Task force endorses Federal Title IX standards

The final report of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force will endorse current Federal regulations implementing Title IX and will state that the ultimate goal of intercollegiate athletics programs should be participation rates for male and female students that are substantially proportionate to their respective undergraduate enrollments.

The task force, which met June 30-July 1 in Kansas City, Missouri, considered recommendations from the NCAA Presidents Commission in working toward the final report, which will be provided to the NCAA Council when it meets August 4-6 in Avon, Colorado.

The report will support the findings announced in Cohen v. Brown University, in which a United States court of appeals determined that:

- Substantial proportionality is the safe-harbor test for Title IX compliance, and
- In cases where substantial proportionality has not been achieved, a continuing practice of program expansion for women or a clear demonstration that women's athletics interests are being fully served may satisfy Title IX requirements.

The task force also will recommend that institutions whose self-studies show gender-based disparities should develop specific plans to bring them into compliance with Title IX and move toward gender equity.

The revised report also will mention the importance of generating and maintaining the financial resources necessary to support and enhance participation opportunities for women. Specifically, the task force will note that football and men's basketball have historically—and disproportionately—filled that role. That fact cannot set those programs outside gender-equity considerations, the report will note, but at some institutions, maintaining the revenue-generating capacity of football and men's basketball and increasing the revenue-generating

Commission acts on gender equity, finance proposals

The NCAA Presidents Commission took action on recommendations regarding gender equity and financial conditions in athletics during its summer meeting June 29-30 in Kansas City, Missouri, but took no specific action on the concept of a Division I-A football championship.

The group also made several decisions regarding the procedures it will use in preparing for the 1994 NCAA Convention.

Highlighting the meeting were:

- Adoption of a position paper suggesting various approaches to be considered by the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force in formulating the final task force report (see story on the task force report elsewhere on this page).

■ Decisions to sponsor legislation at the 1994 Convention to implement some, but not all, of the recommendations set forth by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics.

■ A presentation suggesting a Division I-A football playoff, with no action taken except a general agreement to consider the concept of a playoff.

The Commission's position paper on gender-equity matters was adopted after a morning-long workshop June 29 on those issues, as well as the financial-conditions

NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force cochairs James J. Whalen of Ithaca College and Phyllis L. Howlett of the Big Ten Conference discussed the task force's work June 29 with members of the NCAA Presidents Commission. The Commission suggested approaches to formulating the task force's final report.

Liaison panel hears first presentations

The NCAA Presidents Commission Liaison Committee, established earlier this year to provide a more effective means of communication between constituent groups and the Commission, entertained its first appearances June 30-July 1 in Kansas City, Missouri.

Membership proposals drop to 68

NCAA member institutions and conferences properly submitted 68 proposals for the 1994 NCAA Convention in San Antonio—a number that is down sharply from the last two years.

In those years, member institutions and conferences properly submitted 108 proposals for the 1993 Convention and 98 for the 1992 Convention.

The deadline for proposals from the membership was 5 p.m. July 1. Ninety-eight proposals were submitted, but 30 were not acceptable because of a lack of sufficient sponsorship or because they were not submitted in the proper form.

More than a third of the properly submitted proposals, 29, dealt with playing and practice seasons as outlined in NCAA Bylaw 17. That represents 43 percent of the proposals, somewhat more than last year when 36 percent (36 of 99) were directed at the same topic.

In the NCAA legislative calendar, no new proposals can be sub-

Executive director

Search committee sets next meeting

The search committee created to recommend candidates to replace Executive Director Richard D. Schultz will meet for the third time August 10 in Avon, Colorado.

The committee has retained the services of a firm that specializes in executive searches to provide administrative aid (see story, page 3).

To date, the committee has received 135 applications and 10 nominations for the position, which became available when Schultz resigned May 11.

NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley chairs the committee, which also includes the three division vice-presidents, four other members of the NCAA Executive Committee and four members of the Presidents Commission.

For more detail, see the June 2, May 26 and May 12 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: Patricia E. Bork.

Next meeting: August 10 in Avon, Colorado.

Rules federation

Committee examines appropriate bylaws

The special committee charged with examining rules federation reviewed the rationale of current NCAA bylaws regarding recruiting, eligibility, amateurism, and playing and practice seasons when it met June 28 in Kansas City, Missouri.

A review of that meeting appears on page 3 of this issue.

No formal recommendations were made by the committee, which will issue a report to the 1994 Convention.

Staff contact: Stephen R. Morgan.

Next meeting: October 25-26 in Chicago.

Gender equity

Task force preparing report for Council

The final report of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force will be submitted to the NCAA Council when the Council meets August 4-6 in Avon, Colorado.

A review of the June 30-July 1 meeting of the task force appears on page 1 of this issue.

The task force presented its preliminary report at the June 29-30 meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission. The preliminary report earlier had been mailed to the membership May 14 and appeared in the May 19 issue of The NCAA News. Hearings at three locations were conducted May 24, 26 and 27. Also, the task force received written comment from those who could not attend any of the hearings.

Staff contacts: Ursula R. Walsh and Stephen A. Malloncc.

Certification

Committee to meet July 22 in Dallas

The next meeting of the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification will be July 22 in Dallas.

At that time, it will review the activities of its five subcommittees and especially those of the scheduling subcommittee, which has developed a tentative schedule for peer-review visits. Chief executive officers of all Division I institutions have received letters asking for reaction to the placement of their institutions in the tentative schedule.

The subcommittee will adjust the schedule based on those reactions and submit it to the full committee, which will consider it at the July meeting. The full committee hopes to announce the schedule early this fall.

Staff contact: John H. Leavens.

Next meeting: July 22 in Dallas.

UCLA topped the country in both total attendance and average home crowd as 29,359 fans attended 15 matches. Brigham Young University was second in both categories.

The year's largest turnout was the crowd of 8,482 that witnessed the championship match at UCLA between the Bruins and California State University, Northridge. More than 4,500 fans attended the semifinal session, also hosted by UCLA.

Three regular-season matches attracted crowds of 3,000 or more, including Ball State University at Indiana University-Purdue University, Fort Wayne, which will host the 1994 championship.

Four recent recipients of United States Volleyball Association start-up grants also ranked in the top 25 in total attendance, led by 1992 recipient University of the Pacific (California), which ranked ninth with 5,875 fans.

■ Briefly in the News

Bowl chair breaks barrier

Although her title is senior vice-president of SunBank of Tampa, Florida, Shirley Ryals has a tremendous interest in athletics. So much so, in fact, that she is breaking down gender barriers just about everywhere she goes.

Ryals recently was named chair of the Hall of Fame Bowl, apparently becoming the first woman to hold such a position in the nearly 100-year history of college bowl games. But just because her resume includes some of the more prominent sports positions in the Tampa Bay area is no reason to pigeonhole her.

"I'm well-rounded," Ryals told the St. Petersburg (Florida) Times. "I'm not just sports."

Ryals has served on the Tampa Sports Authority for seven years (including as chair), she is assisting the area in negotiating for a future Final Four and she is serving as cochair of the area's Super Bowl Task Force that is seeking to bring the game to the city again.

For the moment, however, Ryals is devoting a significant portion of her energies into strengthening marketing and promotional efforts of the January 1 bowl game that features a Big Ten Conference team against an at-large entry.

"I just want to take this bowl to the next level."

Investing in kids

The men's and women's basketball coaches at the University of Texas at Austin—Tom Penders and Jody Conratt, respectively—gave more than 30 college scholarship savings bonds to elementary school children who improved their grades and school work during the past year as part of the June 24 end-of-the-year award celebration for the Neighborhood Longhorn program.

"These scholarship savings bonds are the start of a brighter future for most of the children who receive them," Conratt said. "It is our goal to provide educational opportunities for Austin-area youths who might not get them otherwise."

Texas student-athletes who acted as role models for the students during the past academic year also were on hand to award the scholarships. This spring, the Neighborhood Longhorn program received recognition from Texas Gov. Ann Richards at an awards ceremony honoring the outstanding work the program has done with Austin schools.

The Neighborhood Longhorn program is sponsored by Nations Bank and the Texas Capitol Area Home Builders.

Smoke stops here

Purdue University began no-smoking regulations in August 1991 and recently expanded those bans to include all areas of the athletics department in outdoor locations where arranged or fixed seating is provided for programs and events.

What that means is that smoking no longer will be allowed inside the gates at Ross-Ade Stadium and will be prohibited in seating and aisle areas at the institution's baseball, track and field, and tennis facilities.

"The enforcement of these regulations relies on the thoughtfulness, consideration and cooperation of smokers and nonsmokers for its success," Purdue athletics director Morgan Burke said. "It is the responsibility of all members of the Purdue University community to observe this no-smoking regulation and to direct those who wish to smoke to designated smoking areas."

■ Looking back

5 years ago: Administrators of conferences that receive funds in the NCAA conference-grant program attended a rules-compliance seminar July 19-20, 1988, in Kansas City, Missouri, to receive assistance in establishing compliance programs with a portion of those funds. (The NCAA News, July 20, 1988)

10 years ago: U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White granted July 18, 1983, a stay of a lower-court ruling that would have invalidated the 1982-1985 NCAA Football Television Plan. Subsequently, the College Football Association asked its members to abide by the NCAA plan for the 1983 season rather than risk a midseason disruption. (The NCAA News, July 20, 1983)

20 years ago: The NCAA News reported that the University of California, Santa Barbara, had become the first NCAA University Division institution to feature both a man and a woman in its sports logo. (NCAA News, July 15, 1973)

30 years ago: The new NCAA Long Range Planning Committee, chaired by James K. Sours, faculty athletics representative at the University of Wichita (now Wichita State University), conducted its first meeting July 18-19, 1963, in Kansas City, Missouri. (1963-64 NCAA Yearbook)

■ Fact file

Sports participation—in high-school sports, as well as by male and female adults—is highest in the Great Plains, an area stretching from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri on the East to the eastern edge of the Rockies on the West. Participation by adult males and females is lowest in the South, but the South has the highest per capita production of "elite" athletes of all U.S. geographical regions.

Source: Article in American Demographics magazine by John F. Rooney Jr. and Richard Pillsbury, cited in a trends supplement prepared for the NCAA Committee on Review and Planning.

■ Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancies must be submitted in writing to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than July 21, 1993 (fax number 913/339-0035).

Field Hockey Committee: Replacement for Diane M. Guinan, resigned from Washington College (Maryland). Appointee should be from Division III, preferably from the South field hockey region, and must be an administrator.

Men's Committee on Committees: Replacement for G. Lynn Lashbrook, resigned from the University of Alaska Fairbanks, effective August 1, 1993. Appointee must be from Division II, District 8.

Search assistance arranged

A firm that assists in executive searches has been retained to aid the search committee charged with recommending candidates for a new NCAA executive director.

Heidrick and Struggles, a national firm based in Atlanta, will assist the committee in gathering information and performing reference checks on certain candidates. Heidrick and Struggles also will provide the committee with administrative support as the process progresses.

The committee has begun the process of screening applications and contacting nominees. Currently, the committee has received 135 applications and 40 nominations.

The search became necessary when NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz announced his resignation May 11.

The next meeting of the search committee will be August 10 in Avon, Colorado.

Rules-federation group begins review of rationale for bylaws

A special committee formed to study rules federation by sport has begun reviewing the rationale of current NCAA bylaws regarding recruiting, eligibility, amateurism, and playing and practice seasons in an effort to make them more applicable by sport.

The NCAA Special Committee to Study Rules Federation by Sport met June 28 in Kansas City, Missouri.

"We spent the whole meeting looking at certain bylaws for possible changes," said David B. Keilitz, athletics director at Central Michigan University and chair of the committee. "We spent a lot of time on recruiting bylaws and came up with a plan on what we might want to change or keep in football and men's and women's basketball and what we might want to change and keep for all other sports."

No formal recommendations were made by the committee. Keilitz said the group will make recommendations at its October 25-26 meeting in Chicago and then will develop a report to present to the membership at the 1994 NCAA Convention.

Proposal No. 151, adopted at the 1993 Convention, directed the committee to report to the 1994 Convention about the feasibility of developing legislation on federated rules. If the committee believes federated rules are possible, legislation could be prepared for the 1995 Convention.

The committee opted to broaden the scope of its first meeting April 22 to take a general look at the possibility of permitting institutions to assign sports to national or regional "tiers of emphasis" within divisions.

"We're not abandoning it (the idea of tiers of emphasis)," Keilitz said. "We're just putting it on the back burner."

Formal discussions on the topic of rules federation by sport started two years ago when a group of Division I coaches was assembled to discuss ways to simplify and reduce recruiting rules and make them more applicable by sport. Although football and basketball coaches advocated even more recruiting regulation for their sports, coaches of other team sports and individual sports thought rules were not made with their sports in mind.

For example, the committee discussed the rationale of Bylaw 17.1.5.2, which limits the number of hours a student-athlete may participate in weight-training and conditioning activities during the off-season to eight hours per week.

"Why can't we use that eight hours, or four or six of that eight, for skill development?" Keilitz said. "Then a baseball coach can work

Coaches must speak as one

By Greg Quick
UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

As a relatively young member of the college sports community, I am very concerned about the future of college athletics. The lack of solidarity and the infighting caused by the splintering of the NCAA membership into factions of gender, race and economics are alarming.

The public and private debates now being waged concerning very important issues that will affect the future health of the NCAA membership are being distorted and are losing focus because of disagreements over research methods, semantics, and the use of confusing and distorted statistics. It is time to set aside our petty differences and in our entirety return to being a respected and important component of higher education or risk being legislated into oblivion.

As a football coach, it is hard to suppress the instinct to strike out when threatened with the prospect of others damaging the vehicle by which I might positively affect the development of young people. That vehicle allows me to be a contributing part of one of the finest universities in the world and allows me to provide roof and food for my family. I must suppress my apprehension and join in honest "grass-roots" discourse on my campus aimed not at striking back at those who carry the club of proportionality, but rather at recruiting them back into the club and achieving solidarity for a bright future for all of collegiate sport.

Society will write us off as a nonfunctioning entity and all the positives of sport as we know it may be lost unless we are assertive in our demand that the NCAA membership move forward into a renaissance period—not of reform legislation, but of renewed involvement of the true "guru" of college sport, the coach.

If we expect the administrative powers to use our unique talents, knowledge and expertise to their fullest, we must take responsibility as coaches for developing a positive and unified image on each campus and across the nation. We must discipline ourselves not only to be assertive in moving our own programs forward, but to see ourselves

ADs simmering on a hot seat

Blackie Sherrod, columnist

The Dallas Morning News

"Departures of T Jones and John David Crow from athletics director offices at Texas Tech and Texas A&M (plus the possible move of Grant Teaff from Baylor to the American Football Coaches Association) are yet another reminder that this post is the most thankless on campi.

"Once the AD office was a comfy retirement nest for old football coaches, but now it is a hurricane eye for gender lawsuits, Federal guidelines, recruiting monitors, entrance exams, NCAA attention, scholastic progressions, Title IX mandates, whatever.

"With all these concerns and responsibilities, the office should be the best paid post in the athletics department, but more often it ranks below football and basketball coaches."

Women's opportunities

Sheryl Swoopes, women's basketball player
Texas Tech University

The Washington Post

"People say, if you were a male, you would have gone in the lottery (of the National Basketball Association draft). It's really frustrating to think about it, to think that men have so many more opportunities than women.

"Going overseas and staying in the United States, those are just two totally different things. The NBA, you watch it on television all the time, but you don't hear anything about women playing overseas, unless you know their college coaches and ask them how so-and-so is doing. It's sad and frustrating."

George Lynch, men's basketball player
University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

The Washington Post

"I definitely feel sorry for (Sheryl Swoopes). Guys coming up know there's an NBA career after college. The women know they have to go overseas.

"For me, it would be a disappointment if there was no NBA and I had to sign with a team in Europe. Being an American, you want to stay here and play in front of your family and friends. She can't do that!"

Gender equity

Donna A. Lopiano, executive director
Women's Sports Foundation

USA Today

"The truth is that sports are too important to the physical, psychological and sociological well-being of our children to have it benefit only our sons:

- "As little as two hours of exercise a week reduces a teenage girl's risk of breast cancer, a disease that will afflict one of every eight U.S. women.

- "Girls and women who play sports are more confident, have higher levels of self-esteem, strong self-images and lower levels of depression.

- "Sport is where boys have traditionally learned about teamwork, goal-setting and the pursuit of excellence in performance—critical skills for success in the workplace.

"Gender equity is all about being fair to our children. We will only solve the financial dilemma of providing more opportunities for women in sport if men and women in sport sit down together to decide how to fairly share limited resources, resources that in the past have been invested primarily in men's sports. Sport is one of the most important sociocultural learning experiences in our society. It cannot benefit only our sons."

Robert L. Simon, men's golf coach
Hamilton College

USA Today

"The NCAA (Gender-Equity Task Force) report claims that proportionality is a goal rather than a quota, but is proportional participation by each gender a reasonable goal in a society where nearly twice as many males as females participate in high-school sports and where females on specific campuses might have less interest in participating than males?

"Proportionality advocates might reply that women participate less in athletics than men because they have been discouraged from taking part. This implies that colleges invest significantly on instituting new athletics teams even though women attending college have not shown an interest in participating in such sports.

"It is one thing to divert funds to new sports to meet the interest of actual students but quite another to require creation of sports simply to achieve proportionality. In fact, what is likely to happen, and already might be happening, is that less visible men's sports will be dropped, regardless of their value to the participants, so schools can achieve proportionality without adding women's sports to their program.

"Gender equity in athletics is an important goal. But if the NCAA equates equity with a rigid conception of proportionality, without taking into account relevant gender differences in participation and interest, it risks replacing the search for equity with a mechanical formula that might only generate new inequities."

Conference affiliation

Joe Paterno, head football coach
Pennsylvania State University

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

"It isn't as if we're moving the university to Alaska. I think in the long run, going into the Big Ten Conference will help our recruiting, not only here in the East but everywhere. It has tremendous exposure....

"There are a lot of advantages to being an independent. But you have to look at the big picture, not only for the football program but for the entire athletics program and the university. It all adds up: It's a tremendous move on our part."

Role models

Terry Pendleton, professional baseball player
Columbus (Georgia) Ledger and Enquirer

Discussing Charles Barkley's controversial advertisement in which he said, "I am not a role model. I am not paid to be a role model. I am paid to wreak havoc on the basketball court. Parents should be role models."

"To me, I would say a role model is somebody that is positive, somebody a kid would look up to, to help him grow up and develop. It is someone that the kid could go to at any time with what he's seen or learned and see if it's right or wrong....

"Personally, I don't see anything wrong with the commercial at all. It was surprising to see Charles do a commercial like that. If you sit back and look at it, most parts are true. He's telling it like it is....

"Growing up, I had a lot of heroes, guys that I really liked. But role models for me were at home. My pop was my role model, and he wasn't there half the time. My dad was on the road half the time driving a truck, but when he was there, he was positive.

"He left that strong influence and everlasting influence on me when he was there. It wasn't quantity, it was quality. I think that made quite a difference....

"It bugs me when people always say athletes ought to be role models. I'm not pointing fingers at (the media), but when something negative comes out, that's the first thing everybody wants to jump on. If you want kids to be positive toward athletes, write more positive things than negative. They will pick up more positive than negative if you write more about it."

Letter

Barkley attitude a bad example

Recent statements by Charles Barkley relative to his not being a role model for young people serve as yet another example of the immaturity and social irresponsibility of far too many of today's crop of "me-generation" oriented athletes.

What Barkley fails to understand is that it doesn't matter whether he thinks he is a role model or not. What does matter is that great numbers of youngsters view him that way and, sad to say, will continue to emulate his self-centered behavior in spite of their parents' efforts to educate them to the contrary.

Compliance Assistant offers benefits to conferences

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

When the NCAA national office began to develop the Compliance Assistant software program in 1991, the intent was to provide institutions a program that not only would allow them to track student-athlete information in one place but also would assist them in creating, maintaining and completing forms and records required by NCAA legislation.

To that end, the Compliance Assistant software program has accomplished its goal. Institutional personnel who currently use the program find it beneficial not only in terms of maintaining records but also in applying legislation regarding financial aid, eligibility and recruiting.

Institutions are not the only beneficiaries of the software program, however. Conference offices also can—and do—benefit.

One such conference is the Southland. Several other conferences, including the Southwest, Big South, Midwestern Collegiate, Mid-Continent and Atlantic 10, have invited national office staff members to their summer conference meetings to assist their member institutions in learning the soon-to-be-released version of the software.

The Southland Conference, which was interested in obtaining a software program for its member institutions to help them track and file compliance-related information, opted for the Compliance Assistant.

The conference office was so convinced that the software program would be beneficial that it sent a memo and an agreement to each of its member institutions stating that the conference would supply the hardware needed to implement the program (it currently requires an IBM-compatible computer). Also, it would coordinate training sessions with the NCAA national office staff in exchange for its member institutions agreeing to generate and submit squad lists using the software program.

The institutions took advantage of the offer. To date, half of the institutions already are producing squad lists using the Compliance Assistant, while the other half are on schedule to meet this year's deadline.

Greg Sankey, assistant commissioner for compliance for the Southland Conference, says the biggest benefit the software program provides is uniformity. According to Sankey, several institutions in the Southland Conference had customized their squad-list forms to meet their particular needs before they obtained the software. Because of the differences, it was quite possible for the conference to receive several different squad-list forms. The result: a great amount of time spent by the conference office deciphering each institution's forms.

"The No. 1 benefit to our conference is that everyone does the same thing," Sankey said. "The software allows for uniform application of the rules.... It guarantees that everyone does the calculations the same way. From my perspective, it's a lot easier getting these reports as generated through the program."

Schools benefit, too

While the conference office benefits by receiving Compliance Assistant-generated reports, Sankey says the institutions are the big winners.

"I strongly believe that the software is a benefit to the people on the campuses who use it," he said. "Certainly, we benefit because everyone is on the same page. But it's the people who use it, they're the ones who see the benefits: the time saved, the simplicity and easy access to information. Several (institutions in our conference) were hesitant to begin using it. Once they got in and understood the program, they found it to be beneficial."

George Young, assistant athletics director for compliance at the University of North Texas, a Southland Conference member, knows firsthand the benefits the program provides. One of seven individuals who agreed to assist the national office in testing the new version of the software (Version 3.00) before its release, Young has been using the software program since it became available.

"The biggest improvement with Version 3.00 is that they streamlined it," said Young. "One of the things that discouraged people with the old program was that it looked cumbersome. There were a lot of screens of information... it was awesome to some people. Now, it's streamlined so if you want to produce only a squad list, you can do that. That's the only information you need to fill in."

Compliance Assistant users and potential users will experience such benefits in July when the NCAA national staff makes Version 3.00 available to Divisions I and II institutions. Version 3.00 features several enhancements to the current program, Version 2.04 (see the June 16 issue of The NCAA News).

Brad Cox, assistant compliance coordinator at West Virginia University, also is a frequent user of the current program and a tester of Version 3.00. Cox, who serves on a committee for compliance for the Atlantic 10 Conference, says the conference is in the process of setting up a seminar to showcase the software to representatives from its member institutions.

"We're thinking of providing computers to each institution wanting to take advantage of the program," Cox said. "Although we'd like each institution to use (the program), we'll either do it or not do it as a conference."

Cuts paperwork

Like Sankey, Cox feels the benefits of the software program extend beyond the boundaries of each individual campus. He is especially excited about Version 3.00.

"I've been telling people that this is the best thing to come down the pike in a long time," he said. "What the program does is give people the flexibility to pull out any information they want. A lot of reports that come down the line can be done using this system, as opposed to going through the paperwork. That's what we're really excited about. We hope to tie this system in with our financial aid office, to put it in financial aid so we have more timely access to information. We want to be interactive."

That interaction may soon extend to conference offices as well. The national office staff intends to develop a conference version of the Compliance Assistant software program after the release of Version 3.00. Such a program would enable the conference to link up with each member institution.

That is what Sankey is banking on.

"When we went ahead and purchased the computers for our schools, we did so with the future in mind," he said. "We hope to link our conference office with each campus."

More information about the Compliance Assistant software program can be found in the June 16 issue of the News or is available from Carolyn A. Dias, compliance representative, at 913/339-1906.

Catastrophic-injury insurance materials to be sent

Athletics directors, business managers and trainers soon will receive materials describing the catastrophic-injury insurance coverage provided to all member institutions by the NCAA.

The insurance is underwritten by North American Specialty Insurance Company of Manchester, New Hampshire, a member of the Swiss Re Group, the world's second-largest "reinsurance" group.

This is the second year of a three-year contract between the Association and North American. The current program runs through August 1, 1995.

"This is one of the most important programs that the Association provides to benefit all NCAA student-athletes," NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz said.

The program offers lifetime benefits to student-athletes, student trainers, student managers and cheerleaders who sustain injuries resulting in irrevocable loss of physical or mental capacity while participating in or traveling to or from scheduled games or practices.

In addition to offering lifetime coverage for rehabilitation, medical and dental expenses, the program features a lifetime monthly loss-of-earnings benefit, up to $2,000 a month. The payments begin 12 months after the injury.

This will be the second year that the program has offered a "college education benefit," which provides for a covered student to return to school and complete degree work. The program will pay the cost of attendance, up to $60,000, provided that the student begins studies

Elite hockey players gain coverage

The nation's top collegiate men's ice hockey players now can insure themselves through the Exceptional Student-Athlete Disability Insurance Program against an injury that would limit their future professional earnings.

Under the program, student-athletes at NCAA member institutions who are projected to be chosen in the first round of the National Hockey League draft may be eligible for up to $750,000 in disability coverage.

The program will continue to provide coverage to eligible student-athletes projected to be selected in the first round of the National Basketball Association draft (up to $2.7 million), the first two rounds of the National Football League draft (up to $1.8 million) or the first round of the Major League Baseball draft (up to $900,000).

Currently, the program covers 45 student-athletes—20 in basketball, three in baseball and 22 in football.

Depending upon the type of coverage selected, athletes would receive benefits if an injury or sickness temporarily or permanently prevents participation in the normal activities of their sport. They may apply for one of two types of coverage: permanent total disability (PTD) and temporary total disability (TTD). A qualified student-athlete will be eligible for only one type of coverage.

The PTD coverage, which was added this summer, provides up to five equal installment benefit payments over a 30-month period to a student-athlete who will not be able to participate in his sport for at least three consecutive years. Benefit payments would start six months after the athlete was injured.

Under the TTD coverage, monthly payments would begin one year after the injury occurred and continue for up to 36 months, as long as the athlete remained disabled. To be eligible, a student-athlete must be unable to participate in his stated sport as a professional at that time, not forever.

Both policies provide 24-hour accident and sickness coverage, including injuries sustained while playing or practicing in the respective sport, and a $10,000 accidental-death benefit.

Maximum premiums vary from approximately $5,000 to nearly $25,000, depending on the sport, position played and type of coverage (PTD or TTD) selected.

Through an agreement between the NCAA and United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, student-athletes approved for coverage automatically qualify for a loan—without a cosigner—to pay the premium. The loan, which will be issued at a competitive and set rate, is repaid when the athlete signs a professional contract or when he receives benefits under the policy due to a disabling injury.

Many collegiate athletes attempt to purchase similar coverage on their own but find it difficult to afford, and local banks are reluctant to lend them money without cosigners. By providing this within 15 years of the injury and completes the degree within 15 years of returning to school.

Other benefits include:

- A special-expenses benefit for remodeling or adapting living quarters or vehicles, up to a maxinum of $125,000 during the first decade and $50,000 during the second decade.

- A $50,000 per year home health-care benefit to cover nursing and other daily-living expenses.

- Adjustment expenses of up to $30,000 for such items as family counseling, training and injury-related travel. Included is a loss-of-earnings benefit for the parents of the injured student to compensate for wages lost in the adjustment period after the injury.

- Ancillary injury and sickness benefits of up to $100,000 to help offset the injured person's inability to purchase medical insurance.

- An accidental-death benefit of $10,000.

North American Health Services, an affiliate of the underwriter, provides a 24-hour Catastrophic Injury Help Line to enable injured students to begin receiving proper care as soon as possible (see the March 10, 1993, issue of The NCAA News).

"It's important that we are notified within 24 hours of the injury," said Donna Ugan, manager of case-management services for North American Health Services. "The sooner the individual receives the proper care, the more rapid the recovery is in the long run. It's important to stabilize the injured area, because if it's not (stabilized), further damage can occur."

The help-line number, staffed 24 hours a day by nurses who specialize in dealing with catastrophic-injury cases, is 800/233-6222.

Within the next few weeks, the NCAA will mail documents pertaining to the program, including benefits summaries and claim-procedures booklets. Copies of the policy are available upon request from the NCAA.

Questions about the program should be directed to Michael S. McNeely, director of operations, at the NCAA national office (telephone 913/339-1906, extension 7738).

Competitive-safeguards panel suggests possible drug-testing reductions

The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports evaluated potential areas for drug-testing budget cuts and recommended revisions to the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook at its June 23-25 meeting in Jackson Hole, Wyoming.

The committee proposed to the NCAA Executive Committee a reduction in the number of student-athletes to be tested in the year-round drug-testing program. The Executive Committee had requested at its May meeting recommendations on reducing the Association's drug-testing budget.

Under the proposal, the number of Division I-A and I-AA football players to be tested on campus would be reduced from 24 to 18, and the number of Division I track and field student-athletes would be reduced from 12 to eight. The budget will be reviewed further by the NCAA Budget Subcommittee at its July meeting.

Regarding sports medicine, the committee revised guidelines to be included in the 1993-94 NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook and decided to begin work on two new guidelines. All revisions and new guidelines must be approved by the NCAA Council.

Among the recommended revisions to current guideline 2H, "AIDS and Intercollegiate Athletics," is that its title be changed to "Blood-Borne Pathogens in Intercollegiate Athletics" to reflect more clearly that the information refers to all blood-borne pathogens but specifically HIV and hepatitis B. Other guidelines to be revised include 3A, "Participation by the Impaired Student-Athlete," and 3B, "Participation by the Pregnant Student-Athlete." Work has begun on two new guidelines: "Concussions and Second-Impact Syndrome," and "Burners" (nerve injuries).

The committee also took the following actions:

- Continued to monitor the progress of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity and anticipated that the committee would be called upon sometime this fall to contribute on health and safety issues.

- Named Christine Wells of Arizona State University as the committee's primary liaison to the American College of Sports Medicine.

- Recommended that committee member Chris McGrew, University of New Mexico, accept an invitation to represent the NCAA at a January 1994 meeting sponsored by the American College of Cardiology regarding sudden death in athletes.

- Reviewed and endorsed guidelines on the bleeding rules submitted by most sports committees. Recommended that minor changes be made in the track and field rule.

- Reviewed a video project submitted by a group from the University of Maryland, College Park, regarding Occupational Safety and Health Administration bleeding guidelines in an athletics environment. The committee expressed mild interest in the project but requested more information before fully endorsing the NCAA's participation.

- Reviewed and endorsed the Sports Sciences Education Newsletter that appears quarterly in The NCAA News and said that it is serving its intended purpose.

- Recommended that the Association be represented at the International Conference on Sexual Assault on Campus, which will be held in October. The committee will review a report on that conference at its February 1994 meeting.

- Asked the NCAA staff to investigate the possibility of Association involvement in a public-service announcement on sexual-assault issues.

- Reported that it is waiting to hear reports on cheerleading injuries from Fred Mueller, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and from the Big Ten Conference in June 1994.

Drug-testing and drug-education subcommittee

The drug-testing and drug-education subcommittee of the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports recommended:

- Changes in the drug-testing protocol for championships that start at 9 p.m. or later. Previously, coaches had to declare at the prechampionships meeting when their student-athletes would be tested (the night of the championship or the next morning). With the change, coaches will make that determination immediately after competition.

- Elimination of the checkout requirement at individual championships. Student-athletes now will be notified of their selection for drug testing immediately after competition. If they have another event, they may defer testing until they have completed their final event of the championship.

The subcommittee also:

- Expanded the banned-drug list to include beta-2 agonists, such as clenbuterol. The use of beta-2 agonists is permitted by inhalation only.

- Heard oral presentations from eight labs vying for NCAA drug-testing business. Laboratories will be notified of selection by July 16.

- Added stimulants to NCAA Bylaw 31.2.3.2, "Medical Exceptions."

- Agreed in concept to work with the U.S. Track and Field Association on the possibility of the NCAA honoring that organization's drug-testing findings as they might relate to collegiate eligibility issues.

- Voted to institute a blind quality-control program with NCAA drug-testing laboratories.

- Recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee the implementation of a Division I championships squad list for drug-testing purposes.

- Decided to reduce costs by implementing a pilot program that will use an outside agency for specimen collection at member institutions.

- Approved guidelines for member institutions' proposals for NCAA funding of drug-education programs on their campuses.

- Reviewed 1993 NCAA drug-testing/education survey results.

- Reviewed material on spitting tobacco. The material will be sent to the membership in August.

Sports-sciences research subcommittee

The sports-sciences research subcommittee of the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports:

- Discussed the development of a new long-range planning document. A timetable was set up to develop an outline to present at the February 1994 meeting. The final document is to be presented at the June 1994 meeting.

- Recommended that the NCAA be involved with two pre-Olympic scientific meetings, one of which will be in September 1995 in Atlanta. The other will be held at a site to be determined in the Southeast in 1996.

- Reviewed Injury Surveillance System (ISS) data for all sports. It also evaluated information gathered from discussions with statistical consultants and athletics trainers on enhancing the ISS. From this discussion, the subcommittee came up with these recommendations:

- The ISS should be included in its long-range plan.

- Statistical experts should be consulted to ensure validity of the sampling process.

- The scope of the ISS should be broadened to give more information to its users, which include rules committees, member institutions and athletics trainers.

- The ISS questionnaires should be modified. Two new questions would be added, one dealing with documentation of methods of injury diagnosis and the other monitoring the number of bleeding incidents that occur. The subcommittee also recommended deleting questions dealing with knee and ankle braces and types of shoes worn (because of a lack of exposure data).

- Reemphasized that the definition of an injury for ISS purposes includes restriction of performance.

Regarding nutrition and eating disorders, the subcommittee:

- Reviewed and endorsed the work done by the American College of Sports Medicine on the female athlete triad (disordered eating, amenorrhea and osteoporosis).

- Endorsed the development of a new public-service announcement on nutrition and eating disorders that would be aired during national championships telecasts.

- Reviewed the relative interest of member institutions in a teleconference on nutrition to be produced by Old Dominion University in 1992; noted that this approach may be an effective way of distributing sports-medicine information to the membership in the future.

Regarding other issues, the subcommittee:

- Forwarded additional ideas to the NCAA Research Committee to further simplify the research review process.

- Forwarded a letter to the NCAA Women's Lacrosse Committee expressing continued concern with the issue of face masks and eye protection.

- Endorsed staff attendance at the September meeting of the National Committee for Uniform Sports Injury Surveillance, which is sponsored by the National Institute of Health.

Grant program offers $40,000 for campus participation in NYSP

NCAA grants of $40,000 are available to institutions of higher education for participation in the 1994 National Youth Sports Program.

This program provides summer sports instruction and enhances personal- and social-skills development for youths age 10-16 who reside in low-income families.

Through NYSP, youngsters receive free instruction in a minimum of two sports activities as well as in several areas related to personal development (drug prevention, nutrition, health, career opportunities and job responsibilities). Direct services provided to NYSP participants include a free medical examination, at least one

USDA-approved meal daily, transportation to sponsoring institutions and accident/medical insurance.

All institutions of higher education, including junior and community colleges, are eligible to apply for grant funds. To receive more information, or to receive a grant proposal package, contact Rochelle M. Collins, youth programs coordinator, at the national office.

coverage with automatic loan approval, the NCAA is hoping to help athletes avoid unscrupulous agents who lure top draft choices by promising to pay for disability insurance.

The Federal Insurance Company, a member of the Chubb Group of Insurance Companies, is the insurer of the program and is ultimately responsible for determining who qualifies for coverage. The program is administered by American Specialty Underwriters, which will receive and process student-athletes' applications for coverage.

Brochures describing the program will be mailed later this summer to Division I athletics directors and head football, basketball, baseball and ice hockey coaches. Chairs of career counseling panels and conference commissioners also will receive copies of the brochure.

Initial inquiries about the program and requests for information should be directed to Michael S. McNeely, NCAA director of operations, at 913/339-1906, extension 7738.

mitted by the membership after July 1. Sponsors of the 68 acceptable proposals submitted, before the deadline, however, will be permitted to refine and alter those amendments until September 1 in any manner that is germane to the original submission.

The deadline for proposals from the NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council is August 15.

The membership's proposals are being reviewed by the NCAA Legislative Review Committee July 6-8 in Kansas City, Missouri, and will be included in the Initial Publication of Proposed Legislation, which will be mailed August 1.

Softball committee prepares for expanded brackets

All three women's softball championships will increase in bracket size beginning in 1994, and the three subcommittees of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee spent much of that group's annual meeting mapping out championship details as a result of the expansion.

As a result of the NCAA Executive Committee's action in May, the Division I women's softball field will increase from 20 teams to 32. The Division II bracket will jump from 16 teams to 24. The Division III field will increase from 20 to 24 teams.

Meeting June 21-24 in Hilton Head, South Carolina, the Division I subcommittee of the Women's Softball Committee voted to recommend to the Executive Committee in August a play-in system and a new Women's College World Series format, effective in 1994.

The subcommittee will recommend that eight four-team regionals be played, with the top four teams seeded. The eight regional winners will advance to the Women's College World Series. The 32-team bracket calls for 16 automatic qualifiers and 16 at-large berths to be awarded. Nineteen conferences are eligible for automatic qualification.

The subcommittee will recommend that 13 conferences be given automatic qualification to the championship. The remaining three automatic-qualifier spots would be determined by play-ins among the champions of six conferences.

The play-ins would occur before championship selection and would be a best two-of-three format. The subcommittee will recommend the following matchups: Patriot League at the Ivy League, Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference at the Big South Conference and North Atlantic Conference at the Northeast Conference.

The subcommittee also will recommend that the current championship format be changed to a straight double-elimination tour-

Division I subcommittee

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee took the following actions during its meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina:

- Developed a facility evaluation procedure to be used when selecting sites for regional competition. The guidelines will group sites into three categories—excellent, good and fair.
- Formed a subcommittee to review the current power rating system used for selection purposes.
- Will ask the Executive Committee in May 1994 to change the championship format from Thursday through Monday to Wednesday through Monday. Such a change would guarantee that teams do not have to play more than once each day. The subcommittee also will recommend to the Executive Committee in 1994 that a ratings percentage index be used for selection purposes, beginning with the 1995 championship.
- Will recommend that automatic qualification be granted to the following conferences for the 1994 championship: Atlantic 10, Big East, Big Eight, Big Ten, Big West, Mid-American Athletic, Mid-Continent, Midwestern Collegiate, Missouri Valley, Pacific-10, Southland, Trans America Athletic and Western Athletic.
- Denied the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference's application for automatic qualification because it did not meet the requirements of NCAA Bylaw 31.3.4.2.

Division II subcommittee

The Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee took the following action during its meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina:

- Will recommend that automatic qualification be granted to the following conferences for the 1994 championship: Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic, Northern California Athletic, Pennsylvania State Athletic and the Sunshine State Conferences and the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association. The subcommittee will request that, in light of regionalization, automatic berths be phased out, effective with the 1995 championship.

namment with cross-bracketing after the first round. Bracket winners will advance to one championship game.

The Division II subcommittee will request permission from the Executive Committee to survey the membership regarding new regional alignment, effective with the 1995 season. The subcommittee is exploring the feasibility of requesting an eight-team championship final but will recommend a six-team final if an eight-team final is not possible. Currently, four teams advance to the championship final.

The Division III subcommittee also will request permission to survey the membership regarding realignment of the five regions, effective in 1995. The subcommit-

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 21-24 meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina, the Women's Softball Committee:

- Voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that the NCAA Council be asked to sponsor legislation to restructure the softball committee into three separate committees of six members each. Currently, the softball committee comprises all three divisions. Restructuring would result in a Division I Women's Softball Committee, a Division II Women's Softball Committee and a Division III Women's Softball Committee.
- Discussed a flat fee for officials at the regional and final rounds for all divisions.
- Discussed plans to develop an umpire improvement program similar to the officiating improvement programs sponsored by the NCAA. Upon the recommendation of the Executive Committee, the softball committee will pursue the idea with the Amateur Softball Association with the hope of sponsoring regional officiating clinics in the fall. The softball committee recommended an NCAA umpire improvement program to the Executive Committee in May, but the request was denied.
- Heard a report from the National Softball Coaches Association. The NSCA indicated interest in taking over the Division I top 20 poll, which the NCAA conducts biweekly during the season. The Division I subcommittee supported the idea of the poll being conducted by the coaches association. The NSCA also reported that, beginning in 1994, the all-America teams in each division will be announced during the summer. The softball committee will ask the NSCA to reconsider its decision. Currently, the all-America teams are announced in conjunction with each championship.

Division III subcommittee

The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Women's Softball Committee took the following actions during its meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina:

- Will recommend that automatic qualification be granted to the following conferences for the 1994 championship: Iowa Intercollegiate Athletic, New Jersey Athletic, Ohio Athletic and State University of New York Athletic.
- Voted to recommend that Salem, Virginia, and the Old Dominion Athletic Conference host the 1994 championship.

tee is examining two proposals—a six-region/six-team final and an eight-region/eight-team final.

The subcommittee will institute a sliding scale guaranteeing that each region receives a minimum of three and a maximum of five championship berths if there are six regions. If the eight-region format is approved, regions would be guaranteed a minimum of two berths and a maximum of four.

Scoring system revised for men's gymnastics

Team scores at the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships likely will increase in 1994 due to a change in the base-scoring system.

At its annual meeting June 28-July 1 in Key West, Florida, the NCAA Men's Gymnastics Committee decided to adopt a 9.5 base score for the team finals only, effective in 1994. The individual-event finals base score will remain at 9.0.

Under the base-scoring system, points are awarded to and deducted from a gymnast starting at 9.0. For example, when a gymnast begins a routine, he is automatically awarded a score of 9.0. Any bonus points he may earn are added to the base score; likewise, any deductions are subtracted from the base score.

The decision to use a 9.5 base for the team finals comes only one year after the committee implemented a 9.0 base system. A year ago, the committee adopted the 9.0 base system (a system used internationally) for both the team and individual-event finals. At the time, the committee believed that the 9.0 system would provide for more separation of teams at the championships.

While the 9.0 base did provide more separation, the committee believed that the 9.5 base-scoring system provided enough separation and, in addition, would create a more exciting national-championships meet.

"The coaches felt that there is enough separation in the team finals with a 9.5 base, and that going to a 9.5 base would make for a more exciting meet," said Frederick R. Turoff, men's gymnastics coach at Temple University and chair of the Men's Gymnastics Committee. "(The committee) agreed to adjust the team-final base only. In the event finals, we

In other actions at its June 28-July 1 meeting in Key West, Florida, the Men's Gymnastics Committee:

- Recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that the date formula for the regional and national championships be changed, effective in 1994, as follows: Regional competition will be the first Saturday in April; the national championships will be two weeks later (the third Friday and Saturday in April). In the event of a holiday or if the Final Four and Women's Final Four falls on one of these weekends, the regional and national championships will be conducted one week earlier. If approved, the 1994 regionals will be held April 9, while the national championships will be conducted April 22-23; the 1995 championships will be April 8 (regionals) and April 21-22 (nationals).
- Recommended the following regional championships sites to the Executive Committee for 1994: U.S. Military Academy (East) and University of Oklahoma (West). Also, it recommended the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, as the host site for the 1994 national championships. The committee also noted that the bids still are being accepted for the 1995 regional and national felt gymnasts were better served by having the international scoring standard (9.0 base), which is championships.

■ Voted to limit competitors to one vault at the national championships. Previously, competitors had the option of performing two vaults.

■ Decided that no official inquiries regarding incorrect meet procedure or a judge's evaluation of difficulty, special requirements or bonus will be accepted at the regional championships. Inquiries are not allowed at national championships competition. The inquiry forms will be replaced by a new precompetition judges information form, which is being developed.

■ Discussed combining the men's and women's championships. Noted that one men's committee representative and the head of the coaches association will meet with the NCAA Women's Gymnastics Committee July 7 at its annual meeting in Sun Valley, Idaho.

■ Voted to incorporate a judges evaluation form in the computer rankings system. The evaluation, which would be confidential and accessible only by committee members, would be used by the committee in selecting judges for the regional and national championships. The committee currently evaluates judges on forms sent via mail.

tougher because you have the best individuals on each event"

Currently, men's gymnastics competition uses a 9.5 base-scoring system during regular-season competition.

■ Institutional secondary infractions

In addition to the secondary cases summarized below, a violation involving the football program at Kutztown University of Pennsylvania was found. Specifically, a student-athlete was allowed to participate in five seasons of competition.

In regard to the case, an individual who was a member of the athletics staff at the time initially reported various possible violations. The NCAA enforcement staff and the institution subsequently undertook independent investigations in which numerous interviews were conducted to determine whether the allegations were credible.

The results of the review of the case led the enforcement staff and the institution to agree that none of the allegations could be substantiated except with regard to the young man who participated in five seasons of competition.

It was determined that the university's monitoring program was inadequate. The institution has taken the following actions to prevent future violations: (1) designated one staff member for compliance issues; (2) initiated a computerized participation-monitoring system that tracks participants on a game-by-game basis; (3) requested a compliance review with the NCAA compliance services staff, and (4) recommended forfeiture of the contests in which the student-athlete competed during his fifth season.

The NCAA accepted the institution's actions and its recommendation to forfeit the contests and determined that a public announcement of the case was appropriate. It should be noted that the enforcement staff and the NCAA Committee on Infractions desire to support meaningful efforts by institutions and conferences to monitor athletics programs, as well as the cooperation and assistance extended in the processing of secondary infractions cases.

State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending in state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes at NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 15 bills from 11 states. The report includes one bill that has been introduced, and 14 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (June 23, 1993). The newly introduced bill is marked with an asterisk. Pending bills discussed in the previous report on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

This report is based on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of July 1, 1993. The listed bills were selected for inclusion from a larger pool of bills concerning sports, and they therefore do not necessarily represent all bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending in the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on-line and are not included.

The NCAA has not verified the accuracy or completeness of the information and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

As an overview, the table below summarizes the number of bills included in the report by subject:

Anabolic steroids	4
Coaches	2
Ticket scalping	2
Athlete agents	1
Liability	1
Locker rooms	1
Scholarships	1
Taxation	1
Trademarks in amateur sports	1
Athletics trainers	1

Six bills have become law since the last report, including two each on anabolic steroids and coaches, and one each on athlete agents and trademarks in amateur sports.

Three state legislatures—Delaware, Pennsylvania and South Carolina—have adjourned since the last report, bringing to 36 the number of state legislatures that have adjourned. In Delaware and South Carolina, pending bills will carry over to 1994. In Pennsylvania, pending bills may be considered when the legislature reconvenes in the fall.

Men's Elite Eight bound for new Kentucky home

Committee recommends three years in Louisville after 16-year stay in Springfield, Massachusetts

After a 16-year stay in Springfield, Massachusetts, the NCAA Division II Men's Basketball Championship is expected to call Louisville, Kentucky, home for the 1995-97 tournaments.

At its June 26-29 meeting in Cape Cod, Massachusetts, the Division II Men's Basketball Committee voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that Louisville be awarded the championship for three years, beginning with the 1995 Elite Eight.

"The Springfield community has hosted the tournament for 15 years and during that 15 years, it certainly went above and beyond the call of duty. The Springfield committee, headed by Steve Root through many of those 15 years, has always had a major concern for the student-athlete participating in the national championship," said committee chair Elwood N. Shields.

"The committee's efforts were always focused on seeing to it that the student-athletes would leave Springfield with indelible memories of their participation in the national Division II basketball championships. The athletes were treated to visits to the basketball hall of fame, luncheons and receptions and, perhaps most importantly to the student-athletes, to the Shriners hospital, where seeing the plight of the children left indelible marks," Shields said.

"The reason for leaving Springfield was that after 15 great years, it was felt that another city should be extended the opportunity to equal the efforts of Springfield. In the final analysis, Louisville has the longest tradition of participation and hospitality of hosting NCAA events."

Springfield was the site of 15 NCAA Division II tournaments during a 17-year span from 1977-93. The only break during that time was in 1978 and 1979 when the finals were played in Springfield, Missouri. The Massachusetts city will host the championship in 1994.

Evansville, Indiana, was home to the tournament for its first 20 years, beginning in 1957 when it was called the college-division championship and later the Division II championship when the NCAA went to a three-division structure in the early 1970s.

Upon approval of Louisville by the Executive Committee, the basketball committee must decide between two facilities—the Commonwealth Convention Center with a maximum seating capacity of 8,022, and Louisville Gardens with a capacity of 6,125.

Bellarmine College will serve as host for the tournament. In addition to presenters from Louisville, the committee heard presentations from Springfield, Massachusetts, and Richmond, Virginia.

In other action at the meeting, the committee discussed its new tournament format. The Division II bracket was increased from 32 teams to 48 beginning with the 1994 championship. The committee will recommend that six teams from each of eight regions be selected. The top two teams would receive a bye into the second round. Sixteen first-round winners will feed into eight four-team regionals. The eight regional winners will advance to the Elite Eight.

The expanded bracket will make it necessary for teams to play three weekends in a row. The previous format allowed for one week off between regional finals and the start of the Elite Eight.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 26-29 meeting in Cape Cod, Massachusetts, the Division II Men's Basketball Committee:

- Voted to recommend automatic qualification to the 1994 championship for the following conferences: California Collegiate Athletic, Central Intercollegiate Athletic and Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Associations and the Colorado Athletic, Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic, Great Lakes Valley, Gulf South, Lone Star, New England Collegiate, New York Collegiate Athletic, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic, Northeast-10, Northern California Athletic, Pacific West, Peach Belt Athletic, Pennsylvania State Athletic, Rocky Mountain Athletic, South Atlantic, Southern Intercollegiate Athletic and Sunshine State Conferences.

- Discussed the logistics for the tournament in light of the expanded bracket and the new Wednesday-Thursday-Saturday format for the Elite Eight.

- Reaffirmed its position that, subject to the committee's approval, a regional host has the choice of how to package tickets.

- Acknowledged concern expressed for using only Division II officials for regional competition. The committee voiced its support for using Division II officials but reaffirmed its position that the chair of the regional advisory committee, subject to approval of the basketball committee, has the flexibility to select a Division I or II conference to assign officials for regional games.

- Discussed first-round host procedures, noting that if the Executive Committee does not approve full funding of first-round games, the committee will continue to select hosts by the bid process with minimum financial guarantees necessary to assure fiscal responsibility. The committee noted that if first-round games are fully funded by the NCAA, a minimum financial guarantee will still be necessary but a team's seeding will take on greater significance when selecting hosts.

- Recognized the contributions of outgoing committee members Elwood N. Shields, William A. Bright and B. B. Lees. Shields, chair of the committee, and Bright are finishing their terms in September. Lees is leaving the committee upon his retirement as director of athletics at Eastern New Mexico University.

Golf committee addresses issues for men, women

Women's district berths adjusted

The women's subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Golf Committee, pending Executive Committee approval, made adjustments in the number of berths per district for the 1994 regional championships as well as in the number of teams and individuals selected to qualify for the 1994 National Collegiate Women's Golf Championships.

The subcommittee met June 25-28 in Whitefish, Montana.

Sites for the 1994 championships also were selected. The University of Oregon will host the national championships May 25-28 at the Portland Golf Club. The East regional will be held at Forest Akers West Golf Club in East Lansing, Michigan, with Michigan State University serving as the host institution, and the University of New Mexico will host the West regional at its South Course. Both regionals will be May 11-14.

The East regional now will com-

Women's subcommittee

In other actions at its June 25-28 meeting in Whitefish, Montana, the women's subcommittee of the Men's and Women's Golf Committee:

- Recommended that effective for the 1995 regionals, host institutions automatically be allocated five berths at the respective site. In addition, it will recommend that the expense allowance be increased from $2,000 to $6,000.

- Determined to split tee times at the 1994 championships between the No. 1 and No. 10 tees. The committee also hopes to pair more closely teams competing for similar place standings so that those teams will be on the course at the same time.

prise 51 golfers from the South District, 22 from the Midwest District and 29 from the Middle Atlantic East District. The West regional will draw 50 golfers from the West District and 52 from the Far West District.

The subcommittee also recommended that 18 teams and five individuals advance to the championships rather than 17 teams and 10 individuals as was done in 1993. The subcommittee based its decision on the results of individuals during the last five years. Eight teams and three individuals will advance from the East regional and 10 teams and two individuals will advance from the West regional.

In addition, of the seven berths available to golfers from Divisions II and III, four will be awarded to one player from each of four districts and three will be awarded at large. Subcommittee members representing Division II and III will recommend a four-district alignment to the Executive Committee, and the selection process will be effective for the 1994 championships.

Men's subcommittee proposes advice-rule change

Championships administration and modifications in the advice rule were the focus of discussion for the men's subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Golf Committee during its June 25-28 meeting in Whitefish, Montana.

The subcommittee recommended an addition to the provisions of Rule 8-1 in the U. S. Golf Association Rules of Golf that would allow each team to appoint its head coach or assistant coach to give advice to or ask for advice from members of that team provided that: (a) only one person is appointed at any one time; (b) the person is identified to the committee before the start of the competition each day; (c) the person does not give advice to or ask for advice from another team's players or coaches; (d) the person is not given advice by any other representative of that team, and (e) the advice is given in a private manner that does not unduly delay play.

Players may give advice to or ask for advice from the appointed person in accordance with (a), (b) and (e). Players who violate the advice rule will incur a two-stroke penalty; coaches who violate the rule will

Men's subcommittee

In other actions at its June 25-28 meeting in Whitefish, Montana, the men's subcommittee of the Men's and Women's Golf Committee:

- Will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that beginning with the 1994 championships, Division I regionals be conducted Thursday through Saturday in an effort to assist institutions in reducing costs.

- Will recommend that effective for the 1995 Division I regionals, host institutions automatically be allocated five berths at the respective site. In addition, it will recommend that the expense allowance be increased from $2,000 to $6,000.

- Will recommend that effective for the 1995 Division I championships, regionals and championships be conducted May 16-18 and May 24-27, respectively, one week earlier than presently scheduled.

- Will recommend the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga as host for the 1996 Division I men's championships; the University of North Florida as host for the 1994 Division II men's championships, and Methodist College as host for the 1994 Division III men's championships.

- Altered its officials fee structure in recognition of the assistance provided by the U. S. Golf Association (USGA) and will provide a flat fee to the USGA for all three divisions.

- Realigned the Division II regions as follows (with number of qualifying berths in parentheses): Northeast—District 1 (5), District 2 (10), Individuals (1); South—District 3 North (10), District 3 South (25), District 6 (10), Individuals (2); Midwest—District 4 (10), District 5 (5), Individuals (1); West—District 7 (5), District 8 (5), Individuals (1).

- Stated that because of the amount of materials being sent to the committee after the entry deadlines for Divisions II and III, entry forms postmarked after the deadline will not be considered beginning with the 1994 championships.

have two strokes added to their team's score.

The subcommittee also discussed the administration of championships practice rounds and revised the championships handbook statement to read: "In an effort to maintain the condition of the courses and speed of play, it is required that each individual play only one ball during any practice round. Violation of this policy will result in the player and/or team being removed from the golf course."

'93 graduation rates filed by Association

The NCAA, on behalf of its Division I members, filed its 1993 Division I Graduation-Rates Report with the Department of Education July 1, pursuant to the waiver provision of the Student Right-to-Know Act.

Also filed were copies of the 1993 Division II and III enrollment and persistence-rates disclosure forms as submitted by each institution.

The NCAA filings were made before the July 7 release of a letter from the secretary of education (see accompanying box) withdrawing the department's earlier objection to proposed technical legislation, postponing the initial required reporting date because of the inability of the department to issue final regulations under the act.

The NCAA, the American Council on Education, the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, and several other postsecondary education organizations had urged the department to agree to the postponement because of confusion created by absence of regulations.

Under the waiver provision of the act, institutions awarding athletically related aid may obtain permission to report their data through an athletics association, as long as the association's data are found to be substantially comparable to that required by the act. Although the department had declined to rule on the issue of substantial comparability, the NCAA decided to proceed with its filing in the belief that its data were fully consistent with the language and intent of the act.

Both the Senate and House education committees plan to consider technical amendments to the Higher Education Reauthorization legislation during July. The amendment currently under consideration by those committees would postpone the first reporting date under the act to the July 1 that first occurs at least 270 days after issuance of final regulations by the department.

July 1, 1993

The Honorable William D. Ford
Chairman
Committee on Education and Labor
2181 Rayburn House Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20515-6100

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am writing to let you know that the Department of Education is withdrawing opposition to a technical amendment that would postpone implementing the Student Right-to-Know Act from July 1, 1993, until after the department issues final regulations governing this statute.

We appreciate the concerns that many institutions have expressed regarding their ability to comply fully with the disclosure requirements of the Student Right-to-Know Act in the absence of final regulations. We face a dilemma, however, because the law clearly provides that institutions must disclose completion or graduation rates by July 1, 1993. The department does not have the authority to waive this requirement.

The proposed legislative solution of delaying implementation until final regulations have been established is reasonable. Unless and until such legislation is enacted, however, institutions cannot be exempted from the requirements that take effect July 1. While the department will not oppose efforts to gain an extension of the implementation date, we must advise that all institutions need to comply with the Student Right-to-Know Act by implementing reasonable data and dissemination efforts to "disclose to students, employees and others... completion or graduation rates..."

The department has provided guidance to the community on implementation of the act before the publication of final regulations. We believe that the act and the guidance provided are sufficiently detailed to enable institutions to make a good-faith effort to comply with the act's disclosure requirements. If an institution follows the guidance provided, or implements the act's reporting requirements through other reasonable steps, the department will consider the institution to be in compliance with the act.

As you know, the statute exempts from certain reporting requirements institutions that are members of an athletics association or conference that has voluntarily published completion or graduation rate data if the data, in the opinion of the secretary, are substantially comparable to those required under the act. In making determinations for this period, the Department will be sensitive to practical concerns involved in collecting these data.

I hope that you will agree that the approach outlined above is reasonable, and look forward to working with you in completing the implementation of this important piece of legislation.

Sincerely,

Richard W. Riley
Secretary of Education

More scholarship winners listed in 'other sports'

Because of an error in production of copy, information on four NCAA women's postgraduate scholarship winners and alternates for the women's awards was not included in the June 30 issue of The NCAA News.

The NCAA awarded postgraduate scholarships to 68 student-athletes—34 men and 34 women—in sports other than football and basketball in which the Association conducts championships.

Following are some of the accomplishments of the four winners and names of the alternates:

Women's at large

Lauren Irene Gubicza [cross country/track and field, Fordham University (Division I), 3.592 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in accounting]—Gubicza is Fordham's first female all-American, having achieved that distinction in both cross country and indoor track. She has been a qualifier in five Division I championships and was a fifth-place finisher in the indoor mile in 1992. Named the 1992 Patriot League scholar-athlete of the year, Gubicza also is a GTE Academic All-American and a dean's-list student. She hopes to begin work on a master's degree in business administration at Fordham this fall.

Kiri Ione Johnson [cross country/track and field, South Dakota State University

(II), 3.750 grade-point average in sociology]—A May 1993 graduate with a degree in sociology, Johnson excelled for South Dakota State in cross country and indoor and outdoor track. She was a four-time all-American in cross country and was the Midwest region's individual champion in 1991. In track, Johnson was a Division II qualifier for three years and was an all-American in the 10,000-meter run in 1992. She has been a senator in the South Dakota State student government and a youth group program director. Also this year, Johnson was awarded an NCAA postgraduate scholarship through the women's enhancement program. She plans to earn a degree in law.

Elizabeth Hall Edmiston [volleyball, Texas A&M University (I), 3.930 grade-point average in kinesiology]—Edmiston finished her career ranked second in the Southwest Conference in kill attempts and she became only the third Aggie player to register more than 1,000 kills and digs in a career. As a senior, Edmiston was a member of the SWC all-tournament team and finished second in the conference in kill average for the season. A 1992 GTE Academic All-American, Edmiston also is the first Aggie athlete to twice earn the Texas A&M Scholar-Athlete Award. She intends to pursue a postgraduate degree in physical therapy.

Shannan Egbert-Skidmore [volleyball, Brigham Young University (I), 3.880 grade-point average in English]—A two-time all-Western Athletic Conference performer, Egbert-Skidmore has been named most valuable player in three tournaments. A 1992 GTE Academic All-American, she was selected to the American Volleyball Coaches Association's all-West region team in 1991 and 1992 and finished her career with 972 kills. During that span, Brigham Young posted a 105-28 record and appeared in three NCAA tournaments. She will pursue a master's degree in English and American literature at Brigham Young this fall.

Commission

CEOs adopt gender-equity position paper, sponsor some financial-conditions proposals recommendations.

Included in the document were statements developed by Commission members Judith E. N. Albino, president of the University of Colorado and chair of the Commission's own gender-equity subcommittee; Alice Chandler, president of State University College at New Paltz and chair of a Commission subcommittee that had been asked to develop a "first principles" paper in this regard, and Claire L. Gaudiani, president of Connecticut College and Division III chair of the Commission.

Essentially, the Commission's position urged that the final report of the Gender-Equity Task Force include:

- Reiteration of the guidance of Title IX and the Brown University court action;

- Consideration of ways to develop and increase the interest and participation of women in athletics, including precollegiate opportunities as well as collegiate;

- A call for enhancement of the marketing of current and emerging sports for women;

- Development of appropriate timelines for achievement of gender-equity initiatives, and

- Emphasis on the use of the athletics certification process to ensure continuous progress in gender equity in college athletics.

The Commission emphasized the importance of "a unified committee report," Commission Chair Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien said after the meeting. He called the James E. Delany (left) presents financial-conditions recommendations to chair Gregory St. L. O'Brien and other NCAA Presidents Commission members.

Commission document "strong guidance that we believe the task force will find helpful."

"We think it is inescapable that football needs to be considered in an institution's approach to the achievement of equity," he said in a press conference. "There needs to be some sensitivity that revenue-producing sports are essential to maintaining opportunities for women and men in other sports. To ignore that part of it would be ruinous to the overall objective of expanding opportunities."

Financial conditions

The Commission's decisions to sponsor some of the proposals from the financial-conditions committee came only after an unsuccessful motion to leave the entire matter to the NCAA Council.

Supporters of that motion argued that little can be done to control costs within the current NCAA structure, unless the membership is willing to move toward major change such as basing athletics aid on financial need.

The majority of the Commission agreed to sponsor more than half of the special committee's proposals, however, with the understanding that all of the special committee's recommendations also will be considered in August by the Council. The Commission then may decide to support the Council in additional actions.

Specifically, the Commission voted at this time to sponsor proposals that would:

- Tighten reporting requirements for approval of coaches' outside compensation.

- Reduce the preseason orientation period for new players in Divisions I-A and I-AA football.

- Further reduce permissible recruiting contacts and evaluations in both time and number, including the number of coaches recruiting off campus.

- Institute further restrictions on travel related to competition.

- Restrict the use of recruiting coordinators by having countable coaches perform most of those responsibilities.

- Eliminate materials published solely for athletics recruiting purposes.

- Eliminate off-campus scouting of opponents in football and basketball.

- Reduce the number of permissible coaches in Division I-AA football by one.

- Conduct NCAA Conventions, or at least Conventions at which legislation is voted upon, only in alternate years.

All of the other recommendations of the special committee, as reported in detail in the June 30 issue of The NCAA News, were forwarded to the Council. That group includes the proposal to limit the size of Division I-A football squads, as well as a proposal to limit athletics grants to 45 (based on equivalencies) in Division I-AA football.

The presidents also supported study and development of several long-term concepts recommended by the committee, including approaches to need-based financial aid and greater structural flexibility in classifying sports.

Football playoff

The Commission saw a presentation on a possible approach to a Division I-A football championship by a group called "Victory," a joint venture of Creative Artists Agency and Nike. No action was taken.

Chancellor Charles E. Young of the University of California, Los Angeles, who chairs both the Division I and Division I-A subcommittees of the Commission, said there was no time in the schedule for the Division I-A members to discuss the presentation after it was made.

"I think it's fair to say that there is no enthusiasm for it," Young said after the meeting. "On the other hand, there was no feeling that we should not continue to examine it."

He emphasized that any further consideration would be of the concept of a playoff in general, not the specific approach suggested in the presentation, and that there is no action to put anything before the 1994 Convention regarding a football playoff.

"It's a matter we are going to continue to look at," he said. "It's an issue that has always been before us, and we will continue to look at it."

The Commission also received a statement from the NCAA Special Events Committee, which oversees postseason football matters, expressing unanimous opposition to a playoff.

Conventions

In addition to the decision to support the concept of a biennial

Convention, or at least biennial voting sessions, the Commission took other actions in preparation for the 1994 NCAA Convention. Included were these:

- The Commission will recommend that the Joint Policy Board discontinue its consideration of a one-year moratorium on amending adopted legislation, reconsider its opposition to the biennial Convention concept, and reaffirm its support for the changes in the legislative calendar proposed by the Collegiate Commissioners Association and others. The Joint Policy Board meets August 3.

- The Commission authorized its executive committee (its four elected officers) to take any necessary final actions regarding Commission legislative positions after the Council meets August 4-6 and before the August 15 legislative deadline. The Commission officers agreed to review the need for any such actions in an August 14 telephone conference.

- The Commission officers also agreed to conduct their customary one-day meeting to identify the proposals to be acted upon on Presidential Agenda Day and those to be acted upon by roll call. That meeting will be October 19, after the October 15 deadline for amendments-to-amendments and resolutions.

- The Commission officers also agreed to meet at the Convention at the conclusion of the annual CEO Forum to discuss the desirability of adjusting any Commission legislative positions as a result of discussions in that forum.

Other highlights

In other actions at its June 29-30 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Presidents Commission or its various subcommittees:

- Approved two resolutions in the Commission's continuing attempt to address concerns regarding use of offensive language in athletics, one to be directed to the National Basketball Association and the other to NCAA conferences. Concerns regarding crowd behavior will be included in the latter document. In addition, Henry O. Nichols, NCAA national coordinator of men's basketball officiating, who was unable to attend this meeting, will be invited to do so in September.

- Discussed concerns raised in the recent College Football Association meeting, as requested by that organization, and were informed that all CFA concerns had been raised and discussed in this Commission meeting. The CFA urged consideration of further federation of the Association to assure that all divisions and subdivisions can deal with their own issues and problems more effectively.

- Directed the staff to prepare a document for the Commission's September meeting outlining previous approaches to restructuring the NCAA and current concerns in that regard, including a possible timeline for addressing these issues.

- Agreed to support the NCAA Council in the steps it is taking to affirm that the restricted-earnings coach is intended as an entry-level (graduate assistant or intern) position, with appropriate compensation limitations.

- Noted that its Subcommittee on Strategic Planning would identify a small group to determine the approach to be used in addressing the integrity and sportsmanship issues identified as the major topic for the Association leading to the 1996 Convention. The staff will prepare a working document toward that end.

- Affirmed that all suggestions for topics for inclusion on a Commission agenda are to be submitted to the Commission officers, and matters from constituent organizations should be submitted to the Commission's Liaison Committee. This action was taken by the Commission's executive committee.

- Agreed to raise with the Joint Policy Board concerns regarding the amount of material sent to the membership from the national office. This action was taken by the executive committee.

Liaison panel

Coaching emissaries appear

President Richard E. Peck of the University of New Mexico, heard presentations by the American Football Coaches Association, the American Volleyball Coaches Association and the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Appearing for the AFCA were its past president, John Cooper of Ohio State University, and its executive director, Charles McClendon. They reported the views of the football coaches regarding the cost-cutting proposals put forth by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in College Athletics.

The AVCA was represented by a past president, Kathleen J. DeBoer of the University of Kentucky. The volleyball coaches specifically asked for consideration of two adjustments in the playing and practice seasons in women's volleyball.

Representing the NABC were its current president, George Blaney of the College of the Holy Cross, and its executive director, James A. Haney. They discussed three legislative proposals the NABC is putting forth for the 1994 NCAA Convention, reviewed their views regarding the financial-conditions recommendations and discussed their concerns regarding the number of coaches in Division I men's basketball.

The visiting groups and the members of the committee both expressed satisfaction with the meeting, noting the importance of providing views to the Commission and of assuring constituent groups that their opinions are heard.

The committee will submit to the Commission separate reports on its discussions with the three coaches associations and will share copies of the report with each association.

The Liaison Committee includes five members of the Commission, two faculty athletics representatives, two directors of athletics and two senior women athletics administrators. Constituent groups wishing to make a presentation at the committee's September 2 meeting should contact Ted C. Tow, associate executive director, at the national office as soon as possible.

as more than just a sports coach. We must take personal responsibility for the future well-being of college athletics as a whole. Only then can we ensure that our individual sport will endure.

The common mission of all institutions of higher learning is to prepare each individual to be a fulfilled and contributing member of society. Our society today is lacking morality, dynamic and effective leadership, and heroes.

We, the NCAA membership, must take responsibility for filling this void. What is important is the quality of the competitive experience for each individual touched by intercollegiate athletics. Each institution, each geographical region, each conference and each competitive division have different goals and missions, each has a different population to serve, and each must establish opportunities for a quality competitive experience for that population, blind of gender or race.

Each of us—whether university president, athletics director or coach—was hired because of our professional skills and our leadership abilities. Each of us must step forward and have an impact on our own sphere of influence, no matter how small or large.

Society must begin to hear a common voice coming from our nation's stadiums and playing fields exalting in unison the many positive things happening within the domain of collegiate athletics each day. It is time we as coaches take responsibility for the future of college athletics. Working together, we can maintain control of our domain and maintain college athletics as a healthy and exciting component of campus life. The alternatives are unacceptable.

Above all else, we are coaches, one of the noblest and most influential professions in modern society. Let us each serve our profession well to ensure the future well-being of college athletics.

Deaths

Carl Buda, a standout football lineman for Tulsa in the 1940s who later played one season in the NFL, died July 23 of a heart attack. He was 74. Buda was a guard on the Tulsa team that lost to Georgia, 20-18, in the 1944 Sugar Bowl and beat Georgia Tech, 26-12, in the 1945 Orange Bowl. He transferred to Tulsa after playing the 1941 season at Creighton, which dropped the sport after the outbreak of World War II.

Marcus Hooks, former Southern Methodist baseball coach, died of cancer June 19 at his home in Edgewood, Texas. He was 86. Hooks, who guided the Mustangs during the 1950s, retired from coaching in 1962 and returned full time to his farm in Edgewood to raise cattle. Occasionally he helped coach the Edgewood High School baseball team.

1993 Column No. 27

NCAA Bylaws 14.1.3.1 and 30.11 Student-athlete statement

Member institutions should note that before participation in intercollegiate competition each academic year, a student-athlete must sign a statement in a form prescribed by the NCAA Council in which the student-athlete submits information related to eligibility, recruitment, financial aid, amateur status and involvement in organized gambling activities related to intercollegiate athletics competition under the Association's governing legislation. Failure to complete and sign the statement shall result in the student-athlete's ineligibility for participation in all intercollegiate competition.

In accordance with Bylaw 30.11, the following procedures must be used in administering the student-athlete statement:

1. The statement must be administered individually to each student-athlete by the athletics director or the athletics director's designee before the student's participation in intercollegiate competition each academic year.

2. The athletics director and head coach in the sport in which the student-athlete participates shall sign each statement as required by the prescribed form.

3. The statement must be kept on file by the athletics director and must be available for examination upon request by an authorized representative of the NCAA.

Member institutions also should note that there is a separate student-athlete statement to be administered for each membership division. Accordingly, an institution with multidivisional sport participants must use the student-athlete statement applicable to the division in which each student-athlete's sport is classified.

Finally, Divisions II and III institutions should note that page two of the 1993-94 Student-Athlete Statement for Divisions II (Form 93-3B) and III (Form 93-3C) refers to activities related to the NCAA's institutional athletics certification program. This information was inadvertently included in the 1993-94 Student-Athlete Statement for Divisions II and III.

Please note that athletics certification policies and procedures currently apply only to Division I institutions. Accordingly, please disregard the reference to athletics certification in the 1993-94 Student-Athlete Statement for Divisions II and III.

Certification of foreign student-athletes (Divisions I and II) Initial eligibility Divisions I and II institutions should note that whenever foreign-student records are sent to the NCAA foreign-student records consultants for evaluation of whether the individual meets core-curriculum requirements, the following items must be included: (1) copies of the student's original records; (2) certified English translations (if applicable); (3) copies of the student's application for admission to the certifying institution, including the student's birthdate, and (4) an educational history profile, setting forth the number of years and type of the student's education. (The aforementioned requirements can be found in the May 1992 edition of the NCAA Guide to International Academic Standards for Athletics Eligibility, page four.) Failure to include any of these items may delay review of the student's records. Further, member institutions are responsible for establishing the validity of all documents.

In addition, a student who initiates his or her secondary studies in a foreign educational system and completes those studies in an American educational system is subject to the core-curriculum and test-score requirements set forth in Bylaw 14.3. The student's complete records, including the information listed above as well as a copy of the student's official final transcript from the high school in the United States, a Form 48-H and a copy of the student's SAT or ACT test-score results, should be submitted to the NCAA national office for review. The consultants will evaluate the combined secondary records of such students to determine if the spirit of the Association's core-curriculum requirements has been fulfilled.

Finally, please note that it is not necessary to send a student's complete records to the national office if the student's American records alone satisfy the core-curriculum requirements. A student's records should be submitted to the national office only when a portion of the student's foreign credentials is necessary to satisfy the Association's core-curriculum requirements.

This material was provided by the legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question or comment regarding this column, such correspondence should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Publication addresses financial aid matters

The 1993-94 NCAA Guide to Financial Aid now is available from NCAA publishing.

The publication is an easy-to-use guide designed to help financial aid and athletics administrators understand and apply NCAA financial aid legislation. Its content and format are based on the results of a survey of more than 100 financial aid and athletics administrators from across the country who provided information about critical issues and problems involved in administering NCAA financial aid rules.

A copy of the guide recently was mailed to Division I conference and institutional compliance coordinators, Divisions I and II conference commissioners, Divisions II and III athletics directors, and Divisions I, II and III directors of financial aid.

A limited number of guides are available for $5 from NCAA publishing, P.O. Box 7347, Overland Park, Kansas 66207-0347; 913/339-1900.

Digging in

Sites recommended for Women's Final Four

The NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee has recommended sites for the 1996, 1997 and 1998 Women's Final Four.

The NCAA Executive Committee will vote on the recommendations during its August meeting in Avon, Colorado.

The sites are:
■ 1996—Charlotte Coliseum; Charlotte, North Carolina. Host:

University of North Carolina, Charlotte.

■ 1997—Riverfront Coliseum; Cincinnati. Host: Xavier University (Ohio) and the Greater Cincinnati Sports and Events Commission.

■ 1998—Kemper Arena; Kansas City, Missouri. Host: Big Eight Conference.

The committee also recommended regional sites and hosts for the 1996 and 1997 events. They are:

■ 1996: East—University of Virginia; Midwest—DePaul University (Rosemont Horizon, Rosemont, Illinois); Midwest—University of Iowa; West—University of Washington.

■ 1997: East—University of South Carolina, Columbia; Midwest—Purdue University; Midwest—Stephen F. Austin State University; West—University of Montana.

Other actions taken at the Division I Women's Basketball Committee meeting will be reported in the July 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Gender equity

capacity for women's sports will be essential to enhancing opportunities for women athletes.

"This issue was never a fight between fairness for women and football," said NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz. "It was instead an effort by an enormously diverse association to articulate a vision and develop a plan to dramatically increase the opportunities for women to participate in intercollegiate athletics. I believe this effort was very successful."

The task force will proceed with its legislative recommendations, which involve emerging sports for women and financial aid considerations.

The task force will recommend to the Council that any two emerging sports be acceptable toward meeting sports-sponsorship requirements and that the emerging sports be countable for revenue-distribution purposes. The emerging team sports are crew, ice hockey, team handball, water polo and synchronized swimming (added in the final report), and the emerging individual sports are archery, badminton, bowling and squash.

Regarding financial aid, the task force will recommend an increase in the maximum financial aid limitations for some Divisions I and II women's sports. Also, the group will recommend the development of a new financial aid model, to be considered not later than the 1995 Convention, that would decrease the amount of non-need-based aid available to student-athletes.

Diane T. Wendt, University of Denver, was appointed to chair an editorial subcommittee to develop a source book on gender-equity ideas that have proven effective at member institutions and conferences. Other members of the subcommittee are Thomas C. Hansen, Pacific-10 Conference; Carla Hay, Marquette University; Jeffrey H. Orleans, Ivy Group; Grant G. Teaff, Baylor University, and Chris Voelz, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.
