NABC summit to tackle basketball's major issues

NCAA legislation, gender equity and student-athlete welfare are three topics that will be discussed and debated at the National Association of Basketball Coaches Issues Summit October 18-20 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

The summit's goal, according to NABC president and College of the Holy Cross head men's basketball coach George Blaney, is to bring together the many constituent groups of basketball for the opportunity to discuss the game's major issues.

"We would like to bring together the many groups of people who have an effect on the game of basketball," Blaney said. "Our goal is to continue to create opportunity and keep the focus on the student-athlete."

The summit will include representation from the Divisions I and II coaching ranks, presidents, athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives, and conference commissioners. In addition, representatives from various NCAA committees will take part in the summit.

The four topics of discussion are game-related issues, legislation, gender equity, and student-athlete welfare and ethics. Each topic will be discussed in a breakout session and will be followed by a question-and-answer session with the media.

The summit is necessary, according to NABC Executive Director James A. Haney, because coaches do not have time to discuss important issues thoroughly during the NABC convention, which is held in conjunction with the Final Four each year.

NCAA legislation aimed at cutting costs has had a major impact on the sport of basketball in recent years, coaches say. The restricted-earnings-coach designation, scholarship cuts and gender-equity issues continue to cause serious concern among the NABC membership.

Haney said an issues summit in October gives the association more time to identify and discuss legislation it wishes to propose at future NCAA Conventions.

The NABC hopes to make the summit an annual event.

Rawlings appointed to Commission

Hunter R. Rawlings III, president of the University of Iowa, has been appointed to fill the Big Ten Conference's position on the NCAA Presidents Commission.

He will replace Purdue University President Steven C. Beerling, who resigned from the Commission due to schedule conflicts. Rawlings' term will expire in January 1996.

Rawlings became Iowa's 17th president in 1988. He previously had been at the University of Colorado for 18 years, serving as vice-president for academic affairs and research, and graduate dean for the Colorado university system.

Since his arrival at Iowa, Rawlings has focused on improving undergraduate education, building health sciences into a position of national leadership and increasing the number of faculty positions in the college of liberal arts.

In March 1991, Rawlings was honored when the National Association of Basketball Coaches selected him to the NABC Silver Anniversary Team of former collegiate student-athletes who achieved leadership positions over the preceding 25 years. As a 6-foot-7 Haverford College undergraduate, Rawlings was a standout baseball and basketball player.

Rawlings received a bachelor's degree with honors in classics from Haverford in 1966 and earned his doctorate from Princeton University in 1966. He won the University of Colorado Teaching Excellence Award in 1979 and continues to participate in undergraduate teaching at Iowa.

'Pop,' goes the record (?)

Well, maybe, if claims that Warner had 22 extra victories are true

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

For more than a decade now, Paul "Bear" Bryant has been regarded as the king of college football coaches. His 323 victories have ranked No. 1 all-time in Division I-A.

But Bryant's standing now may be in question, in light of information the NCAA statistics staff has learned.

Every year, the staff fields inquiries that might result in the alteration of statistical records. However, few, if any, of the inquiries have held potentially more national significance and interest than a researcher's claim that Glenn "Pop" Warner actually leads Bryant in all-time coaching victories at Division I-A schools.

Coached at Iowa State

In a book to be published later this fall about the life of Warner—who currently is ranked No. 3 in coaching victories in Division I-A with 313—a researcher has discovered that Warner's tenure as a coach at Iowa State University from 1895 to 1900 is not accounted for in NCAA football records. The researcher claims Warner should be credited with an additional 22 victories, which would catapult him ahead of Bryant and Amos Alonzo

Whether or not the researcher's findings will result in Warner replacing Bryant as the Division I-A leader will hinge on the outcome of a review by the statistics staff.

To make such a decision, the statistics staff weighs the evidence that it is presented and, in some cases, commissions research to prove the validity of the conflicting information.

The statistics staff looks to the NCAA Communications Committee for guidance on statistics policies and proce-

Certification

Peer-review situation discussed at meeting

The development of a pool of peer reviewers was a primary topic on the agenda when the Committee on Athletics Certification met October 7 in Dallas.

Peer reviewers are those individuals who will evaluate the self-study that is required of every Division I institution. Peer-review team members will include individuals who are involved or have been involved in intercollegiate athletics in some way. Also, in the first five-year cycle of the program, the committee hopes to have each peer-review team chaired by an institutional chief executive officer.

A complete review of the October 7 meeting will appear in the October 18 issue of The NCAA News.

The first part of the actual process began in late September when the first orientation visits were made. About 25 Division I institutions will receive orientation visits by the end of November.

Next meeting: To be determined.

Executive director

Search committee continues work

The work of the search committee charged with recommending candidates for the position of NCAA executive director continues as the committee conducts discussions with prospective candidates.

NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley, who chairs the committee, has said that although it is desirable to have the selection process completed by November, he declined to establish any deadlines.

The search committee eventually will submit a set of finalists to the NCAA Executive Committee. The Executive Committee, Presidents Commission executive committee (or its designated representatives) and the national office management team are scheduled to interview the finalists.

The position became available when Executive Director Richard D. Schultz resigned May 11.

veloping a source book of innovative gender-equity ideas is scheduled to report to the NCAA Council at that group's October 11-13 meeting.

The group, a subcommittee of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force, hopes to assemble a manual that would be distributed to the membership by next fall.

Individuals who know of innovative gender-equity approaches are asked to contact Janet M. Justus at the national office. Justus said that response so far has been light.

Regarding gender-equity legislation, the NCAA Council and NCAA Presidents Commission have sponsored a proposal for the 1994 Convention that would permit certain emerging women's sports to be counted for sports-sponsorship and revenue-distribution purposes.

Membership structure

Presidents call for comprehensive study

The NCAA Presidents Commission, at its September 28-29 meeting, agreed to sponsor a resolution at the 1994 Convention that would require the Association to initiate a study of its membership structure.

The primary emphasis in the Commission's discussion was on increasing the amount of federation in the Association and on assuring that the issue is dealt with by the NCAA rather than an outside entity.

The Joint Policy Board met during the Commission's September 28-29 meeting and developed a tentative process for the study. The proposed timetable calls for models to be developed for discussion at the 1995 Convention and for a vote at the 1996 Convention.

Membership trust fund

At its December 1992 meeting, the NCAA Executive Committee agreed that annual television rights fees from CBS in excess of $143 million (the average yearly payout) will be placed in a membership trust reserve.

The decision was made with the understanding that in the event of a decline in rights fees in future years, the money will be used to continue current NCAA programs and services after 1996-97. If the money is not needed for that purpose, it will be distributed to the Division I membership based on the annual historical data on file for the broad-based and basketball funds in the years that the additional money was placed in reserve.

With that policy, the budget increase in CBS television rights resulting from the 1994-95 payout of $151.85 million will be $3.15 million ($143 million minus $139.85 million), with the remaining $8.85 million going to the membership trust.

Briefly in the News

Mashburn scholarship

Jamal Mashburn, a former University of Kentucky basketball standout who was the fourth selection in this summer's NBA draft, has donated $500,000 to his alma mater for the endowment of a scholarship program that will be geared at low-income and historically underrepresented students.

The program, "Kentucky Excel," will be administered by the university's office of minority affairs and will seek to identify qualified eighth-grade students in Fayette County, Kentucky, and match them with Kentucky student-athletes and alumni in mentor-type relationships. Students will be encouraged to maximize their academic potential by taking advantage of resources in their high schools, with the ultimate goal of being awarded a full-tuition scholarship to Kentucky when they graduate from high school.

"The University of Kentucky was extremely good to me during my collegiate career," Mashburn said. "If it weren't for UK and the guidance I've received from coach (Rick) Pitino and my academic counselors, I wouldn't be in this position today. There are many more youngsters like myself out there who, without individual attention and financial support, will never reach their goal of attending college. I see this as my chance to give something back to the people who have helped me and to help those students who may not otherwise get this chance."

Mascot melodrama

Blaze, the mascot at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, was extinguished before the 1993 football season because its image was too mean, too masculine and too white, according to a rash of complaints presented to the institution.

"He was—I hate to use the word—too Aryan," Grant Shingleton, sports information director at Alabama-Birmingham, told The Associated Press.

The mascot, a mustached, Caucasian warrior decked out in bright green with a silver battle helmet, was to promote the school's athletics teams, nicknamed Blazers. Blaze was introduced last January at a basketball game. Complaints began pouring in shortly thereafter from students and fans.

"Some people objected...because it was too white or too male or too violent or scared little children," Shingleton said.

University officials say the institution has no immediate plans to replace Blaze, but

Former University of Kentucky basketball standout Jamal Mashburn (right) recently donated $500,000 to endow a scholarship program that will benefit financially disadvantaged and underrepresented students. callers to a local all-sports radio station forwarded suggestions for a new mascot. Some of those included a big green sports coat to symbolize the nickname Blazers and the four-wheel drive utility vehicle, Chevrolet Blazer.

Late bloomer

The term late bloomer certainly applies to Herschel Currie. At the age of 27, Currie has a friend who already has completed a professional football career and started a college coaching career.

Currie has experience as a mail clerk, a mover and a supervisor in the parts department of a computer manufacturer. He is a four-time layoff victim, a singer, a drummer, a bass guitarist and a keyboard player. He also has experience as a starting cornerback on the football team at Oregon State University.

"Look at my life," he told The Washington Post. "It's all up and down. But I'm having a good time in it."

He has less than two semesters of course work remaining to earn a housing design degree. He was named one of four captains on the Beavers' football squad for the 1993 season, his senior campaign.

Currie said he occasionally is saddened by the thought that he could have started college at an earlier age.

"You can't look back," he said. "I'm happy I'm not in prison or dead, and that I'm accomplishing something."

School first

For the first time since the institution began playing football in 1946, Texas Southern University hosted a game on its campus in an October 2 contest against Knoxville College.

"I see this as an achievement for the program," Walter Higgins, in his fifth season as Texas Southern coach, told the Houston Chronicle. "This is an achievement for the athletics department and the university. I can't believe other coaches who were here before had this opportunity and never wanted to play on campus."

Texas Southern has played the majority of its "home" games at Robertson Stadium on the nearby University of Houston campus and several more at Rice Stadium on the campus of Rice University and at the Astrodome. The field on the Texas Southern campus has a grandstand that seats only 4,000.

The real homecoming was worth the wait for the Tigers. Texas Southern defeated Knoxville, 39-26.

Alcohol Awareness Week kicks off October 17

Students at more than 3,000 campuses will celebrate National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week October 17-23.

"What sets this program apart is that, ultimately, it's not about alcohol. It's about attitudes," said Edward H. Hammond, chair of the program and president at Fort Hays State University. Hammond also is chair of the board of trustees of the Bacchus and Gamma Peer Education Network, which was instrumental in the founding of National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

Many institutions carry the alcohol-awareness and educational programs throughout the year, with the October 17-23 period serving only as a kickoff.

In conjunction with alcohol-awareness week, the winners of the 1993 National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week notebook competition have been announced. The winners demonstrated innovative programming ideas and commitment to helping students make responsible decisions about alcohol use. The winners are:

- Central Michigan University, Holly Whithead.
- State University College at New Paltz, Robin Cohen.
- College of William and Mary, Cynthia B. Burwell.
- George Mason University,

Nancy Schulte.

- Lord Fairfax Community College, Maureen Early.
- Towson State University, Art Taguding.
- University of Florida, Jim Watson and Elizabeth Broughton.
- University of Missouri, Columbia, Kim Dude.
- University of North Carolina, Wilmington, Dee Hamilton.
- University of Southern Mississippi, Dawn Gillis.

Bowl coalition a better alternative

By Steven J. Hatchell
SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE

Before the 1991 college football season, trends had been developing in the bowl-selection process. Those trends caused some confusion and more than their share of anxiety among college administrators. They involved respect for deadlines, behind-closed-door negotiations, earlier and earlier pressures for selection among at-large positions, and media/public opinion about bowl team choices.

Hatchell

Thus, in April 1991—after several meetings and telephone conversations among members of the Collegiate Bowl Association—representatives of the Federal Express Orange, the Mobil Cotton and USF&G Sugar Bowls met with officials of the football-competing members of the Big East Conference, the University of Notre Dame and members of the Atlantic Coast Conference to put together plans for a new bowl “alliance” or “coalition” to create a potential situation for the best Division I-A post-season matchups to occur.

That led to a historic gathering in Raleigh, North Carolina, in May 1991, to formalize the first College Football Bowl Coalition during the 1992 campaign.

While the system has not been without a wart or two, many will agree that back-room politics and deadline diversions were diminished greatly in the first year of the coalition. They should be streamlined even more in the 1993 postseason process.

We have learned that the spirit of the coalition is, and continues to be, a means of matching conference champions vs. conference champions and assuring the best bowl games possible. This is not a harbinger of a Division I-A playoff and was never meant to be, nor is it intended to focus on matching the Nos. 1 and 2, or, for that matter, the Nos. 3 and 4 teams in The Associated Press (writers) or CNN/USA TODAY (coaches) national football polls.

But besides being a means of ending the early November bargaining and jockeying for position among the bowls, the CFBC has helped to bring about better communication

Women opening a new frontier

The following is the acceptance speech of University of Iowa women's athletics director Christine H. B. Grant, upon being named administrator of the year by the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators.

For several reasons, I've been pondering the events of the last 20 years, and in doing so I discovered an accomplishment that makes me smile. Twenty years ago, I became associated with the Big Ten Conference athletics directors. I have now outlasted every one I started with in the '70s; in fact, I'm halfway through their replacements.

I'm like the Eveready Energizer battery...“I keep going, and going, and going.”

In thinking about that concept, I would note that I have had three advantages not enjoyed by many women in athletics administration. These advantages have allowed me to speak out when it was necessary: (1) A very supportive campus environment where I was fairly sure I would not be targeted or threatened for speaking out; (2) a departmental structure in which I was not subordinate to a male athletics director, but rather an equal voice with him to the president and to central administration, and (3) two strong and good friends who have helped me enormously, especially in difficult times, during the past 20 years—Peg Burke and Bonnie Slatton, whom many of you know.

So in accepting this award, I accept it on behalf of Peg, Bonnie and the Iowa campus. I also accept it with the realization that many of you in the audience did not have the opportunities or the support that I enjoyed, and therefore dared not be as vocal.

Your silence was not a lack of courage; it was a true assessment of reality. Yet, your persistence over the years and your quiet strength to move your programs forward is recognized by your peers in our profession. Therefore, I additionally would like to share this award with you, whom I call “The Persistent Pioneers.”

No matter when you entered this profession, whether it was in the explosive '70s, the depressing '80s or the turbulent '90s, you are a pioneer. A pioneer because women's athletics has never reached, and shows no signs of soon reaching, a steady state where we can take a deep breath and say, “This is it—this is what we were shooting for, where we were going, this is where we will reside.” In actuality, we are still in our infancy; we are still forging toward new frontiers.

Not having reached our ultimate homestead—our comfort station, if you will—has its disconcerting aspects. The daily battles around budgets and political issues on our campuses can wear us down at times, but there is an exhilarating side to the battle, too. Together we are making history. We—the long in tooth and the wet behind the ears—are bonded together by our common vision of equal opportunity for women in athletics and our vision of enhancing the quality of the athletics experience. Two vitally important goals.

Recently, we celebrated the 20th anniversary of our University of Iowa women's athletics department. It was a joyous and very emotional occasion. At our Sunday brunch, we asked our gathered alums to speak to the group—to tell us their memories of and thoughts about their time at Iowa. The common themes were self-identity and sisterhood—through much laughter and some tears.

One of the alums reminded me, and everyone else, of my first purchase of warmup suits for the entire department—a well-intentioned attempt to lend some class to our teams' appearance. Our gymnastics team had the first opportunity to wear them, at the Big Ten championships; but when they started into their premeet stretch, one after another, the suits split wide open in the crotch. In response to the student-athlete who remembered the incident, I mentioned that I remembered the suits only too vividly and also remembered having gone with the lowest bid when I purchased them.

No mystery about it: Violence is up

Blackie Sherrod, columnist

The Dallas Morning News

“There was a time, of course, when I was working on The Great American Novel. I say ‘of course’ because this is a traditional affliction that attacks anyone who learns how to type.

“Eventually, as happens to most, I fought off this ambition in favor of more pleasurable pursuits, such as eating three wholesome meals daily. However, as a warmup exercise, I attempted several short stories.

“Most were never finished and among these was a football murder mystery. Best I can recall, a player secreted a razor blade in pads and in a big pileup, succeeded in slicing the jugular of a chap he did not like.

“The idea was discarded because the plot was too far-fetched. Football was a violent game, to be sure, but it was stretching to paint it with fatal intent.

“Now, however, I ain't too sure. Mirroring our new and angry society, the object of our games nowadays is to put the other guy on his back with life's blood squirting out his ears like a fire hose.

“You have heard certain defensive footballers speak dreamily of the emotional sensation of hearing a passer scream as a jagged rib pierces his pancreas. Somehow I don't think this is what Walter Eckersall or Amos Alonzo Stagg had in mind....

“(Recent highly publicized) controlled violence pales in comparison to a recent semipro football war in the East. After the Syracuse Express beat the visiting Berkshire Mountaineers, the teams met in midfield for the usual handshake, and all hell broke loose. Garry Acchione, the Express coach, blames it on a Mountaineer named Smith, who had been ejected from the game in the first half. Said the player slugged an opponent. Helmets started flailing.

“‘They (the Express) broke up their bench and started swinging two-by-fours,’ said Acchione. ‘I yelled at my players to put their helmets back on.’ The coach also locked his wife and son in the pressbox while the riot raged.

“The fight raged for almost a half-hour until it died of natural causes. No cops. No charges.

“‘Hey, three of their players were slugging a teammate!’ said Acchione. ‘Three of my players got maced!’

“‘Maced? Hey, where did the mace come from?’

“‘From their bench, I guess,’ said the coach. ‘Same place as the hammer.’

“‘Hammer? Did you say hammer? Well, sir, it may be about time to dig out that old short story plot. Civilization, if that's the word, now seems about ready for it.’

Gender equity

William C. Rhoden, columnist

The Sporting News

“Recently, the NCAA's Gender-Equity Task Force report, approved by college presidents, called for a goal of male/female participation that is proportionate to overall enrollment at colleges.

“At the same time, the report subtly acknowledged that its authors know who butters the NCAA's bread: big-time basketball and football. Thus the report stopped short of demanding equal distribution of money and resources between men's and women's athletics.

“A key passage in the report says: ‘Maintaining current revenue-producing programs as one aspect of long-range planning for increasing women's opportunities is preferable to decreasing the opportunities for men—especially when such maintenance may result in revenues available for both women's and men's programs.’

“It's not that the football and basketball people oppose gender equity. They simply oppose the idea of having to give up their lavish lifestyles to help achieve it.

“Athletics, in its purest form, would seem to be a model for solving inequities because its cornerstone is fair play. Perhaps when it lets go of greed and territorialism, the college athletics community will devise a way to inspire the wealthy few to take less to allow many to have more.”

Water polo looks to make big splash as emerging sport

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

When the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force released its preliminary report in May, one of its recommendations focused on emerging sports for women.

Among those sports was water polo. To many in the membership, that may have come as a surprise. To those associated with the sport, however, it was something that has been a long time in coming.

"This is a sport that's been around a long time," said Pam Tanase, women's swimming and diving and water polo coach at Claremont McKenna-Harvey Mudd-Scripps Colleges. "A lot of women have been playing on a very competitive level for many years. No one seems to know about it because it doesn't get a lot of exposure."

With gender equity at the forefront of intercollegiate athletics and more institutions looking to add viable and cost-effective women's programs, water polo is likely to get more than its share of exposure.

In fact, it's already happening.

In September, the Southern California Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (SCIAC) athletics directors and faculty athletics representatives upgraded women's water polo to varsity status. The SCIAC, which consists of 10 institutions, will sponsor varsity women's water polo starting February 1994.

"I think there are going to be more and more (varsity) programs," said Tanase. "With our conference going varsity, I hope we become a model for other schools, particularly for Division III schools that have flexibility in adding programs."

Others may follow

Soon, interested institutions may have more than one model. Several institutions, including Stanford University, San Jose State University and Auburn University, Delegates to the 1994 NCAA Convention will vote on an NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force proposal to establish maximum financial aid limits in emerging sports for women and to permit institutions to use the emerging sports to meet the Association's minimum sports-sponsorship and financial aid award criteria.

are committed to or are considering adding the sport.

Currently, there are more than 60 intercollegiate club programs across the country. Since 1984, those programs—under the sponsorship of U.S. Water Polo, Inc.—have held collegiate championships. Among the participating institutions have been the University of California, Davis; University of California, San Diego; Harvard University, and Bucknell University. The Big Ten Conference fields a full complement of club teams.

"There's a tremendous interest in this sport," said Bruce Wigo, executive director for U.S. Water Polo. "Water polo is not just made up for gender equity. It's not a sport that came about because of gender equity. It's an international sport. It's an Olympic sport."

"Adding it makes so much sense for so many reasons. The system is

Those associated with water polo believe the sport is beginning to gain exposure now that many schools are looking to add more women's sports to their athletics programs. Water polo's cost-effectiveness may be its biggest draw, they contend.

in place, it's cost effective, it increases opportunities for women ...the list is endless."

Its cost-effectiveness may be its biggest draw. If an institution fields a competitive swimming team and has its own swimming facility, it possesses the primary ingredients for fielding a water polo team.

Auburn is a good example. It recently opened an $11 million aquatics center and is looking for ways to meet the Southeastern Conference's decision to require each SEC athletics program to sponsor two more women's programs than men's. For Auburn, water polo is a good option.

"This sport is so attractive for a couple of reasons, especially to (SEC) schools," said David Marsh, head men's and women's swimming coach at Auburn. "First, every SEC school has a potential first-class water polo facility already on hand. Second, in most cases, every school also has a pretty strong women's swimming program. Those are the two primary needs to field a competitive team."

Cost is low

"Really, the biggest expense is paying a coach and coming up with a general budget," said Tanase. "As long as you have the facility, there's not a lot of cost involved. As far as equipment goes, the only expense is for balls, goals and caps. It's really a cost-effective sport."

There are other benefits beyond the sport's cost-effectiveness and increased participation opportunities for women.

"One of the biggest benefits is that it provides another team sport where women can learn to be team members and have that experience with them the rest of their lives," said Penny Dean, women's swimming and diving and water polo coach at Pomona-Pitzer Colleges. "We've always taught women that they can compete in individual sports but not team sports. This can teach them that they can be part of a team. It's something that they will carry for the rest of their lives."

What does the future hold for women's water polo? Will it truly be an emerging sport on the NCAA horizon? Dean says yes, in time.

"I think as soon as you see a school like Stanford add the program, other schools will follow," she said. "Right now, I think schools are sitting back waiting, but when a school with the stature of Stanford goes varsity, I think others will, too. I'm sure of it."

Frontier

Women must remain pioneers in helping others find a quicker and easier path in athletics

Then, a wonderful story involved a field hockey player who had an abiding memory of her revered coach, Judith Davidson, fresh from the East Coast, asking, as they drove through the farmlands of Iowa, "How could a pig possibly know which of the hundreds of little pig houses is hers?" The student-athlete responded, "By the little numbers above the doors." Judith seemed satisfied with the answer.

Stories like those were plentiful that day. On the surface they may seem trivial, isolated memories. But we all felt that day that they had sprung from something much deeper: a sense of pride, a sense of identity and a sense of ownership. The ability to say, "I was a Hawkeye; I was a student-athlete; I competed and reached excellence in an activity I love."

Others in the room moved us even to tears with their sincere, direct statements of gratitude and love for their coaches and teammates. They, like those who made us laugh, have cleared a space in their minds and hearts for their student-athlete experience.

Like memories of childhood and home, that space reveals to themselves, and to others when they share its contents, a vision of who they really are. These stories were not insignificant details from the past—these were glimpses of these women's identities.

And how intriguing that these glimpses of their athletic selves, recounted with such clarity and emotion, should emanate not only from coaches and physical educators, but from doctors, surgeons, lawyers, engineers and business leaders. We were truly bonded together by our athletics experiences.

What these statements and stories highlighted for me was the importance of the quality of our student-athletes' experience. We as coaches and athletics administrators have helped student-athletes build that space inside themselves where their athletics identity can find a strong, safe home. I thought about that and concluded: "What an enormous contribution women in coaching and athletics administration are making to young women in our society!" Participation in sport by itself justifies the existence of athletics programs, but we are giving them much more than sport; and through these young women we are changing the reception and role of women in general throughout the nation.

One of the reasons some people don't support women in sport is that through sport we shatter into a million pieces the stereotypes portraying women as weak, helpless, dependent and passive. Through sport we produce exactly the opposite type of woman: strong, independent, assertive, competent and confident, with strong self-esteem.

I believe in the past we have greatly and significantly underestimated the value of our work and that contribution to societal change. Now as we all push for equal opportunity, it is essential to remind ourselves of the importance of these qualities that sporting experiences can develop in young women—such critical characteristics for success and fulfillment in life. That is one major reason for the need for truly equal opportunities.

In addition to that sense of empowerment or self-efficacy which sport provides, we must help them stock those athletics homesteads within them with other items to sustain their souls. Stories. Their personal stories—of camaraderie and mutual support, and, yes, even pig houses and split uniforms. And their collective stories—stories of their athletics heritage—about the events and individuals, the persistent pioneers, who have shaped the athletics experiences our student-athletes enjoy today.

Finally, we must send them messages: clear, memorable messages delivered by word and by action: messages rich in moral and ethical content which they can draw upon for hope and direction as they construct their lives. That is our challenge.

So, even though we remain pioneers, not having yet found our communal home in the promised athletics-land, we cannot lose sight of our responsibility to those who cross our paths as we venture on. In our discouraging moments, where progress is slow and we feel we are virtually slashing our way through the underbrush of administrative minutiae, we can sustain ourselves with thoughts of student-athletes, and what our programs have really meant in their lives.

Those thoughts generated two weekends ago by our student-athletes from a 20-year period will keep me "going, and going, and going." I truly believe that with every personal frontier that we help our students reach, we quicken our journey to the frontier that women collectively have envisioned, both in sports and in society. A new frontier.

SEC headed for three straight nonconference titles

By Gary K. Johnson
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

For the eighth time in 10 years, the Southeastern Conference is the best in the nation when playing Division I-A football opponents outside its conference.

With three wins the weekend of October 9, teams in the SEC now have won 16 games outside their conference this season while losing only four, which comes out to a .800 winning percentage. The 12-team conference features five teams that are 2-0 in games against other I-A opposition: Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Tennessee and Vanderbilt.

The Pacific-10 Conference, led by the 3-0 nonconference records of Arizona and California, is second with a 20-8 record and .714 winning percentage.

Despite four losses to Notre Dame, the Big Ten Conference still comes in third among all conferences with a 21-10 record and .677 winning percentage. The Fighting Irish have defeated the Big Ten's Northwestern, Michigan, Michigan State and Purdue.

With three losses October 9, the Big East Conference falls to fourth place at 13-8-1 and .614. The Atlantic Coast (.611) and Big Eight (.607) Conferences are the only other leagues with winning records.

The SEC had a five-year title streak end in 1988 when the Pac-10 compiled a .794 (27-7) winning percentage—highest in the 1980s. The SEC was on top again in 1989, but not in 1990, when the ACC broke through to take the honors. The past two seasons have seen the SEC again as the leader.

Last season, the SEC took the title with a .758 (25-8) winning percentage and the Pac-10 took second as the only other conference above .700 (.710, 21-8-1). The ACC finished third with a .652 winning percentage and 14-7-1 record.

Other conferences, besides those three, that had winning records a year ago were the Big Eight (.593), Western Athletic (.543), Big East (.533) and Southwest (.516). All I-A independents were 30-61-1 for a .330 winning percentage; this season they look very much improved at 19-21 (.475).

Some conferences have many nonconference games left, but others are almost finished with outside games. Here are the standings through October 9.

Vs. Div. I-AA Foes*:
I-AA Conference	W	L	T	Pct.
Southeastern	16	4	0	.800
Pacific-10	20	8	0	.714
Big Ten	21	10	0	.677
Big East	13	8	1	.614
Atlantic Coast	11	7	0	.611

All independents	19	21	0	.475
Western Athletic	9	14	0	.391
Southwest	8	16	2	.333

Big West	5	27	0	.156
Mid-American	2	15	0	.118

*Games against Division I-AA and nonmajor opponents are deleted.

Although some upsets of I-A teams by I-AA teams do happen and are publicized widely, the I-A teams this season are dominating their I-AA counterparts. The I-A teams have a record of 33-3 for a winning percentage of .917 against I-AA opponents. This high winning percentage and the wide variation in the number of such games among conferences are the reasons these games are deleted when comparing the I-A conferences.

Big Sky makes move on Yankee

The Big Sky Conference is looking to take over the honors from the Yankee Conference when playing Division I-AA football opponents outside its own conference. The Big Sky has a comfortable lead by turning in a 11-2 mark for an .846 winning percentage.

The Yankee has a 12-4 record and a .750 winning percentage, higher than its mark last season that was good enough to lead all I-AA conferences.

The independents, a group of 18 teams, have played 37 games against I-AA teams this season and have won 25 of those games for a winning percentage of .676.

Next comes the Mid-Eastern Conference, which has compiled a 9-5 record and .643 winning percentage.

Other I-AA conferences with a winning percentage above .500 are the Gateway (.600) and Southwestern (.556). The Metro Atlantic Conference is right at .500 after playing six games.

Two years ago, the Gateway won by a landslide with an .810 winning percentage (15-2-2), while last season the Yankee (.700) just edged the Southern Conference (.688).

Games against Division I-A opponents are deleted because some I-AA conferences play several such games, some play few and still others none. Games against teams in Divisions II and III or the NAIA also are deleted for the same reasons.

Here are the standings through October 9:

Vs. Div. I-AA Foes:
I-AA Conference	W	L	T	Pct.
Big Sky	11	2	0	.846
Yankee	12	4	0	.750
All independents	25	12	0	.676
Mid-Eastern	9	5	0	.643
Gateway	6	4	0	.600
Southwestern	5	4	0	.556
Metro Atlantic	3	3	0	.500
Ivy	9	11	0	.450
Southern	4	5	0	.444
Southland	8	12	0	.400
Patriot	8	15	0	.348
Ohio Valley	0	16	0	.000
American West	0	6	0	.000
Pioneer	0	1	0	.000

Besides the Yankee and Southern, the other conferences a year ago with winning records were the Gateway (.609) and Southland (.563). The Ivy Group finished right at .500 at 12-12. All I-AA independents last year were 33-17-1 for a .654 winning percentage.

Rushing record falls

Carey Bender of Division III Coe College rushed for 417 yards in the Kohawks' 69-7 victory over Grinnell in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Bender, who carried 33 times, surpassed the previous NCAA all-divisions record of 396 yards by Kansas' Tony Sands against Missouri in 1991. Bender ran for three touchdowns, caught two TD receptions and threw a 12-yard pass for another score. He also accounted for 509 all-purpose yards—417 rushing and 92 receiving.

Total Defiance

Thanks to the help of junior Sam Williams, Defiance College ranks third in Division III in total offense with 483.6 yards per game. It's easy to see why. Williams leads Division III in two categories: receiving yards per game (168.4) and all-purpose yards per game (290.6). He also ranks second in receptions per game with 10.4 and ranks 10th in punt returns with an average of 15.7 yards a return. Below are the top three teams in total offense.

■ Institutional secondary infractions

DIVISION I
How reported	Sport	Citation	Facts	Institutional action	NCAA action
Conference	Men's track, outdoor	B 11.02.6	Volunteer coach was allowed to travel to three away contests.	Upon discovery of violation, volunteer coach ceased traveling with team. Reviewed legislation with involved assistant coach.	No further action.
Self-reported	Baseball	B 11.02.6	Conference games committee issued interpretation that allowed volunteer coaches to sit on the bench during the conference tournament. Institutions did not pay volunteer coaches' expenses related to the tournament.		Admonished the games committee to avoid similar violations by checking with NCAA legislative services staff for interpretations.
Self-reported	Men's track, outdoor	B 11.02.6	Volunteer coach attended two high-school contests. Coach paid his own expenses and was there selling athletics equipment. No contacts with prospects were made.	Did not renew coach's contract and precluded recruitment of any prospects in attendance at the contests.	Notified institution that NCAA would not rule on the eligibility of any of the involved prospects. No further action.
Conference	Men's track, outdoor	B 13.02.4.4	Head coach scheduled an official visit for and had contact with a prospect during a dead period. Young man and his father questioned permissibility of the visit, which alerted the coach to a possible problem. After verification of violation, coach still met with the prospect, allowed him to meet with the team and to observe practice. Prospect has enrolled at another institution.	Reviewed legislation with coaching staff; required date of official visit to be included on preapproval form, and will forward fall and spring notices of dead periods to coaches.	Required institution to reprimand coach for proceeding with the visit and to preclude his involvement in any recruiting activities for one day. Young man is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Self-reported	Men's basketball	B 13.13.1.2	Institution employed two senior prospects at its summer camp. Discovered violation after young men had worked only two hours. Institution did not pay them. Prospects have committed to another institution.	Reviewed legislation with coaching staff.	Young men are ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Self-reported	Women's golf	B 13.16.1.2	Coach served as honorary chair of a tournament that raised money for local high-school students.	Reprimanded coach and required her to cease involvement with the tournament (two months before the event). Institution will require approval before involvement by staff members in future events.	No further action.
Self-reported	Football	13.6.1	Assistant coach transported prospect from airport to prospect's home to conduct a home visit. Prospect had been dropped off at the airport by a coach from another institution conducting a home visit the same evening. That coach was late for a flight and indicated that the other coach would provide return transportation. Prospect will attend another institution.		No action.
Conference	Men's track, outdoor	B 14.1.6.2.2	Student-athlete competed while enrolled in less than 12 credit hours. Young man was enrolled full time under university regulations. Student-athlete has been drafted by a professional team and is not expected to return to the university.	Forfeited points earned by the young man.	Young man is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Self-reported	Women's basketball	B 14.1.8.2	Men's student-athlete who was seeking a postgraduate degree participated in a practice session with the women's team, even though he had not participated as an undergraduate at the institution. New coach did not have sufficient number of team members to conduct practice, so she solicited young man's participation.	Precluded the young man's involvement in further practice activities upon discovery of the violation.	Required institution to conduct a rules review with coaching staff members.
Self-reported	Women's basketball	B 14.11	Student-athlete competed in two contests before proper eligibility certification. Young woman was otherwise eligible.	Reviewed procedures with the staff and modified system to include notification to coaches of student-athletes' eligibility status.	No further action.
Conference	Men's track, indoor	B 14.4.2, 14.5 and 14.5.4.2.1	Student-athlete participated in indoor track season while ineligible in that he did not make satisfactory academic progress. Coach had been notified that the young man was ineligible. Student-athlete quit the team, but later rejoined. Coach did not notify compliance office that young man rejoined team and did not submit required travel rosters before away games for verification.	Forfeited individual points and adjusted team standings for contests in which the young man participated while ineligible; notified opponents of use of ineligible student-athlete; reprimanded coach, and instructed compliance office to ensure receipt of travel roster within 24 hours of an away contest. Also, director of athletics and compliance coordinator met with coach and reviewed seriousness of the violation.	No further action.
Self-reported	Men's tennis	B 14.5.2	Student-athlete competed in one contest (which he lost) even though he had not completed the requirements for satisfactory progress. Young man walked on but had not been certified.	Will require coaches' initials on receipt of list of student-athletes certified as eligible.	No further action.
Conference	Women's track, outdoor	B 15.1	Student-athlete held an on-campus job while she received a full grant-in-aid (an excess of $216). Young woman's employment was terminated by student employment office upon discovery that she was a student-athlete, but that office did not notify the athletics department. Student-athlete was at the institution for only one year and no longer is enrolled.	Initiated a computer program that will cross-reference a student-athlete's employment with grant-in-aid information.	Required institution to forward documentation indicating team limit was not exceeded. No further action.
NCAA inquiry	Baseball	B 15.3.3.1.1	Head coach included language in letters to prospects that promised grant-in-aid for four years. Conference has reviewed the matter and indicated that no violation occurred.		Required institution to change language in letter to ensure compliance with legislation.
Self-reported	Baseball	B 15.3.5.1	Institution did not notify one student-athlete by July 1 that his aid would not be renewed. Young man had chosen not to participate the previous spring but had eligibility remaining in his fifth year of school.	As a result of the student-athlete's hearing opportunity, the institution awarded financial aid to the young man for the 1993-94 academic year. Reviewed application of legislation with athletics staff.	No further action.
NCAA inquiry	Women's basketball	B 16.12.2.1	Head coach gave $25 checks on graduation day to four senior student-athletes. Coach is no longer at institution.	Developed special compliance workshop on amateurism and extra benefits to present at monthly rules-education meeting.	No further action.
Self-reported	Women's track, outdoor	B 16.4.2-(b)	Associate director of athletics paid $1,200 in medical expenses for student-athlete's surgery. Student-athlete no longer is enrolled at the university.	Forfeited points earned by the young woman in competition after the surgery; reprimanded associate director of athletics and required that she be supervised by the director of athletics in any counseling conducted with students.	Expressed concern that the amount of money indicated a serious violation and required institution to review legislation with all staff members. Young woman is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Self-reported	Baseball	B 17.1.5.3.2.1	Head coach conducted practice activities after a contest (the team was required to run).	Reprimanded coach; reduced practice by an additional day off the following week, and required coach to review the applicable legislation.	No further action.
Self-reported	Men's swimming and women's swimming	B 17.16.4.2	Institution exceeded by five the permissible number of practice days for nontraditional season.	Will include last day of practice as part of compliance calendar and reduced by five the number of practice days for 1993-94 season.	No further action.

Coalition

Current alliance assures best bowl matchups

among bowl personnel, conferences, television networks and college administrators.

In 1992 on "Bowl Day USA," there was a sense of anticipation as delegates gathered to discover the selections of teams for bowls. Of course, some of the suspense was lessened by the contractual obligations (Big Eight Conference winner to the Federal Express Orange Bowl, Southeastern Conference champ to the USF&G Sugar Bowl, Southwest Conference victor to the Mobil Cotton Bowl), but the coalition selections sparked an element of surprise. In all, seven of The Associated Press' top 10 teams played in coalition bowls.

After extensive talks with the American Football Coaches Association, a new wrinkle has been added for 1993 coalition selections. We felt that the AFCA, which supplies the voters for the CNN/USA TODAY national college football poll, should have a strong say in the coalition process, so this year we have instituted a new priority process.

A combination of the AP and CNN/USA TODAY polls through voting points is compiled each Monday, and the composite vote total becomes the official College Football Bowl Coalition top-25 poll. This will come into play when priorities are determined for selecting the highest-ranked coalition team.

Essentially, the places of teams in the coalition poll will determine the order of selection by bowl committees for the Sunday, December 5, 1993, "Bowl Day USA" news conference. For example, if the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa (in a hypothetical SEC titlist's role for 1993), has the most composite points from the AP and CNN/USA TODAY surveys used to tabulate the coalition, the USF&G Sugar Bowl will receive first choice on the Crimson Tide's opponent.

And there are some factors built into the bowl coalition agreement that preclude a regular-season rematch or a third consecutive appearance in a specific bowl (unless a team captures three or more consecutive conference titles and has the contractual appearance). Economic reasons also are considered. These safety valves allow for integrity in the selection process, as well as a common-sense approach to priority of bids.

The 1993 coalition guarantees the champions of the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Eight, Southeastern and Southwest Conferences and Notre Dame (with a minimum of six wins and if mutually agreed upon by the bowls and the university) berths in the Federal Express Orange, IBM OS/2 Fiesta, Mobil Cotton Bowl or USF&G Sugar Bowls with a minimum payout of $3 million per institution. In addition, the Outback Steakhouse Gator Bowl matches a third team from the SEC against one of the "pool of 38," the remaining nonchampion teams from the previously mentioned conferences, while the John Hancock Bowl in El Paso, Texas, matches two coalition opponents from the "pool of 38."

Because of the quality of competition by schools from these traditional football power areas (coalition pool teams have been rated No. 1 nationally in seven of the last eight postseason AP polls), CFBC teams guarantee quality opposition and nationally attractive bowls.

With the trend nationally toward making prior arrangements with conferences for bowl bids, the coalition helps to complete a circuit of either 33 or 34 (if either the U.S. Military Academy or the U.S. Naval Academy gains a St. Jude Liberty Bowl bid) predetermined bowl berths. That takes much of the guesswork and lobbying out of the bowl picture, removes preholiday anxiety for student-athletes, and allows teams to prepare for the late-season rivalries that make college football one of the nation's most exciting spectator sports.

The College Football Bowl Coalition may be just two years old, but it is light years ahead of some of the alternatives—November bowl jousting, disappointments or playoffs.

Steven J. Hatchell is commissioner of the Southwest Conference. Rick Baker and John Stuart III of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association contributed to the editorial.

Court upholds Drake's decision to drop wrestling

A Federal judge ruled October 7 that Drake University acted legally when it dropped its wrestling program.

Five Drake wrestlers had challenged the university's action, contending their rights under Title IX were being violated because the school gave more scholarship money to women even though it has more male athletes.

U.S. District Judge Harold Vietor rejected the argument and denied the request for a temporary injunction that would have required Drake to reinstate the sport, according to The Associated Press.

Vietor ruled that while he understood the wrestlers' desire to compete in their sport at the school of their choice, "Title IX does not establish a right to participate in any particular sport in one's college and there is no constitutional right to participate in intercollegiate or high-school athletics."

Drake announced last March that it was dropping wrestling because the money it cost the university could be better used elsewhere. University officials also noted that attendance was poor and that Drake was forced to join the Western Athletic Conference in wrestling to be part of a league, adding to costs because of the travel involved.

Vietor ruled that those reasons were valid and that there was no evidence that Title IX considerations were a factor in Drake's decision.

"As an institution of higher education, Drake is entitled to exercise, as a matter of academic freedom, its own judgment as to how to apportion its resources and what its academic and athletics offerings will be," Vietor said.

Lonnie Timmerman, who had been Drake's wrestling coach since 1967, expressed sadness about the ruling.

"I'm very, very sorry," said Timmerman, who still works at Drake as a professor of education. "I'm greatly disappointed."

Drake athletics director Lynn King welcomed the decision, saying it "confirms what we have said all along—that Drake made its decision based on providing the highest quality sports program possible for our students using the resources available."

Clemson must return receipts from '90 basketball tournament

The NCAA Executive Committee has voted to apply the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 31.2.2.5 to participation of ineligible student-athletes who represented Clemson University in the 1990 Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The university was required to return $353,361.60 of its share of the 1990 net receipts.

That money is being distributed among the other competing institutions in accordance with the provisions of NCAA executive regulations. The value of each unit is approximately $2,920.

Conference	Baseball	B 6.2.1 and 6.2.3.1	Baseball program had a checking account that was outside the control of the institution. Required audit of account; conducted rules review with all coaches, and reprimanded involved coaches and required them to present the legislation at a rules review.	Acknowledged the institution's and conference's appreciation for seriousness of the violation.
NCAA inquiry	Administrative	B 6.3.1	Institution did not complete initial institutional self-study within the prescribed five-year period.		Imposed a fine of $1,000.

Division I-AA
Self-reported	Football	B 15.3.5.1	Two student-athletes were not notified by July 1 of the renewal of their financial aid. One young man's aid was being increased but exact figures could not be obtained by July 1. The other young man had not participated because of an injury, and the university was not sure whether he would be returning.	Forwarded letters indicating renewal of aid.	Admonished institution to avoid similar violations.
Division II
Self-reported	Several	B 11.2.1, 11.2.1.1 and 11.2.2	Coaching staff members' contracts did not include the stipulations of Bylaws 11.2.1, 11.2.1.1 and 11.2.2. Violation was discovered during NCAA compliance review.	Reissued 1993-94 contracts and included the required stipulations.	No further action.
Conference	Women's basketball	B 13.02.4.4	During a dead period, interim assistant coach had contact with a prospect during an unofficial visit. Young woman arrived on campus unannounced. Original visit was scheduled during permissible time. Prospect has committed to another institution.	Conference required a special rules-review session for coaching staff, and institution hired a full-time head coach.	Young woman is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
NCAA inquiry	Baseball	B 13.2.2(b) and (f) and 13.12.1	Head coach gave a bat and cleats to a prospect before he enrolled at the university and also timed his pitches. Prospect was at orientation and coach believed he was enrolled, in which case he could have received team equipment. Also, coach had planned to evaluate the young man during a high-school practice, but when practice was canceled, the coach timed the prospect's pitches. Young man is not participating at the institution.	Precluded head coach from recruiting off campus until matter was fully investigated; required coach to review involved legislation, and required him to review NCAA recruiting legislation with athletics director and faculty athletics representative on a monthly basis for the next academic year.	Young man is ineligible unless restored through NCAA appeals process.
Division III
Self-reported	Women's softball	B 14.1.6.2.2	Student-athlete participated in the 1991-92 spring season while not enrolled in a minimum of 12 credit hours. Institution thought young woman was in her final semester of her baccalaureate degree program.		Required forfeiture of all contests in which young woman participated during 1991-92 spring semester.

Sports medicine

Athletes would ban players with AIDS

Nearly two-thirds of college athletes playing contact sports believe those infected with the AIDS virus should be barred from competition, according to a Michigan State University survey.

The survey of 2,505 athletes at 11 colleges and universities listed football, men's basketball and women's basketball as contact sports.

Of the athletes in those sports, nearly 65 percent supported a ban for those infected with the virus that causes AIDS and nearly 55 percent of athletes in other sports backed such a restriction.

"As a scientist, I can say it shouldn't make any difference, but as a father, I'm not going to dismiss what they said," Dr. Douglas McKeag, a team doctor at Michigan State and a professor of family medicine, told The Associated Press.

NCAA Administrative Review Panel

Member institutions should note that pursuant to NCAA Bylaw 21.3.3.2, the Administrative Review Panel is responsible for reviewing appeals by NCAA institutions of decisions made by an NCAA committee (excluding actions of the Eligibility Committee and the Committee on Infractions) or the NCAA staff regarding the application of NCAA legislation to a particular situation.

The panel reviews the complete record in order to determine whether there is sufficient basis to grant relief from the application of the legislation. During its April 18-21, 1993, meeting, the NCAA Council approved the following guidelines and procedures for the review panel to follow when considering an appeal:

1. All appeals must be submitted to the NCAA national office by a member institution. Completed appeals and inquiries should be directed to S. David Berst, assistant executive director for enforcement and eligibility appeals, or Stanley Wilcox, legislative assistant.

2. The institution shall submit the appeal, which shall be signed by the institution's chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative and director of athletics, to the national office. The written request shall set forth the background of the matter and the reasons the institution believes relief from the application of the appropriate legislation, interpretation or decision is warranted.

3. When appropriate, the involved committee or staff may be asked to submit a written report concerning the matter to the Administrative Review Panel (and the involved institution).

4. All documentation relevant to the appeal should be included with the appeal (for example, medical documentation, educational transcripts, game schedules).

5. Every effort will be made to ensure the timely consideration of appeals. Facsimiles are encouraged in cases that require immediate responses.

6. The Administrative Review Panel will consider all written materials submitted and may discuss the case in a telephone conference, if necessary, to reach a decision. The involved institution may request that it participate in such a telephone conference and the panel shall determine whether participation by the institution will be permitted. If the institution participates in the telephone conference, it shall be represented by its chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative or director of athletics. Other institutional representatives, including an involved student-athlete, may participate in the call. The institution and involved individuals may have legal counsel participate in the call. Also, a representative of an involved committee may be invited to participate in the call.

7. In reaching a decision, the Administrative Review Panel shall consider the purpose and intent of any involved NCAA legislation, the welfare of the involved student-athlete(s), possible competitive or recruiting advantages and other factors it considers relevant. The panel shall strive for consistency in treating issues involving similar circumstances.

8. The Administrative Review Panel will not consider appeals of decisions of an NCAA committee with legislative authority to act [Note: During its August 4-6, 1993, meeting, the Council confirmed that the Administrative Review Panel should be authorized to consider requests for relief from the application of NCAA legislation, including instances in which a NCAA committee takes the position that it has no authority to act. Further, the Council determined that in instances in which the committee has authority to act, appeals of its decisions shall be subject to review by the Council, rather than by the Administrative Review Panel.]

9. Once the Administrative Review Panel has made its decision to grant or deny the appeal, the decision shall be communicated to the involved institution. A summary of the decisions of the panel is provided to the Council and published in The NCAA News on a regular basis.

10. All actions of the Administrative Review Panel are final and are not subject to appeal to the Council.

dures. That committee, in turn, reports to the NCAA Executive Committee.

In a case like Warner's, the statistics staff is likely to forward the details to the Communications Committee for discussion, which could result in creation of guidelines that could help the statistics staff render a decision, says James F. Wright, NCAA statistics services manager.

As for learning of inaccuracies in NCAA records books, the statistics staff relies on member institutions to alert the NCAA.

"Generally speaking, we are always looking to the schools to let us know about errors," Wright said. "There are many times during the year that we will get a call from a new sports information director who has done some research and thinks that there is an error. We have to have a little bit more documentation. We just can't take their word for it. Our philosophy is that if there are any errors or changes that can be documented to our satisfaction, then we are going to make that change.

"In most cases, we try not to make a subjective decision. We want to have everything in our records books 100 percent accurate and that is why we fall on the side of caution. We want to be extremely careful. There is no statute of limitations to change historical records if we have information that can document that our records are in error."

Unique case

In the Warner case, a subjective decision by the statistics staff may be all that is possible, for several reasons.

One, Warner reportedly coached at Iowa State while also serving as football coach at other institutions—the University of Georgia, Cornell University and Carlisle College. In some instances, the Iowa State team played games on the same day or within one day of another Warner team.

Travel being what it was in those days, it was unlikely that Warner could coach in Iowa and be at Georgia or Cornell the following day for another game. But there is no precedent involving similar situations to aid the statistics staff in the decision-making process.

"This is a unique situation," Wright said. "It's going to be difficult to prove one way or the other."
