Council to oppose certification delays

The NCAA Council has affirmed its support for the proposed Division I athletics certification program and has vowed to oppose strenuously any attempts to delay its implementation.

During the Council's October 12-14 meeting in Kansas City, the Division I Steering Committee voted 19-0 with one abstention to recommend that stance to the full Council, which then agreed, with no opposition, to adopt that recommendation.

The group also agreed to step up the efforts to improve the membership's understanding of the certification concept and to continue to eliminate duplication between the NCAA program and the activities of the regional accrediting agencies.

Agreement to oppose attempts to delay the program came after the Council was informed that a resolution had been submitted to create another pilot certification project instead of the proposed mandatory program. In addition, an amendment-to-amendment has been submitted to delay the mandatory program.

The Council noted that several groups strongly support the certification concept, including the Presidents Commission, the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics and the Division I-A Directors Association.

In another major action at the meeting, the Council approved the designation of the American

Crowley nominated for NCAA president

Joseph N. Crowley, president of the University of Nevada, has been selected by the NCAA Nominating Committee as its candidate for president of the Association in 1993-1994.

If elected at the January 1993 Convention in Dallas, he would replace Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego, as NCAA president at the conclusion of that Convention.

Other new officers nominated by the committee:

■ Cedric W. Dempsey, currently a member of the NCAA Executive Committee, who would replace B. J. Skelton, Clemson University, as secretary-treasurer. Dempsey is director of athletics at the University of Arizona.

■ Charles N. Lindemann, currently a member of the NCAA Council, who would replace Anthony F. Ceddia, Shippensburg University of Pennsylvania, as Division II vice-president. Linde-

R. Elaine Dreidame, senior associate director of athletics at the University of Dayton, and John H. Harvey, director of athletics and physical education at Carnegie Mellon University, have another year remaining in their terms as Divisions I and III vice-presidents, respectively.

Crowley

A former member of the NCAA Presidents Commission and the Council, Crowley would become the second chief executive officer of a member institution to serve as Association president. James Frank, then president of Lincoln University (Missouri) and now commissioner of the Southwestern Athletic Conference, served as president in 1981-1982.

Crowley currently chairs the Association's Special Committee on Athletics Certification. He also was chair of the Special Committee to Review NCAA Legislative Procedures.

He has been chief executive officer at Nevada for more than 14 years and also holds the rank of professor of political science.

Council members

The Nominating Committee's slate of candidates for vacancies occurring on the NCAA Council at the close of the 1993 Convention is as follows:

Division I-A conferences

Big Ten Conference: Mildred B. Griggs, professor of education and faculty athletics representative, University of Illinois, Champaign, to replace Michael L. Kasavana, Michigan State University.

Mid-American Athletic Conference: Paul V. Amodio, director of athletics, Kent State University, to replace David B. Keilitz, Central Michigan University.

Southwest Conference: Robert

ACT named clearinghouse administrator

Acting on a subcommittee recommendation, the NCAA Council has selected an administrator for the Association's proposed initial-eligibility clearinghouse.

During its fall meeting, the Council approved a recommendation by its Subcommittee to Review the Concept of Establishing an Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse to select the American College Testing Program (ACT) as program administrator.

The Council also authorized NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and other national office staff members, in conjunction with the subcommittee, to

Coach 'nose' excitement

Great plays during football games sometimes excite players enough that they jump on one another in elation. Sometimes the coaching staff gets into the act, offering pats on the backside and pounding the shoulder pads and helmet.

But in the case of a Portland State University assistant football coach, an outstanding play caused an injury-inducing head butt.

Defensive line coach Barry Sacks was genuinely emotional after Vikings line-backer Vince Watson threw a path-clearing block on a punt return, resulting in a 57-yard touchdown run by Derek Baldwin in Portland State's 44-43 loss to Texas A&I University.

Sacks greeted Watson, and the two began head-butting one another in celebration. Sacks, minus a helmet, coached the remainder of the game with a broken nose.

Maryland's institute

The University of Maryland, College Park, athletics department and the school's Center for Political Leadership and Participation have joined to offer a new program designed to foster leadership development in student-athletes.

The Scholar-Athlete Leadership Institute offers three programs for scholar-athletes:

- The Rising Stars Leadership Institute is a one-day annual leadership institute for outstanding high-school scholar-athletes.

- Team Maryland is a community service program of scholar-athletes and their mentors, in which student-athletes go into the community to address young people about important issues.

- Scholar-Athlete Fellows offers scholar-athletes an opportunity to attend classes on leadership development and work part-time with mentors in government, business, media and public relations.

Tough start indeed

First-year Central Connecticut State University head football coach Sal Cintorino and his wife Patty had a season opener that they will not soon forget. It wasn't the game itself that will stand out but a series of unfortunate events during the days before the kickoff.

The week before the game got off to a

Sibling rivalry

Twin sisters Pam (left) and Carolyn Sarantakis competed against each other September 26 when Merrimack College's soccer team played host to Springfield College. The match was even more interesting because the twins were teammates at Merrimack for two years before Carolyn decided to transfer to Springfield in 1991. Although Springfield won this match, 3-2, both players enjoyed success: Carolyn scored the game-winning goal, and Pam assisted on Merrimack's second goal of the game. Springfield has won all three matches between the teams since Carolyn's transfer.

bad start when Patty was involved in an automobile accident that totaled the couple's sparkling new sports car. Fortunately, Patty escaped injury.

However, a couple of days later, the Cintorinos received another blow when their house caught fire and the first level was destroyed.

Finally, Cintorino's Blue Devils fell at Hofstra University, 14-7, September 5.

Soccer record

Jennifer Kohler, a freshman midfielder on the women's soccer team at Randolph-Macon College, set a national single-game assists record September 16 in the Yellow Jackets' 9-0 victory over Hollins College.

According to the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America, which maintains statistics and records for intercollegiate soccer, Kohler's seven-assist performance broke the previous best of six, held by three players: Colleen McMahon, University of Cincinnati; Shelley Pesta, Curry College, and Anne Marie Merrow, Franklin and Marshall College.

Facilities

The J. R. Simplot Company recently donated $35,000 to Idaho State University for renovation of the indoor track at Holt Arena. The gift will be used to refurbish the unique wooden oval and straight-away tracks. In addition, funds have been committed on an annual basis for maintenance of the facility.

St. Olaf College dedicated its new $2.2 million athletics facilities building before the Oles' Family Day football game against Macalester College October 3. Construction on the two-story, 16,000-square-foot building began in October 1991 and was completed last summer. It includes a state-of-the-art weight room, five locker rooms, a meeting/aerobics room, training room, equipment room and public restrooms.

California State University, Long Beach, recently announced the renaming and renovation of its campus gymnasium. University Gym, now known as The Gold Mine, received improvements ranging from the installation of brighter light bulbs to a newly remodeled conference room to the installation of photos of the school's former all-Americans in the foyer.

Fact file

The largest association in the United States by membership size is the American Association of Retired Persons, with 32 million members. Largest among sports-related organizations: Women's International Bowling Congress, about 3.7 million members. The NCAA, not an individual-membership organization, has about 1,050 members. Largest association in staff size: Salvation Army, 38,549 on staff; among sports-related groups, the largest is the Boat Owners Association of the U.S., with 600 on staff (NCAA has about 230, which would be in 91st place). Largest association in budget: YMCA, more than $1.3 billion. In the sports group, U.S. Olympic Committee, $249 million. The NCAA, at $168.7 million in 1991-92, would be 14th.

Foundation board decides to focus on existing programs

The NCAA Foundation Board of Directors reviewed the Foundation's programs and assessed the group's future role during an October 4-5 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

The board concluded that the Foundation should not expand the number of programs it administers and should focus instead on raising funds for existing programs.

Those programs are "CHOICES," an alcohol-education program; the degree-completion awards program; the Freedom Forum sports journalism scholarships; the Entergy "Winning for Life" program (a math and science scholarship program); the National Sports Underwriters research grant program; the Life-Skills program, and the Conference on Life Skills Focus on Alcohol and Drug Education.

NCAA FOUNDATION

The board also reviewed the role of the president of the Foundation. The position has been vacant since Robert C. Khayat resigned in June.

Sally K. Ride, director of the California Space Institute at the University of California, San Diego, was welcomed as a new board member.

Board members who were reclected were John A. DiBiaggio, president of Tufts University; Judith M. Sweet, NCAA president and athletics director at UC San Diego; William T. Esrey, chairman and chief executive officer, Sprint Corporation; Edwin Lupberger, chairman and chief executive officer, Entergy Corporation; Rev. Edward A. Malloy, president, University of Notre Dame; James T. Morris, president, Indianapolis Water Company Resources Corporation; Jerome J. Richardson, president and chief executive officer, TW Services, Inc.; Texas E. Schramm, former president and general manager, Dallas Cowboys football team, and George M. Steinbrenner III, vice-president, United States Olympic Committee.

The board also reviewed the status of the corporate-partner program and heard a report on the Foundation's investment accounts.

Soccer experiment results in scoring increase

By Gary T. Brown
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Rule changes designed to enhance offensive production in sports often are the most difficult to pass. Basketball's three-point shot and baseball's designated-hitter rule met with ardent opposition before they became popular.

Some people are now kicking around the idea of changing rules to increase scoring in soccer, but they too are finding those goals hard to come by.

The New England Small College Athletic Conference is experimenting with widening the goals in both men's and women's soccer. Last year, NESCAC's men's teams played half their conference schedule with goals four feet wider than normal. This year, the women's teams will play two conference games each using the experimental 28-foot goal.

The experiment is the brainchild of Amherst College athletics director Peter Gooding, a former soccer player in Europe and Canada who by proposing such a change hopes to keep the intercollegiate soccer community open to new ideas.

While Gooding is not surprised that the experiment has encountered a wall of detractors, but he hopes that soccer coaches at least will recognize the increasing need for changes in the game.

'Unique opportunity'

"The NCAA has inherited a unique opportunity because we are under an independent set of rules from FIFA (the international governing body for soccer)," Gooding said.

"Because of our situation, we can experiment responsibly in the long-term interests of the game. The controversial nature of the experiment emanates from the ongoing dialogue concerning FIFA rules as opposed to NCAA rules. Many soccer coaches believe the closer we come to FIFA rules the better the game will be. I'd like to get the soccer community using the creativity that has been demonstrated in our country's indigenous sports."

Last year's experiment showed a 19 percent increase in goals scored per game over the average for NESCAC games played between 1982 and 1990. An average of 2.44 goals was scored in the 18 games played with regulation-sized goals in 1991. In the 18 games using larger goals, that average rose to 3.39, but only three games produced more than six total goals.

Gooding admits the study has its limitations. Most notably, the small data pool of games played with larger goals makes drawing conclusions about scoring difficult.

Gooding's report demonstrated that a team playing with experimental goals shot more often than the same team playing with standard goals. It wasn't possible, however, to determine whether narrowly missed shots on standard goals would have scored on larger goals, primarily because of the inability to determine how a goalie would have played if the goal were larger.

Saw need

Gooding saw need for the larger goal several years ago. While not wanting to change the game in a tactical sense, he felt the root of the game's lack of scoring was in the dimension of the goal.

"The reality is that creative, attacking soccer has been somewhat stifled due to a huge improvement in the tactical and physical talents of goalkeepers. If this trend continues, soccer will become progressively problematical for audiences to watch.

"It seemed that changing the size of the goal was the ideal solution. We aren't looking to cheapen goals scored, but the goal right now is too small for the quality of

General information

1993 NCAA regional seminars: Many of those who participated in the 1992 seminars expressed interest in a seminar format that offers a number of topic-selected breakout sessions. As a result, on September 28, the NCAA group executive director for membership services mailed a memorandum to selected athletics administrators of NCAA Divisions I and II member institutions and conferences to request their input on suggested topics for the 1993 NCAA regional seminars. By the October 16 deadline for returning the completed form to the NCAA national office, more than 400 forms had been received. Completed forms (including expressed interests in being a presenter for a session at a 1993 seminar) still are being accepted.

Coaches certification: To evaluate the experience of the 1992-93 Division I coaches certification program, the NCAA compliance services staff surveyed Division I conference administrators, who also distributed the survey to interested parties on their campuses. In addition, the NCAA research staff conducted an item analysis of all answer sheets submitted to the national office and reported the following results of the 1992-93 test:

■ The percentage of basketball coaches who scored below 90 percent, 85 percent and 80 percent (the required passing score) was nine percent, 3.5 percent and 1.5 percent, respectively.

■ The percentage of football coaches who scored below 90 percent, 85 percent and 80 percent was 11 percent, 4.2 percent and 2.5 percent, respectively.

■ The percentage of all other sports coaches who scored below 90 percent, 85 percent and 80 percent was 25 percent, 9.8 percent and 4.2 percent, respectively.

Based on the test results and the survey responses, the NCAA Council was requested to consider (1) whether to increase the minimum passing score; (2) whether to increase the difficulty of the test content; (3) whether to include more questions in related topic areas, and (4) whether to permit test administrators to share selected test questions and answers with the test participants after the test has been administered. The Council met October 12-14.

NCAA compliance calendar: Now that the majority of fall certification activities and/or NCAA required forms have been completed, athletics and institutional administrators who have compliance-related responsibilities may wish to take this opportunity to review the 1992-93 NCAA compliance calendar. The calendar (a comprehensive calendar highlighting important compliance dates and activities) is included in the 1992-93 NCAA Guide to Rules Compliance, Page No. D9.

From the membership

As noted in a previous compliance briefs column, compliance coordinators were asked to discuss several compliance issues during the 1992 NCAA regional seminars. Listed here are some of their responses concerning an inquiry about meeting with the institution's chief executive officer to discuss the most pressing rules-compliance issues facing the institution's intercollegiate athletics program: initial and continuing eligibility, booster club/alumni, limited staff and resources, gender equity, institutional control/responsibility, interdepartmental cooperation, proposed athletics certification, rules integrity, rules education, time limitations, presidential votes at NCAA Conventions, inconsistency between cost-containment movement and the increased compliance responsibilities and burden on campus, consistent message on campus to all staff more than once per year, and development of blueprint to investigate, punish and correct discovered violations.

This material was provided by the NCAA compliance services staff as an aid to member institutions and conference offices. Institutions or conference offices with questions or issues concerning the content addressed in this column may contact John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, at the NCAA national office.

Last-minute efforts help NYSP funding

Thanks mainly to an eleventh-hour effort by several U.S. senators, the National Youth Sports Program will receive $9.5 million from the Federal government for fiscal year 1993.

NYSP, which is funded by the NCAA, the Federal government and private sources, had been in danger of having its Federal money cut to as low as $5 million. The president's budget recommended funding of $5 million, while the House of Representatives, a strong NYSP supporter in the past, recommended $5.9 million. Both figures represented a drastic cut from the $12 million in Federal dollars NYSP had operated with in fiscal year 1992.

Edward A. Thiebe, NCAA director of youth programs and NYSP national program director, said that had Federal money been cut as severely as feared, it was likely that Extended NYSP, which operates at 45 sites during the school year, would have been eliminated. Full NYSP, which operates during the summer at 173 colleges and universities, would have been cut by 50 percent.

Senators contacted

Faced with this difficult scenario, NYSP personnel on campuses around the country responded by asking their senators to support level funding ($12 million) for fiscal 1993.

Because the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee of Labor, Education, Health, Human Services, Education and Related Agencies, chaired by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, already had determined a funding mark of $5 million, NYSP faced an uphill battle. A Senate floor amendment was necessary in order to revise the subcommittee mark.

"Sen. Harkin agreed that NYSP is a good program but used the rationale that the NCAA is in a position to pay for it," Thiebe said. "In reality, the NCAA, through its participating colleges and universities, already pays for two-thirds of the program."

Help came from unexpected sources, according to Thiebe. Geoff Wood, NYSP program site coordinator at Washington State University, elicited the support of Sen. Slade Gorton, R-Washington, who had not spoken for NYSP in the past. Gorton said NYSP's effectiveness, combined with its relatively low price tag, made it worthwhile.

"It is a cost-effective use of Federal funds," Gorton said. "It takes at-risk youngsters off the streets and gives them the motivation and the skills to improve their futures."

Gorton and Appropriations Committee member Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Arizona, historically a strong supporter of NYSP, introduced a bipartisan-sponsored amendment to restore funding for

Health concerns always a priority

By Kathy D. Clark

CHAIR, NCAA COMMITTEE ON COMPETITIVE SAFEGUARDS AND MEDICAL ASPECTS OF SPORTS

The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports was established to disseminate pertinent information regarding sports medicine and safety issues to the Association's membership. Numerous informational materials have been developed to assist the committee in this effort to address topics ranging from AIDS in intercollegiate athletics to nutrition and eating disorders.

The NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook, which is distributed to athletics directors and athletics trainers of member institutions, is a prime example of the committee's work. Originally developed in 1981, the current edition of the handbook contains 25 guidelines, relating to a variety of sports-medicine issues, that are offered to assist in the development of safe athletics programs.

A recently publicized incident regarding the participation of a pregnant softball player raised the question of the NCAA's position on that and other medical issues. The competitive-safeguards committee addressed this issue in 1986 by adding a guideline entitled "Participation by the Pregnant Student-Athlete" to the handbook. The statement offers the Association's recommendations regarding this issue, along with four up-to-date references.

This guideline—as well as others addressing issues such as the student-athlete with sickle-cell trait, participation by impaired student-athletes and medical disqualification of the student-athlete—demonstrate the Association's concern for and dedication to the concept of safe athletics participation.

While it is conceivable that a specific medical issue could stimulate NCAA legislation or programs, the committee believes that most medical situations, such as participation by a pregnant student-athlete, should be settled by the medical and administrative personnel at the institution involved after they have referenced the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook or other appropriate resources.

In fact, the handbook specifically notes that the team physician should have the final responsibility in determining when and if a student-athlete is withheld from compe-

An appreciation, then a goodbye

By Mike Kelly
OMAHA WORLD-HERALD

I called Jim Monahan on the morning of September 13 and asked whether he had heard the news—his daughter, Laura, had made the all-tournament team that weekend as the University of Nebraska, Omaha, volleyball team went 3-1 against nationally ranked teams.

"That's great!" he said, and I could hear the smile in his voice as we spoke.

The main reason for my call, though, was to get some information on the coming weekend. The Monahans live in the Chicago suburb of Lisle, and Nebraska-Omaha had scheduled a tournament at nearby Lewis University—a joyous homecoming for Laura Monahan.

The Lady Mavs would play three matches, and then Jim and Andreina Monahan were throwing a party for the team and coaches. Many of the Monahans' friends were coming.

Our daughters not only are teammates. They are juniors and roommates, and they worked together last summer.

We laugh at their many similarities—starting with their births a half-hour apart on September 9, 1972. Each is named Laura Elizabeth.

That weekend was going to be wonderful for all of us, but especially for the Monahan family. Jim Monahan, 51, hadn't planned on dying.

Jim had been a minor-league ball-player in the St. Louis Cardinals' system, and he still looked fit enough to hit line drives to the outfield gaps.

When Laura was a little girl, he'd toss a ball with her and throw hard. She had inherited his ability and intensity.

It took him awhile to catch on to volleyball, but he told his daughter recently that he now appreciated the speed and strategy of her sport. That meant a lot to her.

He had this great toothy smile, identical to the one his daughter flashes 100 times a day, even when playing a high-pressure match.

Jim and Andy came to Omaha the first weekend of September to watch the Lady Mavs. At a Saturday night party, they and everyone else sang happy birthday to Laura, who soon would be turning 20.

At 9 p.m., the Monahans departed for their eight-hour drive home. Jim smiled and said, "See you in two weeks!"

Monahan had a tough job. He was a psychologist who dealt daily with all manner of dysfunctional families and the pain that went with that.

His wife said he kept a lot of it in.

He liked music, from country to the Chicago Symphony, but his great release was flying a small airplane, where he could soar and get away from all the problems on the ground.

When in Omaha this month, Jim talked about retiring at 55 and moving to Wyoming, where he would teach flying and ride horses.

He and Andy had plans.

On September 17, in the Chicago area, Jim and Andy Monahan had gone horseback riding. They were driving down the Stevenson Expressway and talking about the party plans for Saturday.

Then Jim asked Andy to roll down her window. He needed air. She felt him and he was cold, and she told him to pull over so she could drive. But he was blacking out and speeding up.

Mrs. Monahan wrestled to control and slow the car, but it crashed into a ditch, doing $8,000 damage. Help came, but Jim couldn't be revived. He was dead of a heart attack.

The team had practiced at Nebraska-Omaha until 5 p.m. that Thursday and then driven five hours to Moline, Illinois, for the night.

At 5:45 a.m. Friday, coach Rose Shires knocked and told Miss Monahan to take a phone call from her mother.

Laura was devastated, and her teammates were crushed.

She wasn't going to play, but late Friday afternoon her mother, badly bruised, said there was no use staying home and crying. They went to the arena, and No. 4 suited up.

She rarely has played better, somehow summoning great energy and focus and adrenalin and maybe anger.

At the funeral home Sunday, her father lay in state. Photos showed him next to an airplane and with his family. There was a note from his daughter.

Suddenly, she wrote, everything "reminds me of you." Birds chirping, airplanes droning. Thanks for appreciating my sport, she said, adding that she was his "spitting image."

She would think of him every day, she wrote, "when I look in the mirror and see your smiling face."

□ Opinions

Sports a privilege, not an entitlement

Charles S. Harris, director of athletics
Arizona State University

The Arizona Republic

"Some of these kids don't realize how good they've got it here. I feel a great sense of disappointment because in my view, these (scholarships) are unique and once-in-a-lifetime opportunities....

"Playing sports at Arizona State University is not an entitlement, it's a privilege. To me, it's a great tragedy when you provide the type of resources that we do and then your student-athletes don't take advantage of it. Something's wrong.

"But the majority of our student-athletes appreciate what they're getting. They don't ignore it or treat it in a cavalier fashion. They understand how valuable their scholarships are to them."

Bill Kennedy
Coordinator of financial aid and housing
Arizona State University

The Arizona Republic

"Obviously, there's a lot more to an athletics scholarship than meets the eye. The NCAA has been real good about clearing up the situations about what you can and what you can't pay for. The gray areas have pretty much been cleared up. The paperwork has increased, but it's for the better. It helps keep everybody in line."

Athletics and academics

Robert Smith, football player
Ohio State University

Chicago Tribune

"People tell me I need to be careful with what I say. But I have no trouble saying what I think is true. I'll always speak out against any system that serves an opposite cause than it says it does....Football is a business. It's a means to an end. The game itself is fun. But the system is basically out of whack.

"It's a means to an end. I have a long-range goal (of going to medical school), and football is a vehicle toward it....

"I can't blame the coaches or the university. College football is such a big-money business. This is their job, their livelihood. They have alums saying, 'If you don't win games, you're going to get fired.' Then they're not going to be able to feed their families. That's the way they have to think about it.

"If I was in that position, (winning) would be more important to me than whether an athlete gets an education. They have to get their jobs done, and we're the skilled labor."

John Cooper, football coach
Ohio State University

Chicago Tribune

"Robert's entitled to his opinion. Myself, I never felt like I was used. Football enabled me to go to college. It provided me with an education."

Minorities in athletics administration

Leroy Walker, president
United States Olympic Committee

Chicago Tribune

"I hope that my being chosen the first black president of the USOC gives some credence to what I have always said: In spite of all the things that might have happened to you, in spite of the problems your parents might have had, you have to believe there are enough fair people in this world that you can achieve a top position on general merit."

NCAA ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF COMMUNICATIONS

With the 1992 season more than halfway completed, the nation's 107 I-A teams are producing less yardage (both rushing and passing) and scoring less when compared with the final 1991 totals.

In fact, the total offense drop of 14.3 yards per game would be the largest decrease since 1971 if the averages hold through the rest of the year.

In 1971 total offense decreased 27.7 yards per game compared with 1970's final numbers. Total offense in the average I-A game this year is 704.4 yards, compared with 718.7 for all of 1991. It is the lowest average since 1984 (698.4).

Scoring is down exactly one point per game from 1991, 45.2 to 46.2, and is the lowest average since 1985 (44.7).

The following table compares the 1992 midseason totals with 1991's final numbers. All figures are both teams combined in the average I-A game.

I-AA conference notes

The Southeastern Conference is the only I-A league with more rushing than passing yardage, mid-season trends show. The Western Athletic Conference averages the most rushing yards per game (196.31) among the 10 I-A conferences and the independent group and also leads in total offense (410.03) and scoring (29.41). Six of the 10 leagues average more than 200 yards per game passing, led by the Big East (220.02).

I-AA team notes

How important is turnover margin? The one-two teams in this week's statistics are Washington (+2.17 per game) and Miami (Fla.) (+1.67)...After seven games, Alabama is giving up just 160.4 yards per game in total defense, the lowest figure since Nebraska's 157.6 final average in 1967...Georgia is the only I-A or I-AA team in the country yet to surrender a touchdown pass. It leads the nation in pass-efficiency defense, as well as fewest yards passing per game (102.1)...Arizona and Clemson have allowed just one rushing touchdown so far this year, the lowest total among the 195 I-A/I-AA teams...Missouri has surrendered the fewest yards per punt return (1.7), and fellow Big Fighter Nebraska is second (2.3)...Five teams remain undefeated and untied in the division: Alabama (7-0), Washington State (6-0), Miami (Fla.) (6-0), Washington (6-0) and Texas A&M (6-0). Michigan (5-0-1), Colorado (5-0-1) and Boston College (5-0-1) are the only undefeated but tied teams.

I-AA midseason trends

Total offensive yardage and scoring also is down in I-AA, but 1991 was a record-setting year for both those categories. The 88 I-AA teams are slightly ahead of the division record for average yards per rush, also set last year, and not far from the efficiency marks for both yards per pass attempt and per offensive play. The 47.4 points per game is second only to the record 48.1 of last season.

The following table compares the 1992 midseason totals with 1991's final numbers. All figures are both teams combined in the average I-AA game.

I-AA conference notes

Exactly half the 10 I-AA conferences average more yards rushing per game than passing, led by the Southern Conference (221.25). The Big Sky is the most pass-happy (221.06) while the Gateway leads in both total offensive yards per game (378.23) and scoring (29.33), unless you consider the division's nine independents a league. That group is averaging 396.59 yards of total offense and 29.93 points per game.

I-AA team notes

William & Mary is the only I-A or I-AA team that has not thrown an interception, and Tennessee-Martin is the only I-A or I-AA team that has yet to lose a fumble. Both teams have played six games this season...William & Mary, Idaho and Northern Iowa are the only undefeated teams remaining in I-AA, all at 6-0. Northern Iowa hosts Idaho October 24; William & Mary travels to I-A Virginia the same day.

Public-school tuition increases 10 percent

The cost of attending public colleges and universities has increased at a double-digit rate for the second straight year, far ahead of state and Federal financial aid, the College Board reported October 13.

Average tuition and fees at four-year public universities and colleges rose 10 percent to $2,315 this fall, the College Board reported. Room and board brings the total to $5,841. At two-year schools, the average increased to $1,292.

This fall's 10 percent hike follows an increase of 13 percent reported by the College Board last year.

The increase in the cost of private institutions has been slowing, partly in response to competition for a dwindling number of traditional-age students.

At four-year private universities and colleges, tuition and fees now average $10,498, and at private two-year colleges, $5,621—increases of seven percent and six percent, respectively, at a time when the inflation rate was 3.1 percent. Room and board adds an average of $4,575 to the cost at private four-year schools.

"Given the state of the economy and its impact on state budgets, many people expected much larger increases this year, particularly in the public sector," Donald M. Stewart, president of the College Board, told The Associated Press.

To avert still higher increases, many colleges and universities are cutting programs, laying off some faculty and staff and deferring maintenance of buildings and equipment.

"Even with the big tuition increases, they're still losing ground," said David W. Breneman, former president of Kalamazoo College and a visiting professor at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. "People are not getting the same level of services they were getting three years ago, and it's true they're paying more for that."

Colleges and universities are also being squeezed by falling public budgets for financial aid.

Federal, state and institutional financial aid rose less than eight percent last year and the maximum amount available from the Federal government's principal grant program actually fell from $2,400 to $2,300.

Total student aid has dropped in constant dollars in the last 10 years, according to the College Board.

"By and large, what happens is the people who are most price-sensitive are those at the bottom of the ladder," said D. Stanley Carpenter, associate professor of education at Texas A&M University. "The very people we're most anxious to get in to diversify the campuses are the people who are most adversely affected by higher prices and diminished aid."

"They're choosing between college and food."

More students and their families are borrowing. In 15 years, loans have increased from 17 percent of financial aid to 50 percent, the U.S. Department of Education says.

"A lot of middle-income students are graduating from school $20,000 or $30,000 in debt," said Leyton.

The increased expense is magnified at a time when the U.S. Census Bureau says 45 percent of all students take more than the traditional four years to graduate. Many work part-time to earn tuition, or do not have access to required courses because of cutbacks.

"The middle class is being squeezed very hard," said Breneman. "There's a reasonable amount of pain."

Grinnell College's Tammy Zywicki (above), a member of the women's soccer team, disappeared on her way back to school in late August and was later found slain along a Missouri highway. Grinnell student-athletes (right) are wearing a "Z" on their jerseys this fall in memory of Zywicki.

Grinnell student-athletes stage runathon for teammate's family

The Grinnell College men's and women's cross country teams held a runathon and raised $2,451 for the family of slain Grinnell soccer member Tammy Zywicki.

Zywicki, who had been reported missing on her trip back to the college in late August, was found a week later along a highway in southern Missouri. During the week, Grinnell students mobilized and distributed posters with Zywicki's picture and information, and some of her teammates even hit the road to interview truck drivers on the route Zywicki was known to travel.

More than 50 student-athletes ran the nine-mile course during the runathon, including senior runner Jeff Ulmer and coach Will Freeman, who came up with the fund-raising idea.

More than $8,000 in donations have come in to help cover the costs of the search.

In memory of Zywicki, who also was a photographer for the college's sports information department, Grinnell student-athletes are wearing a "Z" on their uniforms this fall. Efforts to help find the killer are continuing.

On a roll

North Dakota University running back Shannon Burnell (right) has rushed for 100 yards or more in 15 consecutive games, which is believed to be the longest active streak of its kind in Division II. Burnell, a junior, would need to rush for 100 yards in nine more games to tie the Division II record of 24 consecutive games of gaining 100 yards or more, which was set by Peter Gorniewicz of Colby College from 1971-73. Burnell currently is averaging 126 yards a game, which ranks him 12th in Division II.

Below are the records in all divisions for most consecutive games gaining 100 yards or more.

Division I-A: 31, Archie Griffin, Ohio State, 1973-75

Division I-AA: 20, Frank Hawkins, Nevada, 1979-80

Division II: 24, Peter Gorniewicz, Colby, 1971-73

Division III: 18, Hank Wineman, Albion, 1990-91

NCAA degree program gets support from AT&T

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Each time it selects recipients of its Long Distance Awards, AT&T is making contributions during the 1992 NCAA Division I college football season to the NCAA Degree Completion Award Program. In addition, the long-distance telephone carrier will donate money to the program during the college basketball season.

The 1992-93 athletics season marks the second straight year AT&T has presented the awards, but it is the first year AT&T is working with the Degree Completion Award Program through the NCAA Foundation. By the end of the academic year, AT&T is scheduled to contribute $59,600 to the program.

After each weekend of the football season, AT&T donates $400 for each of its six long-distance award categories—longest run from scrimmage, longest pass reception, longest punt average (minimum two punts), longest punt return, longest kickoff return and longest field goal.

During the basketball season, AT&T will donate $500 for each of two awards for three months in all three men's basketball divisions and for Division I women's basketball. The two awards are given for the highest number of three-point field goals made and highest three-point field-goal percentage (minimum four attempts).

Student-athletes honored with an AT&T Long Distance Award will receive an engraved plaque and the company also will provide season awards at the end of the football and basketball seasons. At that time, the company will make six $1,000 donations to the Degree Completion Award Program and two $1,000 donations after the basketball season in each of the four involved divisions.

The Degree Completion Award Program grants scholarships for student-athletes who are within 30 credit hours of degree completion and who have exhausted their athletics eligibility and consequently no longer are eligible to receive institutional financial aid. It was started in 1988.

More than 80 percent of the program's participants have finished course work toward a degree, and between 85 and 88 percent of the 1991-92 grant recipients are expected to graduate, said Betty B. Norrie, NCAA Foundation program coordinator.

"It is our hope that we can entice other corporations from the private sector to make contributions to this important award program," said Norrie, noting that just one other company has donated to the Degree Completion Award Program, which operates on an annual budget of $500,000. "To date, over 500 awards have been granted to the tune of approximately $2.5 million since the inception of the program in 1988."

John Licardi, a staff supervisor with AT&T in New Jersey, said the company is excited about contributing to the degree completion program this year. He also noted the importance of the long-distance awards' inaugural use in women's basketball this year.

Licardi, however, said that the company will decide sometime next year whether to participate in the Degree Completion Award Program for another year.

"At this point, nothing is in stone," Licardi said. "But we feel very good about this program."

The program has drawn criticism from individuals in intercollegiate athletics because some people believe the five years student-athletes are allotted to obtain their degrees with institutional financial aid is sufficient.

But Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research and staff liaison to the NCAA Special Degree Completion Program Committee, said the program's success rate should speak favorably for its existence.

"I think it's a great program," Walsh said. "It was motivated by reports that some persons were finishing their athletics eligibility without degrees, and maybe some of them were late bloomers. I think (program participants) see the importance of a degree and are more focused now."

Division I-A athletics directors honor Kassutto, Honea

A gymnast and a cross country athlete have received the Delta Scholar-Athlete Award from the Division I-A Athletics Directors Association, which also honored a former student-athlete with its Division I-A Award of Courage.

Gymnast Sigall Kassutto, a recent graduate of the University of California, Berkeley, and runner David Honea, who graduated from North Carolina State University, received the fourth annual scholar-athlete awards for excellence in both scholastics and athletics over the course of their collegiate careers.

In addition, former Michigan State University gymnast Nick West-ermeyer was honored for his battle to recover from a spinal-cord injury suffered during a practice.

The awards were presented during the Division I-A Athletics Directors Association's recent fall meeting in Tucson, Arizona.

Scholar-athletes

Kassutto and Honea, both of whom compiled perfect 4.000 grade-point averages in their undergraduate studies, also were recipients earlier this year of the NCAA's Walter Byers Scholarship.

Kassutto, who received a bachelor of arts degree in molecular and cell biology, was a four-year letterwinner on the California gymnastics team and served as team captain. The four-time academic all-American also has been honored as a NACDA/Disney Scholar-Athlete.

She currently is engaged in scientific research on sickle-cell anemia at Oakland Children's Hospital in California and plans to enter medical school in the fall of 1993.

Honea, one of 18 valedictorians in his class at North Carolina State, completed undergraduate studies at the school in electrical engineering. The two-time academic all-American capped his athletics career with selection this year as GTE academic all-American of the year for the men's at-large team.

He currently is working on a master's degree in electrical engineering at North Carolina State and plans to pursue a doctorate in that field.

Injured in '91

Westermeyer, only two days after ending his junior season at Michigan State with an appearance in the 1991 National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships, suffered his injury while practicing to compete in the United States Championships. While performing a triple somersault and single twist, he became disoriented and hit head first into five feet of foam cubes.

The injury between the fourth and fifth vertebrae left Westermeyer paralyzed in his legs, torso and arms, and initial reports from doctors were that he would be unable to walk again or even push his own wheelchair.

During rehabilitation in his hometown of Cincinnati, however, Westermeyer made progress, and in October 1991, he was able to take 10 steps with the aid of braces and parallel bars. He returned to Michigan State for last year's winter term, and he now assists with the gymnastics team.

Guidelines demonstrate Association's concern for safe athletics participation tion.

The competitive-safeguards committee has worked diligently to develop sports-medicine resources for the Association. However, the responsibility for educating the appropriate individuals at a member school lies with that institution. The preface of the handbook states that the committee...encourages student-athletes, coaches, medical personnel and administrators to become familiar with the guidelines contained in this handbook." This statement is appropriate for any of the materials that are disseminated to the membership.

Athletics directors or trainers receive most of the informational materials developed by the competitive-safeguards committee. These individuals are the initial contact persons if a sports-medicine issue develops that requires an opinion from the Association. The national office sports-medicine staff also is available to confirm the availability of material to help with a particular issue.

Education in sports medicine is essential in conducting a safe athletics program. The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports has developed many materials to enhance this process. Member institutions also can contribute to this important effort.

The committee encourages not only administrators and medical personnel but also coaches and student-athletes to become familiar with these materials.

Within the past two months, the fifth edition of the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook, an informational brochure regarding AIDS and intercollegiate athletics, and a videotape outlining NCAA drug-testing procedures have been distributed to the membership. Kathy D. Clark is associate director of athletics at the University of Idaho.

■ Governmental affairs report

The following is a review of recent Federal activities affecting the NCAA membership. These reports are prepared by Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C. This report was presented to the NCAA Council during its October 12-14 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Tax treatment of sponsorship payments and other income

Exemption of sponsorship payments from UBIT. On September 29, the Senate passed H.R. 11, the Revenue Act of 1992. In October, House and Senate conferees are meeting to begin to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill. One provision of the Senate-passed bill would exempt from unrelated business income taxation (UBIT) sponsorship payments received by tax-exempt organizations in connection with their conduct of qualified public events.

Qualified public events are defined as those public events sponsored by a tax-exempt organization where substantially all the activities of the organization in conducting the event are not subject to UBIT and the net proceeds from the event are used for exempt purposes.

As discussed in the last governmental affairs report, this provision is somewhat more narrow than the one passed by the House in late July in H.R. 5645. The latter bill, introduced by Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Georgia, would exclude from UBIT certain corporate-sponsorship payments received by tax-exempt organizations in connection with public sporting events taking place not more than once per year and within 30 consecutive days in any such year.

During consideration of H.R. 11 September 25, the Senate adopted an amendment offered by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, on behalf of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Georgia, that would make clear that UBIT will not apply to payments by sponsors for the right to use the name or logo of the organization conducting the qualified public events.

The purpose of the amendment was to afford sponsors of the 1996 Olympic Games relief from UBIT for payments by corporate sponsors to use Olympic trademarks and emblems. The language is sufficiently broad, however, to apply to other organizations, including the NCAA.

As of this writing, it is not clear whether the conference will be able to agree on a bill that can pass both Houses of Congress and be acceptable to the president.

IRS corporate-sponsorship guidelines. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is working to complete its guidelines for use in auditing arrangements for corporate sponsorship of athletics and other events sponsored by tax-exempt organizations. The IRS is revising the guidelines, which were issued in proposed form in January, to respond to public comments received during three days of hearings held in late July. The guidelines outline the factors the IRS will consider in determining the taxability of certain types of sponsorship payments.

Governmental activity regarding athletics

Black caucus workshop. On September 25, the Congressional Black Caucus sponsored a workshop entitled "Reading, Writing and Running: The Abuse of the African-American Student-Athlete in College Sports." Reps. Cardiss Collins, D-Illinois, and Edolphus Towns, D-New York, organized the workshop. Collins is the chair of the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness, which has held several hearings on athletics and academics in the 102nd Congress; Towns is the sponsor of a bill to require the NCAA to afford due process in its enforcement proceedings.

At the hearing, Collins spoke of collegiate sports as a system that is rapidly "going out of control." The witnesses included Sen. Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey; College Football Association Executive Director Charles M. Neinas, and Eric Ramsey, a former football player for Auburn University who alleged that the university exploited black student-athletes.

At the hearing, the General Accounting Office issued a study on intercollegiate athletics, which included data on the average compensation received by personnel in selected athletics positions. The report includes information on the gender and race/ethnicity of staff members at NCAA Division I institutions and profile and compensation data for historically black institutions.

Review of service academy athletics programs. The Defense Advisory Committee on Service Academy Athletic programs held its first meeting September 29-30 at the U.S. Military Academy. Among other things, the committee reviewed academics and admissions policies at the three military academies. At future meetings, the committee plans to address funding and administration of service academy athletics programs.

The members of the committee are: Carl Ullrich, executive director of the Patriot League, chair; Evie Dennis, superintendent, Denver Public Schools; James Frank, commissioner of the Southwestern Athletic Conference; Joseph Johnson, president, Talledega College; Edmund Joyce, executive vice-president emeritus, University of Notre Dame; Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director; R. Gerald Turner, chancellor, University of Mississippi; Lt. Gen. Bradley Hosmer, superintendent, U.S. Air Force Academy; Lt. Gen. Howard Graves, superintendent, U.S. Military Academy, and Rear Adm. Thomas Lynch, superintendent, U.S. Naval Academy.

World Scholar-Athlete Games. The Commerce, Justice and State appropriations bill (H.R. 5678) includes an $800,000 appropriation for the World Scholar-Athlete Games, in which athletes ages 16 to 19 will participate. Conference on the bill was completed September 25.

Pending legislation. No action has been taken on the variety of pending measures that relate to intercollegiate athletics. These bills include (1) the "Sports Standards Act of 1992" (H.R. 5171), (2) the "Collegiate Athletics Reform Act" (H.R. 3046), (3) two measures (H.R. 3233 and H.R. 2243) to establish a National Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, (4) a due process bill (H.R. 2157), and (5) a resolution (H. Con. Res. 119) expressing congressional support for the recommendations of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics.

Student-athlete graduation rates

In late August, the NCAA submitted comments on the proposed regulations published by the Department of Education (ED) that implement the Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act and require institutions of higher education to disclose information about students' completion or graduation rates. The NCAA made recommendations in a number of areas, including calculation of the time period to graduation, treatment of summer graduates, definition of the term "preparation for a higher-level program," treatment of certificate-seeking students, calculation of projected graduation rates, definition of receipt of athletically related student aid and treatment of transfer students. It is uncertain when ED will publish a final regulation on student graduation rates; the first graduation-rates report is due July 1, 1993.

The Task Force on Assessing the National Goal Relating to Postsecondary Education, a subcommittee of the National Education Goals Panel, has urged creation of a common method to calculate college graduation rates and to assess whether students gain sufficient skills in postsecondary education. The task force has been reviewing the relationship of higher education to the six goals for American education established by President Bush and the nation's governors. It said that increased graduation rates, particularly among minority students, would be needed to achieve those goals.

Title IX and women's sports

Litigation. On September 28, a magistrate judge in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of New York ruled that Colgate University's decision not to upgrade women's club ice hockey to a varsity team violated Title IX. The court ordered Colgate to grant the women's ice hockey team varsity status and to provide it with all the amenities that accompany such a designation. At the same time, the court declined to require Colgate to make the two ice hockey programs equivalent, stating that the women ice hockey players were entitled to "equal opportunity" but not necessarily "equal funding." The court also denied the plaintiff's request for compensatory damages.

The court rejected Colgate's contention that there was no evidence that the overall athletics program discriminated against women.

Instead, after noting that expenditures for men's sports exceeded those for women's sports, the court focused on the differences between the men's varsity ice hockey team and the women's club team. The court made no findings concerning overall opportunities for women student-athletes at Colgate. It concluded that the Title IX statute and regulation "invite a comparison between separate teams in a particular sport because they are designed to protect not only a particular class of persons, but individuals as well."

It is not yet known whether Colgate will appeal the decision.

Complaint investigations. According to the Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights (OCR), Title IX intercollegiate athletics complaints have been filed against three institutions—Johns Hopkins University, Olivet College (Michigan) and the University of Pittsburgh—since the last report. OCR requested data from Johns Hopkins and Pittsburgh in July; it conducted an on-site investigation at Olivet September 28. In addition, on July 17, OCR issued a letter of finding in its investigation of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, in which it found several areas of noncompliance that the university agreed to correct.

Compliance reviews. OCR has not completed four of the six compliance reviews it initiated last fiscal year (Iowa State University; University of Wyoming; Oregon State University, and University of California, Santa Barbara) and three of the five compliance reviews it initiated this fiscal year (Colorado State University; California State University, Fresno, and San Jose State University). On August 7, OCR closed its compliance review of California State University, Fullerton, which it had initiated this fiscal year, citing a lack of available data, and asked the university to begin to compile material. OCR probably will reinstate the review during fiscal year 1993.

Legislative developments. On August 12, Rep. Susan Molinari, R-New York, introduced H.J. Res. 546 to designate February 4, 1993, and February 3, 1994, as National Women and Girls in Sports Day. Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Oregon, introduced a companion measure, S.J. Res. 329, August 8. The House passed H.J. Res. 546 September 30. Sponsors of the Senate resolution, which was referred to the Judiciary Committee, hope to bring the measure to the Senate floor before Congress adjourns.

On September 29, the House passed S. Con. Res. 127, which expresses the sense of Congress that women's soccer should be a medal sport in the 1996 Olympic Games. Earlier, on September 25, the Senate passed the resolution. Because a resolution expresses the sense of the Congress; it is not sent to the president. Sponsors plan to forward the resolution to the International Olympic Committee.

National Youth Sports Program

FY 1993 appropriation. The conference committee responsible for FY 1993 appropriations for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education met September 30 and reportedly agreed to an appropriation of $9.95 million for the 1993 National Youth Sports Program (NYSP). Earlier, on September 10, the Senate Appropriations Committee allocated $5 million for the NYSP, a decrease from the $5.94 million approved by the House. During Senate floor consideration of the fiscal year 1993 Labor, HHS and Education appropriations bill September 17, the Senate approved an amendment sponsored by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Arizona, providing $12 million for the 1993 NYSP, the same level as was appropriated last year. Sens. Slade Gorton, R-Washington; Harry Reid, D-Nevada; Joseph Biden, D-Delaware; Brock Adams, D-Washington; Thad Cochran, R-Mississippi; John Seymour, R-California; Jim Sasser, D-Tennessee; John Warner, R-Virginia; Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey; Larry Craig, R-Idaho; Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; Robert Kasten, R-Wisconsin; Dave Durenberger, R-Minnesota; Terry Sanford, D-North Carolina; Herb Kohl, D-Wisconsin; Don Nickles, R-Oklahoma; Ernest Hollings, D-South Carolina, and Jeff Bingaman, D-New Mexico, cosponsored the amendment.

Public housing youth sports program amendment. On September 9, the Senate approved an amendment to the Veterans Administration/Housing and Urban Development (HUD) appropriations bill (H.R. 5679) to amend the HUD public housing youth sports program to clarify that institutions sponsoring NYSP projects are eligible for grants under the HUD public housing youth sports program. Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Maryland, offered the amendment on behalf of DeConcini. On September 25, both the House and Senate adopted the conference report on the bill, which includes the NYSP amendment. The president is expected to sign the bill.

Scholarships and student loans

On September 26, the Senate agreed to an amendment to H.R. 11 (see previous section) offered by Sen. Trent Lott, R-Mississippi, to exclude from income amounts received as scholarships and used to pay for room, board or travel. The amendment would apply to amounts received after December 31, 1992. Before enactment of the 1986 Tax Reform Act, scholarships were not taxable.

No action has been taken on 11 pending bills that would restore the deduction for interest paid on student loans and the exclusion from taxation for scholarships, or otherwise would provide tax benefits for interest paid on student loans.

Antidrug abuse legislation

No action has been taken on the series of measures to impose Federal standards regulating drug-testing programs. The pending bills include H.R. 33, a comprehensive bill dealing with drug-testing procedures; S. 2008, the "Quality Assurance in the Private Sector Drug Testing Act" and H.R. 2422, the "Quality Assurance of Drug Testing Act." Similarly, no action has been taken yet on the omnibus crime bill, which would establish criminal penalties for physical trainers and coaches who induce athletes to use anabolic steroids.

Copyright and communications

Reregulation of cable television. On September 22, Congress sent S. 12, the "Cable Television Consumer Protection Act," which would reregulate the cable television industry, to President Bush. He is expected to veto the bill. Sponsors say the bill is needed to stem the rapid increases in cable subscribers' monthly bills; the cable industry says it will result in increased rates. Among other provisions, the bill allows

Texas athlete impresses international forum

By Vikki K. Watson
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

If you need a better appreciation of student sport in the United States, just talk to Katy Arris.

Arris, an NCAA swimming champion and fifth-year senior at the University of Texas at Austin, was selected to present the topic "Student Sport in the United States of America" at the International University Sports Federation (FISU) Forum September 6-13 in Paralimni, Cyprus.

Arris

The first-time forum brought together students and student-sport leaders from around the world to take part in a program focusing on education, recreation and culture.

Student-athlete presentations focused on student sport in various countries. Other topics included "Should Student-Athletes Receive a Free Education and Expenses for Participation in Sport?",

"Should Financial Resources Be Allocated to Mass Sport or Elite Sport?" and "Should Student Sport Be Compulsory or Optional in Higher Education?"

Arris gave an overview of how the United States uniquely offers its college students opportunities to participate at a variety of sports levels: recreation, club and intercollegiate.

And there was nothing like a little exposure to international differences in sports philosophy to help Arris develop more admiration for her own country's system.

An appreciation

"I really have a great appreciation of the opportunities available in the United States for students," said Arris, who traveled to Cyprus with Nora Lynn Finch, associate athletics director at North Carolina State University and president of the United States Collegiate Sports Council, which is a member of FISU. "It's really amazing that for a high-school student-athlete looking to go to college, there's a wealth of opportunity to participate in sports at a variety of levels.

"No other country has the extensive system that the United States has."

And no one could have better represented her country, Finch said. Arris, who has a 3.490 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in economics, was a first-team member of the GTE academic all-America women's at-large team and was one of 125 student-athletes awarded an NCAA postgraduate scholarship for distinction in academics and varsity competition.

She won the 1,650-yard freestyle title at the 1992 NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships and was a member of Texas' 1990 and 1991 championship teams. She also placed fourth in the 200-meter freestyle and fifth in the 400-meter freestyle at the 1990 Goodwill Games, finished 10th in the 400-meter freestyle at the 1991 world championships, and was named the 1992 Southwest Conference scholar-athlete of the year.

Committee member

Arris, who also is a member of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, was recommended for the FISU forum by Janet M. Justus, an NCAA director of eligibility and staff liaison to that committee.

"(Katy) is a very, very impressive young lady," Finch said. "She fit in right away. She's a very experienced traveler, and she understands different sports cultures. She wasn't expecting it to be Austin, Texas."

"I guess you could say I'm a seasoned traveler," said Arris, who has competed in such places as Australia and Germany, "although I don't think you ever really get used to traveling such long distances."

The trip did require some special preparation by Arris, who not only researched Cyprus and its history but also the background of recreation and club sports at Texas and at other universities around the country.

"I had to do a lot of research," she said. "I wasn't that familiar with club and recreation sports."

She quickly became an expert. And quickly gained the respect of her peers.

"Katy comes from the University of Texas, where they have a very extensive club, intramural and intercollegiate program," Finch said. "She was able to present a terrific model."

"And she blended in well. She had not just the students but the adult leaders thinking, 'That's a special girl.'"

'A bit nervous'

The 20-minute presentation and 10-minute follow-up discussion left Arris "a little bit nervous," although she did believe the message got through to her listeners.

"Some people were skeptics," Arris said. "They hear about the corruption in student sports. (But) after they heard the presentation and saw the opportunities students have to participate, a lot were interested in modeling their programs after the U.S."

Finch can understand why.

"(European countries') whole college system isn't like our college system," she said. "They believe sports belong outside of school. They don't have any desire to have sport as a part of their education."

"Katy came away with a real respect for our opportunities, for the NCAA."

broadcasters to charge cable operators to retransmit the local signals that cable systems now may retransmit without charge. The conference report notes that this "retransmission consent" provision may alter the environment in which the existing cable compulsory license operates.

During conference, the provision authorizing the regulation of pay-per-view charges for championship professional sports events was dropped. The final version does include a provision requiring the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to study, on a sport-by-sport basis, the problem of migration of sports to pay television. As part of that study, the FCC is directed to study contracts between college athletics conferences and video programming vendors that have "artificially and unfairly restricted the supply of the sporting events of local colleges for broadcast on local television stations." The bill further directs the FCC to consult with the attorney general to determine whether and to what extent those contracts are prohibited by existing statutes. The FCC is to submit the results of the analysis to Congress with recommendations for legislation.

An effort was made to include in the cable bill a provision requiring cable systems to "black out" Major League Baseball games carried on distant signals that the cable systems retransmit. In an effort to assure that a sports blackout provision was not included, Rep. George Darden, D-Georgia, introduced a bill (H.R. 5760) August 4 to express the sense of Congress that such a provision should not be included in any legislation. No action was taken on the bill, although it had its intended effect, as the sports black-out provision was not included in the final cable bill.

Cable copyright reform. No action has been taken on H.R. 4511, the Copyright Broadcast Retransmission Licensing Act of 1992, which would phase out the compulsory license scheme for cable system retransmission of broadcast programming after a six-year transition period. Without the compulsory license, cable systems would be required to negotiate with copyright owners before retransmitting their programming.

Broadcasting of sports events. No action has been taken on the pending measures that address broadcasting of sports events, although unsuccessful efforts were made to attach some of them to the cable bill. These measures include H.R. 2976, the "Fairness to Fans Act of 1991," which would require professional sports teams to keep one-third of their events on free broadcast television, and H.R. 4736, which would ban pay-per-view telecasting of entertainment events, including sports events, held in facilities constructed, maintained or renovated using public funds, or sponsored by public and private nonprofit organizations. Similarly, no action has been taken on the "Public Access to National Sporting Events Act" (S. 1015), which would require that the Super Bowl and World Series be available over-the-air on a national broadcast television network, or on S. Res. 172, which expresses the sense of Congress that the immunity from antitrust liability now enjoyed by baseball and the antitrust exemption authorizing professional sports teams to pool their telecasting rights should be limited or rescinded.

1991 cable and satellite royalty fees. On July 31, the NCAA filed claims on behalf of itself and its members for a share of the $177.7 million in 1991 cable royalty fees and the $3.7 million in 1991 satellite carrier royalty fees.

1990 cable royalty fees. On September 17, the Copyright Royalty Tribunal distributed 90 percent of the $179 million in 1990 cable royalties, of which the Joint Sports Claimants (JSC) received $39 million. Claimants had requested that the tribunal make a partial distribution, even though a controversy exists over allocation of the 1990 fund, in order to expedite receipt of funds. If the tribunal's final award to the JSC is less than 90 percent of that made to the JSC in the 1989 proceeding, the JSC will remit a portion of the partial distribution. At the request of claimants, the tribunal is deferring the 1990 cable proceeding until after the 1989-1991 satellite proceedings are resolved.

1989, 1990 and 1991 satellite royalty fees. On September 17, the tribunal issued an order stating that it would defer declaring a controversy until October 15 to allow the parties more time to reach a universal settlement. Most of the copyright owners, including the JSC, have reached a tentative agreement among themselves. The television networks and the Public Broadcasting System have not yet reached a settlement.

FTC complaint against the College Football Association

To date, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has not issued a decision in the appeal of the dismissal of the FTC complaint against the College Football Association and Capital Cities/ABC Inc. There is no deadline for issuance of a decision.

Addendum

The following supplemental information was provided as an update to the original governmental affairs report:

Congress passes antisports-gambling bill. On October 7, the Senate by voice vote adopted the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act of 1992 (S. 474), prohibiting the further spread of state-sponsored or state-authorized gambling schemes based upon the outcome of sports contests. The House had adopted an identical bill earlier in the week, so the measure now goes to President Bush for his signature.

As finally drawn, the bill permits the continuance of sports gambling schemes already authorized by state law and gives New Jersey until January 1, 1994, to approve a constitutional amendment authorizing casino-based sports betting in that state. The only significant state-authorized programs now in operation are the Oregon sports lottery and casino-based gambling in Nevada; in addition, a handful of Western states authorize limited low-stakes sports betting in certain retail establishments. Delaware law also authorizes a sports lottery, but the scheme never has become operational.

Congress acts on corporate sponsorships. In one of its last acts before adjournment October 8, the Senate passed the tax bill (H.R. 11), one provision of which created a safe harbor from application of the unrelated business income tax to certain corporate sponsorship payments made in connection with public sporting events staged by tax-exempt organizations, including football bowl committees. The House had passed the bill by a narrow margin a few days earlier.

Notwithstanding congressional action, the president is expected to veto the bill for reasons unrelated to the corporate-sponsorship issue. Agreement by the Senate and House on a corporate sponsorship safe harbor, however, suggests that even if the bill is vetoed, chances for adoption of a corporate-sponsorship provision in the next Congress are good.

goalkeeping."

NESCAC women's teams have completed seven of the 20 big-goal games this season, and though coaches admit that some goals are being scored that would not have otherwise, the floodgates have not opened. That was a primary concern among women's coaches when the experiment began.

"We initially wanted to perform the experiment simultaneously with the men's and women's teams," Gooding said. "But we didn't have enough money to fund two sets of goals on each campus. It was also more controversial in the women's programs. The men's coaches were virtually unanimous in their desire to experiment for the sake of the game, even if they were undecided on this particular issue. When the women's coaches saw there wasn't a complete distortion in the scoring increase, they were willing to proceed."

Favors experimentation

"Everyone is participating with some urging from me and Peter," said Michelle Morgan, Amherst's women's soccer coach and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Soccer Rules Committee. "I'm not necessarily in favor of larger goals, but I am in favor of experimentation to improve the game. Some coaches are afraid that because the experiment is not being conducted simultaneously with the men's and women's teams, women may end up with a different set of playing rules."

One such coach is Carol Anne Beach, women's soccer coach at Colby College.

"My biggest fear is that the experiment will show a more profound change for women than for men and that the women will end up using the larger goals while men will not," she said. Beach, who also coaches women's basketball at Colby, cites the smaller ball used in women's basketball as an example.

"I also have reservations about the experiment because the physical abilities of female goalkeepers aren't as great as those of males."

Morgan agrees.

"My gut feeling is that because of the physiological differences between males and females, the upper corners of the goals will be the critical areas for women."

"Our main concern was to accommodate a change that is gender blind," Gooding said. "Some felt that this particular change would damage the game, particularly the women's game because the goalkeeping isn't quite as developed. It's a fine line to find the right dimension."

Initially, Gooding wanted to increase the goal size proportionally to 30 feet by 10 feet. But the added height was simply too much space to ask female goalkeepers in particular to cover.

Though according to Gooding, reactions to the experiment have been more negative than positive, those opposed have not been outspoken. He hopes that the large goal idea will catch on.

"In the spirit of sound experimentation it would be wonderful to find a group to continue in order to expand the sample size," he said.

"Other conferences need to experiment with this and other rules, perhaps in the off-season," Morgan said. "But people tend to be scared of change."

Does Gooding see larger goals mandatory in five years?

"No," he said. "But I think we've planted the seed."

NYSP

Last-minute efforts by senators help youth program stave off dramatic cuts

NYSP to the 1992 level of $12 million. Other original supporters of the amendment were Sens. Thad Cochran, R-Mississippi, and Harry Reid, D-Nevada.

The amendment (to House Resolution 5677) explained NYSP's worthiness to receive funds and pointed to noncontroversial sources (an existing fund for "consultant fees") from which the offset money would come. In addition to the original four senators, the amendment was supported by Sens. Brock Adams, D-Washington; Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Delaware; Jeff Bingaman, D-New Mexico; Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey; Larry E. Craig, R-Idaho; Dave Durenberger, R-Minnesota; Ernest F. Hollings, D-South Carolina; Robert W. Kasten Jr., R-Wisconsin; Herb

Relevant program

During discussion about the amendment in the Senate, DeConcini pointed out the relevance of NYSP, given the inner-city strife of the past year.

"The National Youth Sports Program was created in 1968 as a response to the riots in Los Angeles in an effort to assist at-risk youth. Now, 27 years after Watts, this country has once again experienced bloody riots in the streets of Los Angeles," he said. "This is no time to cut support for poor children in the urban ghettos of this nation or anywhere in this country, for that matter."

Biden also offered testimony about the urgency of maintaining NYSP funding.

"In its starkest terms, this cut would mean that 35,000 children won't be involved in this antidrug and anticrime program and they will be on the streets—in everyday danger of falling prey to drugs and crime," he said.

Reid, also a member of Harkin's subcommittee, addressed the strength of NYSP.

"This is much more than just a sports program," he said. "It also provides educational opportunities with counseling on health and nutrition, higher education, and careers."

The amendment eventually was accepted in the Senate, although Harkin spoke about having to set priorities for scarce funding.

Sens. J. Bennett Johnston, D-Louisiana; Kent Conrad, D-North Dakota, and Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-New York, joined Adams, Cochran, DeConcini, Gorton, Hollings, Reid and Sasser in submitting a "Dear Colleagues" letter to the House in an unsuccessful attempt to gain its support to return to the $12 million recommendation.

In a conference on HR 5677 for fiscal 1993, Reid, Gorton and Rep. C. W. Bill Young, R-Florida, spoke on behalf of level funding. But the best that could be negotiated for NYSP was $9.5 million.

Current programs intact

Thiebe stressed that the $2.5 million drop from fiscal 1992 will not affect current programs, only those that start after June 1, 1993. He said that as a result of the loss of money, cuts would have to be made in next year's Extended NYSP and technical-assistance programs. The impact on existing full NYSP should be minimal.

"We hope to maintain the quality services of the summer program," he said. "It now will be difficult to expand to other sites; however, in the event that some institutions drop out, we have an abundance of institutions that have applied for 1993 programs," he said.

Despite the cut, NYSP learned valuable lessons from the process, Thiebe said.

"NYSP personnel now know how influential they can be and how important it is to keep their legislators informed," he said. "Our work with the Senate can only help us in the future."

Twenty-three student-athletes up for Smith, Magill awards

Honors given to female golfer, male tennis player

Twelve woman golfers and 11 men's tennis players have been nominated for the third annual Marilyn Smith and Dan Magill Awards presented by the National Intercollegiate Golf/Tennis Awards.

The awards, which will be presented June 9-10, 1993, in Dallas are given annually to a woman golfer and men's tennis player who display outstanding athletics, academic and leadership qualities.

The Marilyn Smith Award, presented to the top woman golfer, honors the former University of Kansas golf standout who won the 1949 collegiate women's golf title and later cofounded the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

The Dan Magill Award, presented to the top men's tennis player, is named for the former University of Georgia coach, who spent 34 seasons at the helm of the Bulldogs program and ranks first all-time in victories among Division I coaches with 706.

To be eligible for nomination, student-athletes must meet the following criteria:

■ Academic and athletics eligibility. A nominee must be a college senior eligible for graduation and also must be eligible for athletics competition under NCAA rules.

■ Academic performance. A nominee must maintain a grade-point average at or above 3.000 (4.000 scale).

■ Athletics performance. A nominee must be an all-American or academic all-American in his or her respective sport.

■ Leadership or citizenship qualities.

The 1992 recipients of the Marilyn Smith and Dan Magill Awards were Adele Moore, Stanford University, and David DiLucia, University of Notre Dame.

Two women make history together in men's soccer

In the scorebook, it is a 3-1 overtime victory for Central Connecticut State University. In the history books, it is something much more than that.

When Lisa Bernard and Becky Williams started the second half of Central Connecticut State's October 9 victory over St. Peter's College, they became the first women to play together in the 34-year history of Division I men's soccer.

"I've been the chairman of soccer history and records since 1953, and that's certainly a first," Mickey Cochrane of the National Soccer Coaches Association of

"We weren't thinking of being pioneers."

■ Soccer player
Lisa Bernard

America told The Associated Press.

The two juniors played about 20 minutes apiece to start the second half.

"It was 0-0 at half time, but we were playing very poorly," Central Connecticut State coach Shaun Green said. "I wanted to shake up the team, so I put the second unit in there."

At least one woman previously had played in a Division I men's game. In 1984, Rene Cassese played for Seton Hall University against Rutgers University, New Brunswick. NCAA rules permit a woman to compete on a men's team if there is no varsity women's team. Williams and Bernard were eligible as members of Central Connecticut State's women's club team.

"We weren't thinking of being pioneers," Bernard said. "We just wanted to play without any fanfare. In fact, I didn't tell my friends or even my roommate that I was going to start practicing with the team two weeks (before her appearance), until I had made it."

Green said playing Bernard and Williams was "absolutely not a promotional thing. They are a part of the team and will continue to be."

Williams and Bernard decided to try out after Williams saw a poster on campus announcing tryouts.

"We've been annihilated by injuries," Green said. "When Lisa and Becky came into my office, I told them we needed players to practice. I told them I'd give them an opportunity to make the team."

Green said Bernard, 5-foot-3 and 115 pounds, and Williams, 5-3 and 130, lack the size for the men's game.

"The pace of the game is quicker than the women's, too," Green said.

Central Connecticut State co-captain James Sheridan said some of the players were skeptical at first but changed their minds after a few practices.

Graduation or cancellation of financial aid

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 15.3.4.2, an institution may not graduate (increase or decrease) or cancel a student-athlete's financial aid during the period of its award for the following reasons: (1) on the basis of the student-athlete's athletics ability, performance or contribution to a team's success; (2) because of an injury that prevents the recipient from participating in athletics, or (3) for any other athletics reason.

During its September 24, 1992, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that it is not permissible for an institution to decrease a student-athlete's financial aid from the time the student-athlete signs the financial aid award letter until the conclusion of the period set forth in the financial aid agreement, except under the conditions set forth in Bylaw 15.3.4.1.

Further, an institution may increase a student-athlete's financial aid between the period when the student-athlete signs the financial aid award letter and the beginning of the period of the award.

Finally, the committee determined that subsequent to the date on which a student-athlete receives any benefits as part of the student-athlete's financial aid grant (which is determined on the first day of classes for a particular academic term or the first day of practice, whichever is earlier), an institution may increase the student-athlete's financial aid if the institution can demonstrate that such an increase is unrelated in any manner to an athletics reason.

Bylaw 13.11.1

Comments before signing the National Letter of Intent

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.11.1, before the prospect's signing of a National Letter of Intent or institutional tender of financial aid, an institution may comment publicly only to the extent of confirming its recruitment of the prospect. It is not permissible to: (1) comment generally about the prospect's ability or the contribution that the prospect might make to the institution's team, or (2) comment in any manner as to the likelihood of the prospect signing with an institution. Additionally, during its August 6, 1991, conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that an institution is precluded from providing comments to the media regarding a prospect other than confirming the institution's recruitment of the prospect.

National Letter of Intent early signing date

Divisions I and II institutions that subscribe to the National Letter of Intent program should note that the early signing period for all sports, except football, women's volleyball, field hockey, soccer and water polo, is November 11 through November 18, 1992. Institutions are precluded from contacting a prospective student-athlete during the 48-hour dead period surrounding the initial date for signing the early National Letter of Intent (i.e., 8 a.m. November 9 through 8 a.m. November 13). Further, during the 48-hour dead period before the initial signing date, the National Letter of Intent must be mailed and cannot be hand-delivered. During its January 6, 1991, meeting, the Council determined that it would be permissible for an institution to deliver a National Letter of Intent by overnight delivery or facsimile.

Finally, in accordance with Bylaw 13.1.2.4-(b)-(7), institutional staff members may make unlimited telephone calls to prospective student-athletes on the early signing date for the National Letter of Intent and during the two days immediately after the initial signing date.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Legislative actions

The Council and the three division steering committees reviewed all proposals in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation and took numerous actions to support, oppose or withdraw earlier opposition to various amendments.

Among the highlights of those actions, the Council:

- Voted to continue to oppose attempts to change the NCAA legislative calendar, as reflected in Proposal No. 8.

- Agreed to support delays in implementing reductions in grants-in-aid in women's sports as suggested in Proposal Nos. 77 and 80, emphasizing that the reason for that support is to assure the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force ample time to do its work.

- Withdrew its earlier sponsorship of a proposal to eliminate the contact restrictions in Divisions I-A and I-AA spring football practice. The proposal (No. 120) will remain before the Convention because it was sponsored by member institutions, but it will not be supported by the Council.

- Agreed to join with the Presidents Commission in sponsoring a resolution calling for all NCAA institutions to express their support

Other highlights

In other actions during its fall meeting, the Council:

- Affirmed that the Council and the Administrative Committee do not have authority to waive NCAA rules unless the membership has established a specific waiver opportunity in the involved legislation; further, that the Council will not consider requests for waivers where it has no authority to grant relief.

The Council noted that approval of the proposal to establish an Administrative Review Panel at the 1993 Convention (Proposal No. 11 in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation) would create an opportunity for institutions to have specific circumstances reviewed on a case-by-case basis when waivers are not available.

- Agreed to authorize the Administrative Committee and the officers of the Presidents Commission to establish a small task force to study the remaining recommendations of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process (i.e., use of independent hearing officers and open hearings).

It is intended that the task force will be made up of members of the Council, the Commission, the Committee on Infractions and the special committee.

- Discussed the concept of the restricted-earnings coach and agreed to monitor the success of 1993 Convention Proposal No. 13 in that regard, after which a decision may be made to refer the concept to a committee (perhaps the Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics) for further study.

- Asked the Committee on Review and Planning to study the growth of the membership in recent years, especially in Division III, and the possible effects of that growth on the existing membership structure.

- Appointed individuals to fill vacancies that will occur September 1, 1993, on standing NCAA committees (those listed in Bylaw 21.3). Those appointments are not announced until after the NCAA Convention in January.

for the Association's graduation-rate disclosure and reporting procedures, including submission by the Association of a substantial-comparability waiver request to the U.S. Department of Education. The minutes of the Council meeting, reflecting all of its actions, will appear in a November issue of The NCAA News.

ACT

Council selects ACT as administrator for proposed initial-eligibility clearinghouse begin contract negotiations with ACT, contingent upon the approval at the 1993 Convention of Proposal No. 44 in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation.

The proposal would authorize establishment of the clearinghouse, which would administer certification related to fulfillment of the Association's graduation, core-curriculum and standardized-test requirements. The effective date of the legislation would be August 1, 1994.

Activities of the clearinghouse would include the collection and processing of high-school core-course forms, college lists of recruited students, student eligibility request forms, student transcripts, and SAT and ACT scores.

ACT was recommended to the Council after subcommittee members met with representatives of that agency and of the Educational Testing Service (ETS). Those agencies were identified in late July as finalists for selection as administrator after the subcommittee reviewed 12 responses to a "request for proposal" document that was issued early this year.

Based on information from proposals received, the subcommittee has estimated that the cost of the clearinghouse—including approximately $200,000 in start-up costs—will be approximately $12 million to $15 million for a five-year period.

The subcommittee previously has expressed its support for an arrangement in which the Association and/or its member institutions would share costs with prospective student-athletes, who would pay fees for clearinghouse services. Other options would be for member institutions and/or the NCAA to pay all costs or for prospective student-athletes to pay all costs of the clearinghouse.

Should the membership approve establishment of the clearinghouse at the 1993 Convention, the subcommittee also has recommended that a standing committee be created to oversee operations.
