Committee on certification seeks CEO involvement

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification discussed ways to involve Division I chief executive officers in the NCAA's new athletics certification process when it met for the first time March 31.

In particular, the committee considered the possibility of having as many peer-review teams as possible chaired by chief executive officers.

The process of obtaining qualified peer reviewers was one of the principal topics on the agenda of the committee, which is chaired by

R. Gerald Turner, chancellor of the University of Mississippi.

The committee estimated that a pool of at least 300 peer reviewers will be required to assess the self-studies now required of every Division I athletics program. Each peer-review team will consist of three to five members.

Within the next few weeks, the committee will distribute a nominating form to the membership. Besides appearing in The NCAA News, the form will be mailed directly to member institutions, conferences and affiliated organizations, including the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, National Association of Athletics Compliance Coordinators, Faculty Athletics Representatives Association and National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators.

In its discussions, the committee identified recently retired athletics administrators as a promising source of peer reviewers. If the process goes as planned, the pool of peer reviewers will be in place

Financial committee puts forth new cost-cutting suggestions

Four new cost-containment recommendations have been developed by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics.

The four concepts were put forth in a March 16 telephone conference of the committee.

"The committee recognized that the majority of the legislative concepts developed for possible consideration at the 1994 Convention are likely to reduce costs in Division I-A programs," said James E. Delany, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference and chair of the committee. "And the committee recognizes that all NCAA divisions have financial challenges. Therefore, the committee felt obligated to develop a set of recommendations that would reduce costs in each division and subdivision of the NCAA."

The four recommendations are:

■ Abolish nontraditional seasons in all sports.

■ Establish limits on the number of contests.

■ For Division I-AA football, reduce the number of grants in aid to 45, limit the number of contests to 10, begin the season a week later than is currently done and limit the number of unres-

Student-Athlete Day extends its reach to high schools

Dozens of universities and colleges around the country participated in a program to recognize more than 13,000 high-school student-athletes for academic achievement and community service as part of this week's observance of National Student-Athlete Day (NSAD).

The high-schoolers were honored during various events scheduled across the nation in conjunction with the sixth observance of NSAD April 6.

Other observances of the day ranged from programs scheduled in conjunction with the Final Four in New Orleans and Women's Final Four in Atlanta to a wide assortment of on-campus events—all designed to promote public awareness of the aims of NSAD.

The day was established in 1988 to highlight the achievements of student-athletes in the classroom and the community. It also has been used to recognize the network of parents, teachers, coaches and school systems that makes it possible for those student-athletes to strike a balance between athletics and academics.

This year, the NCAA joined Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society and the National Consortium for Athletics and Sports as cosponsors of NSAD.

Recognition of the high-school student-athletes was a new feature of the observance this year. The participating universities and colleges coordinated the presentation of NSAD Certificates of Recognition to honorees who had achieved a 3.000 grade-point average (4.000 scale) or above and had shown excellence in community service.

The certificates were signed by U.S. Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, an honorary cochair of NSAD 1993; NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz, and Richard Lapchick, director of the National Consortium for Academics and Sports, which is affiliated with the Northeastern center.

Among institutions presenting the certificates to high-schoolers were the University of California, San Diego, which presented 1,500 certificates; DePaul University,

DIGEST

A weekly summary of major activities within the Association

Gender equity

Institutional standards group plans April 12 conference call

The institutional standards subcommittee of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force will conduct a telephone conference April 12 to discuss several items, among them its statement on participation opportunities.

The full task force next will meet April 26-27 in Dallas. At that time, it is expected to act on the recommendations submitted by the institutional and NCAA standards subcommittees.

For more detail, see the March 31, January 27 and January 20 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: April 26-27 in Dallas.

Championships

Response deadline passes for Division I members

The deadline for Division I members to respond to the NCAA Executive Committee's proposal to enhance the Association's championships program has passed, and the analysis process is underway.

The proposed changes were mailed to Division I members January 11. Divisions II and III member institutions discussed the proposed revisions at the January Convention in Dallas.

The plan would base championships field sizes on sponsorship and would deemphasize the revenue potential of a championship. Per diem, traveling parties and committee structure also would be affected.

A summary of the membership's reaction will appear in The NCAA News before the Executive Committee's May 3-6 meeting.

The committee expects to approve a final plan at that meeting.

For more detail, see the December 16, November 30 and October 26 issues of The NCAA News.

Next Executive Committee meeting: May 3-6 in Monterey, California.

Certification

Committee seeks to involve chief executive officers

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification has identified the involvement of chief executive officers as a key part of the peer-review process.

Finances

Committee develops four new cost-containment proposals

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics has developed four new cost-containment recommendations in addition to the package of 17 "legislative concepts" that was distributed to the membership earlier this

A description of the four new recommendations appears on page 1 of this issue of The NCAA News.

Committee Chair James E. Delany, Big Ten conference, said reactions should be submitted as soon as possible. The committee's next meeting is April 29-30. Those interested in submitting a response to the recommendations may mail it to Delany's attention at the national office or fax it to 913/339-0028.

As for the other 17 recommendations, the NCAA research staff has completed its analysis of the membership's responses and has submitted the information to the committee.

For more detail, see page 1 of this issue and the February 17, December 23 and November 30 issues of The NCAA News.

Next meeting: April 29-30 in Chicago.

Briefly in the News

Soccer player takes stock

John Mora, a soccer player at the University of San Francisco, is getting a kick out of the stock market.

Mora, a senior majoring in finance, entered the AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge and placed first among 570 students in California and sixth out of 8,330 participants nationally. For his wise investments, Mora won $500 and a trip for two to the Bahamas.

In a four-month period from last November to February, Mora's fictional $500,000 portfolio grew to $2,949,379.08—an appreciation of 491.4 percent.

"I looked for stocks with low-end book values, stocks close to their 52-week low," Mora told the San Francisco Examiner. "And then I bought as many shares of those stocks that were allowed under the rules. I considered only shares selling between $1 and $4."

Mora, a native of Los Angeles, spent last summer playing center and forward for the Orlando Lions of the United States Interregional Soccer League. He appeared in eight of the team's 20 games but received no compensation, in order to maintain his athletics eligibility at San Francisco.

Mora said he hopes to land a job with a brokerage firm after he graduates in May. He already has interviewed with several firms.

"Hopefully, one of these opportunities will come through," he said. "But first, I think I'm going to take that little vacation."

Quite a year

The University of North Dakota is the only institution that has placed teams in the NCAA Division II football playoffs and men's and women's basketball championships during this academic year.

The Sioux football team finished the year 6-4-1 after dropping a first-round contest to Pittsburg State University in the Division II Football Championship. The women's basketball team concluded its season with a first-round tournament loss to Augustana College (South Dakota), finishing the year at 23-5. And the men's basketball team was 23-8 overall this season, losing to the University of South Dakota in the second round of the Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

Grand opening

Arkansas State University's new baseball facility was christened properly—with a victory by the home team.

In fact, the Indians were rather inhospitable to their first guests, Harding University. Pitchers Len Manning and Joey Hector combined for a no-hit shutout in a 6-0 victory February 23. Arkansas State also won the second game of the doubleheader, 14-3.

Manning, a junior from New Brighton, Minnesota, threw for five innings, walking five and striking out three. Hector, a junior from Harmony, Texas, walked three and struck out one batter in relief.

He's a hit

University of Wyoming junior outfielder Steve Abbs is quite a hit with pitchers.

In a March 21 contest against Creighton University, Abbs was struck by pitches in his first four times at bat. This season, Abbs has been hit a total of eight times.

The stingers didn't hamper Abbs' performance in the Creighton game. During his fifth trip to the plate, Abbs answered with a grand slam home run. However, the Cowboys lost, 8-7.

State memorial

A group of state representatives in New Mexico recently introduced House Memorial 13 "encouraging the continued use of Native American names and images by athletics teams to promote honor, dignity and respect."

The representatives—Frank E. Paul, Thomas E. Atcity, William E. Porter, J. Paul Taylor, Albert Gurulle, Jose R. Abeyta, Leo C. Watchman, R. David Pederson and Debbie A. Rodella—added in the memorial that "Native American names and images (should) be used only with honor, dignity and respect that reflect the ancient history, perseverance and pride that sustain Native American cultures and people in this land."

Looking back

5 years ago: The NCAA Council, meeting April 18-20, 1988, in Washington, D.C., approved scholarship and internship programs and establishment of a "vita bank" to enhance opportunities for ethnic minorities and women in intercollegiate athletics. (The NCAA News, April 27, 1988)

10 years ago: The new, 46-member NCAA Council—expanded and further "federated" by action of the 1983 NCAA Convention—held its first full meeting April 18-20, 1983, in Kansas City, Missouri. The Council was expanded from 22 to 46 members, with guaranteed representation by division and subdivision, as well as geographically. (The NCAA News, April 13, 1983)

20 years ago: The NCAA national office moved April 6, 1973, from leased offices in downtown Kansas City, Missouri, to the Association's new office building in suburban Mission, Kansas. The new building was dedicated April 28, 1973. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

60 years ago: The Association formed the National Basketball Committee of the United States and Canada April 8, 1933, to formulate playing rules for basketball. It was another in nearly 25 years of attempts to work with other organizations in assuring a uniform set of playing rules in basketball. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

Fact file

Of the Association's record operating budget of $179,417,000 for fiscal 1992-93, 59.4 percent will go to the membership in direct payments, 23.5 percent will represent the cost of benefits to members, and another 4.5 percent will represent benefits to students and youth. That means only 12.6 percent of the budget is attributable to national office expense.

Review committee continues talks on deregulation of legislation

Deregulation of the NCAA Manual, specifically the recruiting legislation of Bylaw 13, is the basis of continuing discussion by the Legislative Review Committee.

The committee spent most of its March 29-31 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, reviewing reaction from the membership on deregulation of recruiting legislation.

The committee reviewed suggestions from various groups within the membership. The opinions were solicited by committee chair David Price, associate commissioner of the Pacific-10 Conference.

Price received approximately 40 deregulation suggestions for the recruiting bylaw. The Legislative Review Committee spent time determining whether the suggestions were methods of deregulation or, in fact, proposals for actual changes in legislation.

The committee found several common threads among the ideas. Those involved telephone calls to prospects, contact and evaluation legislation, and publicity involved in recruiting.

The committee will refer many of the suggestions to the newly appointed Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport and to the Recruiting Committee.

The Legislative Review Committee will report on the ideas to the NCAA Council at its April meeting. The committee is on schedule to present a deregulation package to the Council for sponsorship at the 1994 Convention.

The issue of deregulation was initiated by the committee at its March 1992 meeting. In April 1992, the Council restated that the primary objectives of deregulation were the simplification of current rules and the elimination of unnecessary or obsolete legislation.

The Council endorsed the committee's recommendation that different bylaws be reviewed each year over a five-year period for deregulation.

Other highlights

In other action at its March 29-31 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Legislative Review Committee:

■ Reviewed different ways of making it easier to track proposals through the three pre-Convention publications (Initial Publication of Proposed Legislation, Second Publication of Proposed Legislation and the Official Notice). The committee's discussion was in response to concerns from the membership about the confusion created when proposal numbers change from one book to the next. The committee directed the national office staff to study the feasibility of some of its ideas.

Schultz sees support increasing for playoff

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told reporters covering the Final Four in New Orleans that he believes support for a football playoff is growing.

"I wouldn't say it's a slam-dunk. But I think the interest level is increasing a little more toward the favorable side," he said April 1. "I don't know if it's 50-50 yet, but it's coming together."

Citing the need for increased revenue, Schultz had urged NCAA Convention delegates in January to think about a one-game playoff and the possible $50 million to $60 million that it could bring.

"Interestingly enough, the feedback we're getting is that the coaches would not favor a one-game playoff, but would be in favor of a larger playoff, especially if the bowls could be incorporated," Schultz said. "They can see the potential of it, and many feel football needs a shot in the arm much like basketball has received from the Final Four."

First reaction

Schultz conceded that initial reaction to his proposal was lukewarm, according to The Associated Press.

"The first reaction was probably more negative than positive," he said. "But what has happened is exactly what I hoped would happen. What I wanted to do was stimulate (the membership's) interest and get them to thinking about it. And it has stimulated a lot of interest."

"A year ago, people didn't even want to talk about it. At least now they're talking about

Brother to brother, keep up the fight

By Bob Valvano

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE OF MARYLAND

Jim Valvano's birthday was March 10. As his younger brother, I have a few things I'd like to say.

I have been coaching college basketball for 15 years, and for most of that time my brother has been a nationally prominent figure. I constantly have been asked about Jim.

While I always have enjoyed it, my answers have often been flip attempts at humor, often paraphrasing my brother's own response early in his career about his resemblance to Joe Namath. Jim would say: "He's rich, so people say he's ruggedly handsome. I'm poor, so people say I have a big nose." Or, my own response to "I'm a big fan of Jimmy V's—you look just like him" would be "Talk about your left-handed compliments!"

I have never really given a thoughtful answer to the literally thousands of times I have been asked informally about my brother, thinking that anyone close to me would find my real thoughts and feelings obvious. Well, in case they haven't been, I want to put those thoughts and feelings into words now.

All of us in NCAA Division III basketball wear many different hats. In addition to my coaching, I teach a course in the sociology of sport. One of the things we discuss is that it seems that America, for whatever reason, has lost its "heroes." I feel I have been blessed, because my hero is my brother.

I certainly am proud of his accomplishments: winning the national championship and the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and going into broadcasting and winning an ACE award in his first year are among the many significant things he has achieved. But being a hero is not about what you do, it is about who you are, and from the unique perspective of the only "little brother" Jim Valvano has ever had, I can tell you something about who he is to me.

People always ask, "What do you guys talk about—basketball?" Sure we do—about two percent of the time. It would be easier to discuss what we don't talk about—or more accurately, what he has not taught me about. I have seen compassion, generosity and tol-

Coach: Morality taught to athletes

Regarding Sharon Kay Stoll's letter in the March 24 issue of The NCAA News, I first would like to commend her and her associates on what appears to be an extensive effort to perform a study with high regard to validity and reliability.

Being very much an idealist myself, the results are disheartening; however, it's very difficult to discount statistics with this measure of validity (especially considering the amount of stock we as coaches place on statistics ourselves).

I was very much troubled by one particular paragraph.

"Contact sport today, as it is taught and morally modeled in this country, does not develop young people. Morality is neither taught nor reinforced on the field of play, probably because gamesmanship is more favorably valued. Gamesmanship is pushing the rules to the limit without getting caught. We are as sure as any researcher can be that the above is true."

Having had the good fortune of being allowed to coach young men in the game of football in five different high schools and three Division I universities spanning six states and 17 years and having visited and studied untold numbers of programs around the country, I can without reservation declare that morality is being taught and reinforced on the field of play in every program I have ever witnessed.

Although it still would leave a bad taste in my mouth, I might have found it easier to swallow if Professor Stoll was referring to whether morality is being learned. I can assure you it is being taught.

Accessibility key for minorities

As a black female and a former NCAA athlete, I have read recent NCAA News articles regarding the minority presence in sports administration with great interest. However, while many of these articles state the problem, none seems to list the cause and solution.

I feel that both the cause and the solution to this situation can be summed up in one word: Accessibility.

My undergraduate degree is from the University of Pennsylvania. Presently, I am a candidate for a master's degree in sports administration at Temple University.

As I prepare to graduate, I am attempting to enter the job market. My goal is to work the administrative side of college or professional athletics. As a person who is out in the trenches, and who has forwarded countless cover letters and resumes to professional sports teams, YMCAs and universities and who has received countless rejection letters, I often wonder how I can get myself noticed.

How can I make myself more accessible? How can I obtain knowledge about unadvertised jobs? How can I meet the people who will call me about an unadvertised job or who will bring me in for an interview on an advertised job because they remembered what a nice young woman I am?

Apparently, obtaining an advanced degree, winning at the Penn Relays, working two years as a college track coach, working as a YMCA strength instructor, being listed in the NCAA vita bank, doing an internship with a professional sports team and being a track and field official simply is not enough.

Many people say that networking is the key to obtaining a job. The question then becomes how can one use this network if that person does not have access to it in the first place?

When I read articles and watch television specials regarding sports employers, I often hear them say there are no qualified minority or female candidates. Those comments make me want to scream, "Here I am! I am competent and qualified."

Many of my colleagues feel this same frustration. The tragedy is that there just does not seem to be a way to bring employers and prospective employees together. How can this be accomplished? Possibly through job fairs, conferences or campus recruiting. Or through some other method that I have not thought of.

While the method to improve accessibility may not be clear, one thing is: Until a better way is found to bring employers together with qualified female and minority candidates, their dismally low representation in key sports leadership positions will continue.

Scouting services

As an owner and operator of Canadian Student Athlete Scouting Service in Toronto, I found the issues raised by Fred Jacoby and Robert E. Lehr in recent issues of The NCAA News to be significant.

It is important that when judging the institutions in the NCAA that a person does not dwell on those negative examples and paint the rest with a wide brush. I would hope that the same opportunity is given to services like the CSASS.

There is no question that the economics of the NCAA and its members is one of the driving forces behind the surge in recruiting services. In Canada, a need for a reputable service is important for both the prospective student-athlete and the NCAA. Many of the coaches, parents, teachers and administrators in Canadian high schools are unfamiliar with even the basics of NCAA Bylaws 13.1 and 14.3....

I charge for what I know of the NCAA regulations. It is similar to lawyers charging for what they know and have learned. When I'm not sure about the regulations, I search the NCAA Manual or call a compliance representative to make sure.

What is more important, I think, is the notion of what the recruiting service stands for and how informed the people are who work there.

Recently, I inquired of the NCAA information about taking the test that is required of all coaches who recruit. To my surprise, there was no place in Canada or the United States for me to go to take this test. The reason: I'm not a college coach. I believe this would be the first step in this process of regulating the recruiting business. I have endeavored to educate myself about the NCAA and its rules. I have done this so as to ensure that I do not mislead the prospect and the parents.

Speaking only for myself, I believe that when athletes are treated with respect and dealt with in an ethical manner, the money is well spent.

Let's work together to bring about the tremendous opportunities for all involved.

Director, CSASS

□ Opinion

Coaches, ADs must be allies

Frank McLaughlin, athletics director
Fordham University

The New York Times

"...College athletics today is like fantasy land. It's a nice release for everybody, and a tremendous pride factor. So people who are logical and reasonable in other areas are cuckoo when it comes to athletics. I coached at Harvard, and although people say 'Ivy League,' I've seen times when Harvard lost to Yale in football and the president was in a horrendous mood for days. When Harvard beats Yale, emotions run high and alumni contributions increase.

"How does this affect coaches and their behavior? Big-time sports programs generate money and thus become a power base. So the head football coaches or basketball coaches don't think of themselves as coaches, they think they're running those sports. Many think everything revolves around them. Coach is in charge. He runs the program; he's a celebrity. The athletics director is a buffoon who fawns over the coach. Even the college president is subservient.

"In short, most coaches live in a vacuum.

"Most coaches have no real perception of what's going on, over all, in the university—that there are 20 to 30 other sports to pay for, for example. They need to become more aware of the university as a whole. Likewise, the president of the university is ultimately in control, and strong leadership and a clear, guiding philosophy from the top can't help but filter down to the coaches.

"Below the level of the president, however, comes the relationship of the coach and the athletics director. Coaches need to make the athletics director their ally. Many think the A.D. is just there and shouldn't be involved in his or her sport. One of the great things about our basketball coach is that he runs everything by me, and it's a two-way street; I run things by him, as well. I'm not sure most, or even many, coaches do that. They think they run the program, and that's that."

Ageless dream pushes 40-year-old to excel

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Claudia Shannon loves to run. She runs in the morning, afternoon and night. "Running gives me a feeling of accomplishment," she says.

It also gives her a chance to dream.

Shannon loves to dream. Almost as much as she loves to run.

She dreams about earning a degree in business. Dreams about attending law school. Dreams about becoming president of the United States. "I tell people I am going to become president, not because I want to, but because I am one of the few honest people left and I have to do it," she says.

And as a 40-year-old freshman at Seattle Pacific University, she already has a lot of experience with dreaming.

But Shannon doesn't just stop there. When she sets her mind on doing something, she does it.

Dreamed of college

A couple of years ago, Shannon dreamed about going to college, about running collegiately.

"I've dreamed about going (to college) for some time," said Shannon. "I've wanted to go to school and run...to do something with my life."

Shannon is doing just that.

The mother of two children is a member of the Falcons' cross country and track teams. Her son Justin, 19, is a student at the University of Washington. Daughter Angela, 21, attends the University of the Pacific (California).

Shannon not only is competing at Seattle Pacific, she is establishing herself as one of the Falcons' top long-distance runners. In her first four races of the outdoor track season, she earned three top-four finishes, including one first- and one second-place showing. She also was the Falcons' top cross country runner in 1992, finishing as Seattle Pacific's top runner in all but one race.

"Claudia is a wonderful young lady," said Doris Heritage, women's cross country coach at Seattle Pacific. "She is a very exciting person to be around. She's very outgoing, and very dedicated both in her studies and running."

'I'm so busy'

She's also a full-time employee, working as a senior claims analyst at an insurance company. She attends classes and trains at night. She competes on weekends.

"I'm so busy, I don't think about what I'm doing," said Shannon. "If I stopped and looked at what I'm doing, I wouldn't be able to do it. I don't look too far ahead or too far behind."

There was a time when Shannon thought of nothing but the future.

For 10 years, she tended bar. Not by choice, but by necessity. It was the only way she knew to support herself and her two children after her divorce 12 years ago.

"I had a lot of anger," she said. "I was angry that I was somebody's slave, that I had taken orders all my life, that I was a bartender, that I was a single parent. I felt like my life was going nowhere."

So Shannon started running. And dreaming.

Running to release the anger. Dreaming to escape reality.

Running to achieve

What began as an outlet for frustration became daily 10-mile jaunts. Ten miles blossomed into 26.2-mile marathons. "When I ran, I felt like I could achieve anything."

Running. That is how Shannon met her current husband, Robert, a former boxer and 1984 Olympian. Robert and Claudia met six years ago; they used to go on training runs together. Three years ago, they were married.

"Robert has taught me so many things," said Shannon. "I always thought that people who are Olympians or people who are great in sports are that way because they were born that way. That's not true. Robert, and people like him, are successful because they work hard at it. They believe in themselves."

Robert has taught Claudia to believe in herself. He has taught her that she has no limits. Including college.

"Robert was always trying to get me to go back to school," said Shannon. "He kept thinking about ways I could do it. It just didn't seem possible."

Robert found the way: coach Heritage.

Heritage is a former Olympic middle-distance runner who met Robert Shannon at the 1984 Games—Heritage was coaching, Shannon was competing. Later, Shannon attended Seattle Pacific. Each time Shannon saw Heritage, he would tell her about Claudia.

Last year, at a reunion dinner for former Washington Olympians, Robert saw Heritage again.

"It's exciting for me to see her compete. Some of us years ago never had the chance. I have a soft spot in my heart for Claudia, for people who have the capability and want to go back (to school)."

Age is no barrier for Claudia Shannon (right), a 40-year-old freshman at Seattle Pacific University. Shannon has established herself as one of the school's top long-distance runners.

Gave her a chance

"(Robert) was always mentioning that (Claudia) was such a good runner," said Heritage. "So, last year, I decided it was a good time to give her a chance."

A short time later, Heritage offered Shannon a partial scholarship.

What had been a dream suddenly had become reality.

"Things came together so quickly," said Shannon. "I was excited, but I was also afraid...I was scared: the fact that I had never gone to college, that I had been out of school for 22 years. I had never taken the SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test)...my last math test was 25 years ago."

Robert and the kids helped her get over the fear. They also helped her study. She met the SAT standard on her first attempt.

As much as she feared the SAT, Shannon feared competing against kids half her age even more.

Running? That was not a problem. Last summer, Shannon competed at The Athletics Congress Masters National Track and Field Championships for athletes 40 years old and older. She won a gold medal in the women's 10,000-meter run and a silver in the 5,000-meter run.

But competing against kids? That was a different story. "I was afraid. I didn't know how I would do," she said.

Coach is 'amazing'

Shannon drew her strength from Heritage. "One of my greatest gifts has been getting to know Doris. She is an amazing woman," she said. "Doris believes she can do anything. She believes in her heart that age doesn't have to limit you."

Shannon learned very quickly that limits did not apply to her, either. She won her first two collegiate cross country races and now is enjoying success in outdoor track.

At the University of Washington Husky Classic March 20, Shannon won the 10,000-meter run, despite competing against Division I student-athletes. Seattle Pacific is a Division II institution.

"It's exciting for me to see her compete," said Heritage. "Some of us years ago never had the chance. I have a soft spot in my heart for Claudia, for people who have the capability and want to go back (to school)."

Shannon admits that her current workload will have to change if she is to go on to law school. She knows that at some point she no longer will be able to work days and study and train at night. For now, though, she is intent on one goal: an education.

"I'm learning so much, I want to keep learning," said Shannon. "I'm going to stay with it. If it takes five or six years to get through, I'll do it. I'm not going to fail, I'm not going to let go."

She also plans on continuing her running career.

"Running has opened me up to so many things," said Shannon. "I've gone from OK to good. Now, I have to learn to be great. It's scary, especially if you've never felt that way, but I'm going to keep trying."

And keep dreaming.

Postgraduate scholarship nominations due

Nominations for NCAA postgraduate scholarships for sports other than football and basketball must be mailed by April 26 to the appropriate district selection committee chair, as outlined in the instruction memorandum and nomination folder that was mailed March 18 to all NCAA member institutions.

The NCAA Postgraduate Scholarship Committee will award scholarships of $5,000 each to 68 varsity athletes (34 men and 34 women) in sports other than football and basketball in which the NCAA sponsors national-championship competition.

Of the winners, 12 men and 12 women will be selected from Division I and 12 men and 12 women from Divisions II and III, and the remaining 10 men and 10 women will be selected at large.

Following are the criteria for nominating a student-athlete:

■ The student-athlete must have an overall minimum cumulative grade-point average of 3.000 (4.000 scale) or its equivalent.

■ The student-athlete must be enrolled in the academic year in which his or her final season of eligibility under NCAA legislation occurs.

■ The student-athlete must have performed with distinction as a member of the varsity team in the sport in which he or she has been nominated. The degree of the student-athlete's athletics achievement will be weighed at least equally with the degree of academic performance.

■ The student-athlete should intend to continue academic work as a full-time graduate student within five years of the date of the award.

■ The student-athlete must have behaved, both on and off the field, in a manner that has brought credit to the student-athlete, the institution and intercollegiate athletics.

It is suggested that institutions nominate no more than two male and two female student-athletes for sports other than football and basketball. To nominate a student-athlete, the school's faculty athletics representative must coordinate the completion of five forms included in the nomination folder.

Tar Heels force Michigan to sing the blues in final

Call it Dean Dome II.

North Carolina head coach Dean Smith kept his record unblemished in the Louisiana Superdome as his Tar Heels held off Michigan, 77-71, to win the Division I Men's Basketball Championship April 5.

The title was Smith's second—both won at the Superdome—and North Carolina's third overall. Michigan, which also lost in last year's title game to Duke, is the first team to lose back-to-back championship games since Houston in 1983 and 1984. The Tar Heels finished the season 34-4 while Michigan wrapped up a 31-5 campaign.

Although the game was dominated by a pair of tenacious defenses, it may be remembered most for Michigan calling one too many timeouts.

With North Carolina leading, 73-71, Michigan's Chris Webber rebounded a missed free throw on the back end of a one-and-one by Tar Heel Pat Sullivan and dribbled the ball downcourt, where he was double-teamed in the corner near the Michigan bench. Webber called time out with 11 seconds to go, but the Wolverines already had used their allotment. Sophomore guard Donald Williams sank the resulting two technical-foul shots to seal North Carolina's victory.

Even so, Webber was outstanding for Michigan, leading the Wolverines with 23 points and bringing the team back from a 42-36 half-time deficit. It was Webber's stick-back that pulled the Wolverines within 72-71 after a turnover with 45 seconds remaining by North Carolina's Brian Reese.

The waning seconds were eerily reminiscent of North Carolina's 1982 championship victory, which was in doubt until an errant Georgetown pass secured the title with only seconds remaining in the game.

But Smith downplayed the importance of both championship-clinching plays.

"Neither one necessarily meant we wouldn't win," he said. "It's all part of the game."

"We were going to foul if he (Webber) hadn't taken time out. We only had three fouls, and we would have kept fouling and it would have been hard for them. We had plays earlier in the game that were pretty ironic—a guy (Webber) falling down makes a basket. I've often said you have to be lucky and good."

On this night, Smith's squad was more good than lucky. The Tar Heels once again rode the performance of the sharp-shooting Williams, who completed a spectacular tournament by connecting on five of seven three-pointers on his way to a game-high 25 points.

His three-pointer with just under five minutes remaining ignited a 9-0 North Carolina run that put the Tar Heels in front to stay. Michigan had entered the game unbeaten when leading at the five-minute mark.

Williams, named the Final Four's most outstanding player, also contributed a game-high 25 points in the Tar Heels' 78-68 semifinal victory against Kansas. He was a combined 10 of 14 from the three-point stripe for both games.

Texas Tech 'Swoopes' up first national title

The Texas Tech Lady Raiders "Swooped" into Atlanta April 3-4 and departed as Women's Final Four champions after a hard-fought 84-82 victory over Ohio State in the title game.

Sheryl Swoopes led the Texas Tech assault in record-setting performances that showcased her player-of-the-year credentials before capacity crowds of 16,141 each day at The Omni in Atlanta, as well as a national television audience.

The 6-0 senior forward scored a championship-game record 47 points a little more than 24 hours after lighting top-ranked Vanderbilt up for 31 points in Texas Tech's 60-46 semifinal victory.

In all, Swoopes set Women's Final Four records for most points (78), most field goals made (27) and most field goals attempted (48) and Division I tournament records for most points (177), most field goals made (56) and most free throws made (57).

Showed the nation

"There are no words to explain what a great player Sheryl Swoopes is," said Texas Tech coach Marsha Sharp. "We are just pleased that she got to show the whole nation."

Ohio State nearly spoiled the storybook ending to Swoopes' career with a Cinderella story of its own. The Buckeyes, who entered the season unranked, rallied to lead the Lady Raiders, 62-61, with 8:30 left after trailing by as many as 11 points.

But Texas Tech turned back Ohio State behind the play of Swoopes, who scored 11 points over the last five minutes of the game.

"I thought once we tied it up and went ahead that we were going to take care of things," Ohio State coach Nancy Darsch said. "You don't really appreciate Sheryl Swoopes until you have to stop her. I saw us get a little down, a little dejected when she scored some tough shots."

"We wanted to make her work hard for her shots. We tried to keep somebody fresh on her. We also tried trapping her when she had the ball. She answered everything we tried."

19th straight

Texas Tech's victory was its 19th in a row. The Lady Raiders finished the season with a 31-3 record.

Swoopes, unanimous pick as most outstanding player of the Women's Final Four, was joined on the all-tournament team by teammate Krista Kirkland, Ohio State's Nikki Keyton and Katie Smith, and Vanderbilt's Heidi Gillingham.

In Texas Tech's 60-46 semifinal victory, Vanderbilt's 46 points tied for the fewest points in a Women's Final Four game. The Lady Raiders, who won the first NCAA team championship for Texas Tech in any sport, defeated Washington (70-64), Southern California (87-67) and Colorado (79-54) to gain their Women's Final Four berth. They were seeded second in the West region.

Ohio State advanced to the championship game by winning a rubber-game matchup in overtime against Big Ten Conference rival Iowa, 73-72. The teams shared the Big Ten championship and split two regular-season games, each winning at home by comfortable margins. The Buckeyes, the No. 1 seed in the East region, defeated Rutgers (80-74), Western Kentucky (86-73) and Virginia (75-73) to advance.

All four teams Women's Final Four entrants were making their first appearance.

Paul Kariya's three assists helped Maine to the Division I title.

Kariya wins Hobey Baker Award

Freshman winger Paul Kariya of Maine is the recipient of the 1993 Hobey Baker Memorial Award, given annually to the outstanding college ice hockey player in the country.

Kariya

Kariya, who is the first freshman to win the award, finished the regular season with 22 goals and national-best 62 assists, and also led the nation in total points (84). After the regular season, Kariya also was named Hockey East Association player of the year and rookie of the year.

"This is incredible," said Kariya, who was visibly emotional while accepting the award. "It's such an honor. I felt so fortunate to be among the 10 candidates. I'm very fortunate to be here right now accepting this award."

Kariya led Hockey East with 63 points, including 15 goals and 48 assists. He posted the association's freshman record for points, a Hockey East record 23-game scoring streak and a Maine record 31-game scoring streak.

Maine coach Shawn Walsh told the boisterous crowd of Maine fans attending the announcement news conference that it was a tremendous honor for a tremendous person.

"Paul epitomizes the student-athlete," Walsh said. "The way he is a team guy is the way that makes this guy so special. He's a team guy and I know he wants something else besides this Hobey Baker Award," said Walsh.

Proving his coach right, Kariya and his teammates went on to win the NCAA Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship the following night with a 5-4 victory over Lake Superior State.

Other candidates for the award were Ted Drury of Harvard, Greg Johnson of North Dakota, Mark Kaufmann of Yale, Jim Montgomery of Maine, Derek Plante of Minnesota-Duluth, Brian Rolston of Lake Superior State, David Sacco of Boston U., Brian Savage of Miami (Ohio) and Bryan Smolinski of Michigan State.

Montgomery, Kariya provide Maine punch in I ice hockey final Sparked by Jim Montgomery's natural hat trick in the third period, Maine overcame a two-goal deficit and defeated Lake Superior State, 5-4, to win the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Championship April 3 before a record crowd of 17,704 in Milwaukee.

It was Maine's first NCAA team championship in any sport.

Maine's first run started early with a goal by Patrice Tardif only 28 seconds into the first period. Chris Ferarro, on feeds from Chris Imes and twin brother Peter Ferraro, then scored at the 7:10 mark to give the Black Bears a 2-0 lead.

But Lake Superior State, after scoring a late first-period goal, came out strong in the second period and scored three consecutive goals to take a seemingly insurmountable 4-2 lead. Clayton Beddoes scored a power-play goal at 7:01, then John Hendry and Wayne Strachan scored the Lakers' final two goals only 2:56 apart late in the period.

Maine clearly was tired after the second period, but after the intermission, Montgomery and line mates Paul Kariya and Cal Ingraham came alive.

Kariya, who just one day earlier was awarded the Hobey Baker Memorial Award as the top player in collegiate hockey (see story on this page), slipped past a defender, circled behind the net and placed a perfect pass on Montgomery's stick at the left post.

Slightly more than three minutes later, Kariya rushed the puck deep into the Lakers' zone and left the puck for Montgomery. Montgomery scored on a wrist shot from the left circle that caromed off a Laker defenseman, and the game was tied.

Montgomery completed his hat trick with a power-play goal at

Lions go down to the wire to defend fencing crown

Columbia rallied from a 4-2 deficit in the final of the men's epee event to earn a 5-4 victory and earn Columbia/Columbia-Barnard its second straight overall team title at the National Collegiate Men's and Women's Fencing Championships March 27-31 at Wayne State (Michigan).

The come-from-behind victory over Pennsylvania was the second in two days for a Lion weapons team. A day earlier, the Columbia sabremen captured the team title in that event with a 5-4 victory over Pennsylvania after falling behind, 4-2.

Columbia/Columbia-Barnard finished with 4,525 total points, just 25 more than Penn State, which was the runner-up for the second year in a row. It was the smallest margin of victory since the current scoring system was adopted for the combined men's and women's championships in 1991.

Yale finished third for the second straight year with 3,500 points, and Pennsylvania finished fourth with 3,050, despite failing to qualify a men's foil squad. No other school totaled more than 2,000 points.

In the epee team finals, the last event of the championships, Pennsylvania's Tamir Bloom won his first two bouts over Columbia's Daniel Charlick (5-3) and Benjamin Scott (5-1) to help Pennsylvania to its 4-2 lead. But Columbia's Ben Atkins defeated Bloom in the seventh bout and Nathan Anderson in the eighth bout, both by 5-4 scores, to tie the match. Scott's 5-4 victory over Pennsylvania's Rhusang Mehta in the ninth bout gave Columbia/Columbia-Barnard the overall title.

"If they wrote a movie based on this, nobody would believe it," said Columbia/Columbia-Barnard cohead coach George Kolombatovich. "It was clearly a case of the underdog winning. We needed a tremendous miracle to win this."

In the individual championships, only one new name was added to the list of title holders in tournament history—Olga Kalinovskaya of Penn State. She defeated teammate and defending titlist Olga Chernyak in women's foil, 5-3, 2-5, 5-2.

All of the men's titles were taken by previous champions. Stanford's Nick Bravin and Penn State's Thomas Strzalkowski successfully defended their 1992 championships in foil and sabre, respectively, and 1991 men's foil champion Ben Atkins of Columbia claimed the epee title. Atkins became only the second fencer in NCAA championships history to win individual titles in two weapons.

Benjamin Scott (left) of Columbia squares off against Pennsylvania's Nathan Anderson in the finals of the men's epee team finals. Anderson won the match, but it was Columbia that won the team event, lifting Columbia/Columbia-Barnard to its second straight overall team title.

Men's Gymnastics

Same trio set to battle for title

Event: 1993 National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships.

Overview: What difference does a year make? Very little. A year ago, Stanford, Nebraska and Ohio State finished Nos. 1, 2 and 3; this year, the trio may again battle for the title. Stanford, vying to become the first repeat champion since Nebraska in 1982 and 1983, has climbed to No. 3 in the top-20 rankings after spending the first five weeks of the season out of the top five. The Cardinal returns eight members from last year's championship team, led by team cocaptains Jair Lynch, a 1992 U.S. Olympian and defending NCAA horizontal bar champion, and Mark Booth. Nebraska, ranked No. 1, is the trio's hottest team. Big Eight Conference champions for the 10th time in 14 years, the Cornhuskers are led by Che Bowers, defending champion on the pommel horse, and Sumner Darling and Richard Kieffer, runners-up on the parallel bars and horizontal bar. Ohio State, a top-two finisher only once with its 1985 title but ranked in the top three all season this year, sports one of its most experienced squads, led by the senior trio of Adam Cooper, Kevin Crumley and Jim Knopp.

Field: Three teams and the top three all-around competitors not on one of the qualifying teams—plus the top three individuals in each event who are not already qualified on a team or as an all-around competitor—will advance from the East and West regional meets to the championships; the all-around and individual competitors must have placed in the top 12 at their respective regional meets to advance.

Dates and sites: Regional competition was conducted April 3 at Illinois (East regional) and Oklahoma (West regional). The championships will be April 16-17 at New Mexico.

Television coverage: The championships will be broadcast tape-delayed by CBS at 3 p.m. Eastern time May 8.

Results: Championships results will appear in the April 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: John Roethlisberger of Minnesota is vying for his third straight individual all-around title. Illinois' Joe Giallombardo (1988-90) is

J. Richard Vargas photo

Minnesota's John Roethlisberger will be going for his third straight individual all-around title. The team competition most likely will be a three-way battle again between Stanford, Nebraska and Ohio State.

the only gymnast to win three consecutive titles....New Mexico is hosting the championships for the second time; it also was host in 1962....Nebraska has finished first or second 12 times (seven titles) in 14 years.

What they are saying

Francis Allen, head coach Nebraska

"We're the team to beat. We've got a lot of team depth, and we're healthy right now. There isn't any team that has more depth than Nebraska. I think Stanford and Ohio State will put on one hell of a charge, and that any one of four teams—the two Big Ten teams (Ohio State and Minnesota), Stanford and us—can win. But if it comes down to depth, I think we're a shoo-in."

Women's Gymnastics

Utah and Georgia match depth

Event: 1993 National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships.

Overview: Utah and Georgia have combined to win nine of 11 championships; Utah has won seven. Those teams' dominance should continue. Utah and Georgia have been ranked Nos. 1 and 2 the entire season. The Utes and Lady Bulldogs are the only teams to sport regional qualifying averages of 196.00-plus. Utah, which won five straight titles from 1982 to 1986 and is the only team to win back-to-back championships, is favored to successfully defend last year's title. The nation's No. 1-ranked team returns six all-Americans, including Kristen Kenoyer, defending trichampion on the vault. Georgia, runner-up a year ago, matches the Utes' depth with seven returning all-Americans.

Field: The championships field will consist of 12 teams, as well as 12 individual all-around competitors who are not on a qualifying team. Regional meets at five sites each will involve seven teams and seven all-around competitors who are not on a qualifying team. The team and all-around winner from each region will receive an automatic berth in the national championships, and the remaining teams and all-around competitors will qualify at large on the basis of scores at the regionals.

Dates and sites: Regional competition was conducted April 3 at Oregon State (West), Utah State (Midwest), Louisiana State (Central), Georgia (Southeast) and Ohio State (Northeast). The championships will be April 15-17 at Oregon State.

Television coverage: The championships will be televised tape-delayed on CBS at 3 p.m. Eastern time May 15.

Results: Championships results will appear in the April 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Alabama (1991) and Utah (1992) are the only schools to score 195.00-plus points at the championships.

What they are saying

Suzanne Yoculan, head coach Georgia

"I don't think (the team championship) will only be between Utah and Georgia. I see it as a four-way competition. UCLA is a really, really strong dark horse. Their scores aren't indicative of what they are capable of doing."

"Alabama always, always has impressed me because of their consistency on the balance beam."

No. 1-ranked and defending champion Utah hopes to be in the winners' circle again this year.

Athletics program at St. Bonaventure gets probation

I. Introduction.

In the early summer of 1991, the father of a women's basketball student-athlete who also was a representative of the university's athletics interests wrote a letter to the NCAA outlining several alleged violations in the conduct of the women's basketball program. Some of the alleged violations implicated himself and were related to his involvement in recruiting activities for the university with the knowledge and approval of institutional staff members. During the fall and winter of the 1991-92 academic year, the enforcement staff conducted interviews with the representative, his daughter, another former St. Bonaventure women's basketball student-athlete and several individuals at other institutions whom the representative claimed to have attempted to recruit for the university. These other young women had competed on Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) teams coached by the representative.

Based upon these interviews, the enforcement staff concluded that there was sufficient evidence of possible violations to warrant the forwarding of a preliminary inquiry letter to the chief executive officer of the institution. This letter was sent on March 18, 1992. Pursuant to NCAA Bylaw 32.2, an NCAA director of enforcement and an NCAA enforcement representative visited the university's campus on April 8 and 9, 1992. During this visit, they met with the president, the executive vice-president and the university's legal counsel to explain the nature and purpose of the preliminary investigation and to answer the institution's questions relating to the inquiry. In response, the president pledged the university's full support and cooperation.

During the April 1992 campus visit, the enforcement staff conducted interviews with the following individuals: the director of athletics, the head women's basketball coach, an assistant women's basketball coach, a graduate assistant women's basketball coach and four women's basketball student-athletes. The institution's legal counsel was present at all of these interviews.

During the course of the April interviews, the staff disclosed to the university that the preliminary investigation had been prompted by allegations of violations of NCAA legislation made by the representative of its athletics interest. His daughter had been a member of the women's basketball team from the fall of 1987 until her graduation from the university in May 1991. At the beginning of the 1989-90 academic year, her junior year, the athletics department learned that the young woman had posed with two other St. Bonaventure student-athletes for a magazine advertisement. The university promptly reported the incident, and the NCAA eligibility staff on behalf of the Eligibility Committee subsequently ruled that she should be suspended for the first game of the 1989-90 season. The representative disputed the NCAA finding, accused the St. Bonaventure athletics department of not defending his daughter's innocence and perceived the NCAA penalty to be too harsh. Solely due to his insistence, the university appealed, but the NCAA Eligibility Committee for Division I affirmed the staff's decision to withhold the young woman from one contest. From this point, relations between the coaching staff and the student-athlete and her father progressively deteriorated.

The April interviews confirmed some of the allegations originally revealed by the representative. Of particular concern was the continued denial by the involved assistant coach of allegations concerning his recruiting activities in association with the representative. The evidence the enforcement staff had obtained prior to the interviews gave strong indications that the assistant coach was not providing truthful information. On May 12, 1992, the staff returned to the campus for review of the memorandums generated from the April interviews. The university's legal counsel again was present at all of the sessions, and he was permitted to read copies of the memorandums. Responding to NCAA requests for certain supplemental records and documentation, the institution's legal counsel ensured that existing records were made available to the enforcement representative.

A subsequent review of these records revealed additional evidence that the assistant coach provided false and misleading information during his April 9, 1992, interview with the NCAA. Consequently, the enforcement staff returned to the university's campus June 15, 1992, for an additional interview with the assistant coach. By now, it was apparent that during the student-athlete's first two years on the team, the assistant coach had failed to maintain a proper distinction between his friendship with the representative and his recruiting efforts on the part of the university.

On June 15, the enforcement representative presented strong evidence to the university's legal counsel indicating that the assistant coach had committed definite recruiting violations. After separate consultation between the institution's legal counsel and the assistant coach, during which the nature of the evidence was clearly discussed, the assistant coach continued to deny the violations in the presence of the enforcement representative and the university's legal counsel. On June 17, 1992,

Case summary

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at St. Bonaventure University on probation for one year for violations of NCAA legislation in women's basketball. The sanctions imposed by the committee include the following:

- Only one member of the women's basketball coaching staff may engage in off-campus recruiting activities from March 1, 1993, through April 16, 1993.

- St. Bonaventure shall be limited to 13 expense-paid visits to the institution in the sport of women's basketball during the 1992-93 and 1993-94 academic years.

The committee cited violations involving recruiting, extra benefits, impermissible preseason practice activity and unethical conduct on the part of an institutional staff member.

The unethical conduct involved a former assistant coach who, the committee found, "provided false and misleading information during interviews with NCAA and university representatives."

The recruiting violations centered on a representative of the university's athletics interests who, with some knowledge of the women's basketball staff, recruited young women on his AAU teams for St. Bonaventure.

It should be noted that both the university and the former assistant coach elected to process the case through the summary-disposition procedures approved by the membership at the 1993 NCAA Convention, which included agreeing upon the stipulated findings of violations and institutionally proposed penalties. In addition, the enforcement staff must, and did, agree that the university conducted a thorough investigation.

The committee noted the sanctions the university self-imposed in this case, including the following:

- Hiring an assistant director of athletics for compliance and implementing regular programs of education regarding compliance with NCAA rules.

- Permitting only one member of the women's basketball staff to recruit off campus at any one time during the month of March 1993.

- Limited itself to 13 official visits for the 1992-93 recruiting season.

- Precluding the head coach and an assistant from participating in the first two days of practice in the 1992-93 season.

In addition, the former assistant coach agreed not to seek a coaching position at an NCAA member institution for a five-year period.

The committee found that this case involved a major violation and several secondary violations of NCAA legislation. Findings involving any major violations normally would subject the university to minimum penalties prescribed by the NCAA membership. These penalties include a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits in the involved sport for one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting in the involved sport for one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, and the loss of postseason competition and television opportunities in the sport for one year.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose lesser penalties if it determines that the case is "unique." The committee concluded that this case was unique because of:

- The nature of the violations.

- The fact that the only major violation concerned unethical conduct of an assistant coach who is no longer employed at the university.

- Thorough investigation and reporting of violations to the NCAA.

- Cooperation in the processing of the case.

- Initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions.

As a result of these factors, the committee determined that the university should receive less than the prescribed minimum penalties. "The enforcement staff concluded that the university's report of its internal investigation was complete and thorough," the committee said. "From the onset of the investigation the university fully cooperated. Further, the staff believed that the university had taken aggressive corrective action with respect to the conduct of its women's basketball program."

Due to his involvement in this case, however, the former assistant coach will be notified that if he seeks employment as an athletics department staff member at an NCAA member institution during the next five years, he and the involved institution will be asked to appear before the Committee on Infractions; the committee at that point will consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of NCAA legislation. Those procedures could limit that coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by the Committee on Infractions.

A. [NCAA Bylaws 13.02.9, 13.02.10, 13.1.2.1 and 13.7.1.2]

From the 1987-88 academic year through the summer after the 1988-89 academic year, a representative of the university's athletics interests who also is the father of a then student-athlete was involved in violations of NCAA recruiting legislation. Although he was never expressly requested or invited to represent the university, the representative attempted to assist the women's basketball staff in the recruitment of prospective student-athletes who were members of his AAU teams. This activity occurred during the first two years of his daughter's tenure on the team, and both the head women's basketball coach and the then assistant women's basketball coach were aware of some of these activities. Specifically:

1. On numerous occasions during the period from September 1987 through September 1989, the representative, when speaking with prospective student-athletes who competed on his AAU teams and the parents of the prospective student-athletes, strongly endorsed St. Bonaventure and openly encouraged the prospects to attend the institution.

2. On September 20, 1988, the representative accompanied the assistant coach on a home visit to the residence of a current student-athlete and her parents. This student-athlete enrolled at St. Bonaventure in the fall of 1989.

3. On or about June 5, 1989, the representative helped arrange a visit to the university's campus for a prospective student-athlete between her junior and senior years of high school, during which she resided overnight in university-owned housing free of charge. The young woman was a member of an AAU team coached by the representative. Because the women's basketball program was recruiting the prospect, and lodging expenses were provided by the institution, this incident constituted an official visit and was in violation of Bylaw 13.7.1.2.2. The young woman did not make any subsequent visits to the institution.

B. [NCAA Bylaw 16.6.2.4]

During the summer of 1989, an assistant women's basketball coach provided impermissible expenses for the father of a student-athlete. Specifically, on June 29, 1989, the assistant coach gave an automobile ride to the father from his home to the national AAU tournament in Charleston, West Virginia. During the course of the tournament, the assistant coach permitted the father to reside in his hotel room.

C. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.2]

During the 1987-88 and 1988-89 academic years, women's basketball student-athletes were allowed to place personal local and/or long-distance telephone calls at the university's expense. Specifically, during the 1987-88 and 1988-89 academic years, an undetermined number of student-athletes were not held accountable for personal telephone calls they placed while lodged in hotels in conjunction with out-of-town competition. During the 1988-89 academic year, two student-athletes were allowed to place personal telephone calls at the university's expense while making recruiting telephone calls in the coaches' offices.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.1]

During one evening in September 1988, a graduate assistant women's basketball coach allowed two student-athletes to use her apartment to entertain several of the young women's friends while the graduate assistant was out of town.

E. [NCAA Bylaws 17.02.12, 17.3.2.1 and 17.3.2.1.2-(f)]

During September 1988 and September 1989, a graduate assistant women's basketball coach participated in impermissible preseason practice with enrolled student-athletes.

F. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1 and 10.1-(d)]

The assistant women's basketball coach involved in this case acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that he provided false and misleading information during interviews with NCAA and university representatives. Specifically, during April 9, 1992, interview with the NCAA and university officials, the assistant coach denied his involvement in potential violations of NCAA legislation in his association with a representative of the university's athletics interests who also was the father of a women's basketball student-athlete. The assistant coach denied that he had allowed the representative to participate in a 1988 home visit with a prospective student-athlete and her parents. Further, the assistant coach also denied that he had provided cost-free transportation for the representative from the representative's home to the 1989 AAU girls' national basketball tournament in Charleston, West Virginia, and he also denied providing accommodations for the representative at the tournament.

During additional interviews with the NCAA and university officials May 13 and June 15, 1992, the assistant coach was confronted with evidence strongly indicating that he had provided false and misleading information during the April 9, 1992, interview. Despite this evidence, the assistant coach continued to deny any involvement in the previously mentioned violations. Finally, on June 17, 1992, the assistant coach admitted to institutional officials that he had provided false and misleading information during the course of the NCAA's inquiry.

III. Actions taken by the institution.

Acknowledging the above-cited violations and taking responsibility for them, the university elected to self-impose the following corrective measures and sanctions.

A. The director of athletics, assisted by the assistant director of athletics for compliance, is conducting regular programs of education for all coaches with an emphasis on complete compliance with NCAA policy and rules. One such program already has been implemented. Moreover, they ensure, to the best of their ability, that any violation of said rules that might occur in the future will be promptly self-reported.

B. Only one member of the women's basketball coaching staff is permitted to recruit off campus at any one time during the period from March 1 through March 30, 1993.

C. The maximum number of official visits for the 1992-93 recruiting season is limited to 13.

D. The head women's basketball coach and an assistant women's basketball coach (who is the former graduate assistant mentioned in Parts II-D and II-E of this report) were precluded from participating in the first two days of practice in the 1992-93 season.

E. In order to address any possible future inattentiveness and lack of supervision of student-athletes by coaches, the athletics administration has instructed all members of the department on the proper use of university telephones and office equipment.

F. The university privately reprimanded the former graduate assistant women's basketball coach who let student-athletes use her apartment and who participated in preseason practice. An official letter of reprimand will be placed in her file.

G. Although the assistant coach involved in violations with the representative of the university's athletics interests no longer is employed by the university, he has agreed not to seek a coaching position at another NCAA institution for a period of five years.

H. Institutional Control and Unethical Conduct—The violations documented in this report are inconsistent with St. Bonaventure's goals and aspirations to operate a successful Division I competitive intercollegiate athletics program with integrity and in full compliance with NCAA legislation. The university believes that the preponderance of the reported violations were minor and resulted from simple carelessness or ignorance of appropriate NCAA legislation. Nevertheless, the university accepts full responsibility for the infractions. In consideration of this responsibility, the institution has self-imposed sanctions. Further, St. Bonaventure has taken strong measures to preclude a recurrence of such violations. The appointment of a full-time compliance coordinator and the establishment of the rules-education program described earlier are indicative of the university's commitment to NCAA compliance. The institution believes institutional control exists within the university.

It should be noted that the most serious of the documented violations centered on the provision of false and misleading information by an individual who has since resigned from his duties at St. Bonaventure. The institution acknowledged that this individual violated the provisions of ethical conduct. Had this staff member not resigned, the university was prepared to initiate dismissal procedures against him. The university reiterated to the NCAA that this individual's unethical conduct was completely counter to the Franciscan tenets upon which the institution was founded. The university believes that its staff, especially those who have direct and potentially far-reaching influence on young people, must adhere to a higher standard of behavior and conduct. Unethical behavior demonstrated by staff members simply will not be tolerated at the university. Finally, the institution believed that the involvement of other staff members in minor violations did not rise to the level of unethical behavior.

IV. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For the reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved a major violation and several secondary violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. NCAA Bylaw 19.4.2.2, as adopted by the Association's membership, requires prescribed minimum penalties "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons" that include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic, in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The Committee on Infractions determined that this was a "unique" case in which the institution should receive less than the full set of minimum penalties otherwise required by NCAA legislation. The factors would include: the nature of the violations, the fact that the only major violation concerned unethical conduct by an assistant coach during the course of the investigation, thorough investigation and reporting of violations to the NCAA, cooperation in the processing of the case, and initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions (including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that the institution will comply with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance in the future). However, because of the knowledge of the women's basketball coaching staff of a number of these violations, and because of the unethical conduct of the former assistant women's basketball coach, the Committee on Infractions determined that, in addition to adopting all of the institution's actions, the additional actions set forth below were appropriate.

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the institution notifies the committee that it will not elect to participate in an expedited hearing pursuant to NCAA Bylaw 32.6.1.4.3. (Note: The second year of this penalty is immediately and completely suspended based upon the mitigating factors set forth above.)

B. St. Bonaventure University shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw

Valvano a hero to brother

erance through my brother's world, and I have learned. I have seen excitement, too. My brother's zest for life has seemed boundless at times and has instilled in me an appreciation of the wonders of the world. Isn't it funny, I have always thought, how it is the same world that surrounds all of us, yet some people find it so fascinating, some so awful. It is my brother's life that has shown me how to find the wonder of it all. And God knows he has taught me—yes, taught me—laughter. It really is in the most unusual of places, if you know where to look. James Thomas Anthony Valvano knows where to look. He has taught me—seemingly at the most improbable of times—to be sure to look for the laugh. At the very least, you often get a smile. And he has taught me about love. I can't make it any simpler than that. Most recently he has started to teach me—and all of us—a new lesson. It is called courage. It's one of the most difficult lessons I've ever had to learn. I wish I could help you fight the fight, Jim, just as you have helped me fight my fights all these years. Not an hour goes by where the people close to you don't wish there were something we could do to ease your pain, and selfishly, get you back to your 20-hour days giving us all the wonder you always give. But like most things I tell you, you already know that. Today, then, as another season winds down and another birthday passes, it is simply an excuse to tell you—and everybody else who has asked—just what you are to your kid brother. Simply a hero, and I love you for it. Keep fighting the fight, Jim. When my son Nicholas turns 16 and you're 60, I want him to be able to tell the world why his Uncle Jim is his hero, too. Bob Valvano is the head men's basketball coach at St. Mary's College of Maryland. Jim Valvano was diagnosed with cancer in June 1992.

it." Since joining the NCAA in 1987, Schultz has predicted a playoff eventually would come. Arguments against a playoff have included increased pressures on coaches and athletes and the need to protect the bowl system, which already generates millions for the sport. "We could hold lost class time to a minimum," Schultz said. "Wouldn't it be interesting if, say, we picked four teams after the New Year's Day bowls and then had a semifinal round and a championship game after the bowls? Think how that would add new interest to those New Year's Day bowls. It would be a shot in the arm for college football."

Casino gambling Addressing another issue, Schultz said the authorization of casino gambling in New Orleans probably will not affect the city's ability to host a future Final Four, unless sports gambling is made legal. But Schultz says he has serious personal reservations about bringing the finals of the NCAA basketball tournament to a city that has a casino. New Orleans' success in bidding for a future Final Four will depend upon how proposed casinos are handled, he said. Laws authorizing casinos in downtown New Orleans and on riverboats in the state do not allow sports betting. Some of the gambling operations could be in business within months. Schultz relayed his concerns in a recent letter to Mayor Sidney Barthelemy. In the letter, he said the NCAA opposes sports gambling because it could undermine the integrity of sports and "sends entirely the wrong message to our nation's youth concerning the purpose and meaning of sports."

Parents can pursue wrongful-death suit The parents of Drew Kleinknecht, a 20-year-old lacrosse player at Gettysburg College, can pursue a wrongful-death lawsuit against the college, a Federal appeals court ruled March 31. In a 2-1 decision, a Third U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals panel overturned a U.S. District Court decision dismissing the parents' lawsuit, according to The Associated Press. Kleinknecht collapsed from cardiac arrest during a team drills in September 1988. He died nearly an hour later. The Kleinknechts sued Gettysburg, contending the college failed to uphold its obligation to provide prompt medical care to their son. His parents contend several minutes may have passed after his collapse before he received cardiopulmonary resuscitation and that several more minutes passed before an ambulance arrived on the scene.

Infractions

19.4.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

C. During the period of probation, the institution shall: develop and implement a comprehensive educational program (e.g., seminars and testing) to instruct coaches and athletics department personnel on NCAA legislation, and submit a preliminary report by September 1, 1993, setting forth a schedule for establishing this compliance and educational program.

D. The institution shall be limited to only one member of the women's basketball coaching staff who may engage in off-campus recruiting activities (in-person contacts and evaluation) from March 1, 1993, through April 16, 1993.

E. The institution shall be limited to 13 expense-paid visits to the institution's campus during the 1992-93 and 1993-94 academic years in women's basketball.

F. The institution shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

G. The institution shall "show cause" why it should not be penalized further if it fails to disassociate the representative of the institution's athletics interests involved in this case from the institution's athletics program based upon his involvement in violations of NCAA rules. Such disassociation should be for a period of three years and should include: (1) refraining from accepting any assistance from the representative that would aid enrolled student-athletes; (2) refusing financial assistance for the institution's athletics program from the representative; (3) ensuring that the representative provides no athletics benefit or privilege to enrolled student-athletes, and (4) such other actions that the institution determines to be within its authority to eliminate the involvement of the representative in the institution's athletics program.

H. If the former assistant women's basketball coach involved in this case still had been employed at the institution, the university would have been required to show cause in accordance with Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1) why it should not be subject to additional penalties if it had failed to take appropriate disciplinary action against him.

I. Due to his involvement in certain violations of NCAA legislation found in this case, the former assistant women's basketball coach will be informed in writing by the NCAA that in the event he seeks employment or affiliation in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during a five-year period (March 31, 1992, to April 1, 1997), he and the involved institution shall be requested to appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1), which could limit the former coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

The Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the institution that when the penalties in this case become effective, the institution should take every precaution to ensure that their terms are observed. The committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Should any portion of any of the penalties in this case be set aside for any reason other than by appropriate action of the Association, the penalties shall be reconsidered by the Committee on Infractions. Should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.

1993 Column No. 14

1993 Convention Proposal No. 101

Contest exemptions—Division I basketball

Division I institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal No. 101 (effective August 1, 1993), it is permissible to exempt annually the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic game from its maximum number of basketball contests. Previously, this contest could be exempt once every four years.

NCAA Bylaw 17.3.5.3

Once-in-four-year exemptions—Division I basketball

Division I institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 17.3.5.3.2 (effective August 1, 1993), not more than once every four years, it is permissible to exempt not more than one of the following from counting toward the maximum number of basketball contests: (1) not more than one contest (or four contests if scheduled on a single, regular-season trip to Alaska or Hawaii) or one tournament (not to exceed three contests) either against or under the sponsorship of an active member located in Alaska or an active Division II institution located in Hawaii; (2) not more than one contest (or four contests if scheduled on a single, regular-season trip to Puerto Rico) or one tournament (not to exceed four contests) either against or under the sponsorship of an active member located in Puerto Rico, and (3) the games played in the Preseason National Invitation Tournament.

In addition, with the adoption of 1993 Convention Proposal No. 100 (as amended by Proposal No. 100-1), not more than once every four years, a Division I institution may exempt not more than one contest (or four contests if scheduled on a single, regular-season trip to Hawaii) or one tournament (not to exceed three contests) either against or under the sponsorship of an active Division I institution located in Hawaii. During its March 11, 1993, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed Proposal No. 100 (as amended by 100-1) as it relates to contest exemptions in the sport of basketball and determined the following:

1. An institution that participated in the Rainbow Classic during the 1992-93 academic year has utilized its once-in-four-year exemption against or under the sponsorship of an active Division I institution located in Hawaii and, thus, is not permitted to exempt basketball contests in the Rainbow Classic until the 1996-97 academic year.

2. An institution that participated during the 1992-93 academic year in the Rainbow Classic or the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic may utilize any of the remaining exceptions set forth in Bylaw 17.3.5.3.2.1 (e.g., Maui Classic, Great Alaska Shootout, San Juan Shootout and Preseason National Invitation Tournament) during the 1993-94 academic year, inasmuch as the Rainbow Classic and the Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic no longer are included in that once-in-four-year cycle.

The accompanying charts illustrate the application of Proposal No. 100 (as amended by 100-1).

An institution that participated in the Rainbow Classic or Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic during the 1992-93 academic year is eligible to participate in and exempt contests in box A or box C during the 1993-94 academic year. In addition, an institution that participated in the Rainbow Classic during the 1992-93 academic year has utilized its once-in-four-year exemption and, thus, may not exempt basketball contests in box B (Rainbow Classic) until the 1996-97 academic year.

Finally, please note that in accordance with Bylaw 17.3.5.3.1, not more than once every four years, a Division I institution may exempt from counting toward the maximum number of basketball contests the games played on a foreign basketball tour certified in accordance with the procedures set forth in Bylaw 30.7, provided the foreign tour is not taken in the same academic year (or the summer immediately thereafter) in which the member institution utilized any of the exemptions provided in Bylaw 17.3.5.3.2 (boxes A and B above).

Box A: Once-in-four-year exemptions

Effective August 1, 1993:

- Hawaii contests—Division II (e.g., Maui Classic)
- Alaska contests
- Puerto Rico contests
- Preseason National Invitation Tournament

Box B: Once-in-four-year exemption

Effective August 1, 1993:

- Hawaii contests—Division I (i.e., Rainbow Classic)

Box C: Annual exemption

Effective August 1, 1993:

- Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic

Correction—1993-94 NCAA Manual Division I women's basketball recruiting calendar

Division I women's basketball coaches should note that the NCAA Manual (Figure 13-2, page 111) incorrectly indicates that there is a quiet period from 8 a.m. April 16 through July 7. The correct quiet period is April 17 through July 7. The period from 8 a.m. April 16 through midnight April 16 is a contact period.

2,000; Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, 4,000; the University of New Orleans, 2,000; Northeastern, 1,000, and the University of Tulsa, 1,500.

NSAD also was observed in conjunction with the Final Four, where New Orleans students distributed awareness stickers and information at the National Association of Basketball Coaches Fan Jamboree, and the Women's Final Four, where former student-athletes in Georgia Institute of Technology's degree-completion program distributed stickers at an NCAA Youth Education through Sports clinic and at the meeting of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

In New Orleans, Lapchick and NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley spoke on NSAD at the Fan Jamboree.

Other events presented across the nation in observance of NSAD included:

■ A dinner at the University of Connecticut honoring UConn student-athletes who have overcome social, personal, academic or athletics adversity to be academically successful.

■ Recognition ceremonies involving U.S. Rep. John Conyers, another NSAD honorary cochair, at the University of Detroit Mercy for high-school student-athletes in the Detroit area and at George Washington University for Washington, D.C., high-schoolers.

■ An NSAD banquet at Duquesne University attended by Pittsburgh Penguins star Kevin Stevens and other professional athletes.

■ A week of activities for University of Georgia student-athletes and students and teachers at a local elementary school.

■ An opportunity for 14 inner-city students to accompany University of Hartford student-athletes through a day of classes and other typical activities. Hartford athletes also participated in a jump-rope marathon to raise money for a local charity.

■ A baseball game and barbecue at the University of Kansas at which faculty mentors for student-athletes were special guests.

■ Public-awareness campaigns conducted by East Carolina University, the University of Kentucky and University of Mississippi, among other institutions.

■ Visits to children's hospitals by student-athletes from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and Northeastern.

■ "No Drinking Week" at St. Mary's College (California), where athletes and coaches were encouraged to set an example for others by abstaining from the use of alcoholic beverages.

Joining Sen. Bradley and Rep. Conyers as cochairs for NSAD 1993 were Anita DeFrantz, president of the Amateur Athletic Foundation; NCAA Today's Top Six finalists Kristine Lilly of North Carolina and Pablo Yrizar of the University of California, Irvine; Alan Page, associate justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court and former University of Notre Dame and Minnesota Vikings football standout; Joseph V. Paterno, head football coach at Pennsylvania State University, and Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics at UC San Diego and former NCAA president.

by early fall.

Subcommittees

Another important part of the meeting involved the creation of five subcommittees to focus on particular parts of the implementation process.

The subcommittees, and their members, are:

■ Scheduling: Charles Whitcomb, San Jose State University, chair; Patricia H. Meiser-McKnett, University of Connecticut, and Charlotte West, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.

■ Peer selection (to determine means for selection and to select the peer-review pool): Marcia L. Saneholtz, Washington State University, chair; C. William Byrne, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and a committee member yet to be appointed.

■ Self-study instrument (to finalize the self-study document): Frederick Obeir, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, chair; Jack E. Kvancz, George Mason University, and a committee member yet to be appointed.

■ Certification handbook (to develop the written materials to be used by peer-review teams and participating institutions and conferences): Annette O'Connor, La Salle University, chair; Lee A. McElroy, California State University, Sacramento, and William Sangster, Georgia Institute of Technology.

■ Peer training (to develop timetable, plans and materials for training peer reviewers—with special attention given to chairs—before campus visits begin in 1995): Robert A. Chernak, George Washington University, chair; Sangster; R. Daniel Beebe, Ohio Valley Conference, and a committee member yet to be appointed.

Because the certification schedule is to be announced this fall and because the first group of participating institutions will be able to begin work on the process at that time, the work of the scheduling, peer selection, self-study instrument and certification-handbook subcommittees must be completed quickly.

Each of those subcommittees will meet between now and the next full committee meeting, which will be May 7 in Dallas. Tentative reports will be submitted to the full group at that time. After that, the subcommittees will meet again to form final reports that the full committee will approve at its July 22 meeting.

The other two subcommittees will work on a longer timetable, probably aiming to complete most of their tasks by spring 1994.

Accreditation

Another topic at the March 31 meeting involved the key issue of aligning the athletics certification process with regional accreditation for those institutions that so desire. The committee will be working out the details on this part of the plan with all regional accrediting agencies and with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, in particular.

Bowl game gets old name back

The Blockbuster Bowl is getting its original name—the Sunshine Football Classic—back, it was announced April 5.

The game played at Joe Robbie Stadium originally was to have that name, but that changed before the first game three years ago when Blockbuster Entertainment signed on as title sponsor.

The rental video giant has since pulled out of the bowl game's sponsorship.

tricted coaches to five.

■ In Division III, eliminate subvarsity experiences.

Delany noted that the committee hopes to receive reaction to these recommendations from various campus representatives.

"We would like to have reaction and comment from chief operating officers, athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives, senior woman administrators and representatives of national coaches and administrator associations," he said.

Reactions and comments may be mailed to the NCAA national office to the attention of Delany or sent by facsimile to his attention at 913/339-0028.
