Committee preparing to tackle federated rules

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Discussions concerning federation of NCAA rules on a per-sport basis have heightened significantly in recent years, and a special NCAA committee now is preparing to meet the matter head-on.

The 1993 NCAA Convention charged the recently formed Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport to study the concept. Proposal No. 151 directed that the committee report to the 1994 Convention about the feasibility of developing legislation on the topic; if legislation is determined to be possible, Proposal No. 151 stated that it would be prepared for the 1995 Convention.

Two other committees—Recruiting and Legislative Review—also are involved with specific elements of the rules-federation concept. The Recruiting Committee is examining recruiting ramifications while the Legislative Review Committee is considering how such major changes could be incorporated into the NCAA Manual.

Started with coaches

Two years ago, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz assembled a group of Division I coaches to discuss ways to simplify and reduce recruiting rules and make them more applicable by sport. The coaches were divided into five groups—football, men's basketball, women's basketball, other team sports and individual sports. Coaches were brought together again last year.

Schultz, who mentioned federated rules in his last two "State of the Association" speeches, concluded from discussions with the coaches that football and basketball coaches were satisfied with the system of recruiting rules currently in place (in fact, Schultz said those coaches advocated even more regulation). However, Schultz said coaches of other team sports and individual sports thought the

Certification begins implementation steps

Committee has first meeting March 31

The long planning process will end and implementation of the Association's athletics certification program officially will begin when the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification meets for the first time March 31 in Dallas.

The athletics certification program adopted by the 1993 NCAA Convention requires a verified and evaluated self-study of the athletics program of every Division I institution.

The primary items for discussion for the first meeting include:

- Development of a five-year certification schedule.
- Selection of the pool of peer reviewers.
- Refinement of the self-study instrument.
- Creation of a certification handbook.

Committee members also will discuss the development of training materials for peer reviewers and ways to support institutions preparing for certification.

Division I institutions are to be informed of the initial five-year certification by August, and orientation visits and self-studies will begin for the first of the selected institutions in September and October. Peer-review evaluation visits will begin late in 1994.

R. Gerald Turner, former chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission and chancellor of the University of Mississippi, chairs the Committee on Athletics Certification. Other members are:

Frederick Obear, chancellor, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga (Division I-AA, South); Annette O'Connor, assistant professor of biology and faculty athletics representative, La Salle University (Division I-AAA, East); William M. Sangster, director of international programs and faculty athletics representative, Georgia Institute of Technology (Division I-A, South), and Charles Whitcomb, chair of recreation/leisure studies and faculty athletics representative, San Jose State University (Division I-A, West).

Also, Bill Byrne, director of athletics, University of Nebraska, Lincoln (Division I-A, Midwest); Jack

Fund-raising focus recommended

A special committee recommends that the NCAA Foundation should be first and foremost a fund-raising entity and that its resources should be directed toward programs that clearly are of interest to Association institutions.

The recommendation comes from the Special Committee to Review the Mission of the NCAA Foundation, which met March 9 in Chicago.

"The committee conducted a thorough review of the original mission of the Foundation and its history and activities, and consequently, a set of recommendations pertaining to the future of the Foundation was developed to be considered by the Foundation board of directors," said former NCAA President Judith M. Sweet.

Gender equity

Full task force assembles;
next meeting April 26-27

A report on the March 23 meeting of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force will appear in the March 31 issue of The NCAA News.

The next meeting of the full task force will be April 26-27.

The agenda for the March 23 meeting included a review of all subcommittee recommendations made to date. Also, the subcommittee on NCAA standards met March 22 to complete its recommendations regarding the NCAA's new athletics certification process.

For more detail, see the January 27, January 20 and November 16 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: April 26-27 at a site to be determined.

Enforcement

Ad hoc committee to report to Presidents Commission

The NCAA Ad Hoc Committee to Study Enforcement Issues will provide a report to the NCAA Presidents Commission when the Commission meets April 7-8 in New Orleans.

The ad hoc committee studied the two remaining recommendations from the report of the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process at its first meeting March 8-9. Those recommendations involve the use of independent hearing officers and the use of open hearings.

Next meeting: To be determined.

Certification

Committee to begin work toward implementing program

A complete review of the first meeting of the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification will appear in the April 7 issue of The NCAA News.

The committee, which will meet for the first time March 31 in Dallas, is working toward informing Division I institutions of the initial five-year certification schedule by August.

Championships

April 1 deadline at hand for Division I response

Division I members have until April 1 to respond to the NCAA Executive Committee's proposal to enhance the Association's championships program.

The plan was mailed to Division I members January 11. Divisions II and III member institutions discussed the proposed revisions at the January Convention in Dallas.

The Executive Committee's plan would base field sizes on sponsorship and would deemphasize the revenue potential of a championship. Per diem, traveling parties and committee structure also would be affected.

After reviewing the response from the membership, the Executive Committee hopes to approve a final plan at its May meeting. A summary of the membership's reaction will appear in The NCAA News before the May meeting.

For more detail, see the December 16, November 30 and October 26 issues of The NCAA News.

Next Executive Committee meeting: May 3-6 in Monterey, California.

Revenue distribution

Special committee approves
revenue-distribution schedule

The Special Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenue has approved the following dates on which to distribute checks for the 1992-93 revenue-distribution plan.

The dates are:

Basketball fund — April 23.

Division II fund — May 21.

Academic-enhancement fund — June 25.

Special-assistance fund — July 30.

Sports-sponsorship fund — August 13.

Grants-in-aid fund — August 27.

In its March 8 meeting, the committee also recommended to the Executive Committee that conferences assume responsibility for issuing interpretations relating to the special-assistance fund.

issue and also the January 27, January 20 and December 16 issues of The NCAA News.

First meeting: March 31 in Dallas.

Finances

Research staff continues process of survey analysis

The responses to the package of 17 "legislative concepts" produced by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics have been placed on a computer tape, and the NCAA research staff is beginning analysis of the information.

The staff will create programs to categorize the responses by division and position to aid the committee in its analysis of the information.

The special committee's survey examined the membership's reaction to a set of 1994 legislative concepts, longer-term legislative concepts (1994-1996), and recommendations to institutions and conferences. The committee will consider the membership's reactions at its next meeting, which will be April 29-30 in Chicago.

For more detail, see the February 17, December 23 and November 30 issues of The NCAA News.

Future dates and sites of men's and women's Division I basketball championships:

MEN

1994 — April 2 and 4, Charlotte Coliseum, Charlotte, North Carolina.

1995 — April 1 and 3, Kingdome, Seattle.

1996 — March 30 and April 1, Meadowlands Arena, East Rutherford, New Jersey.

1997 — March 29 and 31, Hoosier Dome, Indianapolis.

WOMEN

1994 — April 2 and 3, Richmond Coliseum, Richmond, Virginia.

1995 — April 1 and 2, Target Center, Minneapolis.

Briefly in the News

Kids discover PRIDE in golf

For disadvantaged children, golf may be a sport that is seldom seen and rarely played. But the University of Florida program hopes to spark interest in the sport among some local kids.

Recently, Rob McNamara, assistant golf coach for the Gators, invited children from the PRIDE organization to an afternoon on the links. The PRIDE program was founded by Emery Bishop, son of former Florida golf coach Buster Bishop. The group's mission is to give youngsters with disciplinary and other problems a different outlook.

Golf was not the only subject McNamara discussed with the children.

"They asked me to talk with them and make them aware of other things in life, other than criminal activities," McNamara told Florida sports information staff assistant Tom Sullivan. "These kids are not bad people on purpose. They just got off track and are from some bad environments."

Six 10-year-old boys from the Lake Forest Elementary School, where Emery Bishop serves as a gym teacher, joined McNamara at the University of Florida golf course February 16.

"The kids are so excited they can't stand it," McNamara said. "They have never experienced anything like this before. They come from the poorest parts of the city with little hope of making it out. We are just trying to give them some inspiration."

Emery Bishop said golf is a game that can help troubled youngsters develop pride and a sense of self-worth.

"Golf is an individual game and provides no competition between each other," Bishop said. "You just compare, not compete. There is enough competition in their lives as it is.

We are trying to expose them to other people who take interest in them and give them a sense of pride."

Laying down the law

Susan Murray brings a unique perspective to her position as women's softball coach at New England College. She holds a law degree, but she set her legal career aside—sort of—to coach.

Murray studied at Western New England College's school of law and spent three years in law-related positions. Before pursuing her law degree, she had coached four sports and was women's athletics director at New Hampshire College. When the desire to return to coaching overwhelmed her, Murray began looking for a position.

"The break from coaching to pursue a legal education and work in law-related jobs was good for me," Murray said. "It gave me a new perspective on coaching. Maybe it's maturity."

Murray also coaches field hockey at New England College. In addition, she teaches two courses, including Legal Aspects of Sport and Recreation and Current Issues in Sports.

"My legal background doesn't really help me on the sidelines, but as a professional it has been a plus," she said. "Law permeates society and is involved in all aspects of our lives."

Milestones

Tom Villemure, men's basketball coach at Grand Valley State University, picked up his 400th collegiate coaching victory... Bill Knaption, men's basketball coach at Beloit College, recorded his 500th victory January 16 in a 79-66 win over Lawrence University.

Millersville University of Pennsylvania wrestling coach Floyd "Shorty" Hitchcock reached the 100-victory milestone January 12 in a 26-18 win over Kutztown University of Pennsylvania... Jim Smith, men's basketball coach at St. John's University (Minnesota), coached his 750th game at the school and posted a 95-71 win over Augsburg College December 5.

College of the Holy Cross men's basketball coach George Blaney reached the 400-victory plateau February 8.

Fact file

The top five NCAA championships in paid attendance in 1991-92 were Division I men's basketball, 580,462; Division I baseball, 384,632; Division I women's basketball, 187,417; Division I AA football, 155,752, and Division II football, 85,712. Next highest for men: Division I ice hockey, 67,363. Next highest for women: Division I volleyball, 56,934.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be submitted in writing to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA office no later than April 14, 1993.

Men's and Women's Swimming: Replacement for Gregory L. Lockard, Montclair State College, resigning from the committee effective September 1, 1993. Appointee must be a Division III men's swimming representative and must be an administrator.

COMMITTEE CHANGES

Member institutions are advised that the new 1993 NCAA Committee Handbook should be used for committee information, instead of the 1992-93 NCAA Directory. The handbook should be used until October 1993, when the committee listings will be updated and printed in the 1993-94 NCAA Directory.

Please make the following changes, corrections and additions in the 1993 NCAA Committee Handbook.

Administrative Review Panel (page 23): Additional staff liaison: Stan Wilcox.

Committee on Athletics Certification (page 24): Declined appointment: Diana S. Natalicio, University of Texas at El Paso, and Robert Bowsby, University of Iowa. Additional staff liaisons: Kevin C. Lennon and David A. Knopp.

Basketball Officiating Committee (pages 24-25): Declined reappointment: Denny Crum, University of Louisville. Added to the committee: James P. Jorgensen, Northern California Athletic Conference (representing Division II men's basketball officiating); Daniel E. Woolridge, Old Dominion Athletic Conference (representing Division III men's basketball officiating); Jeanne Manning, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, represents Division II women's basketball officiating instead of men's basketball officiating; Joyce S. Wong, University of Rochester, represents Division III women's basketball officiating instead of men's basketball officiating.

Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism (page 27): Additional staff liaison: Craig W. Angelos.

Honors Committee (pages 27-28): Roger Staubach, Dallas, declined appointment.

Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee (page 29): Ishmell H. Edwards, Rust College, appointed to replace Earl W. Edwards, no longer at a Division III institution.

Special Events Committee (page 33): Name correction: Marnie W. Swift, University of Toledo, appointed to replace Shirley Walker.

Women's Basketball Rules Committee (page 41): Margaret A. Parsons, Clarion University of Pennsylvania, appointed to replace Allison Jones.

Field Hockey Committee (page 44): Appointed Pamela Hixon, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, as chair, effective March 10, 1993, replacing Jenepher P. Shillingford. Shillingford resigned as chair but will continue as a committee member.

Men's Lacrosse Committee (pages 48-49): Vincent Salamone, Long Island University/C. W. Post College, appointed to succeed Carl Ullrich, effective with Ullrich's retirement.

Men's and Women's Soccer Rules Committee (page 50): Name

correction: John S. MacKenzie, Western Illinois University, appointed as chair, effective September 1, 1993. He will succeed L. Greg Myers.

Men's Soccer Committee (page 51): Don J. DiJulia, St. Joseph's University (Pennsylvania), resigned from the committee.

Women's Soccer Committee: Jack Poland, University of North Carolina, Greensboro, appointed to the open Division I position, effective March 10, 1993. He replaces Marcia McDermott, resigned.

Men's and Women's Swimming Committee (pages 52-53): Gregory L. Lockard, Montclair State College, resigning effective September 1, 1993.

Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee (pages 54-55): Correction: Chick Hislop, Weber State University

Special NCAA Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity (page 64): Name correction Tommy L. Frederick, Delaware State College, added to the committee.

Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport (page 65): Staff liaison: Stephen R. Morgan.

Ad Hoc Committee to Review Dual Roles in Basketball Officiating (page 68): This committee should be listed as a special committee (pages 61-67), rather than under subcommittees. Name correction: Renee Dorfman, Patriot League.

Committee instructions

The introductory paragraph to the committee instructions beginning on page 70 should include the Budget Subcommittee as one of the exceptions to the Bylaw 21 listing. Its description may be found in Bylaw 23 of the 1992-93 NCAA Manual.

New committees in 1993

The following committees have been created this year. All are listed in the 1993 NCAA Committee Handbook:

- Joint Policy Board (page 4)
- Administrative Review Panel (page 23)
- Committee on Athletics Certification (page 24)
- Infractions Appeals Committee (page 28)
- Special Committee to Oversee Implementation of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse (page 66-67)
- Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport (page 67)
- Ad Hoc Committee to Review Dual Roles in Basketball Officiating (page 68)
- Subcommittee to Review the Championships Awards Program (page 68)

Dissolved committees

The following committees were dissolved before publication of the 1993 NCAA Committee Handbook:

- Special Committee on Athletics Certification (replaced by the standing committee listed above)
- Special Committee to Review the NCAA Division III Institutional Self-Study Guide
- Council Subcommittee to Review the Concept of Establishing an Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse (replaced by the special committee listed above)

Awareness workshops to begin

Workshops designed to promote the development of alcohol-and-other-drug (AOD) programs for student-athletes and to improve existing programs will be sponsored this spring by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The first workshop, "Program Planning for the 1990s: An Athletics Department Model for the Prevention of Alcohol and Other Drug-Use Problems Among Student-Athletes," is set for April 22-23 in San Diego. The other workshop, "Program Planning for the 1990s—Level II," will be April 29-30 in Baltimore.

Athletics directors, coaches, athletics trainers, team physicians and other administrators responsible for developing drug education programs are among the personnel encouraged to attend the first workshop, a Level I session that is being offered for the fourth straight year. In keeping with the workshop's emphasis on how athletics departments can work with other campus departments in developing comprehensive programs, institutions also are encouraged to send representatives of such departments as student health services, counseling services and student life; campus ministries, and other relevant areas.

The Baltimore workshop is aimed at teams from NCAA institutions that successfully have completed a Level I workshop. Such teams should include an athletics

Unique time calls for unique solution

By R. Daniel Beebe
OHIO VALLEY CONFERENCE

It is time to consider revolutionary restructuring of intercollegiate athletics. Financial and other pressures have created the necessity to rethink the way in which we currently conduct our programs.

In my view, the problems that exist in Division I today are related in large part to two factors: (1) excesses in the spectator-oriented sports and (2) pressure to compete nationally, or at least at a top level regionally, in many nonspectator-oriented sports—ones in which it would make more sense for many schools to compete locally or regionally with local student-athletes.

To address those factors, I believe we should consider the following:

The NCAA should be reduced to two divisions. Division I would consist of institutions that designate at least two men's spectator-oriented sports and at least two women's spectator-oriented sports. Division I members still would be required to sponsor a total of 14 sports (perhaps more) with nonspectator-oriented sports being designated as "participation-oriented." Generally, spectator-oriented sports would be funded at current levels, and the funding of participation-oriented sports would be greatly reduced.

The Division II membership would consist of institutions that have fewer than the four required spectator-oriented sports.

In my view, spectator-oriented sports are the ones that attract the consistent interest of people in the university's community (faculty, staff and students), the local community, the region or the nation.

Such sports usually are attended by media personnel who generate substantial coverage of the contests. Admission is charged and paid by a wider number of people than just the families and friends of the participants.

Under the restructuring concept, institutions in Division I could select sports to be

Ethicist defends sports research

I thank Russell Gough for his recent guest editorial in The NCAA News ("Ethics transcend mere rule-following," March 3). Such debate will only further the quest toward better reasoning and perhaps, in the end, better behavior for all of us.

Professor Gough is fundamentally correct in his analysis that character cannot be "measured in terms of obedience to rules." We (the writer and coresearcher Jennifer Beeler) understand that principle well. And let me assure Professor Gough that we are not as ignorant as the "media" have made us out to be.

We are applied ethicists who have studied long the three-prong necessities of moral character as described by Lickona and Kohlberg and Piaget: moral knowing, moral valuing and moral acting. It is true that a pen-and-pencil test measures only whether an individual has a basic understanding of right and wrong; i.e., moral knowing. Moral knowing does not mean moral action—just as Professor Gough so aptly stated ("You can follow rules and still be unethical"). We do know, however, as Kohlberg told us long ago, that without moral reasoning and moral knowing, there never will be a change in moral acting; i.e., character.

□ Letter

Building on what Kohlberg and others have studied, we set out on a reasoned intervention program to improve moral reasoning in sport populations. Our thesis was that if we could improve moral knowing, we could then build on improving moral acting. We also hoped that along the way, moral valuing also might be empowered to improve. We are obviously quite happy that our six-year study has charted cognitive improvement (moral knowing), as well as behavioral growth (moral acting).

Professor Gough's concern that our study is of the oil-and-water variety misses the mark for various reasons.

(1) Professor Gough states that athletes are no less moral than their peers, and he supports that statement by building on the work of the Josephson Institute. We are well aware of Josephson's work, and we readily admit that morality is probably a lost art in America. But to be frank, Josephson's work describes what is, not what was. In other words, it is very difficult to measure how bad morality is today when it was never compared to any data in the past (though my idealistic nature wants to believe that things were better back then).

(2) This is not the case of long-term moral reasoning/moral development research in sport populations, nor the case in development of our instrument (HBVCI) and data. Unlike the Josephson study, moral education in sport

□ Opinions

Butters: Limit commercialization

Tom Butters, athletics director
Duke University
Chair, Division I Men's Basketball Committee
NABC Courtside

"I'm the most conservative, I think, of the committee members and probably the most conservative of any past committee members in regard to commercialization. I believe in somewhat of a pristine tournament. I think that there are some things that are not for sale, and intercollegiate athletics—especially at the tournament level—is one of those things...I can't say that other events put pressure on us, but they make us aware of another way of doing business. I just prefer to do as we are doing, and that's limiting commercialization."

About cutting costs in intercollegiate athletics:

"Personnel probably is the area that I think can most demonstrably affect our budgets. Let's take football, and we're all the time talking about how many coaches we have, and could we get by with fewer? Of course we could get by with fewer. But the truth of the matter is that it isn't the coach who has made the change in the economy of intercollegiate football, it's all the support people.

"If you take a look at what a college athletics department looked like without football—and I'm in no way suggesting that we be without football, but if you just take a look at your department—I mean how many ticket takers would you need, how many ticket-office people, how many sports information directors, how many trainers? It's one of those sports that has a dramatic effect upon the total numbers of people who support your intercollegiate programs. And you've got all kinds of administrators, all kinds of administrative assistants, all kinds of film people, and training people, and weight people, and those are the areas that I think are going to have to be looked at.

"What I want to do is to make absolutely certain that we do everything we can to protect football, because it's an important part of our society. And I think at times we're going to have to take a good look at it, retrench, back up and not presume that bigger is always better."

Gender equity

The Rev. E. William Beauchamp
Executive vice-president
University of Notre Dame

Chicago Tribune

"We don't tell our engineering department it has to have the same number of men and women. We don't do anything like that anywhere in our institution. It's based on interest."

Value of intercollegiate athletics

Tom Brennan, athletics director
San Jose State University

San Francisco Examiner

"You have to believe what you're doing is important. Sometimes we don't talk about the value that intercollegiate athletics can bring to an institution. I think it certainly has an educational mission, and it can do an awful lot to promote the visibility of the institution, too."

Men's basketball championship

Bill Benner, columnist

Indianapolis Star

"Make mine a Manhattan. C'mon, Coppin State. Three cheers for the three C's: Coastal Carolina's Chanticleers. Here's a choo-choo for Tennessee-Chattanooga. Hail to whatever generic brand of Northeast Southwest State that always seems to make it. And congrats to the 13-16 Pirates of East Carolina.

"They're each in as one of the 64 teams in the NCAA basketball tournament—and they've earned it.

"Even if it's for only one week leading to one game, they can stand tall, be proud of their accomplishment and bask in the spotlight that so rarely shines their way.

"They should ignore those who say they don't belong, that they're an inferior product of an inferior league, that they're taking the place of some seventh-place team from one of the glamour conferences.

"Those critics will point to the power ratings and computer printouts and rail at the inequality of letting all these little guys into the big dance.

"But, since its expansion, the NCAA tournament never has pretended to be contested among the best 64 teams in the nation.

"That's a myth, a fallacy...it simply ain't so.

"Got it?"

"What the committee (attempts) to determine is the best 34 teams—beyond the 30 that receive automatic bids by virtue of conference championships, all but three of which are determined by winning postseason conference tournaments.

"So those who would argue the only way to ensure a 'fair' NCAA field is to open it to all teams—like Indiana's high-school tournament—hey, open your eyes. Take away the smattering of independents and the three leagues that don't have tournaments, and what you already have is a field that is open virtually to all. When regular-season play ends and postseason tourneys begin, roughly 250 of the 298 Division I teams are on equal footing in pursuit of an NCAA bid. All they have to do is win their conference tournament."

Against all odds: Sprinter beats back adversity

Defying the odds. It has become Chris Nelloms' trademark.

Since arriving at Ohio State University in the fall of 1990, Nelloms, a track standout, has made a habit of accomplishing goals with the odds stacked against him.

Unable to compete as a freshman because he did not meet NCAA initial-eligibility requirements, Nelloms defied the odds by making the dean's list one quarter.

Last year, despite a one-year hiatus from competition, Nelloms not only performed well but was dominating. Nelloms shattered Ohio State indoor and outdoor records in the 200-meter dash, claimed three Big Ten Conference individual titles, earned all-America honors in the 200 meters indoors and outdoors, and helped Ohio State to its first outdoor conference title since 1948.

"Chris is very determined," said Russ Rogers, Ohio State men's track and field coach. "He's the type of guy who if you tell him he can't do something, he'll do it."

Shooting victim

That Nelloms is even competing at all today is attributable to his determination.

Eight months ago, Nelloms lay in a hospital bed in Dayton, Ohio—the victim of a drive-by shooting. Suffering from gunshot wounds to his back and leg, Nelloms faced death—and won.

In the time since the shooting, Nelloms has made a remarkable recovery. Not only has he resumed his daily activities, he is competing—and winning.

On March 5, nearly seven months to the day of the shooting, Nelloms won his second consecutive Big Ten indoor 200-meter dash title, clocking in at 21.21 seconds. The mark smashed the Big Ten championships and University of Wisconsin, Madison, field house records.

One week later, Nelloms capped an extraordinary indoor campaign by winning the 200-meter title (20.93) at the NCAA Division I Men's Indoor Track Championships. The title was the first in indoor track by an Ohio State athlete.

"Chris has been able to come back only because of the type of person he is. He's very determined to make it back," said

Beating the odds is nothing new for Ohio State University's Chris Nelloms. Despite nearly losing his life in a drive-by shooting eight months ago, Nelloms staged a remarkable recovery and went on to win the NCAA Division I indoor 200-meter dash title March 5.

Rogers. "If (the shooting) had happened to the average person, they wouldn't be out there (competing)."

Unknown assailant

Nelloms' brush with death occurred August 2, 1992, when, returning home after an early morning run, he was shot by an unknown assailant. One of the bullets entered his left shoulder blade, went beneath the collarbone, damaged an artery and vein, and passed through his left lung, collapsing it, before exiting the chest.

"When I got shot, the only thing going through my mind was to make it home," recalled Nelloms. "I wanted to see my family again. I didn't want to lie in the street and have someone find me when it was too late."

Unable to walk, Nelloms crawled nearly 600 feet to his home, where a friend called for help. By the time Nelloms arrived at the hospital, he had lost nearly 10 pints of blood.

"I started to go into shock because I lost so much blood," said Nelloms. "I don't remember anything until I woke up (in intensive care)."

Doctors said Nelloms was given 20 pints of blood before and during more than two hours of surgery. They also said five minutes more or a millimeter or two difference in the size of the wound and Nelloms would have bled to death.

Good prognosis

After being released from intensive care, Nelloms learned his chances for a recovery were good. Translation: He could run again. "That gave me motivation," said Nelloms.

Simply running again would not suffice, however. Nelloms was determined to regain the form that made him most outstanding athlete at the 1992 Big Ten outdoor championships, enabled him to record the second-fastest 200-meter indoor time (20.65) ever by a collegian, and enabled him to finish second and third in the 200 meters at the NCAA indoor and outdoor championships, respectively.

"When the doctors told me I could run again, I knew I was going to make it back," said Nelloms. "I was going to be stronger and better (than before)."

Nelloms' road to recovery began September 25 when, less than a month after he resumed walking, he attended Ohio State's first day of fall classes. A week later, he reported for fall track practice.

"I was shocked that he recovered so fast," said Rogers. "I assumed he was going to redshirt. On October 1, he came to me and said he wanted to jog. I gave him half the work. Each week he's better and better."

'Long, grueling process'

Nelloms admits his recovery has not been easy.

"It's been a long, grueling process, not only physically, but mentally," he said. "The simple fact that I don't know who did this has been tough. Just to stay focused, not only in track but with the books as well, has been hard."

"I just say to myself 'God left me here for a reason. If the reason is to compete in track and field, if that's what he has in store for me, that's what I'll do.'"

The first indication of how far Nelloms had progressed came February 13 at Iowa State University's Cyclone Invitational, when he scorched the track in a then season-best and NCAA provisional-qualifying 200-meter dash time of 21.09. Three weeks later, he dominated the Big Ten championships, and a week after that, he won his first national title.

"He wanted to compete more during the indoor season, and I refused to let him do it," said Rogers, who limited Nelloms to one individual event and one relay event per meet. "He always wanted to run two or three events at each (indoor) meet and I'd say, 'No, I don't want you to re-injure yourself.'"

Disappointed by the limitation early on, Nelloms admits it was the best thing for him.

"What really helped (my recovery) was that people weren't looking for me to win, just to be a contender," said Nelloms. "It's taken some time for things to come together. I've been taking my time, moving slowly. I'm not at the point I want to be — I'm about 80 percent."

In moderation

Despite his success indoors, Rogers says he has no plans to rush Nelloms.

"We're doing things in moderation," Rogers said. "As time goes on, we'll increase his training. Right now, we're holding back so he can show what he can do when it matters."

"When it matters" are the Big Ten and NCAA outdoor championships. Last year, Ohio State won the Big Ten outdoor crown and placed sixth at the NCAA championships. The Buckeyes, with a healthy Nelloms, have a shot this year at both titles.

For now, though, Nelloms is content to bide his time and continue his recovery.

"Basically, time itself is the best thing (for my body)," said Nelloms. "My rehabilitation has made me stronger. It's been a long process, but I should be 100 percent come outdoors."

And then? "I'm looking to have one excellent (outdoor) season," said Nelloms.

Based on past performance, the odds are in Nelloms' favor.

Knight Commission stresses need to closely monitor reform

While the NCAA has taken dramatic steps toward reform, college and university presidents must remain vigilant to prevent future abuses in intercollegiate athletics, officials of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics said as the panel concluded its work.

"We are not going to clean up intercollegiate athletics unless the presidents do it," said the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president emeritus of the University of Notre Dame and cochair of the commission. "They have the power, and in most cases, their trustees are behind it."

The commission, founded in 1989, concluded more than three years of work by issuing its final report March 18, according to The Associated Press.

The group achieved its three main aims: prompting college presidents to assume more power over athletics programs, increasing the emphasis on academic performance by student-athletes and, perhaps most importantly, establishing a certification process for athletics programs.

"Most of the sleaze factor in intercollegiate athletics came through booster clubs and people outside the institution who had money and spent it freely for their own interests, not the interests of the institutions," Hesburgh said.

He praised the NCAA's new athletics certification program, saying "certification is the same as calling in a certified public accountant to look at the university's books."

The commission's accomplishments are beginning to be reflected in public opinion. According to surveys conducted by LH Research, Inc., 78 percent of those questioned in 1989 agreed that "intercollegiate athletics is out of control." Early this year, that figure had dropped to 52 percent.

But members of the commission, mindful that a majority of those surveyed still take a dim view of intercollegiate athletics, cautioned that university presidents must continue to closely monitor athletics programs or scandals could erupt again.

"I don't think we can ever think we are going to put a set of rules in place that will guarantee that all the problems of college athletics will go away," said Richard D. Schultz, NCAA executive director and a commission member. "There will have to be constant vigilance."

"We've left a lot of things out there for institutions that are serious about reform to follow up on," said William C. Friday, commission cochair and president emeritus of the University of North Carolina System.

Iowa routs field in I wrestling

What was expected to be one of the closest team races in recent years turned into a runaway as Iowa claimed its third straight Division I Wrestling Championships team title March 18-20 at Iowa State.

Iowa scored 123½ points to runner-up and Big Ten Conference rival Penn State's 87½.

Nebraska turned in its best finish ever by finishing third (79½). Arizona State was fourth (72½) and had two individual champions, as did fifth-place Ohio State (64).

The competition was close after day one's second round. Iowa led Penn State by only 24½-24½, and Nebraska was close behind with 24 points.

But by the end of the second day of competition, the Hawkeyes had taken command. Iowa led Penn State, 95½-76½, then and clinched the team title, its 12th in 17 years under coach Dan Gable, during the consolation matches on the final day of the championships.

Iowa's Terry Steiner garnered outstanding-wrestler honors by winning the 150-pound title, 8-7, over Penn State's Troy Sunderland. Trailing, 7-5, but leading in riding time as time ran out, Steiner scored the decisive takedown as the buzzer sounded, sending much of the crowd of 12,007 into a frenzy. It was unclear who had won until after a conference between officials.

Iowa's other champion, freshman Lincoln McIlravy, won in similar fashion at 142 pounds over Fresno State's Gerry Abas in a wild, high-scoring battle. Abas dominated the first period, taking McIlravy down four times and building an 8-5 lead. But the Iowa freshman edged ahead, 9-8, after two periods. Trailing, 15-13, but ahead in riding time, McIlravy took Abas down with four seconds left in the bout to become Iowa's first freshman champion.

"The way those two guys won is what Iowa wrestling is all about," Gable said. "It was a reflection of the way our guys wrestled the whole tournament."

McIlravy was to have redshirted this season, but six weeks ago, Gable inserted him into the lineup at 142 pounds and dropped the 1992 champion at that weight, Troy Steiner (Terry's twin), to 134 pounds. Troy Steiner finished third this year in his new weight class.

The only other returning champion in the tournament, Ohio State's Kevin Randleman, made it two straight titles with a 5-2 victory over Nebraska's Cory Olson. Randleman became the Buckeyes' first four-time all-American.

Four champions finished the season with unblemished records, led by 6-6, 275-pound North Carolina State heavyweight Sylvester Terkay. Nicknamed "Bear," Terkay pinned 11th-seeded and surprise finalist Don Whipp of Michigan State at 1:43 in the final to earn his first championship and finish the season 41-0.

In a battle of unbeaten at 118 pounds, Clemson's Sam Henson downed Iowa's Chad Zaputil, 3-2. The transfer from Missouri finished the season 34-0.

Arizona State 167-pounder Ray Miller, who hadn't lost since last year's 158-pound championship match against Oklahoma State's Pat Smith, beat Missouri's Shaon Fry, 6-2, completing his senior year with a 28-0 mark.

Ohio State's Rex Holman finished at 29-0 with a 7-5 victory over Iowa's Joel Sharratt in the 190-pound championship.

Although Oklahoma State wasn't eligible to compete in the championships, two former Cowboy wrestlers won titles for new schools. Nebraska's Tony Purler won the 126-pound championship, while North Carolina's T. J. Jaworsky won at 134 pounds.

Average attendance at Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum for six sessions was 11,207, second best in history behind the 1991 average of 11,694 at Iowa. The three-day total at Iowa State was 67,242.

Central (Iowa), Ohio Northern capture III titles

Late run propels Flying Dutch to women's crown

Emilie Hanson scored a game-high 26 points and Central (Iowa) converted 24 of 26 free throws on its home court to defeat Capital, 71-63, in the title game of the Division III Women's Basketball Championship March 20.

Central (Iowa) trailed just 56-55 with under four minutes left in the game. But the Flying Dutch outscored Capital, 9-0, to take a 64-56 lead with 1:23 remaining. During the run, Tracy Wilson scored four of her 17 points for the game.

Central (Iowa) then converted five of six free throws in the final 23 seconds to hold off the Crusaders.

"In the last few minutes, our starters were playing on pure emotion," Central (Iowa) coach Gary Boeyiak said. "This is a tremendously courageous group. They never doubted they were going to win. The crowd really gave us a push at some key moments in the game. They were a big part of this. That's one of the joys of hosting a tournament and winning it—being able to share it with the student body."

Playing before a home crowd of 2,300, Central (Iowa) won its first Division III women's basketball title. The only other appearance in the tournament for the Flying Dutch was in 1983.

Capital led by as many as 10 points in the first half, but a three-pointer and two free throws by Tiffanie Corey gave Central (Iowa) a 37-33 half-time advantage.

"We had opportunities to put them away in the first half and let them back in the game. We made too many mistakes," Capital coach Dixie Jeffers said. "The home court was a tremendous factor, but to Central's credit, they did a wonderful job of hosting. They treated us well."

Capital got 25 points and 12 rebounds from all-American Sandy Buddelmeyer.

Central (Iowa) advanced to the championship game with a 60-59 victory over St. Benedict. Capital

Polar Bear men's team holds off Augustana (Illinois) in second half

Ohio Northern got 21 points each from Mark Gooden and D'Artis Jones and 14 points from Aaron Madry and held Augustana's (Illinois) Kirk Anderson to eight-of-25 shooting as the Polar Bears defeated the Vikings, 71-68, for the Division III Men's Basketball Championship March 20 at Buffalo State.

Ohio Northern led by as many as 14 points and was up by 10 at half time. Augustana (Illinois) chipped away in the second half to pull within two at 50-48, after Bryan Moe hit a layup with 9:34 left. Augustana (Illinois) then had a chance to take the lead, but the Polar Bears went on a 14-2 run to regain control and move ahead, 64-52, with 3:50 left.

Augustana (Illinois) cut the margin to two points once more on an Anderson three-pointer with just under a minute remaining, but Gooden sank four free throws to seal the win for Ohio Northern.

"They were awesome," Augustana (Illinois) coach Steve Yount said of Ohio Northern. "In the first half, they were aggressive and they hit all their shots. We made a couple of runs at them, but they didn't fold. They never let us tie or get ahead."

Ohio Northern coach Joe Campoli expected Augustana (Illinois) to make a second-half run.

"This is a club that could have folded, down 13 points," Campoli said. "When we were up 10 at half time, we told the kids they'd come back. I wouldn't expect my team to fold if they were down 10 at half time. We reminded the kids that there will be runs. Just sustain and you'll be OK."

The win gave Ohio Northern its first Division III men's basketball title.

Anderson, the tournament's most outstanding player, scored 29 points in his first game against Rowan and was 10 of 23 from three-point range in the tournament.

Ohio Northern defeated Massachusetts-Dartmouth, 74-73, to advance to the championship game. Augustana (Illinois) beat Rowan, 83-81, in the semifinals. In the third-place game, Rowan defeated Massachusetts-Dartmouth, 95-74. Ohio Northern finished the year with a 28-2 record. Augustana (Illinois) ended the season with a 24-7 record.

Joining Anderson on the all-tournament team were Gooden and Madry; Steve Haynes, Massachusetts-Dartmouth, and Keith Wood, Rowan.

Host team gets title in II hockey

A power-play goal by Craig Matatall only 35 seconds into the game was all the scoring that host Bemidji State needed, but the Beavers went on to blank Mercyhurst, 5-0, and win the NCAA Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship March 20.

The victory completed a two-game sweep of Mercyhurst. Bemidji State won the first game March 19, 10-6, as Jamie Erb scored four goals and assisted on another goal.

The games were the first Division II tournament competition since the championship was eliminated after the 1984 season. The Beavers also won the 1984 championship in a two-game, total-goals series, defeating Merrimack, 14-4.

In the clincher against Mercyhurst, Dan Tollefson scored a power-play goal 7:48 into the first period to give the Beavers a 2-0 lead, then Eric Monsrud scored less than four minutes later. Monsrud added another goal in the second period and Kris Bjornson rounded out the scoring on one of Bemidji State's 22 third-period shots.

Bemidji State ended the season with a 24-7 record, while Mercyhurst finished at 18-10.

Stanford dominates swimming

The Stanford Cardinal won a championships-record-tying 13 events in capturing its second consecutive Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 18-20 at Minnesota.

Led by Olympians Jenny Thompson, Janel Jorgensen and Lea Loveless, who combined to win six individual titles, the heavily favored Cardinal coasted to victory over Florida and Texas.

Thompson successfully defended her 50- and 100-yard freestyle titles, and Loveless won both backstroke events, repeating as champion in the 100-yard backstroke and unseating Whitney Hedgepeth of Texas in the 200-yard backstroke. Jorgensen regained both the 100- and 200-yard butterfly titles she won in 1990. The trio also helped Stanford to four relay victories.

Stanford's Eileen Richetelli won titles in three-meter and platform diving for the second straight year, and Lisa Jacob added a victory in the 500-yard freestyle as part of a four-victory first day that gave the Cardinal a commanding lead.

Michigan's Lara Hooiveld and Florida's Nicole Haislett were the meet's other double winners. Hooiveld was named swimmer of the year after setting a U.S. Open record of 1:00.47 in the finals of the

Kenyon pushed, but still wins 14th straight swimming crown

No. 14 was a struggle.

Kenyon needed a strong performance on the final day of the Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships March 18-20 at Emory to hold off a challenge from UC San Diego and win its 14th consecutive title.

The Lords' margin of victory was the closest in eight years and was not secure until Kevin Fease won the 1,650-yard freestyle—the opening event of the final evening of competition. Three teammates also finished in the top six in the event to give the Lords some breathing room.

UC San Diego finished second in the meet for the fourth time in five years. Hope placed third.

"We had some real beacons of light in this meet," said Kenyon head coach Jim Steen. "One of the most amazing was Kevin Fease. Last year at the nationals, Kevin had a good seeding going into the mile but finished dead last. In one year's time, he's gone from dead last to dead first."

Fease was one of just two Kenyon swimmers to win individual titles. John Butcher earned diver-of-the-year honors by winning both the one-meter and three-meter events over Pomona-Pitzer's Brian Forster. The Lords also won two relay events, including a record-setting performance in the 200-yard medley relay.

UC San Diego mounted a charge behind Travis Miller, named the meet's outstanding performer. Miller captured his third straight 200-yard backstroke title in addition to winning the 100-yard butterfly and 200-yard individual medley. The junior now has six career individual titles. Miller also helped the Tritons win three relay events.

"Travis Miller certainly came to perform in this meet," Steen said.

Louis Petto of New Paltz State was a double winner, successfully defending his 200- and 500-yard freestyle titles. John Carroll's Joseph Turi also was a repeat winner in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Eric Steidinger and Chris Ornee helped Johns Hopkins to a fourth-place finish. Steidinger beat defending champion Brian Dowdall of Kenyon in the 50-yard freestyle while Ornee won his first title in the 100-yard backstroke. Blue Jay coach George Kennedy was named coach of the year.

Other individual winners included Greg Milton of Redlands in the 100-yard freestyle, Kevin Gelwicks of Wisconsin-Stevens Point in the 200-yard breaststroke, Michael Heithaus of Oberlin in the 400-yard individual medley and Kalamazoo's Jeffrey Walker in the 200-yard butterfly, where he knocked off defending champion Jay Gindin of Case Reserve.

Allegheny's Tim Riggs was named diving coach of the year after leading three Gator divers to four top-five finishes.

Top four men's basketball seeds avoid upsets

By Richard M. Campbell

STATISTICS COORDINATOR

Two No. 1 seeds were on the edge of elimination but pulled out victories in the second round, thus ensuring that all four top seeds will be in the Sweet Sixteen of the 55th Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

Indiana had an easier time than Michigan, but the Hoosiers needed all their tournament experience to get by Xavier (Ohio), 73-70, in the Midwest region. Michigan was forced to overtime in the West region before dispatching UCLA, 86-84, on a controversial last-second shot.

Never have more than two No. 1-seeded teams reached the Final Four since team seeding began in 1979; only five No. 1 seeds have won the national championship in that 14-year period.

There are four former national-championship coaches still on hand, including Indiana's Bob Knight (three titles), Louisville's Denny Crum (two titles), North Carolina's Dean Smith and Michigan's Steve Fisher. This is Smith's 13th straight Sweet Sixteen—the record for a coach.

More seeding talk

Only two teams seeded lower than eighth ever have reached the Final Four since team seeding began. One was Louisiana State, a No. 11 seed in 1986, when it reached the national semifinals before losing to eventual champion Louisville, 88-77. The other was Pennsylvania, a No. 9 seed in 1979 that also lost to the eventual champion, Michigan State, 101-67.

Villanova, a No. 8 seed in 1985, remains the lowest seed to win the title. The five No. 1 seeds that have won are North Carolina in 1982, Georgetown in 1984, Indiana in 1987, Nevada-Las Vegas in 1990 and Duke in 1992.

Seedings for all Final Four teams since 1979 appear in the accompanying table.

Since 1985, when the men's bracket expanded to 64 teams, a No. 1 seed never has lost a first-round game—meaning that no No. 16 seed yet has pulled the ultimate upset. You might expect that all of the lower seeds have losing records in the first round, but a quick inspection shows that No. 9 seeds since 1985 have winning records in first-round games.

It comes as no surprise that No. 1 seeds fare well in tournament play. In fact, since seeding began, No. 1 seeds have posted a combined 162-52 record (.757 winning percentage). The other seeds' records drop progressively, except for No. 6 seeds. They have an 84-56 (.600) record overall—a better winning percentage than the Nos. 3, 4 and 5 seeds.

This year, No. 1 North Carolina challenged the theory that each round gets more difficult by hammering out the most lopsided second-round victory in tournament history, a 112-67 win over Rhode Island.

Major upsets

We define a major upset as involving a difference of at least five places in the seedings (such as No. 11 over No. 6 or No. 7 over No. 2) because that means the two teams were at least 16 places apart in the rankings used for regional seeding.

Arizona quickly is becoming an answer to trivia questions after suffering two consecutive quick exits as a highly seeded team, including this year's 64-61 opening-round loss to No. 15 seed Santa Clara. Last year, Lute Olson's squad fell in the opening round to No. 14 seed East Tennessee State. Santa Clara became just the second No. 15 seed to defeat a No. 2 (the first was No. 15 Richmond over No. 2 Syracuse in 1991).

Arizona, however, is not the only No. 2 seed to go down this year. The Wildcats were joined in the second round by Seton Hall, which lost to No. 7 Western Kentucky, 72-68, in the second round of the Southeast regional. Other notable first-round upsets came in the Southeast region, where No. 11 Tulane got by No. 6 Kansas State, 55-53, and in the West region, where No. 12 George Washington downed No. 5 New Mexico, 82-68, and No. 13 Southern-Baton Rouge whipped No. 4 Georgia Tech, 93-78.

The lowest-seeded team remaining is George Washington, which joins six other No. 12 seeds to make it as far as the Sweet Sixteen. Others were New Mexico State in 1992, Eastern Michigan in 1991, Ball State in 1990, Wyoming in 1987, DePaul in 1986 and Kentucky in 1985. No 12th seed or worse ever has advanced beyond the Sweet Sixteen.

Although it's not technically a major upset, No. 6 California's defeat of two-time champion and No. 3 seed Duke, 82-77, in

Familiar names top women's Sweet Sixteen field

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA ASSISTANT
STATISTICS COORDINATOR

The Sweet Sixteen for the 12th Division I Women's Basketball Championship has a familiar look, as nine of the previous 11 title-winning schools are included.

Tennessee, winner of three titles, and Stanford, winner of two of the past three championships, head the list. But Southern California and Louisiana Tech also are on hand, with two titles each. Of 44 available berths to date in the Women's Final Four, teams remaining in the 1993 tourney have occupied 30.

Nine of the remaining entrants were in the 1992 Sweet Sixteen—Tennessee, Virginia, Western Kentucky, Southwest Missouri State, Stephen F. Austin, Vanderbilt, Southern California, Stanford and Texas Tech. Only two teams are first-timers in the Sweet Sixteen—Colorado and Georgetown. Georgetown is the only one of the 16 teams making its first appearance in the tournament.

Of course, getting to the Sweet Sixteen does not necessarily mean a trip to the Women's Final Four.

Only 16 schools have made it as far as the national semifinals in the tournament's 11 years. Two teams—Tennessee and Louisiana Tech—have seven appearances each. Virginia and Stanford each have three consecutive trips. By contrast, during the same period in the men's tournament, 26 schools have appeared in the Final Four (including six appearances by Duke).

Only three other teams have made as many as three Women's Final Four appearances—Auburn, Southern California and Western Kentucky. Auburn, Virginia and Western Kentucky have made the most trips without winning a championship. Mississippi (absent in 1993) has been in the Sweet Sixteen the most times (nine) without a trip to the Women's Final Four.

Tennessee is the only team to make the Sweet Sixteen every year, while Louisiana Tech has 10 appearances and Auburn, Long Beach State and Mississippi nine each. Here is a list of most Sweet Sixteen appearances through the 1993 tournament:

Team (No.)	Years in Sweet Sixteen field
Tennessee (12)	1982-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91-92-93
Louisiana Tech (10)	1982-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-91
Long Beach St. (9)	1982-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-91
Mississippi (9)	1983-84-85-86-87-88-89-90-92
Auburn (9)	1983-85-86-87-88-89-90-91-93
Southern Cal (9)	1982-83-84-85-86-87-88-89-92
Texas (8)	1983-84-85-86-87-88-89-90
Georgia (7)	1983-84-85-86-87-88-91
North Caro. St. (7)	1982-84-85-87-89-90-91
Virginia (7)	1987-88-89-90-91-92-93

Women's Final Four teams in boldface

Connecticut parlayed its only appearance in the Sweet Sixteen in 1991 into a Women's Final Four berth and remains the only team to have accomplish that feat. Seventeen teams before 1993 have made only one appearance in the Sweet Sixteen field and never returned, including Miami (Florida) and West Virginia in 1992.

Conference success

The Southeastern Conference has three teams remaining—Tennessee, Auburn and Vanderbilt—while the Atlantic Coast Conference (North Carolina and Virginia), Big Ten Conference (Iowa and Ohio State), Pacific-10 Conference (Stanford and Southern California) and Sun Belt Conference (Louisiana Tech and Western Kentucky) all have two teams left.

Unfortunately for the SEC, Tennessee and Auburn are in the same region, meaning that only one can advance to the Women's Final Four. The Pacific-10 has the same predicament with Stanford and Southern California, which could be headed for a showdown in the regional finals.

Top seeds no surprise

In the course of the 11 previous NCAA women's tournaments, top-seeded teams have dominated the field. Since the seeding began in 1982, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won every Division I championship.

Last year, Stanford continued a four-year streak of No. 1 seeds capturing the national title. The Cardinal plowed through teams seeded Nos. 9-4-3-1-4 en route to the championship. Only champions Tennessee in 1987 and Louisiana Tech in 1988 were not seeded No. 1.

This year, for the first time, the women's committee did not seed teams beyond the top four in each region. However, every No. 1-seeded team advanced to the Sweet Sixteen—Ohio State, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Stanford. And 13 of the 16 seeded teams advanced to the Sweet Sixteen.

Louisiana Tech in 1988 and Tennessee in 1987 had the toughest road to the Women's Final Four, according to seeding; each team had to face three No. 1 seeds and a No. 3 seed after the first and second rounds (those numbers added equal six). Stanford last year had the easiest route, facing Nos. 4-3-1-4 seeds (total 12) after the first and second rounds.

Last year's tournament marked a definite departure from top seeds advancing to the Women's Final Four as No. 4 Western Kentucky and No. 8 Southwest Missouri State appeared. For the third time, Western Kentucky coach Paul Sanderford guided a No.

'Big House' Gaines to receive award from NABC

The National Basketball Coaches Association will present the NABC Balfour Golden Anniversary Award to retiring Winston-Salem State University basketball coach Clarence "Big House" Gaines in recognition of a half-century of outstanding service to the game.

Gaines and this year's selections for the NABC Balfour Silver Anniversary All-America team will be honored April 4 during the association's annual awards dinner at the New Orleans Marriott Hotel.

Gaines, a 1945 graduate of Morgan State University, is a member of the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame. His teams at Winston-Salem won 828 games in 47 seasons.

The Silver Anniversary team includes collegiate players from the 1967-68 season.

Members of the team are:

■ Nolan Archibald, an academic all-American as a senior who led Weber State College to its first appearance in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Since 1986, he has been chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of Black & Decker Corporation.

■ Elvin "The Big E" Hayes, a

Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame member who was a two-time consensus all-American at the University of Houston. Hayes, who played for four teams during a 16-year career in the National Basketball Association, currently is president of Hayes-Franklin Ford, Inc., in Crosby, Texas.

■ Bill Hosket, an academic all-American at forward and center who led Ohio State University to a Final Four appearance in 1968. Hosket, who also played on the 1968 U.S. Olympic team and professionally for the New York Knicks, is general manager of the Columbus, Ohio, division of Millcraft Paper Co. He also is a broadcaster for Raycom telecasts of Big Ten Conference basketball.

■ Don May, a three-time all-American at the University of Dayton who later was a teammate with Hosket on the Knicks. May, who led Dayton to an appearance in the 1967 Division I championship game and to the 1968 National Invitation Tournament title, is purchasing manager for Mosier Industries in Brookville, Ohio.

■ Larry Miller, an Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. The Tar Heels made two Final Four appearances during Miller's playing days at the school. The former American Basketball Association player is a real estate broker in North Carolina and Virginia.

■ Michael Warren, a member of the first two of seven straight national-championship teams at the University of California, Los Angeles, who later won fame in the role of officer Bobby Hill on the NBC television program "Hill Street Blues." The former academic all-American has made many appearances in films, television and commercials.

Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 3 February 24, 1993

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Tryouts/precollege expense/ alumni/booster

1. Institution's athletics booster club sponsoring local sports club that includes prospective student-athletes. An institution's athletics booster club may not sponsor a local sports club that includes prospective student-athletes. [References: NCAA Bylaws 13.12.2.4 (local sports club), 13.16.1 (prohibited expenses) and IC.5/21/92, Item No. 2]

Precollege expense

2. Institution donating athletics equipment to foundation to distribute to high schools. An institution may donate used athletics equipment to a nonprofit foundation or organization established to distribute such equipment to a high school(s), provided the request for such donations is initiated by the foundation and the institution is not involved in selecting which high school(s) are to receive the equipment. in tournaments since 1979. Another table presents won-lost records by seeding.

If you disregard the opening round, in which teams do not have the opportunity to meet the highest seed, then Villanova in 1985 had the toughest route to the championship. The Wildcats had to meet five opponents after the opening round whose seeds added up to only 11 (the lower the total number of the seeds combined, the more difficult a team's journey).

Villanova faced opponents seeded 1-5-2-2-1, while North Carolina State in 1983 faced a total of provide specialized fundamental instruction, practice or competition. In general, a camp provides activities for overall knowledge in the sport and, in many instances, provides a classroom setting for knowledge in academic and social areas.

b. A tournament is defined as an event in which the format involves a series of basketball contests with no fundamental instruction and/or classroom settings.

Initial eligibility/ seasons of competition

5. Effect of 1993 Convention Proposal No. 71 on a student-athlete's seasons of competition (Division I). A student-athlete who initially enrolls during the 1993-94 academic year in a Division I institution that utilizes the exception set forth in 1993 Convention Proposal No. 71 (i.e., the institution will not certify its student-athletes in that sport per the freshman academic requirements set forth in Bylaw 14.3 for the 1993-94 academic year because the institution will continue to apply Division III financial aid guidelines) is entitled to four seasons of competition at the Division I institution, even if the individual is not considered a qualifier per Bylaw 14.3. [References: 14.3.1.4.1 (change in sport classification) (1993-94 Manual) and 14.3.3 (seasons of competition—partial qualifier and nonqualifier)]

Coaches—graduate assistant

6. Replacement of graduate assistant coach (Division I). The compensation or remuneration set forth in Bylaw 11.02.4 for the graduate assistant coach is charged against an academic year. In Division I-A football, once the amount set forth in 11.02.4(a) is paid to the two graduate assistant coaches for that academic year, additional funds may not be spent on a replacement until the start of the next academic year, even though one of the graduate assistant coaches subsequently leaves the institution's athletics program during the academic year. [References: 11.02.4 (coach, graduate assistant) and 11.3.4.3 (replacement of restricted-earnings coach)]

Scouting

7. Scouting of opponents in conjunction with a recruiting trip (Division I). In sports in which an institution may not provide expenses to scout opponents (i.e., sports other than basketball, football, lacrosse and women's volleyball), a coaching staff member who receives expenses from the institution to recruit a prospect may not scout an institution's opponent in conjunction with the recruiting visit. [References: 11.6.2 (limitations on scouting of opponents—Division I restrictions) and 11.6.2.1 (basketball, football, lacrosse and women's volleyball)]

4-seeded team into the Final Four (1985, 1986 and 1992).

Southwest Missouri State's Cheryl Burnett and her Bears were the lowest-seeded team in tournament history to reach the Women's Final Four. Even so, at least two No. 1 seeds advanced (Stanford and Virginia), as has been true every year except 1985. Five tournaments saw only No. 1 and No. 2 seeds advance that far (1983, 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990).

First-timers win

Since 1983, 35 teams have won first- or opening-round games in their first appearance in the tour-

Journalism scholarships announced

The first winners of The Freedom Forum-NCAA Foundation sports journalism scholarships have been announced.

The 10 winners of the $3,000 awards were chosen from a field of 73 applicants. One winner was selected from each of the eight NCAA geographical districts, along with two at-large winners.

Last April, The Freedom Forum made a $150,000 contribution to support the program for a three-year period, beginning with the scholarship awards for the 1993-94 academic year.

The winners are:

District 1—Kimberley A. Page, Merrimack College.

District 2—Joshua A. Barnett, Syracuse University.

District 3—Susan K. Rivero, University of Georgia.

District 4—David Saez, Kent State University.

District 5—Brady C. Prauser, University of Kansas.

District 6—Scott I. Franzke, Southern Methodist University.

District 7—Lisa I. Kranz, Arizona State University.

District 8—Drake S. Witham, University of Washington

At-large—Charles E. McDuffie, Howard University.

At-large—Jason L. Sanders, University of Mississippi.

Restructuring

Financial and other pressures create the need to change how we conduct our programs

identified and funded as spectator-oriented sports, even though they currently do not fit the description, in order to assist the sport in reaching that level.

Minimum financial aid and scheduling requirements would continue to apply to spectator-oriented sports. (The Ivy Group would continue its financial aid exemption.) Off-campus recruiting would be allowed in spectator-oriented sports but would be reduced as reflected in the 1994 legislative concepts provided by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics.

Any sport that is not identified by a Division I institution as a spectator-oriented sport would be classified as a participation sport. The primary purpose of participation sports would be to afford opportunities for the student body to participate in intercollegiate athletics. In participation-oriented sports, there would be no off-campus recruiting, and the financial-conditions committee's model I-B (Division III financial aid regulations) would be applied to those sports.

In regard to championships in a restructured Division I, there could be two types: spectator-oriented and participation-oriented. If a certain minimum number of Division I institutions (say, 50) competed in a particular sport, a championship would be conducted.

In the spectator-oriented championships, automatic bids and at-large bids would continue to be awarded. In the participation-oriented championships, only conference champions or sports-federation champions would participate in the NCAA-sponsored championships. This would promote meaningful regional competition and reduce the numbers of teams or individuals in the national championships.

I assume that many of the existing Division I conferences would continue to have conference championships in the spectator-oriented sports and in some participation-oriented sports. Also, I think sports federations could be formed among the conferences in certain regions for competition and championships. (Such a federation already has been formed in the West: the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation.)

Strict scheduling requirements would continue to be applied to spectator-oriented sports, but not to participation-oriented sports. This would allow for such sports to compete in their region with institutions that are members of the restructured NCAA Division II and the NAIA, thus reducing travel costs and fostering regional interest.

Of course, a primary goal of the restructuring concept is to reduce significantly the costs and pressures in many sports and, therefore, in the entire athletics program.

Another goal, which should not be regarded lightly, is to provide additional participation opportunities, or at least keep them from being reduced. A sport that may have been dropped because of the lack of funds for scholarships or because of the recruiting budget needed to compete in a Division I conference could be saved by changing to a participation sport that could compete in a regional sports federation.

The savings from this concept could permit an increase in the number of sports in which the student body could participate, resulting in more interest in intercollegiate athletics from the student body and a better relationship between students and the athletics program.

In regard to revenue distribution, I think there would have to be a recognition that the revenue gained from the men's basketball tournament would have to be distributed by a different formula. It would not be fair to continue the current distribution since a greater number of institutions probably would be competing for the Division I spectator-oriented basketball championship.

Therefore, it should be acknowledged that the revenue received is related in large part to the Division I institutions that have established a substantial interest in terms of attendance, national media exposure and success. Recognizing this, I suggest that the revenue be distributed only to institutions in Division I that meet certain criteria such as arena size and average home attendance.

Distribution among institutions that meet such criteria could be based on the current formula that is used for the basketball pool. Some portion of the revenue could continue to be distributed to reward sports sponsorship.

I realize that a distribution formula based on arena and attendance criteria likely would eliminate a number of existing Division I institutions from sharing the basketball revenue. I submit, however, that those institutions would gain much more from the savings in being relieved the current NCAA Division I minimum financial aid and scheduling requirements.

Those schools still would have the ability to compete in the NCAA tournament and to gain the acclaim and interest that accompany that opportunity. I also believe that the brackets for the women's and men's basketball championships would need to be increased to accommodate the additional institutions that probably would be classified in the newly restructured Division I.

I recognize that this restructuring concept will be viewed as a radical and great departure from how we currently are conducting intercollegiate athletics. I also realize that it would take courage to implement such a change. I believe, however, that we are at the point at which such radical concepts must be seriously considered if we are to truly address the issues and pressures that face us.

Ethics

has been measured against peer populations for more than 40 years.

Studies involving sport populations from about 1960, including our own, have reported that (a) athletes reasoned significantly lower concerning moral issues than their peer groups; (b) athletes are less sportsmanship-like than their peer population; (c) athletes exhibit aggressive behaviors more so than their peer population, and (d) the longer athletes are in sport, the less reasoned they become. (See: Bredemeier & Shields; Bredemeier; Weiss; Wandzilak; Penney & Priest; Beller & Stoll, and Hahm, Stoll & Beller). In all of these studies, the researchers compared athlete and nonathlete populations. Does Professor Gough suggest that these researchers really were not measuring what they thought they were measuring? Were they all inept and attempting a study that couldn't be done? Perhaps, but not likely.

In our study (Hahm, Beller & Stoll), we didn't believe the data, either, until we began our own long-term study. We had hopes of proving the research wrong; we didn't. Instead, we—which we didn't want to do—supported what Tutko and Ogilvie said 20 years ago: "If you want to build character, try something different than sport."

(3) Professor Gough states that athletes are no less moral than their counterparts and states that we should "temper the severe moral whipping that sports continue to receive." Does this mean that all of the above researchers conspired to tear down the sanctity of sport? I doubt it. I have met only two of those researchers, and my coinvestigator, Jennifer Beller, has met only one. At least four of the previously mentioned researchers have sport backgrounds, including Beller and me. Most of us believe that sport and competition can and should be a character-building activity, and we surely don't want to destroy it.

Our quest is to attempt a revolution that reinstates the ideal concept of competition, or what Robert Simon calls "arete." Professor Gough would no less agree because he obviously is an idealist, as he states that "there are untold numbers of character-molding successes." In an ideal world, that is true, but from a statistical sense, it just doesn't hold, especially in the contact and "money" sports.

(4) Professor Gough states that Camus should be held as the ideal source about moral education in sport, and "Camus...remarked that the only context in which he really learned ethics was in sport." Camus was a great writer, but he never watched a Division I ballgame nor played football in America, nor was Camus known for his research in moral education. In fact, he is not mentioned in any of the literature.

That is not to say that what he wrote wasn't of great magnitude in the study of literature and existentialism in the 20th century. However, the icon of moral education is Lawrence Kohlberg, a psychologist philosopher, who never won a Nobel prize but probably should have. He did more for the understanding of moral development than any other individual in the 20th century.

Contact sport today, as it is taught and morally modeled in this country, does not develop young people. Morality is neither taught nor reinforced on the field of play, probably because games-manship is more favorably valued. Gamesmanship is pushing the rules to the limit without getting caught. We are as sure as any researcher can be that the above is true.

Our work parallels Kohlberg, Piaget, Rest and others. And our instrument at this moment has been shown to be valid and reliable with a Cronbach Alpha of .74-.88 in studies of 10,000 athletes in North America from high school to Division I, including Olympic-level elite athletes. It also correlates with the Defining Issues Test at .82.

We thank Professor Gough for his concern. Rest assured we have done our homework while pioneering the research and moral-education intervention programs for athletics populations.

Rules

Special committee ready to tackle the issue of federated rules

rules were not made with their sports in mind.

"That was really the genesis for it: How can we simplify and reduce the recruiting rules?" Schultz said. "What we found is football and basketball (coaches) didn't feel we needed any changes." Indeed, Schultz said football and basketball coaches believe that more regulation, rather than less, will best ensure that no institution gains a competitive advantage.

"They feel they need the regulation because of the intense competition and to keep the level playing field," Schultz said. "The trap we fall in is that we pass regulations based on football and basketball, then we let those rules fall out across the board. That creates burdens for other sports."

Earlier this year, the Recruiting Committee sent 33 letters to coaches associations asking what recruiting rules they would like to have changed. To date, fewer than 10 have replied.

"I'm disappointed in the response," Schultz said. "Every coach I have spoken with has been very enthusiastic about (more federated rules)."

Cluster approach

David B. Keilitz, athletics director at Central Michigan University and chair of the Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport, said he expects the committee to outline possibilities and formulate a plan at its first meeting, which will be in late April or early May.

"We want to lay out the boundaries and ground rules of what we think we can do and what we want to do concerning rules federation," Keilitz said.

Keilitz said he would not rule out the possibility of presenting legislative proposals to the NCAA

Council and Presidents Commission in time for the membership to act at the 1994 Convention.

One of the ways in which the special committee may approach rules federation, Keilitz said, is to attempt to group together sports that are similar in practice-, recruiting- and playing-schedule structure.

"We may find that (grouping) is feasible and that may be the way we attack it," Keilitz said. "We may want to cluster sports in groups of two, three, four or five. There may be a sport that is so unique that (it) will basically have (its) own rules."

Division II Vice-President Charles N. Lindemann, athletics director at Humboldt State University and a member of the special committee, agrees with Keilitz that grouping similar sports is a good approach.

"I suspect there will be an effort to cluster programs," Lindemann said. "What we want to try to avoid is something that is utterly unmanageable."

Keilitz said the Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport will coordinate its efforts with those of the Legislative Review and Recruiting Committees.

"We will be working very closely with those committees for their input so we are not duplicating a lot of work," Keilitz said. "Those two committees, plus ours, will certainly push for input (from the membership)." Recruiting Committee chair Jody Conradt, University of Texas at Austin, and Legislative Review Committee chair David Price, Pacific-10 Conference, both are on the Special Committee.

Different needs

While coaches and representatives of some coaches associations do not foresee or advocate separate

"NCAA Manuals" for all different sports, they are pushing for change.

Sandra L. Vivas, executive director of the American Volleyball Coaches Association, attended both of the Division I coaches meetings. She says that coaches outside of football and basketball regard some rules as anywhere from slightly inconvenient to lacking common sense when applied to their sports.

"It's obvious that all of us have different needs than football and basketball," Vivas said. "After sitting in at these two years of meetings, it's obvious that some of the rules don't make sense in terms of how the sports are organized. I heard frustrations coming from everybody about rules that are irrelevant to other sports."

Vivas said some of the issues that volleyball coaches are most concerned with are the limits they have on the number of evaluations they can perform on a potential recruit and limitations on publicity surrounding those recruits who sign with an institution.

"We would like to drop all recruiting rules," Vivas said. "We would like to lift all of the limitations on evaluations. With limited funds, you want to make sure you get the right (student-athletes). Also, allow publicity of the prospect's signing. Any publicity we get is good for our sport. Mainly, (coaches) find the rules illogical."

Dick Gould, long-time men's tennis coach at Stanford University, said that legislation should agree with its rationale.

"I don't think there is any coach who doesn't believe there need to be some changes," Gould said. "If (the rules) do not meet the rationale, then we should change them."

Cost factor

Gould said he personally is not bothered by legislation that tennis coaches must follow, but he said that in certain circumstances, sports-specific legislation may be appropriate. He said cost-containment is the driving force behind many of the existing recruiting rules.

"You cannot deny that cost-reduction is a factor," Gould said. "And the cost-reduction aspects of (the recruiting rules) are good. But there are some areas where some sport-specific legislation might be good."

John R. Means, men's golf coach at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, and president of the Golf Coaches Association of America, said golf coaches have long wanted to adopt more sport-specific legislation for their sport.

He said one of the most difficult rules for golf coaches is that they are not allowed to talk with a prospect's parents while the prospect is playing.

"It's weird," Means said. "It's a tough situation to be put in."

Conradt, women's basketball coach at Texas, said that although the idea of rules federation is not a new one, merit exists for reviewing the subject. Conradt said she believes that proposed legislation could be ready in time for the 1994 NCAA Convention, although she said progress on the subject must be swift in the coming months.

"There is a great deal of diversity sport-to-sport, and it is hard to write rules that blanket everyone effectively," Conradt said. "The feeling is that we're top-heavy with rules that address the needs of football and basketball, and the other sports may feel they're taking medicine for an illness that they don't have."

administrator, a trainer or coach, and a student-athlete. Representatives of other campus departments involved in an institution's AOD team also are being encouraged to attend this workshop.

Both workshops will be conducted by Roger Svendsen and Tom Griffin of the Minnesota Institute of Public Health.

Registration fees are $60 per person for the San Diego session, where registration priority is given to schools sending two or more representatives, and $50 for the Baltimore session. Those fees will be refunded to individuals who attend and complete the conference. Space is limited in both sessions.

Further information on availability of space in the workshops and lodging can be obtained from Donna Hockersmith, NCAA administrative assistant for sports sciences, at the NCAA national office.

100-yard breaststroke and unseating Villanova's Lisa Flood in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Florida Olympian Haislett avenged her loss to Thompson in the 100-yard freestyle by winning her third straight 200-yard freestyle, and she also edged a trio of Stanford swimmers in the 200-yard individual medley.

Florida's narrow second-place victory was aided by freshman Mimosa McNeerney, who won the 1,650-yard freestyle during the final evening of competition to protect a slim Gator lead over Texas.

Thirty-three points separated fourth-place Southern Methodist from seventh-place UCLA. Mustang freestylers Gitta Jensen and Sandra Cam earned top-five points in all five freestyle events.

Notables

Robert J. Bruce, president of Widener and a member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, was elected chair of the board of directors of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

Eddie Fogler, who guided the Vanderbilt men's basketball team to its first outright Southeastern Conference regular-season championship since 1965, named college basketball coach of the year by United Press International.

Bill "Grizzly Bill" Schwanke, play-by-play announcer for Montana football and basketball since 1971, stepped down to devote more time to his position as director of corporate marketing and media relations at the institution, a post he has held for the past three years.

Deaths

Joseph Abrahamson, men's and women's tennis coach at Colgate, died March 11 of a heart attack. He was 57. Abrahamson, who was inducted into the Colgate hall of honor in 1983, had coached the men's team since 1965 and led the women's program for the past 19 years. A native of Madison, New Jersey, Abrahamson compiled a record of 366-140-2 as men's coach and a 179-47 mark as women's coach. He notched his 300th career victory as men's coach in 1988.

Don Barksdale, who played basketball for UCLA in the 1940s, died March 8 of cancer at his home in Oakland, California. He was 69. Barksdale, who in 1948 was the first Black to play on the U.S. Olympic basketball team and also played professionally with the Baltimore Bullets and the Boston Celtics, was UCLA's leading scorer in the 1946-47 season, averaging 14.7 points per game to become the Bruins' first all-American basketball player. Barksdale founded the Oakland-area Save High School Sports program.

Football hall of fame ready for next steps

Curator selection, groundbreaking set

By Dick Kishpaugh

Plans for the relocation to South Bend, Indiana, of the National Football Foundation's College Football Hall of Fame have progressed to the point where two major steps will be taken in the next few months.

The first will be the naming of a full-time curator, a step that should be completed by the end of May, and the second is a groundbreaking ceremony that is to be scheduled in July.

The hall is scheduled for completion in September 1994.

Much of the organizational structure for the hall already is in place, since it will be operated by the Century Center, a convention and meeting facility in downtown South Bend. In fact, the Century Center and the football hall will be connected by a tunnel under Saint Joseph Street in the center of the city.

The functions of finance, marketing and operations for the hall will be absorbed by the professional staff of the Century Center, under the guidance of Executive Director Brian Hedman. That will leave the curator, who will report to Hedman, free to concentrate on such functions as education, entertainment and archival work.

The entire project is under the direction of the city of South Bend, whose mayor, Joe Kernan, is actively seeking major corporate sponsors who can provide the $14 million required for the project.

That sum will be divided equally between the cost of the building and development of exhibits.

Detailed planning is being handled by Mikki Dobski Shidler, the city's project manager, in cooperation with Hedman. The unusual design of the hall includes an 18,000-square-foot space at street level built to resemble a stadium and featuring a lobby, food court and gift shop. Another 38,000 square feet of exhibit space will be located below ground level.

Many exhibits will be transferred to South Bend from the current hall in Kings Island, Ohio, but many others will be modernized or expanded, especially in the area of research archives. It is expected that the new facility will appeal to fans of all ages as well as to serious students of the history of the college game.

The South Bend group also emphasizes that the University of Notre Dame, which is located in the city, has no official connection with the project, although the school's administration has been supportive of the facility and has recognized its potential for boosting the economy of the area.

The intent of the hall is to focus on the role that all teams have played in the history, romance and development of college football.

Kishpaugh, who lives in Parchment, Michigan, writes frequently on subjects pertaining to the history of college athletics.

namment. (The 1982 tourney isn't included because all participants were making their first appearance.)

This year's seven first-timers posted a 2-5 record in the opening round of the tournament, with only Florida and Georgetown winning. Florida did it the hard way, defeating Bowling Green, 69-67, on the road, while Georgetown beat Northern Illinois, 76-74, at home. Georgetown's Cinderella story continued with a 68-67 victory over No. 3 seed Penn State and advancement to the Sweet Sixteen.

Here is the list of 1993 first-time participants and their opening-round results:

Team (Record)	First-Round Results, Site
Florida (19-9*)	Won over Bowling Green, 69-67, on road
Georgetown (22-6*)	Won over Northern Ill., 76-74, at home
Ga. Southern (21-9)	Lost to Alabama, 102-70, on road
Georgia Tech (16-11)	Lost to Northwestern, 90-62, on road
Montana St. (22-7)	Lost to Washington, 80-51, on road
San Diego (16-12)	Lost to Nebraska, 81-58, on road
Xavier (Ohio) (21-9)	Lost to Clemson, 70-64, on road

*Through first round only

Eight teams won opening-round games in 1983, the best performance by first-time tournament teams in the event's 12-year history.

Women's attendance

Last year, women's Division I tournament attendance hit all-time highs, both total (197,664) and per game (4,706). With an increase to a 64-team field likely in 1994, women's attendance may not approach current per-game levels in the near future. The men's per-game average dropped with each expansion of the bracket, because there were more sites to factor into the equation.

The 1992 women's semifinals and finals in the Los Angeles Sports Arena drew an average of 12,247 fans for the two sessions, third on the all-time list behind the 19,745 at Knoxville, Tennessee, in 1990 and 15,615 at Austin, Texas, in 1987. The first- and second-round per-game average set an all-time high of 4,097 in 1992.

19 in combined seeds—3-10-14. These two squads, along with Michigan State in 1979, were the only championship teams to face at least two No. 1 seeds en route to the title.

In the Final Four, 1991 and 1981 produced fields with the lowest (and therefore best) combined seeds—seven each. In 1991, Nevada-Las Vegas and North Carolina were No. 1, Duke was a No. 2 and Kansas was No. 3.

Five different seeds have gone on to win a national title since 1979 with No. 1 seeds capturing the most with five. The following shows the furthest that seeds have gone in the tournament since 1979:

1993 Column No. 12

1993 Convention Proposal No. 127 Noninstitutional summer basketball camp vs. summer basketball tournament

Division I institutions should note that with the adoption of 1993 Convention Proposal No. 127 (as amended by Proposal 127-1; effective immediately), coaching staff members in the sport of Division I basketball may attend only institutional camps per Bylaw 13.13.1.1 and noninstitutional summer basketball camps that are certified by the NCAA.

During its February 24, 1993, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that the provisions of Proposal No. 127 (as amended by Proposal No. 127-1) are not applicable to summer basketball tournaments. The committee approved an NCAA Recruiting Committee recommendation distinguishing a basketball camp from a basketball tournament as follows:

1. A camp is designed to place special emphasis in the sport of basketball and to provide specialized fundamental instruction, practice or competition. In general, a camp provides activities for overall knowledge and, in many instances, provides a classroom setting for knowledge in academic and social areas.

2. A tournament is defined as an event in which the format involves a series of basketball contests with no fundamental instruction and/or classroom settings.

Bylaw 11.6.2.1 Scouting of opponents in conjunction with a recruiting trip Division I institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 11.6.2.1, it is permissible for an institution to pay the expenses of one person to scout each opponent on one occasion in the sports of basketball, football, lacrosse and women's volleyball. In all sports, a coach can scout opponents at his or her own expense (except in Division I football and Division I basketball, where volunteer or undergraduate student coaches may not scout opponents, regardless of whether they are compensated for such scouting). Further, during its February 24, 1993, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that in sports in which an institution may not provide expenses to scout opponents (i.e., sports other than basketball, football, lacrosse and women's volleyball), a coaching staff member who receives expenses from the institution to recruit a prospect may not scout an institution's opponent in conjunction with the recruiting visit.

Bylaw 16.8.1.2 Expenses associated with competition while representing an institution

Member institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.8.1.2, an institution may provide actual and necessary travel expenses (e.g., transportation, lodging and meals) to a student-athlete for participation in athletics competition, provided the student-athlete is representing the institution (competes in the uniform of the institution) and is eligible for collegiate competition. This regulation is applicable to both regular-season and championship competition.

If an institution has a question or comment regarding this column, such correspondence should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Black athletes forum tackles gender equity, intervention

Gender equity and the threat of Congressional intervention in intercollegiate athletics will be the focal points of the fifth annual Black Athletes in America Forum April 9-10 at Howard University in Washington, D.C.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, who recently founded the Rainbow Commission for Fairness in Athletics, has been invited to deliver the keynote address.

A panel discussion on "Gender Equity and the Black Female Athlete" is scheduled for April 9. Panelists will include Donna Lopiano, executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation; James J. Whalen, president of Ithaca College and cochair of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force; Vivian L. Fuller, director of athletics at Northeastern Illinois University, and Sanya Tyler, head women's basketball coach at Howard.

Participants in an April 10 panel discussion, titled "The Black Athlete and College: Will Outside Intervention Help?" include NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz and U.S. Olympic Committee President LeRoy Walker, both members of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, and a student-athlete to be announced. Also invited to participate in the discussion is U.S. Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Illinois.

"We've reached a milestone in terms of this forum, and the 1993 forum is certainly on the cutting edge of what is happening in college sports and beyond," said Charles S. Fuller, president of Sports Perspectives International and co-producer of the forum. "Gender equity is a major topic facing the NCAA, and black women deserve to be part of the equation when we talk about expanding opportunities for women in college athletics."

Other panel discussions at the forum will address "The Role of the Media," "Parental Involvement" and "Putting New Perspectives on Sports." Other panelists include sportswriter Frank Deford, NBA Players Association Executive Director Charles Grantham and Southeastern Conference Association Commissioner John Gerdy.

Further information about the forum, which will be at Howard's Blackburn Center, can be obtained by calling Farrell at 202/882-9265 or Lee A. McElroy, athletics director at California State University, Sacramento, and chair of Sports Perspectives International's advisory board, at 916/278-6348.

Mission

Committee recommends focus on fund-raising chair of the committee.

Sweet said the special committee plans to offer recommendations addressing specific aspects of the relationship between the Foundation and the Association at the Foundation board's April 3 meeting in New Orleans.

"Among those recommendations is one to emphasize fund-raising, with appropriate controls to prevent competition in that area between the NCAA and member institutions," she said.

To provide a context for those proposals, the committee recommended some basic principles for use by the board in planning for the Foundation's future.

Stressing that the Foundation is a valuable source of support for intercollegiate athletics, the committee urged that it have autonomy from the Association while pursuing objectives shared by the two organizations.

"The Foundation should have a separateness from the Association and should assume more autonomy in determining the best ways of achieving its mission," Sweet said.

However, the committee suggested, it is important that the Foundation and the Association clearly are seen by the NCAA membership and general public as pursuing the same goals in a cooperative fashion. Specifically, the Association should aid the Foundation's efforts to develop support for intercollegiate athletics as the Foundation directs its efforts toward supporting programs favored by the membership.

The Foundation's support should come primarily in the form of fund-raising, the committee recommended. Since its establishment in 1988, the Foundation occasionally has assumed administrative responsibility for programs, which the committee believes has distracted the Foundation staff from its primary objective of raising and investing funds for the support of programs.

The special committee included two representatives of the NCAA Executive Committee; two representatives of the Foundation board, including Sweet, and two representatives of the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning.

The committee was formed by the NCAA Administrative Committee in November 1992 to review the mission of the Foundation and its financial and operational relationship to the Association.

Division I ice hockey on Teamline

All games from the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship are being carried by TRZ Sports Services of Akron, Ohio.

TRZ will provide live play-by-play coverage of all rounds of the tournament on its Teamline telephone broadcast service.

Fans will be able to hear any game live by calling 1-800/846-4700. They will enter a team's four-digit access code and then a Visa or MasterCard number.

Charges for listening start at 50 cents per minute, with the rate declining to as low as 20 cents per minute, depending upon how long the caller listens. A two-hour ice hockey game would cost about $30.

All tournament game broadcasts will originate from each team's flagship station or directly from the arena to the fans on Teamline.

TRZ also is providing coverage of the NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships. Earlier this year, NCAA Convention coverage was available through TRZ.

The access codes for the teams in this year's men's ice hockey championship are:
