Football, equity proponents find some common ground

By J. Gregory Summers
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

College football coaches and women's sports proponents have been depicted as being at odds over how to attain gender equity in intercollegiate athletics programs.

So when it was announced that eight top football coaches and three members of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force were going to be panelists at the Association's 1993 College Football Forum, more than a few eyebrows were raised.

But the 40 sports journalists who attended the 17th annual event February 14-16 in Kansas City, Missouri, saw none of the emotion-charged atmosphere that has surrounded discussions of gender equity. Instead, the coaches and task-force members agreed on two major points: (1) Women should have more opportunities to participate in intercollegiate athletics, and (2) increased opportunities for women should not be at the expense of football or any other sport.

That consensus emerged during the second day of the forum, when two panels of four coaches each met with the media in the morning and task force members answered questions during an afternoon session.

The task-force members attending were Phyllis L. Howlett, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten Conference and cochair of the task force; Grant G. Teaff, director of athletics and former football coach at Baylor University, and Charlotte West, associate athletics director at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

Coaches attending were Mack Brown, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; John Cooper, Ohio State University; Ray Goff, University of Georgia; Fred Goldsmith, Rice University; Glen Mason, University of Kansas; Ron McBride, University of Utah; Chuck Stobart, Memphis State University, and Dick Tomey, University of Arizona.

Opportunities

"I don't know of any coaches who are against gender equity," Cooper said. "We're all talking about opportunities, and I don't think any person—male or female—should be deprived of the

Constituent groups react to legislative concepts

Appearances by representatives of college-athletics constituent groups highlighted the February 10-11 meeting of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics.

Appearing before the committee in Chicago were Betty Jaynes, executive director of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association; James A. Haney, executive director of the National Association of Basketball Coaches; Marcia L. Saneholtz of Washington State University, representing the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators, and Hayden Fry, University of Iowa, and Ray Goff, University of Georgia, representing the American Football Coaches Association.

The representatives were invited by the special committee to give preliminary reactions to a set of 17 legislative concepts that were sent to the membership in January. Several of the concepts addressed coaching positions, recruiting regulations or compensation.

"The AFCA representatives were better prepared to discuss the concepts because they had already gone through their legislative sessions earlier in the year," said James E. Delany, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference and chair of the committee.

"However, the coaches groups indicated that they understood the problems the Association is facing and that they had spent some time considering the impact of the legislative concepts on coaches in these two sports."

More than 4,500 copies of the concepts, along with a response-summary form, were mailed in

Passive-smoke report may affect outdoor facilities across the country, and some institutions have enacted no-smoking bans in response.

A recent Environmental Protection Agency report on the dangers of second-hand smoke, or passive smoking, has further strengthened nonsmokers' arguments to prohibit smoking in densely populated areas, such as offices, restaurants and airport terminals. Now, stadiums and arenas could become a battleground.

The December 1992 EPA report, "Respiratory Health Effects of Passive Smoking: Lung Cancer and

Other Disorders," concluded that "the widespread exposure to environmental tobacco smoke (ETS) in the United States presents a serious and substantial public health impact."

Lung carcinogen

The EPA said that ETS is a human lung carcinogen that is responsible for approximately 3,000 lung-cancer deaths annually among nonsmoking adults in the United States. Nonsmokers are defined as those who never smoked or those who are former smokers.

While the EPA report reinforced oft-heard dangers of smoking, it made a strong statement by concluding that ETS is a known hu-

A weekly summary of major activities within the Association

Certification

Committee's first meeting to be in late March

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification will meet for the first time in late March to begin work on implementing the athletics certification plan that was adopted at the January Convention.

Between now and August, the committee will determine the certification schedule, develop a certification handbook, refine the self-study instrument, and establish other administrative procedures, including the method for selecting a pool of peer reviewers.

Division I institutions are to be informed of the initial five-year certification schedule by August.

R. Gerald Turner, chancellor of the University of Mississippi and former Presidents Commission chair, will chair the committee, which was appointed at the end of January.

For more detail, see the January 27, January 20 and December 16 issues of The NCAA News.

First meeting: Late March.

Finances

Financial conditions deadline approaching

The March 1 deadline is approaching for the membership to respond to a package of 17 "legislative concepts" produced by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics.

The list, which was mailed to the membership January 15, is divided into three categories: 1994 legislative concepts, longer-term legislative concepts (1994-1996), and recommendations to institutions and conferences.

Meanwhile, the special committee met February 10-11 in Chicago. A report on that meeting appears on page 1 of this issue.

For more detail, see page 1 of this issue and the December 23 and November 30 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: To be determined.

James D. McComas, president of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and a member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, chairs the special committee.

Student-athlete welfare is the primary topic for the third year of the Commission's strategic plan. The timetable calls for the special committee to have legislation for the 1995 Convention.

For more detail, see the February 10, January 27 and November 9 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: Late April.

Championships

Division I members considering proposal

Division I members are in the process of considering the NCAA Executive Committee's proposal to enhance the Association's championships program.

A detailed description of the plan was mailed to Division I members January 11. An April 1 deadline has been set for responses.

Divisions II and III member institutions discussed the proposed revisions at the Convention.

The Executive Committee's plan would base field sizes on sponsorship and would deemphasize the revenue potential of a championship. Per diem, traveling parties and committee structure also would be affected.

After reviewing the response from the membership, the Executive Committee hopes to approve a final plan at its May meeting.

For more detail, see the December 16, November 30 and October 26 issues of The NCAA News.

Next Executive Committee meeting: May 3-6 in Monterey, California.

Enforcement

Ad hoc committee plans initial meeting

The NCAA Ad Hoc Committee to Study Enforcement Issues will meet for the first time March 8-9 in Arlington, Virginia.

The committee is charged with studying the two remaining recommendations from the report of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process. Those recommendations involve the use of independent hearing officers and the use of open hearings.

Charles E. Young, chancellor of the University of California, Los Angeles, will chair the committee.

Couch potatoes at courtside

For many a true sports fan, sitting at home on the sofa and watching a ball game with beverages within arm's reach is the best way to enjoy sports.

Even better, though, is being in an arena with all of the ambience of home—couch included.

Fans of the University of South Dakota men's basketball team are enjoying a home away from home in the DakotaDome. Two couches have been added at courtside, and selected fans have the opportunity to watch the game like true sports enthusiasts.

The living-room-like accommodations include delivered soft drinks and pizza.

"Great seats, huh, buddy," said Jim Frye, who was one of the first couch potatoes. "The view was great, the pop was cold and the pizza was hot. It's a great idea, a good fund-raiser, and it gives the announcer something to talk about during breaks in the action."

Last light

The 1,020th and final Point of Light in former President Bush's program honoring volunteerism was given to former University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, athlete C. Kyle Peterson.

Peterson, who played ice hockey for the Golden Gophers in 1952 and 1953, and his wife, Marilyn, were recognized with nine other recipients last month at a White House ceremony.

Eight years ago, Peterson, 61, founded the Mariucci Inner-City Hockey Starter Association, named after the late Minnesota coach John Mariucci. Kids ages 6 to 8 pay $10 to join the privately supported group, and in return they receive equipment, ice time and instruction from volunteers. About 80 percent are black and most come from single parent families, USA Today reported.

Another win for Rupp

The late University of Kentucky men's basketball coach Adolph Rupp, who won more games in competition involving four-year colleges than any other coach in history, recently had his total increased by one to 876 career victories.

A December 9, 1932, contest between the Wildcats and a team made up of Kentucky alumni, which Rupp's team won, 52-17, was not recorded as an official contest. The school had counted games against the alumni in the 1934, 1935 and 1941 seasons, before adoption of an NCAA rule in 1948 mandating that official games can occur only between two four-year, United States colleges.

Newspaper accounts indicate a paying crowd of 500 persons saw the game. Nowhere was it mentioned that the contest was an exhibition.

The team's statistics that year, in which Kentucky previously was credited with a 22-1 mark (23 games), actually counted 24 games.

Quite a day

Sona Bedenian of Aurora University will never forget February 6, 1993.

The senior point guard on the women's basketball team at Aurora scored 19 points in an 80-29 victory over Rockford College. In the process, Bedenian became the school's all-time career scoring leader.

Two hours later at the school's annual volleyball awards dinner, Bedenian was named the Spartans' "most valuable player."

And if that is not enough, she also plays softball.

Convention shatters total-vote records

Two voting records were broken at the 1993 NCAA Convention in Dallas, which recorded the 14 highest total-vote counts in Association history.

The total-vote record thus was eclipsed 14 times. Meanwhile, Division II recorded its 11 highest counts ever. The other divisions and subdivisions did not reach their all-time high marks.

In the last three Conventions, Division II has obliterated its old 1990 record of 187. It boosted that mark to 196 in 1991, jumped it again to 199 on two different votes in 1992 and then chalked up 11 votes over 200 in Dallas last month. The new mark is 213, recorded on defeated Proposal No. 40, which would have moved up the beginning of preseason basketball practice in that division.

Meanwhile, the total-vote record leaped from the 758 that was set three times in 1991 all the way to 796 in Dallas. That was on Proposal No. 51-B, the unsuccessful attempt by the NCAA Presidents Commission to permit a moratorium of sorts on certain legislative proposals.

The Convention also recorded 13 other votes ranging from 776 to 794, all well over the old 758 mark that had stood for two years.

Prior to 1990, there had been only one counted vote in NCAA history of more than 700. That was 704 at the 1987 special Convention on the legislation that moved the financial aid limitation from the constitution to the bylaws. Before that, the record had been 641, set in 1984 on the proposal to create an all-powerful Board of Presidents.

The unchanged records:

■ Division I vote: Record is 330, Nashville, Tennessee, 1991, on an amendment to the time-reduction proposal. High in Dallas: 326 on an unsuccessful motion to reconsider Proposal No. 30, men's basketball grant limits.

■ Division I-A vote: Record is 117, Anaheim, California, 1992, permissible recruiting contacts in football. High in Dallas: 113, Proposal No. 22, graduate assistant football coach.

■ Division I-AA vote: Record is 96, Dallas, 1990, spring football practice. High in Dallas this year: 95, Proposal No. 62, restricted-earnings coaches in football.

■ Division III vote: Record is 268, Nashville, 1991, on two different parts of that division's time-reduction proposal. High in Dallas: 266 twice, on Proposal Nos. 40 and 41, both dealing with Division III playing and practice seasons.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be submitted in writing to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than March 3, 1993.

Women's Soccer Committee: Replacement for Marcia A. McDermott, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, resigned from the committee. Appointee must be from Division I, preferably from the South women's soccer region.

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 8-9 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Research Committee:

■ Heard a report from Wilford S. Bailey, consultant to the NCAA Presidents Commission, on the NCAA Academic Integrity, Moral and Social Development (AIMS) research project. The Commission's Subcommittee on Strategic Planning will consider that project in its April meeting.

■ The committee heard a report from a subcommittee that is working with a subcommittee of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee to design a study that will assess the effects of initial- and continuing-eligibility legislation adopted at the 1992 NCAA Convention. Data collection for that study will begin shortly.

Facilities

Fullerton Field, the renovated football field and stadium facility at Emory and Henry College, received one of the first Community Beautification Awards in the "public and community use" category from the Washington County Clean Virginia Program.

The soccer field at Northern Illinois University has taken a new shape—literally. The field, complete with a new drainage system, was reshaped with a sand and soil crown. In addition, permanent aluminum seating for nearly 2,000 spectators is in the works.

College Misericordia's Anderson Sports Health Center is nearing completion. The 80,000-square-foot facility will house athletics department offices, a sports-injury rehabilitation center, a health center, weight and fitness rooms, a six-lane regulation swimming pool, indoor jogging track, racquetball courts, and laboratory space.

Fact file

Of the sports recognized by the NCAA, only nine of 19 men's sports and seven of 15 women's sports were sponsored by at least half of the member institutions in 1991-92. For men, the nine were basketball, baseball, cross country, tennis, golf, soccer, outdoor track, football and indoor track. For women, the seven were basketball, volleyball, tennis, cross country, softball, outdoor track and indoor track. Meanwhile, the lowest sponsorship among the NCAA-recognized sports for men was gymnastics, sponsored by only 41 of the more than 800 member institutions that year. For women, the lowest was skiing, with 44 sponsors.

Basketball bracket to be broadcast live

The announcement of the bracket for the Division III Men's Basketball Championship will be broadcast live via satellite late this month.

The broadcast, which will originate from the studios of Public Broadcasting System affiliate KCPT-TV in Kansas City, Missouri, is scheduled for 7 p.m. (Central time) Sunday, February 28.

Produced by NCAA Productions, the bracket-announcement telecast is the first of three scheduled for winter championships. Broadcasts are planned in March for Division II men's basketball and Division I men's ice hockey.

Satellite coordinates for the Division III men's basketball broadcast are Telstar 301, Transponder 12 Vertical; audio 6.2 and 6.8.

The announcement also can be heard by telephone. The number is 913/661-0896.

Take deep breath and expel smoke

By Stanton A. Glantz
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN FRANCISCO

Once upon a time, tobacco smoke was part of all sports. The shafts of smoke illuminated by the stadium lights were part of the atmosphere. Times have changed, and that smoke now is widely recognized as toxic air pollution.

Secondhand tobacco smoke is a witch's brew of toxic chemicals. It contains more than 4,000 compounds, including carbon monoxide (a colorless, odorless, poisonous gas), ammonia (toilet bowl cleaner), hydrazine (rocket fuel), acetone (nail polish remover), benzene (an industrial solvent and potent carcinogen), polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons (diesel fumes), formaldehyde (used to preserve dead things, also a carcinogen) and, of course, nicotine (the addictive drug in tobacco, also a potent cardiac poison and insecticide).

Mindful of this and other evidence, the Environmental Protection Agency identified secondhand smoke as a Group A (proven human) carcinogen with no safe level of exposure. It also concluded that secondhand smoke kills 3,000 nonsmokers every year because of lung cancer. The EPA concluded that secondhand-smoke exposure provoked more than a million asthma attacks in children, as well as adult respiratory problems.

And that's not all.

The American Heart Association says secondhand smoke poses a special danger to the heart and causes 35,000 to 40,000 heart-disease deaths every year. When these heart-disease deaths are added to those from lung and other cancers, the secondhand-smoke death toll reaches 53,000 people every year. Put another way, secondhand smoke is the third-leading preventable cause of death, behind active smoking (434,000) and alcohol (106,000). Secondhand smoke kills more people than AIDS (40,000) and many more than illegal drugs (8,000, including drug-related crime).

The public responded to the scientific evidence by creating smoke-free workplaces

SAT score irrelevant after freshman year

In the guest editorial "Money, not race, affects test data" (January 27 issue of The NCAA News), Bill Hogan of the University of San Francisco points out, "An SAT score is not the perfect measure of academic success, but it is the best single test available."

What an SAT score purports to predict is not "academic success" in general, but freshman grades. So when he later suggests that partial and nonqualifiers and junior college transfers should be required to "pass" the SAT before becoming eligible for practice and competition, he is demanding of the SAT something for which it was not designed. There is no "pass" or "fail" score on an SAT. The best predictor of college grades is college grades. Once a student successfully has completed the freshman year, the SAT has outlived its usefulness.

Living in California, with its immensely successful community college system, Mr. Hogan should know better than to suggest that those students who applied themselves to their academic work and received an associate of arts degree might have a "bogus" degree. At my school, we accept about twice as many JC transfers as first-time freshmen, and the JC transfers have a higher graduation rate. With 56 transferable units and a 2.000 grade-point average, transfer students are admitted without presenting an SAT score.

My school and conference (Big West) supported legislation at last year's NCAA Convention that would have allowed Prop 48 students to earn back a fourth year of eligibility after demonstrating their academic success at the college level. Isn't it time that we reward these students who overcame inadequate preparation rather than penalize them for the rest of their college careers, regardless of their academic performance?

□ Opinions

Coaches' stress can be abnormal, disruptive

Jay Alexander, physician

Chicago Tribune

Alexander treated Chicago Bears coach Mike Ditka after Ditka's 1988 heart attack.

"These guys (coaches) have bursts of stress; it's a very up-and-down kind of thing. I think it's an abnormal amount of stress—very disruptive to a normal lifestyle....

"My personal feeling is that no doctor should have more than one coach in a lifetime to take care of. One is enough."

Ron Fraser, head baseball coach
University of Miami (Florida)

Chicago Tribune

"I think there's more awareness today. The old school of thought was that nothing can hurt me; I'm going to be all right. Now, coaches seem to think more about themselves and their families. Any coach who has been through it a long time realizes, 'Hey, I have to get away.'"

Title IX

Phyllis L. Howlett, cochair
NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force

The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

"I'm finally seeing society embrace what the Federal government passed 20 years ago. The law can't drive social behavior. I believe more people are trying to do what's right because it is the right thing to do and not because a court ordered them."

Bill Arnold, assistant athletics director
University of Central Florida

The Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

"I believe in opportunities for women, but I think it is crazy to say for every man you put in uniform you have to put a woman in uniform. Unless the financial structure changes, there will be very few men's sports at colleges with football teams, and several more women's sports."

Extended eligibility

Bonnie Frankel, student-athlete
Loyola Marymount University

New York Times

Frankel's case led to the adoption of 1993 Convention Proposal No. 76, which permits women who initially enrolled in a collegiate institution before the NCAA began offering women's championships (1981-82 academic year) to use the 10-semester, 15-quarter rule as opposed to the five-year rule.

"There are a lot of women in the baby-boomer generation who are coming back to school because of economics, divorce, low esteem or whatever. Women are going back to work and school to improve themselves.

"I'm not going to be the only one who finds a talent they had no idea they ever had. I knew my brother was a quality athlete. But as girls, we weren't taught athletics....

"Someone's got to put in the same rule for men. It would be a shame for some guy who finds a hidden talent but has no chance to develop it....

"This has nothing to do with Bonnie Frankel. All I did was open the door. There will be many more. It's the older women coming back in power."

Division I-A football playoff

James E. Delany, commissioner
Big Ten Conference

The Dallas Morning News

"The American public seems to have an unyielding appetite to see who No. 1 is.... Our institutions are not for a playoff. We're not sure (a playoff) contributes to the welfare of the coaches and the student-athlete."

David R. Maggard, athletics director
University of Miami (Florida)

The Dallas Morning News

On the possibility of limiting a I-A playoff to a single game:

"There's going to be enormous pressure to have more than a one-game playoff, especially once you get it going. How do you tell Notre Dame to stay home? Florida State?"

Charles M. Neinas, executive director
College Football Association

The Dallas Morning News

"I don't think you'll find a lot of coaches jumping up and down to support the NCAA because they don't like the NCAA. If the NCAA is going to have a playoff, why have another game for the benefit of things other than football?"

Minority coaches

Jim Caldwell, head football coach
Wake Forest University

Greensboro News and Record

On how he prepared to become a head coach (Caldwell is one of three recently appointed black coaches in Division I-A):

"I tried to experience every facet of the coaching experience. So I've always been the one who's raised my hand to volunteer for the jobs nobody else wanted to do.

"Self-promotion isn't as important as what your bosses and colleagues say about you. I've never been impatient, never applied for a head coaching job. This was my first head coaching opportunity, so I feel fortunate to be here."

On recruiting:

"When you recruit, you can't afford to come on like a used-car salesman. You have to know your institution and remember that a student-athlete's parents are yielding some of their responsibility to you for the next four or five years.

"Winning football games is important, but not by compromising the academic integrity of the institution."

Discrimination

Marian Washington,
Head women's basketball coach
University of Kansas

Omaha World-Herald

"It's discouraging for me to have a white athlete be told she shouldn't come to play for me because she needs to be with an intelligent group. That just happened. Thank goodness, the very intelligent white athlete decided to sign.

"When I look at the discrimination I have experienced and that continues to go on, I am tired of people just remaining quiet and hoping it will go away."

Women's Spotlight falls on equity, bracket expansion

By Laura E. Bollig
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Two topics sure to affect women's basketball in the near future—championship bracket expansion and gender equity—were the focus of the NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball February 9 in New York.

Those subjects were addressed in a news conference by four of the nation's top coaches; NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, and Judith Holland, chair of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee.

The prospect of expanding the Division I women's championship field from 48 teams to 64 under a proposed NCAA Executive Committee championships-enhancement program brought a predictably favorable reaction from Jim Foster, head coach at No. 2-ranked Vanderbilt University and current president of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

'Great happiness'

"I think the coaches' reaction is one of great happiness. One of the measuring sticks of success is postseason play. If you make it into postseason play, you are successful. If you're successful, you keep your job," Foster said.

"I think it will improve the game dramatically. There are still some situations where the funding to compete is not there. This will force some administrations to look at funding when winning a conference championship will mean getting into the tournament."

Georgia Institute of Technology coach Agnus Berenato pointed out that the pool of strong teams in Division I has increased dramatically.

"Parity in women's basketball is here. You take the top 25 or 40 or 50 teams, and it has changed so much just in the past season," Berenato said. "The parity is here now, whereas eight or 10 years ago, you had a set five or six teams that were great. I think it's a compliment to our programs, the coaching staffs and the players and a reward from the NCAA to have a 64-team bracket."

Much work remains

Bracket expansion has to clear one last hurdle before becoming a reality. The Executive Committee is expected to take final action on the proposed enhancement program at its May 1993 meeting. If the Executive Committee approves expansion in Division I women's basketball, the work has only just begun, Holland said.

One idea the Division I Women's Basketball Committee has discussed is moving the playing season back one month. The result—a February Women's Final Four—would eliminate competition for attention with the men's tournament.

Whatever path the committee chooses to take, a lot of questions will need to be addressed, Holland said.

"It's going to require a lot of committee work to make this thing work. The coaches have wanted this for a long time, and we have quality teams to make that possible," Holland said. "We're still going to have decisions to make."

"We now seed eight teams and pair them up in each region. We will have to ask how many teams should be seeded and are we ready to send teams all over the country to play basketball? The last question is going to be the tournament format. We've played first and second rounds on home floors. That's a format the committee still has a comfort zone with.

"Playing on home floors is one of the last things the committee will look at," Holland said. "The stage we're at in women's basketball is such that you need people in those seats. If we move people long distances, we're going to lose that. This is a grass-roots game right now."

Gender equity

Stimulating interest in women's athletics at that grass-roots level was a point Schultz made during his discussion of gender-equity issues.

"People know what Title IX is; it's the law. But the inability to put a firm definition on gender equity has raised a lot of questions," Schultz said. "The NCAA is committed to doing whatever it can to help institutions achieve gender equity."

"The important thing is that whatever happens, we want to enhance opportunities for women. It's important to be sure that whatever is done is done in a proactive, positive way. We want it to be a positive that we have more women participating not only at the college level, but also at the high-school level. It's important to stimulate growth at that level."

Schultz said women's basketball probably will be less affected by gender-equity actions than other women's sports.

"I think gender equity will have less impact on women's basketball than any other women's sport, just because it has become the premier women's sport at many schools. It's almost at its full complement of scholarships right now at most schools," Schultz said.

TV contract

Also discussed at the Spotlight were negotiations for a national television contract. That issue pushed to the forefront in recent weeks after then-No. 1 Vanderbilt hosted the No. 2-ranked University of Tennessee, Knoxville, in a game that was not nationally televised.

Schultz said such in-season matchups should be on television and would help stimulate the interest of national networks and cable carriers.

"Getting some of these key matchups on television is the key to getting a national contract. The success of the tournament and the Women's Final Four and the fact that the ratings have been good indicate there's a growing interest in women's basketball," Schultz said. "We're going to have to work harder to stimulate interest on the part of the networks and cable carriers to be interested in doing in-season broadcasts."

Also participating in the Spotlight were coaches Ceal Barry, University of Colorado, Boulder, and Marsha Sharp, Texas Tech University. Players taking part in the Spotlight were Shelley Jarrard, Vanderbilt; Shelley Sheetz, Colorado; Sheryl Swoopes, Texas Tech, and Joyce Pierce, Georgia Tech.

Committee seeks changes in appointment structure

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics has recommended that the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning study the committee-appointment structure to find better ways to identify and expand the pool of qualified women candidates for NCAA committees.

The women's athletics committee met February 8-9 in Kansas City, Missouri.

The committee is concerned that the committee-appointment system does not allow enough review time between the August notice to submit nominations for committees and the October date when the NCAA Council meets and approves appointment recommendations. The committee suggested changing the date of notice to the membership in order to give the membership, and relevant committees, more time to identify and review qualified candidates.

The committee also encouraged the membership to identify and recommend qualified candidates for the Committee on Women's Athletics before the committee's next meeting June 14-16 in Big

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 8-9 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Committee on Women's Athletics:

- Received an update on the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force from Phyllis L. Howlett, assistant commissioner of the Big Ten Conference and chair of the task force and the Committee on Women's Athletics, and heard a report from Ursula R. Walsh, NCAA director of research, on the possibility of conducting a survey at all member institutions to measure the interest in athletics of incoming freshman women.
- Formed a subcommittee to study and design a model that promotes optimum involvement of women in governance at the conference level. The subcommittee consists of Richard A. Rasmussen, commissioner of the University Athletic Association; Patricia V. Viverito, commissioner of the Gateway Football Conference and senior associate commissioner of the Missouri Valley Conference, and Sheila K. Wallace-Kovalchik, commissioner of the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association.
- Agreed to continue to promote its relationships with the National Association of Collegiate Fork, Montana, and to submit those recommendations to Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of eligibility and staff liaison to the Committee on Women's Athletics.

The committee also recom-

Women Athletic Administrators (NACWAA) and the Women's Sports Foundation and, in particular, to continue its participation at NACWAA's annual fall meeting. The committee also recommended that its chair be the NCAA representative on the Women's Sports Foundation's advisory board.

■ Discussed violence toward and sexual harassment of female student-athletes and recommended developing a position paper to address the problem and how it may relate to the behavior of male student-athletes.

■ Formed a subcommittee consisting of Paul E. Hartman of Oakland University, Patricia A. Wall of the Southeastern Conference, and two members of the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee yet to be determined to review the NCAA vita bank.

■ Heard a report on the Sara Lee Corporation's Discover Women's Sports Grant Program, which is designed to provide women's sports with financial support to increase the popularity and support of programs on campuses and within surrounding communities. The average grant is expected to be $10,000 and the minimum will be $5,000.

mended keeping names of nominees on file at the national office for at least two years in order to maintain the pool of applicants for all committee vacancies.

In a related matter, the committee charged the NCAA staff with developing a list of senior woman administrators at member institutions, as well as women coaches, faculty athletics representatives, compliance officers, registrars and other administrators, who may be interested in and qualified for committee appointments.

The committee also asked the NCAA management team—consisting of the Association's chief operating officer and four group executive directors—to revisit the issue of designating a senior woman administrator on the national office staff.

The committee believes it is important to have a person at the national office who is responsible for tracking various issues related to women's interests. The management team previously has said it would not be in the best interests of the membership to designate one senior woman administrator at the national office because it might give the impression that only one person need be involved in women's issues.

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 29 bills from 18 states. The report includes 22 bills that have been introduced, and seven pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (February 3, 1993). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of February 11, 1993. The listed bills were selected for inclusion in this report from a larger pool of bills concerning sports and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding particular bills, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

■ Compliance briefs

General information

Graduation-rates disclosure form: The 1993 NCAA Division I graduation-rates disclosure form (Form 93-6a) was sent to chief executive officers, directors of athletics, faculty athletics representatives and senior woman administrators of NCAA Division I member institutions February 1. The completed form is due in the NCAA national office March 31. The March 31 deadline replaces the original July 1 reporting deadline.

To expedite completion of the reporting form and to assist member institutions in meeting the reporting deadline, an electronic version of the reporting form is available upon request from the national office at no charge. The electronic form was mailed February 10 to all institutions that had requested the form, including those that requested last year's version of the form. Failure to submit the required form by the deadline may jeopardize an institution's eligibility for participation in NCAA-sponsored championship events during the 1993-94 academic year. Questions regarding the form should be referred to the compliance services staff at the national office.

Coaches certification: The NCAA Council (Division II steering committee) approved recommended procedures for administering the Division II coaches-certification examination during its January meeting. The newly approved Division II coaches-certification procedures are similar to those established for Division I. In particular, the Division II exam is a timed, open-book test in which participants will be permitted to use copies of the NCAA Manual. The Division II exam consists of a number of true/false and multiple-choice questions that cover information from Bylaw 13 (recruiting) and parts of Bylaw 14 (eligibility) and Bylaw 15 (financial aid) that relate to recruiting. The test may be given at any time after receipt of all testing materials; testing opportunities are limited only by the stipulation that 30 days shall elapse between a participant's test dates. The minimum passing score for the test is 80 percent.

The 1993-94 Division I exam is somewhat more difficult than last year's version, in part because of the inclusion of test items concerning transfer regulations. The difficulty level of this year's Division II exam is comparable to the difficulty level of last year's Division I exam. The certification procedures for Division II will be published in an upcoming edition of The NCAA News. The coaches-certification packets for both Divisions I and II are scheduled for distribution to each conference office this month.

1993 NCAA Regional Seminars: A memorandum (including specific information concerning the 1993 NCAA regional seminars) was sent February 5 to selected athletics administrators of NCAA Divisions I and II member institutions and conferences. In addition to a copy of the tentative agenda and hotel information sheets, the mailing included a seminar registration card and a hotel room-reservation form. All recipients of the materials are reminded to complete and return the seminar registration card and the hotel room-reservation form as instructed. Those interested in additional information regarding the 1993 seminars may contact Chrystal L. Gates at the national office.

Meetings

College Football Association (CFA). National office members from the compliance services and legislative services staffs will be involved in four regional recruiting seminars sponsored by the CFA. The seminars will be conducted March 1 in Kansas City, Missouri; March 2 in Dallas; March 3 in Atlanta;

More...More...More...

In our second year of publishing The National Directory of College Athletics, we have included more schools, more phone numbers, more fax numbers and more assistants than ever before. We have added an NCAA staff directory. We have separated the conference and affiliation categories, included the athletic secretary and added the school president's phone number. We have alphabetized the sport listings after football and basketball. And that's just on the inside.

As this is your directory, the one put out in the name of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA), many of these improvements have been by your suggestions. We endeavor to create a directory that is geared to how you, the athletic director, administrator and coach work. Keep the good suggestions coming.

Team goals now score a '10' with gymnast

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

When Jair Lynch left his hometown of Washington, D.C., and headed to Stanford University on a men's gymnastics scholarship, he expected the change in lifestyle to be his biggest adjustment.

It was not.

Lynch's biggest adjustment came in an area he never considered: gymnastics.

After a decade of competing solely on an individual basis, working and training for his own goals, Lynch suddenly found himself trying to balance personal goals with those of the team.

It was not easy.

"Switching to a team mode, understanding that I was competing for the team, was difficult," admitted Lynch. "It took me some time to understand that I can't be pressured if I miss or try to do more if someone else misses. I had performed as an individual for so long and suddenly I was performing for myself and also doing it for the team. I felt like I was walking a tightrope."

But it is an act that Lynch has mastered.

Behind team success

One of three seniors on the Cardinal squad, Lynch not only has become one of the nation's top gymnasts, he also has been instrumental in the team's rise to the top of collegiate gymnastics. During the past two years, Stanford has dominated the No. 1 spot in the top-20 rankings. Last year, the Cardinal won its first NCAA team title.

"Jair is a very positive influence," said Stanford coach Sadao Hamada. "He sets a good example because he's very focused—he can really concentrate. Everything he does is something very productive. Also, his discipline level is very, very high. He's very self-motivated."

Lynch's individual accomplishments stand as evidence.

A cocaptain on the 1993 Cardinal squad, Lynch has enjoyed tremendous individual success. In 1992 alone, he was named Pacific-10 Conference gymnast of the year, earned first-team Pac-10 all-academic honors, won the NCAA horizontal-bar title and qualified for the U.S. Olympic team. At Barcelona, he managed a sixth-place finish on the parallel bars despite spending three days in bed with a virus during the week of competition.

"Jair was kind of a long shot (for the Olympics), but he worked very hard and came along better than we planned," said Hamada.

Started in pool

Lynch's participation in the sport was anything but planned.

When he was 8 years old, he says he tried sports like football and basketball, but "my father pushed me toward swimming and diving because he knew I wasn't going to be 6 foot, 220 pounds."

Lynch, who stands 5-4 and weighs 130, came to love the sport, especially diving. He progressed so quickly that he caught the eye of a gymnastics coach. Within

Proposals would let athletes change their minds on draft

The NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee has endorsed a pair of proposals that would allow student-athletes in football and men's basketball who declare themselves available for a professional draft the opportunity to retain their collegiate eligibility.

Meeting February 3-5 in Indian Wells, California, the committee cited the large percentage of student-athletes—specifically underclassmen—declaring themselves eligible for professional drafts and not being drafted at all, as well as differences in the draft times and procedures of the professional leagues, in its endorsement.

Specifically, the committee voted to recommend that the NCAA Council sponsor legislation at the 1994 Convention allowing student-athletes in football who declare for the National Football League draft a grace period of up to one week before National Letter-of-Intent signing day to recant their decisions.

By allowing a student-athlete approximately three additional weeks (in 1993, student-athletes had to declare for the draft by January 6 and national signing day was February 3) to make a decision, the committee believes that both the student-athlete and the football squad would benefit: The student-athlete would have additional time to evaluate his decision and the coaches would be able to accommodate changes in their recruiting decisions before the national signing day.

The proposal for basketball, which received broad support in a survey of Division I coaches, would permit a student-athlete—one time only—to decide up to 30 days after selection in the National Basketball Association draft whether to turn professional or return to school.

Other actions

In other actions at its February 3-5 meeting in Indian Wells, California, the Professional Sports Liaison Committee:

- Met with Don Weiss, National Football League director of planning, and discussed the new NFL labor-relations agreement, the rookie salary cap and the reduced draft pool (seven rounds).

- Met with Major League Baseball representatives and discussed the concept of funding baseball academies for high-school age males and females, as well as Major League Baseball's vote in March to make August 15 the cutoff date for signing drafted student-athletes.

- Recommended that Bylaw 12.3, which requires that a student-athlete be declared ineligible if he or she agrees in writing or orally to be represented by an agent, be revised to declare a student-athlete ineligible only if an exchange of value occurs between the agent and student-athlete.

- Recommended a proposal to the NCAA Council permitting head coaches to contact professional teams or sports agents on behalf of student-athletes. The proposal would be limited to head coaches only and would require that athletics directors be notified of such contact.

- Resubmitted to the NCAA Council a proposal permitting institutions' athletics programs to receive donated equipment from professional sports teams.

- Endorsed recommendations by its summer baseball subcommittee, including banning tobacco in summer baseball leagues, allowing collegiate coaches to assist in the administrative development of summer leagues, allowing interleague all-star games for summer leagues in the same locales, and allocating $520,000 for the operations of the summer leagues.

Currently, under NCAA Bylaw 12.2.4.2, a student-athlete loses eligibility in a particular sport when that individual asks to be placed on the draft list of a professional league in that sport. That is true regardless of whether the student-athlete withdraws his or her name from the draft list before the actual draft, remains on the list but is not drafted or is drafted but does not sign an agreement with any professional athletics team.

The committee believes the football proposal would benefit greatly student-athletes who enter a professional draft and are not drafted as high as expected or at all. Further, according to research, more than half of the student-athletes who declare themselves eligible for the draft are not drafted, and of those who are drafted, only half make an NFL roster.

III volleyball targets championship formats

Committee seeks realignment for 1994

Discussions of formats for approaching championships dominated the NCAA Division III Women's Volleyball Committee meeting February 3-6 in Sarasota, Florida.

Because of an NCAA Executive Committee proposal that would increase the 1993 Division III Women's Volleyball Championship field from 24 to 32 teams, the volleyball committee discussed ways of selecting the larger field.

The committee decided to base its 1993 championship selection process on the six existing regions and to select a minimum of four teams from each region, with the remaining teams selected at large.

It then developed a recommendation to the Executive Committee to realign the country into eight regions (New England, New York, Middle Atlantic, South, Great Lakes, Central, Midwest and West) for the 1994 championship. The championship field would be determined either by selecting four teams from each region or by a formula based on the sponsorship numbers within a region and the performance history of those teams in past championships.

The Executive Committee plans to take final action regarding championships-field sizes at its May meeting.

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 3-6 meeting in Sarasota, Florida, the Division III Women's Volleyball Committee:

- Recommended automatic qualification for the 1993 championship for the following conferences: the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association and the Middle Atlantic States Collegiate Athletic, Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic, Ohio Athletic, Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic, State University of New York Athletic and Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conferences.

- Reaffirmed its support for the use of regular scoring in championship competition. Rally scoring has been used since 1991.

- Reviewed a proposal to the Executive Committee for increasing the size of the Division III Women's Volleyball Committee.

- Reviewed a recommendation to the Executive Committee to increase officials' pay.

■ Presidents Commission minutes

Meeting January 13, 1993

Following are the minutes of the January 13, 1993, meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission, which was held at the Loews Anatole Hotel in Dallas. All actions taken by the Commission are included:

1. Opening Remarks.

a. Chancellor Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien of the University of New Orleans, Presidents Commission chair, extended the Commission's welcome to President Jon Wefald of Kansas State University, the Commission's newest member, and President Bob H. Suzuki of California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, who was attending a meeting of the Commission for the first time. Also attending the meeting were Presidents Michele Toleda Myers, Denison University; Daniel H. Perlman, Webster University; Nicholas S. Rashford, St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania); and Gary A. Sojka, Bucknell University, who will be joining the Commission in April. Chancellor O'Brien also welcomed NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, Secretary-Treasurer B. J. Skelton, Division I Vice-President R. Elaine Dreidame, Division II Vice-President Anthony F. Ceddia, Division III Vice-President John H. Harvey, and Wilford S. Bailey and Bernard F. Sliger, consultants retained to assist the Commission in gaining support for its reform initiatives.

b. Chancellor O'Brien also noted for the record that four members of the Commission would complete their service at the conclusion of this meeting, and on behalf of the Commission, he expressed gratitude for the contributions of Presidents Sheldon Hackney, University of Pennsylvania; David Marker, Cornell College; Stephen Joel Trachtenberg, George Washington University, and David L. Warren, Ohio Wesleyan University.

2. Previous Minutes.

It was voted that the minutes of the September 30-October 1, 1992, meeting be approved as distributed.

3. NCAA Convention.

a. The Commission reviewed the 1993 NCAA Convention schedule. Chancellor O'Brien noted the Chief Executive Officers Forum scheduled later in the day, followed by a reception for chief executive officers and the Association's honors dinner in the evening. Chancellor O'Brien also noted the scheduled breakfast for chief executive officers attending the Convention Thursday, January 14, and a luncheon for chief executive officers of Division II member institutions the same day. Chancellor O'Brien encouraged Commission members' attendance at those functions.

b. Commission members heard a report of efforts by Bailey and Sliger to build support for the Commission's reform agenda. Bailey noted that the leadership of several of the nation's most prominent higher education associations had expressed support for the Commission's reform agenda and had been in communication with their members to urge those institutions' support during the 1993 Convention. Bailey also noted that a survey of chief executive officers in advance of the Convention reflected broad support for the legislative proposals being sponsored by the Commission.

c. The Commission turned its attention to legislative proposals in the Commission grouping.

(1) The Commission reviewed the provisions of Proposal No. 15.

(a) The Division I subcommittee recommended that the Commission support Proposal Nos. 15-1 and 15-2.

It was voted that the Commission support the proposed amendments.

(b) The Division I subcommittee recommended that the Commission oppose Proposal No. 15-3.

It was voted that the Commission oppose the proposal.

(2) It was noted for the record that the NCAA Council had voted during its pre-Convention meeting to oppose Proposal Nos. 18 through 21 and had requested that the Commission join the Council in opposing these proposals.

It was voted that the Commission oppose all four proposals.

(3) It was noted for the record that the Council had voted during its pre-Convention meeting to remove its opposition to Proposal Nos. 31 and 36 if Proposal Nos. 31-1 and 36-1, respectively, are adopted by the Convention.

It was voted that the Commission join the Council in these positions.

(4) The Commission reviewed the provisions of Proposal No. 52. It was the sense of the meeting that the Commission urge the proposal's sponsors to agree to a referral of the proposal to the Council and the Commission; further, that if the proposal is presented on the Convention floor without a motion to refer, the Commission maintain its opposition to the proposal.

4. Division Subcommittees. The Commission's division subcommittee chairs reported actions of the division subcommittees that had not been reported earlier in the meeting.

a. Chancellor Charles E. Young of the University of California, Los Angeles, Division I chair, reported that the Division I subcommittee discussed the proposed athletics certification concept for Division I institutions.

(1) The Division I subcommittee supported a working agreement intended to minimize duplication between NCAA athletics certification and regional accreditation by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

It was voted that the Commission endorse the proposed working agreement.

(2) It was voted that the Commission direct correspondence to the co-chairs of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics to express the Presidents Commission's appreciation for the efforts of the Knight Commission in support of the Association's reform movement.

b. President Arend D. Lubbers of Grand Valley State University, Division II chair, reported that the Division II subcommittee had discussed a variety of issues during its meeting, including championships issues as they relate to Division II, distribution of funds to Division II institutions and the concept of athletics certification as it applies to Division II. President Lubbers reported that the subcommittee took no formal actions.

c. President Warren, Division III chair, reported that the Division III subcommittee had reviewed the provisions of Proposal Nos. 38 through 49 and had agreed to continue to oppose all 12 of the proposals.

5. Reports by Special Committees and Commission Subcommittees.
a. President Judith E. N. Albino, University of Colorado, reported on the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force and the Presidents Commission Subcommittee on Gender Equity. She indicated that the task force had divided its work into two subcommittees, one focusing on institutional standards and the other on NCAA standards and championships opportunities. President Albino reiterated that the work of the Commission's subcommittee in this area had been slowed deliberately in order to permit the Association's task force to make further progress. The Commission received the report without taking formal action.

b. The Commission reviewed a report on the work of the Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues. It was noted for the record that the special committee had appointed a subcommittee to work with the staff in preparing variations of the current grants-in-aid formula for consideration by the full committee and that the subcommittee had expressed its intention to recommend to the special committee that it maintain the grants-in-aid formula for the 1993-94 distribution. It also was noted that the Executive Committee acted during its May and December 1992 meetings to allocate additional funds to the membership trust reserve, to return an additional $3 million to the Division I membership as a one-time supplemental payment through the broad-based component of the revenue-distribution plan, and to increase the payment to each Division I institution for the enhancement of academic programs and services for student-athletes from $25,000 to $30,000 (effective with the distribution made during the summer of 1993). The Commission took no formal action in this regard.

c. The Commission reviewed the report of the Commission's Subcommittee on Strengthening the Role of the Chief Executive Officer. The report included information concerning the results of a survey conducted among all Division I and Division II conferences to examine presidential involvement in conference governance. The summary results were provided to the Commission for information purposes only, and the subcommittee did not recommend additional legislative or other actions.

d. President Oscar C. Page, Austin Peay State University, presented information concerning the Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics. It was noted for the record that in the near future the Association's membership would receive written information concerning a variety of cost-containment concepts suggested for the membership's consideration and comment. President Page indicated that the special committee would present a more detailed report to the Commission during its June meeting. The Commission took no formal action in this regard.

6. Elections. The Commission reviewed the membership of the 1993 Presidents Commission. It was noted for the record that President Claire L. Gaudiani, Connecticut College, will assume the chair of the Division III subcommittee; that Chancellor Young and President Lubbers will continue to chair the Division I and Division II subcommittees, respectively, and that Chancellor O'Brien will continue to serve as the Commission's chair. The Commission expressed its appreciation for the leadership that President Warren provided to the Division III subcommittee and the Commission.

7. Dates and Sites of Future Meetings. The Commission noted the following future meeting dates and sites for the record:

a. 1993: April 7-8, Doubletree Hotel, New Orleans, Louisiana; June 29-30, hotel to be determined, Kansas City, Missouri; September 28-29, hotel to be determined, Kansas City, Missouri.

b. 1994: Convention date to be determined, April 6-7, June 28-29, September 27-28, sites and hotels to be determined.

8. Other Business.

a. President Thomas K. Hearn, Wake Forest University, remarked that the continued use of offensive language throughout the football season suggested that the Commission should continue to direct attention to the problem of offensive language and other unsportsmanlike conduct during the coming year. It was noted for the record that this issue already had been emphasized by the Basketball Rules Committee and that the Football Rules Committee would address the topic during an upcoming meeting.

b. It was noted for the record that the NCAA Administrative Committee had taken action recently to endorse National Sportsmanship Day on behalf of the Association.

9. Closing Remarks. On behalf of the Commission, Chancellor O'Brien presented flowers to NCAA President Sweet and offered the Commission's congratulations for her outstanding service to the Association.

■ Administrative Committee minutes

Conference No. 2 February 10, 1993

1. Acting for the NCAA Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Took the following actions regarding committees and committee appointments:

(1) Assigned the following term-expiration dates for members of the Administrative Review Panel, noting that all except Chris Monasch, the Council representative, would be eligible for reappointment to a second term: James Frank, September 1, 1994; Monasch, January 1996 (concurrent with Council term); Jenefer P. Shillingford, September 1, 1995; Marjorie A. Trout, September 1, 1996, and Charles Alan Wright, September 1, 1996.

(2) Assigned the following term-expiration dates for members of the Committee on Athletics Certification, noting that all except William M. Sangster, the Council representative, would be eligible for reappointment to a second term: Robert A. Chernak, Patricia H. Meiser-McKnett, Diana S. Natalicio, Frederick W. Obeart and Charlotte West, September 1, 1994; Robert Bowlsby, Jack F. Kvanec, Lee A. McElroy, R. Gerald Turner and Charles Whitcomb, September 1, 1995; Sangster, January 1996 (concurrent with Council term), and R. Daniel Beebe, Bill Byrne, Annette O'Connor and Marcia L. Sanchez, September 1, 1996.

(3) Appointed the following to serve as the Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport, per 1993 Convention Proposal No. 151, and specified that the committee's work should conclude not later than the 1995 Convention: Jody Contrach, University of Texas at Austin (chair of the Recruiting Committee); R. Elaine Dreidame, University of Dayton (Division I vice-president); E. Kaye Hart, Utah State University; John H. Harvey, Carnegie Mellon University (Division III vice-president); Charlene M. Johnson, South Carolina State College; David B. Keilitz, Central Michigan University, chair; Thomas M. Kinder, Bridgewater College (Virginia); Charles N. Lindemann, Humboldt State University (Division II vice-president); Arthur J. McAfee Jr., Morehouse College; David Price, Pacific-10 Conference (chair of Legislative Review Committee); Francis X. Rienzo, Georgetown University, and Thomas E. Yeager, Colonial Athletic Association (chair of Interpretations Committee).

b. Reviewed the Interpretations Committee's pre-Convention recommendations regarding the provisions of Convention Proposal Nos. 72 and 73 and concluded that a student-athlete who can be certified eligible in accordance with Division I or II requirements may be eligible to receive athletically related financial aid, but a student-athlete who needs to continue to use Division III eligibility provisions shall not be eligible to receive athletically related aid.

c. Affirmed that the exemption from the Constitution 6.3.1 self-study requirements that was established by the Council in August 1992 should be applied to Division I institutions through the effective date of the athletics certification program, thereby enabling Division I institutions with self-study deadlines before January 1, 1994, to complete the self-study in accordance with that deadline or to take advantage of the exemption and complete the self-study as part of their athletics certification.

d. Directed the Administrative Review Panel to consider and act upon requests for waivers of the five-year/10-semester legislation in the period before the April Council meeting if those requests involve the current eligibility of student-athletes; agreed that the Council should review in April whether it wishes to alter the waiver guidelines of Bylaw 30.6.1 in order to provide broad authority for the Council or the Eligibility Committee to grant extensions of the eligibility period.

e. Agreed to appoint Council subcommittees to review proposed legislation in areas in which there is no standing or special committee, per 1993 Convention Proposal No. 51-A, and affirmed that such subcommittees generally will be expected to conduct their reviews by telephone conference, rather than holding in-person meetings; acknowledged that the Administrative Committee could conduct a review of a given proposal itself, if it desires.

f. Postponed until its February 24 telephone conference discussion of alternative approaches to the concept of the restricted-earnings coach.

g. Agreed that the Division I vice-president and the legislative services staff will develop a question-and-answer document on interpretations relating to those Division I institutions that have had their football programs classified in Division II or Division III and now will be classified in Division I-AA, with the document to be sent to the involved institutions.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Appointed the following to serve as an Executive Committee subcommittee to review the championships awards program, as agreed in the December 1992 Executive Committee meeting: Mary R. Barrett; Joan C. Cronan, chair; Kenneth A. Free, and Jerry M. Hughes.

b. Approved funding to permit members of the Summer Baseball Subcommittee of the Special Events Committee to conduct annual inspections of approved summer baseball leagues, with the understanding that the aggregate expenditure (charged to committee expense) would not exceed $5,000 annually.

c. Approved the following recommendation by the Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24, as forwarded by the Council: That the waiver procedure in Bylaw 31.2.1.3 is available to institutions regarding the timely submission of graduation rate disclosure forms per Bylaws 18.4.2.2(c) and 18.4.2.3(c), but that a waiver request generally should be denied in a case in which an institution attempts to disavow the availability and/or accuracy of graduation-rates information previously reported to the national office and certified as accurate by the institution.

d. Appointed Daniel Bridges, California Institute of Technology, and William F. Lide, Salisbury State University, to the Division III Championships Committee, replacing Arthur Eason and David A. Jacobs; reappointed Sam S. Bedrosian, Aurora University, as the at-large member of the committee.

3. Acting for the Council and the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

Reviewed the charges to all current special and ad hoc NCAA committees and established dates for the conclusion of their assignments as follows:

a. Ad Hoc Committee to Administer the Conference Grant Program: July 1, 1993, after which this responsibility will be performed by the national office staff, reporting to the Executive Committee.

b. Ad Hoc Committee to Study Enforcement Issues and the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process: November 1, 1993.

c. Special Degree Completion Program Committee: Continue for the next year, with the Administrative Committee to consider in the future whether legislation should be proposed to make this a standing committee.

d. Special Planning Committee for Drug Testing: The staff was directed to propose a date by which this committee could conclude its work; the matter will be placed on a future Administrative Committee agenda.

e. Special Advisory Committee for Women's Corporate Marketing: January 1, 1994, after which this responsibility will be handled by the Committee on Women's Athletics.

f. Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics: January 1994 (1994 Convention).

g. Special Advisory Committee to Review Implementation of 1990 Convention Proposal No. 24: January 1, 1994, or sooner if current issues regarding graduation-rate disclosure are resolved.

h. Special Committee to Review the Mission of the NCAA Foundation: July 1, 1993.

i. Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenues: July 1, 1997 (through the period of the current television contract), as specified earlier by the Executive Committee.

j. Gender-Equity Task Force: Ongoing; to be reviewed next year.

k. Special Committee to Review the NCAA Penalty Structure: September 1, 1993.

l. Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity: January 1995 (1995 Convention).

m. Special Committee to Oversee Implementation of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse: Ongoing; to be reviewed next year.

4. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 4.3.2.

a. Acting for the Council:

(1) Granted a request by St. Louis University to replace baseball coaches on a temporary basis per Bylaw 11.7.1.1.1.2.

(2) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.8.6.1(c) to permit student-athletes from various member institutions to participate in competition involving national teams in basketball, cross country, field hockey, lacrosse, skiing, soccer, swimming and diving, tennis, track and field, and volleyball.

(3) Granted waivers per Bylaws 14.8.6.1(d) and 14.8.6.2(b) to permit student-athletes from various institutions to participate in the 1993 Bay State Games (Massachusetts), Prairie Rose State Games (North Dakota) and Utah Summer Games.

(4) Granted waivers per Bylaw 16.13.1 to permit institutions to provide incidental expenses in these situations:

(a) To student-athletes to attend funerals of members of the student-athletes' families, in one case also involving transportation to rejoin the team at an away-from-home competition.

(b) To student-athletes to attend funerals of members of teammates' families.

(c) To student-athletes to attend the funeral of a teammate.

(d) To provide flowers to families involved in funerals.

(e) To a student-athlete to use a natatorium in a neighboring community.

(f) To a student-athlete's parent to visit the student-athlete, who sustained a serious and public places. The sporting world recently joined this trend. More than 20 stadiums are now smoke-free, and administrators for many more are considering the idea. Smoke-free stadiums have obvious benefits for both fans and athletes.

In all stadiums, the fans sit close together. Thus, even outdoors, non-smokers are exposed to tobacco smoke that contains levels of toxins thousands of times higher than what is emitted from an automobile or factory. The situation is even worse indoors, where the EPA has measured pollution levels from indoor tobacco smoke as being 10 times higher than on busy commuter highways.

As many stadium operators already have proved, the simplest and cheapest way to eliminate this pollution simply is to make the stadium smoke-free.

While smoking in the stands probably does not affect the athletes on the field outdoors, it can have significant effects on players in indoor sports. The athletes' hearts and lungs are working at capacity to get oxygen to their muscles for peak performance. The carbon monoxide in the smoke binds to the blood and reduces its ability to carry the oxygen. Other chemicals in the smoke poison the heart and reduce its ability to pump blood, and inhibit the ability of the muscle to convert oxygen into the energy molecule it needs to function. It also increases the likelihood of dangerous irregular heartbeats. The secondhand smoke reduces athletes' peak performance.

The time has come to protect everyone from the toxins in secondhand tobacco smoke. All sporting events should be smoke-free.

The tobacco industry will, of course, try to mobilize opposition, based on some bogus "right to smoke." After all, it will lose profits as fewer people buy its addictive products. But there is no more "right" to smoke than there is a "right" to spray poisonous chemicals from an aerosol can at the fans and athletes. With smoke-free sports, the fans will win with healthier air, and the athletes will win with better performance.

Do it now.

(g) To a student-athlete to return home for therapeutic purposes after the student-athlete discovered the body of a slain teammate.

(h) To a student-athlete to attend a recognized event at which the student-athlete would be honored.

(i) To a student-athlete to attend an educational seminar funded by an NCAA committee.

b. Acting for the Executive Committee: Granted waivers for championships eligibility per Bylaw 31.2.1.3 to Emmanuel College and the University of California, Davis, which failed to meet deadlines as specified in Bylaw 18.4.2.1.

Coach is king of 900-victory mountain

By William Kates

At age 71, Dick Baldwin is only over one hill. He is the only coach in college basketball history with more than 900 victories.

"You're only over the hill when you lose your enthusiasm, and lose interest in the game and interest in the people who are playing," said Baldwin, the oldest college basketball coach in the land.

Baldwin

Baldwin became the top winner at any college coaching level when he surpassed Adolph Rupp and won his 877th game in 1987 while at Broome County Community College in south-central New York.

He then retired for four years, but returned last season at Division III State University of New York at Binghamton, a school that had suffered 24 losing seasons in 30 years.

The suffering ended quickly.

Baldwin took a 9-16 team and—often starting four sophomores—won a school-record 19 games. This year, Baldwin moved into uncharted territory with career victory No. 900 while transforming the Colonials into the top team in the State University of New York Athletic Conference.

Rejuvenated

"Those four years away certainly rejuvenated me," said Baldwin, a Mickey Rooney look-alike.

There are those who would dis-

"He's one of the greatest teachers I ever saw. He understands the game like all the greats... He's been an innovator."

■ George Killian

count Baldwin's achievements. After all, he spent 40 years coaching junior college. How good could the guy be?

"He's one of the greatest teachers I ever saw," said George E. Killian, executive director of the National Junior College Athletic Association, which enshrined Baldwin as a charter member of its Basketball Hall of Fame in 1984.

"He understands the game like all the greats—Rupp, (Hank) Iba, who I knew personally, (Phog) Allen. He's been an innovator. What he's done in just two years at Binghamton is testimony to his ability," said Killian, who opposed Baldwin yearly from 1954 to 1969 while coaching at Erie County Community College in Buffalo, New York.

"I wouldn't care if those 900 wins came against the Little Sisters of the Poor. Nine hundred wins, that's a hell of a lot of wins," Killian said.

During his career, Baldwin has averaged slightly less than 22 victories a season, and he has never missed a game. Only twice in his career have his teams finished below .500. He has won at least 20 games in a season 26 times, including a stretch from 1967 to 1974, when he won no fewer than 24.

His teams won 10 Eastern regional National Junior College Athletic Association championships. His 1960-61 team went 30-2 and was the top-ranked team among the nation's two-year colleges.

Lauded by peers

Baldwin's peers recognize his greatness. Among his many well-wishers after passing Rupp were Indiana University, Bloomington, coach Bobby Knight and former State University College at Potsdam coach Jerry Welsh, now at Iona College, who between them have won five NCAA championships and more than 1,250 games.

"Now the nation knows what we in New York state have known for years: that you're one of the most outstanding coaches in the history of the game," wrote Welsh, who says he has no doubt that Baldwin could have been a huge success in Division I.

Over the years, Baldwin had his offers from Division I schools: Cornell University, St. Bonaventure University, and Rutgers University, New Brunswick, among them.

"In the early days, there was no reason to go. I was making more money at Broome," Baldwin said. "By the time television and shoe deals came along, we were just so much a part of the community we didn't want to leave."

Baldwin, who as a senior was captain and leading scorer of his University of Rochester team, took the helm at Broome—then known by the fancy name of the New York State Institute of Applied Arts and Sciences—in 1947 after serving 3½ years in the U.S. Army Air Force during World War II. His only other job offer was to coach junior varsity high-school ball.

Full circle

After starting out with three straight defeats, Baldwin, ironically, got career victory No. 1 against Triple Cities College—now Binghamton.

"I'm glad they didn't hold a grudge," quipped Baldwin, who sought out the Binghamton job on his own.

"I wish I had been smart enough to ask him to apply," Binghamton athletics director Joel Thirer said.

"Truthfully, I didn't think he'd be interested. He'd put in his time and retired," said Thirer, who was criticized for hiring a silver-haired grandfather of five to revive the school's basketball program.

The only constant with Baldwin—besides winning—is his method. He believes in teaching by quiet guidance rather than thundering instruction.

"He's been very open-minded and flexible," said assistant coach and longtime friend Jim Norris. "You'd think when you've been around as long as he's been, you'd be stuck in your ways."

"He just commands your respect," said junior forward Jeff Merrill, one of the Colonials' top players. "He's just someone you want to play your heart out for."

Senior learns to balance team, individual goals months, he was practicing gymnastics in a private club.

"I liked competing because I got a lot of positive feedback. That encouraged me to stay with it," Lynch said. "Plus, getting up for swimming practice at 6 a.m. wasn't very appealing. I was much better suited for practices in the afternoon and evening."

At age 12, he was competing on the Eastern seaboard; by the time he was 16, he was ranked No. 1 on the junior national team for kids 18 and under.

It was not long before collegiate coaches came calling. After what Lynch says was "a long period of reflection," he opted for Stanford.

'Building a dynasty'

"I realized that Sadao was building a dynasty here," said Lynch. "Numerous all-Americans were here and they were doing some great things. I knew this was a program on the way up and I wanted to be part of it. I wanted to be part of the team, to understand the nuances of the team."

He got his chance, but it took some time.

"Jair had the potential to finish high in the rankings as a freshman and sophomore, but physically he was not able to do that... he lacked the upper body strength," said Hamada. "Last year, he came along real well. He's still weak compared to other gymnasts but he's making progress."

Ironically, the progress Lynch has made can be credited to an injury. Working out before the 1992 season, Lynch tore a tendon in his ankle, which limited his practice and training regimen.

"(The injury) was kind of frustrating for him because all of a sudden he couldn't tumble," recalled Hamada. "But in many ways it helped him because it gave him time to work on his upper body strength. In general, it helped him focus on other things."

The time off proved beneficial. Showing no signs of a layoff, Lynch enjoyed a great season, registering individual-event marks of 9.85-plus 11 times and scoring 58.00-plus in the all-around on three occasions to help vault Stanford to No. 1 in the rankings.

Balancing roles

At the NCAA championships,

Lynch proved how well he has learned to balance his roles. Competing in the individual championships, Lynch recorded four top-five finishes, including the horizontal-bar title. A night later, he shattered the all-around record during the team final with a mark of 59.025 to lead Stanford to its first title.

To Lynch, the record-breaking performance was required.

"My responsibility is to get a certain score to help the team," said Lynch. "We knew we had the potential (to win the title) and we realized what we were up against. Everyone had to do his job."

With an NCAA team title and a berth in the Olympic Games to his credit, what does the future hold? Lynch says the 1994 and 1995 World Championships and the 1996 Olympic Games are goals. First and foremost, however, Lynch wants to help Stanford win the 1993 NCAA team championship.

"There's something special you get with a group of nine guys trying to go for a common goal," said Lynch. "There's a gratification all can share, a satisfaction everyone can have. Being part of a team is really something special."

Schultz welcomes discussion of I-A title game

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz is not surprised by the unfavorable reaction to his suggestion that the NCAA membership consider creating a one-game Division I-A football championship, but he does not think the early opposition will kill the idea.

In fact, Schultz still believes that some form of national championship will be adopted during the 1990s.

"I think the vast majority of coaches, athletics directors and presidents oppose the idea, but opposition today does not mean we won't have it (later)," Schultz said during his address at the 1993 Football Forum. "I still think we'll have a playoff of some type during this decade—probably later rather than sooner."

Many factors outside the control of athletics administrators could cause a playoff to become more attractive in the next few years, Schultz said. The National Football League may expand its regular season to or past New Year's Day, which would limit the number and value of television contracts for bowl games and reduce payouts to participating teams.

Schultz stressed that he is not pushing or advocating a playoff; instead, he is trying to prompt the NCAA membership to begin considering potential sources of revenue for the future.

On agenda

The Division I-A subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission has put the playoff concept on the agenda for the Commission's April 7-8 meeting, and it is likely that the NCAA Council also will address the issue soon.

"I think I've done what I can,"

he said. "The Presidents Commission has the issue on its agenda to talk about, and that's the important thing—to get people talking about it."

Schultz stands by his estimate that a one-game championship could earn $50 to $60 million. He believes the playoff is one of two major sources of untapped funds; the other is licensing revenue, which he proposes to collect through an NCAA Properties program that could help institutions earn a far greater percentage of the estimated $60 million annually generated by collegiate merchandise. Some estimate that four-fifths of that revenue goes to counterfeit and pirate licensors.

"It may take four or five years to develop to its full potential, but it has an unbelievable potential if developed correctly," Schultz said of the NCAA Properties concept.

Other issues

During the 45-minute session, Schultz discussed several other issues with reporters, including the following:

■ Schultz cautioned that the potential for playoff and licensing revenues in the future does not diminish the importance of cost-containment efforts, and he noted that the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics is looking at several ways to reduce operational costs.

■ On gender equity, Schultz said determining women's athletics interests is an important first step toward enhancing opportunities. "We have to do a much better job of determining where women's interests are," he said. "We're just not searching the right areas to determine where the interests and abilities of women are." He suggested that new programs may need to be developed in sports such as figure skating.

■ Schultz expressed his concern over in-season firings of coaches that have occurred in men's basketball and football in the past six months. "When we start letting coaches go in the middle of the year, it gives the indication that we are just like the professionals," he said. "I hope it's a trend we can quickly reverse."

Schultz said midseason firing needs to be a "major topic of discussion for the Presidents Commission," but he doubts that the Association will pass legislation that addresses institutional staffing decisions. He thinks it would be best for the Presidents Commission to issue a strongly worded statement on the subject.

opportunity to play intercollegiate athletics. But they shouldn't get that opportunity at the expense of someone else's."

The other coaches were unanimous in their support of that sentiment, but many admitted they are nervous that cutbacks in football participation and funding might become the popular way to expand women's programs at a time when many athletics departments are awash in red ink.

The coaches believe they have taken great strides toward containing costs within their programs and said that through the American Football Coaches Association, they have begun to examine areas in which further cutbacks can be made.

"At our AFCA meeting last week, the main topic was cost containment," said Tomey. "It's something that concerns all of us as coaches. We want to go along with the idea of cutting costs, but we also want to preserve the good parts of the game."

Funding

With gender-equity efforts looming on the horizon, several panelists suggested that the time may be right for athletics departments to be funded in the same way as other educational programs.

"Women are now getting the same tremendous educational experience as football players have enjoyed," Goldsmith said. "Maybe there's a point where you decide the education you get from football or women's athletics is very important, so you stop taking money from one part of the athletics department to give to another and start paying for it with university funds."

One obvious source of additional funding would be a Division I-A football championship playoff or title game. However, the coaches on the panels were divided in their support for that approach.

Goff expressed opposition because he believes enough pressure already exists on student-athletes and he is unsure that a one-game playoff would determine a true champion because the best team in the country might not be invited to play. Brown added that bowl games are great experiences for athletes and that he does not want to jeopardize that system just to generate money that will be of little benefit to football programs.

Cooper, however, said he is tired of the persistent pressure to cut expenses, and he thinks college athletics should be looking for ways to enhance revenue.

"If we can make 50, 60 or 70 million dollars, as I've heard some people estimate, I don't see how we can afford not to have a one-game playoff," Cooper said.

Defining gender equity

The coaches refused to discuss the specifics of gender equity because they did not know how it has been defined. The task-force members attempted to explain the difference between gender equity and Title IX—and the effect both will have on athletics budgets—in the afternoon session.

Howlett admitted that while Title IX is easy to define because it is a law, gender equity is a nebulous concept that is not quantifiable. Although gender equity may never be clearly defined, the task force will develop a definition that will serve as a goal for the task force and the Association.

The panelists agreed that gender equity is a moral imperative for fair treatment of both sexes that goes beyond compliance with Title IX.

The panel also emphasized that the task force does not intend to make football the sacrificial lamb in the gender-equity movement.

"Many people assume that you can come in and take from football," said Teaff, who has the unique perspective of being a task-force member, and athletics director and a former football coach. "But we should not—nor do I believe Congress (in enacting Title IX in 1972) intended to—limit some opportunities in favor of others."

'Sky falling'

West cautioned against a re-emergence of fears that accompanied the enactment of Title IX 20 years ago.

"We're seeing the return of the attitudes of the 1970s: 'The sky is falling.' It's going to ruin intercollegiate athletics. Did (Title IX) do that? No."

Rather than being an exercise in redistribution, attaining gender equity requires generating financial resources and interest that previously were not present.

"The right thing to do is to increase women's participation and funding," Teaff said. "But how you do that is the question."

Howlett said the task force is focusing on ways to expand participation opportunities for women, such as working with national governing bodies or providing membership incentives for schools to establish programs in nonchampionship sports. The task force also plans to publish a source book of ideas that have been proven at the institutional level to further gender equity.

The group hopes its labor will produce helpful resources, recommendations to the NCAA Presidents Commission and any necessary legislation.

"We hope a whole menu of things will come out as a final product, not just an inflexible kind of mandate," Howlett said.

College football coaches are watching anxiously, hoping that the menu includes a healthy serving of funding ideas that will take the financial pressures off their football programs.

Arenas, outdoor stadiums just might become the next permanent home for smoking bans man Group A carcinogen, placing it in the company of other dangerous substances, such as asbestos, vinyl chloride, arsenic and benzene.

Jim Repace, a physicist who has studied environmental pollution, said the EPA's report erases doubts about the true dangers of second-hand smoke.

"I think it ends the debate," Repace said. "These are things that you basically do not want in the environment. It's going to lead to further restrictions of smoking in public places."

Outdoor stadiums

While some institutions have restricted smoking in stadiums and arenas to concourse areas that are separated from seating, some have adopted total bans.

For example, the University of Iowa is one institution that has adopted a total no-smoking ban at its open-air football stadium.

The school first snuffed out smoking in most of its campus buildings, including Carver-Hawkeye Arena, effective at the beginning of the 1992-93 academic year. Now, the University of Iowa Board in Control of Athletics has approved a proposal to ban smoking at Kinnick Stadium, beginning with the 1993 football season.

However, none of the university's no-smoking policies carries enforcement language.

"We're going to try a complete ban," said Ann Rhodes, vice-president for university relations at Iowa. "But we're basically counting on good-faith compliance from people. The thing that is compelling is that there is more evidence (that) second-hand smoke is dangerous."

Before taking the action, the Iowa board surveyed readers of Hawk Talk, a publication for Iowa Hawkeye fans. It revealed that 80.7 percent of those polled favored a no-smoking policy inside Kinnick Stadium, Rhodes said. Eighty-one percent of Hawkeye football season-ticket holders were in favor of a ban at the 70,311-seat stadium.

While it is obvious that smoking in an enclosed arena will cause more air pollution, smoking also can cause problems in open-air stadiums.

Stanton A. Glantz, professor of medicine at the University of California, San Francisco, and author of "Tobacco: Biology and Politics," and second-hand smoke can be a problem because of the steep sloping of rows of seats.

More picking up smokeless tobacco habit

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

As cigarette smokers have been pressured in recent years to take their habits from public places to private ones, more and more Americans have picked up the habit in another form: smokeless tobacco.

More disturbing is the fact that many of the new smokeless-tobacco users are high-school and college student-athletes.

In a report last December prepared by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Inspector General, nearly one in five high-school males confirmed using spitting tobacco in 1990 and 1991. The report, "Spit Tobacco and Youth," found that the typical starting age for use of smokeless tobacco is 11 or 12 years old.

Use of smokeless tobacco products among college student-athletes is even higher, according to a survey conducted by Michigan State University in 1989. It found a 40 percent increase in the use of smokeless tobacco among student-athletes at NCAA member institutions from 1985 to 1989.

The survey found that 57 percent of baseball players, 40 percent of football players and 24 percent of male tennis players were users. The findings also revealed that 75 percent of those polled reported using oral tobacco before attending college and 15 percent began use during their freshman year.

Smokeless tobacco has not been under fire like its cigarette counterpart in recent years, but some experts say that is no reason to ignore its role in health problems.

"Spit tobacco is a killer," said C. Tracy Orleans, director of tobacco control research at the Fox Chase Cancer Center outside Philadelphia. "It's a cancer time bomb. Once you're hooked on this stuff, it's hard to get off."

Gregory N. Connolly of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health said the use of smokeless tobacco may not be as dangerous as cigarettes, but that it has unique dangers nonetheless.

"It's like jumping from the third floor rather than the 10th floor," he said. "I think there is a perception that there is less risk in smokeless tobacco and that is why we're seeing the surge in its use."

Chew vs. spit

There are two forms of smokeless tobacco: snuff and chewing tobacco. Snuff is a finely ground, moist tobacco that is held in the mouth between the cheek and gum.

Chewing tobacco is cut-leaf tobacco that is chewed like chewing gum.

Snuff, or spitting tobacco, generally contains higher concentrations of the thousands of known chemicals, including nicotine, that are contained in tobacco. Therefore, it is usually regarded as more addictive and more dangerous than chewing tobacco.

"Dip is more addictive," Connolly said. "It stays right there in the mouth. It has a higher concentration."

Orleans said that a tin can of one major brand of tobacco is the equivalent of about four packs of the average cigarette, as far as its nicotine and other chemical levels.

Smokeless history

The inspiration of widespread public use of smokeless tobacco is often traced to the sport of baseball. A century ago, chewing tobacco was used by players to keep their mouths moist in dusty ball parks, Connolly and Orleans wrote in a 1988 article published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

When dip began popping up in clubhouses, often as free samples, players began to use it and prefer it over the chewing variety. Today, dip is the tobacco of choice for athletes.

"Dip never was used by athletes," Connolly said of professional baseball players' use many years ago. "It got into the sport on the coattails of the tobacco company's marketing."

But Connolly said baseball players are not the only athletes using tobacco.

"It's not limited to baseball," he said. "You will see football players using it. Wrestlers use it as an anorexic agent to maintain their weight."

Regardless of which sport has larger numbers of spit-tobacco users, Orleans said the disturbing, growing trend of young athletes using the drug at an earlier age to be more like their professional heroes is of major concern.

"Spit tobacco is the only social drug whose use increased between 1985 and 1989," Orleans said. "And we know that the athlete is extremely vulnerable."

said, he or she can create a "hot spot," whereby plumes of smoke rise upward and into the immediate breathing space of a spectator one row up. Those immediately next to the smoker also can breathe the smoke.

"Stadiums tend to be very poorly ventilated," Glantz said. "The pollution levels you get can be very high given that the seating is very steep in stadiums. It's much less of a problem (in stadiums than in arenas), but it can still be a significant problem for people sitting in the stands behind a smoker."

Repace agreed that second-hand smoke can cause discomfort to exposed spectators in open stadiums. "While it may not be as great a carcinogenic risk (than indoors), it can still be an irritant," he said.

Indoor facilities

Of course, smoke produced in indoor arenas and stadiums affects spectators in the stands. Less discussed is the effect is has on the athletes on the field or court. It is that element, however, that leads some experts to argue that smoking has no place in an enclosed athletics facility, regardless of its size.

Repace said many people in the general public do not understand that even the most sophisticated of ventilation systems sometimes pumps polluted air into areas where the smoke was not intended to be. He said that smoke from a designated smoking area can seep into nonsmoking airspace in arenas or domed stadiums.

"There is no safe haven," Repace said. "In office buildings, something you might do on the 25th floor might be felt on the second floor by the end of the day."

"It's polluted enough (in arenas) to have a smog alert," Glantz said. "The thing you have to appreciate is that the pollution levels where people smoke indoors is thousands of times greater than it would be outdoors. That's what people are doing when they smoke—they're poisoning the air."

The risk to athletes is heightened indoors because they are much closer to actual smoke emissions and because much of the same polluted air gets circulated again and again. Also, because they are at full physical exertion levels quite often during competition, the athletes are inhaling much more deeply and taking in much more of the toxic air.

"The athletes are at particular risk," Glantz said. "They're working as hard as they can. They're maxed out and anything you do to compromise that, it is going to affect their performance. They're not only working very hard, but they're breathing very hard."

The future

Glantz and Repace both expect more public pressure on public smoking where it is not already banned. But it could be years before new bills are signed into law further restricting public smoking.

States with strong environmental laws, such as California, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, Washington and others, are likely to be quick to respond to the EPA's report, Repace said. In other states, Repace said response to the EPA's conclusions may be slower.

"I think some places will move very rapidly," Repace said. "But there isn't any specific requirement where (states and companies) have to take action."

Glantz said the time has arrived for policy-makers to begin accepting the scientific findings that conclude smoking and passive smoking create major public-health concerns.

"I think the politicians are way behind the public on the tobacco issue," he said. "The public has been very supportive of getting rid of public smoking over the past few years."

Both Glantz and Repace predict major changes in policy will be implemented because of the impact of the EPA's report.

"I think the EPA report is the most important document on tobacco since the 1964 Surgeon General's warning," Glantz said. "In science, it's golden."

January to each institution's chief executive officer, director of athletics, senior woman administrator and faculty athletics representative.

The committee has asked for responses by March 1.

"The institutional responses are very important, and we hope to have those summary forms tabulated and analyzed," Delany said. "But it is important to get the feelings of the coaches associa-

The groups also were asked to provide any additional cost-cutting concepts they may have and to prioritize the committee's concepts from the coaches' point of view.

The coaches associations are likely to appear again before the special committee at its April 29-30 meeting.

The committee also spent time discussing the financial impact of the concepts on a typical Division I-A program and asked selected committee members and the five consultants to the committee to develop financial models to determine the potential cost impact.

The special committee will submit its report to the NCAA Presidents Commission in June.

QUALIFICATIONS:

The Director must possess an advanced degree in an appropriate field. Candidates should have proven organizational, administrative and interpersonal skills, demonstrated community outreach, marketing and fund-raising abilities, as well as specific experience with preparing and effectively managing operational budgets. Three to five years experience in collegiate athletic administration is required. Excellent oral and written communication skills are necessary. A thorough knowledge of NCAA rules and a demonstrated commitment to compliance is required. Demonstrated fund-raising experience is preferable.

RESPONSIBILITIES:

The Director is responsible for:

- * implementing the intercollegiate athletics program policies for the benefit of Western's student athletes in a manner consistent with the College's overall mission;
- * planning, organizing and directing the activities of Western's coaches, many of whom carry dual appointments as members of the faculty, in a manner to field competitive teams in all sports;
- * operation of the Department of Intercollegiate Athletics within established budgets to ensure the most efficient use of financial resources;
- * oversight of all aspects of scheduling, facilities preparations, and provision of officials and support staff for athletic contests;
- * conducting annual performance evaluations of intercollegiate athletics department personnel; and
- * planning and implementing those fund-raising activities necessary to supplement available financial resources, subject to the oversight of the Vice-President for Development.

COMPENSATION:

Competitive and commensurate with qualifications.

DEADLINES:

Review of applications will begin March 15, 1993, and continue until the position is filled. Position available May 1, 1993-starting date negotiable.

1992 Column No. 7

NCAA Bylaw 11.6.2.1

Travel expenses for scouting opponents

Division I institutions should note that during its January 10, 1993, meeting, the NCAA Council reviewed the minutes from Interpretations Committee Conference Nos. 17 through 22 and approved all of the minutes with the exception of the following interpretation: The Council reversed Item No. 8 of Conference No. 21 (December 3, 1992) to indicate that the provisions of Bylaw 11.6.2.1, which permit an institution to provide transportation expenses to one person to scout an opponent, would not preclude more than one coach from traveling to the competition in the same vehicle (e.g., automobile, airplane). Please note that only one coach could receive room and board expenses and/or press-box or complimentary tickets.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 136

Sports sponsorship—Division I

NCAA institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 136 (compliance required during the 1993-94 academic year), Division I institutions may meet the minimum sports sponsorship requirements by sponsoring six all-male or mixed teams and eight all-female teams as an alternative to the present requirement of sponsoring seven all-male or mixed teams and seven all-female teams.

1993 Convention Proposal No. 133

Division I-AA scheduling requirements

Division I institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 133 (effective August 1, 1993), the Division I Steering Committee may waive the football scheduling requirements set forth in Bylaw 20.9.7.2 for (1) a Division I-AA institution that does not offer athletically related financial aid in the sport of football or (2) a Division I-AA institution that offers fewer than 20 percent of the maximum allowable number of scholarships in Division I-AA and classified in Division II prior to September 1993, if it is determined that fewer than six other Division I-AA football programs exist within a 500-mile radius of the institution's campus that do not offer athletically related financial aid in the sport of football or which offer fewer than 20 percent of the maximum allowable number of scholarships in Division I-AA and were classified in Division II prior to September 1993.

Bylaw 13.1.1.3

Four-year college prospects (partial qualifier or non-qualifier)

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.1.1.3, an athletics staff member or other representative of the institution's athletics interests may not make contact with the student-athlete of another four-year collegiate institution, directly or indirectly, without first obtaining the written permission of the first institution's athletics director (or an athletics administrator designated by the director of athletics) to do so, regardless of who makes the initial contact. Please note that this restriction is applicable to all recruited partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers.

Twenty football finalists picked to contend for NACDA award

Twenty football finalists—the first of 35 finalists who will contend for this year's National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics/Disney Scholar-Athlete Postgraduate Scholarships—were announced by NACDA February 11.

The 10 football players from NCAA Division I-A institutions and 10 from divisions other than I-A were selected from a field of 91 football nominees. Fifteen additional finalists, representing sports other than football, will be announced by NACDA in April.

A NACDA committee will select 10 scholarship recipients from the 35 finalists. Each winner will receive a $5,000 grant for postgraduate studies from $50,000 in funding provided by the Walt Disney Company.

The winners will receive the awards at NACDA's 28th annual convention June 6-9 in San Diego.

To be nominated for a scholarship, a student-athlete must have a minimum grade-point average of 3.000 (4.000 scale) in undergraduate study and must have been named to an all-America or all-conference team.

Because Disney's involvement in the program stems from its sponsorship of the annual Disneyland Pigskin Classic, five of the 10 scholarships have been designated for football players—three in Division I-A and two in other divisions. The other five scholarships will be awarded in other sports.

Division I-A football nominees for the awards (listed with school and GPA) are Todd Cutler, New Mexico State University, 3.630; Carlton Gray, University of California, Los Angeles, 3.400; Shane Hackney, New Mexico State, 3.980; James Hansen, University of Colorado, Boulder, 3.910; Lindsey Knapp, University of Notre Dame, 3.250; Michael McElrath, U.S. Military Academy, 3.580; Glyn Milburn, Stanford University, 3.000; Gregory Primus, Colorado State University, 3.000; Gregory Smith, Ohio State University, 3.390, and Michael Stigge, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 3.540.

Nominees in divisions other than I-A are David Berardinelli, Bucknell University, 3.800; Donald Campbell, Appalachian State University, 3.680; Jason Forrester, University of the South, 3.400; Joseph Green, Wofford College, 3.820; Steve Keller, University of Dayton, 3.480; David King, Maryville College (Tennessee), 3.910; Bart Moseman, Wheaton College (Illinois), 3.960; Gregory Navarro, Bentley College, 3.240; Dan Rosenbaum, Dayton, 3.970, and Jason Seurer, University of South Dakota, 3.870.

Role models

Yale University basketball players (from left) Ryon McGuire, Dave Bialski, and Boe Lintz, head coach Dick Kuchen, and player Sean Fitzgerald put on a basketball clinic for the Farnam House of Fair Haven, Connecticut, that included a discussion on the importance of good study habits. The Farnam House is an organization that helps inner-city youth.
