Certifiable calm expected at annual Convention

The "reform agenda" will continue at the NCAA's 87th annual Convention January 12-16 in Dallas, but a relatively tame session is expected.

While legislation sponsored by the NCAA Presidents Commission and the Council will attempt to establish a mandatory athletics certification program in Division I and to take significant steps to stabilize the Association's rule-making process, those proposals have stirred very little controversy and appear headed for adoption.

The only likely confrontation of any note is in the opposition by the Commission and the Council to a series of proposals that would weaken or rescind several of the reform actions taken at the last three NCAA Conventions. Few of those proposals are expected to gain much support in light of the firm opposition from the organization's two most powerful entities.

The lack of a major contested issue at the Convention would seem to be the reason that attendance is expected to be down slightly. It is not likely to challenge the Convention attendance record of 2,366 set in 1991 in Nashville, Tennessee.

As of December 31, a total of 2,134 persons had preregistered, 108 fewer than on a comparable date a year ago. Last year, 2,242 had preregistered in late December, and the actual attendance was 2,282, the second highest ever. It would appear that this year's at-

- What's new: Presidential Agenda Day, which marks the first time a single day (Thursday, January 14) has been set aside exclusively for the legislation deemed by the NCAA Presidents Commission to be of particular interest to chief executive officers. Also, registration fees have been increased.

Four to join Commission

Four new members will join the NCAA Presidents Commission when the 1993 Convention adjourns, and seven current members have been reelected to full, four-year terms.

The new and reelected members were chosen in a mail election procedure by their peers at NCAA institutions in the respective membership divisions, except that three of the reelected members were so designated by their Division I-A conferences.

Reelections are permitted when an individual completes the term of a member who has left the Commission and the time served in so doing is less than half of a four-year term.

Publication of the election results in this issue of The NCAA News constitutes notification of the election to the membership.

The other 33 Commission members continue their terms in 1993. Results of the election process:

Clearinghouse close to becoming a reality

In 1991, a majority of Divisions I and II institutions said in a survey that they wanted the NCAA to establish a clearinghouse that would certify the initial eligibility of prospective student-athletes.

Now, little more than a year later, those institutions are being given an opportunity to make the clearinghouse a reality with the adoption of Proposal No. 17 at the NCAA Convention in Dallas.

The proposal, sponsored by the NCAA Council and supported by the Presidents Commission and Executive Committee, asks delegates to approve an operation designed to decrease significantly the duplication of paperwork required from testing agencies, high-school counselors and campus administrators and to improve the credibility of initial-eligibility certification—all at a cost to the Association expected to be comparable to what member institutions currently pay on average to certify a prospect.

It is estimated that anywhere from 70,000 to 110,000 certifications would be handled annually by the clearinghouse at a cost of approximately $23 per prospective student-athlete—and that $15 to $18 of that amount would be paid by the prospect. Needy prospective student-athletes who might have trouble paying that fee will be able to apply for a waiver, using the same form currently used to obtain a waiver of the fee for an ACT or SAT examination.

Meanwhile, the Association would pay an estimated $500,000 per year for the certification of all prospective student-athletes—including walk-ons—in Divisions I and II.

"This equates to approximately $1,000 for each member institution in Divisions I and II and appears to compare favorably to what most

Student-athlete welfare

First meeting scheduled for special committee

The first meeting of the Special NCAA Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity has been scheduled for February 4-5 in Dallas.

Student-athlete welfare is the primary topic for the third year of the Commission's strategic plan.

James D. McComas, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and a member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, will chair the special committee.

The timetable calls for the special committee to have legislation for the 1995 Convention.

For more detail, see the November 9 issue of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: February 4-5 in Dallas.

Certification

NCAA, Southern Association near working agreement

The athletics certification package — Proposal No. 15 in the Official Notice — will be voted upon at the Convention.

In December, the Executive Council of the Southern Association endorsed a working agreement between the Southern Association and the NCAA that will minimize duplication between regional accreditation and athletics certification. The NCAA Council and Presidents Commission are expected to ratify the agreement at their Convention meetings.

For more detail, see the December 16, December 7 and November 23 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: None scheduled. A Committee on Athletics Certification will be created if approved in Proposal No. 15.

Gender equity

Task force supports six Convention proposals

The NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force has voted to support six pieces of legislation that will be considered at the NCAA Convention January 12-16. They are Nos.

At its last meeting, November 9, the task force also agreed that an institution's commitment to equity (as contained in Proposal No. 15) should be part of any athletics certification process; however, the task force did not take a position on certification itself.

Task force co-chairs Phyllis L. Howlett, Big Ten Conference, and James J. Whalen, Ithaca College, will report on the work of the task force at the opening business session of the Convention January 13 and will answer questions as time permits at the general business session January 14.

For more detail, see the November 16, November 2 and October 12 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: January 19-20, Palm Springs, California.

Championships

Members to respond to proposed plan

A detailed description of the NCAA Executive Committee's proposal to enhance the Association's championships program will be mailed to the Division I membership January 11. An April 1 deadline has been set for responses.

Divisions II and III members will have the opportunity to discuss the plan during their business sessions at the Convention.

The Executive Committee has proposed extensive changes in the program. The plan would base field sizes on sponsorship and would deemphasize the revenue potential of a championship. Per diem, traveling parties and committee structure also would be affected.

After reviewing the response from the membership, the Executive Committee hopes to approve a final plan at its May meeting.

For more detail, see the December 16, November 30 and October 26 issues of The NCAA News.

Next Executive Committee meeting: May 3-6, Monterey, California.

Finances

Financial conditions panel to provide concepts

A list of 17 "legislative concepts" has been developed by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics. That list will be forwarded to the membership for review sometime this month.

The special committee also has established a subcommittee to develop a proposal to modify the NCAA division structure to afford Divisions I and II institutions greater flexibility in their athletics programs. That proposal also would be submitted to the membership for its reaction.

For more detail, see the December 23 and November 9 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: February 10-11 in Chicago.

HIV

Blood-borne treatment guidelines mailed

Guidelines for treating blood on uniforms and equipment were mailed to athletics directors and trainers at NCAA member institutions in December.

The guidelines, which were developed by the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, represent the latest in a series of efforts dating back to 1988 to provide guidance to the membership on the issue of blood-borne pathogens.

The Men's and Women's Basketball Rules Committees and the Wrestling Committee have issued rules interpretations to implement the guidelines in those sports.

For more detail, see the December 30 issue of The NCAA News.

Next competitive-safeguards committee meeting: February 8-10 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Graduation-rates reporting deadline moved up

In the absence of Federal rules for reporting graduation rates under the Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act, the NCAA has set new reporting dates that will enable the Association to compile data in time to meet the act's July 1, 1993, deadline.

The Association's reporting deadline for Division I, which previously was July 1, has been moved up to March 31, while the deadline for all Divisions II and III institutions, which will report data officially for the first time, has been moved up from July 1 to June 15.

"The change in deadlines is necessary because the Department of Education has not issued final regulations for the implementation of the Student Right-to-Know Act, and as a result, the Association has been unable to establish the status of its request for a waiver of substantial comparability," said N. Bea Pray, NCAA compliance representative and a staff liaison to the Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24.

The new deadlines will permit the Association to compile and provide the education department with required data for all Division

I institutions, all Division II institutions that award athletics aid and all Division III institutions that use multidivision classification and award athletics aid.

Rules delayed

The act, which became law in 1990, sets a July 1, 1993, deadline for the first report of graduation rates and other pertinent academic data to the Department of Education by institutions that award athletics aid. However, the education department has not yet been able to finalize regulations for reporting data—a process that probably has been delayed even further by the pending change of administrations in the White House.

It appears that those regulations must be established before the NCAA can seek a waiver of substantial comparability. Under the act, such a waiver can be granted by the secretary of education if the Association's reporting guidelines are "substantially comparable" to those established by the department. The waiver would permit NCAA institutions to report the required data to the Association, rather than to the Federal government.

With authorization from the Council, the special advisory committee waited until December 1 for final guidelines to be issued, then implemented the earlier reporting deadlines for 1993.

Those deadlines give Division I institutions two months to complete and return reporting forms to the NCAA national office.

Guard shows true grit

Harvard University women's basketball player Kelly Morrison is double-teamed every time she steps on a basketball court.

The 20-year-old starting point guard not only battles her on-court foe, but the effects of Hodgkin's disease as well. It has now been more than two years since she was diagnosed with the illness.

"(College) was really hard the first semester I was here," the Claremont, North Carolina, native told the Boston Herald. "I was here trying to get my health back to normal. I was tired a lot. But people were very supportive. It certainly gives me a better perspective on things."

Hodgkin's is a chronic disease with an unknown cause that is characterized by progressive enlargement of the lymph nodes and inflammation of other lymphoid tissues.

Morrison's courage has impressed Harvard women's coach Kathy Delaney Smith.

"She's done a great job," Smith said of Morrison, who was diagnosed while a senior in high school. "When we were recruiting her, she found out that she had the disease. The treatment and the radiation began before she arrived here. For any high-school player to make the transition to Division I, that's a tough enough transition, but to do it having finished chemotherapy and not knowing your status, you have to be an exceptionally strong person."

Antitobacco policy

The Ohio Valley Conference has joined the ranks of collegiate conferences that have adopted league-wide bans on the use of tobacco products at conference events.

The Ohio Valley policy, which was approved unanimously, states "the use of tobacco products by all official participants, including coaches, student-athletes, game officials, trainers and managers, shall be prohibited during all organized conference sports activities."

"This is an important policy for the welfare of the student-athlete," said R. Daniel Beebe, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference. "Available information indicates some student-athletes pick up this lifelong habit while participating in sports activities. If this policy helps even a few student-athletes avoid such an addiction, it will have served its purpose."

Hockey all-star game

The American Hockey Coaches Association (AHCA) announced December 15 that the Anah Shrine Temple of Bangor, Maine, will sponsor the first annual Shrine East-West College Hockey Classic April 10.

The game will feature top college seniors and will be played at the University of Maine's Alford Arena in Orono. Net proceeds will go to Shriners Hospitals for Crippled Children. The Shrine has 19 orthopedic hospitals and three burn institutes in the United States and Canada.

"We are extremely pleased that the Shrine leaders have come forward to make this hockey showcase possible," said Joe Bertagna, AHCA executive director. "The fans will love it, the players will love it, and together we will raise some money for the children of the Shriners Hospitals."

Organizers say the first two classics will be played in Orono, and then the event will be held annually at various sites around the country.

Free-throw record

The St. Cloud State University and California State University, Los Angeles, women's basketball teams set an NCAA Division II women's free-throw record in their game December 17.

Both teams combined for 42 of 47 shooting at the foul line for 89.4 percent. The previous mark of 87.0 percent was set when Sacred Heart University and the University of Massachusetts at Lowell shot 47 of 54 January 19, 1991.

St. Cloud State made all of its 27 attempts and had a chance for the single-game percentage record but fell three free throws shy of the minimum 30 made.

Milestones

Messiah College soccer coach Layton Shoemaker recorded his 300th victory in 1992, his 25th year in coaching. Shoemaker, who has been at Messiah for 19 years, was recognized earlier in the year by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America for exceptional service to the sport of soccer... Dick Baldwin, men's basketball coach at State University of New York at Binghamton, registered his 900th career coaching victory November 21 against Manhattanville College. Baldwin is in just his second season at Binghamton; he recorded 879 of those victories at nearby Broome Community College.

The Williams College football program notched its 500th victory November 7 in a 28-23 come-from-behind defeat of Wesleyan University... Gordy Presnell, women's basketball coach at Seattle Pacific University, won his 100th game as coach of the Falcons with a 74-63 win over Western Washington University December 5.

Fact file

This is the fifth time that an NCAA Convention has been held in Dallas. Previously, the Association met in that city in 1951, 1984, 1987 (special Convention in June) and 1990. The 1951 gathering was at the Adolphus Hotel; the others all have been at the Loews Anatole.

Thirty-six of the Association's Conventions have been held in New York City, including 26 of the first 31 and 31 of the first 42—but none since 1968. Other sites and the number of Conventions at each: Chicago, nine; Dallas, New Orleans and St. Louis, five each; Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., four each; Cincinnati, Houston and Nashville, three each; Atlanta, Miami Beach and San Diego, two each, and one time each at Anaheim, California; Columbus, Ohio; Detroit; Hollywood, Florida; Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh.

Association sets earlier deadlines for reporting graduation-rate information received their forms last summer and ultimately will have nearly a year to complete and return them.

Key changes

Division I institutions will see several changes in the 1993 reporting form, but two are especially notable.

One revision will result in schools reporting transfer-cohort graduation rates for student-athletes, rather than refined graduation rates. That change was approved by the Council at its August 1992 meeting.

The refined rate was dropped in part because of variations among institutions in the definition of "good academic standing" and the resulting difficulty of making comparisons between schools and among students in general.

The transfer-cohort rate is based on a comparison of the number of transfer student-athletes graduating from an institution to the number who have been assigned by that institution to an entering class based on degree credits completed. Because less data will be required, institutions will find that reporting the transfer-cohort rates is simpler than compiling refined data.

The other notable revision of the 1993 form will result in schools reporting core-curriculum grade-point averages and average ACT and SAT scores of entering freshmen receiving athletically related financial aid as a three-year average, rather than by specific classes. Beginning with the 1994 form, that data will be reported as a rolling four-year average.

Approved by the Council at its October 1992 meeting, the change is expected to produce more useful and relevant information while helping preserve the privacy of academic records of individual student-athletes.

The Council also approved a recommendation that institutions no longer be required to report the number of entering student-athletes admitted to each specific school, college or department. Such information is thought to be of limited value because many institutions do not permit freshmen to select a specific program of study.

Electronic form

Meeting the earlier deadline in Division I should be simplified by the availability of an electronic form.

"An electronic version of the reporting form will be available at no charge to institutions," Pray said. "The use of the electronic form certainly will expedite completion of the reporting form."

The electronic form will be shipped automatically to all institutions that requested last year's version.

However, any individual responsible for completing the form at a member institution may request a copy of the electronic version by calling Pray at the national office.

More defined role for faculty reps

By Jerry L. Kingston
ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

The ratification by the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association of the "Statement of the Role of the Faculty Athletics Representative" culminated an effort initiated several years ago to articulate more clearly the principles and practices that form a common agenda for faculty athletics representatives at NCAA institutions.

Kingston

The statement, which was approved in fall 1992 and appears on page 16 of this issue of The NCAA News, focuses on the faculty athletics representative's role in matters related to academic integrity, compliance and the student-athlete experience; it also recognizes the administrative role of the faculty athletics representative and emphasizes the critical importance of strong institutional support for faculty athletics representative activities, both on and off the campus.

Adoption of the statement was a necessary first step toward a further refinement of purpose and structure for the FARA. Historically, faculty athletics representatives have been criticized by the American Council on Education, the American Association of University Professors, the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics and others for their failure to ensure the centrality of academic values in the conduct of intercollegiate athletics programs.

A Harris poll commissioned by the Knight Commission revealed that more than three-fourths of the faculty athletics representatives themselves believed that the academic mission of our colleges and universities has not been given appropriate priority in universities with "big-time" athletics programs.

These and related concerns have resulted in the creation of special faculty committees on a number of our campuses to evaluate the conduct of intercollegiate athletics programs and to reexamine the relationship of

Athletics only a means in life

In Roosevelt's mind, play was desirable, up to a point

The following is taken from an address delivered at the Harvard Union by Theodore Roosevelt:

"Our chief interest should not lie in the great champions in sport. On the contrary, our concern should be first of all to widen the base, the foundation in athletic sports; to encourage in every way a healthy rivalry which shall give to the largest possible number of students the chance to take part in vigorous outdoor games. It is of far more importance that a man shall play something himself, even if he plays it badly, than that he shall go with hundreds of companions to see someone else play well, and it is not healthy for either students or athletes if the teams are mutually exclusive. But even having this aim especially in view, it seems to me we can best attain it by giving proper encouragement to the champions in sports, and this can only be done by encouraging intercollegiate contests.

"As I emphatically disbelieve in seeing Harvard or any other college turn out mollycoddles instead of vigorous men, I may add that I do not in the least object to a sport because it is rough. Rowing, baseball, lacrosse, track and field games, hockey, football, all of them are good....

"If necessary, let the college authorities interfere to stop any excess or perversion, making their interference as little officious as possible, and yet as rigorous as is necessary to achieve the end. There is no justification for stopping a thoroughly manly sport because it is sometimes abused when the experience of every good preparatory school shows that the abuse is in no shape necessarily attendant upon the game.

"We cannot afford to turn out of college men who shrink from physical effort or from a little physical pain. In any republic, courage is a prime necessity for the average citizen if he is to be a good citizen; and he needs physical courage no less than moral courage, the courage that dares as well as the courage that endures, the courage that will fight valiantly alike against the foe of the soul and the foes of the body. Athletics are good, especially in their rougher forms, because they tend to develop such courage. They are good also because they encourage a true democratic spirit, for in the athletic field, the man must be judged not with reference to outside and accidental attributes but by that combination of bodily vigor and moral quality which go to make up prowess.

"I trust that I need not add that in defending athletics I would not for one moment be understood as excusing that perversion of athletics which would make it the end of life instead of merely a means in life. It is first-class healthful play and is useful as such. But play is not business, and it is a very poor business indeed for a college man to learn about nothing but sport.

"There are exceptional cases which I do not need to consider; but disregarding these, I cannot with sufficient emphasis say that when you get through college, you will do badly unless you turn your attention to the serious work of life with a devotion which will render it impossible for you to pay much heed to sport in the way in which it is perfectly proper for you to pay heed while in college.

"Play while you play and work while you work, and though play is a mighty good thing, remember that you had better never play at all than to get into a condition of mind where you regard play as the serious business of life, or where you permit it to hamper and interfere with your doing your full duty in the real work of the world."

It takes more than just potential to be a great athlete or a great student. It takes unyielding determination. And endless hours of practice. One of these athletes will be selected, on January 14, to receive the Honda-Broderick Cup at the 16th Anniversary Collegiate Woman Athlete of the Year banquet in Dallas, Texas.

In addition to the awards presentation, American Honda will make a contribution to the general scholarship fund of each athlete's university. So next year another student will have the chance to create a path of her own.

1992: The year in review

JANUARY

■ Attendance reports for the 1991 football season show that attendance in Division I-A reached a six-year high but was down in all other divisions. Even so, 1991 attendance was the third-highest ever.

5-6—The NCAA Council votes not to reconsider an earlier action regarding the adjustment from 18 to 17 in the minimum ACT score required for initial athletics eligibility.

6—High-school athletics officials meeting at the National Federation of State High School Associations convention in New Orleans express concern that forcing heightened academic goals on high-school athletes may diminish, rather than enhance, their education.

7-10—NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz tells the 86th annual Convention at Anaheim, California, that four dominant pressures face the Association, and the NCAA's future may depend upon how the membership reacts to them. In his annual "State of the Association" address, Schultz identifies the four pressures as perceptions of the NCAA, politics, finances and reform. "You are what you are perceived to be," Schultz says, "and we are perceived by the general public and even by our faculties and staffs as not doing a good job of controlling our programs."

Rex E. Lee, chair of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Procedures, acknowledges that many members appear apprehensive about the committee's proposal for the Association to conduct open evidentiary hearings in infractions cases.

The reform agenda of the NCAA Presidents Commission passes with little dissent at the Convention. By a count of 312-6 (with one abstention), Division I votes to raise the number of core courses required of high-school athletes from 11 to 13. Also, an initial-eligibility index is debated vigorously but still passes, 249-72-5.

The Convention attracts 2,289 delegates, visitors and media representatives. In addition, 212 chief executive officers—the second-highest total ever—attend.

The NCAA Council approves in concept a number of changes in the Association's enforcement procedures during its post-Convention meeting. The Council authorizes the NCAA Committee on Infractions to develop several recommendations of the enforcement review committee, including a process for expedited hearings, liberalized use of tape-recorded interviews and availability of infractions-hearing transcripts to parties with standing to appeal a decision of the committee.

Jack Kemp, U.S. secretary of housing and urban development, receives the 1992 Theodore Roosevelt Award at the honors dinner.

31—Thomas J. Frericks, longtime University of Dayton athletics administrator and chair of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee, dies at the age of 59 after a two-year battle with cancer. Roy F. Kramer, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, is appointed chair for the remainder of Frericks' term, which expires September 1.

FEBRUARY

■ The Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, at the request of the Council, is instructed to monitor the Needy Student-Athlete Fund and recommend, if necessary, adjustments to that program or to NCAA financial aid limitations if it appears the funds are not sufficiently addressing unmet financial need among Division I student-athletes receiving full grants-in-aid.

11—The Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues recommends that the NCAA Executive Committee increase the academic-enhancement payment to Division I institutions to $30,000 from $25,000. Also, the committee recommends providing, on a one-year trial basis (1992-93), access to the Needy Student-Athlete Fund for student-athletes, foreign and domestic, not receiving Pell Grants, provided certain conditions are met.

16-18—The development of an athletics certification program and recent NCAA legislation affecting football recruiting are major topics of discussion at the 1992 College Football Forum.

17—The NCAA Special Committee on Certification forwards a memorandum to chief executive officers at all NCAA member institutions to update them on the status of the Association's proposed athletics certification program and to ask them to comment on recent developments. Specifically, the memorandum contains suggestions on how the program might be funded, how it would apply to each of the Association's membership divisions and when various steps in the process would be implemented.

20—Schultz leads a group that testifies in opposition of a proposed bill in Kansas that would undercut the NCAA's enforcement process and cripple the NCAA's ability to apply its rules and regulations evenly throughout the membership.

28—Ground rules are set for the NCAA's challenge of a Nevada law damaging to the Association's enforcement program.

MARCH

11—A Nevada state judge rules against players from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, who were seeking to compel the NCAA to consider their team for participation in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. The program was declared ineligible for the 1992 event as punishment in an extended infractions case involving Nevada-Las Vegas men's basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian.

11—An NCAA study that analyzes expenditures for women's and men's athletics programs is released. The findings are that while institutions of higher education have made strides to enhance competitive athletics opportunities for women since the enactment of Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, additional progress is needed to ensure gender equity.

Schultz says the study has prompted the Association to further examine its role in helping member institutions achieve gender equity in intercollegiate athletics. He announces plans for a Gender-Equity Task Force to develop recommendations on how the Association should proceed.

13—In the NCAA's suit involving the Nevada law, NCAA attorney John J. Kitchin says the Association's enforcement process cannot survive if it is forced to meet legal due process standards that vary from state to state.

17—The Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics urges Congress and state legislatures to "stand aside while college and university leaders complete the job" of reforming college sports.

29—Schultz says that the NCAA appears to be making progress in dealing with state legislatures in which so-called due process laws are pending.

MAY

■ Participation in intercollegiate athletics, while still trailing the totals of the mid-1980s, increases in 1990-91, and sports sponsorship drops slightly for men and women. That is the summary of the annual review of sports participation and sponsorship data conducted by the Committee on Review and Planning.

■ Only 0.3 percent of the 6,119 student-athletes examined in the NCAA's fall 1991 drug-testing program were ruled ineligible after failing to pass a urinalysis, continuing a trend of lower failure rates since the program was implemented in 1986.

■ Data collected for the winter 1991-92 Injury Surveillance System indicate that ice hockey continues to have a low injury rate, posting practice and game injury rates during 1991-92 below the sport's six-year average. Hockey shows a decrease of 1.2 injuries per 1,000 athlete-exposures.

1—In a restructuring move, the NCAA national office staff is organized into four functional groups instead of nine departments. Thomas W. Jernstedt, a member of the NCAA staff since 1972, is chosen as deputy executive director/chief operating officer. Group executive directors are Patricia E. Bork, championships and event management; Frank E. Marshall, administration and finance;

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and Sara N. McNabb of Indiana University, Bloomington, chair of the Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24, discuss results of a comprehensive NCAA graduation-rates study at a news conference in July. The study showed a clear similarity between graduation rates for student-athletes and for students in general.

Stephen R. Morgan, membership services, and Francis M. Canavan, public affairs.

3-5—The Executive Committee prepares for a long-range planning program involving NCAA championships.

4—ABC Sports announces a limited pay-per-view plan for college football games in fall 1992.

12-13—The NCAA Recruiting Committee supports the development of sport-specific legislation. The NCAA Legislative Review Committee had asked the Recruiting Committee to identify specific areas in Bylaw 13 that could be amended to change the blanket approach the Association takes to many recruiting rules.

JUNE

5—A Nevada law directed at undermining the NCAA enforcement process restricts the Association's ability to apply its rules consistently in all 50 states and prevents Nevada member institutions from fulfilling their contractual responsibilities with the NCAA, a federal judge rules in the NCAA's lawsuit seeking to overturn the law.

30—Robert C. Khayat, president of the NCAA Foundation since 1989, resigns.

JULY

■ Women's 1991-92 national home basketball attendance sets an all-time record for the 11th consecutive year with nearly 4.5 million spectators.

2—A comprehensive NCAA study shows a clear similarity between graduation rates for student-athletes and for

APRIL

■ The percentage of partial qualifiers in Division I changes little between 1990 and 1991, but the percentage for Division II increases sharply, according to a survey conducted by the NCAA Research Committee. The rate of overall Division I partial qualifiers remains at approximately 5.6 percent during that period, and Division II experiences a jump from 14.9 to 16.8 percent.

1-2—The Presidents Commission discusses a wide range of issues relating to intercollegiate athletics at its meeting in Dallas. "The issues that we are coming to now are the values of intercollegiate athletics—its ethical dimensions and integration with the broader university," says Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien, Presidents Commission chair.

13-15—The Council reviews the final report from the Special Committee on Certification. The report cites 10 general conclusions that the committee reached during eight meetings and three conference calls between July 1991 and March 1992.

28—Coaches representing all Division I sports meet to discuss possible legislative proposals for the 1993 NCAA Convention. The coaches meet with NCAA staff and

Dallas offers delegates plenty of diversity

Dallas isn't just for cowboys. That's why anyone attending the 87th annual NCAA Convention January 12-16 should be able to find plenty of things to see and do.

Of course, the city is well-known for its touch of country/western and a south-of-the-border flavor. After all, this is the city that is home to two-steppin', that infamous Southfork Ranch, the State Fair of Texas and tangy barbecue.

But also figuring into the mix are soaring skyscrapers, neon lights and a cosmopolitan urban scene.

In fact, this city of 1,015,944 (the eighth largest in the United States) holds plenty of bragging rights:

- It is the largest wholesale merchandise mart in the world.

- It is the third-largest film-production center in the United States.

- It has the second-largest concentration of firms related to the telecommunications industry in the United States.

- It has more shopping centers per capita than any city in the country.

And delegates to this year's Convention will be in good company. Dallas ranks as the No. 2 convention city in America.

Perhaps Dallas' biggest claim to fame is its diversity. After all, where else can one shop at elegant Neiman-Marcus one day and buy fresh fruit off a truck at Farmer's Market the next?

Or roll up those sleeves and dive into a plate of ribs at Sonny Bryan's and enjoy fine cuisine at the French Room?

Or rock 'n' roll the night away at the Hard Rock Cafe and two-step all night at Cowboys?

No, there should be no trouble finding something to do in Dallas. But here are a few suggestions:

Food

Variety is the spice of life, they say. Well, it certainly is in Dallas, which has more restaurants per capita than even New York City. You can choose from the elegant European dining experience of Cabaret Royale or the nationally recognized Dakota's, which offers seafood, aged beef and wild game.

For steak lovers, there is Morton's of Chicago, Ruth's Chris Steak House or the Trail Dust Steak House. For seafood, there's Cafe Pacific, No. 1 Pearl Street or Aw Shucks, a zany oyster bar/seafood house that features fresh-shucked oysters, fried catfish and steaming hot shrimp and crab claws.

And, of course, there's plenty of barbecue. A notable option is Sonny Bryan's Smokehouse, which has been in operation since 1910 and has served everyone from President Bush to the cast of "Dallas." Other attractions are Lenny's Ranch House and Risky's Barbecue, where the red-checked tablecloths are topped with paper towels.

Shopping

A few attractions: The Galleria, an upscale shopping center, featuring Macy's, Marshall Field's and Saks Fifth Avenue; Prestonwood Town Center, which includes Neiman-Marcus, Dillard's, J.C. Penney and Mervyn's; Neiman-Marcus, the legendary department store still located at its original downtown site; Highland Park Village, a collection of international shops and restaurants in the oldest shopping center in North America, and NorthPark Center, which has more than 150 merchants.

Special attractions

Other places of interest include:

- Dallas Museum of Art. In the Arts District, this museum displays collections from ancient to contemporary times.

- Southfork Ranch. Setting for the popular series "Dallas" and TV home of the infamous Ewing clan.

- Dallas Arboretum and Botanical Garden. Sixty-six acres of gardens and tours of the historic DeGolyer mansion.

- Dallas Zoo. More than 1,500 animals in a park-like setting.

- John F. Kennedy Memorial. Located downtown at the Dallas County Historical Plaza.

- Texas Lil's Diamond A Ranch. Cowboys, rustic setting, horseback riding and hayrides.

Year in review

students in general. The study involves Division I student-athletes first enrolled in the 1984-85 academic year. Of the 26,589 freshmen who received athletics grants-in-aid at that time, 51 percent graduated within six years, compared with 52 percent of the 1,069,683 students who enrolled at Division I institutions during that time.

9—The Gender-Equity Task Force meets for the first time and discusses a variety of specific ideas and philosophical observations forwarded to it by the membership.

AUGUST

5-7—The Council votes to sponsor the athletics certification plan at the 1993 Convention and also votes to implement changes in the enforcement program that have been agreed upon by the infractions committee and the enforcement-review committee. Those changes do not include independent hearing officers or open hearings.

12-15—The Executive Committee concludes that enhancement of the Association's championships program is a top priority and identifies a set of principles to use in working toward that goal in all three divisions.

SEPTEMBER

- Membership in the Association is at an all-time high of 1,064 active members as the 1993 fiscal year begins. The mark represents a net increase of 16 active member institutions and two affiliated organizations in the past year.

30-October 1—At its fall meeting, the Presidents Commission identifies "Integrity: sportsmanship and ethical conduct in intercollegiate athletics" as the next major topic in its rolling, three-year strategic plan.

OCTOBER

- NCAA Research Report 92-01 indicates that the graduation rate of student-athletes at Division I institutions increased after Proposition 48 went into effect in 1986.

12-14—The Council affirms its support for the proposed Division I athletics certification program and vows to oppose any attempts to delay its implementation. Also, the Council selects American College Testing Program (ACT) as the program administrator of the proposed initial-eligibility clearinghouse.

NOVEMBER

- A. Lamar Alexander, U.S. secretary of education, is named the 27th recipient of the Theodore Roosevelt Award.

- The NCAA Presidents Commission forms two committees: the 17-member Special NCAA Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity to deal with the primary topic for the third year of the Commission's strategic plan and the 11-member Presidents Commission Liaison Committee to enhance the Commission's communication with various constituent groups in college athletics.

DECEMBER

- The Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics develops a list of 17 "legislative concepts" and announces plans to forward them to the membership for consideration.

6-7—The Executive Committee announces a plan for extensive changes in the Association's championships program. The plan places more emphasis on sports sponsorship in formulating field sizes. The committee will seek reaction from the membership before taking final action, probably in May 1993.

Alexander wins Theodore Roosevelt Award

A. Lamar Alexander Jr., U. S. Secretary of Education, has been named winner of the Theodore Roosevelt Award, the most prestigious honor bestowed on an individual by the NCAA.

Alexander will become the 27th recipient of the "Teddy" January 13 during the honors dinner at the 1993 NCAA Convention in Dallas.

Alexander's national reputation as a pioneer in educational reform prompted President Bush to select him as secretary of education in 1991.

Alexander favors establishing national standards in English, mathematics, science, history and geography. He has proposed the creation of "American Achievement Tests," a voluntary nationwide examination system for students at specific grade levels. Also, to help schools measure their effectiveness, he has established a program called "America 2000."

While president of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Alexander served as a member of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics. He also served as a member of President Bush's Education Policy Advisory Committee.

Alexander was the governor of Tennessee from 1979 to 1987 and was the first chief executive of that state to serve successive four-year terms. He was chosen by his fellow governors as one of the two most effective governors in the nation and was named by U.S. News and World Report as one of 10 "rising political stars of the future" on the national scene. As chair of the National Governors' Association, he led the 50-state education survey, "Time for Results."

In 1988, the Education Commission of the States gave Alexander the James B. Conant Award for "distinguished national leadership in education." The author of three books, he also chaired President Reagan's Commission on the American Outdoors.

He was an NCAA Silver Anniversary recipient in 1987, having competed in track at Vanderbilt University.

During the 1960s, Alexander served as a legislative assistant to Sen. Howard Baker and later as an executive aide to Bryce Harlow, the White House Congressional liaison.

He was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Vanderbilt and was a law review editor at the New York University law school.

Alexander and his wife, Haney, have four children.

CNN's Shaw to emcee honors dinner

Bernard Shaw, the principal Washington anchor for Cable News Network who won numerous national and international awards for his reporting during the first several days of the Persian Gulf war in 1991, will serve as master of ceremonies at the honors dinner during the 1993 Convention.

The dinner will be January 13 in Dallas.

Shaw

Shaw received the Eduard Rhein Foundation's Cultural Journalistic Award, the Italian government's President's Award and the 1991 David Brinkley Award for Excellence in Communication from Barry University. In addition, he earned the 1990 George Foster Peabody Broadcasting Award, the 1991 Golden Award for Cable Excellence (ACE), the ACE award for best newscaster of the year and the 1991 Chairman's Award for Outstanding Journalistic Excellence from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In addition to Shaw's regularly scheduled newscasts, he anchors much of CNN's special-events coverage, including presidential primaries, political party conventions and national election-day coverage. He moderated one of the Democratic presidential candidates debates in February 1992 and also was a moderator during a presidential debate during the 1988 campaign.

Shaw has been a member of CNN since the network's inception in 1980. Before that, he worked for ABC News as its senior Capitol Hill correspondent, reporting extensively on the economy. Shaw also filed special reports during the 1979 American hostage crisis at the American Embassy in Tehran, Iran.

From 1971 to 1977, Shaw was a correspondent in the Washington bureau of CBS News. He began his career in 1964 as an anchor/reporter for WNUS-Chicago, one of the nation's first all-news radio stations.

A native of Chicago, Shaw studied history at the University of Illinois, Champaign, and in April 1991, the University of Illinois Foundation announced the establishment of the Bernard Shaw Endowment Fund, creating scholarships at the university's Chicago campus in his honor. Shaw donated $50,000 to help launch the project.

Chapman will serve 19th year

Alan J. Chapman will serve as parliamentarian for the 19th straight year when the 1993 NCAA Convention convenes in Dallas.

Chapman, a member of the National Association of Parliamentarians, will serve in the 1993 general business session and in the Divisions I and I-A sessions.

A professor of engineering at Rice University, Chapman has served as parliamentarian at every annual Convention since 1975. He was NCAA president in 1973 and 1974.

Assisting as parliamentarians in other business sessions at the 87th annual Convention will be Francis W. Bonner, professor emeritus of English and former faculty athletics representative at Furman University, Division I-AA; Paul Engelmann, professor of economics and faculty athletics representative at Central Missouri State University, Division II, and Armin P. Langholtz, chair of the speech department and faculty athletics representative at Capital University, Division III.

Olympic champions to receive awards

Gail Devers and Melvin Stewart, gold medalists at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, will receive awards during the honors dinner at the 1993 NCAA Convention on behalf of all student-athletes who participated in both Olympic and NCAA competition.

The dinner is January 13 in Dallas.

Devers captured the gold medal in the 100 meters at the 1992 Games, thus earning the distinction of being the world's fastest woman. It was the second Olympic appearance for the University of California, Los Angeles, graduate. Devers won the NCAA Division I outdoor 100-meter title in 1988.

Devers

Stewart

She also won the gold medal in the 100 meters at the 1987 Pan American Games and a silver medal in the 100-meter hurdles at the 1991 world championships.

Devers also is well-known for her remarkable comeback from the effects of Graves' disease.

Stewart, a former NCAA individual swimming champion at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, won Olympic gold medals in the 200-meter butterfly and the 400-meter medley relay and a bronze medal in the 800-meter freestyle relay.

He is the world, American and NCAA record holder in the 200-meter butterfly, a 10-time national champion and two-time NCAA champion. He has won eight consecutive national 200-meter butterfly titles, more than any swimmer in the last 30 years.

He also won gold medals at the 1986 and 1990 Goodwill Games, the 1987 and 1991 Pan Pacific Championships and the 1991 world championships.

Convention

Little confrontation is expected as 'reform agenda' continues

tendance might settle in at about 2,200, which would be the fourth straight year—and the only four years in history—for attendance of more than 2,000 at an NCAA Convention.

Actually, the 2,000 mark was reached for the first time in the most recent Dallas Convention in 1990. The total that year was 2,171.

Just 10 years ago, 1,521 attended the 1983 Convention in San Diego—a record at the time, and the first time registration had exceeded 1,400.

A new schedule

With the introduction of the new Presidential Agenda Day, this year's Convention schedule takes on a different look.

That new feature—recommended by a joint meeting of a Presidents Commission subcommittee and a Council-appointed special NCAA committee—caused these changes:

■ The delegates reception will lead off the Convention this year. It will be held Tuesday night, January 12, rather than its traditional position after the opening business session.

■ The honors dinner will follow the opening business session Wednesday, January 13, a day earlier than usual.

■ Presidential Agenda Day is Thursday, January 14, marking the first time that a single day has been set aside exclusively for the legislation deemed by the Presidents Commission to be of particular interest to chief executive officers. Both division and general business sessions will be held that day, marking the first time that there have been two separate sets of business sessions in a single Convention.

■ The traditional subdivision, division and general business sessions then will handle the rest of the Convention business, with the division and subdivision gatherings Friday, January 15, and the closing general session the morning of Saturday, January 16.

NCAA President Judith M. Sweet has emphasized that this year's schedule is somewhat experimental as the Association attempts to incorporate the Presidential Agenda Day concept for the first time. "We will urge the Convention delegates to bear with us as we use this Convention schedule for the first time," she said. "We will learn from this year's experience and make any necessary changes for next year."

She also noted that parliamentary procedures do not permit jockeying the business sessions to fill any unexpected spare time. Business sessions cannot begin earlier than the circularized starting time.

Meanwhile, the Convention will have its second experience with the more federated legislative approach implemented a year ago. That permits the separate divisions or subdivisions to act independently in their own business sessions on any federated legislation, even those provisions that would apply equally to more than one division.

An improved electronic voting system also is expected to streamline the business sessions.

Silver Anniversary honorees maintain influence

This year's NCAA Silver Anniversary Award honorees include six former collegiate stars who have excelled in their professional careers.

The Silver Anniversary Award recognizes former student-athletes who have distinguished themselves since completing their college athletics careers 25 years ago.

This year's honorees are Richard "Dick" Anderson, football; Robert D. Johnson, football; Donna A. Lopiano, field hockey/volleyball/basketball/softball/badminton; Don Schollander, swimming; Stan Smith, tennis, and Wyomia Tyus, track and field.

These individuals and six of today's top student-athletes will be honored as this year's College Athletics Top XII. The group will be recognized January 13 at the honors dinner during the NCAA Convention in Dallas.

Following are biographical sketches of the six award winners:

Richard "Dick" Anderson

Anderson was a three-year starter at strong safety at the University of Colorado, Boulder, and received all-America and all-Big Eight Conference honors in 1967. He led the Buffaloes to a 9-2 season his senior year and a 31-21 win over the University of Miami (Florida) in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

He ranks second on the Colorado all-time list for interceptions and ninth all-time in tackles.

A two-time academic all-Big

Anderson

Eight selection, Anderson graduated in 1968 with a bachelor of science degree in business.

The Miami Dolphins chose Anderson in the third round of the 1968 National Football League draft. His 10-year career with the Dolphins included three Pro Bowl appearances, and he was named the NFL's defensive player of the year in 1973 when he led the league with eight interceptions.

Anderson is president of Cellular Trading Corporation, a cellular phone company, and is chair of Dick Anderson and Associates Insurance Agency. He also chairs the Miami Project to cure paralysis through the University of Miami Medical School, for which he oversees a $6 million budget and a staff of 100 employees, and serves as treasurer of the 200 Club of Miami, which raises money for families of slain policemen and firefighters.

Anderson also served as a Florida state senator after retiring from professional football.

Johnson

He was inducted into the Colorado Sports Hall of Fame in 1980 and remains active in college football through his work on the Orange Bowl Committee. He has a son, Blake, who is currently a sophomore on the Colorado football team.

Robert D. Johnson

A two-time all-American and captain of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, 1967 Southeastern Conference championship football team that was ranked No. 2 in the nation, Johnson was selected as the conference's best blocker and was named lineman of the year by the Birmingham (Alabama) Quarterback Club. He also was named to the SEC's Quarter Century Team (1951-76) and to the Atlanta Journal's all-time SEC team in 1979. He was elected to the College Football Hall of Fame in 1989.

Johnson was an academic all-American as well, graduating with a B-plus average in industrial en-

20-year review: From abolition of 1.600 rule to '92 reforms, NCAA has changed over last two decades

Site: Palmer House, Chicago.

President: Earl M. Ramer, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Major actions: Adopted ceilings on the number of grants-in-aid that may be awarded (30 initial scholarships for football per year with a total of 75 additional subsequent awards)...Defeated proposals dealing with legislative reorganization (would have divided the membership into Divisions I and II)...Abolished the 1,600 predictor rule and adopted in its place a 2,000 high-school grade-point average (4,000 scale) as an initial-eligibility standard.

Quote: "I think everyone believes in reorganization, but it's a matter of finding the best way to accomplish it." (Executive Director Walter Byers)

Site: St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco.

President: Alan J. Chapman, Rice University.

Major actions: Reorganization had been approved at the first Special Convention in August 1973...Changed amateurism regulations to allow student-athletes to play a sport professionally while maintaining college eligibility in other sports...Division I kept the 2,000 initial-eligibility rule, but Divisions II and III abolished it...Added several items to the NCAA penalty structure, including the right to limit the number of grants-in-aid available to a member institution and the right to demand that offending institutions return their share of net receipts from NCAA championships.

Site: Sheraton Park Hotel, Washington, D.C.

President: Chapman.

Major actions: Approved a resolution that the NCAA Council prepare a comprehensive report and plan on issues involved in the administration of women's intercollegiate athletics at the national level...Did not vote on a proposal to return to one-platoon football...Passed a proposal calling for sanctions to be imposed against a disciplined coach that could result in the individual being barred from coaching at any other institution for up to two years...Adopted a proposal that prospective student-athletes could not be recruited until after the junior year of high school.

1976

Site: Stouffer's Riverfront Inn, St. Louis.

President: John A. Fuzak, Michigan State University.

1977

Site: Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida.

President: Fuzak.

Major actions: A Council-sponsored plan to reorganize Division I was defeated, along with every proposal dealing with need-based aid...Delegates expressed concern over the complexity of the reorganization proposal, which would have required an institution to maintain performance minimums in at least eight Association-sponsored varsity sports, including football and basketball. Legislation to create the plan was tabled without any discussion on the Convention floor...Defeated proposals that would have changed the 30/95 football scholarship allotment...Approved stricter standards for a conference to be eligible for automatic qualification.

Quote: "It was a sad commentary and poor democratic procedure to table the (reorganization) issue before the delegates got the chance to debate its implications." (Division I Steering Committee Chair J. Neils Thompson)

The February 1, 1973, NCAA News tells of the elimination of the 1,600 eligibility requirement.

Site: Peachtree Plaza Hotel, Atlanta.

Major actions: Dominant item of discussion was Title IX, and the entire general round table was devoted to the topic...Delegates defeated many significant proposals, including ones that would have established need-based aid for sports other than football and basketball, established the "triple-option" initial-eligibility requirement and established five women's championships in Division III...Delegates also overwhelmingly defeated a proposal that would have completely revamped the enforcement program...The freshman redshirt rule was repealed.

Quote: "Many of the headlines and newspaper accounts and media commentaries were misleading in interpreting that football was exempted from the (Title IX) regulations." (University of New Mexico President William E. Davis)

Site: Fairmont Hotel, New Orleans.

President: William J. Flynn, Boston College.

Major actions: The entire agenda (105 items) was dealt with in one day, the first time that had occurred in recent history...The Association passed a resolution asking President Carter's boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games...Divisions II and III approved five women's championships each (basketball, field hockey, swimming, tennis and volleyball), effective with the 1981-82 academic year...Triple-option eligibility proposal defeated again...Division I voters approved a "common-age" rule that would count competition after an athlete's 20th birthday but before his enrollment in college as a season of competition.

Quote: "The Association has come through restructuring stronger than before. The membership seems satisfied that the Association not only adequately, but effectively, serves the members' needs." (Byers)

1981

Site: Fontainebleau Hotel, Miami Beach, Florida.

1982

Site: Hyatt Regency Hotel, Houston.

President: James Frank, Lincoln University (Missouri).

Major actions: Once again completing the Convention's business in a single day, delegates affirmed NCAA football telecasting principles and established NCAA control over all forms of football television and cablecasting...Defeated a proposal that would have limited aid to tuition and fees in all Division I sports other than football, basketball and ice hockey and in all Division II sports...Freshman redshirt rule reinstated in Division I.

Site: Town and Country Hotel, San Diego.

President: Frank.

Major actions: Adopted "Proposition 48," which established stricter academic eligibility standards for incoming student-athletes. Specifically, it created a high-school core curriculum for which a prospective student-athlete must post a 2,000 GPA and required that a prospect score at least 700 on the SAT or 15 on the ACT examinations. The legislation became effective August 1, 1986...Approved legislation that restructured the Council and Executive Committee...Adopted ethical-conduct standards for the enforcement program.

Quote: "This legislation (Proposition 48) is necessary to uphold the integrity of the NCAA and the institutions. 1985

Site: Opryland Hotel, Nashville, Tennessee.

posals, which would allow Division I-A and Divisions I-AA and I-AAA combined to act separately on issues other than football...A drug-testing proposal was referred back to the Council...Approved limitations on playing seasons and number of contests in Divisions I and II.

Quote: "The NCAA has been changing. You cannot be static and survive in a rapidly changing world. It is different than it was 10 years ago. The growth of institutions and their diverse constituencies means we have to accommodate them in forms different than we used to. Colleges and universities realize that there is strength in common issues, and fragmentation ultimately leads to weakness and chaos." (Byers)

Site: Hilton Riverside and Towers, New Orleans.

President: John R. Davis, Oregon State University.

Major actions: Division I approved an index to phase in stricter initial-eligibility legislation over the next two years...Authorized drug testing at NCAA championship events and postseason football games...Defeated a satisfactory-progress rule that would have established qualitative standards for continuing eligibility...Reduced from eight to seven the number of men's and women's sports required for Division I-A membership.

Quote: "The Presidents Commission has been responsible for focusing on what I would term the burning issues of intercollegiate athletics and providing not only the attention and the leadership, but indeed the inspiration that has moved people toward dealing with these things that have been gnawing away at the character of intercollegiate athletics." (Byers)

Site: Town and Country Hotel, San Diego.

Major action: The eighth annual Convention appointed a committee to study methods of athletics regulation and control in other nations.

qualification restrictions for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Quote: "If we are denying opportunities with this piece of legislation (Proposal No. 42), then I'm against it. If any part of NCAA (legislation) is diminishing the opportunity for minorities, then it ought to be examined and we ought to eliminate it. We ought not tolerate that." (Southeastern Conference Commissioner Harvey W. Schiller)

Site: Loews Anatole Hotel, Dallas.

President: Albert M. Witte, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville.

Major actions: Rescinded 1989 Proposal 42 and voted to permit partial qualifiers to receive nonathletically related financial aid...Spent almost five hours debating measures to reduce time demands on student-athletes and took 24 roll-call votes on the matter...Reduced spring football practice in Divisions I-A and I-AA to 15 sessions (10 involving contact in 21 days), reduced maximum number of regular-season basketball games to 25 and directed that appropriate time-demand-reduction legislation for sports other than football and basketball be drafted for the 1991 Convention...Voted to require the public disclosure of Divisions I and II graduation-rate information to prospective student-athletes, their parents, high-school coaches and two-year college coaches.

Quote: "Because of what happened (approval of all major legislative items proposed by the Presidents Commission) and the way it happened, we shouldn't get too arrogant. We still probably aren't talking to as many people as we should talk to when we write some of this legislation. This should make us more responsible, because now that we know what we can do, we've got to be very careful." (Florida State University President Bernard F. Sliger)

Site: Opryland Hotel, Nashville, Tennessee.

President: Witte.

Major actions: Presidents Commission reform package romped to approval...One delegate seeking to amend coaching-staff limitations acknowledged that he did so "at the risk of being additional road kill on the highway to reform"...Approved proposals to limit recruiting activities, to phase out the use of athletics dormitories, to create the new category of "restricted-earnings coach" and to cut the number of permissible grants-in-aid in all Division I sports by 10 percent...Approved an amended version of Proposal 38, which was designed to reduce time demands on student-athletes by further restricting playing and practice seasons in all sports in Divisions I and II. The legislation limits student-athletes to 20 hours of competition or required practice time per week during the playing season, with one full day off...Elected Judith M. Sweet of the University of California, San Diego, to serve as NCAA president, the first woman to hold that position.

Quote: "I don't think this is just a shot in the dark for the presidents. I think they have genuine enthusiasm to see that important changes are made in intercollegiate athletics and that intercollegiate athletics takes its rightful position in higher education. I don't believe you're going to see them wearing out." (Schultz)

Site: Hilton Hotel and Towers, Anaheim, California.

President: Judith M. Sweet, University of California, San Diego.

James Frank of Lincoln University (Missouri), the first university president and the first Black to hold the NCAA presidency, presides over the 1982 Convention.

Highest possible vote count soars to record 943

If every NCAA member eligible to vote were to attend the 1993 Convention in Dallas, the highest possible count on a vote involving the entire membership would be a record 943—18 more than a year ago and 40 more than in 1991.

Every member doesn't attend, of course. But most do. Last year, 86.3 percent of all voting members were at the Convention in Anaheim, California. The record was set the year before when 89.2 percent of all voting members were in Nashville, Tennessee.

Included in the total of 943 are 861 active member institutions and 82 conferences that have the voting privilege. By division, the figures break down like this:

■ Division I: 297 institutions and 35 conferences, for a total of 332. That includes 107 institutions and 10 conferences in Division I-A (117 total), 88 institutions and eight conferences in I-AA (96), and 102 institutions and 17 conferences in I-AAA (119).

■ Division II: 222 institutions and 19 conferences, for a total of 241—the highest ever in Division II.

■ Division III: 342 institutions and 28 conferences, for a 370 total—also the highest ever for that division.

In most years, more than 95 percent of all Division I members attend the Convention. The record of 97.1 percent came in Dallas in 1990 and again in Anaheim last January. Every member of Division I-A attends every year, and nearly all Division I-AA members attend every year (two were missing last year). Division I-AAA attendance runs around 93 to 95 percent in most years.

In Division II, about 85 percent attended in most recent years, with a record 89.6 percent two years ago in Nashville. Division III attendance has been more than 70 percent for four straight Conventions, with a high mark of 76.7 percent in Nashville.

Other factors

There are voting circumstances that warp any analysis of voting totals. "Restricted members," for example, vote on constitutional issues but not on most bylaw proposals. Those restricted only in one sport can vote on everything except issues affecting only that sport.

Also, all-male institutions don't vote on matters dealing exclusively with women's athletics, and all-female institutions don't count in issues dealing only with men's athletics.

Currently, there are 11 all-male institutions (two in Division I-AA, one in Division II and eight in III) and five all-male conferences (one Division I-AAA, one Division II, three Division III). There are 30 all-women institutions (two in II, 28 in III) and four all-women conferences (all Division III).

What does all of that do to the totals? On a men-only proposal, the highest vote possible—again, assuming 100 percent attendance—would be 909; on a women-only matter, the total would be 927.

Voting records

Most votes at any NCAA Convention are done by a show of voting paddles and are not counted. Association voting records, obviously, are limited to those that have been counted and the count officially reported, whether by visual count of voting paddles or by electronic voting.

The records:

■ Total vote: 758, Nashville, 1991, on three occasions. One was the final vote on Division I voting autonomy, another the total membership vote on multidivision classification in women's basketball, and the third the overall vote on permitting Divisions II and III members to place sports in Division I.

In all, there have been only 22 counted votes in history exceeding 700. One occurred in 1987; the rest have been in the past three Conventions.

■ Division I-A: 117, Anaheim, 1992, permissible football recruiting contacts. That vote was particularly interesting inasmuch as it was one vote more than the highest possible in that subdivision at that time, apparently the result of an error in counting voting paddles.

■ Division I-AA: 96, Dallas, 1990, spring football practice.

■ Division I as a whole: 330, Nashville, 1991, a portion of the proposal to reduce time demands on student-athletes.

■ Division II: 199, Anaheim, 1992, on two occasions, both attempts to ease restrictions on outside competition in Division II.

■ Division III: 268, Nashville, 1991, on two occasions, both parts of the time-reduction proposal in Division III.

Convention

Other features

Other recent popular Convention activities and features will continue this year, including:

■ Gifts of an NCAA calendar booklet and a Convention tote bag to all delegates.

■ Luncheons for all delegates on the primary business-session days, Thursday and Friday this year.

■ The NCAA interpretations center, staffed by members of the legislative services staff.

■ The complimentary soft-drink bar, Convention message center and NCAA travel desk.

One difference this year is the registration fee structure, which included an increase from $70 to $100 for voting and alternate delegates from active members and member conferences, as well as the official delegates from affiliated and corresponding members.

For the first time, other delegates—those beyond four from active members and conferences, as well as all visitors from NCAA members—will pay a higher fee—$150. Visitors from nonmember entities will pay $200.

All of the registration fees include the honors dinner, the delegates reception and the two delegate luncheons, in addition to the Convention amenities and all Convention materials.

Legislation

All of the 160 proposals and the related amendments-to-amendments have been reviewed in detail in The NCAA News, beginning in the November 16, 1992, issue and concluding in the December 30 issue.

Institutional control and presidential authority are the primary thrust of proposals dominating the Presidents Commission Grouping, which will be considered during Presidential Agenda Day Thursday, January 14.

As in recent years, the Presidents Commission Grouping puts matters deemed of particular interest to chief executive officers atop the order of business. This year, there are 45 basic proposals in the grouping, including these Commission- and Council-sponsored amendments:

■ Proposal No. 15, which would establish the certification program.

■ Proposal No. 50, to establish a Joint Policy Board comprising the Administrative Committee and the officers of the Presidents Commission.

■ Proposal No. 51, specifying that all legislative proposals shall be evaluated by an appropriate NCAA committee before being presented for action at an NCAA Convention and permitting the Presidents Commission to prohibit the amendment of a specific proposal for a period of two years after the effective date.

The grouping also includes 18 proposals dealing with playing and practice seasons—all of which are opposed by the Commission and the Council because they would alter reform actions taken in the last three Conventions.

Among the highlights in the topical groupings following the Presidents Commission Grouping:

Personnel

A Council-sponsored proposal that would permit athletics department staff members to participate in enhancement programs administered by professional sports organizations—such as a program for minority coaches administered by the National Football League—and also to accept compensation and expenses through such programs (No. 66).

Eligibility

Nineteen Division I members' proposal to make retroactive to October 1989 a Council decision that changed the minimum score requirement on the ACT from 18 to 17 for initial athletics eligibility in Divisions I and II. The Council, which made the change effective for student-athletes first entering member institutions in the fall term of 1992, is opposing the proposal on grounds of preserving competitive equity (No. 69).

Financial aid

Eight Council-sponsored proposals, including measures to raise the maximum Pell Grant amount a Division I student-athlete can receive from $1,700 to $2,400 (No. 87) and to permit legitimate off-campus employment income in excess of a full grant-in-aid in Division II (No. 84), as well as a series of proposals designed to achieve consistency in the administration of financial aid (Nos. 82, 85, 89 and 91).

Playing and practice seasons

A Big Ten Conference proposal that would establish squad limits for all Division I men's sports except Division I-AA football. The Presidents Commission and Council will oppose the measure unless it is withdrawn and referred to the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics (No. 94).

A proposal and resolution, opposed by the Executive Committee, to establish March 1 as the uniform first date of competition in Division I baseball. The intended result is to push the College World Series back to late June or early July and to eliminate perceived competitive advantages for programs in warm climates (No. 97).

Recruiting

Many of the proposals are efforts to amend contact and evaluation rules in football, including an amendment opposed by the Council that would permit more frequent telephone calls in Division I-A to prospective student-athletes during the winter in exchange for extending the period during which such calls are prohibited after a prospect's junior year in high school (No. 117).

Membership

Proposals offering Division I institutions that previously played football in Divisions II and III with options in the wake of last year's defeat of a proposal to establish a Division I-AAA football classification.

Awards/expenses/amateurism

Four proposals offered by member conferences to cut costs, including one to establish limits on the size of travel squads in Division I (No. 145). That proposal is expected to be withdrawn by its sponsor, the Pacific-10 Conference.

The Council also is seeking withdrawal of the other proposals, which would eliminate training table meals outside the playing season in Division I (No. 142), prohibit a team in Division I from spending the night before a home contest in off-campus housing or extra-cost facilities like hotels (No. 144), and require ground travel in all divisions to competition within a prescribed area (No. 147).

Governance

Council-sponsored proposals to adopt a principle of nondiscrimination in the NCAA constitution (No. 149) and specify that an interpretation of legislation issued by the NCAA legislative services staff is not binding (No. 150).

Championships

A proposal supported by the Council and Executive Committee that would extend through 1994-95 the current moratorium on canceling championships that do not meet minimum-sponsorship requirements (No. 152) and a measure opposed by the Executive Committee that would permit championships that do not meet the criteria to be sponsored without providing transportation and per diem expenses (No. 153).

Committees

Proposals to increase representation of Divisions II and III on the Basketball Officiating Committee (No. 156) and to allocate positions on the Recruiting and Special Events Committees (Nos. 157 and 158).

Association's revenue creates surplus for 10th straight year

The Association's 1991-92 revenue exceeded expense, creating a surplus in operations for the 10th consecutive year and the 37th time in 38 years, according to the report of the treasurer, which will be presented to delegates at the 1993 Convention.

The report is published in the Association's Annual Reports, which will be available at the Convention.

The 1991-92 surplus of $3,621,886 represents 2.3 percent of the general operating budget, according to B. J. Skelton, NCAA secretary-treasurer. The NCAA Executive Committee had approved a budget of $157,910,200, excluding the Federal grant for the National Youth Sports Program.

Revenue amounted to $158,488,522, or 100.4 percent of the budget. The total amount was an increase of 3.9 percent over the previous year.

The report showed expense of $154,866,636, or 98.1 percent of the budget. Expenses increased by 2.4 percent over 1990-91.

Skelton pointed out that 72.1 percent of the Association's out-of-pocket payments went to member institutions, conferences, affiliated organizations or programs for student-athletes and the nation's youth. In 1991-92, the NCAA spent $111,675,697 in this manner, up from $108.4 million in 1990-91.

On August 31, 1992, the Association's assets totaled $69,849,330. Fund balances at that date amounted to $32,639,623, or 46.7 percent of assets. Current and long-term liabilities were $37,209,707.

CEO preregistration total matches all-time high

Nearly 40 percent of the institutions planning to be represented at the 1993 NCAA Convention in Dallas are sending their chief executive officers, according to Convention preregistrations as of December 30.

In Division I, nearly 60 percent are sending their CEOs—including more than 70 percent in Division I-A.

As of December 30, presidents and chancellors of 266 institutions had preregistered as voting, alternate or visiting delegates from the 680 schools preregistering at that point. That represents 39.1 percent.

Those totals are better than the 247 CEOs from 683 institutions that preregistered by a comparable date last year. And they are almost exactly the same as the 266 of 679 recorded on a comparable preregistration date two years ago.

Last year, a total of 213 CEOs actually attended—each year, some preregister but do not attend. The record CEO attendance at any NCAA Convention was 236 in 1991 in Nashville, Tennessee.

Among the 266 preregistrants this year are 172 from Division I, a record 62 from Division II and 32 from Division III. Within the Division I figure, 75 are from Division I-A (of 107), 49 from I-AA (of 88) and 48 from I-AAA (of 102).

Following is the list of preregistered CEOs as of December 30, in alphabetical order by last name within each division and subdivision. Current NCAA Presidents Commission members are indicated with an asterisk, and CEOs currently serving on the NCAA Council are indicated with a pound sign (#).

■ Statement of the role of the faculty athletics representative

The following statement was approved in fall 1992 by the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association:

Introduction

This statement has been developed to emphasize the strategic role that the faculty athletics representative (FAR) should play to ensure academic integrity, facilitate institutional control of intercollegiate athletics and enhance the student-athlete experience. Although chief executive officer (CEO) control of the intercollegiate athletics program is essential, this goal is more likely to be attained through appropriate delegation of both responsibility and authority on the campus. Of all of the major participants in the administration of the intercollegiate athletics program, those who represent the faculty are most likely to be independent of the financial and other pressures that create enormous incentives for competitive success in the revenue-producing sports. Senior faculty members are able to provide significant leadership in the governance of athletics programs on their campuses if they are empowered by their CEOs and their faculty governance structures to do so, and if they are provided adequate institutional support to fully discharge their responsibilities.

The common bond that links FARs across all NCAA member institutions is a commitment to academic integrity. Beyond this goal, FAR roles vary widely both among and within divisional classifications.

The roles of faculty-dominated athletics boards or committees also may differ. In this statement, the "role of the FAR" should be broadly interpreted to include the activities of the athletics boards and committees that also are charged to represent faculty perspectives in the governance of intercollegiate athletics.

Quite obviously, this statement is not intended to be binding on either individual FARs or member institutions. It does contain, however, guidelines that merit diligent consideration on the part of those who select or appoint the FAR and on the part of the faculty members who are asked to consider such appointments.

Academic integrity

The academic integrity of an intercollegiate athletics program may be evaluated in a number of ways, including a review of: the admissions profiles of recruited student-athletes vs. all students who are admitted to the institution; courses and academic programs selected by student-athletes; the semester and cumulative records of academic performance of student-athletes, and the rates at which they graduate. The FAR periodically should review appropriate records (for both individual student-athletes and for sport teams) to ensure that decisions related to admissions, academic advising, evaluation of academic performance, and the extent of academic support services are made in ways that are consistent with the primary academic mission of the institution.

The FAR should ensure that the institution has in place effective mechanisms for evaluating whether student-athletes have met all of the academic eligibility requirements for practice, financial aid and intercollegiate competition established by the NCAA, the conference (if any) and the institution. The FAR need not perform these certifications personally, but should ensure that all certifications for both initial and continuing academic eligibility have been performed correctly, and with adequate documentation.

The FAR should assume an advisory and reporting role with respect to the academic preparation and performance of student-athletes. The FAR may prepare (or request on the basis of FAR specifications) periodic reports on the academic preparation and performance of student-athletes. Such reports should be carefully reviewed by the FAR and discussed with the CEO, the faculty and the athletics department.

Compliance

Institutional control of intercollegiate athletics is a campus-wide responsibility. Unless the institution has designated an athletics compliance coordinator who reports directly to the CEO (or another senior-level administrator outside the athletics department), the FAR and the director of athletics should assume joint responsibility for ensuring compliance with all NCAA, conference (if any) and institutional rules. Consistent with the guidelines provided by the NCAA's principles of institutional control discussion document, FAR responsibilities should include oversight of compliance-related activities undertaken within the athletics department and coordination of the compliance-related activities of the campus units located outside the athletics department. Such efforts could focus on academic-eligibility certifications (noted above), rules education and staff training, rules interpretations, and periodic spot-checks of records to ensure that all institutional compliance systems are engaged and functioning. Even if the institution has appointed a compliance coordinator who reports directly to the CEO, however, the FAR should retain significant responsibilities for institutional-control structures and activities.

The FAR should play a central role in any major institutional inquiry into alleged or suspected rules violations and in the preparation of any infractions reports submitted to the conference (if any) or the NCAA.

The FAR should receive the results of any periodic audits of the athletics department which may be conducted.

The FAR should play a major role in any NCAA athletics certification program reviews.

Intercollegiate athletics programs offer privileges that include financial assistance, team membership, competitive opportunities and numerous additional support services. Such privileges create a heightened visibility of student-athletes both on and beyond the campus. Hence, student-athletes must accept some additional responsibilities for their behavior that are not imposed on students generally. The FAR, together with the athletics administration, should ensure that appropriate standards of student-athlete conduct are established (for both on- and off-campus behavior), clearly communicated, and consistently enforced.

Student-athlete experience

The FAR should promote a balance between academics, athletics and the social lives of student-athletes, which affords them opportunities to enjoy the full range of collegiate experiences available to students generally. Examples of such activities include a review of travel and competition schedules (to minimize missed class time), reviews of athletics scholarship cancellations or reductions (which might inappropriately limit opportunities for student-athletes to complete their degrees), periodic reviews of the mechanisms used to monitor the hourly and weekly limitations on athletically related activities, and actions to encourage the availability of posteligibility financial support for student-athletes. The FAR should participate in student-athlete exit interviews, facilitate student-athlete participation on athletics boards and committees, and inform student-athletes about the FAR role as an independent source of counsel, assistance and information.

The FAR should encourage and facilitate interactions between student-athletes and the mainstream of institutional activities. At the beginning of each academic year, the FAR should address student-athletes as a group, or in individual team meetings, to emphasize the primacy of the academic mission of the institution, and the responsibilities of student-athletes within that setting. Further, the FAR should utilize every opportunity to reinforce the principle that student-athletes are students who are to be afforded opportunities to participate in a wide variety of institutional experiences.

The FAR should encourage student-athletes to prepare for careers outside (or in some instances, associated with) their experiences as intercollegiate athletes. To this end, the FAR should ensure that testing, counseling, evaluation and other career-planning services are made available to student-athletes.

Communication/administration

The FAR should play a central role in discussions of matters related to intercollegiate athletics at athletics board or committee meetings and at faculty or institutional senate meetings. At these meetings, the FAR should provide periodic reports related to matters of academic integrity, academic preparation and performance of student-athletes, rules compliance or violations, and other matters related to the intercollegiate athletics program. Faculty and other members of the institutional community should have an opportunity to learn about the work of the FAR and to raise relevant questions or concerns with the FAR. The FAR should serve as a member, or as chair, of the institution's athletics board or committee.

The FAR should have access to complete budgetary information about the athletics department.

The FAR should play an important role in the shaping of institutional voting decisions on conference and NCAA legislation.

The FAR, as an appointee of the CEO, must have access to the CEO and must be recognized as a key adviser on athletics-related matters by the CEO and others involved in the administration of intercollegiate athletics. The FAR also must have access to a working relationship with the director of athletics and his/her staff.

The FAR should have a major role in institutional searches for key athletics department personnel.

Institutional resources/compensation

The CEO must ensure that the FAR and the faculty members who share the responsibilities identified above are allocated the time and institutional resources consistent with their duties. This support could include clerical staff, release time from teaching or other duties, and additional compensation during the academic or fiscal year. In addition, deans, department chairs and other institutional administrators should acknowledge that the FAR's activities described above require a significant commitment of time and energy. No faculty member should accept appointment to the position of FAR without a commitment of institutional resources consistent with these responsibilities and a pledge of institutional recognition of the time and energies required for these duties to be effectively discharged.

Athletically related perquisites (team travel, tickets, etc.) provided to the FAR should be subject to annual approval by the CEO. Where possible, it would be desirable to have the expenses associated with such perquisites paid through the office of the CEO, not the athletics department.

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 21 December 3, 1992

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Awards

1. Awards to participants in conference football championship game. For purposes of applying NCAA awards legislation, a conference championship game between division champions of a member conference of 12 or more institutions that is divided into two divisions (of six or more institutions each) is considered a special event; thus, the conference may provide awards to student-athletes from both institutions that are participating in the contest. [References: NCAA Bylaws 16.1.4.2 (special events and bowls) and 16.1.4.3 (conference and national championships)]

Student host/official visit/entertainment

2. Prospect paying for entertainment during official visit. The committee clarified a portion of a previously approved interpretation (reference: 5/21/92, Item No. 1) to indicate that a prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) may pay for the cost of any entertainment incurred by the prospect (or the prospect's parents or legal guardians) during an official visit, provided such entertainment is not arranged by the institution. [References: 13.7.5.5-(a) (student host), 13.7.5.5.1 (multiple hosts), 13.7.5.8 (normal retail cost) and IC 5/21/92, Item No. 1)]

Practice/alumni/booster

3. Alumnus participating in occasional practice session with former institution's team. It is permissible for an alumnus of an institution (e.g., former student-athlete) to participate in an occasional practice session with a member institution's intercollegiate athletics team. [Reference: 14.1.6.1 (requirement for practice)]

Summer camps/clinics/advertising/endorsements

4. Student-athlete who is a professional in one sport conducting camp or clinic in that sport. At the request of the Council, the committee reviewed the issue of a student-athlete who is a professional in one sport (but who has eligibility remaining in a second sport) conducting a private camp or clinic in the sport in which the student is a professional. The committee determined that inasmuch as the provisions of 12.5.2.1 are not sport-specific, there is no authority to permit a student-athlete to conduct a private camp or clinic in the sport in which the student is a professional without jeopardizing his or her remaining eligibility in the second sport, inasmuch as it is inherent that the student-athlete's name or picture will be used in the promotion of the camp or clinic. The committee recommended that the Council consider sponsoring legislation to indicate that the provisions of 12.5.2.1 that preclude a student-athlete from promoting or endorsing a commercial product without jeopardizing the student-athlete's eligibility be applied on a sport-specific basis. [References: 12.1.4 (amateur status if professional in another sport), 12.5.2.1 (advertisements and promotions subsequent to enrollment) and IC 4/30/92 Item No. 3]

Clothing/advertisements/endorsements

5. Manufacturer's or distributor's label or trademark on institutional uniform. A single manufacturer's or distributor's normal label or trademark (not to exceed 1½ inches square in size) may appear on both the playing shorts and playing shirt of a student-athlete's uniform. [Reference: 12.5.4

(use of logos on equipment, uniforms and apparel)]

Test score/official visit

6. Academic credentials necessary for official visit before early signing period (Divisions I and II). In accordance with the provisions of 13.7.1.2.4 (effective August 1, 1993), the requisite SAT or ACT score that a prospect must earn in order to receive an expense-paid visit before the early signing date in a sport must be achieved on a national testing date under national testing conditions. [References: 13.7.1.2.3 (PSAT, SAT, PACT Plus or ACT score - official visit) and 13.7.1.2.4 (academic credentials for official visit before early signing period)]

Official visit/unofficial visit

7. Meal provided to prospect in special seating area (e.g., press box) during intermission of institution's competition (Division I). An institution may not provide a prospect a meal in a special seating area (e.g., press box) from which the playing area can be viewed during intermission of the institution's competition. [References: 13.7.5.2 (complimentary admissions) and 13.8.2.1 (entertainment/tickets - general restrictions)]

Scouting

8. Travel expenses for scouting opponents (Division I). In those sports in which scouting of opponents is permissible (i.e., Division I basketball, football, lacrosse and women's volleyball), it is not permissible for an institution to provide transportation expenses for more than one person to scout an opponent, even if the individuals are traveling to the competition in the same vehicle (e.g., automobile, airplane). [Reference: 11.6.2.1 (Division I restrictions on scouting of opponents)]

Admissions/tickets/coaches

9. Restricted-earnings coach, graduate assistant coach, volunteer coach purchasing additional tickets to institution's contest (Division I). A restricted-earnings coach, graduate assistant coach (I-A football) or volunteer coach is permitted to purchase additional tickets (at face value) to an institution's athletics event above the allotted complimentary number, provided such tickets are not resold at a price greater than their face value. [References: 11.02.3 (restricted-earnings coach), 11.02.4 (coach, graduate assistant), 11.02.6 (coach, volunteer), IC 5/21/92 Item No. 7, and IC 9/24/92 Item No. 7)]

Conference No. 22 December 17, 1992

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

1993 Convention Proposal No. 15

1. NCAA athletics certification program (Division I). The committee reviewed the provisions of Proposal No. 15, which require Division I institutions to complete a prescribed institutional self-study verified and evaluated through an external peer-group process, and determined the following:

a. The composition of the Committee on Athletics Certification as set forth in proposed NCAA Bylaw 23.1.1 shall include at least one chief executive officer, one faculty athletics representative, one director of athletics, one senior woman administrator and one conference commissioner. The committee noted that the remaining individuals that compose the Committee on Athletics Certification may include institutional or conference staff members other than those designated in 23.1.1.

b. The provisions of proposed Bylaw 33.2.3.1 permit an institution to remove a potential peer reviewer who seems inappropriate or unacceptable to the institution.

c. A Division II or III institution that sponsors a sport in Division I is not required to participate in the athletics certification program set forth in Proposal No. 15.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 51

2. Proposed legislation—committee review and amendment limitation. The committee reviewed the provisions of Proposal No. 51, which require all legislative proposals, regardless of their source, to be evaluated by an appropriate NCAA committee before they can be presented for action at an NCAA Convention, and recommended that the Council adopt a policy statement

(or, in the alternative, an amendment-to-amendment) mandating that each NCAA committee has an obligation to review all proposals presented to it before October 15 (the submission date for amendments-to-amendments) preceding an annual Convention and to report the results of its review to the sponsors.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 60

3. Restricted-earnings coach (Division I). The provisions of Proposal No. 60, which require a restricted-earnings coach to include "any other compensation or remuneration that is athletically related (e.g., camps, speaking engagements)" in the compensation limitations for the restricted-earnings coach, apply to athletically related income generated from any source, including sources outside of the institution. The committee expressed concern regarding what constitutes "athletically related income" and suggested that the Council consider clarifying this issue.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 63

4. Division I-AA coaching limitations—contact and evaluation of prospects off campus (Division I-AA). The provisions of Proposal No. 63, which permit an institution to specify on an annual basis that one restricted-earnings coach may replace one full-time coach for purposes of off-campus recruiting, permit a I-AA institution to designate a total of seven coaches (that may include the head coach and not more than one restricted-earnings coach) to be involved in off-campus recruiting activities during the academic year. It is not permissible to alternate on a weekly (or temporary) basis the restricted-earnings coach with a full-time coach for purposes of off-campus recruiting, inasmuch as this would result in eight coaches being involved in off-campus recruiting activities.

1993 Convention Proposal Nos. 72 and 73

5. Individual eligibility—change in sport classification (Divisions I and II).

The committee reviewed the provisions of Proposal Nos. 72 and 73, which permit a student-athlete who participates in a sport classified in Division II or III while enrolled in a Division I (or Division II for purposes of Proposal No. 73) institution before August 1, 1993, to complete the student's eligibility in accordance with the Division II or III eligibility standards, and determined the following:

a. A student-athlete who participates in a sport classified in Division III while enrolled in a Division I (or II) institution before August 1, 1993, and who remains enrolled in that institution may not receive athletically related financial aid, inasmuch as such a student-athlete is subject to Division III eligibility standards. The committee recommended that the Council consider whether a student-athlete who may be certified eligible in accordance with Division I (or Division II for purposes of Proposal No.

Faculty reps

Adoption of statement helps to refine purpose and structure of FARA these programs to the missions of their parent institutions. Throughout this period, the question "Where are the faculty?" has been heard frequently. The vagueness of the response has stood in marked contrast to the clarity of the question.

With the initial task of developing the statement now complete, faculty athletics representatives (and the FARA) must begin the process through which faculty perspectives and influence may be more completely assimilated into the mainstream of our intercollegiate athletics programs. The Knight Commission's emphasis on chief executive officer control, supported by the NCAA's focus on institutional control, provides one framework for such developments. Presidential control of intercollegiate athletics is facilitated by the delegation of both authority and responsibility. The model of institutional control selected by the chief executive ultimately will determine the role of the faculty representative.

In selecting such a model, it should be emphasized that institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs is an institution-wide responsibility and is not one to be assumed by the athletics departments alone.

The organizational structure that I prefer is one in which the athletics director and faculty athletics representative report directly to the chief executive officer. The athletics director is responsible for the compliance-related activities conducted within the athletics department. The faculty athletics representative is responsible for overseeing the compliance program operated by the athletics department and also for ensuring that other university compliance systems—those that operate outside the athletics department—also are engaged and functioning.

"Faculty athletics representatives should harness their intellectual capital. . ."

This model does not require that all academic eligibility certifications for financial aid, practice or intercollegiate competition be performed by the faculty athletics representative; it strongly implies, however, that the faculty athletics representative has a responsibility to ensure that the individuals who perform these and other compliance-related activities are adequately trained, have access to the rules education and interpretative processes of conference offices or the NCAA, and are given sufficient time and resources to perform their tasks.

Further, faculty athletics representatives should be encouraged to work with and through their faculty athletics boards or committees to ensure their full participation and support. This model of institutional control would require some modification, however, in the event the institution has designated a separate individual, who has a reporting relationship outside the athletics department, as the athletics compliance coordinator.

In addition to their academic and institutional control responsibilities, faculty athletics representatives must direct their efforts toward the larger issues that intercollegiate athletics must confront in the coming decade. These topics are being clearly identified, and in a timely manner, by the NCAA Presidents Commission. Faculty athletics representatives, individually and through the FARA, should endeavor to be productive contributors to the analysis and resolution of these problems.

Faculty athletics representatives should harness their intellectual capital, and that of their faculty colleagues, to address the issues of deregulation, gender equity, cost containment, assimilation of student-athletes into the mainstream of university life, the design of initial and continuing academic eligibility standards and their impact on access to higher education, the overemphasis on competitive success, and measures to improve student-athlete graduation rates.

The mechanisms to accomplish this goal could include the commissioning of academic papers on such topics and sponsorship of regional or national workshops where the results of this work would be shared and evaluated. Faculty athletics representatives and their faculty peers also should become more involved in the design and evaluation of the research activities conducted by the NCAA.

Finally, faculty athletics representatives (and the FARA) must reach out to other groups that have similar interests and concerns. The Presidents Commission is defining the intercollegiate athletics agenda for the decade ahead, and faculty athletics representatives—both individually and in concert—should consider these priorities in establishing their own research programs.

The role of the faculty athletics representative in the governance of intercollegiate athletics programs will be determined in large part by the extent to which institutional expectations of faculty athletics representatives are both expanded and supported.

A new model for the role of the faculty athletics representative is being defined. Within this context, I encourage chief executive officers to reevaluate the structure of their own institutional-control mechanisms. Hopefully, such a reassessment will enable the energies and talents of faculty athletics representatives, and of their faculty colleagues, to be directed in ways that will restore public confidence and produce genuine reform in our intercollegiate athletics programs.

Jerry L. Kingston, a professor of economics, is faculty athletics representative at Arizona State University and a member of the NCAA Council.

Clearinghouse

Proposal No. 17 would make clearinghouse a reality

institutions currently are spending to certify the initial eligibility of prospective student-athletes," writes B. J. Skelton, NCAA secretary-treasurer and chair of the NCAA Council Subcommittee to Review the Concept of Establishing an Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse, in a position paper that is being circulated to Convention delegates.

But the Association, rather than institutions, would pay those costs. Those institutions also would find themselves relieved of the burden of processing and vouching for the certification of prospects.

The clearinghouse

Contingent upon approval at the Convention, the Council already has selected the American College Testing Program (ACT) to administer the clearinghouse, under a five-year contract. The clearinghouse, however, would operate separately from the testing service, with a staff devoted exclusively to gathering, analyzing and reporting information on the academic records of prospective student-athletes recruited by NCAA institutions.

Emphasis would be placed upon completing certification of a prospect in a timely, efficient and equitable manner.

The clearinghouse would collect NCAA Form 48-H information from the nation's high schools, obtain releases from prospective student-athletes authorizing the collection of data required for certification and distribution of certification decisions to institutions, and receive and compile those prospects' academic transcripts and test scores (see accompanying box for a step-by-step description of the certification process).

To begin the certification process, the institution simply would provide the clearinghouse with a list of those prospects that it is recruiting (or a list of any walk-ons for whom certification is needed). It then would be the clearinghouse's responsibility to analyze the documents it has collected and to issue a certification decision.

The system is designed to provide an institution with a decision in writing within 48 hours of completion of the prospect's clearinghouse file.

When needed, immediate access to the decision also would be available through an automated telephone system—the Clearinghouse Data Base Inquiry System (CDBIS). An authorized official of an institution, using a previously issued password, would dial the system and enter one or more student identification numbers. (Usually, the prospect's social security number would be used, provided that the prospect has authorized release of certification information to that institution.)

Prospects and their parents also would be provided with limited access to the automated telephone system.

The entire process is designed to provide equal access to a single certification decision for a given prospect—a decision that has been reached by trained, impartial evaluators.

Oversight

Even so, establishment of the clearinghouse does not preclude institutions from appealing initial-eligibility rulings. Current procedures for the interpretation of initial-eligibility legislations—and the appeal of eligibility decisions based on those interpretations—would remain in effect.

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, working with the NCAA staff, still would be responsible for the interpretation of initial-eligibility legislation. When asked, the committee would provide assistance in cases where the clearinghouse is uncertain how to apply legislation.

Should the clearinghouse determine that a prospective student-athlete is not eligible for certification, it will provide to institutions seeking certification the information that was used in reaching the decision. In turn, those institutions can appeal the decision to the NCAA Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers, under procedures already established by that subcommittee.

Meanwhile, operations of the clearinghouse would be monitored

The clearinghouse process

With the adoption of 1993 Proposal No. 17, certification of the initial eligibility of prospective student athletes would be established as follows:

■ The Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse annually will compile NCAA Form 48-H information covering 23,000 domestic high schools.

■ Each prospective student-athlete will provide to the clearinghouse a release form authorizing the collection of documents needed for certification and release of certification decisions to NCAA institutions, and will pay a fee of approximately $15 to $18 for clearinghouse services (the balance of the cost of certification will be paid by the NCAA). Needy prospective student-athletes may apply to the clearinghouse for a fee waiver.

■ The certification process begins when an NCAA institution submits a request list to the clearinghouse naming the prospective student-athletes who are being recruited. Prospects may be included on the list to certify eligibility for an official visit or to establish initial eligibility before enrollment.

By paying the clearinghouse fee, prospects who are not recruited also may request certification of initial eligibility by the clearinghouse.

■ The clearinghouse will determine that all documents needed for certification are on file; any documents that are missing will be obtained by the clearinghouse as quickly as possible. The clearinghouse routinely will acquire academic transcripts and ACT and SAT score reports.

For walk-on student-athletes, the institution will submit a request list to the clearinghouse and provide release forms to those student-athletes.

■ Once all documents needed for certification are on file with the clearinghouse, it is expected that a preliminary or final certification decision will be issued in writing within 48 hours. Information about the decision will be available even more quickly through an automated telephone system.

by a special committee to be established by the Council.

Implementation

If approved at the Convention, the clearinghouse would begin operation in late summer 1993—in time to collect data for prospective student-athletes who will be recruited during 1993-94.

coaching staff from participating in coaching activities in the sport of basketball for a local sports club or organization, are not applicable to other institutional athletics staff members who are not involved in coaching activities.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 121 Evaluations—Division I-A football

The provisions of Proposal No. 121, which specify that the time period during which the four permissible evaluations occur shall be from May 1 through November 30 of the following academic year, restrict an institution from utilizing any additional evaluations outside of that time period.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 127 Summer basketball certification—Division I

The provisions of Proposal Nos. 127 and 127-1, which permit coaching staff members in the sport of Division I basketball to attend institutional camps per 13.13.1.1 and noninstitutional basketball camps that are certified by the NCAA, would not preclude a noninstitutional camp from using an institution's facilities during the summer of 1993, provided the camp has a preexisting written contract executed before November 15, 1992, to use the institution's facilities. The committee noted that such contracts should be forwarded to the Association's legal counsel for review and that any exception would be applicable only for the summer of 1993.

73) standards should be permitted to compete under Division I eligibility regulations, including the receipt of athletically related financial aid.

b. A midyear transfer student-athlete who does not participate (practice or compete) in a sport classified in Division II or III while enrolled in a Division I (or II for purposes of Proposal No. 73) institution before August 1, 1993, is subject to Division I (or II) eligibility legislation effective August 1, 1993.

c. A student-athlete who participates (practices or competes) during the fall term of the 1992-93 academic year in a sport classified in Division II or III while enrolled in a Division I institution and who transfers at midyear to a second Division I institution that classifies a sport in Division II or III is subject to Division I eligibility regulations, effective August 1, 1993, unless the student-athlete also participates (practices or competes) in the sport classified in Division II or III at the second institution.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 82

6. On-campus employment. The provisions of Proposal No. 82, which indicate that earnings from on-campus employment outside the athletics department during the academic year are considered institutional financial aid only if the athletics interests of the institution intercede on behalf of the student-athlete, are not applicable to on-campus employment earnings associated with work-study programs, which would continue to be considered institutional financial aid per 15.02.3.1. The committee asked that the Council confirm that the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism intended earnings from work-study programs to remain countable.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 85

7. State reciprocity tuition agreements. The committee reviewed the provisions of Proposal No. 85, which require that state reciprocity agreements be considered institutional financial aid, and determined that a state reciprocity agreement is an agreement applicable to all students in a given area (e.g., all students in state A receive a waiver of out-of-state tuition to attend any institution in state B, and vice versa). The committee noted that a student-athlete who receives a tuition waiver that results from a state statutory agreement that permits an institution to pick and choose the recipients of the tuition waiver is considered to have received institutional financial aid per 15.02.3.1.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 115

8. Local sports club (Divisions I and II). The provisions of Proposal No. 115, which preclude a member of an institution's men's or women's basketball coaching staff from participating in coaching activities in the sport of basketball for a local sports club or organization, are not applicable to other institutional athletics staff members who are not involved in coaching activities. The committee recommended that the Recruiting Committee review the provisions of 13.12.2.4 to clarify that the reference to a local sports club or organization implies that the coach is involved with a bona fide team (i.e., the club is not formed only to provide instruction to prospective student-athletes but involves a team participating in competitive activities).

1993 Convention Proposal No. 121

9. Evaluations—Division I-A football. The provisions of Proposal No. 121, which specify that the time period during which the four permissible evaluations occur shall be from May 1 through November 30 of the following academic year, restrict an institution from utilizing any additional evaluations outside of that time period.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 127

10. Summer basketball certification—Division I. The provisions of Proposal Nos. 127 and 127-1, which permit coaching staff members in the sport of Division I basketball to attend institutional camps per 13.13.1.1 and noninstitutional basketball camps that are certified by the NCAA, would not preclude a noninstitutional camp from using an institution's facilities during the summer of 1993, provided the camp has a preexisting written contract executed before November 15, 1992, to use the institution's facilities. The committee noted that such contracts should be forwarded to the Association's legal counsel for review and that any exception would be applicable only for the summer of 1993.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 140

11. Medical examinations. The provisions of Proposal No. 140, which permit student-athletes to receive one on-campus medical examination during the academic year from a professional league's recognized scouting bureau, permit medical exams to be administered by a single scouting bureau recognized by the professional league in a sport.

Professional sports organizations/ amateurism

12. Professional sports organization providing developmental funds to be used by prospective student-athletes. A professional sports organization (e.g., Major League Baseball) may not provide funds to the NCAA to be used for interscholastic developmental programs (i.e., programs that involve high-school students). [Reference: 12.6.1.3 (developmental funds to NCAA)]

Summer camps/employment

13. Compensation provided to student-athletes for employment in summer camps. It is not permissible to establish varying levels of compensation for student-athletes employed in a sports camp or clinic based on the level of skills of the student-athletes. The committee noted that the level of a student-athlete's skills does not directly relate to the student-athlete's teaching ability. Thus, the establishment of different rates of compensation for student-athletes employed in a camp or clinic (not based on actual camp experience) is an indication that the student-athletes are being paid on the basis of the value that the student-athletes may have for the employer because of the athlete's reputation or fame the student-athletes have achieved. [References: 12.4.3 (camp/clinic employment, general rule), 13.13.2.1.1 (employment at camp or clinic—general rule) and IC 11/5/92 Item No. 2]

Committee opposes proposals

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics, addressing proposed legislation that seeks to expand resources for men's athletics, is concerned that the passage of those proposals at the 1993 Convention could have an adverse impact on women's athletics programs.

In particular, Proposal Nos. 23 through 26, which pertain to compensation for volunteer baseball coaches and coaching limitations in baseball, men's basketball and men's ice hockey, were discussed during the committee's December 4 telephone conference.

The committee did not recommend legislation for the 1993 Convention, but expressed support for Proposal Nos. 11, 15, 27, 28, 58, 59 and 136. In addition, the committee directed that each campus should involve its senior women administrators in discussions of the impact on women's athletics of Proposal Nos. 57, 59, 76, 114, 128, 137, 138, 149 and 152.
