Certification committee issues its final report

The NCAA Special Committee on Certification has issued its final report to the NCAA Council on the committee's initial work toward establishing an institutional certification program for Division I.

The Council reviewed the report and a draft of legislation to implement the program at its April 13-15 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. The NCAA Presidents Commission earlier had reviewed the document at its April 1-2 meeting in Dallas, Texas.

The report cited 10 general conclusions that the committee has reached from eight meetings and three conference calls between July 1991 and March 1992. Among the committee's conclusions were that special effort should be made to assure that the purpose of the process is clear; that administrative burdens should be kept to a minimum; that the program should provide institutions with sufficient opportunity to correct problems but that the consequences for failure to take such actions should be serious; that participation by conferences should be substantive, substantial and facilitative, and that the program should be sensitive to minority and gender-equity concerns.

The report noted that funding "is among the most controversial aspects of the certification program," but the committee remained firm in its earlier recommendation that the participating institutions should bear the expense of campus visits by peer-review teams (estimated at $10,000 per school). The committee reemphasized, however, that the cost of transportation should be a major consideration in forming peer-review teams and that training and other direct administrative costs would be borne by the Association.

The committee also recommended that an expanded special committee of 12 members should be established to facilitate the creation of four basic documents:

- Procedures for general administration of the program.
- The self-study instrument.
- A user's guide for participating institutions and conferences.
- Instructions for peer-review teams.

The report also discussed concerns from the membership about the scheduling of certification visits. Although it concluded that it believes "the claims of potential recruiting or competitive advantages may be exaggerated," it recommended that the full Division I membership be informed of the schedule for the first five years at least one year in advance of the first campus visit. Further, the committee said it will be necessary to structure the visits in such a way that member institutions from a particular conference are spaced evenly over a five-year period.

The legislation will be considered at the 1993 Convention, if approved by the Council.

Draft talk

In a rare appearance by a committee chair before the NCAA Council, Professional Sports Liaison Committee chair Charles Theokas of Temple University makes a point about that panel's recommendation to permit student-athletes to enter a professional league's draft without jeopardizing eligibility in a sport. The proposal would give a student-athlete 30 days after the draft to declare an intention to return to college. A report of highlights of the April 13-15 Council meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, will appear in the April 22 issue of The NCAA News.

Partial-qualifier rate grows in Division II

The percentage of partial qualifiers in Division I changed little between 1990 and 1991, but the percentage for Division II increased sharply, according to a survey performed by the NCAA Research Committee.

The rate of overall Division I partial qualifiers remained at 5.6 percent from 1990 to 1991, but the same figure in Division II jumped from 14.9 percent to 16.8 percent.

Partial qualifiers are prospective student-athletes who did not meet the standardized-test score and/or core-curriculum requirements of Bylaw 14.3.1 but who earned an overall grade-point average of 2.000 (4.000 scale) or better in high school. A total of 263 of 298 Division I institutions (88.3 percent) responded to the survey while 74.3 percent (162 of 218) responded in Division II.

In Division I, football accounted for the largest number (280) and highest percentage of partial qualifiers (8.9 percent) among men's sports. Men's basketball had 54 partial qualifiers (6.8 percent). The rates were decreased from 1990 in both sports, especially in basketball, which fell from 8.3 percent to 6.8 percent. Football was at 9.3 percent in 1990.

The survey revealed that the Division I women's sport with the most partial qualifiers was track and field with 59. Overall, women's sports accounted for 174 Division I partial qualifiers, or 24.6 percent of the whole.

Most Division I partial qualifiers are black, although the percentage decreased from 68.6 percent in 1990 to 63.8 percent in 1991. From another perspective, 86 percent of black student-athletes were qualifiers under Bylaw 14.3 in 1991, compared to 98 percent of white student-athletes.

The test-score component continued to be the major stumbling block for most partial qualifiers in Division I, with 79.3 failing to score a 700 on the SAT or a 18 on the ACT.

Unlike Division I, Division II legislation permits partial qualifiers to receive financial aid during their freshman year, which probably accounts for the higher incidence of partial qualifiers at Division II institutions.

More than one of every four freshman Division II football student-athletes (26.2 percent) was a

In Kramer's vast experience, March Madness stands alone

By Ronald D. Mott
The NCAA News Staff

For Roy F. Kramer, the past two months have been an incessant fast break.

Such was March Madness for the Southeastern Conference commissioner and chair of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee. Juggling the everyday duties of his job as commissioner and helping assemble Division I men's basketball championship made for long days and nights.

"I'm not saying my days have ever been serene, but the last six weeks have created a rather hectic pace," Kramer said from his Birmingham, Alabama, office. "The NCAA basketball tournament is an enormous undertaking. There are endless press conferences, conference calls, site visits. This means that many of your normal duties are done at the early hours in the morning, and I'm a late-hour person."

Kramer's normal duties already were substantial, but they became overwhelming when he was asked to chair the men's basketball committee after the death of Thomas J. Frericks in January. Kramer will remain chair until his term ends September 1.

The extra duties made Kramer a passing guest at his home during March and early

Student-athlete group lays foundation for code

The NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee has formulated guidelines to aid in the creation of a National Student-Athlete Code of Coexistence.

The committee met April 10-11 in Destin, Florida.

The idea for such a code came from Southeastern Conference student-athletes, who created the SEC Code of Conduct, a document that describes what institutions and student-athletes have a right to expect of one another.

Members of the committee believed that although the SEC document would work well for a conference or an individual institution, a national code would require a different approach focusing more on a set of principles upon which student-athletes and institutions could agree.

The committee chose to create a code of coexistence for each of the Association's three membership divisions; those documents, in turn, will be used to create a National Student-Athlete Code of Coexistence.

Discussion of specific ideas for the code will begin May 3. After that, the committee will conduct biweekly conference calls on the subject. The final product will be submitted to the NCAA Council for approval.

The committee also discussed its three major goals:

- To ensure that student-athlete voices are heard by relevant policy-making bodies. The committee recommended that voluntary student-athlete advisory committees be formed on the institutional and conference levels to familiarize athletics administrators with student-athlete concerns. The committee believed that the presence of coaches could inhibit student-athletes and

Other highlights

Other actions taken by the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee at its April 10-11 meeting in Destin, Florida:

- Made adjustments to Winning Ways, the proposed student-athlete newsletter. The committee chose to include a "suggestion box" in the periodical and also to institute a question-and-answer feature on the NCAA. Also, the newsletter will include information about financial grants of which student-athletes might not be aware (for example, NCAA postgraduate scholarships).
- Discussed the NCAA gender-equity survey and stressed its willingness to help in this matter in whatever way possible.
- Noted that the NCAA Presidents Committee Subcommittee on Strategic Planning has identified student-athlete welfare as one of its strategic issues. The student-athlete committee expressed a desire to be involved in this process.
- Moved its November meeting to August in order to discuss pending legislation with institutional representatives before decisions are made on how to vote.

recommended against them being involved in such meetings. The students also recommended that the meetings be conducted according to a schedule and that an athletics administrator be present at all meetings.

- To provide a centralized mechanism through which student-ath- lete concerns can be addressed. To accomplish this goal, the committee is developing Winning Ways, a newsletter that would be distributed to 250,000 student-athletes at NCAA institutions.

- To educate student-athletes on the role of the NCAA and to be involved in the Association's legislative process.

Brown athletes sue for funding

Nine members of the Brown University women's gymnastics team sued the Ivy Group school April 9, alleging sex discrimination and seeking funding for their team and women's volleyball.

Brown, citing a potential $1.6 million deficit this year, eliminated funding for those teams and for men's water polo and golf.

The class-action lawsuit in Federal court also wants half of Brown's athletes to be women, corresponding to its 49 percent women's enrollment. Arthur Bryant of the Trial Lawyers for Public Justice told The Associated Press. Members of the gymnastics team asked for his group's help, Bryant said.

The lawsuit relies on Title IX, which Bryant said requires sports opportunities closely paralleling enrollments.

"If Brown University is not in compliance, then no school in the country is," Brown athletics spokesman Chris Humm said.

Last year's cuts affected 37 men and 23 women.

The gymnastics and volleyball teams competed this year as club teams, doing "pretty much exactly what they've been doing in the past," Joan Taylor, associate athletics director, said.

Not so, said Amy Cohen, senior gymnastics cocaptain. The team raised its own money and cut expenses, but may not be able to raise the $15,000 needed for next year, she said.

Duke-Michigan title game breaks viewership records

The title game of the 1992 Division I Men's Basketball Championship, in which Duke University defeated the University of Michigan, 71-51, was the most-watched basketball game in TV history, CBS reported.

An estimated 53 million viewers took in all or part of the game in American TV homes covered by the Nielsen ratings, CBS said. The network estimated that an additional 10 percent of the total audience watched away from home—in taverns, dormitories and other venues Nielsen does not survey.

The championship scored a 22.7 rating and a 35 share. One ratings point equals 921,000 television households. A share is the percentage of TV sets in use that are tuned to a program in its time period.

Court rules case is public

The report of a 1989 investigation into University of Kentucky basketball was declared a public record by the Kentucky Supreme Court April 9.

The court rejected the university's argument that most of its 4,000-page response to charges of rules infractions by the NCAA should remain secret.

"The entire response submitted to the NCAA by the university constitutes a public record," the justices said, adding that the university failed to prove that it met any exemption to the Kentucky Open Records Act.

The ruling came in a lawsuit involving three newspapers—The Courier-Journal of Louisville, the Lexington Herald-Leader and The Kentucky Post of Covington.

Eric Manuel, a former Kentucky player, was an intervener in the case, having sued to prevent disclosure of his academic record.

The ruling upheld the intermediate court of appeals, which had reversed a lower court's order that parts of the response had to be made public but most of it could be withheld.

The university claimed various exemptions from the open-records law, including a provision for confidentiality to prevent invasions of privacy. The Supreme Court said public interest outweighed privacy considerations in this case.

"The university spent over $400,000 for the response and the public has a legitimate interest in its contents," the ruling said.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than April 29, 1992.

Council: Replacement for Robert E. Rosencrans, Wittenberg University, resigned because he no longer will be at a member institution. Appointee must be from Division III.

Olympic Sports Liaison Committee: Replacement for Larry Ellis, Princeton University, resigned from the committee.

Division II Women's Basketball Committee: Replacement for Susan W. Lubking, West Chester University of Pennsylvania, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be from the Division II East women's basketball region.

Men's and Women's Golf Committee: Replacement for Joseph E. Carlson, University of California, Davis, resigned. Appointee must be from Division II, must represent men's golf and should be from a district other than District 3.

Correction—recruiting calendar—NCAA Division I women's basketball

Division I women's basketball coaches should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 30.10.2-(p), it is permissible to evaluate prospective student-athletes during AAU national basketball championship competition. The 1992-93 NCAA Manual (Figure 13-2, Page No. 90) erroneously indicates the dates for the AAU women's national championship competition as April 8-April 12, 1992.

The correct dates and sites for the AAU national basketball championships (involving prospects) are as follows: (1) 16 and under and 18 and under—June 26-July 4, 1992; Clovis, New Mexico, and (2) 14 and under and 15 and under—July 24-August 1, 1992; Amarillo, Texas.

Further, the 1992-93 Manual (Figure 13-2, Page No. 90) incorrectly indicates that there is an evaluation period from December 22 through December 30. The correct evaluation period is December 15 through December 19 (Tuesday through Saturday prior to Christmas) and December 27 through December 30. The period from December 20 through December 26 is a quiet period.

ACT and SAT national testing dates

In accordance with Bylaws 14.3.1.1-(b) and 14.3.1.3, it is necessary for prospective student-athletes to achieve the minimum required SAT or ACT under national testing conditions on a national testing date. The following are national testing dates for the 1992-93 academic year:

SAT 1992-93	ACT 1992-93
October 10, 1992 (California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, North Carolina, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia only.)	October 24, 1992
November 7, 1992	December 12, 1992
December 5, 1992	February 6, 1993
January 23, 1993	April 3, 1993

Keough wins football foundation's top award

The board of directors of the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame has unanimously elected Donald R. Keough, president of the Coca-Cola Company, to receive the foundation's 1992 Gold Medal Award.

As the recipient of the 35th annual award, Keough joins a group of honorees that includes business, military and civic leaders as well as seven presidents of the United States.

"His business achievements are legendary, and his continuing contributions to scholarship, athletics excellence and community service have continued to earn him respect, honor and admiration... and this year will earn him our foundation's highest honor," said Bill Pearce, chairman of the National Football Foundation, in announcing Keough's selection.

Keough has held various key positions at Coca-Cola and was elected president, chief operating officer and a director of the company in 1981. In 1986, he became chairman of the board of Coca-Cola Enterprises.

The Gold Medal will be presented at the foundation's annual awards dinner December 8 at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. Also that evening, 13 new inductees to the College Football Hall of Fame and 1992 regional and national scholar-athlete selections will be honored.

Possible 1993 NCAA legislation on agenda for NACDA convention

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will meet June 7-10 in Marco Island, Florida.

Convention topics include general sessions on diversity in the workplace, public relations in college athletics and AIDS. Separate breakout sessions will be conducted for Divisions I, II and III and for two-year colleges.

Division I-A directors of athletics will conduct two meetings to discuss legislation for the 1993 NCAA Convention, the role of the Federal government in college athletics, the proposed athletics certification program and other issues important to the division.

The keynote address will be delivered by Vice Admiral William P. Lawrence, president of the Association of Naval Aviation.

About 1,100 athletics directors and conference commissioners are expected to attend.

Playing through leg pain norm for Stanford golfer

By David D. Smale
The NCAA News Staff

Casey Martin wears a wrap that makes it look like he has a wooden leg.

Without the wrap, he probably would be unable to walk. With the wrap, however, Martin has become one of the top players on Stanford University's men's golf team and an honorable-mention all-American last year as a freshman in a sport that keeps competitors on their feet longer than any other.

The wrap called a Jobst Stocking is the only way a casual observer would have a clue that Martin is missing the deep venous system in his right leg. Martin's condition is extremely rare. Doctors tell him there are only "a handful" of cases in the entire country. "Mine is now in the medical books," he said. "It is, by far, the most severe."

The deep venous system is what pumps the blood from the leg to the heart. The condition has caused the removal of most of the cartilage in his knee. He suffers from swelling, internal bleeding and a lot of related pain. But that, too, is disguised by a gritty determination and a cheerful disposition.

'Most tenacious'

"He is most tenacious," Stanford men's golf coach Wally Goodwin said. "He is a perfectionist. He is extremely popular around school. He is highly respected and not pitied in the least."

Martin is a young man who, despite having difficulty walking without his leg wrap, likes to use expressions like "taking it one step at a time."

Goodwin says Martin was a perfect fit for Stanford. The valedictorian at South Eugene (Oregon) High School, he also is a jazz pianist. "The comments his teachers and coaches gave to me were remarkable," Goodwin said. "I made some other phone calls and everything was perfect."

He can play

While Martin's off-the-course characteristics were exemplary, he has made the golf team at Stanford because he can play. And play well.

He maintains a stroke average around 74. At the U.S. Amateur championships last summer, he battled Phil Mickelson, the best-known amateur golfer in the country and two-time NCAA individual titlist, to an extra hole before losing. And he tallied a 69 on the final day of competition at last year's Division I championships to finish in a tie for 16th, six-over-par and 11 strokes off the lead.

"He is a very, very competitive person," Goodwin said. "He has had this problem since birth. It has never been a handicap to Casey. He considers it a challenge."

Martin says his Christian faith has been the key. "I believe that the Lord has given this to me so that I can stand out and be a witness for Him," he said. "I don't feel sorry for myself; I look at it as an opportunity."

The opportunities ahead are undefined at this point. His leg is not going to get much better, according to the doctors. It is dysfunctional, "like an elderly man's," he said. And he is in constant pain. Yet Martin does not eliminate playing professional golf.

"I would like to play," he said. "It's a long way away. I think it is a realistic goal, but I will take it one step at a time. Playing collegiately may be more grueling. We often play 36 holes in the same day. The pros play 18 holes in a day and have caddies. Although I know the competition would be tough, I believe it is something I could do. I'll just have to see."

"I haven't really put my foot down in any direction. I want to do my best. I am getting a degree in economics, so if I can't make it as a professional golfer, I can fall back on my Stanford degree. I am going to redshirt next year to work on strength and other areas of my game."

With Martin's determination, it would not be wise to put limits on his future.

"He's just one of those one-in-a-million guys," Goodwin said.

NCAA panel addresses gender equity

The recent NCAA gender-equity study was discussed April 9 in a hearing of the U.S. House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness.

The hearing, devoted to Title IX and women's participation in intercollegiate athletics, was the fourth in a series of comprehensive hearings by the subcommittee on issues relating to college athletics.

At the hearing, the General Accounting Office (GAO) released its own gender-equity study in response to a request from Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Illinois.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, NCAA Assistant Executive Director for Administration Merrily Dean Baker and Big Ten Conference Assistant Commissioner Phyllis L. Howlett discussed gender equity within the NCAA.

Schultz described what steps the Association has taken to provide opportunities for women, and Howlett described the results of the gender-equity survey, which was released March 11. Baker added that the study is a signal that the NCAA is prepared to address the issue of gender equity.

A second panel testifying before the subcommittee included Ellen Vargyas, senior counsel for education and employment at the National Women's Law Center; Christine Grant, women's athletics director at the University of Iowa; Vivian Fuller, associate director of intercollegiate athletics at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, and Lee McElroy, director of athletics at California State University, Sacramento.

The second group of panelists addressed the disparity between the athletics participation rate for women and overall college enrollment. They claimed that women's participation numbers are lower not because of a lack of interest but rather because of a lack of opportunity.

Collins and Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, criticized the NCAA, saying its member institutions have not achieved gender equity and that Congress may need to take action if institutions do not end discrimination in athletics on their own.

Collins and McMillen also asked members of the second panel what the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) of the Department of Education should be doing regarding Title IX matters. Vargyas said OCR needs to revise what she characterized as seriously flawed Title IX policies and to follow up on investigations, particularly those cases in which OCR finds a violation and negotiates a compliance plan with an institution. Fuller and McElroy both cited a need for more specific guidelines relating to Title IX compliance.

Collins also asked members of the second group what they believed the NCAA should do to help assure gender equity. They agreed that gender equity should be part of any certification program the NCAA develops. Also, Vargyas recommended the NCAA "death penalty" for Title IX violations, and Fuller suggested disqualification from championship competition as a sanction.

The GAO report—"Intercollegiate Athletics: Revenues and Expenses, Gender and Minority Profiles, and Compensation in Athletic Departments"—covered a wide range of questions. Among other findings, it determined that women athletics directors and women basketball coaches usually have lower earnings than men in comparable positions and that compensation for personnel at historically black institutions (almost all of whom are minorities) is usually lower than that offered at all institutions.

Athletics needs to be part of accrediting process

By George W. Schubert

For the past few years, I have conveyed my opinion that accrediting agencies should be required to include athletics departments in their reviews of postsecondary institutions. Therefore, it was with pleasure that I read Douglas Lederman's article ("Southern Accreditation Association Adopts Criteria to Evaluate Athletics Program") in a December 1991 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education.

Schubert

In the future, athletics departments probably will be scrutinized by the NCAA's certification process. The present pilot-certification procedure should not be substituted for an in-depth review by the major accrediting body of which the institution is a member.

In the distant future, NCAA certification of athletics programs may substitute or partially substitute for the institution's inclusion of the athletics department in the accrediting process. This decision, however, needs to be made by the governing bodies of the accrediting agencies.

Although minimum limits to certain criteria can be established before reviewing and evaluating an institution's athletics program, it seems to me that an institution needs to respond to basic questions and then establish minimum limits for specific criteria. The accrediting agency needs to determine if the responses are appropriate for that institution. Questions that need to be asked; data that need to be collected and validated, and interpretations that need to be made are similar for all accrediting agencies examining the accountability of an intercollegiate athletics program.

In the near future, only a limited number of institutions will be involved in the NCAA certification process. Therefore, other accrediting agencies, such as the Southern Accreditation Association and the North Central Association, must include the athletics department in their evaluation processes.

No matter which agency examines the quality of the institution's athletics program, specific areas and specific questions should be addressed. Most of the areas that need to be examined are included in one of the seven basic areas to be examined by the proposed NCAA certification process. However, areas that may not be included in one of the seven areas but should be part of the certification process include: due process procedures for student-athletes and athletics personnel, efforts to create diversity in athletics programs, an in-depth evaluation of gender issues, compliance with Title IX, and implementation of institutional rules that strengthen the institution's academic requirements and assist in achieving higher graduation rates.

One example would be to implement a regulation that requires an examination of the academic progress of each student-athlete (including transfer student-athletes) at the conclusion of each term, rather than each year, then certifying that each student-athlete who continues to participate is able to graduate within a five-year period.

The sooner an athletics department can identify and implement an efficient and continuous evaluation process, the less time consuming and costly the formal accrediting process will be. More important, involvement in a meaningful accrediting process serves to assist students, faculty and staff by improving the institution.

George W. Schubert is faculty athletics representative at the University of North Dakota.

Big Ten rethinking rule on JC transfers

By Ed Sherman
Chicago Tribune

The Big Ten Conference is on the verge of putting itself back on an equal footing when it comes to recruiting junior college transfers. It will be great for coaches, but is it a step back for reform?

The faculties at conference schools will vote in May on a proposal calling for a four-year suspension of its policy on junior college transfers.

The current rule, which has been in effect since 1989, says junior college transfers have to sit out their first year at a Big Ten school if they hadn't met Proposition 48 requirements coming out of high school.

That policy has put the Big Ten on an island because it is the only conference with such a rule.

The NCAA says a junior college transfer student-athlete is eligible immediately as a junior if he has completed his degree at a two-year institution, regardless of his Prop 48 status.

Because many Division I-type prospects were Prop 48s going into junior college, the Big Ten has been at a severe disadvantage when it comes to recruiting junior college players.

Given the choice of playing immediately or sitting out a year, it isn't much of a choice for the majority of transfers.

Don't think it's trivial, considering junior colleges are making significant contributions to the talent pool.

The University of Cincinnati would not have been in the Final Four if not for eight junior college transfers on its basketball team.

"We're taking a second look," said Big Ten Conference Commissioner James E. Delany.

The Big Ten sponsored legislation at the 1992 NCAA Convention calling for its junior college policy to be adopted nationally, but it failed by a more than 3 to 1 margin.

The Convention, though, did pass tougher eligibility requirements for incoming freshmen and progress-toward-a-degree regulations.

That prompted the Big Ten to reconsider its junior college policy.

At their meeting in February, the faculty representatives voted 10-1 to suspend the policy for four years. The measure, though, has to be approved by the entire faculties at Big Ten schools.

The faculty reps believe that with the new, tighter academic measures, junior college transfers may have a better chance of succeeding. In the past, many of those transfers haven't fared well academically.

"Our proposal was voted down at the Convention, so maybe they're right and we're wrong," Delany said. "Maybe we've been excluding people who don't deserve to be excluded."

The coaches have been making that argument for several years, but not for academic reasons. They have been railing for a change in the Big Ten's rules. They don't like to be at a disadvantage in anything.

"Sure it was a factor," said Mildred Griggs, faculty rep at the University of Illinois, Champaign.

But it wasn't the only factor, Griggs said. Still, she knows that in some circles the change in policy will be construed as a retreat from reform. For many years, the Big Ten paraded its junior college rule as evidence that the conference was taking a tougher stand on academics.

"Some will see it as a lessening of our standards," Griggs said. "Some will see it as an attempt to get on the same playing field. This is an opportunity for us to hear what we should do."

Griggs then stressed, "This is a faculty vote, not a coach's vote."

If the faculties approve the NCAA measure, Delany said, it will be up to the coaches to make it work.

"If they bring in (junior college transfers) who can't compete in the classroom, the suspension probably will be discontinued," Delany said. "The responsibility will be on the coaches to select qualified people."

Opinions

Knight: No more high-altitude sites

Bob Knight, men's basketball coach
Indiana University, Bloomington

Albuquerque Journal

"I'm honestly against the NCAA having tournaments in places like Albuquerque or Denver because of the altitude. I think that throws a mix into the tournament that shouldn't be there. There have been all kinds of different things on altitude training, and I really don't think, at the end of the year, teams should be subjected to that."

Media coverage of women's basketball

Los Angeles Times

"When was the last time you saw a regular-season women's basketball score mentioned on ESPN? You get the Slippery Rock-St. Leo score, but you can't get the Virginia-North Carolina State score until the next day. And that's if your newspaper carries national women's games."

Gary Blair

*Women's basketball coach
Stephen F. Austin State University*

"If it's between having a men's game over a women's game, it has to be the men's game right now. Our men's schedule is pretty strong. Even though we have some of the women's games on tape, you have to look at what normal programming is on at the time. I would say that the games are doing as well."

Curt Pires

ESPN publicist

"What upsets me is we can have a bad game between men, that no one is interested in, get covered. I think all the women's game is asking of anybody is give us a chance. You might like it."

Nora Lynn Finch

North Carolina State University*

Jack Craig, columnist

The Boston Globe

"What does it mean when Nielsen records more people watching Candlepin Doubles on Channel 5 than college basketball's game for the ages between Duke and Kentucky on Channel 7 later in prime time?"

"According to Globe columnist Bob Ryan, it means it's time to find a new way to measure television audiences. But the ratings may reflect not only how steady the candlepin faithful are, but also how comparatively few around here care about college hoops to watch the biggest games."

"The NCAA TV numbers from (the weekend of March 28) make a strong case against interest (in Boston). Among the six telecasts measured in the nation's top 25 markets, the Channel 7 rating was smallest for Ohio State-North Carolina; third-smallest for three others, including Duke-Kentucky, and fourth-smallest for the other two...."

"For those who challenge the laws of mathematical probability, the best argument against the current rating procedure is the splinter sampling base. Over the weekend, the viewing habits of 2.1 million people in Greater Boston were based on 390 households. Nationally, some 1,300 households regularly determine ratings for 92 million homes. The best support for these tiny samplings are the consistency of the ratings that emerge. Very rarely do aberrations pop up.

"Another argument on behalf of sports audiences being under-counted is the fact that Nielsen ignores barroom viewing. Nationwide this is considerable, especially for major events. But some sponsors appear on sports telecasts in anticipation of that uncensored audience, considering it a bonus of sorts."

George Raveling, men's basketball coach
University of Southern California

Richmond Times-Dispatch

On how basketball coaches might respond if certain NCAA reform measures, particularly financial aid and coaching staff limitations, are not reexamined:

"Strike. Don't show up for practice at the Final Four. Delay the games. The players decide they're not going to play...."

"There isn't a shared vision among coaches and presidents. There seems to be a lack of trust...."

"People who get redress for grievances are people who take extreme steps. That seems to be (what's happening) in our society today. Those people who deal with sensitive issues in calm and gentle terms, they don't get much respect. The people who get out and are demonstrative and do things in an aggressive manner are people who get their grievances answered."

Keith Madison, baseball coach University of Kentucky

"You didn't question anyone growing tobacco. It was like people in Tennessee growing corn for whisky or California growing grapes for wine. In our state, it's still the No. 1 cash crop....but now, if I were farming, knowing what I know, I don't think I would ever raise tobacco."

State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 15 bills from 13 states. The report includes two bills that have been introduced, and 13 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (April 1, 1992). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of April 9, 1992. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Anabolic steroids	3
Athlete agents	2
Scalping	2
Tickets	2
Coaches' retirement plan	1
Due process	1
Liability	1
Trainers	1
Women in sports	1
Wrestling	1

One bill relating to athlete agents has become law in Maryland since the last report.

Arizona S. 1526 (Author: Alston)

Relates to the liability of physicians who provide medical care to participants in athletics events.

Status: 10/10/91 introduced. 2/13/92 passed Assembly. To Senate. 3/26/92 passed Senate as amended. To Assembly for concurrence.

For Trenton State lacrosse goalie, it was love at first shot

By Martin T. Benson
The NCAA News Staff

When Trenton State College's Gina Carey saw her first women's lacrosse game, she wasn't parked in the bleachers.

Carey offered more tangible support—as the starting goalkeeper.

In the first lacrosse game she ever saw, the Florence, New Jersey, native had a hard rubber ball fired at her at 70 to 80 miles per hour.

The Lions beat Salisbury State, 22-3, that March day in 1990, as Carey—playing what coach Sharon Goldbrenner calls the sport's most difficult position—made six saves. It was, as they say, the start of something big.

Trenton State went on to make the NCAA Division III Women's Lacrosse Championship semifinals that year, and only a last-second shot by eventual champion Ursinus College prevented the Lions from advancing to the title game.

Goldbrenner said her first thought after that loss was her goalie's frame of mind, but Carey already had turned a negative into a positive—something at which she has become an expert.

'Never again'

"She walked away from it and said it will never happen again," Goldbrenner said.

It didn't. Last year, Trenton State avenged the previous year's defeat by edging Ursinus in the Division III title game, 7-6. When the all-tournament awards were handed out, Carey got the nod at goalkeeper. In two-plus years with Carey in goal, the Lions are 32-4.

How does a goalie with one year's experience lead a team to a national championship? By being a superior athlete in the right place at the right time and having the guts to seize an opportunity when it presents itself.

Carey came to Trenton State in the fall of 1989 as a transfer from Ohio State University, where she was a starter on the field hockey team as a freshman. In her first year, the Lions' field hockey team made it to the Division III championship game. During that tournament, Carey, who starred in field hockey, basketball and softball at Florence High School in South Jersey, started thinking about joining the majority of her field hockey teammates who also played lacrosse (a sport Florence didn't offer). The previous year's goalkeeper, who had started as a freshman, had recently announced that she wouldn't be returning to the team in the spring because of time conflicts between labs, practices and games.

Enter Carey.

"I knew that a lot of the moves and the strategy were the same as in basketball, and I knew coach needed a goalkeeper, so I volunteered," she said.

Divine intervention

Goldbrenner was so pleased, she suspected divine intervention.

"It was a blessing," she said. "Someone was looking out for me."

Goldbrenner said that about half of her lacrosse starters also are field hockey team members with no precollegiate lacrosse background, so having someone with no experience succeed was nothing new to her. What was new was putting one of those people in goal; but knowing Carey, Goldbrenner expected success.

"We've had a lot of great athletes here and Gina heads the list," she said of the first-team field hockey all-American. "I thought, 'Now that we have Gina in the cage, all we have to do is teach her what to do and she'll do it.'"

Goldbrenner put assistant coach Lori Jordan, who played goalie for the Lions from 1981 to 1984, in charge of the teaching. Carey said she wouldn't be where she is today if it weren't for her morning sessions with Jordan. The teacher is equally impressed with the pupil.

"I've been helping Trenton State goalies for seven years, and Gina has improved faster than anyone else," Jordan said. "I think she's one of the best out there. She's quick to react to the ball wherever it may be, and I know she can get better."

All-America

Last year she was good enough to be invited to the national-team trials. This year, Goldbrenner said she is all-America caliber.

As talented as she is physically, Carey may be tougher mentally, something especially important for a goalie. This mental toughness has developed through a series of difficult learning experiences.

She said that in her first year as lacrosse goalie, she was "kind of stunned" when teams would score four or five goals on her, because in field hockey, giving up that many goals meant sure defeat. In lacrosse, however, the player who holds a team to five goals has done a decent job.

"I'm very hard on myself," Carey said. "I had to learn that if they scored on me, it's OK, I just have to start again from point A."

Field hockey also provided some lessons she's used in lacrosse.

The Lions lost, 2-1, in Carey's first field hockey national-championship game (1989),

and Carey, naturally, wasn't happy.

"After that I said 'no more, I'm not going to lose any more of these.'"

Not only has Trenton State field hockey won two national championships since then, just as Carey promised herself, but the team hasn't lost in the regular season either.

Toughest lesson

The toughest lesson of her life came after winning the first field hockey championship in 1990. Carey said that title always will be the most memorable because teammate Terry Doyle, one of her best friends, died a month later after suffering a brain aneurysm while jogging.

"She wanted that championship more than anyone else on that team," Carey said. "It was the only thing she really wanted to achieve and we did it."

Goldbrenner said the experience still affects Carey, but mostly in a positive way.

"I don't think it will ever be completely out of her mind," she said. "It made her really think things through. She collects her thoughts before each game. There's really a feeling of her taking control of the things she can and accepting those she can't."

With her collegiate field hockey career over, Carey has this year and next year left in lacrosse. She knows she already has had the type of college athletics career others only can dream about.

"I'm very happy with what I've accomplished, both as an individual and as a team," she said. "I would think any athlete would want to be in my shoes."

Except maybe when she's in the cage.

Championships previews

Long Beach State's Brent Hilliard (No. 7), the most outstanding player at last year's championship, leads the top-ranked 49ers into action again this year

Challengers think defending champion tough, but beatable

Event: 1992 National Collegiate Men's Volleyball Championship

Overview: Defending champion and top-ranked Long Beach State is the odds-on favorite to claim its second consecutive crown. Paced by Brent Hilliard, 1991 tournament most outstanding player, Long Beach State was ranked No. 1 in preseason and has held the spot since. The 49ers' primary competition likely will come from Stanford, No. 2 in the poll, or Cal State Northridge, the only team to beat the 49ers this season. Pepperdine and UCLA, winner of a championships record 13 titles, also could contend. Indiana/Purdue-Fort Wayne, a tournament semifinalist participant a year ago, is the highest-ranked non-West Coast team, claiming the seventh spot in the poll.

Field: The championship field will include four teams one each from the West, Midwest and East regions and one selected at large. The West region selection will be the champion of the Western Intercollegiate Volleyball Association, which has been granted automatic qualification.

Dates and sites: The semifinals and championship match will be April 24-25 at Ball State.

Results: Championship results will appear April 29 in The NCAA News.

Television coverage: CBS Sports will air the title game tape-delayed on a date in May to be announced.

Championship notes: Long Beach State and Southern California have been the finalists at the past two championships. Southern California won the 1990 meeting.... The 1992 championship marks the fourth time Ball State has hosted the event, but the first since 1980.... A non-West Coast team has never won the title.... The No. 2-ranked team has defeated No. 1 in each of the last two championships.

What they are saying

Ray Ratelle, head coach
Long Beach State

Defending champion, currently ranked No. 1

"It's going to be a battle. We're not that strong that we cannot really be prepared and ready to go.... We're not strong enough to overpower people. If we get into a situation like we did against (Cal State) Northridge where they just blocked us off the court, we'll be in trouble. We may be the favorite, but that doesn't mean we can be anything less than ready every time we take the court."

Ruben Nieves, head coach
Stanford

1989 runner-up, currently ranked No. 2

"I like the way we've played; I like the way we've improved all year long. As of right now, we have a lot of momentum going into the postseason. I do think that Long Beach (State) is the clear favorite. They've been the best team in the country all year, and it would take a major upset to keep them from winning (the title)."

Al Scates, head coach

13-time champion, currently ranked No. 5

"Long Beach (State) has been No. 1, they have the best hitter in the country in Brent Hilliard and they've been way above everyone else, but they are beatable. They beat us early in the year, but we're a much better team than we were when we played them. We had an excellent March and are playing very well. If we get in (the tournament), we have an excellent shot at winning."

Men's gymnastics

Trophy contenders include title strangers

Event: 1992 National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships

Overview: A year ago, Oklahoma ended a 12-year drought by claiming the national team title. Stanford, Brigham Young and Ohio State hope to follow Oklahoma's lead. As the Nos. 1, 2 and 4 teams in the top-20 poll, respectively, they have won only one title combined—the Buckeyes won the 1985 crown. If any of the three teams are to end their championships dry spells, they will have to get by Nebraska and Penn State.

Field: Four teams and the top five all-around competitors not on one of the qualifying teams, plus the top five individuals in each event who are not already qualified on a team or as an all-around competitor, will advance from the East and West regional meets to the championships.

Dates and sites: Regional competition will be conducted April 11 at Iowa (East regional) and New Mexico (West regional). The championships will be April 23-25 at Nebraska.

Results: Championships results will appear April 29 in The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Nebraska has placed first or second 11 of the past 13 championships.

What they are saying

Oklahoma

Defending champion

"I expect Stanford, Ohio State and Nebraska to be right there, and I wouldn't count Minnesota out—they're an excellent team."

Randy Jepson, head coach
Penn State

1991 runner-up, nine-time champion

"There are obviously a few teams that have scored very high this year—Nebraska, Stanford and Ohio State come to mind. Those teams would have to be considered out in front. But you can't count out teams that have proven in the past that they can compete at a high level—Minnesota and us, for example. I think the competition will be very interesting."

Sadao Hamada, head coach
Stanford

Currently ranked No. 1

"We've been in this position (ranked No. 1) before. This year we're looking to capitalize on it. I think we're a lot stronger and more mature than we were last year (the Cardinal finished fifth)."

Tim Ryan and his Stanford teammates hope to improve on the Cardinal's fifth-place showing last year. The Cardinal, ranked No. 1 this season, is searching for its first team title in the championships.

Hope Spivey, last year's champion in the floor exercise and all-around competition, gives Georgia hopes for a team title

Women's gymnastics

Top-ranked Utah, Georgia set for showdown

Event: 1992 National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships

Overview: Utah and Georgia have occupied the Nos. 1 and 2 spots in the top-20 rankings for much of the season. Utah, which finished second a year ago, holds a slim .10 margin over the Lady Bulldogs third a year ago—in the rankings.

Field: The championships field will consist of 12 teams, as well as 12 individual all-around competitors who are not on a qualifying team. Regional competition will involve seven teams and seven additional all-around competitors at each of five sites. The team and all-around winner from each region will receive an automatic berth in the national championships, and the remaining teams and all-around competitors will qualify at large on the basis of their national qualifying scores.

Dates and sites: Regional competition will be conducted April 11. The championships will be April 24-25 at Minnesota.

Results: appear April 29 in The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Utah, Georgia and Alabama are the only teams to win a national title.

What they are saying

Utah

Six-time champion, currently ranked No. 1

"We're in a difficult situation right now. We've had a great season, broken just about every record you can break and our average attendance has been about 12,000. Our only downer is that we lost our top recruit (Suzanne Metz) and one of our top all-around performers (Shelly Schaerrer). We're compromised. Fortunately we've got more depth than we've had the last two years, so we're going to be able to continue to field a very strong team. With our situation, though, I'd have to put Georgia in the driver's seat."

Jim Turpin, head coach
Oregon State

Currently ranked No. 3

"We're in pretty good shape. We've been consistent all year long, and we're certainly looking forward to going to nationals. Last year we were a little nervous, but a majority of the team is back, and I think that will work to our advantage."

Champs on ice

Lake Superior State celebrated its second Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship title after defeating Wisconsin, 5-3, April 4 in Albany, New York. Attendance for the championship game at Knickerbocker Arena was 12,891. Lake Superior State also won the Division I title in 1988.

Staley takes two of women's major honors

Virginia's Dawn Staley again has claimed two of the top individual awards in women's collegiate basketball.

For the second straight year, the senior guard has won the Naismith Award as college basketball's top woman player. She also is the Women's Basketball Coaches Association's repeat selection as Division I player of the year.

The 5-foot-5 Staley is Virginia's all-time leading scorer. She holds school and Atlantic Coast Conference records for assists as well.

Virginia was ranked No. 1 for most of the past season, but the Cavaliers were defeated by eventual champion Stanford in the semifinals of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

In 1991, Staley led Virginia to the championship game of the Women's Final Four, where the Cavaliers lost to Tennessee in the tournament's only overtime title game. She also was honored last season as Sports Illustrated's player of the year and as the Honda-Broderick Award winner.

Administrative Committee minutes

1. Acting for the NCAA Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Appointed Scott McCain, University of California, Berkeley, and John Hansen, Valdosta State College, to the Men's and Women's Tennis Committee, replacing Alan Cummings, Stanford University, resigned from the committee, and Robert H. Moore, no longer at a member institution, respectively.

b. Authorized NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and NCAA President Judith M. Sweet to appoint the individuals to serve on a gender-equity task force after consultation with appropriate constituent groups.

c. Received a recommendation by the Special Committee to Review NCAA Legislative Procedures regarding the Council study of its waiver authority as specified in 1992 Convention Proposal No. 117; directed the staff to develop additional options in that regard for review by the Council in its April meeting, at which time the Council will determine any additional steps that it wishes to take in that study.

d. Agreed to modify the student-athlete statement to accommodate the possibility that track and field may be added to the Association's drug-testing program next year.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Referred to the executive director a request by the Committee on Women's Athletics that expenses be paid for a member of that committee to address the Division I-AA athletics directors at a meeting in May in Dallas.

b. Appointed Leila Withers, Southern University, Baton Rouge, as an additional member of the Special Advisory Committee for Women's Corporate Marketing.

c. Approved the appointment of Ronald H. Walker, Korn-Ferry International, Washington, D.C., to the board of directors of the NCAA Foundation.

3. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 4.3.2.

a. Acting for the Council:

(1) Granted a request by Georgetown

University to replace on a temporary basis a countable coach in women's volleyball under the provisions of Bylaw 11.7.1.1.1.2.

(2) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.8.6.1-

(b) to permit student-athletes from 28 institutions to participate in tryouts leading directly to qualification for participation in the Olympic Games (swimming and diving, wrestling).

(3) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.8.6.1-

(c) to permit student-athletes from 39 institutions to participate in competition involving national teams in field hockey, gym-nasitics, ice hockey, lacrosse, soccer, swimming and diving, track and field, water polo, and wrestling.

(4) Granted waivers per Bylaws 14.8.6.1-

(d) and 14.8.6.2-(b) to permit student-ath-

Committee issues an updated report on certification

Background

In April 1989, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz introduced the concept of athletics certification to the NCAA Presidents Commission and NCAA Council. The executive director conceived the idea as an extension of institutional self-study and as a means of fostering greater integrity in intercollegiate athletics at the institutional level.

Later that year, at the suggestion of an ad hoc Council group established to assist in the development of the concept, the Presidents Commission and Council approved in principle a two-year pilot program in Division I. The purposes of the study, which began in May 1990, were to field-test certification procedures and to determine whether the program should continue, and if so, in what form. At the program's conclusion in June 1992, 35 institutions (representing 26 Division I conference members) will have taken part.

In January 1991, the NCAA Convention adopted a resolution in support of the certification concept. The resolution required a status report at the 1992 Convention and the consideration of legislation for a continuing certification program by the Council in time for the 1993 Convention. Four months later, the Council established a seven-member subcommittee to assist in the development of the certification concept. The group was recently reauthorized as a special committee rather than a subcommittee of the Council in order to permit several subcommittee members to continue working beyond the expiration of their Council terms in January 1992.

The committee (and its predecessor) held eight meetings and conducted three telephone conferences between July 1991 and March 1992. During that time, the committee:

- Evaluated the pilot program, including procedural guidelines, topic areas, self-study questions, institutional deadlines and operating standards identified by participating institutions.
- Reviewed written evaluations submitted by pilot-program participants who had completed the process prior to January 1992.
- Consulted legal counsel regarding possible due process and other concerns.
- Invited written comments on two occasions, from chief executive officers and athletics administrators of every NCAA member institution, and from organizations representing conference commissioners, faculty athletics representatives, athletics administrators and associations of higher education. Approximately 145 written submissions were received.
- Contacted each of the nation's regional accrediting agencies to understand their current activities related to athletics and to seek comments concerning the certification concept.
- Conducted hearings in November 1991 in Dallas, Texas, at which approximately 25 institutions, conferences and affiliated organizations were represented.
- Received advice and assistance from representatives of the Presidents Commission, the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning, and a variety of other interested parties representing all divisions of the Association.

Based on its review of the pilot certification program and the comments received from institutions and organizations, the committee determined that it should be guided in its work by the following general conclusions:

1. The purpose of the program, and its relationship to the institution's larger academic mission, should be clear.
2. Participation by the larger institutional community should be a cornerstone of the certification concept.
3. The administrative burden created by the program should be kept to a minimum.
4. NCAA member institutions should control the implementation of the program, both in terms of the certification procedures and decisions regarding the certification of individual institutions.
5. Certification decisions should be based on an institution's commitment to fundamental operating principles, agreed upon by the membership and embodied in NCAA legislation.
6. Participation by conferences should be substantive, substantial and facilitative.
7. The program should take into account the diverse organizational structures and educational missions of NCAA member institutions.
8. The program should provide sufficient opportunity for institutions to take corrective actions when significant problems are identified.
9. The consequences for institutions that fail to take such actions should be serious.
10. The program should reflect sensitivity to gender-equity and minority concerns.

Summary of status report to the 1992 NCAA Convention

In January 1992, the committee presented a status report

As part of its work to develop recommendations, the NCAA Special Committee on Certification conducted hearings involving member institutions and conferences and affiliated organizations in November 1991 to the NCAA Convention as required by resolution of the previous year's Convention. The report was distributed during the general business session of the Convention and was published in its entirety in the January 15 edition of The NCAA News.

The committee's recommendations revolved around a central premise: that each participating institution should complete, at least once every five years, a verified and evaluated institutional self-study. The self-study would encompass seven basic areas:

1. Institutional mission.
2. Institutional control and presidential authority.
3. Fiscal integrity.
4. Academic integrity.
5. Conduct of student-athletes and athletics personnel.
6. Commitment to rules compliance.
7. The student-athlete experience.

Peer-review teams selected from among member institutions and conferences would be responsible for visiting the institution's campus and reviewing the self-study report.

General operating principles have been developed within each of the seven areas. They are benchmarks against which the institution and peer-review teams will evaluate the athletics program. They have been defined broadly to recognize the wide diversity among member institutions and should serve as the foundation upon which more specific self-study materials and procedures would be built.

External peer review ensures that participating institutions will be evaluated by broadly representative teams composed of experienced educational and athletics administrators with substantial campus experience. If the program is established in Division I initially (as the committee recommends later in this report), peer-review teams would be composed of individuals from Division I institutions. In the event that other divisions are involved, the committee recommends that peer-review teams be composed of individuals who represent institutions in the same division as the institution being evaluated. In any event, the work of the peer-review teams would be facilitated by conference office personnel and NCAA staff members.

Peer reviewers would approach the institution's self-study report and the campus visit with two objectives in mind:

1. Verifying:
 - a. that the self-study process was characterized by campus-wide participation, and
 - b. that the self-study report reflects accurately the operation of the athletics program.
2. Evaluating the institution's athletics program in relation to the established fundamental operating principles.

The primary results of the certification program for each participating institution would be the establishment of an overall strategy for improving the quality of the institution's athletics program from one self-study to the next and the development of a formal set of objectives designed to correct any deficiencies in the institution's athletics program.

When problems are identified as a part of the process, the institution will be expected to take corrective action as a condition of certification. Requirements for the taking of corrective action, and a record of such action, should be viewed as a routine and desirable aspect of the certification process and would be available as an important point of reference from one certification to the next.

An institution that fails to conduct an appropriate self-study or to make an effective effort to correct problems in its athletics program would risk denial of certification. To the extent that serious problems are identified and the institution fails to rectify them over a reasonable period of time, the institution would be placed in a probationary status for a period of up to one year, after which, if serious problems remain, the institution's privileges as an active NCAA member would be reduced through specific steps of reclassification into restricted and, finally, corresponding membership.

Responsibility for the certification program would rest primarily with a standing Committee on Athletics Certification, appointed by the Council. The committee would be responsible for developing and maintaining certification procedures, selecting and overseeing the training and assignment of external peer reviewers, establishing certification schedules, reviewing self-study reports and rendering certification decisions. Appeals of certification decisions would be heard by the appropriate Council steering committee.

The certification process would be coordinated with related programs already in place. The current institutional self-study requirement would be incorporated into the certification process. Reports currently required by NCAA legislation (e.g., academic and financial reports) would be continued, with those reports being made a part of the institution's certification documentation.

The proposed expanded and standing committees would continue relationships with the regional accrediting agencies seeking to reduce the combined burdens on campus personnel who deal with both kinds of programs.

Divisional application

From the outset, Division III representatives of the Council and the Presidents Commission have taken the position that Division III should not be involved in a certification program. As a result, the committee considered essentially three alternatives: Division I-A only, Division I as a whole and Divisions I and II together.

After extensive discussion, the committee concluded that the program should be established, at least initially, for Division I. The committee noted that the certification pilot program arose as a Division I initiative and out of circumstances principally associated with Division I institutions. By taking this approach, start-up costs will be reduced and materials developed for the program can be targeted for Division I.

In addition, the Division II membership will be in a position to continue monitoring the program and will have the benefit of the experience of Division I when the Division II membership considers a similar program in the future. The committee also observed that in the near term, related self-study alternatives, including continued use of the Institutional Self-Study Guide and NCAA institutional compliance reviews, remain available to Division II institutions.

The committee also recommends that Divisions II and III institutions that sponsor Division I sports not be required to participate in the certification program in the event that it becomes mandatory for Division I only.

Funding

The issue of funding is among the most controversial aspects of the certification program, and the committee received many conflicting comments concerning the issue. Without question, implementing a successful certification program in Division I will involve considerable expense, even if the utmost attention is paid to efficiency and ease of administration. The committee believes, however, that this expenditure of funds is essential to ensure public confidence in the integrity of both intercollegiate athletics generally and the championship events from which the Association derives its financial well-being.

After substantial discussion, the committee concluded that each participating institution should be responsible for meeting travel and other costs associated with certification visits to its campus, but that care should be taken to minimize transportation costs when assembling peer-review teams. Training and other direct administrative costs would be borne by the Association.

See Committee issues, page 12

Committee issues

In addition, conferences would be expected to share the financial burden through increased compliance-related services to conference members between certification visits. (The conference's role in certification is outlined in more detail in the next section.)

The committee believes that at the institutional level, the anticipated cost—estimated at less than $10,000 during each five-year cycle—is manageable for most Division I programs. If these expenses were to be assumed by the Association, the level of funding involved would be substantial and force budget adjustments. Shifting some of this burden to the institutional level, however, helps to ensure the institution's commitment to the process, maintains effective cost controls and, at the same time, protects to the greatest extent possible the current distribution of Association funds to the membership.

The committee would welcome any comments that members of the Council and Presidents Commission may offer concerning the committee's recommendations in this regard.

Responsibilities of conferences and independent member institutions

The committee recognized that although self-study and peer review are periodic processes, compliance is ongoing and requires sustained diligence. For this reason, the committee believes that the area of rules compliance should be treated differently in the certification process. Specifically, it is the committee's view that the conference office should assume a more formal relationship with its member institutions by:

1. Assisting conference members in the regular review of each institution's commitment to compliance with NCAA rules and in the identification of specific means by which to improve institutional compliance efforts. Records of ongoing institutional compliance efforts would be made a part of the institution's certification report and would be subject to review by the peer-review team.
2. Accompanying peer-review teams on campus visits of conference members.

3. Ensuring that conference members develop, implement and report corrective actions prescribed in the certification process.

In addition, conference administrators could volunteer to serve as members of external peer-review teams for institutions outside their conferences.

The committee recognized that means must be identified for providing the same support to independent member institutions. The committee believes that the NCAA compliance services department will be in a position to provide these services, if desired, to independent member institutions. Some conference offices may be willing and able to offer similar assistance. In any event, however, the committee recognizes that the individual institutions involved should have the flexibility to arrange to receive assistance from an agency with which the institution is familiar and comfortable. Accordingly, the committee recommends that independent member institutions in Division I be responsible for obtaining assistance in carrying out the responsibilities for monitoring compliance as set forth in proposed Bylaw 23.3, subject to approval of the proposed Committee on Athletics Certification.

Timetable for implementation

The committee is sensitive to concerns expressed in recent months that this program not be implemented hastily. The committee has been careful, however, to review the Association's experience in the pilot program and to consider fully the comments it has received from the membership. The committee has concluded that its recommendations must provide a specific, deliberate means by which to proceed in an orderly process over an approximate two-year period to assure substantial advance notice as to the program's requirements.

Accordingly, the committee recommends that the Council begin this process immediately by replacing two current committee members, representing Divisions II and III, with Division I representatives, and by expanding the committee to 12 members. These actions will permit a much-needed broader representation of Division I interests.

In addition, the committee recommends that the expanded committee be authorized to continue to receive the advice and assistance of representatives of the Presidents Commission, the Knight Commission, the Committee on Review and

Certification committee chair Joseph N. Crowley

Planning and Division II by invitation of the chair to some or all committee meetings.

The expanded committee would be charged primarily with developing four basic documents:

1. Procedures for general administration of the program.
2. The self-study instrument.
3. A user's guide for participating institutions and conferences.
4. Instructions for peer-review teams.

Development of these materials will permit the membership to understand the certification concept more fully before voting on proposed legislation during the 1993 Convention and to prepare for participation in the certification program.

It is anticipated that the expanded committee will form subcommittees to accomplish these tasks. The committee believes strongly that in order to develop materials that reflect the special expertise and interests of diverse constituent groups in the membership, it will be necessary to call upon selected individuals outside the committee to contribute substantial time and effort to the task. Accordingly, the committee recommends that the Council authorize the chair of the expanded committee to invite individuals to attend (as necessary) meetings of the expanded committee and to

Routine Vanderbilt case escalated to ethical-conduct violation

I. Introduction.

This case began as a simple secondary violation of NCAA recruiting rules involving the then head women's basketball coach, an enrolled student-athlete and a then prospective student-athlete. The matter was investigated by the university and treated as a secondary violation by the enforcement staff and the NCAA Eligibility Committee in the spring of 1990. The eligibility of the prospective student-athlete, who had subsequently enrolled at Vanderbilt University, was restored in October 1990.

However, on March 4, 1991, both student-athletes confessed to the university's assistant director of athletics that they had provided false and misleading information in statements they previously had given to the institution. Moreover, one of the student-athletes reported that she had been induced and encouraged to provide false and misleading information by the then head women's basketball coach. The institution confronted the coach, who then admitted both to providing false and misleading information to the institution and to discussing with the student-athlete the contents of the statement she should provide to the institution.

The university immediately declared both student-athletes ineligible. The head coach's resignation was accepted by the institution March 5, 1991. Moreover, as a corrective action, the institution withheld the student-athletes from the first-round competition of the 1991 NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship. One of the student-athletes repaid the cost of the benefits she received in violation of NCAA legislation. After declaring these student-athletes ineligible, the institution again appealed for the restoration of their eligibility March 5, 1991, which was granted verbally March 7, 1991, and in writing June 21, 1991.

All of the above issues, with the exception of the ethical-conduct issues involving the former head coach, were treated by the enforcement staff as secondary violations. The actions taken by the institution were accepted by the enforcement staff as appropriate, and no further action was considered necessary.

The enforcement staff conducted joint interviews with the university into possible violations of ethical conduct by the former head coach. On October 17, 1991, a letter of official inquiry was sent to the institution and to the former coach. The institution and the former coach submitted their responses to the official inquiry November 26, 1991, and November 18, 1991, respectively. Prehearing conference calls were held separately with the institution and with the former coach on January 17, 1992. The institution, the enforcement staff and the former head coach were in agreement that the events as set forth in provisions of those bylaws.

The institution self-imposed the following actions after concluding that the then head coach provided false and misleading information to the institution and encouraged a student-athlete to provide false and misleading information to the university: (a) The institution accepted the resignation of the head coach March 5, 1991;

Case summary

A simple secondary violation of NCAA recruiting rules in the women's basketball program at Vanderbilt University developed into a case involving ethical-conduct issues when the then head women's basketball coach and a women's basketball student-athlete confessed that they had provided false and misleading information to the institution.

- The student-athlete reported that she had been induced and encouraged by the then head women's basketball coach to provide the false and misleading information.

- The ethical-conduct issues of the case were handled separately from the actual rules violations, which were dealt with appropriately by the institution and treated by the NCAA enforcement staff as secondary.

- The head coach's actions were deemed by the Committee on Infractions to constitute a major violation of NCAA legislation, but the committee opted to take no action in the case beyond accepting the penalties and sanctions self-imposed by the institution. Those actions included acceptance of the head women's basketball coach's resignation and reductions in grants-in aid and official visits in the women's basketball program.

- The committee determined that any institution employing the former coach within the next three years would be subject to the Association's show-cause requirement.

the official inquiry were correct and that violations of the ethical-conduct provisions of NCAA legislation did occur. The former coach indicated that he did not wish to exercise his privilege to have a full hearing before the NCAA Committee on Infractions. The committee reviewed the written record and a staff summary of the investigation at its January 31-February 2, 1992, meeting.

Under the provisions of NCAA Bylaws 32.6.2.1 and 32.4.2, the Committee on Infractions may review a case on the written record alone and may elect to take no further action after review of institutional penalties and sanctions. The committee chose to process this case under the

(b) the women's basketball program was limited to 10 official paid visits (rather than 15) during the 1991-92 academic year, and (c) the women's basketball program shall be limited to one grant-in-aid less than the maximum number allowed by NCAA legislation during the 1992-93 academic year. The committee believed that these penalties were consistent with the nature of the violations, and the committee adopted the penalties as its own.

The committee accepted the university actions as sufficient in view of the very limited nature of the violations. The committee found the actions of the head coach of inducing a student-athlete to provide false and misleading information, and knowingly providing false and misleading information to his institution, to be reprehensible and a violation of the principles of ethical conduct. Such a violation constitutes a major violation of NCAA legislation.

The committee determined that should the former head coach be employed by another NCAA member institution in an athletically related position within the next three years, he and that institution would be required to appear before the committee to determine whether the former coach's duties at that institution should be limited.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by committee.

[NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1(d), and 19.01.1.]

During March, April and June 1990, the then head women's basketball coach failed to deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics, and violated the principles of ethical conduct by his provision of false and misleading information to the university and his attempts to encourage at least one principal in this case to report false and misleading information to the university during an institutional inquiry, which was the result of a May 30, 1990, letter from an NCAA enforcement representative to the director of athletics concerning possible violations of NCAA legislation. Specifically:

A. The former head coach provided false and misleading information in an April 4, 1990, statement to the institution concerning his involvement in providing automobile transportation and a basketball tournament admission ticket to a student-athlete. The head coach wrote that he arrived at the high-school basketball tournament on March 15, 1990, and "was met in the parking lot by (the young woman), who had driven her own car to the tournament to see her high-school team play. (The student-athlete) had her own ticket and I had a hard ticket as well." Further, in a June 6, 1990, signed statement to the institution, the head coach wrote, "I acknowledge receipt of two tickets being sent to me for the 1990 TSSAA State Tournament in Murfreesboro, Tennessee. On March 15, 1990, I used one of those tickets to gain admittance into the tournament, while the second ticket was not used."

However, in a March 5, 1991, statement the head coach provided to the institution, he wrote, "we rode together, in my car, from my home in Franklin to Murfreesboro and back. I gave her a hard ticket and we entered the pass gate at Murphy Center to attend the 1990 TSSAA State Tournament." In a September 12, 1991, interview with another NCAA enforcement representative, the head coach confirmed that he had provided transportation and an admission ticket to the student-athlete at no cost to the young woman, and that he knowingly provided the institution with false and misleading information regarding those violations.

B. The former head coach encouraged the student-athlete to report false and misleading information to the university about her knowledge of or involvement in possible violations of NCAA legislation. Specifically, the young woman reported to the university March 4, 1991, that "Coach called me following the receipt of allegations the first part of June to tell me what to say. He went over the story to make sure I said what he did. He told me this was to keep me and the team from being ineligible to participate. He told me that our athletic director was going to meet with me later that day. After the meeting he called again to make sure I told his story." Further, in a March 5, 1991, statement the head coach provided to the institution, the head coach stated that he talked about the allegations to the young woman prior to her statement to the university, but he denied that he told her to lie or provide false and misleading information. Finally, in a September 12, 1991, interview with the second enforcement representative, the head coach said that he and the student-athlete talked about the story they intended to tell, and they both agreed to say that each drove separately to the game and that it was not a situation where he was trying to coerce the young woman into saying something that she did not want to say.

III. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For the reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved a major violation of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. However, for reasons set forth in Part I, the committee determined that this case was truly unique and did not warrant the instituotherwise assist the subcommittees in their work.

In developing certification materials, the expanded committee also should take full advantage of the expertise available through the existing committee structure. The committee wishes to emphasize the need to be sensitive to gender-equity and minority concerns as a part of the certification program and recommends that the expanded committee make special efforts to seek comments from the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee and the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics.

Assuming that legislation is adopted in January 1993, the proposed standing Committee on Athletics Certification would assume responsibility immediately thereafter for the program's administration. The committee recommends that the proposed standing committee be afforded the opportunity to supervise the selection and training of peer-review teams, to organize conferences' involvement and to prepare for the program's general administration during the 1993 calendar year. The committee recommends that campus orientation visits by peer-review teams begin early in 1994.

As mentioned in the report to the 1992 Convention, some concerns have been expressed that institutions could be placed at a recruiting and competitive disadvantage if they are scheduled for certification visits substantially later than other institutions. Although the committee has discussed these concerns at length and believes the claims of potential recruiting or competitive advantages may be exaggerated, the committee recommends that the full Division I membership be informed of the certification schedule for the first five years at least one year in advance of the first campus visit. In addition, the committee recommends that the order in which institutions are selected for certification visits be established so that no positive or negative inferences can be drawn from the initial certification schedule.

In this regard, the committee recognizes that it will be necessary to develop a certification schedule in such a way that member institutions from a particular conference are spaced evenly over the initial five-year period. The committee also discussed the extent to which the 35 institutions that participated in the pilot program might be afforded special treatment in the certification schedule and agreed that each of those participating institutions should be contacted to determine their preferences in this regard.

As proposed, the initial cycle for certification is five years. The committee foresees the certification process as changing over time to reflect the experience that will have been gained through the process. Accordingly, the committee recommends that once the program is implemented, the standing committee be obliged to give specific attention to the following issues: (a) the time intervals over which second and subsequent certifications are completed; (b) possible modification to self-study reports and peer-review visits, and (c) whether the certification schedule for particular institutions should be modified because of major change in circumstances (e.g., appointment of a new chief executive officer or director of athletics, involvement in enforcement proceedings).

Proposed legislation

The proposed legislation outlines the certification program in general terms in Articles 3 and 6 of the constitution and creates an additional operating bylaw (proposed Bylaw 23) that describes the concept more fully and sets forth the fundamental operating principles. Specific certification procedures are detailed in the Association's administrative regulations (Bylaw 30) in order to permit flexibility in terms of possible future revisions.

tional penalties set forth in NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2. The university cooperated fully in the matter, took decisive action consistent with the violations, declared the student-athletes ineligible pending appeal to the NCAA Eligibility Committee, accepted the resignation of the head coach involved in these violations and self-imposed several penalties.

A. The committee accepted the following institutional self-imposed penalties as its own.

1. The institution was limited to no more than 10 official paid visits in the sport of women's basketball during the 1991-92 academic year.

2. The institution may award no more than 14 grants-in-aid in the sport of women's basketball during the 1992-93 academic year.

B. Due to his involvement in certain violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, the former head women's basketball coach found to have violated the principles of ethical conduct will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a three-year period (April 8, 1992, to April 8, 1995), he and the involved institution shall be required to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(f), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period. (NOTE: Had the former head coach not cooperated in the processing of this case and had he not provided honest and complete information to the NCAA staff, the committee would have imposed at least a five-year period during which he would have been subject to this show-cause procedure.)

C. Vanderbilt University shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

(NOTE: Should Vanderbilt University appeal either the findings of violations or proposed penalties in this case to the NCAA Council subcommittee of Division I members, the Committee on Infractions will submit an expanded infractions report to the members of the Council who will consider the appeal. This expanded report will include additional information in accordance with Bylaw 32.8.5. A copy of the committee's report would be provided to the institution prior to the institution's appearance before the Council subcommittee and, as required by Bylaw 32.8.6, would be released to the public.)

Also, the Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed; further, the committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Finally, should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.)

partial qualifier, up from 22.6 percent in 1990. Men's basketball was next at 10.0 percent, although the rate was down from the 10.5 of 1990.

The percentage of Division II women partial qualifiers, 25.9, is similar to that of Division I, but the percentage of Blacks is noticeably smaller (41.9 compared to 63.8 for Division I). The Division II rate for black partial qualifiers is down sharply from the 58.5 percent reported in 1990 but similar to the 45.4 percent of 1989.

Division II athletes who failed to meet the test-score component dropped from 74.8 percent in 1990 to 63.7 percent in 1991.

Athletes' eating disorders discussed

Kelly D. Brownell, Judith Rodin and Jack H. Wilmore have coauthored a book titled "Eating, Body Weight and Performance in Athletes: Disorders of Modern Society."

The book deals with eating disturbances, weight preoccupation and frank eating disorders among athletes.

The NCAA introduced an educational program on eating disorders in 1988. The program includes a series of videotapes on eating and its disorders for athletes, coaches, trainers and others involved in collegiate sports.

The new book's authors praise that effort, writing, "Such a group (NCAA) has credibility and can assemble the expertise needed to recommend a comprehensive program.... Having national organizations take the lead should generate considerable visibility and sensitivity to the problems, and we hope will lead to the development of concrete programs for dealing with athletes."

In Kramer's

April.

"I probably averaged two nights a week at home the last four to five weeks," Kramer said. "I tried to visit as many sites as possible. I went to four sites the first weekend and four sites the second weekend."

Kramer got plenty of advice on which teams should make the tournament and which teams should not. Basketball fans and sports information directors from all over wrote him detailing why their teams should be selected. Kramer said he received 10 or 12 letters every day from such people.

Important NCAA committee work is nothing new to the 62-year-old Kramer. He was on the special committee that negotiated the Association's seven-year, $1 billion contract with CBS Sports, and he currently is on the Committee on Infractions and the Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues. He was on the NCAA Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education and served as chair of the Men's Committee on Committees from 1987 to 1988.

Of that group, the Division I Men's Basketball Committee provided the most intense experience, Kramer said.

"Probably none of them requires the commitment of time over a short period of time (like Division I men's basketball)," he said. "Contrary to what a lot of people understand, the selection process is very difficult. The No. 1 question asked is: What criteria does the committee use to make the selections of the 34 at-large teams?"

It is the process of filling those 34 at-large slots along with the 30 automatic qualifiers that creates the pressure.

"There is (a feeling) there that you overlooked something, that you put the bracket together wrong or something," he said. "But with the amount of information we get from the staff, it's impossible to overlook a team. They may not get in, but they won't get overlooked."

Despite his vast involvement with the NCAA at the national level, Kramer is making sure he does not become too busy and overlook the growth and improvement of the Southeastern Conference.

He played a key role in the addition of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, and the University of South Carolina, Columbia, to the conference last July. He also helped establish the SEC Championship Football Game, which will feature the conference's two division winners playing for the right to compete in the USF&G Sugar Bowl.

"It's been a challenging two years," Kramer said of his tenure at the SEC. "We've seen the expansion of the conference from 10 to 12 schools and the resulting scheduling adjustments that you need to handle that. It has made for an interesting two years."

But then with Roy Kramer, they're all interesting.

Steroid ed set again by NSCA

The Primary Contact Individual (PCI) Steroid Education Program again will be presented at the 1992 annual conference of the National Strength and Conditioning Association.

The conference is scheduled June 18-20 at the Wyndham Franklin Plaza Hotel in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. This program was developed through funding from the NCAA.

Those attending the PCI program will attain a greater understanding of anabolic steroids, their properties and their physiological/psychological effects on the user.

A primary emphasis of the program is to prepare the strength and conditioning professional to act as a strong deterrent to the abuse of anabolic steroids. This is accomplished through the implementation of a planned program of athletics conditioning that brings each athlete to the individual level of peak performance without anabolic drugs.

More information can be obtained from the NSCA, P.O. Box 81410, Lincoln, Nebraska 68501. (402/472-3000).

Men's golf Robert E. Rosencrans appointed at Wittenberg. He will step down as director of men's athletics there at the end of the academic year.

Women's soccer Nancy Slocum chosen at Wellesley following three seasons as coach at UC Davis. She also has been an assistant at California.

Men's and women's swimming John Little resigned at Missouri... Matt Kredlich named women's coach at Brown.

Men's and women's tennis Tom Fleming hired at Robert Morris. He spent the past year as head professional and tennis director at Settler's Cabin Park near Pittsburgh while also serving as boys' coach at Chartiers Valley (Pennsylvania) High School.

Men's volleyball Mike Normand resigned at Loyola Marymount. He took over the program in 1989.

Women's volleyball Floyd Deaton promoted from part-time to full-time coach at Xavier (Ohio). His teams have registered a 47-27 mark in his two years there.

Wrestling Former U.S. Olympian Mark Johnson named at Illinois. He has been coach at Oregon State the past two seasons, where he compiled a two-year dual-meet record of 20-5-2, including a mark of 11-1-1 during the 1991-92 season.

STAFF

Publications director Lew Harris named director of athletics publications at Vanderbilt.

Strength and conditioning Mike Ward hired at Bowling Green. He spent the past six years in a similar capacity at Findlay, where he also was assistant football coach.

NOTABLES

The Women's Sports Foundation

Mark Johnson
named wrestling
coach at Illinois

St. Olaf's Jim
Dimick will head
baseball coaches

awarded its Budget Rent-a-Car Coaches Awards, whose four recipients were selected by the Coaches Advisory Roundtable. Among the winners was Lock Haven field hockey coach Sharon E. Taylor, who has compiled a 260-82-25 record since she took over the program in 1972... Jim Dimick, coaching his 25th baseball season at St. Olaf this spring, was named president of the American Baseball Coaches Association, becoming the first Division III skipper to assume the post. Last season, he won his 500th game... William D. Kramer, author of the NCAA Guide to Title IX and Intercollegiate Athletics, elected a member of the law firm Baker & Botts in Washington, D.C. He previously was a partner with Squire, Sanders & Dempsey in Washington, D.C.

Arthur J. Bergstrom, a former head football coach and athletics director at Bradley and former head of the NCAA's enforcement department, will be inducted into the Illinois College hall of fame May 16. He lettered in baseball, basketball and football as a student at the school... Penn State athletics director James I. Tarman was named a distinguished alumnus of Gettysburg. He graduated cum laude from the institution in 1952 and recently completed 12 years of service on the Gettysburg board of trustees. He continues to serve as trustee emeritus. He became Penn State AD in 1982.

DEATHS

Emil G. "Lefty" Rice, a longtime athletics director at Loyola (Maryland), died April 3 at age 82. He joined the staff at Loyola (Maryland) in 1937 as a part-time basketball coach and was named AD a year later. He retired from that position 35 years later, in 1973... Robert McIlwaine, assistant men's basketball coach at Howard, collapsed and died after playing in a pickup basketball game at the school. He was 26. McIlwaine, a part-time assistant, was a 1988 graduate of Howard and played basketball there for three seasons. He did not play during his senior year because of a heart condition.

CORRECTION

The NCAA Record section of the April 1 issue of The NCAA News incorrectly reported the gender of Dale Rogers Marshall, who is a woman.

Due to an editor's error, the name of a women's sports pass at Iowa was incorrectly reported in a story in the March 4 issue of The NCAA News on promotion of women's basketball. The passes are called "goal cards" and provide admittance to women's sports events only. There is no similar all-purpose pass for men's sporting events.

CLARIFICATION

John Parker, who was named outdoor track coach at Michigan Tech, also will retain his duties at the school as assistant football coach.

MIT DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS

MIT invites nominations and applications for the position of Director of Athletics.

The Department of Athletics has responsibility for the divisions of physical education; intercollegiate athletics for men and for women; intramural and club sports; and recreation. Each division, coordinated or supervised by a member of the department, is responsible to the Director.

MIT's intercollegiate program is one of the broadest in the nation with 39 varsity teams - 24 for men and 15 for women (NCAA, Division III). The program emphasizes participation with up to 20 percent of undergraduates participating in at least one varsity sport.

The physical education program, required for all undergraduates and optional for graduate students, ensures instruction in life-long sports and recreational interests. Intramural programs (20) and club sports (37) regularly attract in excess of two-thirds of the student population of 4,300 undergraduates and 5,200 graduates. In addition, the athletic program provides recreational opportunities for faculty, staff, and alumni during periods not in conflict with student programs. Faculty and staff are also eligible to participate in club and intramural sports.

The athletic complex of nine buildings and 26 acres of playing fields centered on the residential campus includes indoor facilities for tennis, swimming, track, and many winter sports; a sailing pavilion and boathouse on the Charles River; a major events center and ice rink.

The department is supported by MIT's academic budget.

Qualifications: Professional stature and extensive experience in athletic administration. Demonstrated leadership and organizational skills; ability to interact with different constituencies; commitment to diversity, to education, and to the interests of students.

Appointment and Salary: Appointment effective September 1, 1992. Salary commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Send nominations and letters of application (accompanied by curriculum vitae and names of current references) to:

Alfred's Boucher heads Giant Steps Awards

Annie Boucher, a 50-year-old grandmother and Alfred University senior, recently was named a Giant Steps Award winner in conjunction with National Student-Athlete Day.

National Student-Athlete Day was established in 1988 to honor the network of parents, coaches, teachers and school systems that makes it possible for student-athletes to balance academics and athletics.

The NCAA Foundation and the National Consortium for Academics and Sports at Northeastern University combined to promote the event, which was observed April 6.

Other award winners this year were: NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, athletics administrators division; former professional football player Alan Page, civic leaders; Pennsylvania State University football coach Joe Paterno and former University of Massachusetts, Boston, women's basketball coach Alfreda Harris, coaching; Bob Hurley Sr., father of Duke University and Seton Hall University basketball players Bobby and Danny, respectively, parent, and David Lazerson and Richard Green, winners in the sports and social issues division as coordinators of Project Cure.

Briefly in the News

Boucher received national attention last fall when a Sports Illustrated article profiled how she led the women's tennis team to its first undefeated season despite the troubles she encountered early in her life that caused her to drop out of high school.

Boucher, who was 7-0 in singles play last fall, also was one of two winners of the Courageous Student-Athlete Award. The other was former Georgia Institute of Technology football all-American Eddie Lee Ivery.

"It feels great being in the company of all those people who are national figures," Boucher said. "I can see where hard work pays off in academics and athletics. It's not an easy task for someone to return to school. I could not have done what I have without the help of an institution such as Alfred."

Orr to head basketball coaches association

Iowa State University men's basketball coach Johnny Orr has been named president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Orr had served as the organization's first vice-president. He succeeded Wesleyan University's Herb Kenney as president at the group's annual meeting April 5 in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Orr's term is one year.

"It's as big a job as you can get in coaching," Orr told The Associated Press. "You appoint all the committees, you've got to make the decisions with the executive committee. You have to deal with the black coaches association, the assistant coaches association, as well as the NCAA."

"We just hope we can cooperate with one another to make everything better, for us and for the NCAA."

The coaches want to run the game. The administration won't let us do it. We're the keepers of the game, you know."

Football could return to Chapman after 60 years

Intercollegiate football could make its return to Chapman University after a 60-year absence. Not since 1932 has football been played at the Orange, California, institution, when it was known as California Christian College.

University spokesperson Ruth Wardwell said word could come in late May regarding the addition of football. Currently, Chapman has nine sports, five for men and four for women.

La Salle student-athletes on both academic teams

La Salle University placed one student-athlete on each of the GTE Academic All-America teams. Jack Hurd was named to the men's team and Jen Cole was selected for the women's team. Both were first-team

Because of the rarity of this occurrence, La Salle sports information director Michael Felici is sending out the call to other Division I schools to contact him if they have achieved a similar honor. He may be contacted at: La Salle University, Athletic Department, P.O. Box 805, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19141 or at 215/951-1605.

Compliance briefs

General information

1992-93 NCAA-required compliance forms: The following NCAA compliance forms will be mailed to member institutions May 1: the graduation-rates disclosure form (for Division I only (form 92-6), the student-athlete statement (forms 92-3 a, b and c), the student-athletes' affirmation of eligibility (forms 92-4 a, b and c) and the drug-testing consent (form 93-2 d, e, f).

A separate set of forms for Divisions I, II and III member institutions has been developed to reflect the NCAA Council's authorization of a separate student-athlete statement specific to each division. Also, as a result of the adoption of 1992 Convention Proposal Nos. 41-A and 41-I (drug-testing consent), separate drug-testing consent forms also have been prepared for each division.

NCAA Guides: Each individual attending the 1992 NCAA regional seminars will receive the 1992-93 NCAA Guide to Rules Compliance. Division I compliance coordinators and Divisions I and II directors of athletics and faculty athletics representatives who are unable to attend a seminar will have a copy of the guide materials sent to them after the seminars. Each Division I and II conference also will receive a guide.

The 1992-93 NCAA Guide to Financial Aid and the 1992-93 NCAA Guide to Recruiting are scheduled for publication and distribution to the membership in May. Also, the inaugural publication of the NCAA Guide to Eligibility is scheduled for distribution in June.

In an effort to facilitate the sharing of this information, the guides will be distributed to Divisions I and II conferences and institutional compliance coordinators, as well as other interested parties on campus (for example, director of admissions, registration and financial aid, and recruiting coordinators).

Upcoming meetings

Attention: financial aid administrators. National office staff members from the legislative services and compliance services departments will be involved in the following May regional association meeting: Western Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (WASFAA) Los Angeles, California, May 2-5, 1992.

1992 NCAA regional seminars: Regional rules-compliance seminars will be conducted May 6-8 in New Orleans, Louisiana; May 27-29 in San Diego, California; June 17-19 in Chicago, Illinois, and June 25-27 in Baltimore, Maryland.

The following schedule will be in place for the first three regional seminars. The schedule for the Baltimore seminar will be published in a subsequent issue.

On day two (Thursday, 1-4 p.m.) and day three (Friday, 8-10 a.m.) of the seminars, representatives from the NCAA enforcement department will be available to discuss questions regarding the eligibility appeals process, the reporting of secondary violations and general enforcement issues. A one-hour general session regarding enforcement and eligibility issues also will be conducted on day three (Friday, 11:15 a.m.-12:15 p.m.).

In addition, from 8 a.m.-2 p.m. Friday, a representative from the NCAA national office will be available to answer questions regarding the NCAA compliance assistant software and the improved Collegiate Sports Network (Compuserve). Interested individuals may sign up at the NCAA compliance services department resource center at all four regional seminar sites for a 15-minute one-on-one question-and-answer session.

Compliance strategies

Student-athlete exit interviews: In accordance with NCAA Bylaw 6.3.2, a Division I institution's director of athletics, senior woman administrator or designated representative (excluding coaching staff members) is required to conduct exit interviews in each sport with a sample of student-athletes (as determined by the institution) whose eligibility has expired.

The following are issues and potential strategies for institutions to consider regarding the student-athlete exit-interview process.

- Determine who will conduct the interviews and the method by which the interviews will be conducted.
- Determine the number of questions that will be necessary to appropriately address each of the four areas specifically mandated by the legislation. Institutional administrators also may wish to address questions in areas not specifically stated in the legislation.
- Determine the number of student-athletes to be interviewed in each sport. Although the legislation places a minimum of one student-athlete per sport, consideration may be given to conducting exit interviews with a larger sample of individuals to gain a more comprehensive understanding of the needs and opinions of student-athletes on campus.
- Determine who will select the sample of student-athletes and how they will be selected.
- Determine how the issue of confidentiality of information offered by the student-athletes will be addressed. While institutions should follow their established procedures for the handling of information that has been gathered through investigations, institutional administrators may wish to protect the identity of those student-athletes being interviewed by increasing the sample size per team.

Exit interviews with student-athletes are intended to encourage the development of an intercollegiate athletics program that responds to the needs and interests of participating student-athletes. Therefore, when developing the exit interview, institutions also should determine the manner in which the collected information will be used to help achieve this goal.

Sample exit-interview materials (including sample questions, formats and a complete list of strategies for conducting student-athlete exit interviews) are available in the 1991-92 NCAA Guide to Rules Compliance and may be requested from the NCAA compliance services department.

This material was provided by the NCAA compliance services department as an aid to member institutions and conference offices. Institutions or conference offices with questions or issues concerning the content addressed in this column may contact John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, at the NCAA national office.
