Second publication of proposals mailed

The Second Publication of Proposed Legislation—containing a total of 155 proposals for the 1993 Convention in Dallas—was mailed to the membership September 15.

Included are 49 proposals produced from the committee structure through the NCAA Council and/or Presidents Commission and one that was properly submitted before the July 1 deadline for amendments from the membership but was not included in the Initial Publication of Proposed Legislation, which was mailed in August.

Also included are 105 proposals submitted by member institutions and conferences that appeared in the initial publication, including all changes that have been made in those proposals since they originally were submitted.

Two other proposals appearing in the initial publication—one pertaining to recruiting that would have specified that all observations and evaluations on the same day count as one evaluation, and one pertaining to official visits prior to the early signing period that would have required prospects to present at least a 90 score on the PSAT or a 21 on the PACT Plus—were withdrawn.

Of the 155 proposals appearing in the second publication, four

NACWAA talks center on gender equity

Issues related to gender equity in intercollegiate athletics dominated discussions during the fall meeting of the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators September 13-15 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Delegates received updates on Title IX legislation, NCAA committee activity and legislation that will be considered at the NCAA Convention in January.

The equity component of the proposed NCAA certification program received special attention.

Maureen E. Devlin, representing the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, said the commission was pleased with the progress of the certification plan and noted that the scope of the project had been reduced significantly.

She also said the commission was pleased with new language in the plan that would require an institution to analyze and explain any difference between the academic profile of entering athletes and the entering student body in general.

Registration fee for Convention increases

Fees for delegates to the 1993 NCAA Convention in Dallas will be higher than in previous years to cover more of the costs attributable to delegates.

The registration fee will be $100 for voting and alternate delegates from member institutions and conferences, as well as for delegates from affiliated organizations and for corresponding members.

Also, the charge for each delegate beyond four from each member will increase to $150. The registration fee for nonmember visitors will be $200.

Chief executive officers are reminded that the 1993 Convention will be the first at which NCAA Bylaw 5.1.3.1.1 will be effective. That bylaw stipulates that institutions or conferences that designate both a male and a female as voting or alternate delegates on the appointment-of-delegates form will be allowed to appoint four accredited delegates. In all other circumstances, institutions will be limited to not more than three accredited delegates. They may have any number of visiting (non-accredited) delegates.

Expenses covered by the registration fee include the delegates reception, two delegates luncheons, the honors dinner and all

Convention materials.

The last increase was for the 1990 Convention, when the registration fee went from $50 to $70 per delegate.

Registration fees will be collected at the registration counters at the Loews Anatole Hotel. American Express, Mastercard and Visa credit cards will be accepted, along with personal or institutional checks.

All in a day for kicker

Kevin Pendergast got his kicks September 5.

On that day, the University of Notre Dame student-athlete kicked an extra point and kicked off after a score in the Fighting Irish's 42-7 victory over Northwestern University at Soldier Field in Chicago. Pendergast then hopped a single-engine plane and headed to Bloomington, Indiana, where the Notre Dame soccer team faced the University of California, Los Angeles, in the adidas MetLife Classic.

Pendergast

"It was good to have Kevin run into the locker room and say, 'I'm ready to go,'" said Notre Dame soccer coach Mike Berticelli, whose team lost, 1-0, to UCLA. "He came from one big event at Soldier Field and never missed a beat on the soccer field. I give him credit for keeping focused."

Pendergast is a senior academically but still has one year of football eligibility remaining.

Although he is a three-year starter on the soccer team, Pendergast didn't start kicking around a football until last year, when Notre Dame's starting place-kicker Craig Hentrich suffered an injury late in the season. Pendergast booted three extra points and nailed a 23-yard field goal in Notre Dame's 39-28 Sugar Bowl victory over the University of Florida last January.

"My dad bought my brother and me football uniforms when we were young," Pendergast said. "I think we wore them for Halloween, the only time I'd ever worn one."

He has plans to wear a football jersey for the Irish in 1993.

Pride stings hornet

Seeing double

Soccer fans at Ohio Wesleyan University and the College of Wooster are doing a double take these days, thanks to Polly and Katie Doyle. Polly (left) and Katie, who are identical twins, both play field hockey, Polly for Ohio Wesleyan and Katie for Wooster. Ohio Wesleyan beat Wooster, 4-0, September 9.

"The Pride." The institution said use of the nickname by the Greensboro Hornets minor-league professional baseball club and the Charlotte Hornets of the NBA was a factor in the decision.

A new member of the Dixie Conference, Shenandoah University, also uses Hornets as a nickname, as does a local high school. Greensboro also belongs to the Dixie Conference.

"You don't walk away from nearly a quarter century of tradition without sufficient cause," Greensboro athletics director Kim A. Strable said. "Nicknames and mascots are in fact marketing tools that must serve your institution. Unfortunately, we felt we could not effectively compete as a hornet in our community, in the region, or even now in our conference."

"Obviously, everyone wants their school mascot to be special and unique while serving as an effective symbol. We're not aware of any other college or university using 'The Pride' in the ways we plan to use it and therefore I think we've achieved our objective."

Remembering Nelson

Football officials in all Division I-A conferences and all levels of the Eastern College Athletic Conference are wearing patches this season to honor the memory of David M. Nelson, longtime secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Football Rules Committee who died last November.

The football officiating supervisors of the Collegiate Commissioners Association initiated the commemorative effort and developed the patches, which say "DMN" and are worn on the front shirt pocket. The CCA group prescribes the uniforms to be worn by college officials.

In addition to the Division I-A conferences and the ECAC, high-school officials in Texas are wearing the patches because Texas high schools play by NCAA football rules. In all, approximately 7,000 officials at all levels will be wearing the commemorative patch this season.

Nelson joined the Football Rules Committee in 1958 and was named secretary in 1962.

Facilities

The University of Wisconsin, Oshkosh, is building an eight-lane swimming pool with diving area.

Improvements at Kolf Sports Center also are planned. Total cost is $3 million... Ithaca College has renamed its football field Jim Butterfield Stadium for Jim Butterfield, who coached the Bombers to three NCAA Division III championships.

On September 26, Ohio University will dedicate the $5.3 million Tower at Peden Stadium. It serves both as an instructional and research facility and a first-class athletics complex... The new Ernest P. Jensen Stadium Club and Press Box at Sonoma State University is complete. The two-story, 2,740-square-foot facility was built through the donations of 28 local builders and suppliers. Sonoma State athletics director Ralph Barkey spearheaded the drive to construct the facility.

California State University, Fresno, recently upgraded its main sports facility with luxury sky suites and a state-of-the-art scoreboard and message center. The suites, coupled with the addition of 11,000 seats, increases the stadium's seating capacity to 41,031. The new message center measures 37 feet by 22 feet and uses the Glow Cube system to advertise upcoming events. The new 52 foot by 40 foot scoreboard gives the institution the largest color display system for any university or college facility west of the Mississippi River.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held this summer for the Spartan Stadium Complex at San Jose State University, which is building a new athletics field house. The new complex will be used primarily by the football and women's softball teams and is the first addition to Spartan Stadium since 1985.

Budget development tops committee's discussions

The procedures and priorities involved in development of NCAA budgets occupied much of the attention of the Committee on Review and Planning in its September 14-15 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Frank E. Marshall, group executive director for administration and finance, met with the committee to discuss the Association's budget and the process by which it is developed. The committee also discussed the NCAA Foundation and recent studies of the functions of the national office staff.

As a result of those discussions, the committee:

- Recommended that the national office staff exert more of a leadership role in budget formulation, especially in establishing budget priorities that will lead to cost-cutting;

- Expressed the belief that diminishing resources will make it necessary in the near future to consider cost-cutting measures that will impact on the national office budget and staff, and the Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics should be asked to consider means of assessing where the Association's resources should be used and where reductions should occur in the budget, and

- Agreed to suggest to NCAA President Judith M. Sweet and Ex-

Other highlights

In other actions at its September 14-15 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Committee on Review and Planning:

- Reviewed materials being designed for use in the proposed Division I athletics certification program, at the request of the Special Committee on Athletics Certification, and forwarded several suggestions in that regard to the special committee.

- Agreed to be alert to areas in this committee's discussions in which research by the Association would be helpful and to report such areas to the Research Committee, per its earlier expression of interest in that regard.

- Placed on the agenda for its next meeting (March 1993) discussions of the Association's catastrophic-injury insurance program, the current titles of Association officers and other officials (resurrecting a topic discussed by the committee in the past), and the Association's procedures for nominating and selecting officers and members of the Council.

ecutive Director Richard D. Schultz that the goals and activities of the NCAA Foundation be clarified.

Ethics

The planning committee also received a report from former NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey, a member of the committee, on his continuing attempts to encourage a program to teach value development and ethical behavior to student-athletes and institutional athletics personnel.

The committee voted to affirm Bailey's efforts in that regard and encouraged him to continue to work with appropriate Association entities, including the Presidents Commission, to develop such a program.

In its September 29 meeting, the Presidents Commission's Subcommittee on Strategic Planning will consider that topic.

Committee's role

Also on the agenda for the committee's fall meeting was an ongoing discussion of its own role in the Association. The committee serves as the Association's long-range-planning group and is made up primarily of former NCAA officers, including four former NCAA presidents—Bailey, William J. Flynn, James Frank and Alan J. Chapman. Chapman chairs the committee.

The committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Council that the charge of the committee be expanded to include "evaluation and oversight" responsibilities in any area of NCAA activity.

Committee members noted that assessment and accountability are major issues throughout higher education today, and some group in the NCAA structure should be assigned that role inasmuch as existing groups in the structure are necessarily focused on major issues of the moment. They suggested that the Committee on Review and Planning is a logical choice to perform that function in view of its members' experience in Association activities.

The group also will recommend to the Council that the committee be expanded by adding one current member of the Presidents Commission. Such action would require legislation at the 1994 NCAA Convention.

Division III soccer teams enjoy Division I success

By Gary T. Brown
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Hartwick College's men and Colorado College's women have made names for themselves in soccer, but those names are not where you might expect to find them in the record books.

Both schools are Division III institutions that sponsor Division I soccer programs, and they are the only two of 10 Division II or III schools playing the sport in Division I that are perennial postseason powers. With 43 NCAA tournament victories between them, Hartwick and Colorado College have established themselves as big-name teams from small campuses.

The soccer success stories at both schools were scripted from unique circumstances. Both institutions feature enrollments of less than 2,000 and are located in scenic settings (Hartwick in Oneonta, New York, in the foothills of the Catskill Mountains, and Colorado College at the base of the Rockies in Colorado Springs).

But both were quick to establish soccer programs worthy of national acclaim, and both face new challenges this season.

Since 1956

Hartwick's men's soccer program began in 1956, posted its first winning record in 1958, and kept posting them for the next 33 seasons until last year's 8-10-2 mark snapped the streak.

Those close to the program point to Al Miller, hired in 1967 as Hartwick's third soccer coach, as the driving force behind the program's success. He took the school to national prominence by playing one of the country's toughest schedules—one that included annual battles with playoff participants Cornell University, Columbia University, Adelphi University and the University of Bridgeport. Miller landed the Warriors in the first of the school's seven Division I semifinal appearances in 1970 and won more than 80 percent of his games during his six-year tenure.

Current Hartwick coach Jim Lennox took over in 1976 and immediately produced a semifinalist, then followed that in 1977 with Hartwick's only national title.

"The history and tradition here are so deeply rooted that they've become an accepted part of the college mentality," said Lennox, a two-time national coach of the year who won his 200th game at Hartwick last season.

'Soccertown, USA'

Hartwick regularly packs 4,000-seat Elmore Field, where the Warriors are 22-2 in NCAA postseason play. The city of Oneonta was referred to as "Soccertown, USA" after a 1972 NCAA playoff match between Hartwick and State University College at Oneonta (another Division III school playing Division I soccer) drew more than 8,000 spectators.

"We're diametrically opposed to, say, an Indiana or Penn State," Lennox said, "and we're not attached to a big-name conference, but our facilities are as good or better than any school's in the country."

That, combined with Lennox's experience as a coach with the United States Soccer Federation and Olympic development teams, has helped produce a continual flow of soccer talent into the Hartwick campus.

Hartwick competed in Division II in all sports except men's soccer until 1982-83, when it opted for Division III because of the strain of financing grants-in-aid. Division I soccer remained, however, as the school's special niche—giving it a status that admittedly has made the program an occasional target of detractors.

"If you decide to play a Division I sport and fund it that way, then it separates the athletes," Hartwick athletics director Kenneth Kutler said. "Our athletes realize that our soccer players are going to be better at their sport than the rest are at theirs."

But that separation poses few problems.

"In general, other coaches and student-athletes have been extremely supportive," Lennox said. "Though our budget isn't extravagant enough to make others jealous, the college has allowed us to have a large enough budget to stay competitive. Without that commitment, no program can do much."

Living with football

A new wrinkle is this year's reestablishment of Hartwick's football program, which has been absent since 1950. While Warrior soccer faithful worry that gridiron concerns, albeit Division III concerns, may infringe upon soccer success, administrators are confident of a harmonious relationship.

"We talked to people at Quincy College (a Division II school playing Division I in soccer and II in football) to see if it was feasible," Kutler said. "We don't see a problem as long as the two sports are kept separate and distinct. We have separate facilities for both sports, and men's soccer is still the sport of emphasis at Hartwick."

"Because of the nature of football, it may become a sport of emphasis, but we assured everyone in the soccer community that funding for soccer would continue as before."

A program for women

At Colorado College, much of the decision to promote women's soccer had to do with the school's success in Division I men's ice hockey. Colorado College was one Soccer celebrations such as this are common for Colorado College, a Division III school that sponsors a perennial powerhouse women's soccer team in Division I.

Litigation, finances drain prep sports

By Brice B. Durbin

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF STATE HIGH SCHOOL ASSOCIATIONS

Brice B. Durbin will retire as executive director of the National Federation January 31, 1993, after 16 years of directing the national organization for high-school activity programs.

As I prepare to retire after 16 years as executive director of the National Federation, I believe there are three principal areas that need attention in high-school athletics as we head to the 21st century.

How well we tackle problems related to litigation, funding and sportsmanship will have a large impact on the future of interscholastic athletics. And, of course, college athletics also will be affected if participation drops or, worse yet, if programs are cut at the high-school level.

Increased litigation has had a definite negative financial impact on interscholastic athletics. High schools cannot dare run programs without liability and student accident insurance, and costs of insurance have skyrocketed. Boys' gymnastics, for instance, has been virtually eliminated at the high-school level because of the fear of lawsuits.

I am concerned about the future of high-school athletics, and college as well, with the present atmosphere regarding litigation, particularly the proliferation of contingency suits.

During most of my 20 years with the Kansas association (1957 to 1976), we had only two or three lawsuits, and those involved eligibility. In the 1970s, liability insurance became hard to obtain and damage suits accelerated as contingency became a popular ploy among lawyers. As states and schools began having to expend more funds for insurance, less money was put into vital programs.

I believe we need changes in laws that will put limits on judgments. We need immunity laws in states that protect coaches and officials, and we need a major effort to enact Federal and state legislation to place

Baseball needs upbeat attitude

By Chuck Anderson

FLORIDA SOUTHERN COLLEGE

Chuck Anderson is baseball coach at Florida Southern College and fourth vice-president of the American Baseball Coaches Association. This is an excerpt from a column that first appeared in Collegiate Baseball.

Every university is looking at ways to reduce sports scholarships, to enhance gender equity and to save money for a well-balanced budget. We must come up with a sound, positive approach that all divisions can work with and that can keep baseball growing on the collegiate level.

We must do something to have the public believe that we are not cheaters, that we do not misuse our athletes and that our athletes are graduating. It is time for us to make our administrations and, most of all, the public aware that our programs are on the up-and-up and that our students are being educated. We must promote our product to our community and give the fans a good family recreational opportunity.

It is time for all of us to stop being negative to what the NCAA Presidents Commission or the NCAA has done to our sport. We have had cuts in all areas and divisions of baseball because we did not manage our product well.

Some coaches sit back and do their job, collect their salaries and get upset that they have lost games, scholarships, practice time and assistant coaches. Some others—a select few—work very hard to develop the sport and have ideas to try to gain back some of the things that were taken away in the hope we will convince the governing body that we have a sport that could be self-sufficient.

We must be positive and go to work on ideas that will give baseball a good image. Let's think about what we could do to develop a positive attitude that would convince the public and college administrators that baseball is not one of their problems.

First, every baseball coach should develop a good working relationship with administrators at his school. Have lunch with them. Besides letting them know about the players' athletics accomplishments, send them information or memos of the positive things that your student-athletes are doing in the classroom and in community activities. Cultivate the relationship so that administrators will be aware of all the positive developments on your team and will know more than what they hear or read in the news.

Second, make certain that newspapers and television are involved with all the positive activities your team undertakes, on and off the field. We need all the positive publicity we can get to have people understand we do more than just go on the field and play the game.

Media will want to write about the negative parts of the athletes or your program. But we must stress the positive and change these attitudes to let the public know that we have well-mannered players and organized programs that do a lot for the school and the community.

We need to develop our ideas and work harder for the game as it is today. We should make a positive challenge for a game that has a fantastic future.

□ Opinions

Athletes more committed to education

 Gale Sayers, former athletics director
Southern Illinois University at Carbondale

Sayers is national spokesperson for the Hitachi Promise of Tomorrow program, the largest corporate-funded scholarship program in college football. It will offer $5,000 scholarships to students who have excelled in academics at the 67 College Football Association institutions and who want to pursue teaching as a profession.

Candidates must be men or women students who are active in the 1992 football program as a player, trainer or manager.

"College players today are more committed to education and more prepared to pursue a career after football.... The NCAA rules are putting pressure where it should have been all along—on high-school coaches who helped star players get an A or B in some important course when they should have had an F. If high-school athletes are pushed to perform in the classroom, they'll be better prepared to perform for the rest of their lives."

Behavior of athletes

 Bruce Snyder, head football coach
Arizona State University

The Arizona Republic

"I don't think football by itself, or any other sport, is a deterrent enough to keep a kid out of trouble. You can't have football be so important it will keep him from doing anything.

"A player must have long-range goals—a degree, a career plan and expectations (of himself). Those are important. Those things, coupled with football, tend to make a kid a lot better citizen because his time and mind are dominated by those two things.

"Just one is not enough."

Jerry Miller

Lansing (Michigan) policeman

USA Today

"I don't know how you'd get a sampling that would prove it either way. Athletes aren't involved (in trouble) any more often. When they are, it's such a high-profile thing that it sticks in your mind."

Deborah King

Seattle policewoman

USA Today

"If he's arrested, a kid is not likely to tell you he's involved in sports if he doesn't have to. But I don't think it holds water that athletes are involved more than anyone else in their age group. A logical conclusion would be that it isn't as much because more of their time is occupied with something else."

Sportsmanship

 Brenda Bredemeier, sports psychologist
University of California, Berkeley

For the Record (sports law report)

"Teach athletes to put themselves in the shoes of their opponents. Think of them as somebody like you. You don't want to be kicked in the shin; neither do they. Athletics are for the students to enjoy, and it is crucial that they can exploit this opportunity in a safe, comfortable manner."

Gender equity

 Donna A. Lopiano
Executive director, Women's Sports Foundation
The Atlanta Journal

"Athletics directors have lost their credibility and their control of intercollegiate athletics. The presidents are now in charge. They are saying, 'We don't trust you anymore. You run deficit programs, you get me in deep (trouble) with the press. And now with gender equity, I'm going to have all these lawsuits. Get outta here.'"

Merrily Dean Baker

Director of athletics, Michigan State University

Chicago Tribune

"There's a mixed reaction to women in leadership posts. Some people look at gender. Some assume women are not capable. It's really troubling. Hopefully, we can beat down the stereotypes, and you'll start seeing more women taking the top jobs. Then it won't be as big a deal."

 James E. Delany, commissioner
Big Ten Conference

The Sporting News

"If I were the coaches, I would probably feel the same way (that weakening football has the potential to weaken all college sports). But football coaches don't make the rules. These decisions are coming from the institutional level. Gender equity has become a very important issue. Everyone is going to have to make adjustments to get it done."

Ethnic minority, women's internships awarded

For the fifth year, the Association has awarded internships at the NCAA national office under a program to enhance career opportunities in intercollegiate athletics for ethnic minorities and women.

The length of each internship will be approximately one year, during which on-the-job learning experiences will be provided for the ethnic minority and female college graduates who have expressed an interest in pursuing a career in the administration of intercollegiate athletics.

"Besides the work experience they will receive in specific NCAA areas, the eight new interns will be assigned mentors who will assist in their supervision, guidance and development," said Stanley D. Johnson, NCAA director of professional development. "In addition, the interns will receive training to complement their academic and career exposure."

Following are the individuals (with undergraduate institution and assigned NCAA area) who will participate in 1992-93 internships under the ethnic minority and women's enhancement programs:

Erin K. Burke [St. Mary's College (Indiana), government], enforcement—Burke recently completed requirements for a doctorate in law from the University of Iowa. A former track and field student-athlete at St. Mary's (Indiana), Burke earned a bachelor's degree in government in 1988. While at Iowa, Burke worked in the athletics department, where she played an integral role in drafting and compiling the university's first compliance manual.

Lori A. Ebihara (Ohio State University, journalism), administration and finance—Ebihara earned a bachelor's degree in 1988 at Ohio State and recently completed requirements for a master's degree in education from Ashland University. Since graduating from Ohio State, Ebihara has served as assistant women's volleyball coach at Oberlin College and as coach of the United States Volleyball Association Junior Olympic team. She also worked as a teacher for the Oberlin (Ohio) City Schools after earning a graduate teacher certificate in 1989 from Ashland.

Keith B. Grant (Lafayette College, business/economics), publishing—Grant earned a bachelor's degree in 1990 from Lafayette and a master's degree in education from the State University of New York at Albany in May 1992. While at Lafayette as a member of the Leopards football team, Grant was voted the squad's most valuable defensive lineman in 1989 and most valuable linebacker in 1988, and in 1989 was selected for the Eastern College Athletic Conference all-star team. Grant also coached football for two years at Albany (New York).

Kelly Jo Groddy (University of Wisconsin, Madison, economics), legislative services—Groddy earned a bachelor's degree in economics from Wisconsin in 1989 and recently completed requirements there for a doctorate in law. At Wisconsin, Groddy competed as a member of the golf team, serving as captain of the squad. She also worked as softball coach at Madison (Wisconsin) East High School in 1989, as a clerk for the law firm of Hinshaw & Culbertson in 1990 and as an intern in the Appleton (Wisconsin) district attorney's office in 1991.

High schools

Funding, litigation, sportsmanship will have large impact in the future caps on judgments.

The obvious effect of increased spending related to litigation is that participation at the high-school level is certain to drop, thereby reducing the number of high-school athletes who advance to college.

A decrease in funding for inter-scholastic athletics nationwide is also disturbing. In addition to litigation, other factors that have contributed to the funding crisis are the increased cost of equipment and facilities and forced busing, which has been a failure and a tremendous cost to schools.

"Pay to play" has become a popular stopgap solution to funding problems; however, this is counterproductive because some students are not able to pay or are limited to participating in one sport because of the expense. While some programs may have been "saved" by this plan, it has decreased the number of participants and the number of sports that students play in high school.

One of the most positive changes in my 16 years at the National Federation is the change in funding philosophy. Leaders have begun to accept that other sources of revenue must be sought. Many programs would have folded without this change in thinking, but efforts must be accelerated.

Our base for funding athletics is far outdated. We must continue to obtain funding from businesses, corporations, support groups and civic clubs. In settings where civic leaders are active and schools are cooperative, the money is raised. When they are not, a financial strain exists.

Sportsmanship is another area that needs attention. The win-at-all-costs attitude at all levels has negatively impacted athletics in this country. This attitude manifests itself with performance-enhancing drugs such as steroids, which we cannot permit from an athletics and integrity standpoint.

The National Federation has made a major effort to restore sportsmanlike behavior through the "Be A Sport" program. One of the most rewarding accomplishments of my tenure here is that we were able to bring all levels of athletics competition together to discuss sportsmanship—the first time this had ever been done. The NCAA, the National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics, the National Junior College Athletic Association, Major League Baseball, the National Basketball Association, the National Football League and the National Hockey League joined with us to form the National Sportsmanship Committee and produce the Be A Sport slogan.

"Unquestionably, the biggest challenge ahead for interscholastic athletics is the area of funding."

■ Brice B. Durbin
National Federation of State High School Associations

This effort must continue because colleges reap the kinds of athletes, fans and followers that high schools sow, and high-school coaches and athletes emulate their peers at high levels. We must continue to work together.

The growth of girls' sports and stronger academic standards have been positive changes for both high schools and colleges the past 20 years. More women competing in college athletics has been an inspiration to high-school girls. I am concerned about the decline in the number of women coaches, however, and I hope we can turn that around in the years to come.

The stricter academic standards enacted by the NCAA for freshman eligibility in college have helped high schools as well. While this has been a positive change for high-school athletes who desire to compete in college, I remain opposed to "no-pass, no-play" programs that do not allow kids to participate, provided they are progressing toward graduation at a normal rate.

Unquestionably, the biggest challenge ahead for interscholastic athletics is the area of funding. If we have the resources, I believe everything else will take care of itself. The interest of kids is the same as it was when I started 35 years ago; we must find new ways to keep the programs going.

YES program promotes cooperative spirit

Teamwork once again will be the focus as the NCAA's Youth Education through Sports (YES) program begins its seventh year.

Each year, YES clinics—held at some of the NCAA's most popular championship sites—serve more than 10,000 youths ages 10-18 who engage in fun and challenging sports-skill, enrichment and conditioning sessions conducted by top collegiate coaches and student-athlete mentors. The program is another way that coaches and student-athletes demonstrate the NCAA's commitment to challenging young people to strive for higher levels of achievement in both athletics and academics.

YES clinics succeed because of teamwork. Coaches and student-athlete mentors combine to help participants acquire sports skills that can be transferred to life skills.

Through hands-on, sports-specific sessions that cater to the developmental level of each participant, coaches and student-athlete mentors provide young people with the fundamental tools they need to practice their sports skills.

Enrichment activities focusing on specific elements such as discipline, confidence and commitment assist participants in discovering the importance of developing techniques through practice, learning how to set reachable goals, and taking what they have learned in athletics and applying these skills and concepts to other areas of their lives.

Student-athlete mentors are benefactors of the YES program as well, developing leadership skills and forming special relationships with peers and coaches.

This year, YES clinics also will stress conditioning as an important asset of health awareness. During conditioning sessions, participants will be introduced to activities and drills that can lead to improved athletics performance. In addition, information regarding nutrition, proper hydration and precompetition meals will be shared by strength and conditioning specialists.

Field hockey once again will kick off the 1992-93 clinics during the Division I championship November 21-22 at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond.

This year's repeat sites include the Belmont Plaza Pool in Long Beach, California, site of the National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship November 27-29; Springfield College in Springfield, Student-athlete mentors play an important role in the success of YES clinics. Michigan State University swimmer Michelle McKenzie shared her experiences with participants during a clinic at the University of Texas at Austin.

Municipal Stadium in Omaha, Nebraska, site of the College World Series June 4-12.

First-time sites include Davidson College (Division I Men's Soccer Championship, December 4 and 6), University of New Mexico (Division I Women's Volleyball Championship, December 17 and 19), Marshall University (Division I-AA Football Championship, December 19), State University College at Buffalo (Division III Men's Basketball Championship, March 19-20), the Bradley Center in Milwaukee (Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship, April 1 and 3), and Oregon State University (National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships, April 15-17).

The Orange Bowl in Miami will be the site January 1 of a second YES football clinic. It will be the YES program's first clinic at a bowl site. The clinic was planned before the damage caused by Hurricane Andrew, and site coordinators say the clinic will provide an emotional boost to members of the Miami community.

This summer, the YES program teamed up with the National Youth Sports Program (NYSP) to provide a joint clinic at Canisius College in Buffalo, New York. Participants gathered to enjoy clinics in volleyball and soccer, featuring coaches Barry Gorman of Pennsylvania State University and Nona Richardson of Eastern Michigan University.

The YES program is funded by the following NCAA corporate partners: American Airlines, Coca Cola, Gillette, Hyatt Hotels and Resorts, Kimberly-Clark, Kodak, National Car Rental, Oldsmobile, Pizza Hut, Rawlings, Sara Lee Corporation, and Sprint.

The NCAA mails promotional brochures to schools within a two-hour drive of the clinic site. Each clinic accommodates 250 to 800 participants and lasts three to five hours. The program is offered at no cost to the participant and includes the opportunity to attend selected NCAA championship sessions.

For the sixth straight year, volleyball will be featured at a YES clinic. Springfield College coach Joel Dearing demonstrated dig techniques at last year's clinic at Ball State University.

Soccer clinics have proven to be a popular draw for the YES program. This year's clinic will be at Davidson College, site of the Division I Men's Championship.

Conditioning will be emphasized during this year's YES clinics. Syracuse University swim coach Louis Walker demonstrated the right moves to clinic participants at the Indiana University Natatorium.

Youth ages 10-18 participate in YES clinics, which included last year's lacrosse clinic at the University of Pennsylvania.

Eight successfully petition for reclassification

Eight institutions have been approved for reclassification of all or part of their intercollegiate athletics programs, effective September 1, 1992.

The eight successful petitions for reclassification, along with one that was denied, were considered by the NCAA staff and confirmed by the Administrative Committee, acting for the Council, under the provisions of Bylaws 20.4 and 20.5.

Probationary membership in all sports was assigned to an additional 15 institutions, and another seven received restricted membership status in specific sports.

Sixteen institutions had their probationary or restricted membership status removed.

Five institutions were granted permission to move all or part of their programs to Division I or I-A. Arkansas State University moved its football program from Division I-AA to Division I-A; the University of California, Davis, moved its wrestling program from Division

II to Division I; University of Nevada moved football from Division I-AA to Division I-A; University of Southern Indiana moved its men's soccer program from Division II to Division I, and University of Tennessee at Martin moved all of its sports programs from Division II to Division I-AA.

California State University, Long Beach, dropped football and was reclassified as Division I-AAA. California State University, Los Angeles, moved its men's soccer program from Division I to Division II with the rest of its programs, and Trinity University (Texas) moved its men's and women's tennis programs from Division I to Division III with the rest of its programs.

Mankato State University's petition to move its men's ice hockey program from Division II to Division I was denied. Mankato State will appear before the Division I membership at the 1993 Convention and request a waiver of the requirements.

Probationary status

Probationary membership status is applied to an institution that fails to meet either the minimum men's or women's sports sponsorship criteria for its division. The one-year probationary period can be applied to an institution only once in every 10-year period.

If an institution fails to comply with the minimum requirements at the end of the probationary period, it is placed in restricted membership status.

The following institutions were assigned probationary membership for all sports: University of Alaska Fairbanks; Bethune-Cookman College; Fisk University; Georgia State University; University of Kentucky; Loyola Marymount University; North Carolina A&T State University; College of Notre Dame (California); Oakland University; Polytechnic University (New York); Rutgers University, Camden; South Carolina State University; Stetson University; St. Francis College (Pennsylvania), and Texas Southern University.

Restricted members

Restricted membership is applied to an institution that fails to meet the minimum requirements of its division (e.g., sports sponsorship, scheduling).

An institution placed in the restricted membership classification loses eligibility for a number of membership privileges and has from one to three years to comply. If the institution fails to comply in the required time period, it is reclassified as a corresponding member.

Three institutions were assigned to restricted membership status in men's basketball only. They are Asbury College, Bemidji State University and Pfeiffer College.

The University of District of Columbia and Northeastern Illinois University were assigned to restricted membership status in all sports.

Davidson College and Hofstra University were assigned to restricted membership status in Division III football only.

Probationary membership status was removed in all sports for the University of Alabama at Birmingham; California Institute of Technology; Campbell University; Chadron State University; Lincoln University (Missouri); University of Nevada, Las Vegas; University of New Orleans; Oklahoma State University; Texas Christian University; University of Tulsa, and Webster University.

Restricted membership status was removed for the following institutions: Asbury College in all sports (and then reassigned to restricted status in men's basketball); American University of Puerto Rico; Castleton State College in men's basketball; Eureka College in men's basketball, and Hardin-Simmons University in all sports.

Ten finalists chosen for NCAA Woman of the Year

Ten finalists have been selected to compete for the second annual NCAA Woman of the Year Award.

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet announced the finalists September 13 at a National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators dinner in Kansas City, Missouri. A national panel of prominent personalities in athletics selected the finalists from a group of 52 honorees representing each state, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

The finalists are:

- Lisa Kay Arel, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.
- Julia M. Burdick, Washington University (Missouri).
- Catherine Byrne, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.
- Jennifer Cobb, Cornell University.

■ Lori A. Detweiler, University of Arizona.

■ Janet Louise Kruse, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

■ Barb Pranger, University of Kansas.

■ Nicole Scherr, South Dakota State University.

■ Catherine Sharkey, Yale University.

■ Penny Tollefson, Hamline University.

The competition weighs academic achievement, athletics accomplishment, and community service and leadership equally. The institutions of each of the 10 finalists will receive $10,000 for women's athletics from Champion U.S.A., the award program sponsor.

The national NCAA Woman of the Year Award winner will be named in November.

Compliance briefs

General information

Graduation-rates disclosure form: The 1992-93 NCAA Division I graduation-rates disclosure form (form 92-6) is due in the national office by October 1. A memorandum was sent from the national office September 3 to remind each of those Division I institutions whose forms had not been submitted as of September 2 of the deadline.

The memorandum was addressed to the chief executive officers with a copy to the directors of athletics. Failure to meet the deadline will jeopardize the eligibility of a team or individual competitors in NCAA-sponsored championships during the 1992-93 academic year.

Compliance Assistant software: A survey concerning the Compliance Assistant software was distributed at the 1992 NCAA regional seminars. The survey also was sent to current users of Version 2.02 and Division I compliance coordinators at schools that have not requested the software.

The survey responses will provide the NCAA Compliance Assistant development team with greater insight into how the software may be most effectively used at member institutions. Also, the survey answers will aid the staff in determining the pieces of the software with which the institutions might require more assistance than is available currently in the User's Guide.

For those who have not yet completed the survey, members of the development team request that they do so and return it to the national office at their earliest convenience.

Upcoming meetings

Attention: financial aid administrators. Representatives from the NCAA compliance services and legislative services staffs will be participating in the following October regional association meeting: Midwest Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, Chicago, October 5, 1992.

National Academic Advising Association (NACADA). A representative from the NCAA compliance services staff will participate in the annual NACADA national convention. The meeting, which will include a discussion on advising student-athletes, will be in Atlanta, October 11-14, 1992.

Faculty Athletics Representatives Association (FARA). Representatives from the NCAA compliance services and legislative services staffs will be involved in the fourth annual FARA fall meeting. The meeting will be in Atlanta, October 22-23, 1992.

From the membership

During the 1992 NCAA regional seminars, compliance coordinators were asked to discuss several compliance issues.

In response to an inquiry about increased administrative burden, 95 percent of the respondents indicated that the adoption of new legislation in recent years has resulted in an unrealistic administrative burden for them and their staffs.

The playing and practice seasons legislation (and/or the monitoring of this area) was identified as having created the greatest burden. The monitoring of recruiting activities, the certification of continuing eligibility and the completion of NCAA required forms also were identified as particular areas of concern. Listed below are some comments about playing and practice seasons:

■ Too much work for too little meaningful results. Not really "volunteer" practice because student-athletes must "volunteer" or not play.

■ Increased burden because it is new.

■ Futile exercise. Not going to turn in sheet over 20 hours; place emphasis in education; not enough time or help to do thorough job.

■ This and recruitment are most problematic. Playing/practice should be self-monitoring. Few institutions require student-athletes to sign the forms.

■ Initial setup was largest problem; interpretations were not available; paperwork made it more of a hassle.

■ Depends on how deep you get into it; more spot checking needs to occur; it takes too much time.

■ Once system is set, has not been great burden.

■ One day off is great positive change.

■ Weekly sheets. Not as difficult as first thought; use NCAA form; most felt not important to have student-athletes sign off. Some had their team captains sign off on the form, rather than each student.

This material was provided by the NCAA compliance services staff as an aid to member institutions and conference offices. Institutions or conference offices with questions or issues concerning the content addressed in this column may contact John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, at the NCAA national office.

Membership helps hurricane victims

Relief efforts for the victims of Hurricane Andrew in Florida and Louisiana have been organized throughout the United States, often with the assistance of NCAA member institutions.

The University of Florida Athletic Association, in conjunction with a Tallahassee radio station, collected money at the Gators' season-opening home football game against the University of Kentucky September 12 to donate to the Dade County (Florida) Red Cross/Hurricane Andrew Help Fund.

"After conferring with officials in the South Florida area, we came to a determination that monetary funds were the best way we could assist the recovery effort," Florida athletics director Jeremy Foley said.

On August 25, Florida athletics also donated the services of two of its planes—pilots and fuel included—to fly a dozen nurses to hurricane-stricken areas.

Far from the destructive storm's path, Adelphi University in New York donated all gate and concession revenues from its September 12 men's soccer game against Cornell University to the American Red Cross Hurricane Andrew relief fund.

The women's volleyball team at Hiram College distributed fliers titled "Hurricane Andrew Blew Away Their Homes!" on the Ohio campus and around the community.

The team, which set a goal of $500 in collections by September 16, already has provided the Salvation Army with canned foods but wants to do more. The flier asked potential donors to "put your heart in the right place and help us reach our goal."

While relief efforts continue across the country, those who survived the storm are perhaps most motivated to begin the process of rebuilding their communities.

Michael Barrow is one such person. The senior middle linebacker on the top-ranked football team at the University of Miami (Florida) grew up in Homestead, and his mother still lived there in a house with Barrow's stepfather and brother.

"It can be rebuilt," Barrow said of the family home. "But it's just that the last two years, my mom has been working so hard to fix the house up and make it look nice. To see all that effort go down the drain was tough.... When you've been through a lot and your back is against the wall, you come out fighting and swinging."

Nicholls State University in Thibodaux, Louisiana, suffered more than $500,000 worth of damage from Hurricane Andrew, including $126,000 to John L. Guidry Stadium. The concrete facade between the third floor and the roof of the press box was ripped off by the storm, and falling debris destroyed 52 chairback seats.

Certification implemented by AEMA

The Athletic Equipment Managers Association (AEMA) recently implemented a certification program to help the professional advancement of equipment managers throughout the United States and Canada.

AEMA, which has more than 600 members, is composed of equipment managers and other individuals who are involved in the handling or purchasing of athletics, physical education or recreational equipment.

The group was formed in 1974.

The certification process was completed this summer at the group's national convention, where the first test to prove proficiency in the profession was administered. The group has published a manual on equipment management that will serve as the guide for improvement and training of all equipment personnel.

Persons involved in handling or purchasing athletics equipment can join AEMA for $35 a year ($5 for student members) until May 31, 1993. Beginning June 1, 1993, dues will increase to $60.

More information can be obtained by writing AEMA, 723 Keil Court, Bowling Green, Ohio 43402; telephone 419/352-2027.

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 14 August 27, 1992

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Membership

1. Effect of probationary period when institution has not complied with sports-sponsorship requirements for multiple academic years. An institution must use the next academic year after noncompliance with sports-sponsorship requirements is discovered as its probationary year. An institution that is in compliance with the applicable sports-sponsorship requirements at the end of its probationary year should be restored to regular active membership status (provided it is otherwise eligible for such status), regardless of whether it has been determined that the institution had failed to comply with minimum sports-sponsorship requirements for multiple academic years before the discovery of non-compliance. The committee emphasized that the NCAA Committee on Infractions, at its discretion, may impose appropriate penalties on institutions that have not been in compliance with sports-sponsorship requirements for multiple academic years. [References: NCAA Bylaw 20.3.5.1.2 (failure to meet minimum sports sponsorship criteria) and IC 9/17/91, Item No. 2]

Unofficial visit

2. Institution organizing picnic for prospects and prospects' parents during unofficial visit. An institution may organize and be host to a picnic (or similar activity) open only to prospects (and the prospects' parents) during an unofficial visit, provided the prospects and the prospects' parents pay for the actual cost of the meal. The committee recommended that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee consider editorially amending the language in Bylaw 13 to refer to official and unofficial visits as paid and unpaid visits. [References: 13.8.2.1 (general restrictions), 13.8.2.1.1 (meals) and IC 1/26/89, Item No. 7]

Financial aid

3. Notification of summer financial aid award. An institution that is providing a financial aid award to a student-athlete to attend the institution's summer session must give the recipient a written statement of the amount, duration, conditions and terms of the award. [References: 15.2.7.2 (separate award required) and 15.3.2.3 (written statement required)]

Printed recruiting aids/advertisements

4. Institution purchasing commercial advertisements to be aired during high-school contests. An institution may not purchase an athletically related advertisement (e.g., advertising availability of season tickets, advertisements related to the institution's athletics program) to be aired during the broadcast or telecast of a high-school contest. The committee noted that the provisions of 13.4.5.1 are applicable to all media forms. [Reference: 13.4.5.1 (recruiting advertisements)]

Support services/medical expenses

5. Prospect who has signed National Letter of Intent receiving academic support services and medical benefits. An institution's athletics department may provide academic support services to a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent and is enrolled in the institution's summer term before the student's initial, full-time collegiate enrollment. Further, the committee noted that inasmuch as student-athletes may not receive surgical expenses and expenses related to medication and physical therapy except during the academic year, it would not be permissible for a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent and who is enrolled in the institution's summer term before initial, full-time enrollment to receive such expenses. The committee noted that during the summer it would be permissible for a student-athlete, as well as a prospect who has signed a National Letter of Intent and is enrolled in the institution's summer term before initial enrollment, to use the institution's training-room facilities (e.g., use of whirlpool, taping ankles). [References: 13.2.1 (offers and inducements—general regulation), 15.2.7.1.2 (summer financial aid—prior to initial, full-time collegiate enrollment), 16.3.2 (academic and other support services—permissible) and 16.4.1 (medical expenses—permissible)]

Outside competition

6. Transfer student-athlete from four-year institution counting in outside team numerical limitations. A student-athlete (in a sport other than basketball) who is transferring from a four-year institution, who has officially withdrawn from that institution and has been accepted for enrollment at a second institution, does not count toward the limitation on the number of individuals from the second institution who may practice and/or compete on an outside amateur team during the summer in the applicable sport. The committee recommended that the NCAA Council consider amending the provisions of 14.8.5.2-(a) to indicate that a student-athlete who is transferring from a four-year institution and officially has been accepted for enrollment at a second institution and receives permission from that institution to participate in an NCAA-sanctioned summer basketball league does not count on the summer-league roster as a representative of the second institution. [References: 14.8.5.2-(a) (summer league—Divisions I and II) and 17.8.1.4 (out of season)]

Tryouts

7. Tryout involving four-year college prospect. A Division II institution that has received written permission to contact a four-year college prospect may conduct a tryout of the prospect subsequent to the conclusion of the prospect's sport season, provided the tryout meets all of the conditions set forth in 13.12.2.1. [References: 13.1.1.3 (four-year college prospects) and 13.12.2.1-(b) (Division II tryouts)]

Division III schools taste thrill of Division I victory of the pioneers of intercollegiate ice hockey, and winning national titles in 1952 and 1957. Administrators wanted to provide women with a similar opportunity.

"Recognizing the importance of Title IX, we made a commitment to elevate one women's sport to Division I so that we could continue to provide the amount of athletics scholarship support proportionate to what we provided for men," Colorado College athletics director Maxwell F. Taylor Jr. said.

The college chose to promote soccer over volleyball and basketball, in part because soccer already had achieved national attention under the direction of alumnus Steve Paul. Since the program attained varsity status in 1978, the Tigers have emerged as a national contender. The school was host to the first two national collegiate postseason tournaments in 1980 and 1981, before the NCAA began sponsoring women's soccer championships in 1982.

The Tigers made their first of eight straight NCAA postseason appearances in 1984, one year before moving the program to Division I. That move was opposed by some members of the college community.

Constant debate

"Because Colorado College is a multiple-classification college, there is constant debate concerning whether any of our sports should be playing Division I," Taylor said, referring to the differing philosophies of Divisions I and III. "But we try to conduct our Division I programs with a Division III philosophy, which we take very seriously."

One way the college has managed to avoid conflict is that it is one of only two schools to employ the "block plan," an alternative academic structure that allows students to attend eight 3½-week segments, or "blocks," throughout the school year. Students take only one course at a time, and some courses last for more than one block, depending on the nature of the material. By scheduling many away soccer games during the five-day breaks between these blocks, the college has reduced missed class time, a frequent complaint from those arguing against the Division I philosophy.

"Even today, some factions argue that we should be Division III in all sports," Taylor said. "But others argue that the national success we've achieved in women's soccer and in ice hockey brings more attention to the college."

Still, that element of dissension was one reason for the departure of the Tigers' most successful coach, Dang Pibulvech, now the head women's coach at the University of Washington. Pibulvech stepped in at Colorado College in 1983 and built a powerhouse, compiling a 121-26-8 record in eight seasons.

"I was tired of not knowing from year to year whether or not someone was going to pull the plug on women's soccer moving down to Division III," Pibulvech said. "It seems like I was always filing a petition or something to keep the program at the Division I level even though I thought we were setting a great example of a school that was successful without having to sacrifice academic standards."

Pibulvech, however, applauds the support given him by Taylor and his predecessor, Richard Tabor.

"The way I see it," Pibulvech said, "is that as long as you get what you need to be competitive in your own arena, then you'll be fine. For instance, I know it would be foolish to compare women's soccer at Washington to football. But if you as a leader start complaining that other sports' budgets are higher, then your kids will, too."

Commitment understood

"Our coaches understand," Taylor said, "that the financial support for women's soccer and ice hockey is required to be greater. Any resentment is limited because everyone realizes that a national schedule is expensive."

Both Hartwick and Colorado College face rebuilding years in 1992. Hartwick suffered through an uncharacteristic five-game losing skid at the end of last season, keeping the Warriors from their 21st postseason bid. Lennox has reloaded with what he feels is a strong freshman class that may quickly impact Hartwick's postseason hopes. The Warriors opened the 1992 campaign with a 3-1 record, including a 1-0 victory over 12th-ranked California State University, Fresno.

Second-year Colorado College coach Carl Beal's immediate concern is with numbers. The college's decision to promote Beal from assistant to head coach was made in late May 1991, and Beal had little time to build his first freshman class. Despite the lean recruiting year, Beal guided the Tigers to their eighth straight NCAA tournament last year and started out 3-0 in 1992.

mail fraud. The mail fraud occurred when Walters and Bloom sent false student claims of eligibility through the mail.

The government accused Walters and Bloom of persuading college athletes to sign on as clients in violation of NCAA rules.

Florida State gives ACC crowds boost

With the onslaught of televised games in the past decade, officials in the Atlantic Coast Conference are encouraged by the large crowds attending league football games.

The main drawing card: ACC newcomer Florida State University.

"I don't know if it will continue at the pitch it was Saturday night," ACC spokesman Brian Morrison said of the September 12 Florida State-Clemson University game, which drew 83,500 people to Clemson's Death Valley. "There is something to be said about the initial trip through the league."

"But Florida State has been on TV a lot and people know about them," Morrison told The Associated Press. "They are one of the glamour programs in the country.... I think it's got to help some of our schools. It gives everybody a program to go after."

The highly ranked Seminoles appear to be the hottest football item in ACC history. In addition to the Clemson sellout, upcoming road games against North Carolina State University, Georgia Institute of Technology and the University of Virginia are sold out.

"...Florida State will get some schools over the hump in terms of sellouts, and even to the schools that have sold out most of their games (in the past) they bring a certain excitement and freshness into the league that is good for ACC football," University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, athletics director John D. Swofford said.

"What may well happen is just a college football fan will come to Chapel Hill or Raleigh or Durham...because Florida State is there and then they may realize there is a lot more to ACC football than Florida State."

"When the 1992 schedule was announced, we saw that all bowl teams in the league from a year ago were hosting Florida State," Morrison said. "Right there it automatically gives you a great game four times."

"...In terms of football, this has been the most anticipated season as far as fan interest (in the ACC)," Morrison added.

"People are still calling for Florida State tickets," said Betty Miller, an official in the ticket office at Georgia Tech, which offered tickets for the Florida State game only through its season-ticket plan. "We could have sold 20,000 more seats."

Virginia students are normally allowed to buy an unlimited number of football tickets for friends and family, but that number was cut to two for the Florida State game, Cavalier ticket manager Dick Mathias said.

Cable bill seeks FCC study

An amendment to the Cable Television Protection Act of 1992 would require the Federal Communications Commission to conduct an ongoing study of sports programming.

The amendment, which was introduced by Rep. Tom McMillen, D-Maryland, and proposed by Rep. Rick Lehman, D-California, was included in the bill passed by the House of Representatives but not in the Senate version of the bill.

The McMillen-Lehman amendment contains part of McMillen's Collegiate Athletics Reform Act that would direct the FCC to investigate and analyze, on a sport-by-sport basis, trends in the migration of sports programming from broadcast stations to cable networks or pay-per-view systems.

The amendment also directs the FCC to examine the extent to which preclusive contracts between college athletics conferences and video programming vendors have restricted the supply of the sporting events of local colleges for broadcast on local television stations.

Cable legislation has passed both houses of Congress and is awaiting action by a conference committee.

Sports agent sentenced on mail-fraud counts

New York-based sports agent Norby Walters, accused of using cash and threats of violence to recruit college athletes as clients, was sentenced September 17 to 18 months in prison for mail fraud.

U.S. District Judge Harry Leinenweber also sentenced Walters, who had pleaded guilty to two counts of mail fraud, to five years' probation, 250 hours of community service and a $25,000 fine.

Walters' partner, Lloyd Bloom, was sentenced in August to 500 hours of community service after pleading guilty to one count of

Gender-equity issues dominate discussions at women administrators' fall meeting on Athletics Certification, said women had played a major role in making equity considerations a specific part of the certification proposal.

"Every one of the women (on the committee) was speaking out strongly for equity," West said. "At difficult times in the meeting, everybody stood strong."

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, appearing on a panel during which the NCAA legislative process was discussed, was asked about the recent refusal of the Collegiate Commissioners Association to endorse the equity part of the certification plan and said the group's action was more an act of caution than of rejection.

"I think they believed they were being asked to buy into gender equity before it was defined," Sweet said. She noted that CCA members did not seem threatened later when informed that the equity component would not set specific standards that institutions would have to meet to be certified.

NACWAA members framed and adopted their definition of gender equity. That definition accompanies this story.

In other developments:

■ NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz acknowledged the friction that still exists between those who wanted to place women's sports in the NCAA structure in 1981 and those who did not.

"But when you take a look at what has happened in the last 10 years," Schultz said, "it's time to

Group endorses definition

The National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators created and endorsed the following definition of gender equity at its fall meeting:

"Gender equity is an atmosphere and a reality where fair distribution of overall athletic opportunity and resources, proportionate to enrollment, are available to women and men and where no student-athlete, coach or athletic administrator is discriminated against in any way in the athletic program on basis of gender.

"That is to say, an athletic program is gender equitable when the men's sports program would be pleased to accept as its own the overall participation, opportunities and resources currently allocated to the women's program and vice versa."

take that bitterness and push it out of our hearts. We have to join together and move forward in a positive way."

■ West, who is also a member of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force, questioned whether women were adequately represented in the NCAA committee structure, noting that a researcher at her institution determined that only 30 percent—the minimum—of NCAA committee members were women. [Note: The percentage as of September 1 was 34.1]

She also said women need to be aware of the quality of female appointments. "Male athletics directors often want to appoint the cute, young things who aren't as threatening as the old warhorse," she said. "But there are certain assignments where you want a warrior that's tried and true."

■ R. Elaine Dreidame, senior associate athletics director at the University of Dayton and NCAA Division I vice-president, said she has fewer problems with NCAA rules than with the people using them. "Too many members spend too much time trying to get around the rules," she said.

Sweet had a similar sentiment, saying she would like to see action that was taken "in the best interest of the membership and the Association and that was not so institutionally self-serving."

■ West paid tribute to former NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers. "In the ALAW," she said, "Walter Byers was definitely Public Enemy No. 1. But I served on the NCAA Council for three years while he was executive director, and he was very unobtrusive and very effective. He sat in the back of the room and didn't interfere" but provided sound advice when it was sought.

Wisconsin-Superior cancels football season

The University of Wisconsin, Superior, having won only five football games in five seasons and having difficulty attracting players for autumn tryouts, canceled its 1992 season after two games because of concern about injuries to a shrunken, overtaxed roster.

Players wept and slammed fists on locker-room walls, then gamely marched off to an unnecessary practice after learning of the decision September 15.

"I feel cheated, like the rug's been pulled out from under me and the team," all-conference running back Tom Belanger said.

"We want to play," Belanger told The Associated Press. "No one asked us about it."

Marc Sienkiewicz, a tackle out of East High School in nearby Duluth, Minnesota, said his teammates did not care if they were outnumbered by rosters at the eight other universities in the Wisconsin State University Conference.

"I was brought up at East and was taught you only need 11," Sienkiewicz said.

Some observers predicted the cancellation dooms chances that Wisconsin-Superior, with 2,200 students and usually the last-place team in the WSUC, can attract enough player confidence again to resume play next year.

"If that's the way they're going to support their program, maybe they shouldn't be in this league," University of Wisconsin, Stevens Point, coach John Miech said.

For tryouts this year, coach Dan Lounsbury said he invited 90 players, realistically expected 65 candidates and got only 49.

The season began with nine players scholastically ineligible, but Wisconsin-Superior won its opener against Concordia College (Minnesota). However, another six players were sidelined indefinitely with injuries after a 31-3 nonconference loss to Augsburg College September 12.

That reduced the available roster to 28 players, and several of them were questionable for the conference opener September 19 against the University of Wisconsin, Stout, athletics director Patricia A. Dolan said.

The university will not "compromise the health and safety of its student-athletes under any circumstances," she said.

By canceling the schedule before the season's third game, the university hoped players can retain a year's playing eligibility under NCAA rules, Dolan said.

Asked if the university will resume football next year, she replied: "I don't know the answer to that."

Butterfield's style wins respect

By William Kates

Winning is immaterial at Ithaca College. It just happens to be a by-product of Jim Butterfield's coaching style.

Larry Czarnecki can attest to that.

Czarnecki was an all-America defensive tackle and Eastern College Athletic Conference player of the year in 1975. But in a victory against Springfield College that year, Butterfield yanked Czarnecki after he instigated a sideline fight with an opponent.

"He told me, 'We don't put up with that at Ithaca College. Here, we play with integrity,'" recalled Czarnecki, now the Bombers' offensive line coach.

"That he was taking out a captain, that he was taking out the team's best defensive player, that it might have cost us the game, it didn't matter. What mattered was how you played the game."

Earned respect

Butterfield's style has earned him the respect of his players, and his winning ways have won him the admiration of friends and foes alike.

On September 19, Ithaca honored the 64-year-old Butterfield by rededicating the 5,000-seat

South Hill Field as Jim Butterfield Stadium.

Only Grambling State University's Eddie Robinson and Eastern Kentucky University's Roy Kidd have been so honored while still coaching.

"It's a tremendous honor. It's probably the top honor a person could get in any line of work," said Butterfield, now in his 26th year at Ithaca.

Butterfield arrived at Ithaca in 1967 after spending the previous 11 seasons as an assistant at the University of Maine and then Colgate University. It took him five years to produce a winning season and another two years to push his career record above the .500 mark.

But since then, Butterfield has taken his Bombers to the Division III championship game a record seven times, producing a playoff record 21 victories in a record 28 tournament games. His teams captured national titles in 1979, 1988 and 1991.

His career ledger stands at 192-65-1, a .745 winning percentage.

'Great motivator'

"His greatest assets are that he's always been a great motivator of kids and he's been able to adapt as the game developed," said Bill George, a captain and starting center on the Bombers' first national-championship squad in 1979.

George is one of five alumni on the Bomber coaching staff and one of more than two dozen former Butterfield players now in the coaching ranks.

Butterfield is described as both a players' coach and a coaches' coach.

"The kids really respond to him," said Czarnecki. "He puts things in a perspective they can grasp and brings it to their level. He gets out there and works as hard as they do."

Fell in love

Butterfield never thought he'd be at one place for more than a quarter-century. He even applied for several jobs elsewhere early in his career. But he fell in love with the school and the growing success made leaving the last thing on his mind.

"There isn't a better job anywhere. This is a special school with special athletes," Butterfield said.

Vardell wins academic honor

Former Stanford University football running back Tommy Vardell has been selected as the 1991-92 GTE academic all-American of the year in a vote of the 1,600-member College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA).

Vardell, who rushed for 1,084 yards and scored 20 touchdowns for the Cardinal last year, was the first-round draft choice of the Cleveland Browns and began this season as the team's starting fullback. He graduated last May with a 3.200 grade-point average (4.000 scale) as an industrial engineering major.

In his four-year college career, Vardell rushed for 1,789 yards.

SMU battles sagging attendance

Southern Methodist University athletics director Forrest Gregg hopes marketing will help turn around attendance at the Mustangs' football games and clear up questions about the program's future.

"We are doing about everything we can do from that standpoint," Gregg told The Associated Press September 16. "Sometimes you think you're not doing any good, but it comes into play later down the line."

Southern Methodist, still struggling to rebound from the suspension of its 1987 season for NCAA rules infractions and the subsequent cancellation of its 1988 season, averaged only 12,650 fans at its first two home games this season.

The sagging attendance comes as a school-appointed task force studies ways to reduce the athletics department's projected $4.5 million budget deficit.

But Gregg said ticket sales will not be considered by the panel, which has heard discussions on whether to move football to Division I-AA or even consider eliminating the once-proud program.

"Those are things that have certainly been talked about, but we're not addressing them right now," Gregg said. "I think you have to look at it historically. You can't go based on what's happening right now."

In two home games, the Mustangs (1-1) have drawn a total of 25,300. Ownby Stadium holds 23,783.

This season's average is well behind last year's mark of 18,330. That was a drop of more than 2,000 from the previous year and almost 4,000 less than the average in 1989.

"Where we are right now is about where we expected to be," said Gregg.

"We base our budget not on pie in the sky, but on what we consider reality. We're certainly within the range of our projection for the year."

The Mustangs' main problem is that they have yet to regain the supporters they lost when they were penalized by the NCAA.

The Ponies have won only five games since returning from their two-year hiatus and are winless in 24 Southwest Conference games.

Gregg said more than 40,000 tickets already have been sold for an October 31 game against No. 5 Texas A&M University in the Cotton Bowl.

1992 Column No. 32

NCAA Bylaws 12.1.2-(k) and 16.1.4.4 Awards from outside organization based on student-athlete's performance

NCAA institutions should note that per Bylaw 12.1.2-(k), a student-athlete may not receive cash or the equivalent thereof as an award for participation in competition at any time, even if such an award is permitted under the rules governing the amateur, noncollegiate event in which the individual is participating. An award or cash prize that an individual cannot receive under NCAA legislation may not be forwarded in the individual's name to a different individual or agency (e.g., collegiate institution). Further, during its November 29, 1990, conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee confirmed that it would not be permissible for an outside organization to provide a cash award in the name of a student-athlete to the student-athlete's institution or a charitable/educational organization based on the student-athlete's athletics participation. In accordance with Bylaw 16.1.4.4, an outside organization, such as a business firm or other outside agency, however, may recognize a student-athlete's outstanding performance in a particular contest or during a limited time period (e.g., "player of the game," "player of the week") by presenting to the student-athlete a certificate, plaque or medal valued at less than $50. It is not permissible for such an organization to provide any other tangible item or award to the student-athlete.

NCAA Bylaw 14.5.3 Fulfillment of minimum grade-point average requirements—Division I

In accordance with Bylaw 14.5.3, Division I institutions should note that as a prerequisite for eligibility for competition, for student-athletes first entering collegiate institutions on or after August 1, 1992, a student-athlete who is entering his or her third year of collegiate enrollment must present a cumulative minimum grade-point average that equals at least 90 percent of the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation.

A student-athlete who is entering his or her fourth or subsequent year of collegiate enrollment must present a cumulative minimum grade-point average that equals 95 percent of the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation.

During its August 5-7, 1992, meeting, the NCAA Council utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to specify that Bylaw 14.5.3 applies only to those individuals specified in Bylaw 14.5.4 (i.e., midyear transfer students who have completed their first term in residence and students who have completed an academic year in residence or utilized a season of competition).

The Council also determined that the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation for purposes of meeting the requirements of Bylaw 14.5.3.1 is based on the institution's overall grade-point average required for graduation.

Further, if an institution does not have an overall grade-point average for graduation (i.e., the grade-point average requirements are specific to the student's degree program), it is permissible to utilize the lowest grade-point average required for any of the institution's degree programs in determining the cumulative minimum grade-point average required for graduation for purposes of meeting the requirements of Bylaw 14.5.3.1.

The Council also noted that if a student-athlete is enrolled in a degree program that has a specific grade-point average requirement, it may be necessary to meet that requirement in determining whether the student-athlete is considered to be in "good academic standing" at that institution.

Finally, the Council used the provisions of Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to specify that per Bylaw 14.5.3.2, the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee may authorize waivers of the grade-point average provisions set forth in Bylaw 14.5.3.1 based upon objective evidence that demonstrates circumstances in which a waiver is warranted. The committee shall establish the process for granting such waivers and shall report at least annually to the Council and to the membership the actions taken in summary aggregate form.

Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information also is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Proposals

are resolutions.

Groupings

The largest number of proposals in the second publication pertains to playing and practice seasons as outlined in NCAA Bylaw 17. Of those 42 proposals, three are sponsored by the NCAA Council and eight others are cosponsored by the Council and member institutions or conferences.

Among the playing- and practice-seasons proposals cosponsored by the Council are amendments that would permit a Division I institution to play its first basketball contest on the Friday immediately after Thanksgiving, rather than December 1, and one that would eliminate contact restrictions during spring football practice in Divisions I-A and I-AA.

In another category of legislation, membership, there are only three proposals, but one is the proposal sponsored by the Council and Presidents Commission to establish an athletics certification program for Division I institutions.

Also proposed are 18 amendments in the area of eligibility (Bylaw 14), 17 amendments pertaining to recruiting (Bylaw 13), 16 amendments in the area of financial aid (Bylaw 15), and 14 proposals pertaining to conduct and employment of athletics personnel (Bylaw 11).

Under the headings of organization and legislative authority and process are proposals cosponsored by the Council and Presidents Commission that would:

■ Establish an NCAA Joint Policy Board comprising the Administrative Committee and the officers of the Presidents Commission and

■ Require that all legislative proposals be evaluated by an appropriate NCAA committee before they are presented for action at an NCAA Convention, and permit the Presidents Commission to specify that certain proposals in the Commission's legislative grouping shall not be amended for two years after the effective date of the legislation.

This year's Second Publication of Proposed Legislation contains seven more items than appeared in the second publication in 1991. The 1990 edition contained only 112 proposals.

Amendments-to-amendments

From now until October 15, the Presidents Commission, Council and any eight active member institutions may submit amendments to the 155 proposals. Amendments-to-amendments at this stage of the legislative calendar must adhere to the traditional Association limitation—they are not permitted to increase the change proposed in the circularized proposals.

Amendments-to-amendments must be received in the NCAA national office by 5 p.m. Central time October 15. No amendments-to-amendments may be submitted after that date, except that the Council has the authority to submit such proposals, if necessary, at the Convention itself.

Forms for submitting amendments-to-amendments were mailed with the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation to chief executive officers at member institutions.

The Official Notice of the Convention, which will include all proposed legislation and properly submitted amendments-to-amendments, will be mailed to the membership by November 15.

Before then, officers of the Presidents Commission will designate proposals to be included in the Presidential Agenda Day at the Convention and those to be voted upon by roll call.

Screening could help prevent prep deaths

By Paul Newberry

It happens every year. A high-school football player in seemingly peak physical condition dies without any apparent warning.

That's what happened to Bobby Scruggs, 17, a junior at Linden High School in west Alabama.

One minute the 6-foot-2, 220-pound linebacker was making a tackle in a game against rival Marengo High September 11. The next minute he was gone, the victim of a deadly thickening of the heart muscle.

Could tragedies like this be prevented?

"It's expecting too much in this day and age for this never to happen again," said Dr. Phillip Ades, a cardiologist at the University of Vermont College of Medicine.

But, he said, a simple set of questions can tip off doctors that a young athlete is at risk.

"I think we can do a better job of screening the kids who should get a little more sophisticated testing," said Ades, whose recommendations were published September 14 in the latest issue of Physician and Sports Medicine magazine.

Death rate steady

Scruggs was the first Alabama high-school football player to die in a game since 1986, said Alan Mitchell, spokesman for the Alabama High School Athletic Association.

Nationwide, football-related deaths at high schools have remained steady for more than a decade. In fact, ice hockey and gymnastics have higher rates of catastrophic injuries than football, said Fred Mueller, a physical education professor at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

Rate is low

Mueller said the number of fatalities actually is quite low, considering that 1.5 million youths play high-school football each year.

"Still, people are concerned that maybe if you have a good evaluation, you can detect some of these," he said.

That's where Ades comes in. He urges doctors to ask seven questions of young athletes during the routine physicals that are required before they can compete.

Newberry is a writer for The Associated Press.

Seven questions

Dr. Phillip Ades, a cardiologist at the University of Vermont College of Medicine, says doctors should ask these questions to athletes under age 35 before allowing them to participate in competitive sports. A positive response to any indicates that athlete perhaps needs more extensive testing.

■ Has it been more than two years since you had a physical examination where the doctor took a blood pressure reading and listened to your heart?

■ Do you or your parents have a heart murmur?

■ Have you experienced any chest pains or fainting spells in the past two years?

■ Has anyone in your family died suddenly before the age of 35?

■ Has a physician diagnosed anyone in your family with an abnormally thickened heart or Marfan's syndrome, an inherited disorder that can produce fatal abnormalities of major arteries?

■ Have you ever used cocaine or steroids?

■ Has a physician ever disqualified you from athletics competition?
