Presidents Commission reviews the big picture

Emphasizing what its chair terms "the values of intercollegiate athletics," the NCAA Presidents Commission spent its spring meeting getting underway in its primary topics for 1992—athletics certification, the role of the Commission itself, the role of the institutional chief executive officer and the beginning of a study of financial issues in college athletics.

In so doing, the group also moved into discussions of gender equity, opportunities for ethnic minorities and other aspects of student-athlete welfare.

"A good deal of the tone of this meeting was looking at broad issues facing intercollegiate athletics and higher education," Commission Chair Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien said after the April 1-2 gathering in Dallas.

"The issues that we are coming to now are the values of intercollegiate athletics... its ethical dimensions, and integration with the broader university, rather than the specifics that we have been dealing with, in conjunction with the NCAA Council, in the recent reform agenda," he said.

O'Brien, chancellor of the University of New Orleans, emphasized that "this Commission and the NCAA itself are becoming more fully a part of the higher education community."

He cited as examples in the evolving Commission emphasis the fact that it is beginning to study "the broader issues of student-athlete welfare, rather than specific limits" on their activity, and "the philosophy of financial aid for athletes," rather than specific grant limits.

Specific actions

During the three days of meetings—Commission subcommittees met the day before the official Commission session began—the group agreed to:

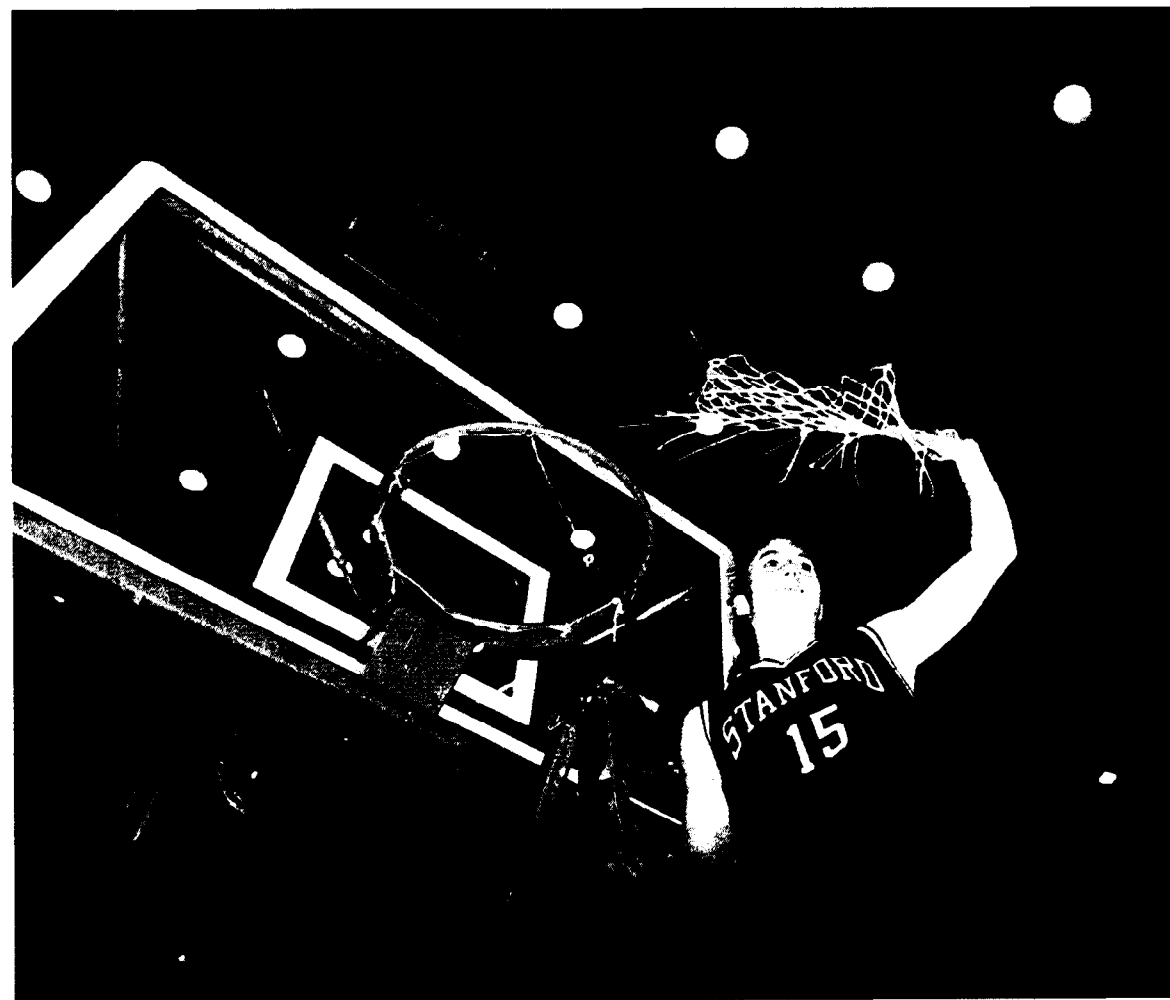

- Appoint what O'Brien described as a "broad-based, multiconstituent, high-level committee" to begin the Commission's previously announced study of financial issues in college athletics.

That topic is the next wave in the Commission's previously adopted strategic plan, with institutional control and presidential authority being emphasized this year and financial issues the next year.

The special committee will use other committees, special subcommittees and consultants as needed to address financial conditions and trends in college athletics and higher education, as well as the more specific topics such as financial aid for student-athletes and the influence of funds from noninstitutional sources such as booster groups and television.

The final cut

Junior guard Molly Goodenbour had the honor of snipping the final cord of the net after her Stanford University basketball team defeated Western Kentucky University in the championship game of the Women's Final Four April 5 in Los Angeles. Goodenbour, the tournament's most outstanding player, notched 28 points, 12 assists and six steals in the two games. See story on page 7.

Council emphasizes five principal topics

The NCAA Council has identified five major issues in college athletics for specific discussion in its April 13-15 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri:

- Federal and state governmental activities, including the current status of attempts in several states to adopt laws affecting the NCAA's enforcement process.
- The proposed certification process for athletics programs, at least in Division I.
- Gender equity and Title IX compliance issues.
- The work of the Special Committee to Review NCAA Legislative Procedures.
- Continuing refinements in the Association's enforcement and infractions process, including the remaining recommendations by the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process and accompanying recommendations by the Committee on Infractions.

The NCAA Administrative Committee has revised the usual agenda for Council meetings to place special emphasis on the major discussion items early in the meeting.

Customarily, the Council spends much of its meeting time handling necessary actions regarding membership requests, legislation, interpretations and reports by various Association committees. While the group still will deal with those matters, the Administrative Committee hopes that the new meeting structure will assure that there is time in the meeting schedule to pay adequate attention to the identified major issues.

Other topics

Also commanding attention on the agenda will be a report of the Presidents Commission's April 1-2 meeting; the annual appointments to the Nominating Committee, Men's Committee on Committees and Women's Committee on Committees, and a review of both the unsuccessful Council-sponsored legislation from the 1992 Convention and the early legislation submitted to date for the 1993 Convention.

Other legislative actions and analyses, the customary review of Interpretations Committee actions, consideration of the interim actions of the Administrative Committee, and the quarterly series of membership-classification requests and petitions are on the spring agenda as always.

NCAA committees scheduled to report include:

- The Academic Requirements, Communications, Eligibility, Legislative Review, Minority Opportunities and Interests, Olympic Sports

Texas A&M president will join Commission

William H. Mobley, president of Texas A&M University, has been appointed as the Southwest Athletic Conference representative to the NCAA Presidents Commission, filling the remainder of the term of William H. Cunningham.

Cunningham, president of the University of Texas at Austin, will become chancellor of the University of Texas system. He resigned his position with the Commission upon accepting that appointment.

Cunningham was Division I chair for the Commission. That position is being filled on an interim basis by Charles E. Young, chancellor at the University of California, Los Angeles; the presidents will choose a permanent successor by mail in the near future.

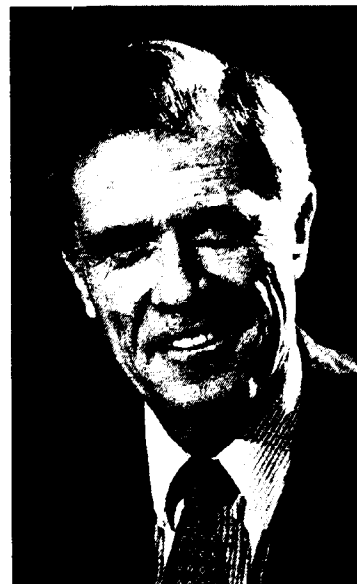

Mobley's term is through January 1994.

Mobley was selected as the 20th president of Texas A&M in August 1988. He came to Texas A&M in 1980 as head of the department of management and

Council will consider legislation that would permit NFL fellowship

The NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee has drafted legislation that would permit athletics department staff members to participate in established, formal professional enhancement programs administered by professional sports organizations.

The committee met March 30-31. The legislation, which has been submitted to the NCAA Council, is directed at the National Football League's minority coaches fellowship program. That program, developed to enhance minority coaches' opportunities, has been determined to conflict with Bylaw 11.3.3.1, which stipulates that no professional organization may compensate an NCAA coach.

The legislation also would permit participating staff members to receive compensation and expenses consistent with that received by other program participants and would specify that the Council would establish necessary policies and guidelines regarding participation by an institution's staff members in such a program.

As the legislation is drafted, it would become effective immediately if it is approved at the 1993 NCAA Convention. In the interim, coaches seeking to participate in the program first must receive a waiver that would enable them to have their expenses covered.

The committee also reviewed its long-range plan and formed three subcommittees to examine the five topics cited in the plan:

- Affirmative action and minority enhancement issues.
- Continued research opportunities.
- Identification of programs that may educate individuals regarding multicultural diversity.
- Promotion of minority student development and enhancement at all educational levels.
- Solicitation of support of minority enhancement from the private and public sectors.

Committee members also heard a presentation from John H. Leavens, NCAA assistant executive director for compliance services, about the proposed institutional certification program.

Other highlights

In other action at its March 30-31 meeting in Overland Park, Kansas, the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee:

- Met with NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, Merrily Dean Baker, assistant executive director for administration, and Robert C. Khayat, president of the NCAA Foundation, to hear their views on how minority opportunities could be enhanced within the NCAA and discussed the conference grant programs and recommended that an accountability procedure be established for programs that claim to benefit women and minorities.
- Recommended to the NCAA Council that a survey be conducted to examine current circumstances regarding minority opportunities at the conference level, especially for administrative positions and game officials.
- Invited the president of the National Association of Academic Advisers for Athletes to appear at its next meeting.

tion program.

Some committee members inquired why minority issues were not listed among the seven topics each institution is to address in its self-study. Leavens said that minority issues and gender-equity issues are to be treated within each of the seven areas rather than being examined separately.

The committee recommended to the Council that it be represented on the expanded Special Committee on Certification.

News Fact File

Total participation in the 76 NCAA championships conducted in 1990-91 was 2,764 teams and 21,903 athletes. Total gross receipts amounted to $29,470,270, including a record $961,062 for Division III championships. Total paid attendance was a record 2,168,393, paced by records of 1,793,170 in Division I and 176,496 in Division III.

Merrily Dean Baker, the NCAA's assistant executive director for administration since 1988, will become director of athletics at Michigan State University May 15.

The university's board of trustees approved Michigan State President John A. DiBiaggio's recommendation to appoint Baker at its April 3 meeting in East Lansing, Michigan.

Baker, who was director of women's athletics for six years at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, before joining the NCAA, returns to the Big Ten Conference as the first woman to head both men's and women's athletics programs at a league school.

She will become the second woman director of a Division I-A athletics program, joining Barbara A. Hedges, who was appointed last year at the University of Washington.

As assistant executive director at the NCAA, Baker has been responsible for professional-development, youth, research, sports-sciences and membership programs. She also has served as staff liaison to the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, Committee on Women's Athletics, Ad Hoc Committee to Administer the Conference Grant

Before becoming director of women's athletics at Minnesota in 1982, Baker served as associate director of athletics at Princeton University for 12 years. In 1969, she was director of the first women's intercollegiate athletics program at Franklin and Marshall College.

She also has coached field hockey, gymnastics, basketball and swim-

Baker was a member of the NCAA Executive Committee from 1985 to 1988 and was chair of the Ad Hoc Committee to Administer the Conference Grant Program.

She served from 1982 to 1983 as president of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women.

Baker succeeds George Perles as athletics director at Michigan State. Perles continues to serve as head football coach at the school.

NCAA Bylaw 16.8.1.3—expenses for competition while not representing institution

Member institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 16.8.1.3, an institution may provide student-athletes who are eligible to represent the institution in athletics competition with actual and necessary expenses related to participation in the following activities: (1) established national championship events; (2) Olympic, Pan American and World University Games qualifying competition; (3) international competition approved by the NCAA Council, and (4) U.S. Olympic Festival basketball and volleyball tryouts.

It should be noted that it is permissible to provide such expenses whether or not the competition occurs during the institution's designated playing season. A student-athlete participating in such competition would not be charged with a contest or date of competition per Bylaws 17.02.4 and 17.02.7 and would not utilize a season of competition per Bylaw 14.02.6, provided the event is not characterized as collegiate competition (i.e., the event is open only to collegiate competitors or involves individuals scoring points for their respective institutions).

The provisions of Bylaw 16.8.3(a) related to established national championship events would include expenses to participate in a junior national championship event. Expenses provided under Bylaw 16.8.1.3(b) for Olympic, Pan American or World University Games qualifying competition are limited to events that directly qualify the individual for the Olympic, Pan American and/or World University Games. It is not permissible for an institution to provide expenses for student-athletes to participate in events that do not directly qualify the student-athletes for the Olympic, Pan American or World University Games (e.g., qualifying competition for junior world competitions). Also, expenses provided under Bylaw 16.8.1.3(c) for international competition approved by the Council are limited to foreign tours that are sanctioned by the Council in accordance with Bylaw 17.23.2.

Outside competition—Division III

Division III institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 14.8.1.2, a Division III student-athlete shall be denied eligibility for intercollegiate competition for the remainder of the season in his or her sport (other than basketball) if, following enrollment in college and during any year in which the student-athlete is a member of an intercollegiate squad or team, he or she competes or has competed as a member of any outside team in any noncollegiate, amateur competition (e.g., tournament play, exhibition games or other activities) during the institution's intercollegiate season in the sport. Exceptions and waivers to the prohibition against competing on an outside team during the institution's season are set forth in Bylaws 14.8.5 and 14.8.6. Thus, prior to the beginning of or subsequent to the conclusion of an institution's playing season (per Bylaw 17.02.11), it is permissible for Division III student-athletes (in sports other than basketball) to compete on outside teams.

In addition, in accordance with Bylaw 14.8.3.3, if a Division III institution conducts separate fall and spring practice or playing seasons in a sport, it is permissible for student-athletes to participate in that sport on an outside team during the period between the two seasons without affecting the student's eligibility.

Under such circumstances, there are no limitations on the number of student-athletes from the same institution that may compete on the outside team; however, it is not permissible for an institution's coaching staff member to be involved in any capacity (e.g., coach, official, player or league/team administrator) at any time with an outside team that involves any student-athlete with remaining eligibility from the institution's team, except as provided under Bylaws 14.8.6 and 17.23.

In the sport of basketball, a Division III student-athlete who participates in any organized basketball competition during the academic year except while representing the institution in intercollegiate competition in accordance with the permissible playing season specified in Bylaw 17.3 becomes ineligible for any further intercollegiate basketball competition (see Bylaws 14.8.5 and 14.8.6 for exceptions and waivers). In accordance with Bylaw 14.8.5.2-(b), there are no restrictions on the participation of Division III student-athletes in outside basketball competition during the summer; however, it is not permissible for an institution's coach to be involved in any capacity (e.g., coach, official, player or league/team administrator) with an outside team that involves any student-athlete with eligibility remaining from the institution's basketball team.

Men's volleyball sponsorship starts to rally

By Steven R. Hagwell
The NCAA News Staff

It was not that long ago, maybe five or six years, when men's collegiate volleyball was a hot topic of discussion. The only problem was that most talk included statements like "the sport is on the decline" or "men's collegiate volleyball is dying."

The comments seemed well-founded. A sport represented by 86 institutions in 1979, men's volleyball had seen its numbers dwindle by 41 percent through the 1980s.

"It was a topic of conversation," said Robert L. Newcomb of the University of California, Irvine, chair of the NCAA Men's Volleyball Committee. "Whenever the sport was discussed, that's all people talked about—how it was on the decline."

Times have changed. Men's volleyball is still a hot topic, only now, discussions include statements like "men's volleyball is on the rise."

Since 1989, sponsorship of men's collegiate volleyball has increased 16 percent, from 50 programs in 1988 to a current base of 58. And indications are that that number will continue to rise.

Grants credited

How is it that a sport seemingly fading away not only has recovered, but grown?

Those associated with the sport give credit to one thing: The United States Volleyball Association (USVBA)/NCAA Men's Volleyball Grants Program.

With the support of numerous organizations and individuals, the program was implemented nearly four years ago with the purpose of encouraging more NCAA member institutions to sponsor men's volleyball as a varsity sport.

It worked and continues to do so. Since its inception, eight grants have been awarded. In 1992, 25 institutions requested or were sent information on the program. The USVBA hopes to award five grants this year.

"We're very happy with the way things have gone," Newcomb said. "The program has, in many ways, exceeded our expectations."

Benefits spread

So much so that not only has men's collegiate volleyball benefited, but men's volleyball on the national level has as well.

"(The program) has been a life preserver for sure," said John Kessel, USVBA director of recreational programs and services. "It has not only helped arrest the slide, but helped the sport to grow during very tough times. It's given people the chance to talk, to generate ideas. It's proven crucial to the sport's long-lasting success."

Administered by the USVBA, the program provides selected recipients with a grant of $6,000 to start a varsity program. Each grant covers a three-year period and is available only to selected institutions that do not currently sponsor varsity men's volleyball. Also, the institution's director of athletics must sign off on the grant application in order to be considered.

Once the grant is awarded, an institution is required to meet certain criteria before receiving the funds, including: 1) notifying the NCAA of its intention to implement a varsity program; 2) conducting a boys' development clinic, using the program as a focal point, and 3) sending the USVBA an end-of-season report of the team's regular-season match record.

Encourages growth

"The basis for the program is to encourage growth of the sport," said Kessel. "By conducting a clinic, and using the program as a focal point, we believe the institution and the sport can only benefit."

Financing for the program comes from a variety of sources, most notably the Sporting Goods Manufacturing Association (SGMA) and its Volleyball Council. The Athletic Institute, the manufacturer Mikasa, the United States Volleyball Educational Foundation and the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) also are prime supporters of the grant program.

"We're thrilled by the support we've found," said Newcomb. "We've been able to do what we have because these organizations, and numerous individuals, have stepped up and helped us. Each of the representatives from these organizations came to know about our efforts and took it upon themselves to help."

"Trying to add a sport in this day and age is very frustrating for many institutions," Kessel said. "There are many institutions across the country that we believe would like to add a men's volleyball program but can't because of economics. Through the generosity of numerous organizations and individuals, this program helps them to do that."

Birth of a program

It did just that for the University of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, a 1990 grant recipient.

According to athletics director Bud K. Haidet, Wisconsin-Milwaukee had considered adding a program for several years. There was only one major stumbling block: finances.

"We considered (adding a program) for some time," Haidet said, "but every time we looked at the budget...."

"When the opportunity of the grants program became available, we took it to the athletics board and asked them to move on it. Things have gone very well...the future is very encouraging."

Not only for Wisconsin-Milwaukee, but the sport in general.

Bison drive

A recent blood drive at North Dakota State University attracted 297 volunteers—and one bison. Joining the school's mascot as participants in the Bison Valentine Victory Blood Drive were community leaders, university administrators, faculty and staff members, and students. Student-athletes at the school were encouraged to recruit at least one potential volunteer for the drive, which was the largest ever in the Fargo, North Dakota/Moorhead, Minnesota area.

NCAA International to build interest in college sports outside U.S.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz has announced the formation of NCAA International, an umbrella entity to develop NCAA athletics and marketing activities outside the United States.

The new organization reflects a further attempt to build interest in NCAA sports, including the Final Four and College World Series, in the international marketplace by use of television, radio, publishing and corporate marketing.

"With the advent of a new social climate overseas, particularly in Europe, we hope that this venture will foster a better mutual understanding of our varied cultures," Schultz said. "The world is indeed becoming smaller, and intercollegiate athletics can play a major role in fostering that new understanding."

NCAA International will be managed by Host-Kazmaier International, Inc. (HKI). HKI is a joint venture of Host Creative Communications of Lexington, Kentucky, and Kazmaier Associates, Inc., of Concord, Massachusetts.

Host Creative Communications has been involved in various NCAA-related activities since 1976, including NCAA radio administration and networking, NCAA programs and corporate marketing.

"The potential of this opportunity is exciting," said W. James Host, chief executive officer of Host Creative Communications. "There is immense global interest in our higher-education system. Emerging nations want to participate more fully in student exchanges and other learning programs that encourage cultural dialogue. We believe collegiate athletics can play an essential role in that dialogue, especially with the evolution of the European Common Market."

Kazmaier Associates, Inc., is owned by Richard W. Kazmaier, a Heisman Trophy winner at Princeton in 1951. He currently serves as a member of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics.

"We are looking forward to working with the various groups responsible for intercollegiate athletics as well as those from outside the universities who work with college sports and marketing," Kazmaier said. "We believe that Kazmaier Associates' extensive background in international sports marketing complements Host Creative Communications' position as the leading domestic company in the collegiate sports field and positions NCAA International to serve the NCAA and its members."

NCAA International will have the ability to associate the NCAA name and logo with special events staged outside the United States and will control NCAA licensing rights outside the U.S. except in Japan and Hong Kong. Descente Ltd. has developed an extensive licensing program in Japan during the last 15 years.

The NCAA International contract will begin September 1, 1992, and will extend for five years.

Scholarship nominations must be mailed by April 24

Nominations for NCAA postgraduate scholarships for sports other than football and basketball must be mailed by April 24 to the appropriate district selection committee chair, as outlined in the instruction and nomination folder that has been mailed to all NCAA member institutions.

A total of 68 $5,000 scholarships (34 each for men and women) will be awarded by the NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee to varsity athletes in sports other than football and basketball in which the NCAA sponsors national championship competition.

Plantation mentality needs to be put in past

By Terence Moore
The Atlanta Constitution
Excerpted from a column

The only problem I had with NCAA officials voting to strengthen the academic standards for the student-athlete of the latter 1990s is that they didn't go far enough.

Under the old Proposition 48, athletes entering colleges were required to be able to read and write. Under the new Proposition 48, such athletes must be able to understand what they read and write.

I want even more from student-athletes. Still, you know something wonderful is happening here when coaches at all levels are whining. Coaches run the plantation systems that exist from middle schools to high schools to colleges. With encouragement from school administrators, boosters and alumni, coaches hire athletes more for their brawn than for their brain, unless such an athlete's brain is needed to understand the complexities of a motion offense or a zone defense.

Those victimized most by these plantation systems are black, which is why I prefer a tougher Proposition 48. I know, I know. The NCAA's new academic standards will disproportionately affect black athletes trying to enter college. Since the implementation in 1986 of the old Proposition 48, requiring athletes to have at least a 2.000 grade-point average (4.000 scale) and 700 on the SAT or 17 on the ACT, nearly 70 percent of the nonqualifiers have been black.

Some say the NCAA's latest action (a sliding scale that requires a 2.500 grade-point average if the SAT is 700 or the ACT is 17) will only increase the number of black nonqualifiers.

Others are more blunt. They say that NCAA officials and member institutions are engaged in racial discrimination.

If there are sinister motives behind the NCAA's new Proposition 48, it doesn't matter. In fact, I don't care if colleges eventually return to the old days when all of their athletics teams were white. If it takes something as drastic as segregated teams for black youngsters to see that they've been brainwashed into thinking that they can't function as well as their white counterparts in the classroom, so be it.

Such a situation wouldn't last long. After all, no lie can live forever, and it is an absolute lie that says black youngsters aren't as capable of excelling at academics and athletics as white youngsters. Under the new Proposition 48, even with the culturally biased aspects of standardized tests, black youngsters will prove sooner than later that plantation systems exist, not because colleges haven't a choice but because colleges either believe the lie or know the truth....

Give MAAC some credit for innovative approach

By Joe Layden
Albany Times-Union
Excerpted from a column

....Some conferences conduct men's and women's basketball tournaments on the same weekend, but at separate sites, or at a common site on different weekends. Not both, though. No one does that. The Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference has never even done that. Until now. By asking its men's and women's tournaments to share both calendar and court, the MAAC is breaking ground.

"It's a little too early to say whether it will work or not," St. Peter's College women's coach Mike Granelli said shortly after his team had beaten Niagara University. Then, smiling, he added, "My first impression is that it has enough pluses to say that it's worth staying for the rest of the tournament."

A few other women's coaches have had similarly ambivalent reactions. The reason is fairly simple: What appears on the surface to be a genuinely progressive effort on the part of the MAAC could be interpreted as either condescending or misguided—or both. Yes, the women get to play in a 15,000-seat arena. Yes, they get to have their championship televised. Yes, a trickle-down effect almost certainly provides the women's tournament with better attendance figures.

And yet there is no denying that the women are the opening act here and the men are the headliners. In the past, that has not been the case. In the past, the women have played at campus sites, in front of very small crowds (reportedly 500 for last year's championship game at Manhattan College), but at least it was their show. Exclusively.

So, progress has its price, and it remains to be seen whether this concept will be embraced on a long-term basis by either the league or its members. What is apparent is that over the first two days, some of the pretournament skepticism melted away.

"I like it," said Nadine Davis from St. Peter's. "I really think it's a good idea—having both tournaments together like this—and I think it'll work."

Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference media-relations director Carolanne McAuliffe says only the Patriot League allies its men's and women's basketball tournaments to the same extent as the MAAC.

Time for compromise from pros

By Jerry A. Ippoliti

The Catch-22 of intercollegiate athletics is the drafting of underclassmen by professional sports organizations.

The list continues to grow each year as collegiate sophomores and juniors choose to enter the draft pool before their collegiate eligibility has expired.

Is there a way to protect the marquee players who are the backbone of your program?

For years, the collegiate basketball and football programs have provided a wealth of talent to the professional organizations, getting nothing in return. The professional leagues, their new employees and agents are enriched. College programs are left holding the bag.

It's time to address this problem before the importance of integrity and education are consumed by the almighty dollar.

The major issues are twofold. Those institutions that have programs that have become feeders for the pros reap benefits: Recruiting is enhanced, the program wins, image is developed, a gauge for evaluating athletes is established, the program is recognized, championships are won, postseason participation is likely, media attention is gained and ticket revenue increases.

The flip side is more obvious, producing a negative impact on programs: Graduation rates decline, team continuity is lost, program development and expectations are diminished, money is spent on recruiting with no return, legal control to protect the athlete is lost, the academic interest of the athlete decreases and a coach's job security is reduced because of the program's reliance upon one to three top players.

The football and basketball coaches associations must band together to devise a plan to protect their student-athletes. Unity is the key word. This problem can be solved only if the associations, acting in consort, restrict access to their undergraduate student-athletes unless extenuating circumstances exist (true hardship).

A major concern that has surfaced recently is the drafting of the teenage group, sophomores. Are these young people mentally and physically prepared for the next level?

The professional owners/general managers and coaches groups will have to open the lines of communication and arrive at a solution that will enable both parties to benefit equally. If not, I visualize colleges instituting an off-limits policy for professional scouts who seek to evaluate athletes.

This problem will continue to fester if the professional organizations are not willing to compromise.

Lacrosse looking forward to a two-for-one sale

By Martin T. Benson
The NCAA News Staff

Since its inception, the Division III Men's Lacrosse Championship has maintained the status quo in its title game: Hobart College always wins (12 straight since the championship was created in 1980) and always hosts.

OK, Hobart doesn't always host. Three times, the team that lost to Hobart was the host.

This season, however, will be different because of a one-year trial recommended by the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee and approved by the NCAA Executive Committee last August. Hobart probably will be one of the top contenders and may well win again, but if the Statesmen advance to the title game, they won't host. Neither will any other competing team.

Shared site

This year, the Division III championship will be played Sunday, May 24, at Franklin Field in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. That also is the site of one of the NCAA's most heavily attended events, the Division I Men's Lacrosse Championship semifinals (May 23) and final (May 25). The Division I championship has been a one-weekend, one-site event since 1986.

David J. Urick of Georgetown University, chair of the committee, said the seed for the change was sown with sentiments expressed during recent years in Division III breakout sessions at annual meetings of the United States Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association (USILA) and United States Lacrosse Coaches Association (USLCA).

Coaches attending those meetings expressed a desire to enhance the Division III championship and bring it more exposure. A logical way to do that was to move to the Division I site.

Urick said that the entire committee favored the change and the two committee representatives from Division III, Thomas R. Cafaro, athletics director at Nichols College, and

"It may mean greater exposure than there ever has been. Depending on the site, it could enhance recruiting and increase alumni support. It's a great opportunity for the teams that make it."

Guy Van Arsdale
Rochester Institute of Technology

Geoffrey M. Miller, athletics director at Washington College (Maryland), were especially strong supporters. Division III schools that were contacted by the committee also liked the idea.

Draw more fans

The biggest reason for the change is that the game should draw more fans. Past Division III sites included Hobart's home, Geneva, New York; Chestertown, Maryland (Washington's home); Delaware, Ohio (Ohio Wesleyan University); and Salisbury, Maryland (Salisbury State University), none of which provides the access of a metropolitan area.

Fairness also was a factor in the change, according to Urick. Before moving to Georgetown in 1990, he led the Statesmen to their first 10 championships, eight of which came at Geneva's Boswell Field.

"A lot of Division III people expressed a desire for a more level playing field, and it's easy to translate that into 'they wanted to get it out of Geneva,'" he said. "I still have a lot of close ties to Hobart. It happens to be a great site and they handle it well. I tend to think if something isn't broken, you don't fix it, but having been away for a few years, I can appreciate the feelings of others more."

Another coach who can see the issue from both sides but has more at stake than Urick is

Hobart College has celebrated nine of its 12 championships—including this one in 1990—on its home field. This year, however, the Statesmen could be celebrating in Philadelphia.

Rochester Institute of Technology's Guy Van Arsdale, who played goalkeeper for Urick's first four title teams (1980-83) and coached there the next two years. Having coached the Tigers, a perennial contender, since 1989, Van Arsdale is ready for the site change and said he might support it even if he were still at Hobart.

"It may mean greater exposure than there ever has been," he said. "Depending on the site (in future years), it could enhance recruiting and increase alumni support. It's a great opportunity for the teams that make it."

Retain dignity

Third-year Hobart coach B. J. O'Hara said his school and others that have hosted will be missing a great opportunity to rally their community around hosting the event. But he welcomes the opportunities the change provides with minor reservations.

"We want to make sure that we retain the dignity of the Division III championship and not make it a sideshow, and I'm sure the committee will do everything it can to make sure that doesn't happen," he said.

Miller, whose school has been runner-up five times and has hosted once, said he likes the neutral site but is more interested in increasing interest in the game than anything else.

"Let's be honest, Hobart hasn't won because they're at home," he said. "They've won because they've had the better team."

"This gives people who normally wouldn't go access. A lot of people wouldn't go to Geneva because it's hard to get to, but they might go to Philadelphia or Baltimore, particularly if they can combine it with something else (like the Division I championship)."

Weather factor

If support for increasing exposure is unanimous, so is the worry of what happens in the event of bad weather. That was the problem utmost in Urick's mind during the discussion of the change.

"My biggest concern as chair of the committee was that we not do anything to jeopardize the success of the Division I championship," he said. "For the most part, the game is played outside. The Division I game should be played under the best possible conditions. If there is inclement weather, it might put an undue burden on the host."

Since Franklin Field has artificial turf, the weather isn't as much of a concern this year. But if the concept is approved for future use, the potential for problems increases, since the next three championships already have been awarded to natural-turf sites.

A seemingly simple solution would be to make artificial turf a requirement for selection as a host, but Urick said that isn't realistic and isn't the direction the committee wants to take.

Instead, the committee made ability to cover the field a strong prerequisite for hosting.

"We've held our breath for no rain since Division I moved to one weekend (in 1986)," Urick said. "Hopefully (the weather) will never become a big issue. It was a concern, but not a big enough reason not to try this for one year."

Division I supportive

Division I coaches, it would seem, have the most to lose. Top-ranked Johns Hopkins' coach Tony Seaman, however, wholeheartedly supports the experiment.

"I think it's wonderful," he said. "I wouldn't be surprised if Sunday is the biggest attendance day, with the people who came down for Saturday deciding to stay an extra day and the people who come for Monday deciding to come a day early."

Urick said the only other possible negative the committee saw was that because the Division III championship is being moved back a week, some schools might be out of session and would have to incur the expense of keeping their student-athletes on campus for another week. But schools contacted by the committee didn't see that as a problem.

Last year's Division I weekend at Syracuse was attended by 14,544 for the semifinals and 8,293 for the championship game (the Orangemen lost in the semifinals). In 1990, at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, 15,154 attended the semifinals and 19,070 were at the final. At the University of Maryland, College Park, in 1989, 20,615 were at the semifinals and 23,827 were at the final.

Last year in Division III at Salisbury, Maryland, 3,467 attended. The previous year at Hobart saw 3,857 attend.

Ticket packages for the entire weekend in Philadelphia are $25 and can be ordered by calling the University of Pennsylvania at 215/898-6151. Tickets for individual sessions are $14 for the Division I semifinals, $7 for the Division III final and $12 for the Division I final, and can be bought only on the day of the game.

Last year's Division III championship at Salisbury State University attracted 3,467 fans. Members of the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee believe playing the game at the same site as the Division I championship will boost attendance—the Division I event is one of the best-attended of NCAA championships—while eliminating the host school's home-field advantage. Salisbury State became only the third school other than Hobart to host the championship game; Hobart has hosted nine of the 12 title contests.

Duke's Christian Laettner looks for two points over Indiana's Eric Anderson (No. 32) and Alan Henderson in the Blue Devils' April 4 semifinal victory. Laettner struggled against Indiana and again two nights later in the first half of the championship game against Michigan, but led the team down the stretch as it put away the Wolverines for the title.

Indiana freshman Alan Henderson slams home two of his 15 points against Duke, over the objections of the Blue Devils' Thomas Hill (No. 12), Christian Laettner (No. 32) and Brian Davis

Blue Devils in heaven after another championship

It took 19 years, but an NCAA Division I men's basketball team has proven it can successfully defend its championship title.

Fueled by a strong defensive effort in the game's final 20 minutes, Duke defeated Michigan, 71-51, to win the Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 6 in Minneapolis. Not since UCLA in 1973 had a team repeated as national champion. It was Duke's third straight appearance in the final game and the Blue Devils' fifth consecutive Final Four appearance.

The Blue Devils got a big second-half performance from all-American Christian Laettner and a solid game from forward Grant Hill as Duke claimed its second NCAA championship. Laettner scored 14 of his game-high 19 points in the second period. Hill, whose second-half play ignited several Duke scoring runs, had a solid game, scoring 18 points, grabbing 10 rebounds and adding five assists, two blocked shots and three steals.

"Coach (Mike Krzyzewski) just challenged us at half time to play better," Hill said. "We just tried to come out and play hard. Michigan played hard. I'm just so happy we came through in the stretch."

Krzyzewski credited Laettner's stepped-up play in the second half as one of the keys in the win.

"Christian had his worst half of the year. His play in the second half was the difference in the game," Krzyzewski said.

Duke trailed at half time, 31-30. Laettner committed seven turnovers and scored just five points in the first period. But Laettner scored the Blue Devils' first five points of the second half, and Duke grabbed a lead it never gave up.

Duke built a seven-point lead with 11 minutes remaining in the game on a three-point jumper by Laettner. Michigan pulled to within three on a layup by guard Jalen Rose, making the score 48-45 with just over seven minutes left. But the Wolverines went scoreless during the next 3½ minutes and Duke outscored Michigan, 23-6, to close out the game. The Blue Devils scored on their last 12 possessions of the game, including five baskets by Hill.

Michigan was led in scoring and rebounding by Chris Webber. The freshman forward scored 14 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Rose was the only other Wolverine in double figures, scoring 11 points.

Michigan coach Steve Fisher lauded Duke's defensive effort.

"In the second half, we had no semblance of order on offense, and I think it was as much their defense as anything. We unraveled with some bad shots, and you can't do that against a really good team," Fisher said.

Duke point guard Bobby Hurley was named the tournament's most outstanding player. In two games, Hurley had 35 points and 11 assists in 74 minutes of play. Hurley's tournament assist total stands at 129 in 17 games, an NCAA tournament record. He was joined on the all-tournament team by Laettner, Grant Hill, Rose and Webber.

Duke ended the year with a 34-2 record. The Blue Devils carried the wire services' No. 1 ranking from start to finish, Michigan, which started five freshmen in the championship game, finished with a 25-9 record.

Laettner ended his collegiate career with several NCAA tournament records, including scoring (407 points), free throws made (130) and free-throw attempts (155). Laettner tied Oklahoma's Mookie Blaylock with 32 steals.

Duke earned a spot in the final game with an 81-78 victory over Indiana. The Blue Devils hit clutch free throws in the game's final minutes and fought off a furious Indiana comeback to preserve the win. Hurley scored a game-high 26 points. Michigan gained a berth in the championship game by overcoming a stingy Cincinnati defense and defeating the Bearcats, 76-72. Jimmy King led Michigan with 17 points. Webber added 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Cardinal rules in Division I, awaits Arsenio Hall invitation

Stanford freshman Rachel Hemmer played like a freshman in the Cardinal's first game of the 1992 Women's Final Four. In the championship game, however, Hemmer showed senior-like intensity and poise, leading Stanford to a 78-62 win over Western Kentucky April 5 in Los Angeles.

Hemmer scored 18 points, 12 in the first half, and grabbed a game-high 15 rebounds as Stanford claimed its second title in three years. Hemmer's performance in the championship game followed a less-than-spectacular semifinal showing against Virginia, in which the 6-3 forward scored four points and had three rebounds in just 19 minutes of play.

"Rachel has been having a fabulous year, and she is fearless," Stanford coach Tara VanDerveer said. "I just said, 'Rachel, just play the way you've been playing all year.'"

Hemmer was one of four Cardinal players in double figures. Guards Christy Hedgpeth and Molly Goodenbour contributed 17 and 12 points, respectively. Center Val Whiting had 16 points and 13 rebounds.

VanDerveer, whose team is composed mostly of underclassmen, said the Cardinal accomplished all but one of the goals it set for the season.

"I'm really happy for this team. We started out the season and really didn't know how good we could be," VanDerveer said. "The captains set high goals at the beginning of the season to win the Pac-10 title, do well in the NCAA tournament and win the national championship. We reached them all. Our highest goal, though, is to be on the Arsenio Hall show, which we haven't reached yet."

Stanford, 30-3, trailed twice early in the game before taking the lead for good on a layup by Hemmer at the 13:18 mark in the first half. Western Kentucky, making its third appearance in the Women's Final Four, pulled to within three at 26-23 on guard Kim Pehlke's three-pointer with 6:39 left in the half. Stanford then went on an 11-4 run to close out the half and give the Cardinal a 10-point half-time advantage.

Stanford, which held Western Kentucky to just 29.6 percent shooting for the game, stretched its lead to as many as 24 points in the second period.

The Lady Toppers made a run at Stanford late in the game, closing the gap to 68-59 on a free throw by forward Liesa Lang with 2:23 left. Western Kentucky got no closer as the Cardinal hit 10 of 12 free throws in the last two minutes to preserve the victory.

Western Kentucky, 27-8, was paced by Lang's 18 points and 12 rebounds. Pehlke added 16 points. Pehlke had a career-high 30 points in the Lady Toppers' semifinal win against Southwest Missouri State.

"It was a dream come true to get here," Pehlke said. "After we lost all of those games at the start of the season, I didn't think we'd be here. I felt confident throughout the whole game that we would win. When we started fouling with about 1:30 left, that's when I knew we'd lost. It was a frustrating game."

Western Kentucky coach Paul Sanderford was impressed by the Cardinal.

"I thought we got beat by a better basketball team than us," Sanderford said. "We got great shots. We just didn't shoot well. Fatigue was a factor. Stanford's defense was a factor. They killed us on the boards."

Stanford reached the final with a 66-65 win over top-ranked Virginia. All-American Dawn Staley's last-second shot missed the mark as the Cavaliers ended their season with a 32-2 record. Led by Pehlke, Western Kentucky defeated Southwest Missouri State, 84-72, in the other semifinal. The Lady Bears ended their season with a 31-3 record.

Goodenbour was named the tournament's most outstanding player. She had 28 points, 12 assists and six steals in 75 minutes of play. Joining her on the all-tournament team were Hemmer, Whiting, Pehlke and Staley.

Lake Superior State comeback brings Division I ice hockey title

Lake Superior State rallied from a two-goal deficit in the first period and won the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship April 4 with a 5-3 victory over Wisconsin.

It was the second championship for the Soo Lakers in five years and also their second in the state of New York. Lake Superior State won the 1988 championship in Lake Placid with a 4-3 overtime victory over St. Lawrence.

Said Laker coach Jeff Jackson, "New York's good to us, but we're looking forward to going home to the Soo (Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan) and being where we feel the most comfortable."

The game featured four power-play goals and 11 Lake Superior State man-advantage situations—including four 5-on-3 match-ups. Wisconsin was whistled 14 times for 46 minutes of penalties, Lake Superior State 10 times for 20 minutes.

"Hockey isn't designed to be three-quarters penalties," said Wisconsin coach Jeff Sauer. "It's designed to be one-quarter penalties. Too many penalties takes away from the players and the fans."

Jackson said his team learned from a similar situation last year when it lost its composure and a best-two-of-three quarterfinal series against Clarkson at Lake Superior State.

Said Jackson, "An official can be an unbiased obstacle in a game. We kept our emotions in control this year; last year we didn't."

"Tempers were heated because there were a lot of penalties and a lot of special-team hockey. It was a very chaotic game to be involved in."

Wisconsin built a 2-0 lead in the first period on scores by forward Jason Zent, who scored all three Badger goals. But Lake Superior State came back in the second period on goals by Paul Constantin and Tim Hanley to even the score. Hanley's goal was huge for the Soo, as he tied the score with six seconds left in the period. The Lakers held the Badgers to only three shots on goal in the second period.

Said Lakers goaltender Darrin Madeley, "We played a little nervous in the first period, because no one's been (here) before. We came back out in the second, we got the puck down low, and I think that's what started us off."

The teams traded goals during the first half of the third period. The Lakers' Michael Smith scored an unassisted power-play goal at the 4:16 mark, then Zent completed his hat trick at 8:24 to tie the game for the Badgers.

Lake Superior State freshman forward Brian Rolston scored the game-winner when he skated out from behind the Wisconsin net and looked to pass to a teammate, but instead rifled a shot in on Wisconsin goalie Duane Derksen's short side.

"I thought he would wrap it around or dish it across, and I was going to try to stuff him," said Derksen, who was trying to notch his 80th career victory. "I was up, and I should have been down."

The Lakers finished the season with a 30-9-4 record. Wisconsin ended its season at 27-14-2.

Said Madeley, "I've never won anything like this before. It might take a month to sink in. We came in with the feeling that we were the underdog. It's nice for a small school (3,200 enrolled students) like us to win. It's great for the whole city of Sault Ste. Marie."

Constantin was named the tournament's most outstanding player. Also named to the all-tournament team were teammates Rolston, defenseman Mark Astley and goaltender Madeley, and Wisconsin's Zent and defenseman Barry Richter.

Scott Pellerin

Maine player honored with Baker award

Scott Pellerin, a senior left wing for the University of Maine ice hockey team and the school's career scoring leader, is this year's Hobey Baker Memorial Award winner as the outstanding player in the sport.

The announcement of Pellerin's selection was made April 3 in Albany, New York, site of the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Pellerin finished the season with 32 goals and 25 assists and scored at least one point in 31 games and at least one goal in 20 games. He was named the 1992 Hockey East player of the year, first team all-Hockey East and the most valuable player at the Hockey East championship tournament.

Pellerin finished his career with a school-record 222 points in 166 games. He became the first player in Maine history to record 100 goals and 100 assists in a career.

"Scott Pellerin is a complete player," said Maine coach Shawn Walsh. "He is a complete person. He's a role model in the state of Maine. He's a ferocious hitter. He plays the game very, very physically, but very clean."

Pellerin beat out nine other finalists, including runner-up Daniel Laperriere from St. Lawrence University.

Other finalists were Scott Beattie, Northern Michigan University; Duane Derksen, University of Wisconsin; Madison, Denny Felsner, University of Michigan; Rob Gaudreau, Providence College; Greg Johnson, University of North Dakota; Darrin Madeley, Lake Superior State University; Larry Olimb, University of Minnesota; Twin Cities, and Jean-Yves Roy, Maine.

Survey indicates males favored

Men at most NCAA Division I universities are far more likely than women to participate in intercollegiate athletics, and their programs receive a far larger proportion of sports spending than women's programs, according to a school-by-school study by the Chronicle of Higher Education.

The Chronicle's study found that at 130 Division I schools, male athletes outnumbered female athletes by at least two to one. And men received at least twice as much in athletics grants-in-aid than women at 121 of the schools, the study found.

However, 97 of the 298 Division I schools nearly a third did not respond to the survey.

Jury finds no libel in case of Switzer's book

Former University of Oklahoma head football coach Barry Switzer praised the verdict reached by a jury April 2 that he did not libel reporter Jack Taylor Jr.

After four days of deliberations following a six-week trial, the jury voted, 10-3, that Switzer and Taylor were guilty of invading one another's privacy. The jury, however, also found that Switzer did not libel Taylor.

"If it was a football game, we won by half a hundred," Switzer told The Associated Press. "My attorney said, 'No coach, it was by 34-14.' I said, 'If you want it to be 34-14, that's fine.'"

Taylor, who works for the Los Angeles Daily News, appeared shaken.

"We feel our reputation and my family name has been restored by this verdict, although it is not entirely as we had hoped," Taylor said.

Taylor claimed that Switzer's autobiography, "Bootlegger's Boy," linked the reporter to a scheme to plant drugs on an Oklahoma football player around the time of the 1988 Federal Express Orange Bowl.

After the verdict, most of the jurors lined up for Switzer to autograph copies of the book that were given to them to follow during the lengthy trial.

Taylor sued Switzer for libel, slander and invasion of privacy. He was seeking $30 million. Switzer also sued Taylor for invasion of privacy, alleging the reporter had illegally obtained his income tax returns. Switzer sought $6 million.

Codefendants in Taylor's lawsuit were Switzer's brother, Don Switzer; Austin, Texas, writer Edwin Allen "Bud" Shrake Jr., and book publisher William Morrow & Co. Inc., and Switzer's corporation, Prime Time Inc.

All the defendants were found to have invaded Taylor's privacy, but no actual damages were awarded. The jury also charged Switzer and his company with malice, and essentially awarded Taylor a $95,000 penalty from Switzer.

But the jury also found that Taylor invaded Switzer's privacy when he obtained the coach's tax returns. Taylor testified that he received the returns anonymously and never wrote a story based on them, but they were in his files and available for other reporters to view.

The jury found that Taylor was guilty of malice, too, and awarded Switzer and Prime Time a total of $18,500.

Taylor's attorney, Jack Ayres of Dallas, said the verdict was defective because it contained no actual damages and that he would recommend Taylor seek another trial.

Concerning Taylor's allegation over Switzer's book, jury foreman Gram Poole said, "A major problem was the different ways you could read the manuscript."

In a six-page chapter called "The Setup," Switzer targeted Taylor, an award-winning journalist whom the coach disliked because of what he said were Taylor's "negative" stories about Switzer.

The chapter mentions Taylor, who then worked for the Dallas Times Herald, in describing an alleged conspiracy to plant drugs on a reserve Sooners linebacker.

Taylor denied having anything to do with the alleged scheme.

Ron Kudlacik (No. 66) and Rob Nightingale (No. 64) were among Western Maryland College football players who met with a group of Russian children before the start of the game. A large group of Russian children, including these, later performed in the pregame entertainment for the crowd of about 4,000.

Western Maryland College quarterback Paul McCord (No. 9) instructs his Russian counterpart in the art of taking a snap from center.

Western Maryland scores with Russian football tour

By Scott E. Deitch
Western Maryland College

Think you've seen everything in college football?

Try this: Players' kicks bouncing off the stadium ceiling. No hash marks, but plenty of soccer lines, on the artificial turf. A crowd that cheers for both sides any time either squad moves the ball down the field. One team wearing three different styles of jerseys.

Sounds like the worst nightmare of a sports information director? Think again. All those things, and many others, really happened last month when the Western Maryland College football team became the first United States collegiate squad to play in Russia.

Western Maryland defeated a team of Russian all-stars in Moscow March 17 in the first football exhibition between an American college and a team from the former Soviet Union. The final score was 47-7, with the Division III Green Terrors scoring on their first three possessions and the Euro-Asian League all-stars scoring in the last minute of the game. The contest was played before a crowd of about 4,000 in the Central Sports Club of the Red Army.

Highlights of the game, aside from the humorous moments, included 130 yards rushing and two touchdowns for senior tailback Eric Frees and a touchdown and 112 yards rushing by freshman tailback Mark Vergalito. Western Maryland also intercepted four passes—one returned 42 yards for a touchdown by sophomore free safety Gary Carder—and recovered three fumbles by the Russians.

Western Maryland, through the aegis of International Sports Connection (ISC), Inc., a sports travel and marketing organization located in Gadsden, Alabama, sent its team for the cultural experience as well as to pass along some fundamentals of the game.

The Russian team was composed of members from teams in the Euro-Asian League of American Football and the American Football League of Russia. The championship team from the latter league, the Moscow Bears, toured the United States in 1990, competing against several semi-professional teams. John Ralston, a former head coach at Stanford University and with the National Football League's Denver Broncos, directed the Bears during their visit and guided the Russian players against Western Maryland.

The Green Terrors, with 48 players and three coaches, shared their football knowledge with the Russians during two joint practices before the exhibition and during a clinic two days after the contest.

"We took our role as teachers very seriously," Western Maryland coach Dale Sprague said. "I told the team that they were ambassadors of American football, which meant that we needed to perform to the best of our abilities both in the exhibition and in the practices."

Ralston expressed his appreciation on behalf of the Russians, who have been playing the sport for about three years.

"They're starving, just absolutely starving, for instruction," he told The Baltimore Sun. "I'm convinced the Russians are more like the Americans than anyone else is. They're naturally aggressive. They're not afraid. They just don't know how."

Western Maryland's players also expect Russian football to improve.

"The touchdown they scored will give them more confidence and motivation," freshman fullback Brian Stiff said in an interview with the Carroll County Times.

"The only difference between the Russians and Americans is time," added senior linebacker Jim Webster.

Besides the practices and exhibition, the Western Maryland travel party visited many of Russia's historical landmarks, including the Kremlin, Moscow Circus, Red Square and Moscow State University.

Travel expenses were incurred by the individuals who made the trip, although a series of fund-raising efforts continue to be undertaken by the players' parents. Proceeds from those endeavors will be used to defray the cost for each of the players.

The 48 student-athletes represented nearly two-thirds of Western Maryland's 1991 roster. They did not miss any class time since the trip occurred during the college's spring break. Players' eligibility was not affected since the trip complied with NCAA guidelines regarding foreign tours.

Governmental affairs report

The following is a review of recent Federal government activities affecting the NCAA membership. These reports are prepared by Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C. This report was presented to the NCAA Council for its April 13-15 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Congressional activity regarding intercollegiate athletics reform

Disclosure of athletics revenues and expenses. On March 26, during consideration of H.R. 3553, the higher education reauthorization bill, the House of Representatives adopted an amendment sponsored by Rep. Paul Henry, R-Michigan, requiring institutions awarding athletically related financial aid to maintain and to make available annually the same information concerning intercollegiate athletics program revenues and expenses as they periodically have reported for use in the NCAA-sponsored studies conducted by Mitchell Raiborn of Bradley University. The data required would include revenues and expenses for football, men's basketball, women's basketball, all other men's sports and all other women's sports, as well as total revenues and expenses for the intercollegiate athletics program and the institution. Revenues and expenses not allocable to particular sports would be included only in the calculation of total revenues and expenses. An audit of the data in accordance with normal institutional procedures would be required with the same frequency as currently is required under NCAA institutional control standards for Divisions I and II.

This amendment is considerably less burdensome than Rep. Henry's original proposal, which would have required per-sport allocation of revenues and expenses for all sports offered in the program and contemplated uniform Federal accounting standards for allocation of items among sports. As approved, the amendment does not establish any special Federal accounting or auditing standards. The changes were worked out following the adoption by the NCAA Convention last January of a resolution opposing the original Henry proposal.

The House passed H.R. 3553 on March 26. The Senate passed its version of the reauthorization bill, which contains no provision parallel to the Henry proposal, on February 21. The differences between the two bills will be resolved in conference. The Senate is expected to acquiesce in the revised Henry amendment. President Bush has threatened to veto the bill over other provisions that would raise the maximum Pell Grant and authorize a direct student loan program.

Commerce subcommittee meeting. The House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness has scheduled a hearing April 9 on "Title IX: the Effects on Women's Sports and Gender Equity." NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and Big Ten Conference Assistant Commissioner Phyllis L. Howlett are among the witnesses scheduled to testify. The subcommittee initially had planned to hold the hearing last fall but delayed scheduling the hearing until after the NCAA issued its gender-equity study. The General Accounting Office is expected to issue its own gender-equity study, which will address the compensation of coaches of women's intercollegiate teams, either shortly before or at the hearing. The subcommittee is planning another hearing on Title IX and gender equity in May, but a date has not been set. NCAA President Judith M. Sweet may testify at the May hearing.

Review of athletics programs at service academies. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-West Virginia, has submitted recommendations to the Department of Defense (DOD) for members of the new National Review Board that is to examine the athletics programs at the three military service academies. The board, which was established in the DOD Authorization Act signed into law late last year, is charged with reviewing on an annual basis all aspects of the athletics programs at those institutions, including the appropriateness of the balance between athletics and academics.

Other pending legislation. No action has been taken on the variety of other measures introduced last session that relate to intercollegiate athletics. These bills include (1) the "Collegiate Athletics Reform Act" (H.R. 3046) introduced by Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, (2) two measures (H.R. 3233 and H.R. 2243) introduced by Rep. Mervyn Dymally, D-California, to establish a National Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, (3) the due process bill (H.R. 2157) introduced by Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-New York, and (4) Rep. Richard Neal's, D-Massachusetts, resolution (H. Con. Res. 119) expressing Congressional support for the Knight Commission recommendations.

Anti-gambling legislation

The omnibus crime bill (H.R. 3371) remains stalled in the Senate as Democrats have been unable to muster sufficient votes to invoke closure and to cut off debate on the bill by Republicans. The House adopted the conference report late last November by a small margin. The conference agreement includes a provision that would prohibit all new state-sponsored or state-authorized sports gambling schemes. It would grandfather the Oregon and Delaware professional sports lotteries and the Nevada "sports books" and provide a one-year "window" for New Jersey voters to authorize casino-based sports book gambling in that state.

If the crime bill is not scheduled for Senate consideration, it is possible that a free-standing antigambling bill, S. 474, will be considered by the Senate. On February 21, 38 senators signed a letter to Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole requesting that they schedule S. 474 for early floor consideration. The bill has 61 cosponsors in the Senate and thus has sufficient support to pass the Senate. As reported from committee, S. 474 does not contain the New Jersey window contained in the crime bill conference report.

Tax treatment of sponsorship payments and other income

IRS guidelines on sponsorship payments. In late January, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) issued proposed guidelines for use in auditing arrangements for corporate sponsorship of athletics and other events sponsored by tax-exempt organizations. The issue whether such arrangements create taxable unrelated business income became a major source of discussion when the IRS ruled last year that sponsorship payments made in connection with the Mobil Cotton Bowl constituted taxable income to the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association.

The IRS guidelines provide assistance in determining the taxability of certain types of sponsorship payments. Merely naming a building after a donor, listing contributors in a program or associating a sponsor's name with the name of the event will not give rise to taxable income. But certain provisions in the agreement between the sponsor and the tax-exempt organization that assure the sponsor a substantial benefit in exchange for the payment are suspect and may lead the IRS to conclude that the sponsorship payments are taxable. Such provisions include requirements as to the size and location of the sponsor's name, availability of participants in the event for appearances or endorsements, the amount of necessary media coverage and perquisites for the sponsor's clients or executives.

Comments on the proposed guidelines were to have been submitted by April 3. Legislation currently is pending in both houses of Congress that would insulate all forms of revenues from amateur athletics events from Federal tax (see below).

Pending legislation. In response to the IRS guidelines and earlier IRS pronouncements on the issue, a provision was included in the Democratic tax package (H.R. 4210, the "Economic Growth Acceleration Act of 1992," introduced February 11) that directed the secretary of the treasury to conduct a study on the tax treatment of corporate sponsorship payments received by charitable and other tax-exempt organizations in connection with athletics and other events, including the ramifications of the proposed IRS guidelines, discussed above. The provision would have required the secretary to report the results of this study to the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means. The conferees also expressed concern with the application of the proposed IRS guidelines to the Olympics and stated their understanding that Olympic royalty and broadcasting income would be exempt from the unrelated business income tax. President Bush vetoed the tax bill March 24 and the House failed to override the veto the next day. The future of the bill is uncertain, particularly in light of election-year politics.

No action has been taken on the various proposals introduced last session in both chambers to exempt income from intercollegiate athletics events from the unrelated business income tax. These bills include H.R. 2464, introduced by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Georgia, a senior member of the House Ways and Means Committee; H.R. 538, a predecessor measure to the Jenkins bill introduced by the late Silvio Conte, and S. 866, introduced by Sen. John Breaux, D-Louisiana, a member of the Senate finance committee. Nor have hearings been scheduled on the contrary bill, H.R. 969, introduced last year by Rep. Henry, which would tax athletics event broadcasting and other income as unrelated business income to a college or university.

Title IX and Women's Sports

Remedies for violations of Title IX. In a decision that significantly expands the remedies available to plaintiffs who allege sex discrimination under Title IX, the Supreme Court ruled on February 26 in Franklin v. Gwinnett County Public Schools that a Title IX plaintiff may recover monetary damages for intentional violations of the statute. The court rejected the arguments of the school system and the Bush Administration that Title IX remedies should be limited to back pay and prospective injunctive relief, and that damages should not be awarded. It acknowledged that remedies are limited under statutes such as Title IX that are enacted pursuant to Congressional spending-clause authority but said that this limitation did not apply when, as in the case before it, "intentional" discrimination was alleged.

Guidance concerning elimination of sports.

The Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has prepared a draft technical assistance memorandum to college and university presidents concerning Title IX requirements and the elimination of intercollegiate athletics teams. Its stated purpose is to explain how institutions may avoid violating Title IX when making decisions to eliminate intercollegiate sports offerings. The draft memorandum discusses Title IX requirements relating to equal and effective accommodation of athletics interests and abilities of male and female students and how elimination of teams under a variety of circumstances should be analyzed. It also addresses the conditions under which institutions must offer separate teams for male and female student-athletes. OCR has circulated the draft memorandum to a variety of organizations for comment. NCAA Executive Director Schultz submitted comments on the draft in January, and OCR reportedly has heard from other organizations. After considering the comments, OCR plans to send the final memorandum to college and university presidents nationwide.

Complaint investigations. Seven Title IX intercollegiate athletics complaints have been filed since we last reported on complaint investigations in the April 1991 governmental affairs report. The institutions concerned are State University College at Oswego, Loyola College (Maryland), Eastern Kentucky University, Mankato State University, the University of Texas at San Antonio, Weber State University and Northern State College in Aberdeen, South Dakota. The complaint against Loyola College was closed for lack of jurisdiction; the others remain open.

On February 14, OCR issued a detailed letter of findings in its widely publicized investigation of the complaint filed against the Brooklyn College intercollegiate athletics department. OCR found that the college was not in compliance with Title IX in the accommodation of athletics interests and abilities of men and women and in the provision of equal opportunity for male and female athletes in a series of program areas. At the same time, OCR concluded that the college was in compliance in the award of athletics financial assistance, which OCR determined had been awarded in substantial proportion to the participation rates of men and women students. On the basis of a written assurance executed by the college, in which it agreed to take specific actions to address the disparities cited by OCR, OCR found that the college was fulfilling its obligations under Title IX and closed the case.

Compliance reviews. In February, OCR issued a letter of findings in the Title IX intercollegiate athletics compliance review of Mendocino College, a copy of which has not yet been made available. OCR has not yet issued letters of findings in the compliance reviews that were conducted last year at five other postsecondary institutions. OCR plans to conduct a total of four Title IX intercollegiate athletics compliance reviews during fiscal year 1992. As previously reported, one has been initiated at Cerritos College in California; OCR has not yet notified, and therefore has not released the names of, the other three institutions.

OCR investigator's manual. To date, OCR has not made changes in the Title IX athletics investigator's manual issued in April 1990. Representatives of several women's organizations have asked OCR to revise the manual in a number of areas, including the overall approach to athletics investigations, athletics financial assistance, effective accommodation of interests and abilities and equivalence in other benefits and opportunities (coaching, equipment and supplies, scheduling, and travel and per diem allowances).

Legislative developments. On March 10,

President Bush signed into law a resolution designating February 6, 1992, as "National Women in Sports Day." The resolution (H.J. Res. 395) was introduced January 30 by Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine. A related measure, S.J. Res. 239, was introduced in the Senate January 21 by Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon.

Anti-Drug Abuse Legislation

Anabolic steroids. The text of the bill (H.R. 867) introduced last year by Rep. William Hughes, D-New Jersey, that would establish criminal penalties for physical trainers and coaches who induce athletes to use anabolic steroids has been included in the omnibus crime bill (H.R. 3371). As noted in a previous section, it is unclear whether the conference report on the crime bill will come up for a vote in the Senate.

Drug testing. No action has been taken on the series of measures to impose Federal standards regulating drug-testing programs. The pending bills include H.R. 33, a comprehensive bill dealing with drug-testing procedures; S. 2008, the "Quality Assurance in the Private Sector Drug-Testing Act," introduced in November by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and H.R. 2422, introduced last year by Rep. Gerald B. Solomon, R-New York. While they differ, S. 2008 and H.R. 2422 would limit the circumstances in which drug testing may occur and restrict random drug testing to "sensitive" employees and professional athletes.

Rep. Solomon reportedly is planning to introduce a companion measure to Sen. Hatch's drug testing bill.

National Youth Sports Program

The Administration budget submitted to Congress proposes to continue Federal funding for the National Youth Sports Program (NYSP) in fiscal year 1993 at $5 million, far below the fiscal year 1992 funding level of $12 million. Except for funding for the NYSP, the budget proposes eliminating all funding for the Community Services Block Grant program through which the NYSP is authorized.

On February 27, as part of an ongoing effort to inform Congress about the value and achievements of the program, NYSP project representatives met with their congressmen and senators to discuss 1993 funding for the NYSP. Also on February 27, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Arizona, attended an NYSP reception held in Washington, D.C. Representatives of 174 colleges and universities conducting 175 NYSP projects attended the event. Sen. DeConcini announced that he supports a $15 million fiscal year 1993 NYSP appropriation.

Scholarships and student loans

Scholarships for Olympic athletes. During consideration of the Senate version of the Higher Education Reauthorization Act (S. 1150), the Senate adopted an amendment offered by Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Michigan, to authorize $6 million in grants for fiscal year 1993 and each of the six succeeding fiscal years for student-athletes training at a U.S. Olympic Training Center or the U.S. Olympic Education Center and studying on a part-time or full-time basis at an accredited college or university. The grants would go directly to students for tuition, room and board. The Senate passed S. 1150 February 21. As discussed above, the president has threatened to veto the House version of the Higher Education Reauthorization Act.

Taxation of scholarships and interest paid on student loans. There has been renewed attention, although no final results, on measures to restore the deduction for interest on higher education loans and the exclusion from income for scholarships, both of which were eliminated in the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

The tax package vetoed by President Bush (see earlier discussion) contains a provision authorizing a credit of up to $400 for interest paid by individuals on loans for qualified higher education expenses, subject to certain conditions. The credit would have been phased out for taxpayers in higher tax brackets. As previously noted, the prospects for eventual passage of this legislation are uncertain.

In addition, Rep. Tom Lewis, R-Florida, introduced a bill (H.R. 4418) March 10 that would restore the prior law exclusion for scholarships and fellowships. Earlier, on February 26, Rep. Richard Baker, R-Louisiana, introduced a measure (H.R. 4319) to restore the deduction for interest on higher education loans and to permit penalty-free withdrawals from qualified retirement plans to pay for higher education expenses. Hearings have not been scheduled on either bill.

No action has been taken on the seven bills introduced last session that would restore the deduction for interest paid on student loans and the exclusion from taxation for scholarships.

Copyright and Communications

Cable copyright reform. Attention has focused on the "compulsory license" for cable systems, which is the mechanism that authorizes cable systems to retransmit television broadcast stations. The renewed attention is the result of a number of factors, including regulatory, technological and legal developments during the period since the compulsory license was adopted in 1976. The House Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration sponsored three meetings between November 1991 and February 1992 to discuss the compulsory license and suggested reforms, in which interested parties and government representatives participated. On March 2, the Register of Copyrights issued a detailed report commenting on policy issues relating to the cable and satellite compulsory licenses and recommending that the compulsory license be modified to account for developments since 1976.

This focus on the compulsory license comes as Congress continues to debate measures to strengthen local and Federal regulation of the cable-television industry. One of the many provisions being considered would require cable systems to obtain consent from broadcast stations before carrying their signals. According to the March 1992 Copyright Office report, the retransmission consent provisions alter the fundamental principle of the compulsory licensing scheme—signal availability—and enable broadcasters to block operation of the compulsory license by denying retransmission consent to cable operators. To address this and other copyright issues raised by the cable legislation, the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Patents, Copyrights and Trademarks is holding hearings April 6 and 29.

In the House, Rep. William J. Hughes, D-New Jersey, chair of the Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration, introduced a bill (H.R. 4522) March 19 that would revise the cable compulsory license. Hearings on the bill were held April 1 and 2.

1989 and 1990 cable and satellite royalty fees. Following extended hearings in the proceeding to distribute the $225.4 million in 1989 cable royalty fees, the Copyright Royalty Tribunal will be issuing a decision by April 27 in "Phase I" allocating the royalties among the major claimant groups. Thereafter, "Phase II" proceedings to distribute fees within claimant groups may begin.

Proceedings to distribute the $2.6 million in 1989 satellite fees have not begun but are expected to begin after the 1989 cable distribution proceeding concludes. Similarly, the Tribunal is not expected to initiate proceedings to distribute the $173.7 million in 1990 cable royalty fees and the $3.4 million in 1990 satellite carrier royalty fees until after the 1989 cable proceeding concludes.

Adjustment of satellite carrier royalty fee. On March 2, the arbitration panel that was convened to consider the fee to be paid in 1993 and 1994 by satellite carriers for the right to retransmit broadcast television signals to owners of home satellite dishes issued its report. It determined that the rate should be increased to 17.5 cents (all prices are per subscriber per month) for independent sta-

Institutional secondary infractions

Below are secondary cases with institutional responsibility only that were processed to completion during the period from March 1 through March 31, 1992.

In addition to the compilation below, there were 14 secondary cases that involved a violation related to the institutional self-study. Under the provisions of NCAA Constitution 6.3.1, member institutions are required to conduct a comprehensive self-study of their athletics programs at least once every five years, the first one not later than July 31, 1991.

To date, there have been two cases involving Division II member institutions and 12 cases involving Division III member institutions that have been processed to completion involving such a violation.

tions, 14 cents for "blackout-proof" stations (which in practical terms are WTBS, WOR and WGN), and six cents for network and public broadcasting stations. These prices are an increase from the current statutory rates of six cents for independent stations and three cents for network and public broadcasting stations. Both the copyright owners and the satellite carriers have appealed the decision to the Tribunal, which must rule by May 2.

Broadcasting of sports events. On April 1, Rep. William O. Lipinski, D-Illinois, introduced a bill (H.R. 4736) to ban pay-per-view telecasting of entertainment events, including sports events, held in facilities constructed, maintained or renovated using public funds, or sponsored by public and private nonprofit organizations.

No action has been taken on the three measures introduced last year relating to telecasting of sports events. These bills include (1) the "Fairness to Fans Act of 1991" (H.R. 2976), which would require professional sports teams to televise most home games on free television in their local communities as a condition of the existing antitrust exemption permitting the pooling of their telecasting rights; (2) S. Res. 172, which expresses the sense of Congress that the immunity from antitrust liability now enjoyed by baseball and the antitrust exemption authorizing professional sports teams to pool their telecasting rights should be limited or rescinded, and (3) the "Public Access to National Sporting Events Act" (S. 1015), which would require that the live television transmission of the Super Bowl and World Series be available over-the-air on a national broadcast television network.

The attending physician, Dr. Soham Patel, told The Associated Press that McNamara should recover completely. McNamara was unconscious for five days after hitting his head on the ice during the game.

Presidents Commission

"What we must face now are financial issues during a time of generally decreasing finances in higher education," O'Brien said.

- Reissue the strategic plan, with certain topics expanded and clarified, early this summer. The third year of the plan—spanning mid-1993 to the January 1995 Convention—will be refined under the title "The Student-Athlete: Welfare, Equity and Access." The topic for the next year in the plan—from mid-1994 to the January 1996 Convention—will be identified by the end of this calendar year.

- Appoint a special Commission subcommittee to monitor the gender-equity issue and work with the NCAA task force that is to be appointed in that area. Commission member Judith F. N. Albino, president of the University of Colorado, has agreed to chair the Commission subcommittee and to serve as the Commission's liaison to the task force.

"This subcommittee is being established to deal particularly with presidential issues that arise in the gender-equity topic," O'Brien said, noting that gender equity also will be a part of the study of financial conditions and the study of student-athlete welfare issues.

- Review in June the specific legislation coming forward regarding changes in the NCAA enforcement and infractions process. The June discussion also will involve representatives of the special committee that worked in that area, chaired by Rex E. Lee of Brigham Young University, and the Committee on Infractions, as well as at least one or two chief executive officers whose institutions have been involved in major infractions cases.

"The Presidents Commission considers an effective and communicative enforcement process as a central tenet of the Association," O'Brien said. The enforcement program must "address the importance of protecting institutional integrity while assuring an effective enforcement process."

- Discussed at length the work of the Special Committee on Certification, chaired by Commission member Joseph N. Crowley, president of the University of Nevada. The Commission will review in June another draft of the legislation to implement that program.

Commission members urged continuing attention to making the certification process as little of an additional burden on institutions as possible, perhaps by relating it as closely as possible to an institution's regional accreditation schedule. It also was agreed that there should be CEO involvement in all aspects of the certification process, including service on peer-review teams.

"We see certification as one of the key mechanisms to assure proper presidential control and authority as well as institutional integrity in intercollegiate athletics," O'Brien stated.

- Authorized a joint meeting of the Commission's Subcommittee on the Role and Structure of the Commission, chaired by Eamon Kelly, president of Tulane University, and the Special Committee to Review NCAA Legislative Procedures, chaired by Crowley, before the June Commission meeting.

O'Brien said several discussions in Dallas led to some suggestions of "ways that changes in the legislative process and in the Convention might enhance the leadership role of the Presidents Commission." It is suggestions of that nature that will be reviewed in a joint meeting of the two committees.

Other highlights

Other topics discussed by the Presidents Commission at its April 1-2 meeting included:

- An initial report by its Subcommittee on Strengthening the Role of the Chief Executive Officer.

- A status report on the discussions and reports of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics.

- A review of the actions taken to support the positions of the Commission at the January 1992 Convention.

- The long-range plan developed by the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee.

- A document on the role of the faculty athletics representative developed by the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association.

The latter two topics were placed on the agenda for discussion in the Commission's June 23-24 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, and representatives of the faculty representatives' group will be invited to attend that meeting.

Community service

Catawba athletes send love

A majority of Catawba College's 326 student-athletes participated in two community-service projects during the Valentine's Day weekend.

Student-athletes assisted Veterans Administration Medical Center staff in escorting patients from their hospital rooms to the recreation building for a Valentine's Day event. Some student-athletes also participated in the American Heart Association's "Mile of Quarters" fund-raising campaign, in which Catawba students helped raise more than $3,000.

Ex-Georgia football player gives

Chip Miller, who played free safety on two of the University of Georgia's most successful teams—the 1976 Cotton Bowl and 1977 Sugar Bowl squads—made a $50,000 contribution to the Vince Dooley Library Endowment Fund at the school. Miller currently is an attorney in Fort Lauderdale, Florida. More than $700,000 already has been raised for the fund, which has a goal of $1 million.

Association provides bus passes

The University of Georgia Athletic Association and the Georgia Power Company recently joined forces to provide 17 city bus passes for children at the Barrow Elementary School in Athens, Georgia. The passes were provided on a need basis to children who live too far away or must cross too many streets to walk to school. Passes also were provided for those who live too close to qualify for free school bus transportation.

Athlete has impact on, off field

During his career at Illinois State University, football player Tony Jones made an impact—not only between the chalked white lines of the turf, but in local elementary, junior and senior high-school classrooms as a speaker against the dangers of drug abuse and the violence often associated with it.

The 1991 Illinois State male athlete of the year, Jones concluded his career as the Redbirds' second-best career tackler, tallying at least 100 tackles in three straight seasons.

"We're hoping Tony's leadership will get others like him involved," said Kathy Schniedwind, who began the Drug Ambassadors program at Illinois State in 1989. "We have students from many of the sports, but not all of them."

Mentor and pupil

Before the Final Four semifinal showdown between their teams April 4 in Minneapolis, coach Bobby Knight (left) of Indiana University, Bloomington, greeted a former pupil, Duke University's Mike Krzyzewski. The Duke coach, who played for Knight at the U.S. Military Academy, led the Blue Devils to victory over his mentor's Hoosiers, then saw Duke win its second straight Division I Men's Basketball Championship with a 20-point victory over the University of Michigan. See story on page 6.

Equity proposed

Big Ten Conference schools are considering a proposal to achieve gender equity in the league's athletics programs, according to The Associated Press.

Under the plan, within five years at least 40 percent of the intercollegiate athletes at each Big Ten school would have to be women. Within 10 years, the number of men and women athletes would have to reflect the percentage of all female and male students enrolled as undergraduates.

Each school has been asked to review the proposals in time for them to be considered at a Big Ten meeting May 11 and 12. University presidents then would take final action at a meeting June 7 and 8.

Washington State football athlete sues over standardized test dispute

A Washington State University student has sued the NCAA, claiming he was denied a football scholarship because of unfair eligibility requirements.

Ken McConkey, a fourth-year walk-on place-kicker, was ruled ineligible for a scholarship last month because he never took the Scholastic Aptitude Test or American College Test, which are required under NCAA initial-eligibility rules.

McConkey claims the requirements discriminate against the Washington Pre-College Test, which he took before graduating from high school in Issaquah, Washington, in 1988, according to The Associated Press.

"As a Washington state resident, his acceptance at WSU was only conditioned upon an acceptable score in the Washington Pre-College entrance examinations, which Mr. McConkey did take and received an acceptable score," the suit says.

The suit was filed in U.S. district court in Seattle. On April 13, Judge Carolyn Dimmick issued a temporary restraining order that allows McConkey to attend spring practice until the issue is settled. The suit will be heard April 13.

The suit asks for more than $50,000 in damages and an order to keep McConkey on the team.

A comparison of McConkey's Washington state test scores indicates he would have scored a 900 on the SAT, well above the 700 mark needed for grant-in-aid eligibility, said his attorney, Sid Osborn of Seattle.

But to apply for a waiver, McConkey would have to have had a cumulative grade-point average in high school of 3.000 (4.000 scale) in 13 core classes required of scholarship athletes, Osborn said.

McConkey had a high-school grade-point average of 2.900 in 11 core classes, the suit says.

For the past three years, McConkey has been a nonscholarship backup kicker to Jason Hanson, who graduated. He was hoping to play this year under scholarship, Osborn said.

McConkey was designated the No. 1 kicker prior to spring practice, but when coaches heard he was ineligible for a scholarship, they asked him to leave the team, the suit says.

McConkey's case is an exception that was not contemplated in the NCAA scholarship rules, Osborn said. "We want the court to say the law is unconstitutional," he said.

After both Smoker, a junior, and eventual champion Gigi DesLauriers of St. Cloud State University cleared 5 feet, 8 inches, they both missed at 5-9 and again when the bar was lowered to 5-8 again. However, Smoker missed at 5-7, while DesLauriers cleared to win the title.

"It was such a great competition," said Lock Haven coach Mark Elliston. "Everyone in the field house was watching and cheering the jumpers on. Patti showed a lot of courage and determination, especially since this was her first appearance at nationals. I was very proud of the way she stayed focused."
