States growing more involved in gender equity

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

In the belief that high schools and junior and senior colleges—including NCAA institutions—are not doing enough to comply with Title IX, more and more state legislatures are beginning to insert themselves into the gender-equity debate.

Two states in particular—California and Florida—have introduced bills that call for more strict oversight of institutions' compliance with Title IX and current state gender-equity laws. The bill in Florida, House Bill 899, was signed into law last month.

These legislative actions are what many believe are only a prelude to what will happen across the country. Some state legislators essentially are saying that many institutions have been in violation of the law for 20 years and that it is up to the states to see that those schools comply.

NOW filed suits

The National Organization for Women (NOW) demanded in two lawsuits it filed against the California State University system that the system spend equal funds on women's sports and men's sports.

"The status quo represents blatant discrimination against women," Linda Joplin, NOW's

California coordinator, said in the publication American Volleyball. "Just because it has been the practice in the past does not make it justifiable forever."

The lawsuits were filed in San Francisco Superior Court against the entire system and in Santa Clara Superior Court against San Jose State University.

Bill poses deadlines

California State Sen. Gary K.

Hart, a Democrat from Santa Barbara, introduced Senate Bill 262 in February. It would amend California's existing Education Code to require that institutions in the California State University system achieve female/male intercollegiate athletics participation reflecting the ratio of female to male students on campus. As written, the bill would require institutions

Williams joins Council as III representative

Robert E. Williams, chair of the department of physical education and athletics at Swarthmore College, has been named to the NCAA Council as a Division III representative.

He will complete the unexpired term of William E. Lide, who left the Council after being named director of athletics at West Chester University of Pennsylvania, a Division II member. The term expires in January 1994. Williams is eligible for reelection.

The longtime track and field coach became athletics director and head track and field and cross country coach at Swarthmore in 1987. He also has served as chair of physical education and head track and cross country coach at Amherst College and as director of college and community relations and head track coach at Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

He is a former president of the NCAA Division III Track Coaches Association and currently is a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee.

Williams received his bachelor's degree in health and physical education at Delaware State College, certification in special education at Trenton State College, and a master's degree in education at Rutgers.

Women's postgraduate scholarships awarded

The NCAA has awarded 10 postgraduate scholarships through the women's enhancement program.

The enhancement program, established in 1988 as a result of a recommendation from the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics, is designed to create better opportunities for women in coaching, athletics administration and officiating.

This year's 10 postgraduate scholarships are being awarded to women who have completed an

A weekly summary of major activities within the Association

Executive director

Committee initiates search process

The search committee created to recommend a replacement for Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will meet for the first time June 9 in San Diego.

NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley, University of Nevada, is chair of the committee. The three division vice-presidents, four other members of the NCAA Executive Committee and four members of the Presidents Commission also are on the search committee.

The search committee has sent a memorandum announcing the position to chief executive officers and commissioners at member institutions and conferences. The position is being advertised in The NCAA News (page 19), the Chronicle of Higher Education and selected daily newspapers.

For more detail, see the May 12, May 26 and June 2 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: Patricia E. Bork.

Next meeting: June 9 in San Diego.

Gender equity

Task force to submit report to presidents

The NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force will submit its preliminary report to the NCAA Presidents Commission for its June 29-30 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

At the conclusion of the Presidents Commission meeting, the task force will meet (June 30-July 1) to work toward producing a final report for the NCAA Council's August meeting.

The preliminary report was mailed to the membership May 14 and appeared in the May 19 issue of The NCAA News. Hearings at three locations were conducted May 24, 26 and 27.

Those who could not attend any of the hearings have until June 11 to submit written reaction to the task force. Those interested in doing so may send it to Ursula R. Walsh, director of research, at the national office.

For more detail, see the June 2, May 19 and May 5 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contacts: Ursula R. Walsh and Stephen A. Mallonee.

Next meeting: June 30-July 1 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Certification

Scheduling subcommittee plans June 20-21 meeting

The scheduling subcommittee of the Committee on Athletics Certification will meet June 20-21 in Chicago to discuss matters related to the timing of the athletics certification plan.

The scheduling subcommittee is in the process of developing a single, five-year certification schedule for all Division I institutions. That schedule is expected to be approved and distributed in September.

Conferences that want to suggest their own schedule have been sent material to aid them in the process.

Committee efforts to select peer reviewers—including chief executive officers—also continue.

For more detail, see the May 12, April 7 and March 24 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: John H. Leavens.

Next meeting: July 22 in Dallas.

Rules federation

Second meeting nearing for special committee

The second meeting of the NCAA Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport will be conducted June 28 in Kansas City, Missouri.

During a discussion at its first meeting that was acknowledged to be broad and preliminary, the committee explored the concept of permitting institutions to assign sports to national (more regulated) or regional (less regulated) "tiers of emphasis."

For more detail, see the May 5 and March 24 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: Stephen R. Morgan.

Next meeting: June 28 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Finances

Committee to discuss final recommendations

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics will conduct a telephone conference soon to finalize its recommendations to the membership.

The committee reviewed a "working draft" of its recommendations at a May 20-21 meeting and expects to submit a final set to the NCAA Presidents Commission for consideration at that group's June 29-30 meeting.

For more detail, see the May 26, May 5 and April 21 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contacts: Frank E. Marshall and Stephen R. Morgan.

Next meeting: To be determined.

Revenues

Academic-enhancement fund to be mailed June 25

Checks for the academic-enhancement fund of the revenue-distribution plan will be mailed to Division I members June 25. It will be the second of five funds from the plan to be paid to Division I members in 1993.

Briefly in the News

Coach says stop racism

University of Illinois, Champaign, football coach Lou Tepper recently helped ease racial tensions at a local high school when he advised more than 500 students to break the cycle of racism.

Tepper was invited to Central High School in Champaign May 7 after a cassette tape containing racial slurs was circulated in the school, the Champaign-Urbana (Illinois) News Gazette reported.

"Don't let the prejudice of your family and your past screw up your opportunity to get to know other people," Tepper said. "If it came from your parents, that's their problem. It doesn't have to be yours. If you're going to continue the cycle, you're going to continue to have worse and worse problems. The future is not something you enter. It's something you create. You have a chance to create the future."

Tepper brought along other Illinois coaches and several student-athletes to the assembly. One of Tepper's players, Peter Gabrione, told students he believes that he harbored racial stereotypes before going to the university as a freshman in 1991.

"I was a racist, but I gradually started changing because now I know it's not right," Gabrione said. "I feel bad for my friends who don't have the opportunity to meet guys like (my teammates). I can't put up with that anymore. I don't accept it."

More women in BCA

A year ago, only two percent of the members of the Black Coaches Association were female. Today, that number is between 15 and 20 percent.

Why the large increase? Much of the credit is being given to BCA President Marian Washington, women's basketball coach at the University of Kansas.

"I'm very pleased about the increase," Washington told the Atlanta Journal at last month's BCA convention in Atlanta. "It will always be on my agenda as long as I'm part of the association. I understand the association wants to embrace us all. I just think we're at a point where we're growing by leaps and bounds."

Washington said the BCA has plans to be heard in the debate surrounding gender equity.

"Gender equity is going to continue to be a focus," she said. "I think there's a lot more that has to be done with gender equity. It's not a women's issue, it's a civil rights issue."

Honorary doctorate

John Thompson (left), head men's basketball coach at Georgetown University, receives an honorary doctorate in humane letters from Tilden J. LeMelle, president of the University of the District of Columbia, during recent commencement ceremonies at District of Columbia. Thompson was honored for his success as a mentor both on and off the basketball court. He has led his teams to postseason play in 16 of his 20 seasons at Georgetown while recording a 97 percent graduation rate for four-year players during that time.

Throughout the year, we're going to make it clear where we stand on the issue of gender equity."

Easy on batboys

The U.S. Department of Labor will take another look at its decision to apply child-labor regulations to batboys. This comes after a 14-year-old batboy with the Savannah (Georgia) Cardinals minor-league baseball team of the South Atlantic League was fired in May as the result of an order from the department, according to an Associated Press report.

"Consistent with the current efforts to reinvent government, to make it more responsive and efficient, I have directed the Department of Labor to examine if the child-labor regulation in such a case is truly necessary," Secretary of Labor Robert B. Reich said May 26 in a prepared statement. "The application of child-labor laws in the case of 14-year-old batboys does, at first glance, look silly. It is not the intent of the law to deny young teenagers employment opportunities, so long as their health and well-being are not impaired."

Child-labor laws prohibit any child under the age of 14 from working and stipulate that 14- and 15-year-olds must not work past 7 p.m. on a school night or 9 p.m. in the summer.

Ride on, coach

Paul Schudel, who will be entering his ninth season as head football coach at Ball State University this year, still gets pumped up about things—even bicycle pedals.

Schudel completed a 600-mile bicycle ride from Muncie, Indiana, to Annapolis, Maryland, to help raise more than $2,000 for Camp Isanogel, a local summer camp for adults and children with disabilities. He started the trek May 5 and reached Annapolis May 12.

Schudel said the most grueling part of the trip was five straight days pedaling through a mountain range.

"One mountain grade was three miles up," he said. "You just had to get off and walk for a while, then get back on and ride."

CFA ponders effects of gender-equity action

Discussion about the possible effect of the gender-equity movement on big-time college football dominated the College Football Association convention in Dallas.

The meeting, which concluded June 6, featured gender-equity briefings from Joe Dean, athletics director at Louisiana State University, and Grant G. Teaff, athletics director at Baylor University. Both are members of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force.

Also speaking to the group was the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, former executive vice-president at the University of Notre Dame, who addressed the stress being placed on the game by "militant women" who do not recognize that revenue from football undergirds the athletics program at many campuses.

"Never have our football programs been in such jeopardy as they are today," Joyce was quoted as saying in a USA Today report. "I think we are fighting for our lives and had better act accordingly."

"Frankly, I have been dismayed at the publicity and apparent support the militant women have received by their irrational attack on football as their bugaboo."

CFA coaches also endorsed the idea of permitting players a fifth year of competition to be taken during their five-year period of eligibility. Currently, athletes are eligible for four seasons of competition during a five-year period.

"I don't see any reason we shouldn't do it. This is a no-brainer," said Texas A&M University football coach R. C. Slocum.

CFA faculty representatives opposed the measure.

CFA delegates also:

- Discussed the possibility of a one-day football signing period in mid-December,

- Discussed a spring football game to raise extra income and

- Appointed a study committee to examine the concept of a Division I-A football playoff.

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be submitted in writing to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than June 30, 1993 (fax number 913/339-0035).

Professional Sports Liaison Committee: Replacement for John

David Crow, no longer director of athletics at Texas A&M University. Appointee must be a Division I-A director of athletics. Term of new member will begin September 1, 1993.

Also, replacement for Roy Williams, University of Kansas, declined appointment that was to be effective September 1. Appointee must be a representative of the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

SEC tackles equity issue

Beginning in 1995, Southeastern Conference schools will be required to provide a minimum of two more women's sports than men's sports.

Gender equity was the main topic of discussion during the annual SEC spring meeting in Destin, Florida.

In the meeting that ended June 3, presidents of the 12 SEC institutions also approved a policy stating that each league school must offer at least three team sports for women.

"We believe this is an equitable way and positive way to enhance the expansion of women's athletics, while maintaining the reasonable

Baseball steps in right direction

By Kathy D. Clark and David B. Keilitz

For those who want to see smokeless tobacco relegated to the scrap heap of history, June 2 was a milestone date.

On that date, Major League Baseball announced plans to ban all tobacco products throughout the minor-league system—from the rookie leagues all the way to Triple-A.

The new program will go into effect June 15 and will apply to more than 6,000 baseball personnel. Although the ban does not extend to the major leagues (and we hope that one day it will), Major League Baseball is offering counseling and assistance to those who wish to quit.

Those of us who see a strong correlation between athletics competition and a healthy lifestyle have been troubled for years at the bond between baseball and smokeless tobacco. "The association of spit tobacco with our national pastime has always been, for me, a travesty," said Peter Greenwald, director of the National Cancer Institute's Division of Cancer Prevention and Control.

Generations of athletes, many of them college athletes, have acquired debilitating tobacco habits simply by imitating big-league baseball players.

Now, even though Major League Baseball itself isn't yet willing to take the plunge and ban tobacco use among baseball personnel, at least an environment has been created in which baseball's feeder system no longer fuels tobacco addiction.

"We are instituting this ban in order to address our concerns for both the health of our baseball personnel and the image they may portray," said Dick Wagner, assistant to the chairman of the Major League Baseball Executive Council. "We are determined to eliminate any perceived linkage between baseball and smokeless tobacco."

We commend Major League Baseball for this attitude, and we hope that soon the final link will be broken.

Emphasis on revenue is misplaced

I firmly believe that many people in intercollegiate sports have a distinct philosophical difference with University of Louisville President Donald C. Swain.

In his guest editorial in the May 12 issue of The NCAA News, President Swain praised the virtues of his athletics department's ability to generate large sums of revenue for the institution, as well as the department's ability to be self-sufficient.

The philosophical difference is the question. What does an intercollegiate athletics program exist for? Are some intercollegiate athletics programs in place primarily to generate institutional revenue? Or is an athletics program available to afford a student an opportunity to participate in an intercollegiate sport while earning a college education?

To paraphrase the NCAA Manual, intercollegiate athletics exists as an enhancement to the educational system. The student-athlete is to be maintained as an integral component of the student body. Physical fitness and recreational pursuit are primary motivators; however, I realize that in the mainstream these concepts are viewed as naive and idealistic.

Unfortunately, the Division I philosophy statement in the Manual supports President Swain's viewpoint because it portrays Division I athletics as not strictly for the participation of the student-athlete. It is an entertainment vehicle, and a major goal is to be a revenue-generating enterprise.

□ Letter

Having just completed extensive research on my new book, "Blueprint for Success," some glaring disparities have been discovered and strongly contradict President Swain's viewpoint. While he points to the financial contributions of the athletics program to the university, he fails to note the contributions the university makes to the athletics program, or the lack thereof. According to USA Today (May 20), the graduation rate for the Louisville football team places it in the "bottom 10" at 28 percent.

Unfortunately, there seems to be little consideration for the welfare of the student-athlete in this scenario. The factors influencing the required level of athletics performance are enormous. In order to entice newspaper poll ratings, football bowl invitations and basketball tournament bids, teams must consistently exceed normal standards of quality. This requires monumental time, effort and pressure on 19- to 22-year-olds, whose main priority should be earning a college degree. That's what people go to college for.

In addition to earning a degree, the other part of a college education involves growing and maturing as an individual. Because of the time commitment required for athletics participation, one also wonders how much time scholarship athletes have to enjoy being regular college students—attending classes, shooting the breeze, hanging out in the game room, writing for the school newspaper, earning valuable professional experience by serving internships with local businesses and corporations, etc....

When two parties sign a legal agreement, each entity is legally obligated to fulfill certain requirements of the agreement. When a student-athlete signs a National Letter of Intent, he is obligated to perform to the best of his ability when wearing the school colors in athletics competition. On the other side of this agreement, it is the institution's responsibility to educate that young person. In its current structure, the institution does not fulfill its part of the agreement, and there is no mechanism in place to monitor the process.

As educators, we should be more concerned with how many recruited student-athletes are earning degrees and becoming productive citizens, rather than how much money the football team is going to generate if it goes to the Fiesta Bowl. Let's do something morally correct. Let's educate those who entertain us. And as we watch more men and women who participate in the intercollegiate sports we hold near and dear, we can wish them "good luck" when they walk across the stage in a different uniform. The one that says, "Hi, mom! I graduated."

Collins testifies about gender equity

Congresswoman speaks at task-force hearing

The following is the testimony of Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Illinois, presented at an NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force hearing May 27 in Washington, D.C.:

Members of the task force, I am pleased to appear before you today to discuss gender-equity issues and your preliminary report.

As you may know, as chairwoman of the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness, I have had the opportunity to examine a variety of issues relating to college sports. The subcommittee had hearings on gender equity both this year and last year. In fact, several members of this task force have testified before the subcommittee.

For the past two years, I have made a goal of bringing gender equity to the attention of the NCAA and the nation. I have written to Dick Schultz about the matter, and I went down to the NCAA Convention with the main purpose of showing my seriousness about the issue.

I commissioned a General Accounting Office report on hiring practices that highlighted unfair treatment of women's sports coaches. Working with the Lyndon Johnson School of Public Affairs, we examined problems in the Office of Civil Rights in a report that has been favorably received by the new director, Norma Cantu. I have placed op-ed pieces to get national attention.

My experience in Congress makes it easier to understand the difficulties the task force faces. I know that many of you have strongly held views, and compromises are difficult. However, there has never been a better opportunity for the NCAA to step in and bring true leadership on this issue.

I say there has never been a better opportunity because the consequences

'I am particularly troubled that football coaches see gender equity as a threat. In my view, that is a phony issue.'

■ Rep. Cardiss Collins

of inaction are even more difficult. Litigation of Title IX issues is on the rise. Secretary of Education Richard Riley and the newly confirmed director of the Office of Civil Rights, Norma Cantu, have each told me that they are committed to enforcing Title IX. I have also found growing support in Congress for new measures to end sex discrimination in education, including my bill, H.R. 921—Title IX plus 21 years—to require disclosure of information on participation rates, spending rates and coaching jobs for men and women in sports.

So to any member of this task force who believes that a "go-slow" approach is really an option, I suggest to you that it is not. Your attempts to sidestep difficult issues and to set out vague guidelines with no teeth will simply set the stage for the courts, the administration and the Congress to remedy the problem.

We all know that sex discrimination in sports is a problem. Indeed, it is the data developed by this task force that I have used for the past year to highlight disparities between the treatment of men and women athletes and men and women coaches. Your data show that spending on men's sports is more than twice what is spent on women's sports; your data show that only one-sixth of every recruiting dollar is spent on women, and your data show that women coaches have lost ground in many sports.

Women's interest in sports is clearly on the rise. For example, most of us who watched the recent NCAA women's basketball championship were thrilled by the superb performances and especially by that of Sheryl Swoopes of Texas Tech University. Sadly, many opportunities for women

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 13 pending bills from nine states that have been acted on since the last report (May 26). No new bills have been introduced since then. Pending bills discussed in previous reports on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of June 3, 1993. The listed bills were selected for inclusion from a larger pool of bills concerning sports and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Athletics trainers.....	3
Athlete agents.....	2
Academic standards.....	1
Coaches.....	1
Gender equity.....	1
Olympic athletes.....	1
Ticket scalping.....	1
Scholarships.....	1
Sports officials.....	1
Trademarks in amateur sports.....	1

Three bills have become law since the last report, including two on trainers and one on sports officials.

Four state legislatures—Minnesota, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas—have adjourned since the last report, bringing to 29 the number of state legislatures that have adjourned. In Minnesota, Oklahoma and Tennessee, pending bills will carry over to 1994. In Texas, bills will not carry over, and pending bills died at the conclusion of the session if they had not been cleared for the governor's signature.

Alabama S. 318 (Author: deGraffenried)

Provides for the regulation and licensure of athletics trainers; established an Athletic Trainers Board; prescribes civil procedures for appeals; provides penalties.

Gender equity

Clear standards, enforcement provisions needed, Collins testifies in sports are being lost because of a lack of commitment by schools to provide new opportunities.

Some people have asked me why I am so interested in the subject of gender equity in college sports. The answer is simply that I am interested in the issue of fairness and the abolition of sex discrimination in college sports.

As I learned more about the issue of gender equity, I was repeatedly struck by the similarity of arguments used to hamper civil rights measures. Opponents of civil rights measures would constantly say "be patient," "we'll be considering that measure in the near future," or "we're for civil rights, as long as it doesn't mean taking away from the rights of others."

Well, that is the same message that has been coming out of the NCAA. Last summer, the executive director of the NCAA told our subcommittee that the NCAA probably would consider gender-equity proposals at its January Convention. But by the time the January Convention rolled around, which I attended, the issue was off the table.

At our last hearing, all of the witnesses professed to favor gender equity, but some added the caveat that gender equity should not come at the expense of men's sports, particularly football.

I'm not sure exactly what that means. Let us say, for example, that for a variety of reasons, there is a sudden upsurge of interest in chemistry by women students. The chemistry lab can accommodate just so many students. So, how do we decide who gets into the class? Do we say that women can take the course, so long as the same number of men are accommodated? Of course not. In the long run, maybe we could build more labs. But in the short run, we would not give opportunities to women only after men were accommodated. Did we decide that football and basketball teams should be integrated—as long as the same number of white students were accommodated? Of course not.

I am particularly troubled that football coaches see gender equity as a threat. In my view, that is a phony issue. All of the statistics I have suggest that for most schools, football is a money loser. What is even more startling is that in recent years, the trend appears to be that fewer and fewer schools are sharing the wealth.

It, therefore, appears to me that NCAA rules that fail to take serious steps for cost control in football have the effect of reducing the opportunities for many schools to field competitive teams and share in revenues. Instead, football opportunities will be concentrated in fewer schools, meaning fewer opportunities for football players, unless the remaining schools choose to provide even greater subsidies to their money-losing programs.

We are already seeing this trend. One school, the University of Notre Dame, has its own television contract. Conferences are negotiating their own TV deals. Some schools will be permanently locked out of the higher-paying bowls due to long-term agreements between bowls and conferences. It is hard to see that this is progress for men's football opportunities nationwide.

Now let me turn to the task force's preliminary report. As I have said publicly, I believe the report has two fundamental problems. First, it lacks clear standards for what the NCAA considers to be gender equity, and second, it has no enforcement provisions. Compare these recommendations to rules the NCAA has on the books for recruiting.

Did the NCAA choose to define acceptable recruiting practices as recruiting practices that coaches at other schools would be proud to adopt as their own? No, instead there are detailed rules governing days for recruiting, trips for students to visit campus and a host of other rules.

More importantly, a school found to be in violation can be subjected to penalties, such as restrictions on postseason play and denial of television appearances.

On the other hand, there are no detailed rules to measure gender equity, and even if there were, a school would face no sanctions for ignoring them. As a result, rather than taking the lead on the subject, the NCAA has effectively told the courts and the Office of Civil Rights that they must take control.

At a minimum, I would like to see the NCAA adopt reporting requirements on gender-equity compliance based upon the standards in my bill, H.R. 921. I, frankly, would like to see the NCAA taking the lead, even if it is just reporting, instead of being seen as dragging its heels and moving only after being forced by the Congress, as it was in the case of the Student Right to Know Act.

Let me say in conclusion that I am a strong advocate of athletics. There is no doubt in my mind that athletics can build values of teamwork, leadership and hard work to achieve goals. Studies show that students who are athletes are less likely to engage in drugs, crime or to drop out of school. That is why I want the athletics experience to be available to girls and women to the same extent it is available to boys and men.

But there can be no further delay in bringing equity about. In the comics, Charlie Brown comes back year after year to kick the football that Lucy promises to hold, but never does. In the real world, when a young woman is denied a chance to play hockey by a male athletics director, the opportunity is lost forever.

One more time: Arkansas, LSU win I track

Second straight men's title goes to Razorbacks

For more than a decade, Arkansas has dominated Division I indoor track, winning 10 consecutive team titles. Now, the Razorbacks may be building a similar dynasty outdoors.

Erick Walder smashed the outdoor championships' long-jump record and the Razorbacks registered seven top-three finishes to win their second consecutive Division I Men's Outdoor Track and Field Championships team title

June 2-5 at New Orleans.

Arkansas, which won its third outdoor team title overall, amassed 69 points to easily outdistance Louisiana State and Ohio State, which tied for second with 45 points. Tennessee (44) and Florida (39) rounded out the top five.

Arkansas' 24-point margin of victory was the largest since UCLA doubled up on Texas, 82-41, in 1988.

Walder won his second consecutive long-jump title when he leaped a meet-record 28 feet. Only the ninth athlete in track and field history and fifth American to attain the 28-foot mark, Walder smashed his own 1992 championships record of 27-9/16. The new mark ranks second on the all-time collegiate list; Carl Lewis of Houston holds the record at 28-3/4, set in 1981.

Walder, who also placed third in the triple jump, has now won six individual titles—four indoors and two outdoors.

California's Chris Huffin finished first in the decathlon.

"That was my goal, to jump 28 feet and win the championship for my team," Walder said. "Immediately, I knew it was a great jump, but I didn't know it was 28 feet. When I came down and looked to the left and saw 28 feet, then I realized it was 28 feet. I knew we needed 10 points in order to win. 'I knew I needed 28 feet. I can't describe the feeling.'"

Calvin Davis also stepped into the winner's circle for the Razorbacks, winning the 400-meter dash. Davis recorded a time of 45.04 to win his first title.

Ray Doakes, David Welsh and Frank Hanley contributed top-three finishes for Arkansas. Doakes and Welsh placed second in the high jump and 5,000-meter run, respectively, and Hanley finished third in the 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs.

Five athletes joined Walder as repeat winners, including Jose Parrilla of Tennessee (800-meter run), Jon Dennis of South Florida (5,000-meter run) and Brent Noon of Georgia (shot put). Reggie Jones and Chris King again were members of a victorious Louisiana State 400-meter relay team.

Randy Jenkins of Tennessee, who spent the 1992 season recuperating from Hodgkin's disease, completed his comeback with a victory in the high jump. Jenkins is the first Tennessee athlete to win the title.

"I was ready to jump today (June 3)," Jenkins said. "This is real important to me.... There were a lot of people who didn't think I could come back."

Tigers rout women's field on way to winning seventh consecutive title

Dominating. That is the best way to describe Louisiana State's performance at the Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Louisiana State won five individual titles and scored in 13 events to easily win its seventh consecutive team title June 2-5 at New Orleans. Tulane served as the host institution.

The Tigers accumulated 93 points, more than double runner-up Wisconsin's 44. The margin of victory is the largest in championships history, and the 93 points are the most by a champion since Florida State scored 145 in 1984.

UCLA (38), Oregon (35) and Georgetown (32) placed third, fourth and fifth, respectively.

Debbie Ann Parris (400-meter hurdles), Daphnie Saunders (long jump) and Danyel Mitchell (discus throw) each won individual titles for the Tigers. Louisiana State also won the 400- and 1,600-meter relays. The Tigers' five individual titles equal the championships mark held by Florida State (1984) and Florida (1992).

In addition to its titles, Louisiana State recorded eight top-five finishes. Cheryl Taplin (100-meter dash) and Sharon Jaklofsky (heptathlon) each were runners-up in their events, and Youlanda Warren (400-meter dash) posted a third-place finish. Taplin and Warren also were members of the Tigers' victorious 400-meter relay team.

Tanya Hughes of Arizona won her third consecutive high-jump title, becoming the first athlete in championships history to accomplish the feat.

Holli Hyche of Illinois and Clare Eichner of Wisconsin each won two individual titles. Hyche claimed the 100- and 200-meter dashes; Eichner won the 1,500- and 3,000-meter runs. They were the third and fourth individual titles, respectively, this year for Hyche and Eichner, who each won two indoor titles in March.

Louisiana State's Sharon Jaklofsky (above) finished second in the heptathlon, helping the Tigers win their seventh consecutive women's Division I team title.

Tampa rolls to second consecutive II baseball crown

Sparked by five runs off of four home runs, Tampa completed an unbeaten run and won its second consecutive NCAA Division II Baseball Championship with a 7-5 victory over Cal Poly San Luis Obispo June 5 at Montgomery, Alabama.

The Spartans, who finished the season 43-21, did not lose a championship-round contest in the tournament for the second year in a row. Tampa outscored its opponents, 34-15, in its four games Montgomery.

Left fielder David Dion, who was named the tournament's most outstanding player, hit two home runs and drove in three runs in the championship game. For the tournament, Dion hit .412 and had five home runs and 10 runs batted in.

After Cal Poly San Luis Obispo scored two runs on three hits in the top half of the first inning, Dion tied the game with a two-run home run to right-center that scored Eric Foster.

The Mustangs retook the lead, 3-2, in the top of the third on singles by Rob Neal, Grant Munger and Ben Boulware, who drove in Neal.

But Tampa muscled up in the bottom of the third inning when Brian Zaletel hit a solo homer to right field. Dion followed with his second blast over the fence in left-center to give the Spartans a 4-3 lead.

In the sixth inning, Ryan Valerius hit a solo home run for Tampa, giving the Spartans a two-run lead, but the Mustangs came back to tie the game in the top of the seventh.

Tampa pitcher Gary Graham, going for his second victory of the tournament, struggled in the seventh as Brent Simonich and Phil James singled and Duke Dodder walked to load the bases. Rob Neal singled home Simonich, and James then scored on a sacrifice fly by Grant Munger to tie the game.

Tampa's game-winning run came on an error-filled play after Foster singled to left field in the bottom of the seventh. Foster stole second, advanced to third base on a throwing error by catcher Steve Rianda and scored on an error by the center fielder.

The Spartans added an insurance run in the eighth inning.

A tournament highlight came in Game 2 between Troy State and Mansfield, when Troy State's Steve Charles became the first pitcher in the 26-year history of the Division II championship to pitch a no-hitter. Charles walked three and had six strikeouts in the 5-0 victory.

Joining Dion on the all-tournament team were teammates Zaletel and Graham. First baseman Munger and outfielder Boulware were selected from Cal Poly San Luis Obispo. Troy State's Jeff Javnet, shortstop; Paul Bryant, outfield, and Charles were named to the team, as were Dave Joliff, second baseman, Missouri-St. Louis; William Vlaun, catcher, Adelphi, and designated hitter Steve Lukas, Adelphi.

Florida wins I men's golf with clutch putt on 18th hole

Sophomore Chris Couch of Florida was only the Gators' fourth best golfer in the final round of the Division I Men's Golf Championships June 2-5 in Lexington, Kentucky, but his putt on the 18th hole may go down as the team's best of the year.

Couch's four-foot downhill putt secured Florida's third team title and first since 1973 as the Gators nipped Georgia Tech by one stroke and North Carolina by two. It was the closest team finish since Houston's one-stroke victory over Oklahoma State in 1984.

"I was so nervous," Couch said, "I couldn't feel my hand. I had to put my glove on. I had missed those putts all day long."

Couch, who paced the field after two rounds of play, shot four-over-par 76 in each of the last two rounds and tied for seventh. Teammates Guy Hill, Brad Lehmann and Brian Gay combined to shoot nine under par during the final round to rally the Gators past Georgia Tech, which led by three strokes after three rounds.

The battle for medalist honors also was decided on the final hole. Todd Demsey of Arizona State escaped with a one-stroke victory when Georgia Tech's David Duval bogeyed the 18th. Duval, a four-time all-American, needed a par to tie Demsey and allow Georgia Tech to tie Florida.

Demsey, the Sun Devils' second consecutive national champion, finished with a 10-under-par 278.

"I had an idea that I had a chance to win," said Demsey, a sophomore who finished as a second-team all-American last year. "I was icing my back in the locker room when I found out I'd won. It was unexpected. I figured David probably would birdie that hole."

Two three-hour rain delays forced play to be suspended during the third round, and Demsey and Duval had to finish their third rounds on the tournament's final morning. The two golfers were tied heading into the final 18 holes.

Florida's team title was its first under head coach Buddy Alexander, the 1986 U.S. Amateur champion. He watched his team post a tournament-best 277 in the second round only to lose the lead with a third-round 294.

"I told the guys that they played a little tentatively," Alexander said. "But I never thought we were out of it. I told them if you want something you have to go out and take it."

Georgia Tech, which has never won a team championship, trailed Florida by 13 strokes at the halfway mark but bolted into the lead with a third-round 278. The Yellow Jackets were able to complete much of their third round before the rain delay.

Only 0.2 percent ruled ineligible in fall drug testing

Only 10 student-athletes out of 4,782—0.2 percent—were ruled ineligible in fall 1992 as a result of a positive test in the NCAA's drug-testing programs.

That continued the downward trend that has existed since the testing program began in 1986, when 1.3 percent of those tested were ruled ineligible. Last year, the failure rate for the fall period was 0.3 percent.

Of the 10 student-athletes who were ruled ineligible for banned substances, four tested positive for anabolic steroids (nandrolone and stanozolol), one for probenecid (a urine manipulator) and three for marijuana. Two were ruled ineligible for failure to take the test.

All of the positive tests except for the three marijuana cases came from year-round testing in football. The failure rate from football year-round testing was 0.3 percent, the same as 1991.

For the first time, track and field also was subject to year-round testing; no student-athlete was ruled ineligible in that sport.

Testing at NCAA championship events and Division I-A football bowl games yielded only three positives resulting in ineligibility, all for marijuana (two at bowl games, one at Division III football).

A total of 30 student-athletes (0.6 percent) tested positive but retained their eligibility when medical justification was documented, when an appeal was granted or until the results of a follow-up examination were provided.

Frank D. Uryasz, NCAA director of sports sciences, said the Association does not attempt to interpret the results of the drug-testing program and that the results do not necessarily indicate that only 0.2 percent of all student-athletes are using drugs.

Any student-athlete failing the test is ineligible for at least one year after testing positive.

Publications available

The latest editions of NCAA Division I Graduation-Rates Report; the Divisions I, II and III NCAA Operating Manuals, and 1993 NCAA Men's and Women's Soccer Rules now are available from the NCAA circulation staff.

The Association's second survey of graduation rates covers the overall graduation rates for all students entering Division I universities in 1985. The report—which recently was mailed to the presidents of all member institutions and to commissioners of Division I conferences, guidance counselors of all public, private and parochial high schools, and athletics directors at junior colleges—sells for $10.

The operating manuals contain specific operating bylaws (extracted from the "master" Manual) for Division I, Division II or Division III members that relate to the primary responsibilities of coaches, athletics administrators and others involved in the day-to-day application of NCAA regulations. Cost of an operating manual is $7.

NCAA Men's and Women's Soccer Rules sells for $3.

The publications can be ordered by contacting the NCAA circulation staff, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422; telephone 913/339-1900.

Cash awards adopted by USOC

American Olympic medalists soon will take home cash as well as glory under an "Operation Gold" program announced June 5 at a meeting of the U.S. Olympic Committee board of directors.

Professional athletes who become Olympians, however, will be expected to direct such awards to specific programs of youth sports development or established inner-city youth programs.

"These programs are designed to reduce the financial burdens of our athletes and their families and allow them to stay in their chosen sport as long as they wish to compete, rather than to drop by the wayside because of the costs of training," said USOC President LeRoy T. Walker.

The unprecedented $7.6 million Operation Gold awards, to be awarded over the next four years, are designed to help U.S. athletes stay in training, give better performances and add medals to the American tally.

Starting in 1994, Olympic gold medalists would receive $15,000, a silver medal would bring $10,000 and a bronze $7,500. Fourth-place finishes, significantly improved performances and top-eight placings in non-Olympic international meets also would be rewarded with up to $5,000 each.

Operation Gold actually began in 1988, when the USOC offered its first direct financial-support program. Between 1988 and 1992, $26 million was allocated. The 1993-96 budget is for $38 million, including the $7.6 million in cash awards.

Denver enhances women's program

The University of Denver has announced plans for the first phase of a women's athletics enhancement program to address gender equity.

The program consists of a supplemental commitment of more than $200,000 for new full-time and part-time coaches for women's sports, recruiting, scholarships, salaries, facilities, and operating and travel expenses budgeted for the 1993-1994 academic year.

"DU is committed to providing equal opportunities for women," Chancellor Daniel L. Ritchie said. "We intend to strengthen our sports programs for women in varsity, club and intramural programs."

Among the Division II school's plans:

- Reallocation of five scholarships to women's programs;
- Appointment of an assistant volleyball coach;
- Appointment of an assistant women's basketball coach;
- Upgrade of women's soccer coach to full-time status;
- Upgrade of women's volleyball coach to full-time status;
- Increased funds allocated to advertising and promotions of women's sports, and
- Increased funds allocated to operating budgets.

"With the active support of our University of Denver constituents, we are working to achieve gender equity without reducing support for existing men's sports programs," said Diane Wendt, associate director of athletics and recreation. Wendt is a member of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force.

commitment to our men's programs," SEC Commissioner Roy F. Kramer told The Associated Press.

League presidents also approved a proposal that recognizes an SEC championship for any sport in which one-third of the league's schools are participating.

Kramer said the rule's purpose is to encourage emerging sports.

The NCAA requires Division I athletics programs to offer a minimum of seven men's and seven women's programs.

"This was a reaction to the proposals that have come out of the NCAA and other groups with regard to gender equity," Kramer said about the new policy, which will go into effect August 1, 1995.

■ Institutional secondary infractions

DIVISION I
How reported	Sport	Citation	Facts	Institutional action	NCAA action
Self-reported	Men's golf	B 13.4.1	Head coach forwarded correspondence to a prospect who had not begun his junior year in high school. Institution used a junior golf association roster to establish his year in school, and the roster contained erroneous information.	Reviewed legislation with coaching staff.	Required institution to caution coaches to verify year in school before contact.
Self-reported	Men's basketball	B 17.3.2.1.2	On one occasion, in conjunction with an approved conditioning class open to all students, an assistant coach conducted drills with members of the team. Coach no longer is at institution.	Coach will review legislation related to such classes and attend compliance sessions if he is employed at another NCAA institution.	No further action.
NCAA inquiry	Women's softball	B 10.1, 13.12.1 and 14.1.6.1	On several occasions, a prospect practiced with the team. In addition, when initially questioned about the practice, several team members denied that she did, but later admitted that the prospect did practice with the team. Coach, prospect and student-athletes no longer are at the institution.	Coach's employment was terminated, and institution will review enrollment status of those individuals who participated in the practices.	Required institution to instruct compliance officer to spot-check enrollment lists with those individuals actually in attendance at practice sessions, and expressed concern regarding the provision of false information by student-athletes.
NCAA inquiry	Men's basketball	B 13.2.1, 16.8.1.2 and 16.12.2.1	Student-athlete was permitted to travel with team and receive room and board on two occasions. Provision of expenses occurred during a period when young man's eligibility was being appealed to NCAA Subcommittee on Eligibility Appeals. In addition, while the young man was a prospect, an assistant coach's wife provided a $10 check to him. Check to prospect was reimbursement for meals he provided to coach's children. Also, assistant coach assisted another student-athlete in securing credit at a local jewelry store. Student-athlete had exhausted his eligibility at time of violation. Both student-athletes no longer are at the university.	Reviewed legislation regarding travel and extra benefits with all coaches, and noted that such legislation applied to family members as well.	Advised institution of concern regarding the nature of the violations and the involvement of the assistant coach.

Young man has withdrawn from the university.	Reviewed requirement to obtain a release to contact a transfer student, and rewrote eligibility questionnaire to include requirement to list every enrollment/sport participation and to provide written explanation of application of NCAA legislation.	Required institution to forfeit two contests it won in which ineligible young man participated and reprimanded involved assistant coach. Young man is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Self-reported	Men's skiing	B 14.1.6.2.2	Student-athlete competed while enrolled in only 10 credits. Young man has exhausted his eligibility.		Required university to forfeit those contests in which young man competed while ineligible; submit documentation of forfeitures, and submit written report regarding changes implemented to avoid occurrence of similar violation.

Ex-Marshall coach receives show-cause relief

Note: Outline letters and numerals used in the introduction correspond with those found in Infractions Report No. 38.

I. Introduction.

On March 10, 1990, the NCAA Committee on Infractions issued Infractions Report No. 38 regarding Marshall University, Huntington, West Virginia. The findings included violations involving Rick Huckabay, a former head men's basketball coach at that institution. Specifically, the committee found as follows:

B. [NCAA Constitution 2.1.1, and Bylaws 13.2.2 and 16.12.2]

On several occasions during the period October 1986 to May 1989, several prospective and enrolled student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball resided in the homes of representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young men; further, in some instances, members of the men's basketball coaching staff were aware that these representatives lodged student-athletes, and the staff members failed to take affirmative action to ensure compliance with NCAA legislation, and finally, on at least one occasion, a representative provided small cash loans to a student-athlete and bought gas for the young man's automobile. Specifically:

3. During the period October to December 1986, a student-athlete who was a 2.000 grade-point average nonqualifier resided in the home of two representatives of the university's athletics interests at no cost to the young man; further, the then men's head basketball coach [Rick Huckabay] discussed the lodging arrangement with the family.

C. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3]

One weekend, during the 1986-87 basketball season, the then men's head basketball coach [Huckabay] paid lodging and expenses at a local hotel on behalf of the family of a student-athlete.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.3]

During the 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88, and 1988-89 academic years, the then men's head basketball coach [Huckabay] provided various gifts to student-athletes in the sport of men's basketball. Specifically:

1. At Christmas and on several other occasions during the period 1985 through 1989, the then head coach [Huckabay] provided gifts to several student-athletes, including $50 cash on two occasions, a satin university jacket ($19), a university corduroy jacket ($28.50), a university warm-up suit sweat shirt ($15.50) and a warm-up suit ($50.00); further, the sources of these funds was an individual who provided the money to the then head coach [Huckabay] without realizing it would be distributed to the student-athletes.

2. During the 1984-85 basketball season, the then head coach [Huckabay] ordered gold charms for all 15 members of the men's basketball team; further, a local jeweler designed the charms and donated them to the then head coach; further, the then head coach ordered additional charms for three new members of the 1985-86 team and five new members of the 1986-87 team.

I. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01 and 10.01.1]

A former men's head basketball coach [Huckabay] acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics in that the former coach demonstrated a knowing and willful effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation by his involvement in the violations in this report.

J. [NCAA Constitution 2.1.1 and 2.5.1]

During the period in which the violations in this case occurred, the university did not maintain proper institutional control over its men's basketball program in that there: (1) was no consistent monitoring of the program by the athletics department administrative staff; (2) was insufficient control of the "foster parent" program and no evidence to indicate that such a program was specifically discontinued after the prohibition of such programs in 1986, and (3) were insufficient rules and compliance programs in place to properly educate the athletics staff. Finally, the manner in which the former men's head basketball coach [Huckabay] operated the program was outside institutional control.

As a result of these findings, including that Huckabay acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct as set forth in Bylaws 10.1-(c) and 19.01.1, the Committee on Infractions determined that if Huckabay was employed by any NCAA institution in an athletically related position during a five-year period (March 12, 1990 to March 12, 1995), he and that institution must appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether the member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1).

On April 5, 1993, Huckabay wrote to the committee requesting that the show-cause requirement be terminated April 30, 1993, instead of March 12, 1995. Huckabay appeared before the committee May 2, 1993, and asked that the committee consider his present position and responsibilities, his efforts to familiarize himself with NCAA legislation, and the severe financial detriment suffered as a result of the restrictions imposed by the penalty.

II. Decision of the Committee on Infractions.

In making its decision, the Committee on Infractions considered, among other things, the following:

A. Huckabay resigned his position at Marshall University in the summer of 1989, approximately nine months before the committee issued the infractions report.

B. Huckabay has been serving as head basketball coach and health teacher in the public school system of the state of Ohio where he also has been actively involved in community antidrug and antialcohol programs.

C. Huckabay has acknowledged his participation in the violations.

D. Huckabay had no record of NCAA violations before the incidents that led to the imposition of sanctions.

E. Huckabay has satisfied the committee that, during the intervening period since the issuance of the show-cause proceeding, he has become fully cognizant of the seriousness of his past actions. He also has taken special efforts to fully acquaint himself with NCAA legislation and his responsibilities and obligations thereunder in an effort to ensure that his actions in the future will be in full compliance with the rules.

The Committee on Infractions, therefore, determined that the initial five-year period requiring any member institution that employs Huckabay in an athletically related capacity to appear before the Committee on Infractions to show cause shall be amended to apply only through May 3, 1993. Thereafter, any member institution can employ Huckabay without having to appear before the committee and without restriction.

NCAA COMMITTEE ON INFRACTIONS

Show-cause order terminated in assistant's case

Note: Outline letters and numerals used in the introduction correspond with those found in Infractions Report No. 69.

I. Introduction.

On November 18, 1991, the NCAA Committee on Infractions issued Infractions Report No. 69 regarding Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama. The findings included several violations involving Ralph Radford, a former men's assistant basketball coach at that institution. Specifically, the committee found as follows:

A. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2.1]

During the summer of 1989, an assistant men's basketball coach [Ralph Radford] offered to assist a prospective student-athlete in arranging an automobile loan. Specifically, the coach telephoned the prospect on several occasions at the young man's residence and conveyed information the prospect reasonably could have understood to be an offer that he would be assisted in receiving an automobile loan upon his enrollment at the university.

B. [NCAA Bylaws 13.01.5.1, 13.02.4.2, 13.1.2.1, 13.1.3, 13.1.4-(b), 13.1.2.4-(d) and 19.01.1]

During the summer of 1989 and the 1989-90 academic year, during the recruitment of a prospective student-athlete, the head men's basketball coach, two assistant men's basketball coaches [Ralph Radford and...] and two representatives of the institution's athletics interests violated NCAA legislation regarding recruiting contacts with a prospective student-athlete. Specifically:

1. In July 1989, one assistant coach [Radford] personally contacted the prospect off campus for recruiting purposes before the permissible contact period during the young man's senior year of high school. This contact occurred near the home of the prospect's girlfriend. Present during this contact were two representatives of the institution's athletics interests.

2. During the 1989-90 academic year, the head coach and the assistant coaches [Radford and...] personally contacted the prospect or members of his family off campus for recruiting purposes on more than the permissible three occasions at sites other than the young man's educational institution.

3. During the fall of 1989, a representative of the institution's athletics interests made numerous impermissible contacts with the prospect at the request and direction of one of the assistant coaches [Radford]. Throughout the young man's recruitment by the institution, the representative assisted the assistant coach in the recruitment of the young man by relaying telephone messages from the assistant coach to the prospect since the young man did not have a telephone. On November 8, 1989, before 8 a.m., on the first day and time a prospect was allowed to sign a National Letter of Intent, at the direction of the assistant coach, the representative went to the prospect's home to obtain the National Letter of Intent that previously had been forwarded to the young man. He observed the prospect sign the letter and then took the letter to a local service station where he provided it to the assistant coach. At that time, the assistant coach requested that the representative return the National Letter of Intent to the prospect's home and have the number seven indicating 7 a.m. changed to an eight in order that the signed letter would conform with National-Letter-of-Intent procedures. In appreciation of the representative's efforts, the assistant coach provided a pair of basketball shoes to the representative.

E. [NCAA Bylaw 13.2-(a)]

During the period July through November 1989, while recruiting a prospective student athlete, an assistant men's basketball coach [Radford] made an offer of employment to the young man's mother. Specifically, during November 1989, during a telephone conversation with the young man's mother, the assistant coach told the prospect's mother that after the young man had signed his letter of intent, the university had people who could get her a job closer to home, which the prospect's mother then interpreted as an offer of employment.

G. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1 and 10.1-(c)] An assistant men's basketball coach [Radford] acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards normally associated with the conduct and administration of intercollegiate athletics. Specifically, the assistant coach demonstrated a knowing effort on his part to operate the university's intercollegiate men's basketball program contrary to the requirements and provisions of NCAA legislation by his involvement in the overall violations as set forth in this report.

L. [NCAA Bylaws 30.3.3 and 30.3.5]

The institution's certification of compliance forms for the 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 academic years were erroneous based upon the findings of violations in this report, which indicate that the institution's men's basketball and men's tennis programs were not in compliance with NCAA legislation in that the head men's basketball coach, two assistant men's basketball coaches [...and Radford], the head men's tennis coach and an assistant men's tennis coach attested on statements filed with the chief executive office of the institution that they had reported to the chief executive officer their knowledge of and involvement in any NCAA violations involving the institutions when, in fact, they had not done so. Specifically:

3. For the 1989-90 academic year, the assistant basketball coaches [Radford and...] attested on May 14, 1990, and the head basketball coach and the head tennis coach attested on May 15, 1990. The institution's certification of compliance form undergraduate degree and have been accepted into an institution's sports administration program or a related program that will assist the applicant in obtaining a career in athletics.

Criteria

To have been considered for a postgraduate scholarship, the recipients had to express an interest in preparing for a professional career in administration of athletics and had to show their involvement in extracurricular activities. The recipients also must be entering the first semester or term of their postgraduate studies and must have performed with distinction as student-body members at their respective undergraduate institutions.

The scholarships are for one year only and are valued at $6,000.

Five alternates have been named if one of the recipients is unable to accept the scholarship. They are Susan P. Grenfell, Humboldt State University; Lisa M. Wylie, Northern Arizona University; Andrea L. Magyar, Augustana College (Illinois); Stacey L. Hall, Springfield College, and Jennifer L. Jones, San Francisco State University.

Following are biographical sketches of recipients of the 1993 scholarships (including the institution awarding the undergraduate degree and, if different, the institution where the postgraduate scholarship likely will be used).

Robin K. Frierson (University of South Florida; University of Florida)—Frierson received a bachelor's degree in sociology in 1984, a master's degree in guidance and counseling in 1988, and a certification in educational administration in 1991. She has spent the last five years as a counselor at Plant City High School. She was the girls' soccer coach at Plant City High School from 1985 through 1990 and was named Hillsborough County coach of the year in 1990. She is a volunteer with several organizations, including the Special Olympics. She plans to obtain a master's degree in sports administration.

Renee S. Reed (Dartmouth College; undecided)—Reed graduated with a bachelor's degree in sociology and studio art. She was selected to both the 1992 all-Ivy Group basketball and all-Ivy Group academic teams. She was a four-year member of Dartmouth's basketball team and was captain of the squad her senior year. She also participated in track. She was recognized this year as the woman at Dartmouth "who best combines proficiency in athletics with dedication to the furthering of women's sports." Reed hopes to pursue a career in coaching intercollegiate basketball.

Kiri I. Johnson (South Dakota State University; undecided)—A May 1993 graduate with a degree in sociology, Johnson excelled for South Dakota State in cross country and indoor and outdoor track. She was a four-time all-American in cross country and was the Midwest region's individual champion in 1991. In track, Johnson was a Division II qualifier for three years and was an all-American in the 10,000-meter run in 1992. She has been a senator in the South Dakota State student government and a youth group program director. Johnson plans to obtain a postgraduate degree in law.

Ann Marie C. Finchum [Bethany College (West Virginia); Harvard University]—Finchum received her degree in economics in 1989 and will begin her postgraduate studies in September at the Harvard Business School. While at Bethany, Finchum was a three-time all-Presidents Athletic Conference selection in field hockey and a dean's list member every semester. She was a member of the Gamma Sigma Kappa and Omicron Delta Epsilon honor societies and treasurer of Bethany's Student Board of Governors during her senior year. She has been involved in the Junior Achievement business program since 1989.

Kimberly A. Eddings (Bowling Green State University)—After graduating in May 1992 with a degree in marketing and international business, Eddings decided to pursue graduate work in sports administration at Bowling Green. She was Bowling Green's scholar-athlete of the year in 1991 and the recipient of several Mid-American Athletic Conference academic awards. A four-year member of the women's gymnastics team, Eddings also was a varsity cheerleader in 1992. She has been a volunteer tutor and a gymnastics camp coach coordinator.

Lori A. Hendricks (Mount Holyoke College; Ohio State University)—Hendricks graduated cum laude with a degree in political science in 1992 and will begin her postgraduate work in sports management at Ohio State this fall. While at Mount Holyoke, Hendricks was a standout cross country and indoor and outdoor track and field participant, serving as captain of all three squads. She was active in many student and campus groups, including the Student Board of Admissions, the Student Government and the Career Resource Center.

Heather L. Holter (University of Denver; undecided)—Holter is a 1993 graduate with a degree in finance. As a member of Denver's women's basketball team, Holter finished her career as the school's all-time leader in assists and steals, and she ranks fourth on the career scoring charts. Those numbers earned her all-Colorado Athletic Conference distinction for two seasons. She was a national dean's list member and a three-time member of Beta Gamma Sigma, which recognizes the top five percent of students in business and management. She hopes to pursue a postgraduate degree in sports management.

Amber R. Nicholas (University of Arkansas, Fayetteville)—A December 1992 graduate in kinesiology, Nicholas plans to continue her studies at Arkansas in order to become a physical education instructor and coach. Nicholas was a prolific three-point scorer for Arkansas' women's basketball team, finishing as the Lady Razorbacks' all-time leader in three-point field goals made and attempted. She also topped the career charts in assists and free-throw percentage. She was named a GTE academic all-American and was a member of the Southeastern Conference all-academic team. She was voted Arkansas' NCAA Woman of the Year in 1992.

Karen E. Peters (New Mexico State University; undecided)—Peters received her degree in journalism in May and plans to continue her work in sports administration at either Ohio University or the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Peters worked in the sports information office at New Mexico State, concentrating on baseball and basketball. She also worked at the 1992 NCAA Division I Women's Volleyball Championship at the University of New Mexico and at the 1992 John Hancock Bowl in El Paso, Texas. She was a member of both the dean's list and the university's honors program.

Christina M. Laca (Gonzaga University)—Laca graduated in May with a degree in public relations. While at Gonzaga, she served as a tutor for the men's basketball team and as assistant academic coordinator. A four-year dean's list member, Laca also was active in many campus groups, including the Women's Service Organization, the Gonzaga Public Relations Organization and the Gonzaga Bulldog Ambassadors Program. She plans to pursue her postgraduate degree in sports administration while working as a graduate assistant in Gonzaga's athletics department.

Administrative Committee minutes

Conference No. 9 June 2, 1993

1. Acting for the NCAA Council, the Administrative Committee:

a. Took the following actions regarding committees and committee appointments:
(1) Appointed Robert E. Williams, Swarthmore College, to the Council, replacing William E. Lide, no longer at a Division III institution.

(2) Withdrew the Council's earlier appointment of John David Crow, Texas A&M University, to serve on the Professional Sports Liaison Committee effective September 1, 1993, noting that Crow was appointed specifically to the position earmarked for a Division I-A athletics director and he no longer serves in that capacity.

(3) Appointed Tanya Yvette Hughes, University of Arizona, to the vacant position on the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity earmarked for a second representative of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

b. Reviewed a staff interpretation relating to summer basketball leagues and agreed that the prohibition against institutional employees serving as game officials in such leagues should be limited to athletics department staff members or others with responsibilities relating to the athletics program; directed the staff to propose necessary language to interpret or amend NCAA Bylaw 30.14-(g) accordingly.

c. Took the following actions regarding recommendations by the NCAA Special Events Committee:

(1) Approved the recertification of 18 postseason football bowl games for 1993-

94, as recommended by the committee.

(2) Approved a recommendation that a new postseason contest, the Alamo Bowl in San Antonio, Texas, receive initial certification to be played December 31, 1993.

(3) Placed on the agenda for the August Council meeting the committee's reiteration of its support for the six-victory requirement set forth in Bylaw 30.9.2 and its recommendation that the legislation be amended to specify that a team must have more victories than defeats to meet the definition of "a deserving winning team" and to affirm that tie games do not count in determining a team's won-lost record (that is, a tie cannot be counted as half of a victory or half of a defeat).

(4) Agreed that the Special Events Committee should be assigned oversight responsibilities for any preseason football games authorized under NCAA legislation.

(5) Received a statement by the Special Events Committee expressing its unanimous opposition to any form of a Division I-A football championship and agreed to forward the statement to the Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission, as requested

NACDA/Disney scholarship winners announced

Ten NCAA student-athletes each walked away from the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics/Disney Scholar-Athlete Awards Luncheon June 7 with $5,000 postgraduate scholarships.

The winners, who received their awards at the 28th annual NACDA convention in San Diego, were chosen from a record field of 331 nominees. The scholarships are funded by the Walt Disney Company.

"The Walt Disney Company is proud to fund this imaginative program created by the NACDA Foundation," said Michael Eisner, CEO and chair of the Walt Disney Company. "The accomplishments of these outstanding scholar-athletes from across our nation clearly illustrate that dedication and determination in both athletics and academics can be achieved. We salute and honor each of these young people for their excellence, both on the playing field and in the classroom."

Athletes from all sports are eligible for the awards. Each of the nominees is required to maintain minimum grade-point averages of 3.000 (4.000 scale) and must be named to an all-conference or all-America team.

The winners, with school and GPA, are: David Berardinelli, Bucknell University, 3.800; Dena Anne Evans, University of Virginia, 3.880; Carlton Gray, University of California, Los Angeles, 3.400; James Hansen, University of Colorado, Boulder, 3.910; Karen Jennings, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 3.890; Nnenna Lynch, Villanova University, 3.920; Michael McElrath, U.S. Military Academy, 3.580; Bart Moseman, Wheaton College (Illinois), 3.960; Robert Pelinka, University of Michigan, 3.910, and Lisa Pikalek, Virginia Polytechnic Berardinelli, who plans to pursue a law degree, was a four-year letter-winner in football at Bucknell. In 1991, he was a first-team academic all-American and garnered a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame postgraduate scholarship, and in 1992 he received an NCAA postgraduate scholarship.

Evans, who was a standout on the women's basketball team at Virginia, plans to work for two years before attending either business or law school. She participated in the U.S. Olympic Festival in 1989 and 1990 and was a second-team all-Atlantic Coast Conference selection this past season.

Gray, a four-year letter-winner and starter on the Bruins' football team, was a first-team all-American and academic all-American selection in 1992. In addition to a Today's Top Six award from the NCAA, Gray has won an NCAA postgraduate scholarship and been honored as National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athlete. He plans to continue his studies in the field of broadcasting.

Hansen, a two-year starter in football at Colorado, currently is enrolled in that school's master's program in aerospace engineering. A first-team all-Big Eight Conference selection, Hansen is a Rhodes Scholarship winner, Big Eight postgraduate scholarship winner, NCAA postgraduate scholarship winner, academic all-American and College Football Association scholar-athlete.

Jennings, who is scheduled to complete her bachelor's degree this August at Nebraska, was a four-year letter winner and starter in basketball. Jennings also was a first-team Big Eight all-academic selection and academic all-America of the year and was voted Big Eight player of the year for 1991-92. She plans to attend medical school in the fall.

Lynch, an eight-time all-American and three-time Eastern College Athletic Conference track individual champion from Villanova, will continue her studies at Oxford University in England. She also was a two-time Big East Conference track champion and one-time cross country titlist. Lynch was the 3,000-meter champion at the 1992 NCAA Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships and placed third in NCAA cross country competition.

McElrath was a four-year letter-winner and three-year starter on the football team at Army. A three-time academic all-American, McElrath was an NCAA postgraduate scholarship winner, a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame postgraduate scholarship winner and a CFA scholar-athlete choice in 1992. He has been a regimental and second regimental commander in the academy's corps of cadets.

Moseman, who participated in football and basketball at Wheaton (Illinois), was named first-team all-College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin for football in 1990, 1991 and 1992. In 1992, he received an NCAA postgraduate scholarship and in 1991 he was a second-team academic all-American. He plans to pursue a master's degree in psychology or journalism at Northwestern University.

Pelinka, a four-year letter-winner on the men's basketball team at Michigan and member of the Wolverines' 1988-89 national-championship team, was a three-time Big Ten Conference all-academic selection. In 1992-93, he was the recipient of Michigan's Big Ten Medal of Honor. Pelinka, who has been a volunteer speaker and counselor at Chicago youth camps, plans to attend law school this fall.

Pikalek, who plans to pursue a doctorate in clinical psychology, was a four-year letter-winner and starter in volleyball at Virginia Tech. This year, she was university-division academic all-American of the year and first team academic all-American in volleyball, Virginia Tech's woman of the year, and outstanding senior in the college of arts and sciences. In 1992, Pikalek was named second-team academic all-American and was voted player of the year in Virginia.

Deaths

Corene "Reni" Amoss, a former standout basketball player at Goucher, was killed May 27 in a single-car accident in Kennett Township, Pennsylvania. She was 21. Police said that Amoss was driving at a high rate of speed when she apparently lost control and struck a tree. A female passenger was injured in the accident. Amoss, who graduated May 14, competed in field hockey, tennis and basketball. She finished her career with 2,220 points, the most for any woman college basketball player in the history of the state of Maryland.

Bobby Joe Green, who compiled a 42.6-yard punt average as Florida's punter in the late 1950s, died recently of a heart attack. He was 57. For the past four years, Green ran a specialty advertising business. He served as kicking coach at Florida from 1979 to 1989. He enjoyed a 14-year professional football career with Pittsburgh and Chicago and still holds the record for the longest punt at Florida.

Radford

for the 1989-90 academic year was incomplete in that the assistant men's tennis coach did not sign the form.

Without intent to do so, the president erroneously certified July 29, 1988; August 15, 1989, and August 23, 1990, that the university was in compliance with NCAA legislation for the 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 academic years because of the false information provided to him by the head basketball coach, two assistant basketball coaches [Radford and ...], the head tennis coach and the assistant tennis coach.

As a result of these findings, including that Radford acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct as set forth in Bylaws 10.1-(c) and 19.01.1, the Committee on Infractions determined that if Radford was employed by any other NCAA institution in an athletically related position during a two-year period (November 18, 1991, to November 18, 1993), he and that institution must appear before the Committee on Infractions in order for the committee to consider whether the member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of Bylaw 19.4.2.1-(1).

On April 7, 1993, Radford submitted a request to the Committee on Infractions asking that the show-cause requirement be terminated April 1, 1993, instead of November 4, 1993. Radford appeared before the committee, at his expense, May 2, 1993, and asked that the committee consider in making its determination that, because of the summer and fall recruiting season for basketball, a vast majority of basketball coaching positions are filled in the late spring or early summer of each year. Radford contended that because of these hiring practices, the November 18, 1993, termination date for the show-cause penalty would actually impose a three-year penalty rather than the two-year penalty intended by the committee.

II. Decision of the Committee on Infractions.

In making its decision, the Committee on Infractions considered, among other things, the following:

A. Radford's salary was frozen from March 6, 1991, until July 14, 1992.

B. Radford was reprimanded, censured and, effective August 31, 1991, was reassigned to a position in the university that did not include duties and responsibilities involving contact by him with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year. The institution required him, during the period of reassignment, to attend all NCAA Southeastern Conference and institutional rules and procedures seminars and workshops conducted for members of the athletics department.

C. Radford acknowledged his participation in the violations and cooperated completely during the investigation.

D. Radford's position at Auburn will be terminated effective August 31, 1993.

E. Radford had no record of NCAA violations before the incidents that led to the imposition of sanctions and has not been involved in any subsequent violations.

F. The two-year period wherein the member institution that employs Radford may be subject to a show-cause proceeding until November 18, 1993, did, as a practical matter, extend the effect of the penalty until the spring of 1994.

The Committee on Infractions, therefore, determined that the initial two-year period requiring any member institution that employs Radford in an athletically related capacity to appear before the Committee on Infractions to show cause shall be amended to apply only through May 3, 1993. Thereafter, any member institution can employ Radford without having to appear before the committee and without restriction.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

National Collegiate Athletic Association

The National Collegiate Athletic Association invites applications and nominations for the position of executive director, the chief administrative officer of the Association. The individual selected will succeed Richard D. Schultz, the current executive director. In order to provide an appropriate period of transition, the date for appointment as executive director will be established by mutual agreement.

The NCAA, founded in 1906, is a voluntary, national membership association of approximately 865 accredited, four-year, degree-granting institutions as active members, and 200 other institutions, conferences and affiliated organizations in other classes of membership. The NCAA provides a national governance structure for intercollegiate athletics and is the organization through which member colleges and universities act on and regulate athletics matters at the national level. The basic purpose of the Association is to maintain intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of the program of higher education. The organization's national office is located in Overland Park, Kansas, a suburb of Kansas City, Missouri.

Responsibilities:

To provide creative and dynamic leadership in maintaining intercollegiate athletics as an integral part of higher education so that students may have opportunities to compete in amateur sports in the proper educational context.

To articulate, in appropriate forums of constituency groups and to the general public, the key issues of intercollegiate athletics and the role and activities of the NCAA in addressing these issues.

To provide periodic reports and analyses on subjects of interest and concern to the membership, and to recommend to the Association's Presidents Commission, Council and Executive Committee courses of action designed to achieve the Association's objectives.

To employ and supervise the national office staff, currently approximately 230 people organized into four groups: administration and finance, championships and event management, membership services and public affairs.

To oversee the activities of the national office staff in implementing the decisions made by the membership at the annual Convention and, in the interim between Conventions, the directives of the Council, Executive Committee and Presidents Commission.

To direct and supervise the preparation of the Association's annual operating budget and the management of the Association's financial affairs.

Qualifications:

Evidence of an understanding of and appreciation for the values and purposes of higher education and the role of intercollegiate athletics as an integral part thereof.

A record of responsible, high-level administrative experience in intercollegiate athletics, higher education, association management or a comparable, related area.

Demonstrated competence in program and budget planning, management and evaluation.

Demonstrated interpersonal skills necessary to relate effectively to members of the Presidents Commission, Council, Executive Committee and Joint Policy Board, to other leaders in higher education and athletics, and to the public at large.

Evidence of well-developed political instincts and skills necessary to achieve consensus in, and to manage an organization with, diverse constituencies.

Demonstrated communication skills, including not only personal written and oral communication abilities, but also the talent to promote development of similar skills in those areas by members of the national office staff.

Evidence of high standards of personal and professional integrity.

Familiarity with the history, contributions and problems of intercollegiate athletics and with the history, accomplishments, purposes, services and procedures of the NCAA is desirable but not mandatory.

Those expressing an interest in the position should include a current resume and a letter of application with the names, addresses and telephone numbers of three references. The process of consideration will begin by July 15.

Nominations and expressions of interest should be sent to:

Joseph N. Crowley, Chair
NCAA Executive Director Search Committee
6201 College Boulevard
Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422

1993 Column No. 23

NCAA Bylaw 17.3.5.2

Annual exemptions—Division II basketball

During its April 19-21, 1993, meeting, the NCAA Council used the provisions of NCAA Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to amend the provisions of Bylaw 17.3.5.2 (effective August 1, 1993) to permit Division II institutions to exempt annually from the maximum number of basketball contests a home exhibition contest against a foreign team and a home exhibition contest against a USA Basketball club team.

Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1

Enrolled student-athletes—summer financial aid (Division I only)

Division I institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1 (enrolled student-athletes), subsequent to initial full-time enrollment during a regular academic year, a student-athlete may not receive athletically related financial aid to attend the institution's summer term or summer school unless the student-athlete received such athletically related aid from that institution during the student-athlete's previous academic year (as opposed to the institution's previous academic year). Therefore, a student-athlete who attended a member institution during the 1991-92 academic year, but did not attend the institution during the 1992-93 academic year, would be permitted to receive athletically related financial aid during the 1993 summer term. In addition, such aid may be awarded only in proportion to the amount of athletically related financial aid received by the student-athlete during the student-athlete's previous academic year.

During its April 26, 1991, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that an institution that awards athletically related financial aid to a student-athlete who received athletically related aid during the previous academic year to attend the institution's summer term may award the financial aid on an element-by-element (i.e., tuition and fees, room and board, books) or equivalency (i.e., countable aid) basis. For example, a student-athlete who is enrolled as a full-time student for the entire academic year and receives a full athletics grant-in-aid for only one of the institution's terms would not be entitled to receive a full athletics grant-in-aid for the institution's summer term. Such a student-athlete would be entitled to receive only 50 percent of the student-athlete's actual educational expenses to attend the institution's summer term. Similarly, a student-athlete who is enrolled as a full-time student during the entire academic year and receives athletically related aid covering tuition and fees during the institution's first semester and no athletically related financial aid for the institution's second semester would be entitled to receive athletically related aid to cover one-half of the student-athlete's actual cost of tuition and fees for the institution's summer term, or athletically related aid based on the student-athlete's equivalency value for the entire academic year to cover actual educational expenses for the summer term.

In addition, in accordance with Bylaw 15.2.7.1.1.3 (Pell Grant reduction), if an institution provides a student-athlete with a full athletics grant during the academic year, but is required to reduce the grant in accordance with Bylaw 15.1.3 (reduction when excess aid is awarded) because the student-athlete is receiving additional Pell Grant or other noninstitutional assistance, the institution may provide the student-athlete full athletically related financial aid to attend the institution's summer term.

Further, a nonqualifier or partial qualifier may receive athletically related financial aid to attend an institution's summer term or summer school after the first academic year in residence under the following conditions:

1. The student athlete has satisfied the NCAA satisfactory-progress requirements and, thus, would be eligible for competition for the succeeding year (i.e., the student-athlete must have successfully completed 24 semester hours or 36 quarter hours during the previous academic year and have a grade-point average that places the student-athlete in good academic standing at the institution);

2. The student-athlete has been awarded athletically related financial aid for the succeeding academic year, and

3. The student-athlete receives athletically related financial aid to attend the institution's summer term or summer school only in proportion to the amount of athletically related financial aid the student will receive for the succeeding year.

Finally, once a student-athlete has exhausted his or her eligibility, an institution may award financial aid to attend the institution's summer term or sessions that exceeds the proportion of athletically related aid received by the student-athlete during the previous academic year, provided the student-athlete is enrolled in courses that will allow the student-athlete to complete his or her degree requirements at the conclusion of that summer term.

States

Legislatures taking an increased interest in gender-equity debate

to comply with this measure no later than the beginning of the 1998-99 academic year.

In addition to requiring a report to the state legislature on progress made toward providing comparable incentives and encouragement for female participation in athletics, Hart's measure would require trustees of the system to include in that report a description of efforts being made and the extent to which compliance has been achieved.

The bill calls for the first expanded report, pertaining to the 1994-95 academic year, to be completed no later than November 30, 1995. It also would require trustees to create a gender-equity committee to prepare the annual report.

'Deal with participation'

"The reason for the bill is that we're trying to develop what we think will move us closer to compliance with Title IX," Hart said. "It's very simple and straightforward. It's my feeling that if we deal with the issue of participation, the others (such as male/female athletics expenditures) will take care of themselves."

Hart said he believes the bill has the general support of the California State University system. However, Hart said some athletics directors may not be happy with the proposal.

Lee A. McElroy, athletics director at California State University, Sacramento, said he has few reservations about the bill, but he added that requiring institutions to adjust sports-participation numbers in a short time may be difficult for some.

■ California State Sen. Gary K. Hart

"If we have to go by the strict letter of the bill, that can be a strain," said McElroy, who sits on the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification. "If an institution, for example, has only 15 percent (women's participation), and has had that number for a long time, then it might be hard for them to get that number up. I think it's important that there be a phase-in."

"The (California State) system is doing everything it can, in my view. We have made a concerted effort to address the issues. If (the states) are going to clean it up, then they must do it the right way."

Enforcement in Florida

In Florida, House Bill 899 essentially added enforcement language to an already existing state gender-equity law—the Florida Educational Equity Act.

The law now requires, among other things, that the state's Office of Equal Educational Opportunity in the Department of Education coordinate a newly formed task force on gender equity. By July 1994, the task force is charged with defining gender equity in athletics at all levels of public education and recommending to the Florida commissioner of education rules for appropriate enforcement.

The law also calls for each institution to develop its own gender-equity plan, and holds the institution accountable for that plan. The plan is to include consideration of equity in sports offerings; participation; availability of facilities; scholarship offerings, and funds allocated for administration, recruitment, comparable coaching, publication and promotion, and other support costs.

But perhaps the strongest section of the new law is the provision declaring state universities found not in compliance with Title IX and the Florida Educational Equity Act ineligible for competitive state grants and subjecting them to the withholding of state funds.

Legislator concerned

Mary Ellen Hawkins, a Republican representative in Florida's 76th district (Naples, Golden Gate, Marco Island), said she was concerned that there was nothing on the state books to penalize institutions that did not comply with the Florida Educational Equity Act, which was passed in 1984.

"There was no language written into the act to enforce it," Hawkins said. "So we said that money will be withheld. That gets their attention. I don't think it will be necessary to do that, though."

Some Florida athletics officials do not believe that will be necessary, either, because policies currently are in place at the state level to ensure that institutions comply with Title IX and the Florida act.

"I feel we have made equitable efforts," said Florida State University athletics director Bob Goin. "But I hope sanity reigns. My point all along (has been) that we go through the test every year."

Barbara Sparks McGlinchey, associate athletics director at the University of South Florida, said she believes the new law will help improve state institutions' gender-equity efforts. She said she particularly supports the provision requiring institutions themselves to create the gender-equity plans to which they will be held by the state.

"I think it will help us progress," McGlinchey said. "I think the plan to have each institution come up with its own plan is good. We will be evaluated against that plan. I think (the state of) Florida is probably a forerunner in the nation on this."

Concerned constituents

Hawkins said she proposed House Bill 899 because of strong concerns voiced by constituents and as a result of her frustration with the status quo.

In particular, the use of slow-pitch rather than fast-pitch softball at the high-school level played a role in Hawkins' introduction of the legislation. Many high-school districts were not offering girls an opportunity to play fast-pitch, which is the version sponsored by NCAA institutions. Complaints arose that many Florida high-school softball players were passed up for scholarships because they had little or no fast-pitch experience to bring to a college team.

"My constituents rounded me up on this," she said. "I am a person who gets upset when I see a total inequity this way."

Nominations for woman of the year due soon

Nominations for the third annual NCAA Woman of the Year Award are due from institutions by June 15.

Divisions I, II and III institutions are encouraged to nominate women from their campuses for the award, presented by Champion.

The program honors winners at the institutional, state and national levels on the bases of academics, athletics and community-service criteria.

At the state level, recipients' institutions receive $5,000 each for women's programs. Additional awards of $5,000 each are presented to the institutions of 10 national finalists and again to the institution of the national award winner.

State winners will be announced in July, and the 10 national finalists will be announced in September. The national winner will be named in November.

Last year's winner was Catherine Byrne of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. The 14-time all-American swimmer had a 3.880 grade-point average (4.000 scale) and donated hundreds of hours to local community service.

Institutional nominations must be mailed by June 15 to the NCAA, 6201 College Boulevard, Overland Park, Kansas 66211-2422.

Further information about the program is available from Dianne Dickerson at Host Communications, telephone 606/253-3230.
