Championships discussion to highlight meeting

The NCAA Executive Committee is expected to emerge from its December 6-7 meeting with a preliminary plan for possible revisions to NCAA championships.

The committee is expected to devote most of its time to the ongoing championships study, which was initiated at the committee's May meeting.

A comprehensive study of the championships program was performed after the May meeting. The membership was surveyed in early summer about its attitudes toward all elements of championships, including finances, participation, sponsorship, policies, committee structure and officiating (see The NCAA News, August 5).

The study and the membership's reaction were considered at the Executive Committee's August meeting. In October, a subcommittee of the Division I championships committee met with the chairs of committees representing Division I and National Collegiate Championships to discuss the review of championships and to hear suggestions to improve the program.

The full Executive Committee will review those discussions in forming its plan. After the plan is developed, it will be submitted to the membership between January and May for review and comment. The committee then will seek to form a final plan at its May 1993 meeting.

Other matters that will be considered at the December meeting, which will be conducted in Kansas City, Missouri, are year-end fiscal reports and progress reports from the Gender-Equity Task Force and the Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics (to be presented by Executive Committee members who are on the committees). Sports-committee reports also will be presented.

Eligibility proposal generates fire

This is the third in a series of seven articles previewing the legislation to be acted upon at the 1993 NCAA Convention. This installment includes the proposals in the personnel and eligibility groupings.

While more controversial proposals involving personnel and student-athlete eligibility will be considered earlier in the Convention as part of the Presidential Agenda Day, several amendments included in those topical groupings have the potential to generate some heat.

One such proposal, in the eligibility grouping, seeks to make retroactive a Council decision in October 1991 that changed the minimum score requirement on the ACT from 18 to 17 for initial

Committee to form 'legislative concepts'

A set of "legislative concepts" developed by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics will be circulated early next year to the membership and affiliated constituencies for their review and response.

The concepts will have grown out of the committee's three meetings and conference calls that will take place between now and the middle of December, according to committee chair James E. Delany, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference.

"We hope to allow 45 to 60 days for the membership to study the concepts and respond in writing," Delany said. "Then, during the period between March 1 and May 1, we will arrange for hearings to give access to the special committee for those individuals interested in providing input."

After the written responses and hearings, the committee will meet to finalize a package of proposals for the NCAA Presidents Commission to consider.

At its October 7 meeting, the committee identified eight "areas of effort" and created subcommittees for each area. The areas include financial aid, personnel matters/total compensation, recruitment, operating expenses, support services, division structure and institutional flexibility, NCAA budget and structure, and capital/facility costs.

Five assumptions or principles that would be used to guide the committee's actions also were discussed in the October meeting. That list included:

- Deregulation or simplification of NCAA rules to achieve elimination of rules and prohibitions instead of adding rules and regulations.

- Gender equity.

- Welfare of student-athletes with consideration of the quality and quantity of competitive opportunities.

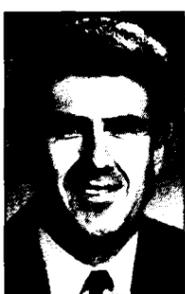

- Institutional autonomy and flexibility to provide the opportunity for an institution to determine its level of competition on a sport-by-sport basis rather than by the division basis currently in place.

- Cost containment/reduction.

"We've had three good meetings," Delany said. "We've looked at other cost-containment efforts that have taken place on a national level in the last few years. We've tried to keep in touch with what other committees that are working in areas of potential financial impact are doing—such as the Gender-Equity Task Force, the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, and the Executive Committee and its review of championships."

One-two-break: arms, that is

When it comes time to put together next year's women's basketball media guide at the University of North Dakota, the cover definitely will have a different look.

For the second straight year, a player featured on the front of the media guide has suffered a broken limb after publication. So next year, there will not be any players lining up for cover photos.

Last season, North Dakota's starting guard, Darcy Deutsch, was featured. Just three games into the season, she suffered a broken arm and missed the rest of the schedule.

This year, in the team's first game November 15, starting guard Tracey Pudenz suffered a broken arm. She, however, is expected to return to the lineup in four to six weeks.

Fan in the stands

When Heidelberg College and Otterbein College battled to a 7-7 tie September 19 in the first American collegiate football game played on German soil, Heidelberg linebacker Rod McGough had a special fan in the stands at Bierberer Berg Stadium in Offenbach—his brother, Joe.

The 6-0, 205-pound senior from Van Wert, Ohio, had not played in front of his brother since his freshman year of high school. Joe is in the U.S. armed forces and stationed in Germany.

"It's odd that we traveled all the way to Germany for him to see me play," McGough said. "It was very special to me and something I'll never forget. We even had time to spend together, and that's special for brothers."

Halloween marathon

Emory University's men's and women's swim teams conducted a 24-hour swim marathon over the Halloween weekend to help raise money for their annual winter training trip and for the Georgia Council on Child Abuse.

The team swam approximately 210 miles—about the distance between Atlanta and Columbia, South Carolina—without ever leaving the pool. They began at 6 p.m. October 30 and finished at 6 p.m. the next day.

During the marathon, the overhead lights in the pool area were turned off and re-

Despite the fun surrounding the event, Emory coach Peter Smith said the idea of assisting children never was forgotten.

"It is a sobering experience to know children without homes and, in many cases, without a parent," Smith said. "The team and I realized how little we give on a daily basis. The weekend was a bit difficult for my wife and children, particularly since I have little free time during the season. But it was an extremely small sacrifice for (the) benefit of children who have no home or family."

Un-(s)toppable?

Curry College sophomore running back Mark Bogan barely gave the statisticians a chance to add up the yardage from his first touchdown of the game before he scored another six points in a 32-13 victory over Hartwick College that snapped Curry's 17-game losing streak.

Bogan caught a 16-yard pass to put the Colonels up, 6-0, with six minutes left in the first quarter. On the ensuing kickoff, Hartwick fumbled and Curry recovered. Bogan scored on the game's next play, this time from six yards out, to put Curry up by two touchdowns.

Only 14 seconds elapsed between the scores.

Butkus finalists

Michael Barrow of the University of Miami (Florida), Dave Hoffman of the University of Washington and Marvin Jones of Florida State University are finalists for the Butkus Award, presented annually to the nation's top college linebacker.

Both Barrow and Hoffman are seniors, while Jones, a junior, was a semifinalist for the honor in 1991.

The winner will be announced December 12 at the annual Butkus Award banquet sponsored by the Downtown Athletic Club of Orlando.

■ Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be received by Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than December 14, 1992.

Division II Baseball Committee: Replacement for Daniel G. Guerrero, no longer at a Division II institution, effective December 1, 1992. Appointee must be from Division II and should be from the West region.

Drug-testing grants initiated

The NCAA, in cooperation with the National Football League and the United States Olympic Committee, has initiated a grants program for laboratory research related to athletics drug testing.

For the past two years, the NCAA, the NFL and the USOC each have donated $75,000 to the NCAA Foundation to fund the program. The money enables the NCAA Special Planning Committee for Drug Testing to initiate research.

Research is encouraged in the following areas:

- Improvement in the ability to detect testosterone (or epitestosterone) administration.

- Synthesis and development of analytical reference compounds for banned substances.

- Development of methodologies for testing and interpretation of testing results for peptide hormones and other new drugs.

- Elucidation of the metabolism of banned anabolic steroids.

Calandro appointed to basketball position

Daniel A. Calandro, a member of the NCAA staff since 1986, has been selected as director of Division I men's basketball operations, replacing Betsy G. Stephenson.

In another personnel move relating to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, Bernard M. Muir, event director of Streetball Partners International Inc., will join the NCAA staff as an assistant director of championships. He will replace Joseph A. Quinlan Jr., who resigned earlier this year to become assistant athletics director at St. Bonaventure

Calandro

University.

Stephenson joined the University of Kansas as associate athletics director.

Calandro joined the NCAA staff in 1986 as an enforcement representative. He served in that capacity until 1990, when he was named an assistant director of championships.

He is a graduate of Knox College. Before joining the NCAA, he coached high-school basketball and worked in sales.

Muir has been responsible for the on-site management for Hoop-It-Up, a three-on-three basketball tournament conducted throughout the country.

Previous to that, Muir was an academic affairs/compliance assistant for the Auburn University athletics department.

■ Facilities

Al Zikmund, former football coach at the University of Nebraska at Kearney, was honored October 16 when the athletics department dedicated the Al Zikmund conference room in the school's health and sports center. Zikmund coached at what was then Kearney State Teachers College from 1955 to 1971, registering a 121-32-2 mark.

Trinity University (Texas) marked the completion of the William H. Bell Athletic Center with a ribbon-cutting ceremony October 1. A $15 million, three-story, 185,000-square-foot complex, the center is named for the late William H. Bell, a prominent Tulsa, Oklahoma, attorney and member of the Trinity board of trustees from 1967 until his death in 1988. He chaired the board from 1984 to 1987.

The University of Delaware recently dedicated its new $20.5 million Bob Carpenter Center, which houses the men's and women's basketball teams as well as football offices. The center is named in honor of the late Bob Carpenter, a longtime Delaware supporter and benefactor and former owner of the Philadelphia Phillies. The Acierno Arena, where the basketball teams will play, seats 5,058 and can add more than 700 seats for other events. It is named for Frank Acierno, a local businessman and developer who contributed $1 million for the building.

Ceremonial shovels turned up earth November 6 at the University of Mississippi's ground-breaking ceremony for a new athletics training center addition and field-house renovation. The $3.5 million project involves renovation of the 17,885-square-foot field house, construction of an 18,955-square-foot addition and construction of a separate visitors' dressing room.

■ Fact file

The U.S. population over the age of 65 will double from 30 million to 60 million by the year 2030. More than 10 percent of those over 65 and 47 percent of those over 85 now have Alzheimer's disease. The over-85 population will increase fivefold over the next 30 years.

Bowl game moving to Tallahassee

The Heritage Bowl has made it official, announcing that the bowl game will be moved from Miami to Tallahassee, Florida.

Officials said the game, which matches teams from the Mid-Eastern Athletic and Southwestern Athletic Conferences, will be played January 2 at Bragg Memorial Stadium on the Florida A&M University campus.

The two leagues agreed to the shift November 16.

Whitelaw builds name, reputation in ECAC

By David D. Smale
SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

When Robert M. Whitelaw was a small child and friends came to his house to play, they always noticed his parents' Scottish brogue. The Whitelaws had moved to Boston from Scotland two years before Robert was born, and there was no doubt about the nature of his ancestry.

It bothered him so much when the kids imitated his parents' accent that they started calling him "Scotty." The more they said it, the more it bothered him. The more it bothered him, the more they said it.

"I got into a few fistfights because of nickname teasing," Whitelaw recalled. "My mother used to tell me not to let it bother me. 'After all,' she'd say, 'someday you'll be proud of your heritage.'"

"She was right, of course. Now the only person in the world who doesn't call me 'Scotty' is my mother. She still calls me 'Bobby.'"

Made name for himself

Regardless of what he is called, there is little argument that through 29 years with the Eastern College Athletic Conference (the last 17 as commissioner) and another 10 years before that in athletics, Whitelaw made a name for himself.

As commissioner of the ECAC—"a conference of conferences" as described by current commissioner Clayton W. Chapman—Whitelaw helped the league survive and even thrive during a period of movement to playing conferences. He was instrumental in the ECAC's getting four automatic bids to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. He was on the executive board of the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame and was on the executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

He served as executive director of the National Invitation Tournament and was the chair of the Kickoff Classic games committee. And through it all, he was known as a personable, generous "people person."

"In the competitive world of athletics, Scotty is the most empathetic person I've ever known," said John L. Toner, former NCAA president and director of athletics at the University of Connecticut. "Your problem quickly became his problem. He was cut out to do exactly what he did—he commissioner of a 250-plus member organization. That was the bottom line for Scotty....

"He loved Divisions I, II and III equally. He enjoyed a fine reputation with Division I programs all over the country. Yet, being from the East—the dominant bed of Divisions II and III activities—he was the spokesman for a lot of smaller schools.

"To make sure that Division I and Division III each had their needs met and still be everybody's friend was a very delicate situation. He did it very well."

'Tenacious'

Whitelaw is the first to admit, however, that not everybody thought he was Superman. He regularly battled on the floor of the NCAA Convention over matters that concerned the ECAC. He felt that since the ECAC made up more than one-fourth of the NCAA membership, its opinions should be heard and understood.

Though he did refrain from reverting to childhood and getting into fistfights over the issues, he didn't back down. "He was one tenacious individual," Toner said. "I don't believe he ever gave up on a project."

After the battles, though, was when Whitelaw was at his best. "When attending NCAA Conventions," he said, "I enjoyed debating issues on the Convention floor, but I also enjoyed visiting with delegates after the business sessions, gaining greater insight into their positions and attitudes."

The ECAC is sort of a mini-NCAA with four basic components: a service bureau for publicity of members' programs, championships, legislative services and games-official assignments. Most ECAC members belong to playing conferences and single-sport conferences, in addition to belonging to the ECAC. There are three divisions, each with its own set of problems and agendas.

Federation

Around the time that Whitelaw became commissioner (in 1972), the ECAC was being challenged by its membership about small colleges voting on issues that had no bearing upon them. Nonfootball schools were voting on football issues. Bigger schools were shouldering much of the financial burden for the smaller schools.

For example, when Syracuse University, Providence College and St. John's University (New York) were selected for the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship, the conference received 20 percent of the revenue. "It helped us immensely financially," Whitelaw said, "but it opened a whole other set of issues for the conference to wrestle with."

Under Whitelaw's direction in the early 1970s, the ECAC instituted a plan called the "compatibility concept" in which the ECAC was broken into three divisions. Membership on the conference's executive council and dues were predicated upon institutions' division membership. Conference federation occurred in the ECAC before the NCAA, although Whitelaw acknowledges that it would not have been successful had the NCAA not been contemplating a similar type of membership structure.

"I think many of our leaders who were on the NCAA Council or Executive Committee were instrumental in providing first-hand knowledge of the ECAC's pioneering effort," he said.

One of the offshoots of federation was the eventual formation of East Coast versions of super conferences. For example, the Big East was made up of the upper echelon of the ECAC basketball structure. Yet all the original members of the Big East still belong to the ECAC.

Responded to needs

"It was the aim of the ECAC to respond to the needs of the colleges," Whitelaw said. "We couldn't do everything they wanted, but we could provide a variety of services that more than paid for their membership dues."

Chapman agrees. "Our conference, because of its size and the nature of change in the NCAA, had to stay in touch with these changes and keep a step ahead," he said. "Because we had a different focus, we were able to stay active and grow."

The conference was not hurt by Whitelaw's personality. Anyone who might question his popularity need only look back to Whitelaw's retirement dinner, which was attended by more than 600 people. "Scotty was a pretty open person to deal with," said Chapman, who came to the ECAC in 1971 and worked under Whitelaw for 18 years. "He really delegated responsibility well. He was a pleasure to work for."

It was a matter of necessity for Whitelaw. He believed that with more than 260 colleges making up the ECAC, it was impossible for one person to run the whole show. "You have to look out and seek assistance," he said. "I had plenty of help. The magnitude of the job precluded anyone from having a hands-on approach. I was the beneficiary of many conference officials, supervisors, coaches, administrators and office support-staff members who cultivated ideas and programs that would benefit colleges in the Northeast."

Memories

One of his greatest memories was the 1964 ECAC Holiday Festival in the old Madison Square Garden, when Bill Bradley's brilliant play for Princeton University earned him the Most Valuable Player award, although the Tigers lost in the semifinals to all-American Cazzie Russell and the University of Michigan. "His all-around play kept the whole crowd on the edge of their seats," he said. "Another favorite memory was watching Harvard win the NCAA ice hockey championship in my final year (as commissioner). That was a big thrill."

Today, Whitelaw gets his thrills much the same way many of his retired colleagues do—playing golf. In fact, considering all of the movement and growth he experienced in his years in college athletics, ask him about the biggest move of his successful career and he will tell you: "One of the biggest blessings of relocating the ECAC offices to Cape Cod was that Hyannisport Golf Club is just two miles away. I went from a 22 handicap to a 10 in about 18 months. The golf course was just too accessible."

Visitors Center update

The NCAA Visitors Center begins year three of its operation with a new multi-image presentation in its theater and two new exhibits.

The multi-image presentation—"...More than a Game"—had its premier showing at a Kansas City-area civic reception November 19. The 12-minute slide and video show in the Center's theater was produced by Bonneville Communications of Salt Lake City and features several former NCAA student-athletes who have gone on to distinguished careers.

Four 1992 NCAA Silver Anniversary honorees—Alan Page, Floyd Little, Jim Lynch and R. Malcolm Graham—are featured in the presentation along with five-time Olympian Willye White. The show will continue to be the highlight attraction in the theater throughout the remainder of the academic year.

New exhibits on display

The newest photographic exhibition in the Center's gallery is a display of current and former NCAA Olympians. The photographs, taken by ALLSPORT, feature USA Olympic team members in the '92 Games in Barcelona, Spain. Included among the photographs are gold medal winners Quincy Watts of the University of Southern California and swimmers Mike Barrowman of the University of Michigan and Summer Sanders of Stanford University.

ALLSPORT, an international photo agency, is the official photo agency of the Center and covers all of the Association's 79 championships in the three divisions.

The newest exhibit in the Center features the football used in the kickoff of the black college football centennial game between Johnson C. Smith University and Livingstone College. The game, played October 17, commemorated the 100th anniversary of the first black college football game—between these same two institutions in 1872. The football used for the '92 kickoff is on display with a game program and a photograph from the centennial contest.

The newest photography exhibition in the NCAA Visitors Center displays photos of current and former NCAA Olympians, including 1992 Olympic team members Suzy Favor, a middle-distance runner from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and swimmer Mike Barrowman of the University of Michigan, who won the gold medal in the 200 meter breaststroke.

A direct approach to better academics

By Lou Campanelli

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, BERKELEY

In light of some of the changes that have been made as a result of the NCAA reform movement, I feel strongly about two ideas that I believe would be in the best interests of the student-athlete.

I personally do not believe, and I think my colleagues across the country share the same feeling, that delaying the start of basketball practice until November 1 and reducing the preseason from four to six weeks will have much academic or social effect on our student-athletes.

Campanelli

I believe there are better ways to benefit the athletes—ways that would have a significant impact on the success of student-athletes and would improve graduation rates.

No. 1 is making freshmen ineligible and getting them out of the spotlight their first year while allowing them to get focused academically. This would give them a chance to mature and be regular students for one year while making the social adjustment to college.

Regarding competition, they could play a watered-down freshman schedule of 12 to 14 games with limited travel or they could practice with the varsity on a limited basis and not play any games.

That would send a message to high-school kids that academics are important and that we are going to assist them in succeeding in that area. They would have an opportunity to come in and just be students and not have to worry about getting ready to play top-flight competition right away.

Making freshmen ineligible would give them an opportunity to really be students. It would make that first year one in which they could get their feet on the ground and develop confidence.

No. 2 is making basketball a true second-semester sport. If we're going to have only a month of practice, let it commence December 1 and let the opening games begin January 2 or 3 after the football bowl games. That way, both football and basketball would be single-semester sports. No basket-

Colleges vital to water polo future

By Bruce Wigo
U.S. WATER POLO

We all know how important the Olympics are in terms of prestige and increased visibility for our sport. And in the Olympic year, it is easy to overlook the importance of the National Collegiate Water Polo Championship.

College varsity programs are important to American water polo because they are the training ground for our future Olympians. Each year, NCAA programs train more than 1,500 athletes, and since 1972, every U.S. Olympian has honed his skills in an NCAA varsity program.

But that's just the tip of the iceberg. Consider the value of collegiate facilities, the salaries of coaches and training, tournament and transportation expenses, scholarships, and media exposure. Also, consider the influence the NCAA has on the number and quality of high-school players and the caliber of their play.

Unfortunately, we face the very real possibility of losing varsity college water polo programs.

Why? Because athletics directors and administrators across the country believe that there is not enough interest in water polo to justify the expense of a varsity program.

This certainly is not the case at the University of California, Los Angeles; the University of California, Irvine, and California State University, Fresno, where vocal supporters saved water polo from the chopping block.

Certainly, our membership records don't show a lack of interest in water polo. We've grown almost 20 percent this year. But unless the NCAA changes its rules or we add 10 programs by 1993, there will be no NCAA championship in 1994.

The loss of the NCAA championship would be tragic, not just because of its value to U.S. Water Polo but because it is one of the most exciting and entertaining sporting events in college sports.

The level of play is world-class, and the competition is fantastic. Consider that the last four championships were won by a single goal and that four times since 1969 the winner has been crowned after triple-overtime games.

Bruce Wigo is executive director of U.S. Water Polo. This article first appeared in Water Polo Scoreboard, the official publication of USWP.

□ Opinions

Coaches missed reform opportunity

Editorial

The Kansas City Star

"College athletics coaches—from football to basketball to baseball and other sports—are whining about new rules imposed on them by university presidents who are aghast at the state of sports on their campuses.

"The new restrictions make good sense. Reductions in scholarships, practice sessions and assistants have been too long in coming. Someone had to act to get control of college athletics. The presidents have at least made a stab at it.

"The coaches don't like anyone messing with their domination of the lives of their young men and women. These coaches want the students to sleep, eat and breathe the sport of (fill in the blank).

"These complainers have blown many chances to run good, clean programs around the country. The university presidents, not to mention many other people, are tired of making excuses for the sorry state of college athletics."

Changing eras in football

Johnny Majors, football coach
University of Tennessee, Knoxville

The Washington Post

Comparing college football in the 1950s with current attitudes toward the game:

"Oh, sure, there was pressure, but as an athlete you never really noticed that. I remember the feeling of walking into (Neyland) stadium—it was much smaller back then, but there was still a lot of noise—and how everyone was your friend. When you're the head coach at a place like this, they all love you when you're winning, and they'd all like to fire you after every loss."

Bill Curry, football coach
University of Kentucky

The Washington Post

"There's just so much more scrutiny, the dragging in of people's private lives. They didn't write bad things about Bear Bryant or Bobby Dodd. Now, personal lives are part of the territory.

"The day of the coach on a pedestal is pretty much over. Joe Paterno may be the only one left, and I know he's not comfortable with it."

Women's gymnastics

Aurelia Nativ, coauthor
"The Female Triad: Disordered Eating, Amenorrhea and Osteoporosis"

Chicago Tribune

"Of all athletes, gymnasts are the most vulnerable. These girls are at a stage of development that is critical to both their health as adolescents and their health as women. Right in the middle of a growth spurt, their bodies come under unusual biomechanical stresses that are more designed for monkeys.

"We see ulnar (arm bone) variance problems, growth-plate problems, chronic spinal problems and bone-density problems. I believe all of them are related to the young age of the athletes."

Lyle Micheli, pediatric orthopedist
Harvard University Medical School

Chicago Tribune

"Gymnastics is the football of girls' sports. This is a tough sport, and it has reached a point where it has gotten too tough."

Athletes as students

Steve Wilson, football coach
Howard University

The Washington Post

"From Day One here, we teach players to be nonathletes. Of course I'd love to see some of my players have a shot at the NFL, and they will. But now that my playing career is over, I've come to understand that there's only one thing you've got to look forward to as an athlete, and that is being an ex-athlete....

"Some recruits will ask, 'Do you serve steak every day?' I tell them, 'No, but if you do well here, you can get to the point in life where you buy steak every day for yourself.'"

Freshman eligibility

Lon Kruger, men's basketball coach
University of Florida

The Orlando Sentinel

"There's no question that having freshmen who can come in and play can help a coach rebuild. But I actually liked it better when they couldn't play. Freshmen came in, got used to what it means to be a college student-athlete. They played on a freshman team with a limited schedule—12 or 16 games—and practiced every day. But they weren't really on the road, and there wasn't any pressure to perform.

"But it would be difficult not to have freshmen play and only have 13 scholarships. Something would have to change."

John Chaney, men's basketball coach
Temple University

The Orlando Sentinel

"All things being equal, I sort of would like to see freshmen be ineligible. But there's a financial consideration because you're talking about carrying a youngster for five years now instead of four. We do that now, but what you would do is give them four years to participate but five years to graduate. That is one thought.

"But schools that need to gain an entry to big-time athletics and need to gain a spotlight right away and to try to get a piece of the large pool of money out there, they go out and recruit a marquee freshman, and they face a big question."

Arkansas' depth, as displayed here by (from left) Frank Hanley, Niall Bruton and David Welsh, helped the Razorbacks win the Division I Men's Cross Country Championships team title.

Arkansas men take third straight title

Arkansas continued its mastery of the NCAA Division I Men's Cross Country Championships, winning its third consecutive team title November 23 at Indiana.

The Razorbacks, who have claimed six of the past nine team titles, scored 46 points to easily outdistance runner-up Wisconsin, which totaled 87 points. Arkansas' point total is the lowest total by a champion since 1981, when UTEP scored 17 to win. (See results, page 6.)

The victory also gave Razorbacks coach John McDonnell his NCAA championships-record-tying 17th crown. McDonnell has now claimed six cross country, nine indoor track and two outdoor track titles as a coach. Former UTEP coach Ted Banks also won 17 team titles during his career.

Depth, the trademark of past Arkansas teams, once again was the primary factor in the Razorbacks' title run. Led by David Welsh, who finished fifth in 31 minutes, 9.8 seconds, Arkansas placed four runners among the top 15 finishers. Joining Welsh in that group were Michael Morin (11th), Frank Hanley (13th) and Jason Bunston (15th). Seventeen seconds is all that separated the four.

While Arkansas cruised in the team competition, Indiana senior Bob Kennedy dominated the individual race to win his second title. Competing at home, Kennedy, who also won the event as a freshman, cruised to a course-record time of 30:15.3 on the 10,000-meter layout. His time was nearly 41 seconds better than runner-up Gary Stolz of Stanford.

New practice date not best solution ball player would have to worry about taking final exams and playing games at the same time.

Another alternative might be to start practice around Thanksgiving and the season right after Christmas. That would accommodate the existing holiday tournaments, which then would be played to open the season.

The Final Four would be pushed back to the first weekend of May, instead of April. Everybody would then be finished playing before spring exams, regardless of whether their schools were on the semester or quarter system.

These proposals make sense to me in terms of what is best for the student-athlete. If we're really serious about doing something that is going to have an impact on the academic success of our student-athletes, we need proposals such as these. Delaying the start of practice two weeks is not nearly enough.

California nabs 10th water polo crown

It took longer than usual, but the 1992 National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship ended just as it has the previous two years—with California claiming the trophy, this time by a 12-11 score in sudden-death overtime November 29 over Stanford.

After 28 minutes of regulation play at Belmont Plaza Olympic Pool in Long Beach, California, ended at 11-11, two scoreless five-minute overtime periods forced the sudden-death period. California's Dirk Zeien, who garnered tournament most-outstanding-player honors, ended the contest with his fifth goal of the game.

Zeien's score gave the undefeated Golden Bears their 10th championship overall and seventh in the last 10 years. The championship was coach Steve Heaston's third.

California's Troy Barnhart added four goals for the Golden Bears. Stanford, which finished with a 22-6 record, was led by Chip Blankenhorn, who scored three goals, and Frank Schneider, who scored twice in the final 4:49 of regulation. Those goals forced the first overtime championship game since 1985, when Stanford beat UC Irvine, 12-11.

The victory enabled California, which finished 31-0, to become the first undefeated champion since 1986, when Stanford went 36-0. California's win also was its 44th straight, dating to last season.

Zeien, Barnhart and Blankenhorn were joined on the all-tournament team by California's Chris Oeding, Stanford's Larry Bercutt, Southern California's Danny Lyons and UC Irvine's Steve Gill.

First round: California 15, Navy 2; UC Irvine 11, Pepperdine 8; Stanford 18, Princeton 5; Southern Cal 16, UC San Diego 7.
Consolation semifinals: Pepperdine 19, Navy 8; UC San Diego 14, Princeton 9.
Semifinals: California 8, UC Irvine 5; Stanford 11, Southern Cal 7.
Seventh place: Navy 14, Princeton 9.
Fifth place: Pepperdine 14, UC San Diego 9.
Third place: Southern Cal 11, UC Irvine 10.

Villanova sweeps I meet

At the last three NCAA Division I Women's Cross Country Championships, Villanova ran off with both the team and individual titles. Things were no different this year.

Villanova held off challenges from Arkansas and Georgetown in the team competition and Carole Zajac captured the individual race as Villanova won its fourth consecutive team and individual crowns November 23 at Indiana. (See results, page 6.)

Led by Zajac and Nnenna Lynch, who finished third, the Wildcats totaled 123 points to edge Arkansas (130) and Georgetown (131). The seven-point margin of victory was the closest championships finish since 1987, when Oregon clipped North Carolina State by two points (97 to 99).

Villanova's point total was the highest in the championships' 12-year history. Villanova had won its previous three titles by margins of 69, 90 and 83 points, respectively.

Zajac, runner-up at the 1991 championships, extended Villanova's dominance in the individual race by covering the 5,000-meter course in 17 minutes, 1.9 seconds. The time was nearly 11 seconds better than runner-up Deena Drossin of Arkansas.

Villanova's Carole Zajac cruised to the individual title in the Division I Women's Cross Country Championships in 17 minutes, 1.9 seconds, nearly 11 seconds faster than her closest competitor. Zajac and teammate Nnenna Lynch, who finished third, were instrumental in the Wildcats winning the team title for the fourth straight year. Villanova edged Arkansas by seven points, the smallest margin of victory since 1987.

Lifting weights helps vertical jump

Lifting weights can help a basketball player get up, up, and a weigh.

Weight training builds leg strength, which translates into power for the vertical jump, Sonny Falcone, strength and conditioning coach at Duke University, told The Associated Press.

And what works for the NCAA Division I men's basketball champion Blue Devils also works with high-school kids, coaches say.

"We get anywhere from an inch to three inches average (higher jumps) over a four-year period," said George Griffith, head basketball coach of the Indiana state-champion Richmond High School Red Devils, who use weight training extensively for their legs.

Some of the greater jumps may simply result from maturing bodies, but the rest is clearly from weight training, Griffith said. "A young man who has not been in the program may be at 25 or 26 (inches) when our kids are at 27 to 28," he said.

In light of these results, coaches and trainers try to get their athletes doing lots of squats and other leg exercises before and after the season. During the season, players do this less, however, so muscles can recover before a game.

To build explosive power, the goal is to make a lift simulate a jump—a move that pushes up fast.

NYSP at Texas A&M receives honor

The National Youth Sports Program offered at Texas A&M University recently was honored in a statewide program honoring outstanding community service.

The honor was presented during the first "Lone Star Showcase and Salute to Community Service" in early October in San Antonio. The Texas A&M program, which recently completed its fourth year, is one of 140 nationally for which the NCAA administers funding.

Texas A&M donates more than $100,000 in facilities and services for its NYSP program, which provides activities for economically underprivileged children ages 10 to 16. More than 1,200 youths from the area around the university have participated since the program began.

ON STARTING NCAA RIFLE TEAMS

NCAA Rifle: You Can Be A Part

is a free video available to athletic directors interested in adding a low-cost NCAA-level sport to their program slate.

The video is produced by West Virginia University and the U.S. Shooting Team. Especially useful for viewers not familiar with rifle shooting, the video is a fine introduction to demands of the sport as well as to the steps in getting a program off the ground. Considerations such as cost, facilities/space needs, finding coaches, recruiting, equipment, transportation and other aspects of starting a rifle team are all covered. The video is available in VHS format only. To obtain your free copy, call (304) 296-1343, or write: Marsha Beasley, WVU Rifle Coach, P.O. Box 877, Morgantown, WV 26507.

1992 Column No. 42

Bylaw 30.10.5-(e)-(1)

Division I football—dead period during the American Football Coaches Association convention

NCAA Division I institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 30.10.5-(e)-(1), a dead period exists during the American Football Coaches Association's convention scheduled for January 4 through 6, 1993. Thus, from January 7, 1993, through February 3, 1993, a contact period would be in effect. Therefore, it is important to note that the 1992-93 NCAA Manual (Figure 13-5), the Coaches Recruiting Guide (Division I—football) and the Guide to Recruiting incorrectly indicate that the American Football Coaches Association's convention is from January 4 through 7, 1993.

Bylaw 17.02.12.1

Out-of-season practice—physical education class

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 17.02.12.1, practice is considered to have occurred if one or more coaches and one or more student-athletes engage in activities conducted under the guise of physical education class work (e.g., any class composed of or including primarily members of an intercollegiate team on a required attendance basis or where the class uses equipment for the sport). Please note that during its September 17, 1991, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a student-athlete's enrollment and participation in a regular physical education class that uses equipment in the student-athlete's sport is not considered to be a countable athletically related activity, provided the class is part of the institution's regular academic offering and the student-athlete does not participate in practice activities under the guise of physical education class work (i.e., the student-athlete participates in normal class activities as outlined by the instructor for all students).

Precollege expenses—financial assistance to prospects

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.16.1, an institution or a representative of its athletics interests may not offer, provide or arrange financial assistance, directly or indirectly, to pay (in whole or in part) the costs of the prospect's educational or other expenses for any period before his or her enrollment or so the prospect can obtain a postgraduate education. Further, per Bylaw 13.16.1.2, an institution may not provide funding, directly or through paid advertisements, to benefit a high-school athletics program. Please note that during its June 6, 1991, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that institutions may not donate institutional memorabilia (e.g., jerseys, hats, T-shirts) to any organization for purposes of being auctioned to raise funds to provide financial assistance to high-school students.

Finally, Bylaw 13.16.1.2.1 permits a representative of an institution's athletics interests to provide funding to benefit a high-school athletics program located in the community in which the athletics representative resides, provided: (1) the representative acts independently of the institution; (2) the funds are distributed through channels established by the high school or the organization conducting the fund-raising activity, and (3) the funds are not earmarked directly for a specific prospective student-athlete.

Proposals

Amendment seeks to make retroactive the change in ACT minimum score requirement

athletics eligibility in Divisions I and II.

The Council made the change effective for student-athletes first entering member institutions in the fall term of 1992. It was made in response to a recommendation by the American College Testing Program, which advised the Association that a score of 17, rather than 18, is most concordant with the score of 700 on the SAT. The change, however, was not made retroactive for student-athletes who entered institutions between October 1989, when ACT introduced its current test, and August 1, 1992.

Proposal No. 69, sponsored by 19 Division I members, would overturn the Council's decision not to make the change retroactive. The Council is opposing the amendment on grounds of maintaining competitive equity—to make the score retroactive could place at a disadvantage institutions that already have made recruiting decisions based on use of the previous minimum score.

The Council also is opposing a proposal in the eligibility grouping that would eliminate restrictions on outside competition in Division II once a playing season has ended, for sports other than basketball. The sponsors argue that permitting such competition is a means of compensating for limited funding at institutions for those sports.

Despite those positions, the Council favors most of 13 proposals in the eligibility grouping, having announced its support for one and serving as primary sponsor of seven others (although one of the sponsored amendments—Proposal No. 80, permitting a two-year college transfer to be eligible during the same academic year for competition at a Division II institution—will be withdrawn).

The only proposal opposed by the Council in the personnel grouping would permit all three full-time Division I men's and women's basketball coaches to recruit off campus during the summer evaluation period. The amendment also is opposed by the Presidents Commission.

The Council is sponsoring five of nine proposals in the personnel grouping, including an amendment that would permit athletics department staff members to participate in enhancement programs administered by professional sports organizations and also to accept compensation and expenses through such programs. The proposal was prompted by opportunities available to minority coaches to participate in a program administered by the National Football League.

Others

Other notable proposals include a series of amendments in the personnel grouping that further define limitations on the position of restricted-earnings coach. One of the proposals, sponsored by the Council, would include in limitations on earnings compensation from any employment of a restricted-earnings coach by a representative of an institution's athletics interests and any other athletically related compensation.

Also proposed is a pair of amendments that would prohibit athletics staff members from endorsing, writing for or receiving pay from an outside publication that reports solely on one institution's athletics activities, and from serving as a consultant or adviser to a recruiting or scouting service.

In the eligibility grouping, there is a series of proposals dealing with consequences for student-athletes of the elimination of most forms of multidivision classification by the Association.

Also included in that grouping is a proposal that would cause student-athletes who are declared ineligible as the result of a positive test for a banned drug to lose at least one season of competition or its equivalent.

Another proposal would permit the Eligibility Committee to grant an additional season of competition in situations where a student-athlete erroneously has been certified eligible for competition.
