Executive director search narrowed to four

Four finalists have been announced by the NCAA Executive Director Search Committee for the position of executive director of the Association.

The finalists were announced October 22. They are:

- William W. Cobey Jr., former director of athletics at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill (1976-1980), and former secretary of the North Carolina Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources (1989-1993).
- Cedric W. Dempsey, director of athletics at the University of Arizona and secretary-treasurer of the NCAA.
- Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics at the University of California, San Diego, and immediate

Syracuse's Shaw joins Commission

Kenneth A. Shaw, chancellor of Syracuse University, has been appointed to the NCAA Presidents Commission as the representative of the Big East Conference.

He replaces James D. McComas, who has resigned for health reasons as president at Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Shaw's term will expire in January 1997.

Shaw became Syracuse's 10th chancellor in 1991 after serving as president of the University of Wisconsin System. He also has been chancellor of the Southern Illinois University System; president of Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, and vicepresident and dean of the university at Towson State University.

Shaw

Often sought as an adviser and speaker on education issues, Shaw is known for his work in the areas of multiculturalism and diversity on college campuses and on leadership training and conflict resolution.

In 1986, he received an NCAA Silver Anniversary Award. He played basketball at Illinois State University, where he led the team in scoring as a junior with a 15-point average and finished his career with 1,396 points and a 14.2 average.

After earning a bachelor of science degree at Illinois State in 1961, Shaw completed a master of education degree at the University of Illinois, Urbana, in 1963 and a doctorate in sociology at Purdue University in 1966.

Two nominated for officer spots

William M. Sangster, director of international programs and faculty athletics representative at Georgia Institute of Technology, has been selected by the Association's Nominating Committee as its candidate for 1994-1995 NCAA Division I vice-president.

Also nominated to serve as an Association officer was Edward G. Coll Jr., president of Alfred University, who is the committee's candidate for 1994-1995 Division III vice-president.

Divisions I and III members will vote on the proposed candidates, as well as any who are nominated from the floor, during their respective meetings January 11 at the 1994 NCAA Convention in San Antonio. The election of officers will be ratified during a general business session of the Convention, either January 11 or also has nominated candidates to fill vacancies that will occur on the NCAA Council at the close of the 1994 Convention.

Presidential Agenda Day proposals set

The executive committee of the Presidents Commission has identified 43 proposals for action during Presidential Agenda Day at the 1994 NCAA Convention, and all of them will be voted upon by roll

The Commission officers made those decisions in an October 19 meeting in Denver. The number is down two from the 45 included in the inaugural Presidential Agenda Day a year ago.

Meanwhile, the total number of proposals—including all amendments-to-amendments and resolutions submitted by the October 15 will include separate voting ses-deadline -- has climbed to 192, well over last year's 176 and the highest total since the 1988 Convention faced 200 propositions.

Included among the 192 are 19 amendments-to-amendments and 173 base proposals, with 14 of the latter included in the grouping of deregulation amendments proposed by the NCAA Legislative Review Committee.

The number identified for roll call is well under the record of 95 at the 1991 Convention.

Presidential Agenda Day is January 10 at the 1994 Convention. It

BCA boycotts meeting; meets with Black Caucus

Members of the Black Coaches Association boycotted an October 19-20 "issues summit" sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches in protest of NCAA rules that they claim discriminate against minorities.

A review of the NABC summit, including an article on the boycott, appears on page 5 of this issue.

Selected members of the BCA met October 19 with the Congressional Black Caucus and received assurances that Congress would conduct a hearing concerning their grievances.

On October 18, the NCAA communicated its willingness to discuss the BCA's concerns in a letter to BCA Executive Director Rudy Washington. That letter appeared in

Certification

Official Notice.

Peer-review training considered by committee

The Committee on Athletics Certification approved a four-part approach to training peer-reviewers when it met October 7 in Dallas

The approach includes the use of printed and other material, such as videotapes; training sessions at regional sites; special training for peer-review team chairs, and sessions conducted among members of specific peer-review teams at the time of the campus visits

Peer reviewers are those individuals who will evaluate the self-study that is required of every Division I institution. The committee has received about 700 applications from those interested in serving as peer reviewers and is expected to review a list of prospective reviewers (as well as a list of those who do not meet the selection criteria) at its November 29 meeting.

Next meeting: November 29 in Dallas.

Membership structure

Council requests immediate action

The NCAA Council has called for the Association to begin immediately a study of the NCAA membership structure.

The Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission will introduce a resolution at the 1994 Convention regarding the membership structure, but the study will begin soon rather than waiting for the adoption of the resolution.

The emphasis in the membership-structure discussion involves increasing the amount of federation in the Association and assuring that the issue is dealt with by the NCAA rather than an outside entity.

The Joint Policy Board met during the Presidents Commission's September 28-29 meeting and developed a tentative process for the study. The proposed timetable calls for models to be developed for discussion of possible action at the 1995 Convention, with action not later than the 1996 Convention.

State law

Deliberations continue in appeal of Nevada case

A three-judge panel for the Ninth Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals is in the process of considering the appeal of NCAA v. Miller, et al., the case that involves the NCAA's challenge of a Nevada "due-process" law.

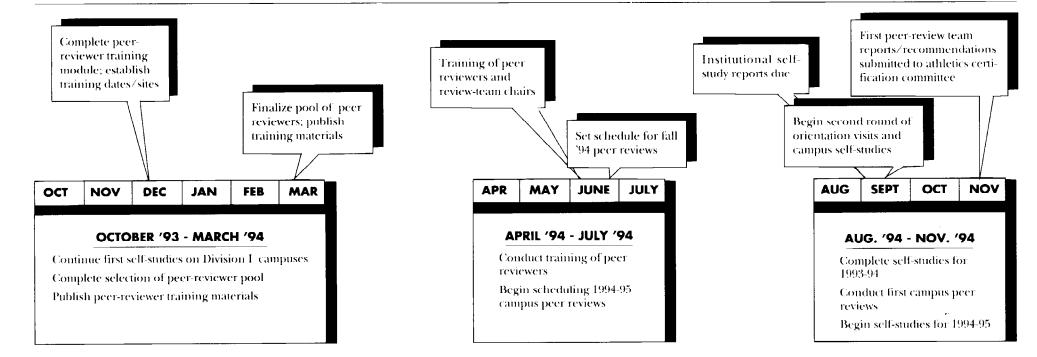

In June 1992, a Federal judge ruled for the NCAA, saying that the statute restricts the Association's ability to enforce its rules consistently in all 50 states and prevents Nevada member institutions from fulfilling their contractual obligations to the NCAA.

The NCAA filed the suit November 12, 1991.

Family pair runs together

It must run in the family.

Caroline Johnson, a senior captain on the women's cross country team at Eastern Connecticut State University, has assumed the leadership role of helping bring along the team's newest faces—the freshmen.

But Johnson's relationship with one of those newcomers is unusual. This freshman is her mother, Mariette Johnson.

Mariette Johnson is a 49-year-old real estate professional who entered school and joined the Eastern Connecticut State team.

"I'll finish the race, and two minutes later I'll turn around and say, 'Come on, Mom,' Caroline Johnson told the Norwich (Connecticut) Bulletin.

The elder Johnson has to stop and remember her status when it comes time to get a sip of water during practices — seniors go first, then juniors, and so on. But she does get a reprieve from mandatory studyhall attendance.

Growing up in Quebec, Mariette Johnson took a job right out of high school.

"These opportunities were not available to me at that time," Mariette Johnson said. "(College) was not an option. Since Caroline was in college, I thought it would be kind of neat if we ran on the same team. This would be the last opportunity for me to do it."

75th anniversary

Millersville University of Pennsylvania recognized the 75th anniversary of women's athletics at the institution with a celebration dinner featuring an address by former NCAA President Judith M. Sweet.

Sweet, athletics director at the University of California, San Diego, told the audience that there are several words that best define women's athletics.

"The three words that describe women's athletics are dreams, challenges and changes," Sweet said. "When I was an undergraduate at the University of Wisconsin (Madison), there was no athletics program for women. I participated in what was known then as the Women's Recreation Association. My participation in sports was through my own initiative in that recreation program. At the same time, there were no girls' interscholastic programs for highschool students.

"Fortunately, you now have the opportunity to dream dreams beyond what many of us a generation ago could not even imagine as potentially becoming a reality. It takes an uncommon amount of guts to put your dreams on the line...to hold them up and say 'how good or how bad am I?' We need to be brave enough to take risks...to implement change and to realize dreams."

Like daughter, like mother. Caroline Johnson (right), a senior on the Eastern Connecticut State University women's cross country team, has a new teammate this season: her mother, Mariette Johnson (left).

The dinner brought together two of Mil lersville's earliest women athletes with one of its most successful. Anna Funk Lockey and Almeida Scheid, who played basketball for Millersville in the 1920s, joined in the festivities with Cherie Meiklejohn, an all-American lacrosse and field hockey player at the school. Meiklejohn's jersey was retired—the second women's number to be so honored at Millersville.

Women's hall

When four of the nation's top women's college basketball teams compete in a tournament in November, they will be making history. And down the road from the tournament site, ground will be broken for a building that will honor the history of women's basketball.

Ohio State University; the University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Texas Tech University, and Vanderbilt University will participate in the first women's prescason tournament the State Farm Women's Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic. The nationally televised tournament is slated for November 20 and 21 in Jackson, Tennessee, and will coincide with official groundbreaking ceremonies for the women's basketball hall of fame. The hall will be located on a 40-acre site donated by the city of Jackson.

"It has been our dream that groundbreaking for the hall of fame could be held in 1993, the 100th anniversary year of women's basketball," said Phyllis I. Holmes, executive director of the hall of fame.

The tournament will be produced by Intersport Television and will be broadcast on ESPN. Vanderbilt will play Texas Tech at 12:30 p.m. Eastern time November 20 and Ohio State will meet Tennessee at 1 p.m. Eastern time November 21.

"This is a tremendous opportunity to promote women's athletics," said Charles Besser, president of Intersport Television.

Spider birthday

The University of Richmond Spider, perhaps the world's only arachnid mascot, celebrated its 100th birthday October 16 during the institution's homecoming football game against Boston University.

The school's nickname was changed from Colts to Spiders after a spectator yelled that the Richmond College baseball team looked like a bunch of spiders trying

In honor of the occasion, the Spider submitted to an interview.

"I feel good after 100 years," the Spider said. "I feel I can go another 100. I have sometimes gotten a bad rap over the years. Movies like 'Raiders of the Lost Ark' and 'Arachnophobia' have hurt spiders overall, but the positive moments have greatly outnumbered the negative during the past 100

The previous record was held by San Diego State University, which limited U.S. International University to minus-55 total yards in a game November 27, 1965.

"Our defensive staff did a fine job in preparing the team for Miles," Fort Valley State coach Douglas T. Porter said. "Our defense came out with a lot of spirit, and it established itself in the early going."

School not allowed to eliminate women's gymnastics, court rules

October 13 that Indiana University of Pennsylvania may not drop its women's gymnastics program, even if it replaces that sport with a women's soccer program that would provide about 35 more women with participation oppor-

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit ruled unanimously in Favia v. IUP that Indiana (Pennsylvania) could sponsor both sports but could not eliminate women's gymnastics without violating Title 1X.

Indiana (Pennsylvania) lost the original lawsuit in November 1992 after it eliminated its women's field hockey and gymnastics programs. At that time, the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsyl-

A Federal appeals court held vania issued a preliminary injunc- soccer team requires an investment tion requiring the institution to reinstate the two programs.

Indiana (Pennsylvania) did not appeal the ruling but in January 1993 sought to modify the injunction by substituting soccer for gymnastics. When the court refused to modify the injunction, the school appealed.

The court noted that although replacement of the gymnastics program with soccer could increase the percentage of female studentathletes from 38.97 percent to 43.02 percent, it would decrease the overall percentage of athletics expenditures Indiana (Pennsylvania) provided for women's athletics. That is because a 15-member gymnastics team requires a $150,000 investment while a 50-member of only $50,000.

'Farther from goals'

The court also noted that while more slots for female competition might be created, the funding gap would increase, which "could be viewed as moving IUP farther from the goals of Title IX."

The court noted that the nature of a preliminary injunction is to "preserve the relative positions of the parties until a trial on the merits can be held" and that preliminary injunctions tend to favor the status quo.

"By its very nature," the ruling stated, "a preliminary injunction will ultimately be reviewed again by the issuing authority, here the district court."

NCAA no villain for NYSP role

By Vivian L. Fuller NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

The debate over Federal funding for the National Youth Sports Program recently took an unfortunate and misinformed turn in the U.S. Senate. In the end, the NCAA's role with NYSP was grossly mischaracterized, and as a result, less funding will be available for this quality program than otherwise might have been provided.

Fuller

Earlier this year, the U.S. House of Representatives approved $12 million for NYSP for the next fiscal year. That figure was forwarded to the Senate, which approved $12 million in NYSP funding provided the NCAA matched funds over $9.4 million. A Congressional conference committee final agreed on a matching-funds provision that required the NCAA to match 29 percent of any Federal appropriation between $9.4 and $12 million — about $750,000. That version was approved.

However, the NCAA is not able to provide any additional money, so the funding for 1994 will be $9.4 million, the amount appropriated in the 1993 fiscal year.

If this was simply a difference of opinion over the best and most effective way to fund NYSP, the Senate's action might be understandable. However, the matching-funds provision was added at the insistence of Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa), chair of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee with jurisdiction over NYSP, based upon a number of misrepresentations about the NCAA.

Briefly stated, Harkin said the NCAA promotes itself as the sole force behind NYSP, which it is not, and that the government should not have to tolerate the NCAA taking the credit for the program while the government puts up the money. That is especially true, he claimed, since the NCAA collected $133 million in television revenue from the Division I Men's Basketball Championship alone in 1992-93. Isn't it only fair, he concluded, that a rich organization such as the NCAA should be required to put up some matching dollars?

Mixed in with his argument was considerable anti-NCAA invective.

When tragedy strikes, spread the word

It is with great regret that I write this letter

Jennifer Woodland, an outstanding student and a potential world-class jumper and sprinter at General McLane High School in Edinboro, Pennsylvania, died as a result of an all-terrain-vehicle accident this past June. Jennifer had received more than 200 letters and offers from universities.

The number of schools interested in Jennifer only attests to her athletics prowess and potential.

Letter

General McLane High School and the Woodland family wish to thank all of those people and universities who showed an interest in Jennifer.

Jennifer's parents continue to receive recruiting materials and phone calls intended for Jennifer. As you can imagine, this is very stressful for them.

They would be most grateful — as I am sure would other parents in a similar situation — to be removed from any mailing lists.

While it obviously is not possible for all coaches to know of the current welfare of those athletes they are recruiting, perhaps they could let others know of situations such as this through word of mouth. In so doing, they could lessen the anguish of a suffering family.

Donald L. Ickes, Vice-Principal General McLane High School Edinboro, Pennsylvania

Opinions

Cooperation key to developing hockey

David Ogrean, executive director USA Hockey

American Hockey Magazine

"The bond between USA Hockey and the NCAA programs is historic and essential. We develop the athletes in our youth-level and junior programs across the country who go on to professional careers; our national teams rely on the participation of players from NCAA teams. Together with the junior hockey programs that are such a tremendous launching pad for players who aspire to college opportunities, we are linked with the colleges in the development and promotion of ice hockey in America.

"The relationship between USA Hockey and the NCAA will, and must, become even closer. Working together we can do great things — represent our country with the best amateur players in international competition, maintain the success of college programs, allow women's hockey to continue to flourish, develop quality coaching and officiating, and share the knowledge and resources we each have."

Racial matters

Ron Dickerson, football coach Temple University

The Washington Post

"I'm the last person to be a radical or a militant when it comes to expressing my views toward racial equality. But to me, it's sad that there are only three (black) head coaches in Division I-A college football, and I think if God has given me the voice to speak out, I'm going to speak out for the rights of others....

"If I felt there weren't qualified African-American assistants out there, I wouldn't say one word. But I know there are guys out there just as good as Ron Dickerson or just as good as any other head coach in this country. They deserve the opportunity to be interviewed, and more so the opportunity to be a head coach....

"I think the old money is disappearing and the new money is coming in. Young alums are starting to give money to athletics departments and universities, and their views toward hiring processes and a lot of things are different than the old regime's....

"I think that one of the problems nationally is that the presidents don't get involved in the hiring process with a football coach. I think a lot of times, it's that good-old-boy network, where one famous head coach calls the athletics director, and the athletics director talks to the (search committee) chairperson. In a lot of instances, when it came to the African-American getting the job, he didn't have that network. He couldn't call the famous head coach and say, 'Hey, would you call so-and-so for me?' "

Editorial

USA Today

"African-American basketball coaches protesting racial inequity in college sports this week spotlighted a key problem. But their attack on the NCAA's academic standards for athletes rates an F.

"Two numbers tell the story: 33 and 41.

"That's 33 percent, the graduation rate of African-American athletes who entered college in 1985, the year before standards were (raised). And 41 percent, the rate for black athletes in the first freshman class whose sports eligibility required minimum grades and SAT scores."

Armstrong Williams, public relations executive Talk-show host

USA Today

"In many poor, black neighborhoods, the scarcest commodity is hope. Basketball provides hope. It is a positive force, a valuable emotional and spiritual resource that should be used wisely....

"Meeting the NCAA's standards immediately is just impossible for ghetto kids....That's why higher academic standards should be phased in, perhaps over a five-year period. That might allow a structure of tutors and mentors to be established to help these youngsters make the grade.

"Academics are important, and basketball — or football — can be used to reinforce learning. But we should harness the dream, not destroy it, however good the intentions"

Bowl coalition

Howard Schnellenberger, football coach University of Louisville

Reacting to how his team could be left out of a New Year's Day game because of bowl-coalition restrictions:

"I think it's un-American, noncompetitive and bad for college football. I don't know how the NCAA allowed it to happen. I hope they don't allow it to continue....

"What's locked up now, what will be locked up by January 1, who knows? I've got reasons to believe that the coalitions aren't going to work. I don't think the coalition members are all that happy."

Academic preparation

Robert Thomas, athletics director

Dallas Independent School District

The Dallas Morning News

"The sad part is that quite a few kids are prepared athletically for college but not academically. The first thing we have to do is to get the schools more involved and get people other than coaches focused on helping these kids....We need to find people with expertise in certain subjects and have them tutor our kids. Business people could provide a lot of help. I think it would be easy."

James Argenti, football coach Dallas Adamson High School

The Dallas Morning News

"We've started spending 30 minutes every morning trying to help our kids with the SAT and ACT, and we even do some work on Saturday mornings... A lot of my kids have just come across the border in the last couple of years, so they don't have a chance to pass the SAT. Then the politicians say that Adamson is a substandard school. In reality, it's like me going to Mexico and trying to pass a standardized test in Spanish. There's no way I could do it."

Dealing with losses

Ron Beard, football coach
Prairie View A&M University

The Dallas Morning News

On how his players are dealing with a long losing streak:

"My president calls me after every game and asks how I feel and how the players feel. You can kick a dog only so long. When these butt kickings become demoralizing, he will take a second look at the program. But these kids are still having fun. That's what it's all about."

Issues summit gives basketball coaches voice

By Laura E. Bollig THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—For possibly the first time as a group, about 280 men's basketball coaches from all three divisions were able to tell their bosses face-to-face what is bothering them.

Their opportunity came October 19-20 in the form of an "issues summit" sponsored by the National Association of Basketball

Their message to presidents, chancellors, athletics directors and conference commissioners was summarized by Purdue University head men's basketball coach Gene Keady: "We're not happy with the rules. We need fewer rules and more guidelines with common seпse."

The administrators' collective response: If you are willing to trust each other, rules can be simplified. If you want simplification, be organized in your efforts.

Thomas K. Hearn Jr., president of Wake Forest University and a member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, explained that abuses by college coaches have led to stricter rules. Common sense within a rule has not always proved possible, he said.

"You're not worried about what you're going to do; you're worried about what the fellow down the street is going to do," Hearn said. "I challenge you to come forward with specific proposals that you think inhibit you doing your job but still operate within the principles established. I think you'll find a receptive audience."

Put pressure on abusers

Thomas E. Yeager, commissioner of the Colonial Athletic Association, further challenged coaches to put pressure on their peers who abuse rules and force the closing of legislative loopholes.

"Don't play them," Yeager said. "Somewhere along the line-collectively, not just basketball coaches—we've got to disarm this thing and bring some sanity back into it."

Although it wasn't an answer to their immediate concerns, coaches appeared willing to accept the challenge handed them by administra-

"What you've done is given us a mandate," Mike Krzyzewski, head men's basketball coach at Duke University, told those administra-

Black coaches noticeably absent from meeting

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—The first National Association of Basketball Coaches issues summit opened October 19 and, as expected, most black head coaches were absent.

The minority coaches, members of the Black Coaches Association, announced two weeks before the summit that they would boycon the meeting.

Scholarship limits, student access and increased academic standards are three issues that the Black Coaches Association claims discriminate against minority student-

NABC reaction

The NABC board of directors issued a statement in response to the boycott that the NABC agrees that the issues raised by the BCA "go beyond the game of basketball and reflect a concern with greater societal problems." The NABC reiterated that for 15 months it actively has pursued legislation on the restricted-earnings coach and scholarship limits for men's basketball.

"The NABC is aware that the decision by the BCA to boycou the issues summit was not an action directed toward the NABC but rather a means for the BCA to call attention to their concerns," the statement read.

The NCAA Joint Policy Board issued its response to the boycott in an October 18 letter to BCA Executive Director Rudy Washington, men's basketball coach at Drake University.

The letter, which addressed the BCA's concerns regarding NCAA academic requirements for athletics eligibility and limits on numbers of coaches and scholarships, commended the minority coaches for focusing attention on the issues and invited BCA the NCAA to change legislative policy. It appeared in full in the October 18 issue of The NCAA News.

Dialogue neccessary

On the first day of the summit, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz echoed the Joint Policy Board's offer for discussion.

"Eventually, it's going to come down to a dialogue with the principals of the NCAA because, for the most part, we're talking about legislative items," Schultz said.

Roy Williams, head men's basketball coach at the University of Kansas and a member of the NABC board of directors, said the minority coaches must decide for themselves what their mission will be before they make their next move.

'First of all, I don't think they know what the issues are themselves," Williams said. "After their (October 19) meeting with the Black Congressional Caucus, I think they will have a better idea of what their agenda will be. What comes next will be based on what kind of reception they get. I think drastic measures will come only if they do not get

"I don't think they know what the next step will be. If they feel like they are getting an ear—an appealing ear—their next step might not be as drastic. Then they might come back and work within the framework of the NABC."

Societal issues

Williams, like his counterparts on the NABC board of directors, agrees with most of the issues the Black Coaches Association has raised. He and fellow board member Mike Krzyzewski, head men's basketball coach at members to work within the framework of Duke University, say the issues are better thought of as societal issues and not necessarily basketball issues.

"If I were black, I'd be frustrated too," Krzyzewski said. "I'd be frustrated about a lot of things in our society. I have a lot of empathy for what they're doing. Those guys had tough decisions to make. Whether they made the right decision of not, that remains to be seen, but they made the decision, and I applaud them for doing it."

One minority coach with a conflicting viewpoint was Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines, former head coach of Winston-Salem State

Gaines, who was honored at the NABC Coaches Tribute, said the issues summit presented a great opportunity for minority coaches o open the lines of communication with fellow coaches and college administrators.

The NABC meeting might have been an excellent place to give their views so they can be directed back to the college administrators who decide on legislation," Gaines said. "In my opinion, if you think something is wrong, you don't let the horse come out of the gate. These things should be handled by college presidents. This is deeper than a bunch of basketball coaches."

Gaines is aware that the Black Coaches Association had meetings with the Congressional Black Caucus. He is not sure athletics should be placed in the governmental arena.

"People in athletics should be strong enough and intelligent enough to make their own rules," he said. "What's the problem? If we have communication and cooperation, with that, we can sit around the round table and thrash it out. You can't do that with fragmentators. "You've told us to come up with a model. Thank you. How do we get it to you, and when do you want it? Those are my questions."

Coaches agreed from the outset that the summit would not be a chance to place blame but rather an opportunity to bring several concerns to the forefront, to debate issues and to tell administrators their thoughts on subjects ranging from scholarship limits to the restricted-earnings coach.

Student-athlete welfare

Many times throughout the twoday event, the conversation steered in the direction of one issue both coaches and administrators agreed must be their priority—the welfare job of communicating their frusof the student-athlete.

NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz told coaches that students recently have gained the privilege of speaking on the NCAA Convention floor. In addition, an NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee has been formed.

"I think it is naive of us to think we can make rules that impact the student-athlete and not ask them what they think about it," Schultz

Also attending the summit were members of the NCAA Council and Presidents Commission. Division I Vice-President R. Elaine Dreidame, University of Dayton, told coaches they must do a better trations to administrators.

Communicate better

"Those are the people you need to deal with before they get entrenched in their vote," Dreidame said. "You have to get to them, and you have to provide them with a bigger umbrella than basketball. You've got to deal more with people on the Council and the Presidents Commission on a personal basis."

Presidents Commission Chair Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien, chancellor of the University of New Orleans, pointed out the tunnel-vision approach every aspect of a university seems to have.

"We've all got a problem with knowing the problems we've got but not knowing about the problems someone else has got. As much during the off-season as you can, meet with your president and athletics director," O'Brien said.

George Blaney, NABC president and head men's basketball coach at the College of the Holy Cross, was encouraged by participation in the summit, likening it to the opening of a new season.

"This is the first game. We've had some pregame jitters," Blaney said. "The Christmas tournament is the January Convention. We might win some; we might lose some. Our goal is the NCAA tournament. I like our chances."

NABC seeks more active role in legislation

CHARLOTTE, N.C.—In the 15 months since the National Association of Basketball Coaches hired James A. Haney as its executive director and moved its headquarters to Overland Park, Kansas, the area in which the NABC has been most visible has been in the development of legislation for the NCAA Convention.

Basketball coaches, long perceived as unorganized in lobbying for rules favorable to their sport, have worked to get their legislative act together. Homework for the NABC membership has consisted of studying legislative issues and educating themselves about the rules-making process.

The result, according to the membership, has been less than satisfactory.

Sensitivity imperative

"What coaches would like is input not only on legislation but where it goes as well," Duke University head men's basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "We think it is imperative for there to be sensitivity to people affected by rules changes."

NCAA Council members John V. Kasser, University of California, Santa Barbara, and R. Elaine Dreidame, University of Dayton, pleaded with coaches to become even more involved in the legislative process.

"Many coaches in all sports believe certain ways," Kasser said. "Communication must be made with your college presidents, faculty athletics representatives and senior woman administrators. Many of the votes being carried through the Convention are not the philosophy of the coaches. Get involved in determining the vote of your institution.

"I challenge my peers on campuses to get involved with coaches even more. We have to assist coaches. That's where my peers have fallen down. We need to assist coaches because their jobs are difficult."

Krzyzewski compared the current legislative process to a flawed

"We have a so-called systemlike a system you would use in a game," he said. "If something isn't working, you make adjustments. If you are making rules about basketball, go to the source. Make sure those people are heard.

"For us, it's an agonizing, slow process. I don't think they (NCAA administrators) understand how frustrating that is for us. Don't persecute us for wanting to do things quicker."

Restricted-earnings debate

One of the most heated discussions during the two-day summit was a dialogue between coaches and administrators about the restricted-earnings coach.

Haney compared part-time coaches with no restriction on their earnings to restricted-earnings coaches who currently are allowed to earn a maximum of $16,000. Haney's contention was that the previous part-time coaches rule was followed without abuse. Coaches' unhappiness with the restricted-earnings designation has led to misconceptions, according to Haney.

'The perception is that coaches have tried to find a way to circumvent the rule," Haney said. "We're uncomfortable when you take people who were perfectly in line with the old rule and you take them down to another level."

Douglas A. Dickey, athletics director at the University of Tennescoaches who said abuses didn't occur when compensating parttime coaches.

"As much as you want to think there were no abuses, everybody turned their heads," Dickey said. "You've got to have a cap (on earnings). Unrestricted earnings are not going to work because there are too many loopholes. They are not being paid enough, I agree, but you've got to have a cap."

Federation promoted

An idea mentioned several times by NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz was federation within the current NCAA structure—federation by sport and/or by division.

"It's important that schools have the ability to determine where

NYSP

Fuller: NCAA not funding villain

Harkin's argument revealed a fundamental misunderstanding about the NCAA and the Association's relationship with NYSP.

The NCAA currently spends about $1 million voluntarily to administer NYSP. Never has the NCAA portrayed itself as the sole provider of the program; in fact, in the only public-service announcement that the NCAA has produced on the topic, the Department of Health and Human Services is cited as a principal supporter.

Participating institutions also are cited as sources of additional funding. Indeed, NCAA member and some nonmember institutions contribute more than $17 million to the NYSP through cash and inkind resources. That amounts to 44 percent of the NYSP's budget.

This clearly is a cooperative program that has functioned well through the government, the NCAA and the NCAA membership. The NCAA never has sought praise for NYSP, unless one counts as praise the act of calling attention to the program. Any claim to the contrary is simply not true.

Harkin's claim that the NCAA makes a lot of money is correct. What is not correct is the implication that the NCAAs revenues are somehow hoarded or wasted rather than being spent on worthy causes such as NYSP. In fact, almost 90 percent of NCAA-generated revenue is either returned directly to the NCAA membership or spent on programs such as the Association's 79 championships, scholarships and catastrophic injury insurance.

The 1993-94 NCAA national office budget has been approved without $750,000 available for NYSP, and because of Congress' matching-funds decision, that means $2.6 million less for the program. Neither the government nor the NCAA will be victimized; instead, the victims will be the needy youth who will be denied the recreational, instructional, medical, nutritional and motivational benefits that NYSP provides.

Many of our 67,000 participants and many of those who have devoted so much time and effort to NYSP will suffer because of some misguided information.

In looking to the future, it is important that those who care about NYSP communicate with their Congressional representatives, expressing gratitude for their continued support

I trust that NCAA member institutions will support my position and make every effort possible to see that this valuable program is not hampered.

NABC 'Issues Summit' notes

- The NABC paid tribute to three legendary coaches during a Coaches Tribute the night before the summit officially opened. Clarence "Bighouse" Gaines, Horace "Bones" McKinney and Frank McGuire were honored for their contributions to the game. In addition, the NABC recognized the four coaches whose teams reached the 1993 Final Four—Dean Smith, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill; Steve Fisher, University of Michigan; Roy Williams, University of Kansas, and Rick Pitino, University of Kentucky. The NABC also recognized the contributions to higher education of outgoing NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz.
- The NABC announced during the Coaches Tribute that it will join with the American Cancer Society in "Coaches Against Cancer." The program will target the cancer society as the NABC's main charity. The NABC will work in conjunction with the organization on several fund-raising efforts in the coming year.
- An interested observer at the issues summit was Betty Jaynes, executive director of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. Jaynes said the WBCA and the NABC have three goals in mind that might be accomplished if the groups combine their efforts. First, she said the groups must zero in on common issues, the most important being NCAA legislation. Second, she said the WBCA is interested in the success of the NABC summit; success or failure of the event will determine whether the WBCA might initiate a similar forum or attempt to meet jointly with the men's coaches. A third goal of the two associations is to bring together executive directors of all coaches' associations for interaction. "In the last 15 months, Jim (Haney) and I really tried to put our heads together to intermesh the two associations in order to stand behind the issues we believe in," she said. "We felt like we could start with us as executive directors. Our efforts together are going to be something worth looking forward to in the future. We're trying to get not only in the same book but also to get on the same page."
- The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee staged a mock bracket selection for interested members. The committee presented an abbreviated version of the work it does during the selection weekend in March before first-round competition begins in the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship. Committee chair Tom Butters, athletics director at Duke University, was pleased with the attentiveness of the observers. "What we wanted to establish was dialogue and a better understanding between ourselves and the coaches and then between us and the public through the press," he said. "The questions that were asked indicated that we accomplished that. There has always been attached with the selection weekend a certain mysteriousness. With anything mysterious, there's also a tendency not to trust it. Hopefully, we have eliminated that mystery or lack of trust that might have been there before.'

- Pete Gillen, head men's basketball coach at Xavier University (Ohio) and Henry O. Nichols, secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee, addressed the summit with regard to playing-rules changes for the 1993-94 season. Nichols told coaches that one of the rules committee's primary concerns in the past few years has been the end of the game, when excessive fouling has lengthened the contest considerably. In the ongoing effort to address this problem, the rules committee adopted the 35-second shot clock for the upcoming season.
- Duke basketball player Grant Hill addressed the issue of student-athlete exploitation. "A lot of the players have felt that they have been exploited," he said. "I'll use an example that pertains to me. After we won the national championship the second time when we beat Michigan, there was a shirt being sold at school using my face and my name. I would go around campus and see a lot of people wearing that T-shirt. Somebody was making a lot of money using my face and name. Another example—I wanted to buy my dad a No. 33 jersey. a Blue Devil game jersey, so I went to the bookstore to purchase one, and it cost me $120 to buy my own game jersey."
- James Jarrett, athletics director at Old Dominion University, updated coaches on the charge of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity.
- Management consultants Jonathan B. Peck and Grady B. Hedgespeth presented "Skills for Life—" a program they developed to provide student-athletes with a better understanding of the world beyond athletics. Peck and Hedgespeth will work with the NABC to develop a series of presentations, exercises and discussions aimed at helping student-athletes succeed after graduation.

Student-athlete speaker

Rider College basketball player Al Flowers spoke to Rider faculty members, administrators and students in the first of a series of lectures entitled "People Who Made a Difference." Flowers, a junior majoring in finance, spoke about George Washington Carver and answered questions from the audience after completing his 50-minute lecture. Carver, like Flowers, was a member of the Phi Delta Sigma fraternity.

Ex-NCAA administrator can't get enough of baseball

By David D. Smale SPECIAL TO THE NCAA NEWS

If there ever was any question that Jerry Miles' passion is baseball, it can be dispelled with one trip to his Omaha, Nebraska, home.

Miles is executive director of the National High School Baseball Coaches Association, and his basement office is cluttered with baseball memorabilia. "As I look around the basement, it's all baseball," he said. "I've got too much now."

Miles

Actually, Miles cannot get too much baseball. That's fortunate for baseball.

College World Series

Miles was NCAA director of championships in 1979 when the College World Series reached a crossroads. The event had been successful, although a well-kept secret. ESPN, the cable network, was just getting started and was looking for events to fill the schedule. The network approached the NCAA to see what collegiate championships were available.

"Walter Byers (executive director at the time) called in the members of the championship events department to discuss those events that would not be televised through the network contracts," Miles said. "At that time we negotiated for both football and basketball. My first choice was the College World Series. Walter had some concerns and wondered whether it was that quality an event. I told him I thought it was a sleeping giant. There was no question it was great baseball, and I thought there would be interest all over the country.

"He took it to ESPN, and they weren't interested the first time around. They were concerned about weather problems. If they had their crews there and there were rainouts, it would possibly be very expensive. Also, they were questioning whether there was that much interest in college baseball."

When Byers came back from meeting with ESPN, he told Miles there wasn't any interest at all. Miles was not deterred.

■ Where are they now?

NCAA File

Jerry A. Miles

Address: P.O. Box 12354, Omaha, Nebraska 68112-0354.

Occupation: Executive director of the National High School Baseball Coaches Association.

Formerly: NCAA director of championships; executive director, American Baseball Coaches Association. Family: Wife, Elaine; son, Craig.

"I said, 'I really would like to see us pursue that one,'" Miles said. "'It's a great event, and I think that they will be very, very surprised. I do understand their concerns about the weather, but I think we ought to pursue it.' He said, 'You're really set on this thing, aren't you?' And I said, 'I am. It's a great event. It really is a sleeping giant.' He went back, and, as Walter could be, he was persuasive enough for them to do some of the games. It was an overnight success.... I think that without question, ESPN now looks at the College World Series as one of its prize events."

More salve than salt

The College World Series has not been without growing pains. And while Miles was at the center of much of the discomfort, he was more of a salve than salt.

When Miles took over as director in charge of the College World Series, the NCAA had a unique arrangement with Omaha. With most other championships, the sponsoring agency would share only in the revenues generated by attendance. But the NCAA shared all revenues with Omaha, a figure that increased with ESPN's coverage and that the NCAA eventually sought to limit

"Omaha felt like we were trying to take advantage of them now that we had some good money from television," Miles said. "But Walter felt that we were not being fair to our other championships to have this arrangement with the College World Series."

Miles was caught in the middle. "That was very difficult," he continued. "It took me many draftings of contracts to get Walter and Omaha to agree to it. I'm sure there were some people upset with me. I was only doing my job with the NCAA.

"We put a cap on the amount of money that they could get from television. That worked out well. They accepted that, because we were trying to get as much money back to the participating teams as we could."

Competing cities

While these negotiations were occurring, other cities began making bids to host the event—a matter of great concern to Omaha, which has hosted the CWS since 1950. "Omaha was almost beginning to get paranoid about it," Miles said. "They were thinking we were going to move it if they didn't agree to the new terms of the contract. They were completely separate.

"Nothing is set in concrete, but it would take one heck of a proposal to take the College World Series out of Omaha. I think the NCAA would have to be very careful. They could go to a larger facility, and they might draw well there, but it would be terrible to play in Minneapolis, who put in a big proposal, and have that facility half full.

"That would be a nice crowd; it would be bigger than we have here in Omaha. But it would lose the atmosphere and the great feeling that you have at the College World Series. It is something unique in college athletics—in all athletics, not just college athletics—to have an event that has the mystique that you do have with the College World Series."

When he left the NCAA in 1987 to become executive director of the American Baseball Coaches Association, Miles didn't have to travel far from Rosenblatt Stadium. "The city had said for years that they would provide an office space there," he said, "but the person I had replaced did not want to move the office there. We did set up the office there, in a very small space at Rosenblatt, and worked out of that office for four years."

High-school baseball

The ABCA originally was called the American Association of College Baseball Coaches, and although the name was changed, the association still places an emphasis on college baseball.

"The high schools felt they were being neglected," Miles said. "They came to me and said they would like to have their own association. My first question was, 'Is there a need and a desire for it?' I had to know that for a fact.

"I talked to a lot of people, including college coaches, to see if they felt there was a need and a desire. And to a man, they said no question about it.

"Coaches can be members of both organizations if they wish. I don't feel we're in competition at all. We have some college people who are members of our association. I've been criticized a little bit by some people within our new association that I haven't gone after college coaches, but I won't do that. I don't want people to feel that we're in competition. Our focus is on high-school baseball. We put on a convention where we try to feature high-school, professional and college coaches, but it's a chance for a high-school coach to appear before his peers."

The best part of the job for Miles is that he gets to see a lot of baseball. He spent Games 3, 4 and 5 of the 1993 World Series in Philadelphia meeting with representatives of Major League Baseball, one of the supporters of his association. He works out of his home with his wife, Elaine, who serves as his administrative assistant. Elaine has had three operations for multiple myloma, a blood cancer, but Jerry says she is doing well.

The College World Series is healthy, too. And Miles has fond recollections of his involvement in an era of exploding popularity for the event. "As I would go to other championships throughout the year and I would mention that one of the other championships that I had was the College World Series," he recalled, "people would say, 'Oh, I saw that on ESPN. Boy, that's really some event....'

"The power of television is scary. The caliber of baseball probably was better, but not that much better than in previous years; but the difference was the exposure of it. It just gained great attention."

Almost 67,000 engaged in NYSP, review shows

The National Youth Sports Program Committee reviewed documentation of programs held throughout the nation in 1993 during its October 16-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

The review noted that 170 institutions in 46 states and the District of Columbia enrolled 66,984 youths in NYSP sports and educational activities in 1993, and that 70,510 medical examinations were administered.

The committee also noted that in recognition of NYSP's 25th anniversary, institutions involved participants in community-service projects in an effort to contribute to host communities. Those activities included assisting in campus and city cleanup efforts, visiting senior-citizen centers, working with physically challenged children and adults, and helping to feed the hungry.

The committee also began reviewing the individual programs' compliance with Federal government guidelines. After the review's completion November 1, the committee will announce programs that merit special recognition.

NYSP annually provides summer sports and educational instruction to youths ages 10 through 16 who reside in low-income families.

Other highlights

In other actions at its October 16-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the National Youth Sports Program Committee:

- Selected five paid evaluators to assist with on-site data collection and evaluation Joseph DuBose, Harris-Stowe State College; Shirley Fredrick, University of Dayton; Jennifer Siu, University of Southern California; Pam Herrmann, Adams State College, and Gale Wiedow, University of South Dakota.
- Reviewed the applications of 36 institutions applying for grants in 1994, and selected 13 finalists to which new programs will be awarded, pending appropriation of Federal funds. That appropriation recently was considered in Congress (see page 4).
- Noted this was the first year that the evaluation process was enhanced by using a computer for data collection. After reviewing the process, the committee made minor revisions in the software program for next year.
- Developed an agenda and topics for the annual NYSP Workshop, which will be held for all participating institutions February 11-13 in Washington, D.C.

Four finalists for Babe Zaharias award named

Four woman athletes—including three from NCAA institutions—are finalists for the honor of being named the 1993 Babe Zaharias Female Amateur Athlete.

Two of the nominees—gymnast Shannon Miller of Edmond, Oklahoma, and softball player Lisa Fernandez of the University of California, Los Angeles—have been finalists in previous years. The other nominees are basketball player Sheryl Swoopes of Texas Tech University and swimmer Jenny Thompson of Stanford University.

The winner will receive a bronze trophy depicting the Olympic flame and a $10,000 scholarship. The award will be presented during a November 8 banquet in Beaumont, Texas.

Keynote speaker for the dinner will be Nancy Hogshead, president of the Women's Sports Foundation. The emcee will be Robin Roberts of ESPN.

Last year's award was won by swimmer Summer Sanders of Stanford. The winner is determined in a vote of the 218-member Zaharias Award National Selection Committee, made up of representatives from academia, media and athletics organizations.

The award is named for Mildred "Babe" Didrikson Zaharias, a Beaumont native who won two Olympic gold medals and also was a pioneer of women's professional golf.

Life-skills form due November 15

Institutions that have indicated in writing their interest in the pilot year of the NCAA life-skills program soon will receive a formal application.

The program, called CHAMPS for Division I-A institutions, will seek to enhance life skills for student-athletes in the areas of academics, athletics, personal development, service and career development.

The form must be returned to the NCAA national office by November 15. The pilot-program participants will be announced December 15 and will be in place by fall 1994.

Betty B. Norrie, program coordinator for the NCAA Foundation, said the list of professionals contributing to the development of the program is impressive. She continues to invite member institutions to send her any materials they may have on any component of the program.

What they are saying

Denise Lyons, head coach Keene State

"We're playing really well and though we're taking one game at a time, we're hoping in the back of our minds to reach the tournament again. We have a lot of depth this year and I can have a number of lineups now, according to the opposition."

Mike Covone, head coach

"We're a very young team. We start seven freshmen so there's a different atmosphere and mentality from last year's team. Every day is a new experience for them. We're very pleased where we are but there's plenty of soccer left to be played. Sonoma State, Franklin Pierce, Mercyhurst and Quincy all have very good teams."

Peter Reynaud, head coach Sonoma State

"Our biggest strength this year is our defense. We've been able to handle most every offense that has been thrown at us."

Division III Men's Soccer

Kean strong without key starters

Event: 1993 Division III Men's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Defending champion Kean is strong again despite losing eight starters from the 1992 squad—including all-American Fred Guiran, who passed up his senior year to play professionally in Colombia, and classmate Pascal Clerigo, who returned to France to help his father, who is ill. Guiran and Clerigo combined for nine goals and seven assists during last year's tournament. Ohio Wesleyan, runner-up in two of the last three championships, figures to be a top challenger, along with UC San Diego, Plattsburgh State and Rowan.

Field: Thirty-two teams from eight regions will be selected October 31.

Dates and sites: All games will be played at on-campus sites. First- and second-round games will be played November 5 and 6 or November 6 and 7. Third-round games will be completed by November 14. The semifinals and final will be November 19-20 or November 20-21.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 22 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Kean goalkeeper Shaun Graul wasn't even on the roster at the beginning of the season, but when Kean's top two goalies were either ineffective or injured, Graul joined the team and took over the starting spot. Graul posted six shutouts in his first seven games, including victories over Trenton State and Western Connecticut State ...Ohio Wesleyan stands 11-0 and atop the Intercollegiate Soccer Association of America Division III poll through mid-October. The Bishops were unbeaten last year at this time, before Otterbein knocked them off. This year, the Bishops avenged that defeat with an 8-2 romp over the Cardinals ....Gettysburg returns nine starters from a team that made the school's first tournament appearance last year. Senior wing Bob Tyson leads the Bullet attack, and sophomore goalie Kevin Wallace has filled a void in the goal with six shutouts.

What they are saying

John Martin, head coach Ohio Wesleyan

"What makes this team different is that we have the best depth we've ever had. We've had good teams in the past but we've been able to get by with eight or nine guys. We're 15 or 16 deep this year and we've had some injuries and guys have had to step up, and there's been no drop in the level of play. You have to be good and you have to be lucky to win in the tournament. The level of play in each round is so much better than it was even five years ago."

Division III Women's Soccer

Cortland State carries state banner

Event: 1993 Division III Women's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Last year's champion, Cortland State, became the sixth titlist from the state of New York. The Red Dragons will defend their crown without the services of goalkeeper Melissa Samuels, who completed her eligibility after holding all four opponents scoreless during last year's tournament. Freshman Carrie Horan has posted six shutouts in helping Cortland State to an 11-2-1 record thus far. The Red Dragons join UC San Diego, Plymouth State and Rochester as teams that have participated in all seven years of the tournament.

Field: Twenty teams from five regions will be selected October 31. Champions from the Empire Athletic Association, University Athletic Association and the State University of New York Athletic Conference will qualify automatically.

Jennifer Mazzucco helped Trenton State win nine of its first 10 games.

Dates and sites: All games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. First-round games will be November 3. Regionals will be November 6 and 7. The semifinals will be November 13, and the championship game will be November 14.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 15 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Gettysburg is off to a 13-0 start in its quest for the school's first tournament bid. The Bullets boast a veteran team, including goal-keeper Kathy Kroupa, who shut out Cortland State, 1-0... Trenton State began the season by winning nine of its first 10 games. The loss was a 2-1 setback to North Carolina Wesleyan; the victories were all shutouts.

What they are saying

Aliceann Wilber, head coach William Smith

"The Northeast region has had a lock on depth of quality teams the past two or three years, but that's becoming much more even throughout the country. More regions can now put up more legitimate teams."

Brian McManus, head coach UC San Diego

"We're trying to stay unbeaten the rest of the season just to get in the tournament. The trouble is, when you're an independent, you can only schedule what your budget allows. We've played only three Division III teams to date and we're still 10-0-1. In the past, our strength has been in our midfield players, but this year our talent is more spread out and we're playing really well together. We don't score the amount of goals we used to, but we may be better overall."

Division II Field Hockey

Coaches hope to preserve tourney

Event: 1993 Division II Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: Defending champion Lock Haven's only loss in its first 16 games came against Millersville, 4-3. The Marauders' triumph catapulted them into the top ranking in the South region. Millersville (10-4-1) also has beaten the South's third-ranked team, Longwood (9-5), and tied 1992 runner-up Bloomsburg. Key victories for Lock Haven came against Messiah and Shippensburg. Bloomsburg, the 1992 runner-up and apparently the class of the North again, outscored its first 17 opponents, 71-5. Bloomsburg's only blemish is the tie with Millersville.

Field: One team will be chosen from the North region and one from the South region.

Date and site: The championship game will be played November 7 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 8 issue of The NCAA News.

Millersville's Amber DeYoung has been a leader for the Marauder offense this season.

Championship notes: Last year, Lock Haven defeated Bloomsburg, 3-1, to win the first Division II championship held since 1983. In the previous championship, Bloomsburg beat Lock Haven, 1-0, for the title. The championship has been held only two other times, with Pfeiffer downing Bentley in 1981 and Lock Haven clipping Bloomsburg in 1982.

What they are saying

Sharon Taylor, head coach Lock Haven

"We've added some teams, but I don't think we'll be up to the limit of 40 (minimum needed for continuation of the championship) by the end of next year. If that's the case, under the proposed legislation to be voted on in January, we lose the championship. I think we should be given an extension so we can build it back up. With gender equity and some schools having to add a women's sport, I think we can."

Jan Hutchinson, head coach Bloomsburg

"I'd like to see this championship expand, but I don't think it's going to happen. I'm worried about losing what we have. If that happens, that could result in some programs getting dropped."

Sandra Bridgeman, head coach Longwood

"We try to play as many Division II South teams as we can. The travel costs more, but it's worth it to be seen by the other teams and to see what the other teams can do. I think it's great that Division II has a championship, but I hope it can be extended to three or four teams."

Division III Field Hockey

Teams adapt to new alignment

Event: 1993 Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Overview: Under a new regional alignment this year, Plymouth State got off to a 12-0 start in the Northeast, while Smith racked up a 12-1 record through October 18. Plymouth State notched shutouts in each of its first six games. In the South, Mary Washington and Eastern Mennonite appear to be the class of the field. Eastern Mennonite (7-1-2), which won its first six games, is the only team that has defeated Mary Washington (14-1), which in turn is the only team to have beaten Cortland State. Defending champion William Smith (15-1) and Cortland State (14-1) lead the North Atlantic. Last year's runner-up, six-time champion Trenton State, is up to its old tricks, building an 11-0 record and dominating the South Atlantic. Denison (12-3-1) leads the Great Lakes region.

Field: The 16-team field will be announced November 1. Two teams will be selected from each of the five regions; the remaining six teams will be selected at large

Dates and sites: Regionals will be November 6 and 7 on campuses of competing institutions. The semifinals and championship will be November 12 and 13 on the campus of one of the competing institutions.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 15 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: William Smith snapped Trenton State's two-year reign and 18-game winning streak and claimed its first title with a 1-0 victory in the championship game last year. Trenton State leads in all-time championships (six) and in title-game appearances (nine). Bloomsburg, Lock Haven and Ithaca are the only other teams to have won Division III championships. Bloomsburg and Lock Haven now play in Division II.

What they are saying

Sandra Brownscombe, head coach Eastern Mennonite

"Last year we were young and it was our first tournament appearance, so it was a learning experience. First of all, we learned we need to prepare studywise to play another week or two. That caught the players off-guard. We now know that we can play at the national level and we know how to prepare better."

Sally Scatton Bond, head coach William Smith

"We lost nine of 11 starters from last year, so I'm very happy we've been able to continue our success. It's very rewarding to see the team playing together. We knew we had the talent but we didn't have the experience of playing together as a unit."

■ Community service

Food drive held at Tennessee

The University of Tennessee, Knoxville, athletics department and the University of Tennessee campus ministers' council sponsored the second annual Tim Kerin Memorial Food Drive September 25. More than two tons of canned goods and $1,000 cash were collected. There were 103 University of Tennessee students involved.

The food drive is conducted in the memory of Tim Kerin, a longtime trainer at the institution who died suddenly in August 1992.

"The (food drive) is a worthy memorial to Tim Kerin's life and example," said Volunteers head football coach Phillip Fulmer. "Tim was always part of projects that were for the betterment of our community. He made a difference in many ways."

Grand Canyon helps homeless families

The Grand Canyon University women's volleyball team is doing a lot of grinning these days—not only because the team is off to a strong 14-3 start, but also because of its community-service program called "Aces for Smiling Faces."

In it, the team helps raise money for the Phoenix-based program. "The Bridge." The program helps homeless families break the cycle of welfare dependency and ushers them into becoming more self-sufficient. The team has been sponsored by four area companies, each of which pledged $5 for every service ace delivered by an Antelopes player. So far, the team has delivered enough aces to raise $1,460 for the program.

Division I field hockey: The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Field Hockey Committee is soliciting proposed budgets from potential hosts for the 1995 and 1996 finals of the Division I Field Hockey Championship. Budgets must be received in the national office by January 17, 1994. Interested institutions are asked to contact Michelle A. Pond, NCAA assistant director of championships.

NACDA clinic on facilities and fund-raising set for December

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) will hold its annual Facilities and Fund-Raising Clinic December 13-14 in Las Vegas.

This is the 28th year that NACDA has presented the program. Also, the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) begins a three-year period this year as the official sponsor of the clinic, which will be at the Las Vegas Hilton.

"The United States Olympic Committee's three-year sponsor-ship commitment to the NACDA Facility and Fund-Raising Clinic is a natural progression of our ongoing support of intercollegiate athletics," said Harvey W. Schiller, USOC executive director. "It is part of our long-range commitment to work with the intercollegiate community to enhance the development of our country's most valuable—resource, America's youth."

The University of Nevada, Las Vegas, will serve as host for the clinic and Nevada-Las Vegas athletics director Jim Weaver will serve as chair. The university also will offer a tour of its Thomas and Mack Center.

"We are very pleased to have the USOC involved in the clinic this year," Weaver said. "We have designed the program to appeal to any institution, large or small, that wishes to build or renovate an athletics facility and structure a fund-raising campaign to coincide with the project."

Those attending the clinic will be offered 14 sessions during the 1½-day program—seven on facilities and seven on fund-raising.

The highlight of the clinic will be a facility session presented by the USOC. It is titled "Venue Specifications for Hosting Olympic and International Events—How Your Athletics Facilities Can Be Used to Support the Olympic Movement."

Other topics pertaining to facilities are "Renovating Your Baseball Facility," "Recognizing Your Scoreboards' Potential to Generate Additional Dollars," "New Uses for Unused Facilities," "Choosing Sports Surfaces — Tools for Making an Informed Decision," "Building and Funding a New Facility to House Athletics and Academics" and "Ensuring Quality and Savings in Collegiate Athletics Facility Design and Construction."

Sessions on fund-raising are "Annual Giving Can Be Directly Proportionate to Facility Seating," "Facility Fund-Raising Ideas That Have Worked Best," "Nation's Third-Largest Weight-Training Facility Funded With Private Moneys," "Radio...The Real Way to Generate Dollars for Your Department," "Learn How to Maximize Your Contributions Without Building a New Arena," "The Importance of Private Philanthropy Dollars in rund-Raising for Athletics facilities" and "How Gender Equity Can Provide Access to Government Funding Sources."

Various exhibitors also will be at the clinic to provide information on products and services.

Registration for the clinic is from 9 to 10 a.m. December 13. The program begins at 10 a.m. A luncheon and evening reception also are scheduled.

Reservations for the clinic still are being accepted by NACDA. Reservation or clinic information can be obtained from Matt Wolfert at NACDA, telephone 216/892-

Some cross country coaches believe that lengthening the women's 5,000-meter race will make it more challenging and competitive.

Going the distance

Idea of lengthening women's race sparks controversy

By Steven R. Hagwell THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

It has been 13 years since women's cross country became an NCAA championship sport—a time during which some tremendous changes have occurred.

Sponsorship numbers have risen from a little more than 500 schools a decade ago to more than 700 today. Individually, women have gotten faster and stronger, resulting in a much more competitive sport nationwide. The sport also has become much more attractive to women, as evidenced by growth in the number of those who are competing.

But one thing has remained relatively constant: the distance of the women's race. For more than a decade, competition has been staged at a distance of 5,000 meters.

Many coaches feel it is time for the distance to be increased. They emphasize that women run 6,000 meters internationally and that men run 8,000 to 10,000 meters collegiately.

'Gray areas'

"This is an issue with very strong feelings on both sides," said Lou Duesing, men's and women's cross country and track and field coach at Cornell University and president of the Women's Intercollegiate Cross Country Coaches Association. "To many it's an issue that is strictly black and white. You either increase the length or you don't. But there's a lot more to it than that. There are a lot of gray areas."

Proponents say that lengthening the distance would provide more of a challenge for today's competitors. They believe the 5,000-meter race has become nothing more than a speed race that favors the middle-distance runner (for instance, an 800-meter runner). By increasing the distance, the sport would become more attractive to long-distance runners, they contend

"It's time people realize that cross country is for cross country runners and not 800-meter runners," said Jim Sackett, men's and women's cross country and track and field coach at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "The way it is now, with 5,000 meters, you have 800-meter runners competing against distance runners. The woman who runs 10K doesn't have the leg turnover to be successful against an 800-meter runner.

"By increasing the length of the race, you're going to help the distance runners...you're going to give them a better opportunity to excel."

Disagreement

Others disagree. They say an increase may indeed provide opportunities for long-distance runners, but it shouldn't be at the expense of middle-distance runners.

"The biggest concern is numbers," said Nancy Knop, women's cross country and track and field coach at St. Cloud State University, and a member of the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee. "If you increase the distance, you're going to lose some people. We don't want to make the sport exclusive. That's been the biggest resistance to change."

Proponents for change say an increase won't affect participation numbers. They point to the fact that the men increased the distance of their races from five miles to 8,000 and 10,000 meters, and participation is still high.

"I don't think increasing the

Houston sports group denies allegations

The head of a Houstonbased sports association is denying any wrongdoing in the wake of allegations he is soliciting money from colleges for his help recruiting top high-school basketball prospects.

The Houston Chronicle reported October 22 that more than a dozen NCAA Division I basketball coaches say John Eurey, president of the non-profit Texas Superstar Foundation, asked them for donations.

"I've never done that," Eurey said. "Never in my life have I ever recruited a player for anyone....I've never asked any coach for any donations."

An Associated Press account of the Chronicle story said, however, that Southwest Conference officials are investigating Eurey. Also, University of Houston athletics director Bill Carr said he has asked SWC Commissioner Steve Hatchell to determine whether Eurey violated Texas state laws involving NCAA violations.

A 1989 state law makes it a civil offense to be involved in a violation of NCAA regulations

One coach not identified by the newspaper said Eurey called him last year and asked his opinion of a particular prospect. When the coach expressed interest in the player, the coach said he was told by Eurey he would have to pay to get the player.

Championships issues dominate swim meetings

Championships format, qualifying procedures and methods to increase sponsorship of the sport were topics that highlighted the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee meeting October 11-15 in Marco Island, Florida.

The Division II and Division III subcommittees discussed significant changes in the formats of their championships. Due to a decrease in the number of Division II schools sponsoring men's swimming, the Division II subcommittee discussed the possibility of a combined-scoring championship for men and women should sponsorship numbers fall below the required minimum for the men's championships. The Division III subcommittee explored the feasibility of a standard four-day, common-site format (see accompanying reports on actions of division

Division I swimming

The Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the University of Texas at Austin serve as host of the 1995 Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

The Executive Committee already has approved the Indiana University Natatorium in Indianapolis as the site of the 1995 Division I Men's Championships.

The subcommittee, meeting in Marco Island, Florida, also clarified the process used by coaches to notify the subcommittee in the event that a student-athlete is unable to compete after he or she has been invited to the championships, as well as the process the committee will use to notify coaches should an alternate slot become available.

Division III swimming

The Division III subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee revised qualifying procedures for the 1994 Division III championships to divide the cap placed on the number of participants in the men's and women's championships into three "subcaps" that ensure that only 25 percent of the field is composed of relay-only swimmers.

All individual swimmers and all relay teams that have achieved "A" time standards will be entered in the meet, along with the maximum number of divers (22 for both men and women). One entry then will be added to each individual swimming event in event numerical order until the number of competitors added reaches but does not exceed the individual subcap (140 for men, 146 for women). This same process will be done for the relay events until the relay-only cap is reached (47 for men, 48 for women). During this process, the events will be filled until each event has the same number of qualifiers.

The subcommittee, which met in Marco Island, Florida, also voted to allow relay-only swimmers to swim in up to three individual events, as long as they have met the "B" times for those events.

In addition, the subcommittee will ask the NCAA Executive Committee for permission to survey the membership regarding the possibility of conducting a standard four-day, common-site championship as is currently done in Division II. The subcommittee is urging conferences to discuss this during their coaches' meetings.

The subcommittee also recommended that, effective with the 1995 championships, qualifying points for the three-meter diving championship be reduced from 415 to 410.

Division II swimming

The Division II subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee will urge support at the 1994 NCAA Convention of Proposal No. 2-132 in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation, which would establish 40 as the minimum number of member institutions necessary to continue an existing division or National Collegiate Championship.

Should the proposal be adopted, the subcommittee will ask the NCAA Executive Committee for permission to survey the membership concerning the possibility of a combined-scoring championship. The subcommittee prefers the separately scored but commonsite format currently in use for men and women. However, acknowledging that the number of institutions sponsoring men's swimming has dropped to 44 as of this season, the subcommittee is taking proactive measures in case such a format should become necessary.

The subcommittee, meeting in Marco Island, Florida, also heard concerns from the Division III subcommittee regarding Division II time standards, and agreed that the standards are proper. Because there is no cap placed on the number of participants at the Division II championships, the subcommittee reaffirmed its policies for setting standards to ensure competitive fields

The NCAA Council adopted at its August 1992 meeting a policy that authorizes the NCAA Eligibility Committee to treat cases involving recruiting violations with the same degree of flexibility afforded in all other eligibility cases.

The previous policy, which was adopted in 1974, stipulated that when a prospective student-athlete was involved in a violation of recruiting legislation and "recruiting advantage" was found (regardless of its significance), the Eligibility Committee was required either to restore eligibility completely or decline to restore eligibility, leaving the prospect permanently ineligible at the involved institution.

Often, an innocent prospective student-athlete was penalized severely for a violation for which the institution was primarily responsible. Accordingly, cases involving prospects will be treated in a manner similar to other cases in that the imposition of a condition for restoration will be based upon the nature of the violation committed, the extent of the involvement of the prospective student-athlete and an assessment of the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation.

However, the committee's treatement of such cases will continue to reflect a high level of sensitivity to the advantage gained through recruiting violations. Because the eligibility ramifications of violations that involve prospects and enrolled student-athletes continue to involve different issues, those cases that involve prospects will continue to be published separately from other matters.

Also, please note that any actions taken by the institution, conference or NCAA Committee on Infractions regarding the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation that caused the ineligibility of the student-athlete are reported along with the publication of the particular eligibility case.

■ Governmental affairs report

The following is a review of recent Federal activities affecting the NCAA membership. These reports are prepared by Squire, Sanders & Dempsey, the Association's legal counsel in Washington, D.C. This report was presented to the NCAA Council at its October 11-13 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri.

Title IX and women's sports

Litigation.

- Kelley v. University of Illinois. In the first decision addressing alleged gender bias against men, the U.S. District Court for the Central District of Illinois ruled September 1 that the University of Illinois, Champaign, did not violate Title IX or the Equal Protection Clause of the U.S. Constitution when it eliminated only the men's swimming team, and not the women's swim ming team. The court concluded that Illinois could cut men's programs without violating Title IX because men's interests and abilities are presumptively met when substantial proportionality exists. At Illinois, men's participation in athletics (76.6 percent) was more than substantially proportionate to their enrollment (56 percent). Conversely, the court noted that women's sports programs could not be cut, because women's participation in athletics already was disproportionate to their enrollment. The plaintiffs have appealed the decision.
- Stanley v. University of Southern California. On August 26, the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California denied the request of former University of Southern California women's head basketball coach Marianne Stanley for preliminary relief requiring Southern California to reinstate her as head coach with damages, back pay and full benefits, pending trial. Earlier in August, after unsuccessful efforts to negotiate renewal of her expired contract, Stanley had filed suit seeking $8 million in damages for alleged sex discrimination. She asserted that she performed substantially the same duties as the head coach of the men's basketball team and that the women's and men's head coach positions required substantially equal skill, effort and responsibility, but that she was paid less and received fewer benefits than the men's head coach. Both the Federal appeals court and Supreme Court declined to review that order. In its decision, the district court stated that disparate compensation is not alone clear evidence of sex discrimination, and found that Stanley was unlikely to establish violations of Title IX and other laws prohibiting sex discrimination.
- Bryant v. Colgate University. On August 4, female athletes at Colgate University filed a class-action lawsuit asking the court to order Colgate to upgrade women's ice hockey from club to varsity status. In April, a Federal appeals court ruled in Cook v. Colgate University that a similar Title IX action by members of the women's ice hockey team in their individual capacities was moot because none of the five studentathletes who sued would be at Colgate next season, and set aside an earlier district court ruling requiring Colgate to elevate the women's ice hockey team to varsity status.
- Tyler v. Howard University. In late July, Howard University filed a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial, asserting that women's basketball coach Sanya Tyler had failed to prove a violation of Title IX, the Equal Pay Act or other laws. In a widely reported decision in late June, a jury awarded Tyler $2.45 million (later reduced by the judge to $1.06 million) in her lawsuit claiming that Howard had discriminated against her in violation of Title IX and other laws by, among other things, paying her about half of what it paid the men's basketball coach. The judge has not yet ruled on Howard's motion.

Other Title IX action. The coach of the Oklahoma State University women's golf team filed suit in Federal court in early August claiming that the university is discriminating against her on the basis of sex by paying her less than it pays the men's golf coach.

Related Title IX developments.

- The University of California, Los Angeles, announced in August that it was suspending its decision to eliminate women's gymnastics, after notice from female gymnasts that they would file a Title IX lawsuit if UCLA proceeded with its plans. Last year, women made up 50 percent of the student body and 28 percent of the studentathletes. UCLA is proceeding with plans to eliminate its men's gymnastics and swimming programs at the end of the 1993-94 academic year.
- The Gulf South Conference announced a gender-equity initiative in September, under which seven conference members will study the Title IX compliance plan being implemented by conference member University of North Alabama to determine whether adjustments are needed in their athletics programs. The compliance plan is a "corrective action" letter issued by the Department of Education Office for Civil Rights (OCR) after an investigation of the North Alabama athletics program. The plan requires North Alabama, among other things, to recruit female athletes more actively, improve publicity and competition schedules for women's teams, and provide women's teams with more money for travel, better equipment and a fair share of the institution's practice and playing facilities. Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights Norma Cantu attended the press conference at which the North Alabama findings were announced, and hailed the conference

Gender-equity hearing and disclosure. On August 4, the House Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness, chaired by Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Illinois, held a fourth hearing on gender equity in sports. In contrast to previous hearings, which focused on college sports, the August hearing addressed gender equity in high-school athletics. Two women coaches, one of a high-school girls' basketball team and one of a high-school boys' basketball team, and a female studentathlete were among the witnesses.

On September 17, as part of the Congressional Black Caucus Annual Legislative Weekend, Collins chaired a workshop entitled "Gender Equity: Its Impact on the African-American Student Athlete." Former Howard basketball coach Sanya Tyler (see previous item) and the Rev. Jesse Jackson were among the workshop participants.

Collins took the opportunity at both the hearing and the workshop to promote the gender-equity disclosure bill (H.R. 921) that she introduced earlier this year. Hearings have not been scheduled on that bill or on an omnibus gender-equity bill (H.R. 1793) that deals primarily with primary and secondary education issues, but that includes the text of H.R. 921. Similarly, no action has been taken on H.R. 1743, which would establish an Office of Women's Equity within the Department of Education, the mission of which would be (among other things) to promote gender-equity policies and provide grants to develop model equity programs.

On September 20, Sen. Carol Moselcy-Braun, D-Illinois, introduced S. 1468, which would require higher-education institutions to disclose information on men's and women's intercollegiate athletics programs, including participation rates, personnel, recruitment, scholarships and expenditures. The bill is nearly identical to the Collins measure. Three other bills addressing gender equity in education also were introduced in the Senate in mid-September—S. 1463, the "Fairness in Education for Girls and Boys Act," sponsored by Sen. Barbara

A. Mikulski, D-Maryland; S. 1464, the "Women's Educational Equity Restoration Act." sponsored by Sen. Paul Simon, D-Illinois, and S. 1465, the "Gender Equity in Education Amendments Act," sponsored by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. These three bills focus primarily on gender equity at the elementary and secondary school levels, although S. 1464 would establish an Office of Gender Equity within the Department of Education that would promote and coordinate gender-equity programs at all levels of education. S. 1464 also would authorize the secretary of education to make grants to enable grantees, including those in postsecondary education, to conduct activities aimed at achieving compliance with Title

OCR enforcement policy. Assistant Secretary for Civil Rights Cantu reportedly is working on a plan due to be released this month to enhance the effectiveness of OCR enforcement activities. Elements of the plan include revision of the Title IX Athletics Investigator's Manual, coordination of activity among the 10 OCR regional offices, and close cooperation with the Department of Justice, which has authority to prosecute discrimination cases in Federal court. Assistant Secretary Cantu also has said that OCR plans to monitor more closely institutions that have agreed to take steps to correct Title IX violations. She also plans to provide more technical assistance to institutions that conduct their own compliance reviews and to issue policy statements with clear interpretations of Title IX.

Student-athlete graduation rates

It now appears that Congress may consider proposed technical amendments to the Higher Education Act this month. If the legislation is amended as expected, it will include a provision postponing the initial required reporting date under the Student Right-to-Know Act until the July 1 that first occurs at least 270 days after the date the final regulations are issued. Such an amendment would permit institutions adequate time to develop reporting mechanisms that conform to the terms of the final regulations, and assure the NCAA an opportunity to apply for a reporting waiver for its members in accordance with the terms of the Student Right-to-Know Act. It is now anticipated that the Department of Education will issue revised proposed regulations in the first part of November. During September, NCAA Executive Director Richard D. Schultz wrote Assistant Secretary of Education David Longanecker, expressing concern that if proposed and final regulations were not issued soon, member institutions would experience difficulty in meeting the July 1 deadline because of the amount of time required to collect, compile and verify graduation rate data

Antidrug-abuse legislation

On September 23, the chairmen of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Delaware, introduced companion anticrime measures (H.R. 3131 and S. 1488), each of which would impose criminal penaltics on physical trainers and coaches who persuade or induce individuals to use anabolic steroids. The language in both bills is virtually identical to that contained in the omnibus crime bill introduced earlier this year (S. 8) and the one considered in the last Congress (H.R. 3371).

On July 28, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, introduced S. 1303, the "Quality Assurance in the Private Sector Drug Testing Act of 1993." The legislation is identical to the bill he introduced in the last Congress. With limited exceptions, S. 1303 would prohibit random testing of employees other than sensitive employees, which include professional athletes, and would prohibit disclosure, with limited exceptions, of the results of drug tests to anyone other than the individual being tested.

No action has been taken on two other pending measures to impose Federal standards regulating drug-testing programs. H.R. 33 would establish standards for the certification of laboratories engaged in urine drug testing and regulate drug-testing programs; H.R. 377 would establish Federal standards to ensure the quality of drugtesting programs.

National Youth Sports Program

On September 28—during consideration of H.R. 2518, the fiscal year 1994 appropriations bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS), and Education—the Senate adopted an amendment offered by Sens. Dennis DeConcini, D-Arizona, and Slade Gorton, R-Washington, allocating $12 million for the National Youth Sports Program (NYSP), provided that the NCAA national office matches in cash one-half of the difference between the $12 million and the 1993 funding level of $9.4 million, or $1.3 million. Sens. Thad Cochran, R-Mississippi; Herb Kohl, D-Wisconsin; Bill Bradley, D-New Jersey; Jeff Bingaman, D-New Mexico; Jim Sasser, D-Tennessee; Biden of Delaware; Harry M. Reid, D-Nevada; Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-New York; John W. Warner, R-Virginia; Strom Thurmond, R-South Carolina; Robert J. Dole, R-Kansas; Trent Lott, R-Mississippi; John H. Chafee, R-Rhode Island; Larry E. Craig, R-Idaho; Dave Durenberger, R-Minnesota; John C. Danforth, R-Missouri; Connie Mack, R-Florida; William S. Cohen, R-Maine; Carl M. Levin, D-Michigan; Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho; Pete V. Domenici, R-New Mexico; Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas; Richard H. Bryan, D-Nevada; Bob Graham, D-Florida; David L. Boren, D-Oklahoma, and Charles S. Robb, D-Virginia, cosponsored the amendment. The cash match was added to the original draft amendment prepared by DeConcini and Gorton following insistence by Sen. Harkin, chair of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee with jurisdiction over the NYSP, on some measure of additional cash contribution by the NCAA.

Earlier, on September 14, the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, HHS, and Education marked up H.R. 2518 and allocated $5 million for the NYSP, a decrease from the $12 million approved by the House. The Senate passed H.R. 2518 September 29 and the measure will go to conference.

Sports broadcasting, communications and copyright

Sports migration. On September 27, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Massachusetts, chair of the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, spoke on sports migration. He noted the decrease in certain professional events on free television and said that national and regional preclusive contracts have sharply decreased the number of locally broadcast college football games. He expressed concern over pay-perview coverage of professional and college sports events, and said that professional and college sports must not succumb to the pressure to produce new revenue and to charge a fee per show. Markey plans to hold a hearing on sports migration this fall, but a date has not been set.

In July, Markey wrote to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), which is studying the migration of sports programming from broadcast television to cable sports networks and pay-per-view services, and urged it not to look strictly at total numbers but instead to focus on emerging trends in major markets. In a July 1993 interim report to Congress, the FCC concluded that there is no discernible migratory

California state system announces gender-equity plan

California State University's athletes are going to be on a level playing field, whether male or female.

That's the promise made in a settlement announced October 21 by the state university system and the California chapter of the National Organization for Women.

California NOW had sued the university in February, claiming women weren't given equal athletic opportunities or funding in the 20-campus state university system.

Under terms of the out-of-court

Under terms of the out-of-court settlement, The Associated Press reported that the CSU system will work to give female athletes the same considerations bestowed on their male counterparts by the 1998-99 school year.

By the 1998-99 school year, each state university system campus with an NCAA intercollegiate athletic program must:

Make athletics opportunities for women proportional to the number of NCAA-eligible female undergraduates on each campus, within 5 percent. For example, if women make up 50 percent of the student body at a campus, at least 45 percent of the student athletes must be women.

■ Provide female athletes with a ratio of funding within 10 percent of the women enrolled on each campus. For example, men's sports trend toward cable, and stated that it planned further study of "preclusive contracts" between college football conferences and video programming vendors. In late July, ABC and ESPN urged the FCC not to make decisions on preclusive contracts that might interfere with the pending Federal Trade Commission investigation of the College Football Association or a pending private lawsuit. The FCC will release a further notice of inquiry later this year or early next year to continue its study of sports migration.

"Right-to-view" sports-event legislation. No action has been taken on the two bills introduced by Rep. William O. Lipinski. D-Illinois, relating to viewing of sports programming. One of those bills, H.R. 1987, would prohibit pay-per-view charges for entertainment events that receive public financial support and would cover games between NCAA member institutions. H.R. 1988 would authorize viewing of video telecasts of professional sports events at places of public accommodation, subject to payment of a fec set by the Copyright Royalty Tribunal.

Cable and satellite copyright reform. On August 3, the chairmen of the House and Senate subcommittees with jurisdiction over the Copyright Royalty Tribunal, Rep. William Hughes, D-New Jersey, and Sen. DeConcini of Arizona, each introduced bills-H.R. 2840 and S. 1346-to abolish the Copyright Royalty Tribunal and replace it with ad hoc arbitration panels. On August 5, the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration marked up H.R. 2840 and approved it for full committee action. The Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Patents, Copyrights and Trademarks was scheduled to hold a hearing on the tribunal and S. 1346

On September 22, DeConcini introduced a bill (S. 1485) to extend the compulsory license for satellite carrier retransmissions of television broadcast signals, which will expire December 31, 1994, and to amend the compulsory license for cable systems to cover wireless video retransmissions. In his floor statement, DeConcini made clear his commitment to reform and repeal of the two licenses, but indicated that short-term reform is needed until repeal is accomplished. Earlier, on August 5, the House Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration marked up H.R. 1103, which also would permanently extend the satellite carrier license and make wireless cable operators eligible to use the cable compulsory license, and approved the bill for full committee action. As is true of S. 1485, H.R. 1103 is intended as a stopgap measure while omnibus cable and satellite copyright reform is considered.

Other cable and satellite copyright reform bills also are pending. These measures include companion bills H.R. 897 and S. 373, the "Copyright Reform Act of 1993" (the portions of these bills relating to the tribunal have been amended and introduced separately as H.R. 2840 and S. 1346), and H.R. 759, which would expand the definition of a cable system. Also, no action has been taken on the measures relating to cable retransmission of television broadcast stations (H.R. 12 and H.R. 190). On September 28, Rep. Joe Barton, R-Texas, introduced a bill (H.R. 3157) to repeal the 1992 Cable Act, except for the retransmission consent provisions. In direct contrast to H.R. 3157, H.R. 190 would repeal only the retransmission consent provision in the 1992 cable law.

Sports broadcasting and baseball antitrust immunity. On September 30, the Senate Judiciary Committee marked up S. 500, which would subject professional baseball teams and leagues to the Federal antitrust laws. The committee plans to hold additional hearings on the bill. Two measures are pending in the House (H.R. 108 and H.R. 1549) that similarly would repeal in whole or in part professional baseball's antitrust immunity. In a related development, a Federal district court ruled August 4 that baseball's judicially granted exemption from the antitrust laws applies only to player contracts and does not protect baseball from an action relating to an effort to purchase a baseball franchise.

1990 cable royalty fees. Hearings in the proceeding to distribute the more than $183 million in 1990 cable royalty fees began in early September and are likely to continue through the fall. A decision is unlikely to be issued before the end of 1993.

1991 cable royalty fees. On September 14, the Phase I claimants requested that the tribunal distribute 90 percent of the $188 million in the 1991 cable royalty fund using the percentage shares awarded to each party in the 1989 proceeding. The tribunal has solicited comment on the request for partial distribution and is expected to rule on it before the end of the year.

1992 cable and satellite royalty fees. On July 30, the NCAA filed claims on behalf of itself and its members for a share of the $188 million in 1992 cable royalty fees and the $6.6 million in 1992 satellite carrier royalty fees. The tribunal is unlikely to turn to distribution of these fees until after resolution of disputes regarding distribution of the 1990 and 1991 cable royalty funds.

Tax issues

Tax law changes. On August 10, President Clinton signed the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1993 (OBRA) into law. Three of the law's provisions will potentially affect the NCAA and its member institutions.

- Disclosure of "quid pro quo contributions." Effective January 1, 1994, a charitable organization that offers goods or services to a donor in return for a deductible charitable contribution of more than $75 will be required to give the donor a written statement that provides a good-faith estimate of the value of the good or service in question and that identifies the portion of the contribution that is deductible.
- Limitation on deductibility of business meals and entertainment expenses. The deductible portion of otherwise allowable business meal and entertainment expenses is reduced from 80 percent to 50 percent, effective for tax years after December 31, 1993. This provision may have an adverse effect on the purchase of tickets to intercollegiate sporting events for business use. Bills have been introduced in the House and Senate to repeal this reduction; they are S. 1495, introduced by Sen. Daniel K. Inc uye, D-Hawaii, September 28, and H.R. 3031, introduced by Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-New Jersey, September 8.
- Disallowance of deduction for lobbying expenses. Effective January 1, 1994, a Federal income tax deduction will not be allowed for lobbying expenses, and members of certain tax-exempt associations will be precluded from deducting dues to the extent of the associations' lobbying expenditures. At the same time, the definition of lobbying has been expanded considerably. The OBRA provision will have only a limited effect on entities such as the NCAA that are tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3).

Possible changes in lobbying rules. Although the OBRA provision will have little effect on Section 501(c)(3) entities, the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the House Ways and Means Committee is considering possible changes that would affect those entities more directly. At hearings in September, the subcommittee considered proposals to impose a 30 percent excise tax on expenditures of tax-exempt organizations for lobbying and to expand the definition of lobbying, for purposes of existing restrictions on lobbying activity by 501(c)(3) organizations, to include contacts with regulatory agencies.

Exemption of sponsorship payments from unrelated business income taxation (UBIT). The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has not yet issued final regulations concerning the taxation of corporate-sponsorship payments received by tax-exempt entities. The Bush administration had issued proposed regulations in mid-January that distinguished between a mere acknowledgment of corporate sponsorship and corporate advertising on a liberal basis. Nor has action been taken on the companion bills, H.R. 1551 and S. 1171, that address the tax treatment of corporate-sponsorship payments and are essentially designed to provide relief in the event the IRS fails to issue its currently proposed regulations in final form.

IRS audits of universities. On July 28, the IRS held a hearing on the proposed audit guidelines to be used in examining colleges and universities, which were published in early January. These guidelines touch on intercollegiate athletics and instruct examiners to obtain copies of coaches' disclosure forms and to examine income derived from athletics and payments from athletics booster clubs to coaches and

The Subcommittee on Oversight of the House Ways and Means Committee held hearings June 15 and August 2, in which the IRS presented testimony on recent examinations of Section 501(c)(3) entities, including the coordinated audits of 11 colleges and universities. UBIT is one problem area that has emerged in the coordinated audits.

Other tax issues. At the hearings of June 15 and August 2, the subcommittee also considered instances of alleged excessive compensation and self-dealing in the taxexempt area and the question of additional public disclosure. Proposed legislation on these issues may be introduced this year. In addition, the IRS may revise Form 990, the information return filed by tax-exempt organizations. The revisions reportedly may require, among other things, disclosure of payments from related organizations, such as booster groups, to persons such as coaches. Previously, the reporting requirement was limited to payments received directly from the reporting institution.

Scholarships and student loans

One of the items considered by the Subcommittee on Select Revenue Measures of the House Committee on Ways and Means at its June 17 hearing was a proposal-introduced in April by Rep. Benjamin L. Cardin, D-Maryland, as H.R. 1667—to provide taxpayers with a choice of a credit or deduction for interest paid on student loans used to pay for qualified higher-education expenses (generally, tuition, fees, room and board, and related expenses). The amount of the credit or deduction would be phased out ratably for taxpayers with adjusted gross income in the $40,000 to $50,000 range (unmarried individuals) and $60,000 to $90,000 (married individuals filing joint returns).

No action has been taken on the other six pending bills that would address the tax treatment of scholarships and interest paid on student loans. Three measures would provide tax relief for interest paid on certain educational loans, one would restore the pre-1986 exclusion for scholarships, and two bills would restore both the prior law exclusion for scholarships and fellowships and the deduction for interest paid on educational loans.

Other government action regarding athletics

FTC complaint against the College Football Association. To date, the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has not issued a decision in the appeal of the dismissal of the FTC complaint against the College Football Association and Capital Cities/ABC Inc. There is no deadline for issuance of a decision.

Limited antitrust exemption for standards setting. No action has been taken on H.R. 2249, which would insulate Section 501(c)(3) (nonprofit amateur athletics organizations) from antitrust liability for establishing equipment standards and rules of competition.

Review of service academy athletics programs. The third meeting of the Defense Advisory Committee on Service Academy Athletics Programs, which is charged with reviewing the athletics programs at the three military academies, was held at the U.S. Air Force Academy September 7-10. After a fourth and final meeting scheduled for Washington, D.C., February 1-3, 1994, the committee will prepare and submit a report. NCAA Executive Director Schultz is a member of the committee.

Antigambling legislation

With the passage of the August 2 deadline for the New Jersey Legislature to approve a measure authorizing casino-based sports betting, the proposal cannot be placed on the ballot in November for consideration by New Jersey voters. Under the Professional and Amateur Sports Protection Act of 1992, New Jersey was given until the end of 1993 to pass an amendment authorizing casinobased sports betting, or be permanently barred from doing so under the act's general prohibition against new state-authorized gambling schemes. The NCAA expressed its opposition to the amendment, even after college sports were removed from the terms of the authorizing resolution. NCAA opposition stemmed from its traditional opposition to gambling on all sports in any form, as well as from concern that passage in 1993 of an amendment dealing only with professional sports might be broadened at a later time to include college games.

country."

Increasing the distance of the women's race to 6,000 meters is not a new topic. In 1991, the Men's and Women's Track and Field Committee voted to increase the length of the event from 5,000 to 6,000 meters. The coaches association, however, objected.

Opposition centered on the belief that the move was nothing more than a means to solve an administrative problem.

"There are some coaches who are in favor of changing because of meet administration," Duesing said. "There have been a couple of national meets where things really got clogged up at the finish. There's a feeling that with a longer race, that is less likely to happen.

"I really take issue with people who want to change the race just for administrative issues."

subcommittees).

Both subcommittees will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that surveys be sent to the membership regarding those

The committee also reacted to proposals submitted by U.S. Swimming (USS) that were intended to address issues of mutual concern to the NCAA and that organization.

In response, the committee:

■ Requested that the NCAA fill the position on the USS Board of Directors allotted to the Association in accordance with the Amateur Sports Act.

■ Requested that USS reevaluate its decision to conduct the spring 1995 U.S. National Championships on dates that conflict with both the NCAA Division I women's and Division III men's championships.

■ Requested that USS reevaluate its decision to conduct the 1996 Olympic Trials on dates between February 1 and the NCAA championships.

The committee cited academic concerns, restructuring of the collegiate swimming season as it pertains to conference championships and the inability of Division I women and Division III men to compete at the U. S. Nationals among reasons for its counterproposals.

Swimming rules

The rules subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Swimming Committee adopted several rules changes during the committee's October 11-15 meeting in Marco Island, Florida.

Those changes, which were ratified by the committee, are subject to NCAA Executive Committee approval for the 1994-95 season. The

  - Allowed for the meet referee or meet committee to have authority to suspend competition whenever a swimmer or diver suffers a laceration or wound where bleeding or oozing occurs, until medical personnel have had an appropriate amount of time to treat the injury.

- Inserted language regarding recessed hand
- Clarified finish requirements for backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly races.

1993 Column No. 38

NCAA Bylaw 11.7.5.1.1.2

Recruiting travel combined with other travel

Division I institutions should note that a coach who combines nonrecruiting travel (e.g., vacation, speaking engagement) with a recruiting trip may be replaced for purposes of recruitment with another authorized coach, provided the coach being replaced does not engage in additional recruiting activities until after he or she has returned to the institution's campus. The coach leaving campus may depart no earlier than the time the replaced coach normally would return to the home transportation site (if the coach had been returning to campus). Please note that during its September 16, 1993, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that an institution's coach who is involved in nonrecruiting activities (e.g., vacation, speaking engagement) and has yet to engage in any recruiting activities may engage in recruiting activities prior to returning to campus if the initiation of the coach's recruiting activities does not cause the institution to exceed its limit on the number of coaches who may recruit prospects off campus "at any one time." For example, if two basketball coaches are off campus recruiting during the academic year, and a third coach is on vacation and has yet to engage in any recruiting activities since his departure from campus, it would be permissible for the third coach to engage in recruiting activities prior to returning to campus, provided one of the two coaches has returned to campus.

Evaluations

Division I women's basketball—North Dakota

Division I institutions should note that pursuant to

NCAA Constitution 4.1.3-(g) and 5.2.3.1, the NCAA Administrative Committee and the NCAA Council have approved the following change in evaluation periods. Effective immediately, in the state of North Dakota, evaluations shall be permissible only between July 8 and July 31 and between November 2 and November 22. Please note this revision will be incorporated into the 1994-95 NCAA

This material was provided by the legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question or comment regarding this column, such correspondence should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Proposals

Forty-three proposals for Presidential Agenda Day are identified for action

Council), four additional proposals supported by the Commission and eight that the Commission will actively oppose.

The remaining seven include six that are in the package only because they relate directly to one or more of the others (for example, a series of changes in the recruiting contact and evaluation regulations) and one, dealing with summer financial aid, on which the Commission is neutral but that is reportedly of particular interest to a number of chief executive officers.

Among the 43 are the two gender-equity proposals from the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force; most of the proposals developed by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Financial Conditions in Intercollegiate Athletics, and a number of resolutions calling for studies of such matters as the membership structure, need-based financial aid, biennial Conventions. and integrity and sportsmanship

There are eight proposals for Presidential Agenda Day dealing with coaching limitations, nine on recruiting issues, and eight on playing and practice seasons.

The 43 proposals will be reviewed in detail in a November issue of The NCAA News.

Roll calls

Because the Association's electronic voting procedures now operate so smoothly, the Commission officers have little hesitation in specifying roll-call voting.

The fact that many proposals have multiple sections with different voting requirements will result in many more roll-call votes than 43. Also, motions to dispose of any issue proposed for roll call—such as tabling or postponing—also must be taken by roll call.

Etc.

The Council has the authority to submit additional amendmentsto-amendments or resolutions at the Convention itself if it can get a three-fourths majority vote in its pre-Convention meeting. If that does not occur, there will be no other proposals to vote upon at the January 9-12 business sessions in San Antonio.

All 192 proposals will be printed in the Official Notice of the Convention, which will be mailed from the national office November 15. All also will be reviewed in a series of articles in the News beginning November 15.

The Official Notice also will contain the official schedule of meetings for the Convention, with the specific times for business sessions to be determined between now and that mailing via an analysis of the specific proposals scheduled for each session.
