa wrestlers finish first 'the old-fashioned way'

In the weeks leading up to the Division I Wrestling Championships, few people doubted that Iowa would win its second straight team title. The only question was whether the Hawkeyes would set a record for team points in the process.

They didn't. But that was about the only disappointment in the Hawkeyes' performance at the March 19-21 tournament in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. On the way to their 13th team championship and 11th under coach Dan Gable, the defending champions amassed 149 points, claimed three individual titles and earned nine all-America honors.

Iowa's point total, the fourth-highest in championships history, was nine short of the tournament record of 158 set by the school's 1986 squad. A team penalty point left the Hawkeyes one point short of the mark last year.

For the second straight year, Oklahoma State (100½ points) and Penn State (89½ points) finished second and third, respectively. Iowa State suffered three upsets to lower-seeded wrestlers and settled for fourth place with 72½ points.

Even though Iowa did not officially clinch the title until the consolation finals on the morning of the last day, any chances for a major upset all but disappeared when the Hawkeyes advanced all 10 of their qualifiers to the quarterfinals.

Iowa wrestlers advanced to the finals in the first four weight classes. After Chad Zaputit lost a 2-0 decision to Penn State's Jeff Prescott in a rematch of the 1991 118-pound final, Iowa's Terry Brands (126 pounds), Tom Brands (134) and Troy Steiner (142) won convincingly to claim the team's three individual crowns. It was the third title for Tom Brands and the second for his twin brother, who won in 1990 and lost in the finals last year. Tom Brands was named the tournament's outstanding wrestler.

"There are not many wrestlers who wrestle like they do," said Gable of his three champions. "They did it what I call the old-fashioned way: You get after them, you get them down, you grind on them, take the air out of them, and stay on them all the time. They did a heck of a job controlling their opponents."

Pat Smith was the only one of Oklahoma State's five finalists to claim a title, defeating Ray Miller of Arizona State, 3-1, in the 158-pound final. It was the third straight title for the junior, who is poised to become the first wrestler to claim four Division I championships.

Other repeat champions included Matt Demaray of Wisconsin (150) and heavyweight Kurt Angle of Clarion. Demaray won for the second straight year, and Angle reclaimed the title he won in 1990 but lost in last year's finals. Angle's 3-2 victory ended a remarkable string of matches for North Carolina State's Sylvester Terkay, who pinned four straight opponents in less than two minutes. Terkay won the award for most falls in the tournament.

Winning their first titles were Steiner, Charles Jones of Purdue (167), Kevin Randleman of Ohio State (177) and Mark Kerr of Syracuse (190).

Plattsburgh State lets good times roll with Division III ice hockey crown

Plattsburgh State officially joined the ranks of NCAA champions with a 7-3 victory on home ice March 21 over three-time defending champion Wisconsin-Stevens Point in the Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Plattsburgh State won the 1987 Division III championship but later vacated the title because of rules violations.

"It's great for our program and our community," said coach Bob Emery. "We went through some good times and some bad. I'm just happy to be a part of Cardinal hockey right now."

"We just kept buzzing, buzzing, buzzing. Stevens Point had to play catch-up all night, and that's not the best way to coach. We came out like a bunch of greyhounds, and that was the key to the game. We got 20 shots in the first period; we just threw everything at them."

The Cardinals got on the board first at 9:34 in the first period when Larry Zinger tucked the rebound of a Chris Fess shot just inside the left post. Fess and Jim Duran then scored two quick goals to give the Cardinals a 3-0 lead at the end of the period.

Said Fess, "We knew we had to make them play our style. Up and down, fast, quick. We were more disciplined than they were."

The Pointers' Paul Caufield, the most outstanding player at the 1990 championship and the leading scorer of last year's tournament, ended his team's scoring drought at 9:52 in the second period, and it appeared the momentum was beginning to shift. But after the Pointers received two minor penalties at 13:50, giving the Cardinals a two-man advantage, Steve Moore knocked in a rebound shot at 15:31 for a 4-1 Plattsburgh State lead.

After the Cardinals scored a short-handed goal at the 7:11 mark of the third period, the Pointers rallied with two scores. Sean Marsan made it 5-2 at 9:04, then Scott Krueger scored his 22nd goal of the season with a man advantage at 14:37.

But with 2:29 left in the third period, John Peron set off a wild celebration for the home fans when his 12th goal of the season made it 6-3. Matt Furtado added an empty-net goal for Plattsburgh State at the end of the game.

Said Wisconsin-Stevens Point coach Joe Baldarotta, "My kids worked hard. They were a threat to the end and they went down swinging."

Runner, gymnast selected to receive $10,000 Walter Byers Scholarships

Cross country and track athlete David M. Honea and gymnast Sigall Kassutto are this year's choices to receive the Association's Walter Byers Scholarships.

Honea, of North Carolina State University, and Kassutto, of the University of California, Berkeley, each will receive a $10,000 scholarship from the Association. They were selected from among six finalists who were interviewed March 23 in Chicago by the Walter Byers Scholarship Committee.

The Byers scholarships were established in 1988 to recognize the contributions of the former NCAA executive director by encouraging excellence in academic performance by student-athletes.

Award recipients are required to have a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale), show evidence of superior character and leadership, and demonstrate that participation in athletics has been a positive influence on personal and intellectual development, among other qualifications.

Following is a look at this year's Byers scholars and their accomplishments:

David M. Honea

Honea entered his final semester at North Carolina State with a perfect 4.000 GPA as an electrical engineering major.

He is a four-year letter winner in cross country who also has competed for the past two years in track. Last fall, as team captain, he led the Wolfpack cross country squad to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and an 11th-place finish at the Division I championships while earning all-America and all-conference honors.

Academically, Honea twice has been honored as the outstanding upperclassman in electrical engineering at North Carolina State. Last summer, he served an internship at the Sandia National Laboratories in New Mexico.

He also has pursued a number of extracurricular activities on campus, including service on the school's student senate and as a writer for the student newspaper. In addition, Honea serves on the student-athlete advisory board and is one of two student-athletes who serves on the university's athletics council. In the community, Honea volunteers as a reader in the Raleigh, North Carolina, elementary schools.

His postgraduate plans include pursuing a doctorate in electrical engineering, with the object of obtaining a professorship at a major research university.

Sigall Kassutto

Kassutto also held a perfect 4.000 GPA as she entered her final semester as a major in molecular and cell biology at California.

She was a silver medalist on the balance beam at the 1991 Pacific-10 Conference gymnastics championships and has been team cocaptain.

David M. Honea

Sigall Kassutto

In 1989, she was a silver medalist on the balance beam for the United States team in the World Maccabiah Games.

A candidate this year for the University Medal, which the university awards to the outstanding senior graduate, Kassutto is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. She has been involved in independent research on the influence of diet, vigorous training and hormone secretion on the incidence of amenorrhea in female athletes.

Kassutto frequently represents the California athletics department as a public speaker. She also has been a volunteer at two area hospitals and has worked with the Victory Games for cerebral palsy.

With aspirations to become a physician specializing in physical exercise and sports medicine, Kassutto plans to attend medical school.

Conference-administered compliance reviews win plaudits

By Ronald D. Mott
The NCAA News Staff

In the first few weeks of its existence, the NCAA Conference-Administered Compliance Review Program has been a helpful tool for the three conferences whose member institutions participated in the new service.

Implemented in February, the review is designed to help an institution examine its compliance efforts and, at the same time, to allow a conference office to become more familiar with the compliance programs and personnel in place throughout its membership. Staff members from the NCAA's compliance services department are working with conference officials initially to help them implement and administer a conference-wide compliance review system.

The Big South, Sun Belt and Ohio Valley Conferences have participated in the program, along with their members, Coastal Carolina College of the University of South Carolina, Jacksonville University and Southeast Missouri State University, respectively.

Those institutional representatives involved in the review program said the evaluations of their compliance efforts have been beneficial.

"It's been very helpful," said Jess

Dannelly

Voight

Richmond

Verner

Dannelly, assistant director of athletics and compliance officer at Coastal Carolina. "It really helps you to cover yourself in all avenues. We found out that we were covering most (areas) but not as completely as we could have. We have the basics down. We just have to refine them."

Mike Voight, director of athletic counseling at Jacksonville, said the evaluation of his institution's compliance efforts have spurred new approaches there. Specifically, a student-athlete handbook was created that will address the student-athlete's role in compliance. A guide to help other university staff members better understand their roles in maintaining a strong and effective compliance program also was developed.

"It was a positive experience overall," Voight said. "We knew before (the Big South Conference) came that our compliance program needed a little bit of a facelift. This was something for us to use as a guide. It was a great check for us. We do know we have some distance to go."

Lana Richmond, assistant director of athletics at Southeast Missouri State added: "We were delighted to have them come in and review our program here. We got immediate feedback during the interviews. We look at this whole process as positive feedback as to where we are. I think it's definitely going to be beneficial. We've got an extra person on the team to give us an overview of our program and give us feedback."

The review service is a voluntary, self-study exercise that is an alternative to the Institutional Self-Study Guide or NCAA compliance reviews.

"We're in a facilitating role," said John H. Leavens, assistant executive director of compliance services for the NCAA. "Conferences are probably in the best position to serve their members. This was a very logical extension to the services we wish to provide to the conferences. This kind of program that we're offering is really geared to conferences that are making initial efforts in this area."

Conference officials involved in the new service said the structure of the conference-administered compliance review program, which includes some preparation time before the two-day on-campus interviews and subsequent written report, has helped highlight an effective and cost-efficient manner in which conferences can review members' compliance programs.

"We came back with a much clearer understanding of ways compliance issues can be addressed without a lot of the extra funds associated with larger conferences," said Jon Verner, assistant commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference. "They're doing a lot of good things there (at Southeast Missouri State). Through the process of interviewing and spot-checking, you get a good idea just what kind of attention to compliance institutions are taking. We in the conference office may contact the schools (in the Ohio Valley) on our own and ask them if they would like for us to do this."

Robert Bernardi, assistant commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference, said the review program was an opportunity for both Jacksonville and the Sun Belt Conference to see compliance in another light.

"It's a great opportunity to further the compliance efforts of the school," Bernardi said of the program. "We'd like to see all of our schools do that. It's a learning opportunity for both the people within the campus community, and it's a learning opportunity for the conference office to see how the institution works internally. I highly recommend it to all of our institutions."

Tom Collins, assistant commissioner of the Big South Conference, said he has taken the basic tenets of the review he conducted at Coastal Carolina and has since reviewed the compliance program at Campbell University.

"Our goal is to conduct a review of each of our schools this spring," Collins said. "We hope to tie certification testing with this. We're in a position now where we're customizing it, and we're going with it. We think it's going to be an annual event with us."

Interpretations Committee minutes

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Offers and inducements/coaches—high school/clinics

1. Institution's coaches' clinic providing door prizes to high-school coaches. An institution may not provide a door prize to a high-school coach in conjunction with its institution's coaches' clinic, even if the cost of the prize is included in the cumulative admissions fee (i.e., the admissions fee charged to each person, when combined, would cover the cost of the prize). The committee noted that a high-school coach may receive a door prize selected in a random drawing at an institution's coaches' clinic, provided the prize is donated by a sponsor outside the institution (e.g., athletics manufacturer or distributor). Further, materials (e.g., clipboards, file folders) may be provided to each person attending the clinic, provided such items are included in the registration or admissions fee for each person.

Awards/extra benefits

2. Highlight film provided to student-athlete. An institution may provide a highlight film to a student-athlete as a permissible award, provided the retail value of the highlight film is included in the student-athlete's award limitations. [References: 16.1.2 (permissible awards); 16.1.3.2 (merchandise); 16.12.2.1 (extra benefits)]

Precollege expense

3. Institution loaning athletics equipment to prospective student-athletes. The committee declined to recommend that the Council reverse a previous NCAA Administrative Committee decision that permits an institution to loan shoes to participants in a high-school championship game under the following conditions: (1) The shoes are provided to all players in the contest; (2) use of the shoes is necessary to utilize the particular playing field; and (3) the institution does not provide any other equipment to the teams or the individual players. The committee noted that an institution providing such shoes must be located in the general locale of the high school or the event site. Expenses—practice/competition

4. Individual student-athletes required to remain on campus for practice or competition. An institution may provide the cost of room and board to individual student-athletes who are required to remain on campus for practice or competition during a vacation period, provided the institution's team has competition remaining during its playing season or is preparing for postseason competition. The committee noted that any practice sessions or competition during the

History suggests another top seed to be planted

By James M. Van Valkenburg
NCAA Director of Statistics

One No. 1 seed already is gone in this 54th Division I Men's Basketball Championship, and if history repeats, at least one more No. 1 will be bitten by the upset bug before the end of the Sweet 16 regional round.

Never have more than two No. 1-seeded teams reached the Final Four since team seeding began in 1979, and only four No. 1 seeds won the national championship in that span.

Men's basketball notes

The 1992 Sweet 16, led by top seeds Duke, UCLA and Ohio State, is rich in championship tradition. With five titles each, Indiana (three under Bob Knight) and Kentucky are tied for second to UCLA's 10 (all under the incomparable John Wooden). Duke under Mike Krzyzewski seeks to become the first repeat champion since UCLA in 1973. Ohio State under Randy Ayers is the only repeat No. 1 seed from 1991.

Several other former champions are on hand, including UTEP's Don "The Bear" Haskins, oldest coach in the Sweet 16 at 62 and a disciple of Henry Iba, Oklahoma State's living legend. Second oldest at 61 is North Carolina's Dean Smith, taught by another legend, Kansas' Forrest "Phog" Allen. Haskins used the four-corners made famous by Smith to oust the Midwest's No. 1 seed, Kansas. This is Smith's 12th straight Sweet 16—the record for a coach. The team record streak is 13 by UCLA through 1980, the first eight under Wooden. Smith's record 49 NCAA wins is two above Wooden (47-10, after a 3-9 NCAA start).

This tournament's youngest coach is still around, 33-year-old John Calipari, taking Massachusetts to its first Sweet 16. The field includes another Iba man, Eddie Sutton of Oklahoma State. Knight and Smith are the only coaches in history to both play and coach in an NCAA championship game.

Jim Harrick hopes to uphold UCLA's amazing NCAA history. As the chart on this page shows, UCLA is 14-1 in regional title games and 10-1 in national title games (losing only in 1980 under Larry Brown).

Kansas, second to Duke a year ago, became the ninth No. 1 seed to fall in the second round since team seeding began in 1979. The first was North Carolina (to Pennsylvania) in 1979. Then came DePaul (to UCLA) in 1980, Oregon State (to Kansas State) in 1981, DePaul (to St. Joseph's (Pennsylvania)) in 1981, DePaul (to Boston College) in 1982, Michigan (to Villanova) in 1985, St. John's (New York) to Auburn in 1986 and Oklahoma (to North Carolina) in 1990.

We define a major upset as at least five places in the seeding (such as 11 over 6 or 7 over 2) because that means the two teams were at least 16 places apart in the rankings used for regional seeding. By that definition there have been five major upsets so far, fewest at this stage since 64-team fields began in 1985. However, they packed a major punch, particularly in the Midwest, where the top three seeds went down. The buzzer-beater heroics (including Seton Hall's to avoid a major upset by La Salle) added to the drama of the March Madness. Here is the list:

1992 Major Upsets

Rd.	Winner (seed)	Loser (seed)	Score
1	New Mexico State (12)	DePaul (5)	81-73
1	Southwestern Louisiana (13)	Oklahoma (4)	87-83
1	East Tennessee State (14)	Arizona (3)	87-80
2	Georgia Tech (7)	Southern Cal (2)	79-78
2	UTEP (9)	Kansas (1)	66-60

New Mexico State would be first

It is not at all unusual to have a double-digit seed such as New Mexico State in the Sweet 16 field. But New Mexico State would be the first No. 12 seed ever to reach the Final Four.

Only one team seeded lower than eighth has reached the Final Four since team seeding began in 1979. That was Louisiana State, a No. 11, in 1986 (and it was handled, 88-77, by eventual champion Louisville in the national semifinals).

But never have more than two No. 1 seeds reached the Final Four, as mentioned. The four No. 1 seeds that won the championship were North Carolina in 1982, Georgetown in 1984, Indiana in 1987 and Nevada-Las Vegas in 1990. The lowest-seeded champion was Villanova, a No. 8, in 1985.

The old days

Back in the old days, only conferences were seeded (according to their record in previous NCAA tournaments) and very few conferences held postseason tournaments.

Thus, regular-season conference champions (and postseason winners) knew almost a year in advance exactly where they would be in the bracket and that they would get a first-round bye, putting them in the Sweet 16 without playing a game. Independents had to play in the first round to get to the regional.

An example is Iba's 1958 Oklahoma State team (Sutton played, going 8-for-13 from the field and 4-for-4 from the line for 20 points in three games), second place in its regional. Oklahoma State was in the 1965 Sweet 16 automatically as the Big Eight champion. But in 1958, Oklahoma State had to beat Loyola of New Orleans in the first round to reach the Sweet 16.

Why? Because Oklahoma State had dropped out of the Missouri Valley Conference before the 1958 season and would not compete for the Big Eight title until 1959, thus was considered an independent in 1958 and chosen at large. (The field ranged from 22 to 25 teams from 1953 through 1974, went to 32 in 1975 and 40 in 1979.)

But remember that it was this system of automatic qualification for conference champions that put the NCAA tournament on top to stay over the National Invitation Tournament in 1951. The Final Four format—four regional champions to one site, began in 1952.

Pacific-10 can win 14th

UCLA's presence as a No. 1 seed gives the Pacific-10 Conference, already the all-time leader with 13

Ohio State, led by all-American Jim Jackson, is one of three No. 1 seeds to survive the first two rounds of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship

NCAA championship teams, a chance to mark up its 14th.

The conference produced two of the first four NCAA champions—Oregon's "Tall Firs" in 1939 and Stanford in 1942. Then came California under Pete Newell in 1959. UCLA, of course, won the last 10 (not all 10, as we wrote in last week's notes).

From another angle, if you add San Francisco's two titles in 1955 and 1956, championships by Wyoming in 1943, Utah in 1944, Oklahoma State in 1945 and 1946, Kansas in 1952 and UTEP in 1966, teams west of the Mississippi River won 21 of the first 37 NCAA crowns.

But since UCLA's last title in 1975, only two champions—Kansas in 1988 and Nevada-Las Vegas in 1990—have come from west of the Mississippi.

In all-time NCAA tournament wins by conference members using actual lineups each year, the Atlantic Coast still leads the Big Ten by one game, 184-183, heading into the regionals. The ACC has four teams left, the Big Ten three.

Two consensus picks left

Two 1992 consensus all-American players—Duke's Christian Laettner and Ohio State's Jim Jackson—are playing in the Sweet 16, but three have been eliminated. They are Louisiana State's Shaquille O'Neal, Southern California's Harold Miner and Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning. Second-team consensus all-Americans still playing are UCLA's Don MacLean and Oklahoma State's Byron Houston, with Missouri's Anthony Peeler, Maryland's Walt Williams and Malik Sealy of St. John's (New York) on the sidelines. Among those receiving votes, Grant Hill and Bobby Hurley of Duke and Calbert Cheaney of Indiana are left.

Malcolm Mackey and Georgia Tech did not dominate pretournament discussions, but the Yellow Jackets find themselves alive in the volatile Midwest region

Women's tourney has new look with only five left from '91

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA Assistant
Statistics Coordinator

The Sweet Sixteen field for the 11th annual NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship marks a definite changing of the guard between the top finishers in the previous 10 years of the tournament and new challengers.

Only five teams—Virginia, Tennessee, Western Kentucky, Vanderbilt and Stanford—are repeaters from the 1991 Sweet Sixteen field, while four teams are making their first-ever appearances in the regionals. The first-timers are Miami (Florida), Southwest Missouri State, Texas Tech and West Virginia.

Women's basketball notes

Only three former women's champions remain in the field—Tennessee, Southern California and Stanford. And only six of the teams that have filled 18 of the previous 40 Women's Final Four berths in history are still alive.

Only one team—Tennessee—has made all 11 Sweet Sixteens in history. The other top Sweet Sixteen teams are Mississippi, Louisiana Tech and Long Beach State with nine appearances each, Southern California and Auburn with eight each, and North Carolina State and Georgia with seven each.

In this year's group, Virginia is making a sixth trip while Penn State, Stanford and Maryland are making their fifth and Western Kentucky a fourth. Stephen F. Austin and Vanderbilt are in the Sweet Sixteen field for the third time, while Purdue and UCLA are in for the second.

The first and second rounds produced further proof that parity is lurking on the horizon in women's basketball. The top upset saw No. 8 Midwest seed Southwest Missouri State down No. 1 seed Iowa, 61-60, in overtime on the Hawkeyes' home court. There have been only three other teams seeded at least as low as No. 8 in tournament history to advance to the Sweet Sixteen—No. 10 Vanderbilt and No. 8 James Madison in 1991. James Madison also was seeded No. 8 in 1986 when it advanced.

The Southeastern Conference and the Pacific-10 Conference each have three teams remaining in the field. The Atlantic Coast Conference and Big Ten Conference each have two left. Unfortunately for the Pacific-10, it has two teams—Stanford and Southern California—in the West region, which means only one can advance to the Women's Final Four. The SEC has each team in different regionals and could send all three to Los Angeles, California.

Women's top seeds continue

There have been few surprises in seeding since the women's tournament began in 1982. Since seeding began, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won every championship. Last year, Tennessee, the No. 1 seed in the Midwest region, continued a three-year streak of No. 1 seeds taking the title.

The Lady Vols whipped an 8-4-3-2-1 seed combination en route to the championship. Only champions Tennessee in 1987 and Louisiana Tech in 1988 were not seeded No. 1.

Louisiana Tech in 1988 and Tennessee in 1987 had the toughest road to the Women's Final Four, according to seeding; each team had to face three No. 1 seeds after facing a No. 3 seed following the first and second rounds (those numbers added together equal six). Texas in 1986 had the easiest route, facing the 4-2-4-1 seeds (total 11) after the first and second rounds.

This year, three No. 1 seeds survived, with Virginia, Stanford and Tennessee expected to challenge for a Final Four berth. Iowa joins Virginia in 1986 and Penn State in 1991 as the only No. 1 seeds in tournament history to lose a first- or second-round game and fail to advance. No. 8 Southwest Missouri State is the lowest seed to make it to the Sweet Sixteen in 1992, and No. 5 seed UCLA is the next lowest to survive this far. They face each other in the Midwest region, so only one will advance to the regional finals. The three other regions have the top four seeds remaining in each bracket.

All this illustrates the point that many of the same women's teams are seeded high every year. They are not seeded indiscriminately, however, because their yearly performances have varied little.

Lower seeds surprise

The lowest seeds in tournament history to reach the Women's Final Four were No. 4 seeds Western Kentucky in both 1985 and 1986 and Tennessee in 1986. Even more impressively, at least two No. 1 seeds have made the Women's Final Four every year except 1985 and five tournaments saw only No. 1 and No. 2 seeds advance that far (1983, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990). Last year, No. 1 seeds Tennessee and Virginia joined No. 2 seed Stanford and No. 3 Connecticut in the semifinals.

Teams that have received a No. 1 seed most in the 11 years of seeding are Louisiana Tech with seven, Tennessee with six, and Southern California and Texas with four each. Old Dominion, Long Beach State, Georgia, Virginia and Auburn all have garnered three.

Only nine teams have been seeded lower than No. 3 and advanced to the regional finals of the tournament (or one win away from the Women's Final Four). Only three of those—Lamar, a No. 10 seed in 1991; Arkansas, a No. 7 seed in 1990, and Penn State, a No. 5 seed in 1983—were seeded below No. 4. That makes the 1991 Lamar team the lowest seed to advance to that point. As mentioned, Southwest Missouri State, seeded No. 8, has a chance to join this select group in tournament history after knocking off No. 9 seed Kansas and No. 1 seed Iowa. No. 5 seed UCLA also could qualify by downing Southwest Missouri State.

Because the women only seed 12 teams in each region, a defeat by a lower seed would be considered an upset only if there are four or more seeds between the two teams.

Lamar, a No. 10 seed in 1991, first downed No. 2 Louisiana State and then whipped No. 3 Arkansas before losing to No. 1-seeded and eventual runner-up Virginia. Lamar's 93-73 defeat of Louisiana State stands as the biggest upset in terms of how the teams were seeded. Southwest Missouri State, a No. 8 seed as mentioned, now has posted the second-biggest upset in terms of seeds by beating Iowa, a No. 1 seed.

The No. 1 seeds in 1989 posted a 15-3 record, the best mark ever. The 1983, 1984 and 1990 No. 1 seeds had identical 12-3 records for the second-best record. The 1991 No. 1 seeds—Tennessee (5-0), Georgia (2-1), Penn State (0-1) and Virginia (4-1)—combined for an 11-3 record.

First-timers succeed

Thirty-three teams have won first

Melody Howard of Southwest Missouri State, a 5-8 guard, has led her team to the regional semifinals of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship. It is the first such appearance for the Bears.

or opening-round games in their first appearance in the tournament since 1983 (all first-round winners in 1982 were in their first appearance). Three of those teams—UC Santa Barbara, Santa Clara and Creighton—did it in this year's tournament. Eight teams did it in 1983, the best performance by first-time tournament teams in the 11-year history of the tourney.

Among low seeds to advance past the first-round games this year were No. 12 Santa Clara, No. 11 DePaul, No. 11 Northern Illinois, No. 10 Southern Illinois, No. 10 Toledo and No. 9 UC Santa Barbara. Even more important, Santa Clara, Montana, Southern Illinois and Toledo all won on the road in the first-round wars.

However, none of these teams made it to the Sweet Sixteen.

The winner of the Midwest regional will be a first-ever Women's Final Four participant because none of the remaining teams—Southwest Missouri State, UCLA, Penn State or Mississippi—has made the national semifinals.

On the other hand, the Southeastern Conference has had at least one team in the Women's Final Four every year of the championship.

Winning streaks

Miami (Florida) has the longest current winning streak at 30 games. Southwest Missouri State is next at 19, followed by Tennessee at 18 and Virginia at 17.

Eligibility appeals

Note: In cases involving prospective student-athletes, the NCAA Eligibility Committee has only the authority to either restore the involved prospect with all eligibility remaining at the violating institution or to render the prospective student-athlete permanently ineligible at that institution. Accordingly, because the eligibility ramifications of violations that involve prospects and enrolled student-athletes are treated differently, those cases that involve prospects are published separately from the other matters.

Also, note that any actions taken by the institution, conference or NCAA Committee on Infractions regarding the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation that caused the ineligibility of the student athlete are reported along with the pertinent eligibility case.

Men's gymnastics	B 12.1.1, 12.1.2, 15.01.2 and 15.1.1-(c)	For a one-year period, Mexican SA received financial support and incentives from nonprofit, nongovernmental association that is separate from Mexican NGBs and disburses money directly to SAs. SA received monthly stipends and incentive money based upon place finishes, and had moneys deposited in his name on a monthly basis in a trust fund (to be drawn upon after SA's retirement from gymnastics). Because SA had a full grant-in-aid, monthly stipends resulted in over-award of aid without the institution's knowledge. Cryer bucks Eligibility Committee. He also was on the Council and the Executive Committee as the Division I vice-president. He recalls those days fondly, for the people with whom he worked and the work they accomplished. Proposition 48—the legislation that greatly strengthened initial-eligibility requirements—was adopted during his time on the Council and the Eligibility Committee.

Fits the role

Cryer is not a born-and-bred cowboy. But he fits the role now and can rattle off the accomplishments of the PRCA in his four years faster than a bronco could throw a rookie rider.

"We put our rodeos on ESPN this last year, and we doubled our ratings from one year to the next," he said. "We needed television. I went to ESPN, bought the time and sold all the commercials myself. I hired the production crews. We put the whole thing together, and we made a profit. Doing that in today's marketplace is an accomplishment."

"I took an organization that two years before I got here was in the red and when I got here had $300,000 in the bank; that's all it had. I have just completed my fourth year here, and we have $2.5 million in reserve. We've got approximately $4 million more in prize money, we've increased our sponsorship by more than one-third and we've got a major television package."

Because of that television package, many of the nearly 800 PRCA-sanctioned rodeos are playing in front of packed houses. The National Finals Rodeo already is sold out for Las Vegas, Nevada, Thomas and Mack Center, which holds about 17,000 for rodeo, and that event doesn't occur until the first week of December.

"When you are dealing with 800 communities across the country and in Canada, it is not just some fly-by-night happening," he said. "It is an amazing phenomenon."

Not the same

It's quite a switch for a person used to the institutional structure of the NCAA.

"Instead of 900 NCAA institutions and all the related personnel—coaches, administrators and student-athletes. I've got approximately 9,000 independent business persons," he said. "They have the general umbrella of an interest in rodeo. Besides contestants, we have clowns, announcers, specialty acts, barrelmen and stock contractors (those who provide the animals for the rodeos). They are all part of the same family, but they are competitive against each other."

Another major difference is that the 9,000 members of the PRCA are professionals.

"I served as the chairman of the Eligibility Committee and dealt with the fact that if you play in a baseball game and you pinch run for somebody, you've used a season of your eligibility," he said. "Or if you violate the rules—you take an extra benefit—you've lost your eligibility. Here, it is a professional sport. If they violate the rules, we fine them and they keep on rodeoing. If a contestant harasses an official, we fine him $250, he pays the fine and he is eligible to compete."

"And that is refreshing. Because when I was the chairman of the committee—and I had an excellent committee—I really struggled with that stuff. You really struggle philosophically, emotionally and personally with dealing with the eligibility of student-athletes."

Admires athleticism

That is not a concern anymore, and Cryer now can sit back and admire the athletic talents shown by rodeo performers. "When I came to this situation, I brought an appreciation and understanding of what a great athlete was," he said. "Well, when you put a 150-pound man on a 2,000-pound bull, and he has to ride that bull for eight seconds and he has got to be judged against the other contestants on who had the highest point ride, it is an amazing experience of athleticism. They are just great athletes."

"To jump off a horse and to tie a calf in eight seconds, to ride a bucking horse or ride a bucking bull, to do what they've got to do is just a marvelous experience of athleticism. They're tremendous in what they can do—the ability to concentrate, the ability to take the power and the thrust of 2,000-pound animal like a bull and survive that and then still make it look easy so you can get a high score is tremendous."

No telling what's next

From radio to an assistant AD's job to commissioner to the CEO of a rodeo association, Cryer has had his horse tied to a wide variety of hitching posts. What's next? At age 49, Cryer won't venture a guess.

"Please don't think I am bragging here because I am not," he said. "At one time, when I was an assistant athletics director at the University of the Pacific and associate athletics director at the University of Oregon, I wanted to be the best Division I-A athletics director in the country. I never did that because I jumped right from an associate athletics director at the University of Oregon to commissioner of the Pacific

Lewis A. Cryer

Coast Athletic Association.

"Then I always thought that someday I wanted to be the commissioner of one of the elite conferences, but I never did that because I took this position. I was the one of only a few commissioners to serve as an officer of the Association. I never expected to do that and I didn't expect to do what I am doing now, and to be honest with you, I don't know what is going to happen next."

"All I know is that I have got to do the best I can every single day at what I am doing. I have given up trying to figure out what I am going to do next, because I have never done what I wanted to do."

Certification

by institutional enforcement sanctions.

The special committee also agreed to ask counsel to explore the possibility of instituting trial-type hearings for institutions appealing a denial of certification. Proponents believe that such a procedure, which may include cross examination or other due process guarantees, may prevent or decrease the chance of legal challenges based on Federal or state due process legislation.

Membership comments

In reviewing comments that were solicited in a February 17 memorandum to the membership, the committee found that most of those responding believed that the certification program should be for Division I members only, that most supported the concept of institutions funding the cost of visits by review teams and that most supported the implementation of the initial campus visits by peer-review teams early in 1994 if the legislation is approved at the 1993 Convention.

The committee again discussed the scheduling of certification reviews and decided to ask those institutions that participated in the pilot program what their preferences would be. The committee had considered putting those institutions at the front of the schedule for the actual program, but some institutional representatives said they would prefer not to go through the process again so soon after their pilot-program participation.

Also, the special committee concluded that the Committee on Athletics Certification, which would be formed upon approval of the enacting legislation, should be obligated to address timing and related issues beyond the original five-year period.

Every Division I institution would go through the self-study and external peer-review process within the first five years, but the special committee concluded that as experience is gained in the initial process, the standing committee should consider the intervals over which second and subsequent certifications would be completed and the nature of the work performed during subsequent certifications.

The special committee also agreed that the standing committee should consider how the process might relate to the institution's overall accreditation process and how certification might be affected by key personnel changes (chief executive officers or athletics directors) or rules violations determined by the NCAA Committee on Infractions.

Other highlights

In other actions at its recent meeting, the NCAA Special Committee on Certification:

- Reacted to concerns expressed by Division I conferences concerning their role in the certification process. In particular, the committee agreed that conferences should not be responsible for assisting in scheduling visits of peer-review teams, nor should they be primarily responsible for overseeing any corrective actions that might be required at an institution. Instead, the committee recommended that conferences should be responsible for ensuring that members develop, implement and report corrective actions.
- Altered a previous position that independent institutions should be assisted in the certification process by the conference with which the member administers its National Letter of Intent program. Acknowledging that this would place an undue burden on some conferences, the committee recommended instead that independent institutions should be responsible for obtaining their own assistance, pending approval of the Committee on Athletics Certification.
- Recommended that the NCAA Council expand the size of the special committee from seven members to 12 members. The enlargement would enable the special committee to divide into subgroups to develop materials (for example, user's guide for institutions and conferences, instructions for peer-review teams) that must be ready by January 1993.
- Requested authorization for the committee to bring in experts from other groups (for example, academic and financial authorities) to assist in the development of procedures and materials.
- Acknowledged that institutions in rural areas face greater expenses in covering the costs of campus visits and specified that the cost of transportation should be taken into account in forming peer-review teams.

Former Bryant player charged with bookmaking

A former Bryant College basketball captain who was dismissed from the team in February for violations of team regulations has been arrested for allegedly taking and placing bets in a college gambling ring broken by police in March.

Also, the college suspended an active basketball player—the sixth since the beginning of an investigation of gambling at Bryant and the University of Rhode Island.

Christopher Simmons, 21, a senior from Wall, New Jersey, was arrested on the Bryant campus March 23 and charged with one count each of bookmaking and organized criminal gambling, Rhode Island State Police Lt. Theodore Kidd told The Associated Press.

Simmons, a former cocaptain, was dismissed from the basketball team February 18. An independent college investigation into charges that he was involved in illegal gambling continues, Bryant spokesman Jack Oldham said.

The school is not identifying suspended players.

State police say Bryant basketball players wagered thousands of dollars on college sports and some allegedly collected debts for the ring.

A Bryant student, Matthew Zimmerman, is accused of being the ring's leader. Zimmerman has pleaded innocent to extortion, bookmaking, racketeering, conspiracy and organized criminal gambling.

Kidd said Simmons was among five players indebted to Zimmerman for tens of thousands of dollars. He did not know how much Simmons was believed to owe.

In addition to Zimmerman, police so far have arrested three Rhode Island students, a Rogers High School girls' athletics coach and a Rhode Island residence hall adviser.

News Fact File

Drug testing was conducted at 252 sites during the first year of the Association's random, year-round drug-testing program, which involved Divisions I-A and I-AA football programs. Seventy-one student-athletes were ruled ineligible for at least one year, 13 of them due to protocol violations.

President honors national champs

President Bush welcomed the University of Washington and University of Miami (Florida) football teams to the White House March 20 and jokingly offered to officiate a game between the Huskies and Hurricanes on the South Lawn.

With players from both teams that went 12-0 in 1991 chomping at the bit for such a matchup, Bush signaled time out and diplomatically saluted both squads as "great teams" and "cochamps."

The Hurricanes and Huskies finished the season as the only undefeated and untied teams in NCAA Division I football. Washington was selected No. 1 in the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame rankings distributed by United Press International and in the CNN-USA Today coaches' poll, while Miami was named No. 1 by The Associated Press.

Bush noted that in contrast to major-college football, which has no championship game, "the American political system has a playoff to decide a winner. It's called an election, a presidential election this year."

"As of now, the NCAA does not," he said. "And yet, in the truest sense, each of you are winners—undefeated, untied, unbowed," he told the teams.

Higher education

Budget cuts prompt philanthropy

State spending cuts in higher education are prompting administrators, faculty and students at some campuses to fight back with philanthropy.

Although forced tuition increases and student protests have been the most common responses to the cuts, a number of individuals and groups on campuses have decided to sacrifice in order to help the neediest students.

For example, at least three new presidents of colleges or universities canceled inauguration ceremonies to free up more scholarship funds.

Only half of students graduate

Despite several years of intense effort at the nation's colleges and universities, retention rates may not be improving, according to the February 19 issue of Report on Education Research.

Results of a new U.S. Department of Education survey found that only 49 percent of the students entering college in the fall of 1984 earned a degree from that school within six years. That figure is similar to other studies conducted in the past decade.

NCAA Director of Research Ursula R. Walsh said the figure does not take into account those students who may have transferred to other institutions.

Fullerton coach fired after injunction gained

Supporters of the California State University, Fullerton, women's volleyball team have obtained a preliminary injunction prohibiting the university from abolishing the program, but the school has dismissed coach Jim Huffman, who filed the lawsuit.

The preliminary injunction, issued by a California Superior Court judge March 20, requires Cal State Fullerton officials to continue the volleyball program pending a permanent injunction. It prohibits the university from cutting the volleyball budget or altering current funding.

It also requires the university to provide comparable or equivalent coaching, but does not require the school to retain Huffman, who can be replaced with someone of comparable qualifications. Three days after the judge's ruling, school officials opted to replace Huffman.

"I'm happy with the judge's decision," Huffman said. "I think it sends a clear message that you can't violate women's rights."

"I am worried, however, that (my firing) sends a message to coaches that if you stand up for Title IX and gender equity, you'll be fired."

On January 28, Cal State Fullerton athletics officials announced that the women's volleyball and men's gymnastics programs would be discontinued. Supporters of the volleyball program obtained a restraining order February 3 to prevent the move.

In announcing he would issue the preliminary injunction, Orange County Superior Court Judge Floyd Schenk said he reviewed declarations and depositions before determining that Cal State Fullerton was not in compliance with California statutes—specifically Article 5, regarding gender equity.

The basis of the lawsuit, Article 5 requires "that opportunities in athletics be provided on as nearly an equal basis to male and female students as is practicable, and that comparable incentives and encouragements be offered to females to engage in athletics."

"We're not surprised by the (judge's) decision," said Huffman's attorney, Kirk Boyd. "The case law and statutes are quite clear.... Programs cannot take regressive steps, cannot take steps that are more onerous to women than men."

Fordham player waited for his turn, led team into NCAA tournament

Fordham University senior forward Joe McGowan earned the rare student-athlete nickname of "coach" for his lack of playing time during his first three seasons for the Rams. This season, however, McGowan was thrust into the team's starting lineup and helped take the Rams to a berth in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

McGowan was used so little in his first three seasons that he scored only 26 points.

However, when the Rams began slowly this season, opening 5-9, Fordham coach Nick Macarchuk inserted McGowan into the starting lineup and the Rams went 13-3 the rest of the way, including a 70-65 victory over Bucknell University to claim the Patriot League tournament championship and an automatic berth in the NCAA tourney.

"The thrill of playing at this level makes all the time behind the scenes worthwhile," said McGowan, whose father, Jay McGowan, is president of Bellarmine College. "Anyone who gets the chance to be a college athlete should take it, because there are so many who never get the chance. It really gives me a special feeling just to compete."

Close, but pitcher loses no-hitter in 11th

University of Houston junior Wade Williams took a no-hitter into the 11th inning in a game against Rice University March 7, but saw it and the game slip away.

With the score tied 0-0 in the bottom of the 11th, Owl freshman Mike Wilson hit a clean double down the right-field line, ending

Williams' hopes for a no-hitter. After intentionally walking the next batter, Williams was replaced and two innings later, Wilson scored the winning run on a pinch-hit single.

Students to assist in funding of new turf

Westfield State College students will have to pay a $100 fee each year for the next seven years to cover the cost of replacing the badly worn Astroturf surface at the school's football stadium.

The 18-year-old surface was worn to the point that it was unsafe to use, school officials said.

The college put a non-binding referendum on the proposed fee before the student body to determine the feelings of its students. About 25 percent of the student body participated, 553 in favor of implementing the fee and 226 opposed.

Financing for the project had been promised by the Connecticut state government, but did not materialize. Westfield State executive director of facilities Curt Robie told the Springfield Union-News.

Host of former Heisman winners in golf tourney

Former Heisman Trophy Award winners from Jay Berwanger (1935) to Roger Staubach (1963) to Ty Detmer (1990) are expected to participate in the Heisman Foundation Golf Classic, May 1-3 at Palmetto Dunes in Hilton Head, South Carolina.

The Heisman Foundation was formed at New York City's famed Downtown Athletic Club in June 1989 to raise funds through special events to benefit many worthy causes throughout the United States.

Spots in the tournament that will permit golfers to be paired with two different Heisman winners each day of the two-day tournament are available for $750. For further information, contact Classic Sports, Inc., at Sea Pines Center, 79 Lighthouse Road, Hilton Head, South Carolina 29928, or call 800/677-2293 or 803/671-2448 in South Carolina.

In addition, a first-team college-division team member—Steve Honderd of Calvin College—led his school to a title in the Division III Men's Basketball Championship (see story on page 8).

The university-division team members appearing in the Division I tournaments, with grade-point averages:

Men's selections

Fullerton

School athletics officials withheld comment on the ruling, except to characterize the preliminary injunction as one step in a long process.

According to Huffman, Cal State Fullerton offered 17 varsity sports—nine for men and eight for women—involving approximately 268 male and 97 female student-athletes. University officials have not confirmed those statistics.

The school's cuts would reduce those figures three percent for men and 12 percent for women (the volleyball team is made up of 10 players). The cuts also would reduce the number of women's team sports to two (basketball and softball), compared to four for men (football, basketball, baseball and soccer).
