Guiding principles to shape student-athlete welfare work

Committee changes earlier approach to studying topic

A special committee's efforts to study student-athlete welfare, access and equity is resulting in the creation of a set of principles that ultimately will shape the committee's recommendations.

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity, meeting November 4 in Dallas, outlined several topic areas from which those guiding principles will be derived.

Those topic areas are:

- Student-athlete health and safety.
- Integration of student-athletes into academia.
- Student-athlete involvement in athletics matters.
- Diversity in intercollegiate athletics.
- Primacy of the relationship between the coach and student-athlete.

Change in approach

The move to establish a set of principles marks a change in approach by the committee, which earlier had formed four subcommittees to study the following topics: student-athlete involvement and empowerment, student-athlete/coach relationships, student athlete life, and appreciation for diversity.

Those subcommittees discovered that the topics overlapped in many instances, making it difficult for groups to work independently. That prompted committee members to agree that a set of guiding principles is needed for the purpose of establishing a framework for discussion, heightening awareness of particular issues and providing successful alternatives.

The committee anticipates that establishment of those principles will result in consideration of student-athlete and NCAA needs related to achieving any goals that may be suggested by those principles, as well as appropriate activities for the Association and member institutions as they pursue those goals.

The committee formed what is essentially a "steering" group for the purpose of creating draft principles for consideration by the committee at its next meeting. The steering group also will attempt to identify needs and activities that may result from establishment of those principles.

Possible results

Committee members also are beginning to envision a few of the eventual results of their efforts. An

Consent package contains all-time low of 10 proposals

This is the first in a series of six articles on the legislation that has been submitted for the 88th annual NCAA Convention, January 8-12, 1994, in San Antonio. In addition to announcing the mailing of the Official Notice of the Convention, the article reviews the 10 proposals in the consent package. In the next five issues of The NCAA News, the other groupings of amendments will be reviewed in the order in which they appear in the Convention agenda.

The smallest consent package in NCAA Convention history heads a total of 193 proposals appearing in the Official Notice of the 1994 Convention, which was mailed to the membership November 15.

The consent package—which has been shrinking since the NCAA Council was given the authority to enact noncontroversial but necessary legislation between Conventions—includes only 10 proposals this year. Previously, the 1986 and 1992 consent packages were the smallest submitted to the Convention, with 13 proposals each.

Those proposals—which address such issues as committee membership and terms, amendment procedures for Convention proposals, limited replacement of coaches, and student-athlete transfers and eligibility—are considered noncontroversial or "housekeeping" in nature. The group will be disposed of with a single motion and a single vote, unless a delegate asks that a given proposal be removed for a separate vote.

Order of business

Although the consent package is the first set of proposals appearing in the Official Notice, it will not be the first legislation considered by the Convention.

For the second year, the Convention first will consider proposals identified by the NCAA Presidents Commission as being of significant interest to chief executive officers. Sessions Monday, January 10—designated as Presidential Agenda Day—will be devoted to those proposals, first in morning subdivision

NCAA Woman of the Year Nnenna Lynch.

Villanova star named Woman of the Year

Nnenna Lynch, an all-American cross country and track standout and summa cum laude graduate of Villanova University, was named the 1993 NCAA Woman of the Year at an awards dinner November 9 in Washington, D.C.

Lynch, a Rhodes scholar who graduated with a 3.920 grade-point average (4.000 scale) in sociology, won the 3,000-meter run at the 1992 NCAA Division I Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships and placed third at last year's Division I Women's Cross Country Championships.

She also was a finalist at the 1992 U.S. Olympic Trials and helped lead Villanova to four consecutive Division I cross country titles.

Lynch was one of 10 finalists for the award presented by Champion Products. It equally weighs an individual's achievements in athletics, academics and community service; the finalists were selected from a pool of 51 regional winners (the 50 states, plus the District of Columbia).

Lynch is involved with several community outreach programs, including the Campus Ministry soup kitchen in

Executive director

Dempsey to join NCAA at beginning of year

Cedric W. Dempsey will assume his duties as NCAA executive director January 1.

Dempsey, currently athletics director at the University of Arizona, will replace Richard D. Schultz, who is expected to conclude his duties December 31. Dempsey's selection as the new executive director was announced November 5.

For more detail, see the November 8 issue of The NCAA News.

Gender equity

Sourcebook subcommittee makes preliminary plans

A subcommittee of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force continues to solicit ideas that can aid in achieving gender equity.

At a recent meeting, the sourcebook subcommittee developed a plan for the publication that includes an introduction and overview of the history of the gender-equity sourcebook, the 1993 NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force report, a compilation of solution strategies in place at various member schools, funding strategies, a bibliography of resources available from other agencies and organizations, samples of letters of findings from the Office of Civil Rights, and an up-to-date summary of Title IX litigation.

Those who have ideas on relevant topics are asked to contact Janet M. Justus, women's issues coordinator, at the NCAA national office.

Student-athlete welfare

Committee creating set of principles

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity has outlined several topic areas from which a set of guiding principles will be derived. Those principles ultimately will shape the committee's recommendations.

At its November 4 meeting, the group agreed to change from its original approach. The committee had formed four subcommittees, each of which would explore a particular topic. However, it became evident that many topics were overlapping, making it difficult for the groups to work independently.

A complete review of the committee's meeting appears on page 1.

Litigation

Nevada case in appeal; UNLV report finalized

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has released its report on the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, concluding an infractions case that was delayed by a Nevada statute that prevented the Association from applying its rules to Nevada institutions.

A U.S. district judge ruled that the statute is unconstitutional, and a three-judge panel for the Ninth Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals is in the process of considering the appeal.

The NCAA filed the suit November 12, 1991. The Association was permitted to proceed with the case involving Nevada-Las Vegas when the judge ruled for the NCAA in June 1992. The committee's report appears on page 15 of this issue.

Foreign student-athletes

During its October 1992 meeting, the NCAA Council authorized the NCAA Olympic Sports Liaison Committee to survey the three membership divisions to determine the number of foreign student-athletes competing in the 1991-92 academic year. The committee is using the information in its study of problems associated with the application of the NCAA's amateurism rules to foreign student-athletes.

A total of 610 institutions responded, including 100 of 106 in I-A.

The average number of foreign student-athletes at the responding institutions was 8.55; by division, the averages were 16.33 (I-A), 11.17 (I-AA), 9.77 (I-AAA), 6.65 (II), and 4.75 (III).

Briefly in the News

Partners in life and golf

It does not take long to conclude that Del Walker and Marty Walker, men's and women's golf coaches, respectively, at California State University, Long Beach, form a unique coaching duo.

They are graduates of Long Beach City College, passionate about the game of golf and have been married for 56 years. Del Walker recently turned 80 and Marty is 79.

"We must be the oldest coaching staff in the history of golf, but we haven't lost enthusiasm for the game," Del Walker said.

Del Walker coached basketball at Long Beach Polytechnic High School from 1946 to 1956, then served as athletics director at Long Beach City College for 18 years. Bored with retirement in 1980, Del Walker accepted the golf position at Long Beach State. Marty Walker, who became the first woman in the history of the California Inter-scholastic Federation to coach a boys' high-school golf team, followed her husband to Long Beach State in 1984.

Del Walker was named Pacific Coast Athletic Association coach of the year in 1986, the year his team finished second at the conference tournament. Marty Walker coached her team to a second-place finish in the Big West Conference in 1992.

In remembrance

The University of Evansville men's basketball team will honor a former coach, Arad McCutchan, by wearing orange jerseys with sleeves during home games during the 1993-94 season. McCutchan died June 16 at the age of 80.

The Aces' uniform colors normally are purple and white, but coach Jim Crews said they chose to honor McCutchan by donning his trademark orange jerseys with sleeves.

"You often see a black patch or a stripe to honor someone," Crews said. "We wanted to go a little bit further to show our feelings about coach McCutchan. We thought the orange uniforms would be a symbol of the respect we have for him."

years, registering 514 victories and winning Division II national crowns in 1959, 1960, 1964, 1965 and 1971.

New mascot

Bradley University announced November 1 that it has filled a void by creating a mascot for the institution's athletics teams. The mascot will be a bobcat, which has little connection to the school's nickname, "Braves."

The bobcat was chosen after more than 50 suggestions were submitted for review by a committee comprising students, faculty, alumni and community representatives. The winning entry was suggested by Bradley senior Mark Iralsen.

"The bobcat is an excellent mascot for the university," said John R. Brazil, president at Bradley. "It is native to this area, tenacious, tough and resourceful. It will provide Bradley fans a focus for their enthusiasm and a symbolic representation that will not be at odds with the name 'Braves' or our deep respect for Native Americans and their cultures."

The Northeast Oklahoma Intertribal Council was consulted in the nickname-selection process. Last year, the council offered support for Bradley's retention of the nickname "Braves."

'By The Rules'

Marcy Weston, associate athletics director at Central Michigan University and secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee, has been selected as spokesperson for eight vignettes on women's basketball officiating that will be broadcast on ESPN this season.

"By The Rules" will feature key rules of women's basketball and how they differ from men's basketball rules. The segments will be taped at Rose Arena on the Central Michigan campus.

"It is my hope that the viewing public will enjoy the women's basketball footage we present," Weston said. "These outtakes should clarify our game rules to the fans."

$1 million gift

Trade Oil Company of Greenville, North Carolina, announced a $1 million gift to the East Carolina University Educational Foundation. It is the largest cash donation ever given to the university's athletics department.

"This gift shows our company's interest in the continued growth of East Carolina University," said Walter L. Williams, president and founder of Trade Oil Company. "Being mainly in eastern North Carolina, we feel very strongly that, as ECU grows, it will, in return, help our company grow."

The gift will go toward the planned expansion of Ficklen Stadium.

"This extremely generous gift from the Trade Oil Company will undoubtedly serve as a catalyst in the Education Foundation's continuing efforts to raise $14 million over the next two years, as a part of the university's Shared Vision Campaign," said David R. Hart Jr., athletics director at East Carolina.

Facilities

A dedication ceremony was held October 23 for the new $950,000 outdoor track and field facility at Haverford College. An eight-lane polyurethane track has been constructed over a cinder track, which originally was built in 1902. In addition to the 400-meter oval track, the new facility includes runways for the pole vault, high jump, long jump and triple jump; shot, discus and javelin launching areas, and a steeplechase water jump. A new 600-person-capacity grandstand with storage and restroom facilities borders one side of the new track.

The Lied Foundation Trust has presented a $4 million gift to the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, athletics department for use in the construction of a new 75,000-square-foot athletics complex. It is the largest single gift in the history of the athletics program. Construction of the $8.5 million building will begin in June 1994 and is scheduled for completion by July 1995. The facility will include sports-medicine, strength-and-conditioning, equipment, office and locker-room areas, an auditorium large enough to serve student-athletes, and classrooms. (See photo, page 5.)

Institutions that are renovating or building athletics facilities are invited to share that information with the membership via this monthly feature in The NCAA News.

Fact file

Ten current major-college football teams have played in only one bowl game in history: Ball State University; Central Michigan University; Eastern Michigan University; Kansas State University; Kent State University; Memphis State University; University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Northern Illinois University; Northwestern University, and Rutgers University, New Brunswick. Five of the 10 were in the California Bowl (since replaced by the Las Vegas Bowl).

Committee notices

Member institutions are invited to submit nominations to fill vacancies on NCAA committees. Nominations to fill the following vacancy must be submitted in writing to Fannie B. Vaughan, executive assistant, in the NCAA national office no later than November 29, 1993 (fax number 913/339-0035).

Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism: Replacement for Patricia S. Harris, University of Texas at Austin, resigned from the institution. Appointee must be from Division I.

Committee changes

The following changes, corrections or additions have been made to committee listings in the 1993-94 NCAA Directory, which will serve as the Association's official source of committee listings until the publication in February of the 1994 Committee Handbook. Appointments are effective immediately unless otherwise noted:

Council-appointed committees

Committee on Athletics Certification: Delete Robert Bowlsby, University of Iowa, from the listing. He declined appointment to the committee last April and was replaced by McKinley Boston, University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.

Honors Committee: Willye White's affiliation should be listed as Chicago, Illinois, instead of Chicago Department of Health.

Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee: The term of Ishmell H. Edwards, Rust College, expires September 1, 1996, and he is eligible for reelection; accordingly, delete the asterisk indicating that he is not eligible for reelection.

Clint Bryant's term on the committee expires with his Council service; therefore, the term-expiration date should be January 1995 instead of January 1997.

Sports committees

Men's and Women's Skiing Committee: Janice L. Lange, University of Vermont, appointed to replace Sarah Bergstrom, no longer at an NCAA institution.

Mary M. Schrad, Western State College of Colorado, appointed to replace Linda Estes. Estes' term expired September 1, 1993.

Robert L. "Bud" Fisher, Williams College, appointed to replace Estes as chair.

Men's and Women's Tennis Committee: Cathy Beene, University of Texas at Arlington, appointed as chair, replacing Scott Perelman, who resigned from the committee.

Special committees

Special NCAA Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity: Kenneth A. Shaw, Syracuse University, appointed to replace James D. McComas, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, resigned from his institution and the Presidents Commission.

Donald F. Behrend, University of Alaska Anchorage, appointed to replace McComas as chair.

Ad Hoc Committee to Study Enforcement Issues: Dissolved, effective November 1, 1993.

Special Committee to Review the NCAA Enforcement and Infractions Process: Dissolved, effective November 1, 1993.

Publications now available

New editions of NCAA rules and records books now are available from the NCAA circulation staff.

The rules books—1994 NCAA Men's and Women's Cross Country and Track and Field Rules and 1994 NCAA Men's Lacrosse Rules—sell for $3 each and contain official rules and interpretations and diagrams of playing areas.

The records books—1994 NCAA Basketball and 1992-93 National Collegiate Championships—sell for $7.95 and $9.95, respectively.

NCAA Basketball contains individual and team records, statistical leaders, all-time all-America teams, coaches' records, conference standings, game-by-game scores from last year, and schedules for the upcoming season.

National Collegiate Championships contains detailed summaries of 1992-93 championships plus history and records of championships conducted since 1883.

The books may be ordered by contacting NCAA circulation, P.O. Box 7347, Overland Park, Kansas 66207-0347; telephone 913/339-1900.

Sourcebook a key to equity solution

By Diane T. Wendt
UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

In July, a subcommittee of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force was formed to create for the membership a sourcebook that will provide guidance and models to help member schools achieve gender equity.

We have met twice as a committee to develop strategies for planning and publishing this sourcebook. We continue to solicit ideas, strategies and materials for inclusion.

Wendt

Preliminary plans include an introduction and overview of the history of the gender-equity sourcebook, the 1993 NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force report, a compilation of solution strategies in place at various member schools, funding strategies, a bibliography of resources available from other agencies and organizations, samples of letters of findings from the Office of Civil Rights, and an up-to-date summary of Title IX litigation.

Anybody who has a recommendation on relevant topics is asked to contact Janet M. Justus, women's issues coordinator, at the NCAA national office.

Committee members also are exploring the feasibility of developing a checklist of possible steps schools can take to develop self-study and solution processes for achieving gender equity.

Many good things are being done at colleges and universities around the country. We need to continue to identify individuals, institutions and processes where progress is underway. We must call attention to that progress. We all can benefit by focusing on successful solutions that can move our programs to a better place.

There is no need to reinvent the wheel. Many solutions already are in place and are transferable to other institutions. Individuals and institutions experiencing success can serve as valuable resource catalysts for others, and the NCAA can serve as a conduit for providing aggressive leadership toward this end.

We all can make an important difference by taking action to ensure that gender equity becomes a priority on our campuses. Student-athletes are the real beneficiaries of this agenda since they stand to gain from the

Grad-rate numbers require context

A recent USA Today editorial stated that after the academic standards were raised for student-athletes, 41 percent of African-American student-athletes entered college and graduated, as opposed to only a 33 percent graduation rate before the standards were raised.

In response to this article, I say that we need more information to determine if the rates are noteworthy. The numbers look good, but are they credible?

More African-Americans may have been excluded from participating due to the raised standards. Thus, the percentage rates may prove nothing. For example, if 1,000 African-Americans receive athletics scholarships and 33 percent graduate, 330 athletes receive degrees.

However, if the number of African-American student-athletes is reduced to 700 because of a higher standard and 41 percent graduate, only 287 student-athletes receive degrees. If the number is reduced to 600 and 41 percent graduate, only 246 receive degrees, and so on.

Until we receive more detailed, in-depth information about what is really happening in college athletics, mere percentages mean nothing. I think this is part of what the African-American basketball coaches throughout the country are trying to make others realize. The coaches are probably concerned that more African-Americans never will have the chance to attempt to graduate from college.

A main argument of proponents of higher academic standards is that student-athletes who cannot meet the requirements do not belong in college or would not be successful in college. I disagree with this argument because I am 100 percent positive that there are many former student-athletes who graduated from college who would not even qualify under the new academic standards.

I say until more information is found, two numbers without proper clarification tell us absolutely nothing.

Derrick Gragg
Academic Counselor
Vanderbilt University

Editor's note: Although the percentage of graduating student-athletes increased from 33 to 41 percent, the number of Division I black student-athletes surveyed during the same period declined from 3,723 (of 13,638 overall) to 3,017 (of 12,836). That is a decline from 27.3 percent to 23.5 percent.

Jerry L. Kingston, faculty athletics representative at Arizona State University and chair of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, discussed this concern in an editorial in the June 30, 1993, issue of The NCAA News. He noted that the NCAA's Academic Performance Study, which was initiated in 1984 to facilitate prediction and measurement of the effects of Proposition 48, had predicted such a drop for the 1986-87 class but also predicted a rebound to near-previous levels with the 1987-88 class.

"These data (for the year cited in the letter) indicate that the percentage of black student-athletes in Division I was greater, and the reduction that occurred as a result of Proposition 48 was actually smaller, than the estimates produced by the Academic Performance Study," Kingston wrote. "Hence, there appears to be no basis to challenge the Academic Performance Study estimates that the percentage of black student-athletes in Division I began to rise in the years after the introduction of Proposition 48. The data required to evaluate this expectation, however, will not be available for another year or two."

□ Opinions

Momentum for reform no sure thing

Murray Sperber, associate professor
Indiana University, Bloomington

The Chronicle of Higher Education

"Now that the reformers seem relatively satisfied with their accomplishments, press coverage has diminished. But the basic problems in college sports still exist. In addition, the demands for gender equity and the huge financial losses generated by most athletics departments might yet force the NCAA Presidents Commission to consider proposing systemic changes.

"The presidents might begin with a proposal to end the enormous costs of athletics scholarships by proposing a concrete plan to switch to need-based grants, thus applying the same scholarship criteria to athletes that are used for almost all regular students.

"If the press covers the current controversies and proposals for possible change fully and well, the reform movement can revive and regain momentum. If newspapers ignore or slight these issues, the coaches and athletics directors will claim that reform has succeeded and that the need for change is over.

"In 1931, in its final report on intercollegiate athletics, the Carnegie Foundation criticized the press for providing coaches and athletics directors with a platform to 'strive to assure the public that 'all's well with the game' upon which their livelihood depends.' Today, coaches and athletics directors would love to make similar declarations. Only a conscientious press and an informed public can reject these false claims and demand fundamental change."

Women's ice hockey

Mark Robertson, athletics director
Blaine (Minnesota) school district

Athletic Business

On a movement in Minnesota high schools to add girls' ice hockey in the interest of gender equity:

"We're not against adding girls' ice hockey. The difficulty is we've gone through budget cuts every year for the last four or five years, and it's hard for me to keep getting my salary cut at work and keep buying new things. Basically, people have said to my face, 'We could care less about your budget. This isn't a matter of budget. It's a matter of law.' It kind of leaves a bad taste in your mouth.

"But I can see it from their perspective. There's no reason not to have hockey for both girls and boys."

Dorothy McIntyre, associate director
Minnesota State High School League

Athletic Business

"We've all been around this rink, if you will, a lot of years, and whenever new things come up, we hear this, 'Well, we just might not be around here much longer.' And yet there's creativity in the schools, there's the desire of their communities and their parents to help support them. I think we're just going to have to get very creative — and know that underneath, tradition will not support inequity."

Fan behavior

Todd Gitlin, sociologist
University of California, Berkeley

The Associated Press

Discussing bizarre behavior by fans, such as the parachutist who landed alongside the ring during the Riddick Bowe-Evander Holyfield heavyweight title fight:

"This is, in a way, the equivalent of people wanting to call up talk shows and vent their spleen. Or, for that matter, linking into interactive computer networks.

"A lot of people feel they don't really exist unless they've gone public, unless they've talked to the media. It is bizarre, it's mighty bizarre. But a lot of people feel diminished if they haven't been anointed or discovered by the spotlight."

NFL access to players

Joe Paterno, football coach
Pennsylvania State University

The Washington Post

"If you don't have a kid graduated by the January after his eligibility ends, you might as well forget about him graduating. The minicamps. The combine. The individual workouts. You're paying for room and board and tuition — and the kid's not even going to class."

Charley Casserly, general manager
Washington Redskins

The Washington Post

"The way I look at it is: What have these players been doing for the last four years of their college education? They've had spring practice every year. They've had offseason weight programs. To me, what we do is no different than job interviews (that regular students go through each spring)."

History hints that the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships should be held in the Midwest.

The event has emerged as one of the NCAA's most financially successful, consistently ranking in the top six in gross receipts.

Six times in the event's 65-year history, the three-day attendance has exceeded 60,000. Five of those championships were held in Iowa; one was in Oklahoma City. Only two non-Midwest teams have won the team title (Pennsylvania State University in 1953 and Arizona State University in 1988).

Fortunately for wrestling fans elsewhere in the country, however, the NCAA Wrestling Committee looks beyond raw numbers when selecting a site—in order to nurture the sport's growth.

First Southeast meet

This season, for the first time, the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will serve as host. Unless one counts the University of Maryland, College Park, which has hosted the meet five times, 1994 marks the first year the event will be held in the Southeast.

"We like to move it around the country," said Robert A. Bowsby, committee chair and director of athletics at the University of Iowa. "We haven't had a Western site for years (the University of Arizona hosted in

For the first time, the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships will be held in the Southeast — the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, to be exact.

1976 and Oregon State University in 1980), but we try to go East every four years."

Bowsby said that the committee selected North Carolina for a variety of reasons.

"First, the (Dean E.) Smith Center is a high-quality site," he said. "They also have a lot of experienced staff members who have hosted other NCAA championships and have always done a great job."

Regional growth

Bowsby also spoke of the recent growth of the sport in the Southeast—specifically, the emergence of the Colonial Athletic Association (which instituted wrestling as a conference sport in 1991-92) and the strength of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

He said that another factor is the area's high-school wrestling, especially in North Carolina, where the number of teams has grown from around 50 to more than 300 in the past 20 years. Bowsby attributes that improvement to the long-time dedication of coaches such as North Carolina State University's Bob Guzzo and North Carolina's Bill Lam, who—before becoming a member of the wrestling committee last year—suggested that his school host.

Lam joked that the cold weather at host-site Iowa State University in 1988 gave him the idea, especially since the team had just left behind a sunbathing student body in Chapel Hill. But Lam had many reasons for approaching what turned out to be a receptive athletics administration in Chapel Hill with the idea later that year.

"It's great for the sport," he said. "I've turned down jobs (in order to) to stay in this area because I wanted to see wrestling grow here, and this will help in reaching that goal."

Nationally competitive

The anticipation of having his best team since he came to North Carolina in 1974—led by defending 134-pound champion T. J. Jaworsky—also motivated Lam.

"It makes our kids feel like we're a nationally competitive team," he said. "We could finish in the top five. It will help give our kids recognition and help the fans realize what it means to be a national champion. It already has helped recruiting."

The 21,500-capacity Smith Center is the largest facility yet to host the championships, thus offering the potential for record attendance numbers. Tournament director Willie Scroggs said the effort to fill those seats is well underway.

A fan base of 7,000 to 8,000, mostly from the Midwest, follows the event wherever it is held, and Scroggs said North Carolina is making sure those people get the ticket information they need along with literature about various other recreational activities that are available in the Southeast's moderate climate.

Maintaining fan base

Bowsby said the area's attractions, the excitement of going to a new site and the prospect of the closest team race in years should ensure the attendance of the usual fan base.

Scroggs and his staff also are working with local high schools, chambers of commerce and corporations to try to get them to buy blocks of tickets.

"We're also working with our alumni," he said. "We want to make sure that they understand that this is a once-in-a-long-time event and we want them to take advantage of it."

"The state of North Carolina is hosting two of the NCAA's premier championships. Most people won't be able to get tickets to go to Charlotte (for the Final Four), but this is a championship they can get to."

Those interested in ordering tickets can call 800/722-HEEL.

The championships return to the University of Iowa next year, then—pending NCAA Executive Committee approval—go to Minneapolis in 1996 and the University of Northern Iowa in 1997.

Thanks to a $4 million gift from the Lied Foundation Trust, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, soon will begin construction on a 75,000-square-foot athletics complex that will house sports-medicine, strength-and-conditioning, equipment, office and locker-room areas. Construction on the complex, which will cost $8.5 million, is scheduled to begin in June 1994 and be completed by July 1995. The $4 million gift is the largest in the history of the Nevada-Las Vegas athletics program. The new building will be located adjacent to the football practice field, soccer grounds, track stadium and the new $1.3 million Earl F. Wilson Baseball Stadium.

I baseball committee seeks change in RPI formula

More emphasis wanted on won-lost record

In an effort to place more emphasis on a team's won-lost record against Division I competition and the won-lost record of its opponents, the NCAA Division I Baseball Committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that it revise the formula for the Ratings Percentage Index (RPI).

The RPI is a computer program that assists the committee in determining automatic-qualifying and play-in conferences and selecting at-large teams for the championship. The program provides the committee with information about (1) an institution's Division I winning percentage, (2) opponents' success and (3) opponents' strength of schedule.

At its November 1-4 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee recommended revising the formula as follows: 25 percent for a team's won-lost record; 50 percent for its opponents' won-lost record, and 25 percent for the records of its opponents' opponents.

Previously, the formula was weighted so that 20 percent was for a team's won-lost record, 40 percent for its opponents' won-lost record, and 40 percent for the records of its opponents' opponents.

The committee believes that this new formula will provide a more accurate overall rating for a team.

In making at-large selections for the championship, the Division I committee evaluates a team's regular-season, conference and post-season performance; the eligibility and availability of its student-athletes for NCAA championship competition, and its RPI.

Other highlights

In other actions at its November 1-4 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Division I Baseball Committee:

- Discussed the play-in system that will be used by conferences that are not granted automatic-qualification privileges. The committee will recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that a visiting team be denied the chance to participate in the tournament if it declines to participate in the play-in. The committee also will propose that participation in the play-in is required for any institution assigned to host a play-in competition.

- Expressed concern with the current regulation that allows each play-in conference to determine the playoff format for determining a championship-tournament qualifier. The committee will recommend that the play-in conferences be required to conduct a best two-of-three series (nine-inning games) to determine the qualifier.

- Reviewed umpire selection and assignments for the 1994 regionals and College World Series as proposed by Jon Bible, national coordinator of umpires.

- Agreed to recommend that an institutional administrator be required to travel with each institution that participates in the 1994 championship.

- Conducted extensive discussions with representatives from Omaha, Nebraska, and the College World Series Board of Directors. The committee reviewed the administration of the 1993 championship and discussed issues for future championships, including team tickets, parking and fan accommodations.

- Reaffirmed that all games of the College World Series will be televised live in 1994. ESPN2 will broadcast live three games that ESPN will televise on a tape-delayed basis.

Book detailing history of football at black institutions is released

A new book celebrating the centennial history of football at historically black colleges and universities was released recently.

"Black College Football 1892-1992: One Hundred Years of History, Education and Pride," was written by former USA Today sportswriter Michael Hurd, now an assistant city editor at the Austin American-Statesman. The limited-edition, hard-cover volume has 184 pages and contains many photos of those who played a role in the development of football at historically black colleges.

State Farm Insurance sponsored the book. Proceeds will benefit the Eddie Robinson Foundation.

Among other features, the book lists every black college ever to field a football team, along with a complete appendix of all-time records and the listings of the Pittsburgh Courier all-America teams since 1927.

Books may be ordered directly by calling The Donning Company/Publishers at 800/296-8572. The cost is $29.50, plus $5.50 for shipping and handling.

Justice Department to look into bowl coalition

At the request of U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Kentucky, the U.S. Justice Department has agreed to look into whether an agreement between a coalition of college football conferences and major postseason bowls violates antitrust laws.

McConnell wrote to assistant attorney general Anne Bingaman in October, arguing that an agreement among five football conferences, the University of Notre Dame and the major postseason bowl games could constitute a violation of the Sherman Act, since it excludes other independent teams.

McConnell received a response November 10 from Sheila Anthony, assistant attorney general for legislative affairs, according to The Associated Press. Anthony promised that the Justice Department would "promptly review this matter to assess the situation."

McConnell is an alumnus of the University of Louisville, which already has committed to play in the Liberty Bowl December 28 in Memphis, Tennessee. The Liberty Bowl is one of only a handful of bowls that are open to independent teams.

"I'm glad the Justice Department has decided to look into this," McConnell said in a statement. "Despite their amateur status, college sports are a big business, and we need to ensure that the best teams are allowed to compete for the money, exposure and prestige that the major bowls offer."

The coalition was formed two years ago among five conferences—the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Eight, Southeastern and Southwest—and independent Notre Dame. The alliance guarantees invitations to representatives of those conferences from all of the major bowls, including the Cotton, Fiesta, Orange and Sugar on New Year's Day.

Fall service

Members of the South Dakota State University women's softball team recently raked the yards of nine people in the Brookings, South Dakota, community who were unable to do the work themselves. All 16 team members, along with two assistant coaches and head coach Beth Kirchner, took part in the community project.

■ Championships previews

Division I-AA Football

Round three possible for top two

Overview: The top of the Division I-AA poll reads like a who's who of the championship's history. No. 1 Youngstown State (8-1 through November 6) and No. 2 Marshall (7-2) have squared off in the last two title games, with Marshall avenging a 1991 loss by winning last year, 31-28. If they meet in the final again this year, it will mark the first time the same teams have played in three consecutive football title games in any division. Four-time champion Georgia Southern (7-2) has ascended to the No. 3 ranking after a two-year absence from the playoffs. But all three teams have losses to Division I-AA foes; Troy State (8-0-1), which never has appeared in the championship, and Big Sky Conference champion Montana (9-1) could be surprises.

Field: The 16-team field will be selected November 21. Six conferences have been granted automatic qualification: Big Sky, Gateway Football, Ohio Valley, Southern, Southland and Yankee. The remaining 10 teams will be selected at large.

Dates and sites: First-round (November 27), quarterfinal (December 4) and semifinal (December 11) games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. The championship game will be December 18 at Marshall.

Television coverage: The semifinal games will be broadcast live by PrimeSportsChannel at noon and 3:30 p.m. (Eastern time) December 11. The championship game will be televised live by CBS at noon (Eastern time) December 18.

Results: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the November 29, December 6 and December 15 issues of The NCAA News. Results from the championship game will appear in the December 22 issue.

Championship notes: This will be the second year in a row that Marshall has hosted the title game....Three of the last four championships have been claimed by teams that had the home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. Georgia Southern won in 1989 and 1990 on its own Paulson Stadium field, and Marshall won last year by sweeping four games at Marshall Stadium....Eastern Kentucky has made the playoffs a record 13 times and is one behind Georgia Southern's record of five appearances in the title game.

What they are saying

Jim Donnan, head coach
Marshall

Defending champion, currently ranked No. 2

"There are a lot of good teams this year in Division I-AA. Probably eight to 10 teams are capable of winning (the title), and the rest of the field will be teams that could upset anybody but probably couldn't win the whole thing. So much depends on your draw. If you've got to play three difficult games to get to the championship, it's really tough to go all the way.

"A rematch (with Youngstown State for the third year in a row) would certainly be a big game for our seniors and theirs—kind of the rubber match in the series. I don't think you could paint a better picture for I-AA football. But we're so young, just making the playoffs will be a tribute to the efforts of our kids."

Men's Water Polo

California seeks fourth straight title

Event: 1993 National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship.

Overview: This has been a championship dominated by one team: California. The Golden Bears have won 11 titles, including five of the last six championships. A year ago, California outlasted Stanford in sudden-death overtime for its third consecutive title. This year's championship is likely to be as tightly contested as the Golden Bears vie for an unprecedented fourth consecutive crown. As many as six teams have a legitimate shot. Among the teams looking to end California's reign are Stanford, Southern California, Pacific (California), UC Irvine and UCLA. If California is to win, it will need strong performances from its veterans, including all-Americans Troy Barnhart, Gavin Arroyo and Sean Nolan, as well as Tony Barnes. The biggest obstacle for the Golden Bears may be Stanford. Runner-up at two of the last three championships, the Cardinal is primed to end its title drought, which has spanned six seasons. Ranked No. 1 in the top-20 poll, the Cardinal is led by all-Americans Wolf Wigo, Frank Schneider and Larry Bercutt.

Field: All eight participating teams will be chosen at large; however, at least two teams each will be selected from the East and West regions. The remaining four teams will be selected at large without geographical restrictions.

Dates and site: The championship will be November 27-29 at the Belmont Plaza in Long Beach, California, with Long Beach State and U.S. Water Polo, Inc., serving as cohosts.

Television coverage: The championship will be broadcast tape-delayed on TNT at 5 p.m. (Eastern time) December 11.

Results: Championship results will appear in the November 29 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: California has won titles in its last five tournament appearances at Long Beach. UC Irvine won the 1989 championship at Indianapolis.

What they are saying

Ted Newland, head coach
UC Irvine

"I think this is going to be the closest year we've ever had as far as competition goes. It could be anyone's ball game. It really depends on what seed you get...no one has ever come out (of the West region) as the fourth seed. Right now, any one of four teams could finish in the top three. I'm looking for a really close race. It's going to be dog-eat-dog from here on out. To me, so much depends on who's lucky at the right time."

Panel urges equal treatment for all Olympic participants

By Larry Siddons

Can multimillionaires coexist with athletes of more meager means at the Olympics? They had better, if the Games are to continue to thrive, a panel of sports officials and observers said during a recent forum at the Olympic Congress of the USA.

Participants in "The Great Olympic Debate: Professionals vs. Amateurs" in New York City October 29 said that all athletes should be treated the same at the Games, with limits on what they make and where they stay while they are Olympians.

But just because Larry Johnson makes more than $80 million playing basketball for the Charlotte Hornets doesn't mean he is any less capable of sharing the Olympic spirit than a club wrestler who has to scrape up money to buy a new singlet, a majority of the eight-member panel said.

"The Olympic Games should be for the world's best athletes in sports on the Olympic program," said John Coates, president of the Australian Olympic Committee. "It's unrealistic to consider the Olympic Games in a vacuum."

'Logical consequence'

"Professionals in the Olympics is a logical consequence of the IOC's desire to bring together the world's best athletes," said Hein Verbruggen, president of the International Cycling Federation.

Once an amateurs-only club, the International Olympic Committee dropped the ban against professionals during the 1970s. Starting with men's ice hockey in 1984 and tennis in 1988, it gradually allowed pros into the Games, and the flow reached new heights last year at Barcelona, Spain, with the U.S. basketball "Dream Team" of NBA superstars.

The Olympics feature more than 25 sports, each run by its own international governing body. The IOC allows each sport to set eligibility rules, and so far that has worked well, said Richard Pound, an IOC vice-president.

"We should not be trying to squeeze a square peg into a round hole and try to demand the same eligibility for all sports," Pound said.

Dissenting view

Two panel members dissented—Lynnette Woodard, a member of the gold-medal U.S. women's basketball team in 1984, and Denis Oswald, president of the International Rowing Federation.

"There is a well-established professional athletics world out there, and the Olympics belong to the amateurs," Woodard said. "Amateurism is the basis on which the Olympic ideal was built.

"It seems money calls the shots, but amateurs should stay in the Olympics."

Oswald said rowing started as a contest of professionals centuries ago and evolved into an all-amateur sport today. Taking a paycheck from a sport was not the entire issue, however, Oswald said.

"It's not just a question of money or time devoted to training for a sport," he said. "It's more a question of spirit. It's what you do freely, out of your own choice. Because you love it."

Hypocrisy and cheating

But others on the panel argued that the amateur-only days had created hypocrisy and cheating.

"After years of debate over advertising, pocket money and 'amateurism,' the Olympic movement yielded to reality," said Walther Troeger, president of the German Olympic Committee and an IOC member.

While supporting the idea of pros in the Games, Pound—who heads the IOC's sponsorship and television-rights negotiations—warned that great care was needed to avoid turning off sponsors and the public through the showcase of rich superstars.

"Everything should be done to make sure there is not a team with first-class members and second-class members," he said. "And we must assure sponsors that their money is not being distributed to well-remunerated athletes."

Barry, Trenton State claim women's soccer titles

Buccaneers beat Cal Poly San Luis Obispo in Division II final

Barry goalkeeper Janna Schimmels shut out her second consecutive opponent and defender Amy Burrill provided the offense as the host Buccaneers defeated Cal Poly San Luis Obispo 2-0 in the Division II Women's Soccer Championship November 14.

It was Barry's second consecutive title and its third in the six-year history of the tournament. Barry also won the championship in 1989.

Burrill, named the championship's most valuable defensive player, converted a failed Cal Poly San Luis Obispo clearance attempt into Barry's first goal just over 11 minutes into the game. Forward Michelle Richie added an insurance goal early in the second half on a cross that caromed off a Cal Poly San Luis Obispo defender.

Schimmels, whose shutout against Mercyhurst in the semifinal round was one of 11 for her this season, saved two of the three Cal Poly San Luis Obispo shots and was named to the all-tournament team, along with teammates Burrill, Jennifer Strong, Heather Jaeger and Erin Jaeger.

"There's no question this was the best we've played all year," Barry coach Mike Covone said. "Obviously, we played really well today."

Barry (17-1) stretched its winning streak to a school-record 15 games and 23 in a row at home. The Buccaneers' lone loss this season was to Florida International, a quarterfinalist in this year's Division I women's championship.

"Actually, it hasn't hit me yet," said Heather Jaeger, the only Buccaneer senior. "It's really special when we win together."

Jaeger and her sister, Erin, each scored goals in Barry's 3-0 semifinal win over Mercyhurst (13-3-1).

Cal Poly San Luis Obispo finished the season 15-5-1. The Mustangs advanced to the championship game with a 3-2 win over Franklin Pierce (16-3).

"Barry is a very strong, skilled, physically fit team," said Mustang coach Alex Crozier. "We just didn't have the edge today—we couldn't play the game we needed to."

Player's tournament-record performance leads Lions to first-ever championship

It didn't take long for coach Joe Russo's Trenton State Lions to make it to the top.

In only its fourth varsity season, Trenton State claimed its first Division III Women's Soccer Championship with a 4-0 win over Plymouth State at William Smith November 14.

Cyndi Marshall scored twice for the Lions (20-1-3) and Jacqueline Dirr scored one goal and assisted on two others. Marshall's five goals for the tournament established an NCAA record, and Dirr was named the tournament's most valuable offensive player. Lion Goalkeeper Danielle Mastro Simone saved 10 of Plymouth State's 12 shots and was named the tournament's most valuable defensive player.

Trenton State's Missy Blaney and Krista Gerard joined Marshall, Dirr and Mastro Simone on the all-tournament team. Plymouth State and William Smith each placed three players on the elite squad.

Trenton State, now 65-7-9 in four years under Russo, advanced to the championship game on the basis of penalty kicks in the semifinal round against William Smith. The Lions also survived a thrilling 2-1 sudden-death overtime game against Methodist in the quarterfinals.

Cortland State's Carol Merchant picked up her team-high 19th assist in the Red Dragons' 1-0 victory over Mary Washington in the Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Red Dragons win III field hockey title

A penalty-corner goal from Cortland State's Denise Taber with 24:08 left in the game gave the Red Dragons a 1-0 victory over host Mary Washington November 13 and their first Division III Field Hockey Championship.

Taber's goal, her 18th of the season, came on a blast from the top of the circle. The assist by Carol Merchant gave her a team-high 19 on the season.

"It's really hard to describe what it feels like to win a national championship," said Red Dragon head coach Pat Rudy. "You finally come to the end and it's so emotional. You want this moment to last forever."

The Red Dragons, who finished 22-1-1, avenged an earlier 1-0 double-overtime loss to the Eagles.

"Our biggest disappointment during the regular season was when we lost to Mary Washington," Rudy said. "We never wanted to experience that feeling again."

The hosts, who carried a 14-game winning streak into the championship game, finished 22-2. Both teams set school records for victories and shutouts (16 for Cortland State, 18 for Mary Washington).

Amie Jones made four saves for Cortland State. Mary Washington's Stephanie Lowe made seven.

The Red Dragons, who allowed only one goal [during a 2-1 win over Trinity (Connecticut) in the semifinals] in their four tournament games, tied the championship record for lowest goals-per-game allowed (.25), which also is shared by past champions Trenton State (1991) and William Smith (1992).

Taber and Merchant made the all-tournament team, along with teammate Gina Carlo. Other honorees included Lowe and teammates Michelle O'Hanlon, April Moshos and Candice Malone; Trenton State's Robin Selbst and Barbara Anne Hieb, and Trinity's Marcia Gray and Braxton Jones.

Hash marks move leads to offensive, scoring surge

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

Over the past five years, the mix of rules changes designed to make life difficult for college football field-goal kickers may not have affected Division I-A accuracy as much as the rules makers wanted. But the movement of the hash marks closer to the center of the field in 1993 could lead to all-time highs in Division I-A passing, total offense and scoring trends.

So far, through 546 I-A games as of November 13, the trends indicate that the passing average of 411 yards per game for both teams could become the all-time record. Total offense at 741.9 yards per game also would set a new standard. Scoring is presently at 48.9 points per game, just above the record of 48.8, set in 1990. Conversely, the rushing average of 331.3 yards per game for both teams would join last season's 331.2 as the lowest rushing norms since 1967.

This year, the hash marks on both sides were moved 6 feet, 8 inches closer to the center of the field (now the college hash marks are 40 feet apart)—closer still to the National Football League's narrower lines (the NFL's hash marks are just 18 feet, 6 inches apart)—reducing the kicking angle on field-goal attempts as the ball progresses toward the goal line.

The change by the NCAA Football Rules Committee was made partly in response to statistics revealing a gradual, but steady, decline in total offense and touchdowns per game over the past three seasons. The committee also was concerned that the increasing size and mobility of players over the past decade has made it too difficult to use the "short side" of the field when the ball is snapped from the hash mark.

The rules committee hoped to give the offense more opportunity to use both sides of the field and the spotting of the ball for scrimmage plays created less of a "wide side" of the field for the offenses, much like the NFL.

Passing attempts per game (57.3), completions per game (31.7), average yards per pass attempt (7.17) and completion percentage (55.4) all join passing yardage, total offense and scoring this year as trends headed for all-time records. All of these passing marks were set in 1989. Touchdowns by both teams is presently at 6.2 per game, on track for another record.

Kicking is consistent

Because kicking had become a larger part of scoring and field-goal accuracy was at an all-time high in the 1980s, college rules makers made it more difficult for the kickers by taking away the two-inch kicking tee in 1989 and then narrowing the goal posts from 23 feet, 4 inches, to 18 feet, 6 inches in 1991.

A quick look at kicking percentages in the crucial years since 1989 offers little proof that these rules changes have affected field-goal accuracy or even extra-point kicking. But the trends that have been affected in the four-year period seem to be a drop in the number of long-range (beyond 50 yards) attempts by I-A kickers and a decrease in the number of field goals made per game by both teams.

Both teams combined in 1993 are averaging fewer than two (1.88) field goals made per game, only the second time in the past 12 years that has happened. Although scoring per game is near record levels, field goals are becoming less a part of scoring in spite of consistent accuracy.

In fact, field-goal scoring is only 11.6 percent of total scoring so far in 1993, as compared to 13.6 percent in 1992 and an average of 12.9 percent over the past five years.

I-AA bracket to air live

The announcement of the bracket for the Division I-AA Football Championship will be broadcast live via satellite November 21.

The bracket will be announced at 1:30 p.m. (Central time) from the studios of Public Broadcasting System affiliate KCPT in Kansas City, Missouri. Satellite coordinates for the broadcast are Galaxy 7. Transponder 16 Vertical.

Audio for the broadcast will be on 6.2 and 6.8.

Field-goal accuracy has been steady at 64 percent since 1990 and should finish even a little higher in 1993. The only exception was 1991, the first year after the narrowing of the goal posts, when the overall percentage dropped to 59.5, the lowest since 1980. The percentage rebounded to 64.6 percent in 1992 and is 65 percent so far in 1993.

Extra-point conversions by I-A kickers this year are at 93.9 percent, virtually the same as 1992.

Perfect teams

Only four undefeated, untied teams remain in Division I-A: Auburn, Nebraska, Notre Dame and West Virginia.

Auburn and its first-year head coach Terry Bowden has only a regular-season matchup against archrival Alabama standing in the way of a perfect 11-0 season. Notre Dame, ranked No. 1 after the 31-24 victory over Florida State November 13, and Nebraska are both 10-0. West Virginia is 9-0.

Nebraska's 10 I-A opponents this season have a .545 winning percentage vs. other I-A teams when not playing the Cornhuskers. That ranks 24th nationally. Notre Dame is ranked 27th at .537, followed by Auburn at 31st and .535 and West Virginia at 60th and .490.

Notre Dame now has the longest I-A winning streak at 17 games, and the other three are tied at 10 each.

Undefeated teams and schedules

Because going undefeated and untied is a difficult chore in college football, the factors that go into it generate interest. Of course, the key to winning every game is a combination of talented players, good coaching and schedule strength.

Only two national champions (or cochampions) have faced the nation's toughest regular-season schedule—Penn State in 1982 and cochampion Colorado in 1990—and neither was undefeated. In fact, since the NCAA schedule-strength system began in 1977, none of the 26 undefeated, untied Division I teams had the toughest schedule, and only three faced schedules ranking in the final regular-season top 20.

LeShon the real deal

LeShon Johnson, Northern Illinois' senior tailback, has gone quietly about the business of turning in one of the most impressive rushing seasons in NCAA history.

Johnson, a 6-0, 201-pounder from Haskell, Oklahoma, ended his season November 13, with only 59 rushing yards against Mississippi, the sixth-ranked team in rushing defense, but still raised his NCAA-leading rushing total to 1,976 yards.

Only five runners in NCAA history have reached the 2,000-yard rushing season, and only three of those were Division I-A runners. Johnson now has the sixth-best season performance in NCAA history and the fourth-best in I-A. Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders leads the list with 2,628 yards in 1988, the all-time collegiate record.

Interestingly, Johnson should win the rushing title by about 30 yards per game over another unheralded running back, Byron "Bam" Morris of Texas Tech. Morris already has eclipsed the Texas Tech school record with 1,529 yards, but he would need 447 yards November 20 against Houston to catch Johnson. The all-time I-A margin was Sanders' 85-yard-per-game victory over Texas A&M's Darren Lewis in 1988 (239 yards per game to 154).

Johnson also has rushed for more yardage individually in 11 games than all but 29 of the 106 Division I-A teams.

Compliance briefs

General information

Graduation-rates disclosure form. The 1994 NCAA Division I graduation-rates disclosure form (Form 94-6a) was mailed to designated individuals of Division I institutions November 12. The completed form is due in the NCAA national office no later than March 8, 1994. Any form received after that date must have been postmarked no later than March 1.

Institutions are encouraged to use the NCAA computerized electronic form for completing and submitting Form 94-6a. An electronic form (the NCAA graduation-rates disclosure software for IBM and compatible personal computers) will be mailed automatically to the designated individuals at those institutions that use it. The form is available at no charge and may be obtained by those institutions that did not use the electronic form in 1993 by completing the software-request form included in the November mailing. The electronic form is expected to be mailed December 1.

Failure to submit Form 94-6a by the deadline may jeopardize an institution's eligibility for participation in NCAA championship events during the 1994-95 academic year. For this reason, it is important for those designated to receive all compliance-related forms to forward the November mailing, including Form 94-6a, immediately to the individual(s) on campus responsible for completing the form. Questions regarding Form 94-6a should be referred to the compliance services staff at the national office.

Upcoming meetings

Attention: registration and admissions administrators. N. Bea Pray, NCAA compliance services representative, will be participating in the following December regional association meeting: Carolinas Association of Collegiate Registrar and Admissions Officers; Charleston, South Carolina; December 6-7. Pray will discuss the application and implementation of current eligibility legislation, including the initial-eligibility clearinghouse for certification of initial eligibility and satisfactory progress, as it pertains to the requirements for percentage of degree credits, minimum grade-point average requirements and the 75/25 percent rule.

Attention: financial aid administrators. Representatives from the NCAA compliance services and legislative services staffs will be participating in the following December regional association meeting: Southwestern Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (SASFAA); Little Rock, Arkansas; December 2. Two sessions—a beginner session from 2:30 to 3:45 p.m. and an advanced session from 4 to 5:15 p.m.—are scheduled for Divisions I and II financial aid administrators. The beginner session will include a general overview of NCAA financial aid legislation and the NCAA squad lists, a discussion of the role of the financial aid office in intercollegiate athletics, and a review of the resource materials available from the national office. The advanced session will include a detailed discussion of current and proposed NCAA financial aid legislation. Carolyn A. Dias, NCAA compliance services representative, will discuss the NCAA Compliance Assistant software program and demonstrate the program's ability to apply NCAA rules and generate the squad list.

Compliance strategies

Rules education: The Official Notice of the 1994 Convention was mailed from the national office November 15. The review of proposed and adopted legislation is a key component of an institutional rules-education program. Institutional administrators (those responsible for rules education on campus) interested in soliciting the input of staff members regarding proposed NCAA and conference legislation may wish to consider:

■ Preparing and disseminating to various target groups "capsulized" versions of legislative proposals focusing on specific relevant topics, or

■ Soliciting comments through designated liaisons in each department.

A rules-education program document to assist institutions and conferences in enhancing their rules-education efforts, including additional strategies, is available from compliance services through the 1993-94 resource-file checklist.

Automobile-registration program. The unauthorized provision of automobiles to prospects and enrolled student-athletes has been cited in numerous NCAA infractions cases. For many in the private sector, young athletes driving luxurious automobiles after signing letters of intent symbolizes the perceived corruption in intercollegiate athletics. Providing prospects and enrolled student-athletes with automobiles is not as pervasive as it has been in recent years; however, the NCAA enforcement staff suspects that this problem still exists. The compliance services staff has developed an automobile-registration program that includes warning signs and other compliance strategies to help determine if an automobile problem exists. The program also may be requested through the 1993-94 NCAA resource-file checklist.

This material was provided by the NCAA compliance services staff as an aid to member institutions and conference offices. Institutions or conference offices with questions or issues concerning the content addressed in this column may contact John H. Leavens, assistant executive director for compliance services, at the NCAA national office.

Four records

Long Island University/C.W. Post Campus quarterback Perry Klein finished the regular season with 3,757 passing yards, breaking the Division II single-season mark of 3,741, set by Chris Hegg of Northeast Missouri State University in 1985. But the records don't stop there. Klein also accumulated 4,025 yards of total offense this season — breaking Hegg's previous record of 3,782, also set in 1985 — and he also passed for a single-game record 614 yards November 6 against Salisbury State. To top it off, he accumulated 623 yards of total offense, also a record.

Record-tying performance

Loras College wide receiver Kendall Griffin tied the Division III mark for consecutive games with a pass reception (36) November 6 in a 28-3 victory over Upper Iowa University. He ties the record set by Bill Stromberg of Johns Hopkins University from 1978 to 1981, David Lauber of Wheaton College (Illinois) in 1985 and 1987 to 1989, and Chris Bisailon of Illinois Wesleyan from 1989 to 1992. Griffin, a senior, has caught 55 passes for 856 yards and eight touchdowns. His 107 yards per game ranks him 11th in Division III.

■ Infractions case: University of Nevada, Las Vegas

I. Background and case violations.

This case is the oldest case presently pending before the NCAA Committee on Infractions. Although there have been substantial efforts on the part of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, to resolve this case, there have been significant delays that were not the fault of the university or the NCAA enforcement staff.

During the last several years, the university became a symbol of the struggle for institutional control of a university's athletics program. Individuals outside the university had exercised control over the athletics program for many years. The university's president, Robert C. Maxson, determined that for the university to grow as an academic institution, the athletics program must become an integral part of the university and must be subject to appropriate institutional control by the president. His actions during this period of time have reaffirmed for the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, the importance of the intercollegiate athletics programs of a respected institution of higher education being under the control of the president rather than being under the control of the alumni and those outside the university. It is never an easy task for a university to change the direction of its athletics program, but that has been accomplished by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

Some of the alleged violations in this case became public in late March 1987 when a New York paper published a story charging several "apparent violations of NCAA recruiting rules" by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, in its recruitment of a highly recruited student-athlete. The story quickly received national media attention.

The university's president considered the article to contain very serious allegations against the men's basketball program, allegations he believed to be detrimental to the university. On April 19, 1987, he announced the formation of a university committee to investigate the allegations. The president appointed the institution's chief academic officer, the vice-president for academic affairs and provost, to chair the committee, and he appointed the university's NCAA faculty athletics representative, the chair of the faculty senate and the commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association (now the Big West Conference), of which the university is a member, to serve as members of the committee.

The committee worked from mid-April through mid-October 1987 conducting personal interviews on and off campus and gathering other information concerning the allegations. On October 21, 1987, the committee published its "Report on Recruitment Investigation," specifically noting that it had reached no conclusions about the substance of the allegations. The committee stated in its report that:

"As of this date, the committee has concluded that the matter of the investigation should not be closed because of conflicting testimony and yet-unanswered questions."

Accordingly, the committee's recommendation, which the president adopted and implemented, was that:

"...appropriate conference and NCAA officials be notified of the present state of the internal investigation and that they continue the investigation."

Also, following the recommendation of the university committee, the president designated the committee's members as "resource persons," with express instructions to remain available for both the conference and the Association and to provide all assistance necessary to complete the investigation.

A letter of preliminary inquiry was sent to the president of the university October 22, 1987, by the NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement and eligibility appeals, and the preliminary inquiry into the men's basketball program was begun by the NCAA enforcement staff in cooperation with the commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. Because the university committee reached no conclusions concerning the alleged violations of NCAA legislation, the institution took no action at that time beyond its participation and cooperation in the preliminary inquiry conducted by the NCAA enforcement staff.

The enforcement staff's investigation involved numerous off-campus interviews with individuals throughout the country. From July 1989 until April 1990, the enforcement staff and representatives of the university also conducted on-campus interviews of institutional staff members and men's basketball student-athletes.

Based upon information developed during the preliminary inquiry, an official inquiry was directed to the institution December 17, 1990. Because of the large number of persons to be interviewed, the institution sought and received two exten-

Case summary

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, on probation for three years for major violations of NCAA legislation in the men's basketball program.

In September 1993, after a number of delays in the processing of the case that were precipitated by legal actions and threats of legal actions by several former Nevada-Las Vegas staff members, the university and the NCAA enforcement staff submitted a summary-disposition report to the Committee on Infractions.

In that report, the university and the enforcement staff agreed that a number of major violations of NCAA rules had occurred. In keeping with a court order that permitted the university to conclude its case, it was understood that the university's admissions would not prejudice any individual's opportunity for a full hearing if the NCAA prevails in pending litigation. Nevada-Las Vegas, therefore, did not identify any of the staff members or former staff members who were allegedly involved in the violations. The university, however, accepted responsibility as an NCAA member institution for the actions of its staff members who may or may not have been involved in the violations.

In imposing the sanctions in this case, the committee noted that the cited violations began more than six years ago and that, except for one very limited series of violations, all violations ended during the 1990-91 academic year. Because of the age of this case, the committee said it wanted to impose penalties that had "the least possible effect upon the present student-athletes while at the same time imposing meaningful sanctions."

"For these reasons," the committee continued, "no limitations were placed on postseason competition, and the televising of games was not totally prohibited."

Other sanctions handed down by the committee include the following:

■ During the 1994-95 season, the only men's basketball games Nevada-Las Vegas may schedule on its home campus are games with other members of its athletics conference. (If Nevada-Las Vegas already has entered into contracts for that season, this penalty shall be imposed during the subsequent season.)

■ For the calendar year 1994, the university shall reduce the number of men's basketball coaching staff members who may contact or evaluate prospects off campus at any one time from two to one during the academic year and from three to two during the summer.

■ During the length of the probationary period, Nevada-Las Vegas's men's basketball program may not use any of the exceptions to the limitation in the permissible number of basketball contests, including participation in foreign tours; contests in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, and the preseason National Invitation Tournament.

■ For a period of two years, the university shall be prohibited from televising regular-season men's nonconference basketball games played away from its campus. (If the institution has entered into contracts for the 1993-94 season, this penalty shall be imposed during the subsequent two seasons.)

In addition, the Committee on Infractions accepted as its own the following penalties that were self-imposed by the university:

■ Nevada-Las Vegas shall reduce by one the number of athletically related financial aid awards in men's basketball during the 1993-94 and 1994-95 academic years.

■ The university shall reduce in men's basketball the number of expense-paid visits to its campus from 15 to 10 during each of the 1993-94 and 1994-95 academic years.

As part of the summary-disposition process, Nevada-Las Vegas also was required to recommend penalties that should be imposed. If the committee rejects them, the university may request an expedited hearing before the committee to discuss the penalties or a full hearing that would entail a discussion of each allegation.

The committee accepted the findings of violations described in the summary-disposition report and adopted several penalties already imposed by the institution. However, it also imposed sanctions in addition to those that Nevada-Las Vegas had recommended. The committee informed the university's president that "but for the actions he had taken to bring the men's basketball program under appropriate institutional control, the imposed penalties would have been much more severe."

The committee said it recognized "the thoughtful effort of the university that went into recommending the suggested penalties, which were very significant and recognized the serious nature of the admitted violations."

"While recognizing the great strides that have been made by Nevada-Las Vegas in bringing its athletics program into compliance with NCAA rules," the committee continued, "the violations admitted by the university in this case were very serious, numerous and extended over a period of several years."

In 1985, the NCAA membership implemented specific minimum penalties for cases involving such major violations. These penalties include a two-year probationary period, elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for one year, elimination of off-campus recruiting for one year, possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, and the loss of postseason competition and television opportunities for one year.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose lesser penalties if it determines that a case is unique. The committee concluded that this case was unique because, when the university learned of the infractions, it:

■ Promptly and thoroughly investigated and reported the violations to the NCAA.

■ Cooperated in the processing of the case.

■ Conducted much of the investigation.

■ Initiated appropriate corrective actions, including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that in the future, the institution will be in compliance with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance.

As a result of these mitigating circumstances, the committee imposed less than the full set of required minimum penalties.

The violations submitted to the Committee on Infractions included the provision of substantial inducements to a number of prospective student-athletes, extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes over an extended period, improper contact with several prospective student-athletes and a lack of institutional control over the men's basketball program.

mer men's basketball staff.

The court granted the requested relief January 4, 1993. The judge's order stated:

"The Court's October 30, 1992, Order staying the Court's June 5, 1992, Memorandum Decision and Order enjoining the defendants from enforcing or seeking protection under NRS 398.155-398.255 is modified so as not to preclude intervenor Board of Regents, on behalf of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV), and the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) from processing to a conclusion, pursuant to the NCAA's enforcement procedures, all infractions matters against UNLV as to UNLV only."

Following that decision of the United States District Court, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, prepared a Summary Disposition Report. In that report, the university admitted a number of major violations of NCAA rules, but in keeping with the order of modification of the court, it did not identify any of the staff members or former staff members who were allegedly involved in the violations. The purpose of the admissions by the university was to admit its responsibility for certain violations of NCAA rules without admitting any responsibility of the individuals who may or may not have been involved in those violations.

In early September 1993, the NCAA Committee on Infractions received the Summary Disposition Report submitted by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. At a meeting of the Committee on Infractions held in Denver September 19, 1993, the committee had before it that report. Shortly before that meeting, the committee received information from several individuals who were former staff members of the University sions of time in which to submit its written response. The institution's written response was submitted June 21, 1991.

While the institution was preparing its written response, the enforcement staff received additional information concerning potential violations occurring during the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years. Those allegations were investigated and, based upon the information that was developed, a supplemental official inquiry was directed to the institution June 17, 1991. From March 1991 through September 1991, the institution and enforcement staff jointly conducted additional on- and off-campus interviews. The institution submitted its written response to the supplemental official inquiry September 4, 1991.

Later in September 1991, the institution and enforcement staff began to prepare for the prehearing conference as provided by NCAA legislation. At that time, the head men's basketball coach, the associate men's basketball coach and two other men's basketball staff members named in the official and supplemental official inquiries made a written demand upon the NCAA and the institution that the NCAA follow procedures mandated by Nevada's newly enacted statute proposing to regulate national athletics associations, which had been signed into law in April 1991 over the objection of Nevada's two NCAA member institutions. Because the Nevada statute required procedures inconsistent with NCAA legislation, the enforcement staff, after consultation with NCAA legal counsel, halted further processing of the infractions case.

In late November 1991, in the case of the National Collegiate Athletic Association v. Robert F. Miller et al., the NCAA brought suit in the United States District Court for the District of Nevada against the State of Nevada and the individuals who had demanded compliance with the Nevada statute. The suit was based on constitutional grounds seeking a declaration that the Nevada statute was unconstitutional. Discovery and pretrial motions in the case continued through February 1992, during which time the infractions case remained suspended.

The case was heard in March 1992, and in a decision handed down June 5, 1992, the United States district judge found the Nevada statute unconstitutional and enjoined its enforcement. The defendants timely filed a notice of appeal.

Shortly thereafter, the enforcement staff and the institution again began preparation for the prehearing conference to be conducted prior to the hearing before the Committee on Infractions. As the review of evidence was beginning, the former head men's basketball coach filed a motion with the trial court asking for a stay of the court's judgment pending appeal. On October 30, 1992, the trial court granted the defendant's motion and stayed its order pending appeal.

After the court's order to stop the proceedings was issued, the counsel for the former head coach made a written demand upon the NCAA and the institution that the enforcement staff and institution stop the processing of the infractions case. After consultation with NCAA legal counsel, the enforcement staff again halted processing of the case.

In November 1992, the university filed a motion with the trial court asking that the court's stay order be modified to permit the university to process its infractions case, regardless of the positions taken by its former men's basketball staff. The court granted the requested relief January 4, 1993. The judge's order stated:

"The Court's October 30, 1992, Order staying the Court's June 5, 1992, Memorandum Decision and Order enjoining the defendants from enforcing or seeking protection under NRS 398.155-398.255 is modified so as not to preclude intervenor Board of Regents, on behalf of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV), and the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) from processing to a conclusion, pursuant to the NCAA's enforcement procedures, all infractions matters against UNLV as to UNLV only."

Following that decision of the United States District Court, the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, prepared a Summary Disposition Report. In that report, the university admitted a number of major violations of NCAA rules, but in keeping with the order of modification of the court, it did not identify any of the staff members or former staff members who were allegedly involved in the violations. The purpose of the admissions by the university was to admit its responsibility for certain violations of NCAA rules without admitting any responsibility of the individuals who may or may not have been involved in those violations.

In early September 1993, the NCAA Committee on Infractions received the Summary Disposition Report submitted by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. At a meeting of the Committee on Infractions held in Denver September 19, 1993, the committee had before it that report. Shortly before that meeting, the committee received information from several individuals who were former staff members of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, advising the committee that they wished to have an opportunity to appear and to be heard on any allegations related to their conduct. Because of such requests, the committee did not consider the Summary Disposition Report at its September meeting.

tion's September 3, 1993, Summary Disposition Report. Based upon the review of the report, the committee was satisfied that a complete and thorough investigation of the alleged violations was made by the university and by the NCAA enforcement staff. An NCAA director of enforcement reported that the institution had cooperated fully in the investigation and that it had assisted the enforcement staff in its efforts to determine the truth about the findings submitted in the Summary Disposition Report.

The committee considered the violations set out in the Summary Disposition Report and found that the university was in violation of NCAA rules as described in paragraphs 1 through 26 of Part III of that report. In addition, on November 3, 1993, the committee received further notification from the university that it was admitting that the acts described in Exhibit 8 of the Summary Disposition Report were also violations of NCAA rules. The committee considered those additional admissions but did not impose any additional penalties.

The committee did not consider the ethical-conduct violations set out in Part IV of the Summary Disposition Report. In order to consider such violations, it would have been necessary to consider the acts of specific, named individuals. Because the committee has taken the position that it will not consider the acts of specific, named individuals, it was inappropriate to consider the matters at that time. The alleged violations contained in Part IV of the report will be deferred until the Committee on Infractions has the opportunity to consider the cases of the individuals who are allegedly involved in the various violations. However, future consideration of the alleged violations will not result in any additional penalties for the institution.

The committee did not consider the unresolved issues set forth in Part V of the report to be of such a substantial nature that they should affect the decisions made in this case.

After a review of the admissions of violations of NCAA rules made by the university, the committee determined that the nature of the violations included the provision of substantial inducements to a number of prospective student-athletes, extra benefits to enrolled student-athletes over an extended period, improper contact with several prospective student-athletes and a lack of institutional control by the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, over the men's basketball program during the period the violations were occurring.

In addition to making admissions of violations of NCAA rules, as a part of the summary-disposition process, a university is required to recommend penalties that should be imposed if the Committee on Infractions agrees with the admitted violations. The committee may accept the proposed penalties or reject them. If they are not accepted, the university may request an expedited hearing before the committee or a full hearing provided for under NCAA Bylaw 32.

In this case, the committee recognized the thoughtful effort of the university that went into making the recommendations of suggested penalties. It is never an easy task to recommend penalties to be imposed on one's own institution. The suggested penalties were very significant ones, which recognized the serious nature of the admitted violations.

In determining penalties to be imposed in infractions cases, the committee must consider, in addition to other factors, the seriousness of the violations, the number of violations and the length of time during which they occurred.

While recognizing the great strides that have been made by the university in bringing its athletics program into compliance with NCAA rules, the violations admitted by the university in this case were very serious, numerous and extended over a period of several years.

In a letter dated October 27, 1993, the committee advised Nevada-Las Vegas President Maxon that it would accept the findings of violations set out in the university's Summary Disposition Report, but that it could not accept the proposed penalties. The letter to the president suggested the penalties the committee would accept. The president was advised that, but for the actions he had taken at the university, the penalties that would have been imposed in a case as serious as this one would have been much more severe. In that letter, the committee also outlined the university's options of requesting an expedited hearing, requesting a full hearing or accepting the proposed penalties.

On November 2, 1993, the president, through legal counsel, advised the committee that the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, would accept the penalties proposed by the committee. This was confirmed in a letter dated November 3, 1993. As a result of that action, this infractions report was prepared.

The Committee on Infractions wishes to point out that in this case, the violations of NCAA rules, which were admitted by the university, began more than six years ago. Except for one very limited series of violations, all violations ended during the 1990-91 academic year. While penalties against a university must, by their very nature, affect the coaches and student-athletes who are presently at a university, the penalties in this case were developed to address the problems that had existed at the university. Because of the age of this case, the penalties were to have the least possible effect upon the present student-athletes while at the same time imposing meaningful sanctions.

It was for these reasons that there was no limitation placed on postseason competition for the men's basketball team and the televising of the men's basketball games was not totally prohibited. Individuals outside the university were instrumental in violating NCAA rules and the penalties in this case will affect such persons. Alumni and those who became representatives of the university's athletics interests must recognize that their actions can bring great financial loss and discredit upon a university and cause tremendous harm to the student-athletes who wish to participate in a university's athletics program.

II. Committee on Infractions penalties.

For the reasons set forth in this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved several major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.2, as adopted by the Association's membership, requires prescribed minimum penalties, "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons." The required penalties include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic, in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year or reassignment of duties within the institution to a position that does not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport; and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The Committee on Infractions determined that this case was a unique case in which the institution should receive less than the full set of minimum penalties otherwise required by NCAA legislation. The reasons for such action were set out in detail earlier in this report but included such facts that the university, when it learned of the infractions: promptly and thoroughly investigated and reported the violations to the NCAA; cooperated in the processing of the case; conducted much of the investigations, and initiated appropriate corrective actions, including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure that the institution will be in compliance with the principles of institutional control and rules compliance in the future.

All of these actions represented a major commitment of university administrative and financial resources and, more importantly, a commitment by the university to recognize its responsibility to operate its athletics program in compliance with NCAA rules. The Committee on Infractions, following careful deliberations, imposed the following penalties.

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of three years, effective November 9, 1993.

B. The University of Nevada, Las Vegas, shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

Case chronology

Chronology of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, infractions case:

■ March 1987: Apparent violations become public in newspaper articles regarding Nevada-Las Vegas' recruitment of a highly recruited student-athlete.

■ April 1987: University president forms a university committee to investigate the allegations.

■ October 1987: University committee reaches no conclusions about the allegations, but concludes that "the investigation should not be closed because of conflicting testimony and yet-unanswered questions."

■ University committee recommends, and the president concurs, that "appropriate conference and NCAA officials be notified of the present state of the internal investigation and that they continue the investigation."

■ The NCAA enforcement staff, in cooperation with the commissioner of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association (now the Big West Conference), begins a preliminary inquiry into the Nevada-Las Vegas men's basketball program.

■ December 1990: The NCAA enforcement staff directs detailed alleged violations in the form of an official inquiry to Nevada-Las Vegas and involved institutional staff members.

■ June 1991: Nevada-Las Vegas and the various individuals respond to the official inquiry.

NCAA enforcement staff, acting upon additional information involving potential violations occurring during the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years, delivers a supplemental official inquiry to Nevada-Las Vegas and involved individuals.

■ September 1991: Nevada-Las Vegas and the NCAA enforcement staff jointly conduct additional on-campus and off-campus interviews.

Nevada-Las Vegas and involved individuals submit written responses to the supplemental official inquiry.

As Nevada-Las Vegas and the NCAA enforcement staff prepare for a prehearing conference, involved individuals demand that the NCAA follow procedures mandated by a Nevada statute proposing to regulate national athletics associations, which was enacted in April 1991 over the objection of Nevada's two NCAA member institutions. Because the Nevada statute required procedures inconsistent with NCAA legislation, the enforcement staff halts further processing of the case.

■ March 1992: Case is heard by a United States district judge.

■ June 1992: United States district judge finds the Nevada statute unconstitutional and enjoins its enforcement. Preparation for the NCAA prehearing conference, delayed since September 1991, resumes.

■ October 1992: Trial court grants a motion, filed by the former Nevada-Las Vegas head men's basketball coach, asking for a stay of the court's judgment pending appeal. The NCAA enforcement staff again halts processing of the case.

■ November 1992: University files motion asking that the stay be modified to permit Nevada-Las Vegas and the NCAA to process to conclusion all infractions matters against Nevada-Las Vegas as to Nevada-Las Vegas only.

■ January 1993: Trial court granted motion for modification.

■ September 1993: Nevada-Las Vegas and the enforcement staff submit a summary-disposition report to the NCAA Committee on Infractions for its consideration.

Former staff members of the university inform the committee that they wish to have an opportunity to appear and to be heard on any allegations related to their conduct. Because of those requests, the committee does not consider the summary-disposition report at its September meeting.

Committee on Infractions informs the involved individuals that if all of them agree to participate in a hearing under NCAA enforcement procedures, one will be scheduled in November. Only one of the involved individuals advises the committee that he wishes to participate in such a hearing; one of the other involved individuals had earlier notified the committee that he would participate in such a hearing; one individual specifically refuses to participate in such a hearing, and the rest of the involved individuals do not respond to the committee.

Committee on Infractions decides that a hearing of the entire infractions case is not possible, and that it should proceed with the consideration of the summary-disposition report.

■ October 1993: Committee on Infractions reviews summary-disposition report and accepts the findings of violations.

Committee on Infractions advises Nevada-Las Vegas of its acceptance of the findings of violations and submits its proposed penalties.

■ November 1993: University notifies Committee on Infractions that it will accept proposed penalties, and committee issues report of sanctions (infractions report), which concludes all pending infractions matters as to Nevada-Las Vegas.

C. During this period of probation, the institution shall continue its comprehensive education programs, including seminars and testing to instruct coaches and athletics department personnel on NCAA legislation. These programs shall be required for the coaches and athletics department personnel in all sports. In addition to athletics department personnel, all university staff members with responsibility for the certification of student-athletes for admission, retention or competition shall be included in this education program. A preliminary report outlining the implementation of the education programs shall be due January 31, 1994. The institution shall file annual progress reports with the NCAA enforcement staff by July 1 of each year thereafter during the probationary period.

D. During the period of probation, the university shall develop an improved system of distributing educational materials concerning NCAA rules to all known representatives of its athletics interests and alumni. A report of these actions shall be submitted at the same time the university submits its compliance reports for university staff members.

E. The university shall reduce the number of men's basketball coaching staff members who may contact or evaluate prospects off campus at any one time to one coach during the academic year and two coaches during the summer. This shall be for the period from January 1, 1994, through December 31, 1994.

F. The men's basketball program shall be prohibited from using any of the exceptions to the limitation on the number of basketball contests that are provided in Bylaw 17.3.5.3 during the three years in which the institution is on probation. This includes foreign tours; contests in Hawaii, Alaska or Puerto Rico, or participation in the preseason National Invitational Tournament.

G. For a period of two years, the university shall be prohibited from televising regular-season men's nonconference basketball games played away from the campus of the institution. This ineligibility to have nonconference games on television includes live broadcasts, delayed broadcasts, cable broadcasts, and game footage that exceeds a total of five minutes on a coach's show at the institution. It does not include the closed-circuit television exception provided for in Bylaw 19.5.2.5.1. This penalty shall be imposed during the 1993-94 and 1994-95 basketball seasons. If the institution has entered into contracts for the 1993-94 men's basketball season, then this penalty shall be imposed during the 1994-95 and 1995-96 seasons.

H. During the 1994-95 men's basketball season, the only games the institution may schedule on its home campus are games with other members of its athletics conference. If the institution has already entered into contracts for its 1994-95 home men's basketball games that would be affected by this penalty, then the penalty shall be imposed during the 1995-96 season.

I. The institution shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

In addition to the above-listed penalties, the following actions proposed by the institution have been accepted by the committee as appropriate penalties to be imposed.

J. The university shall reduce by one the number of athletically related financial aid awards in men's basketball during each of the 1993-94 and 1994-95 academic years that are countable under Bylaw 15.02.3.

K. The university shall reduce the number of expense-paid visits to the institution's campus in men's basketball from 15 to 10 during each of the 1993-94 and 1994-95 academic years.

If the institution has not already implemented this limitation on financial aid and expense-paid visits as set out in Parts II-J and II-K during the 1993-94 academic year, then this penalty would be extended to the 1995-96 academic year.

Because the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, admitted the violations of NCAA rules, under the summary-disposition procedures and accepted the penalties imposed by the Committee on Infractions, there is no right of appeal of the decision made in this case.

The Committee on Infractions wishes to advise the university that it should take every precaution to ensure that the terms of the penalties are observed. The committee intends to monitor the penalties during their effective periods, and any action contrary to the terms of any of the penalties shall be considered grounds for extending the institution's probationary period, as well as to consider imposing more severe sanctions in this case.

Finally, should any actions by NCAA Conventions directly or indirectly modify any provision of these penalties or the effect of the penalties, the committee reserves the right to review and reconsider the penalties.

NCAA COMMITTEE ON INFRACTIONS

■ Infractions case: Virginia Polytechnic Institute

I. Introduction.

In March 1991, during a meeting requested by three cross country student-athletes with the director of athletics, the young men reported possible violations of NCAA legislation that involved the head men's and women's cross country coach. At that time, the director of athletics asked the assistant director of athletics for compliance to join the meeting. After this meeting, the director of athletics and the assistant director of athletics for compliance informed the university's president, the faculty athletics representative and the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference assistant commissioner of the violations reported by the student-athletes. On June 26, 1991, the NCAA enforcement staff was contacted by the institution and notified of the reported irregularities. On October 9, 1991, the assistant director of athletics for compliance was assigned by the president as the primary investigator, and the institution launched an investigation into the possible violations.

On August 21, 1992, the university submitted a report to the NCAA enforcement staff that contained information concerning violations of NCAA legislation within the men's cross country program. Because the alleged violations appeared to be major in nature, an NCAA enforcement representative was assigned to the case and, on September 23, 1992, visited the university's campus to conduct on-campus interviews and review the results of the institution's investigation. As a result of the information reported by the institution and collected by the enforcement staff, a letter of preliminary inquiry was delivered to the university February 15, 1993. A letter of official inquiry was sent to the president March 19, 1993, and the former head cross country coach also was notified of the allegations. The university responded May 10, 1993. A prehearing conference with the institution was conducted August 26, 1993. The former head coach responded September 3, 1993. A formal hearing before the Committee on Infractions was held Friday, September 17, 1993, with institutional representatives.

The Committee on Infractions found that violations within the men's cross country program had occurred, including: instructing student-athletes to compete under assumed names, using institutional funds to pay lodging and transportation costs for a student-athlete to compete in a club event and submitting false participation sheets to the institution and to the conference.

Because the violations found in Part II of this report are major, the minimum penalties set forth in NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2 ordinarily would apply. The committee, however, recognized several mitigating circumstances, including the limited number of violations; the prompt and thorough investigation and reporting of violations to the NCAA; cooperation in the processing of the case, and initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions, including removal of the involved coach and the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure full compliance with NCAA legislation.

Accordingly, the penalties assessed by the committee include:

- Reprimand and censure of the university's athletics program.
- Two-year probationary period.
- Development of a comprehensive education program.
- Forfeiture of the conference championship.
- Institutional recertification.

In addition, the committee adopted the institution's self-reported penalties. In that regard, the institution:

Case summary

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has imposed a two-year probationary period on the men's cross country program at Virginia Polytechnic Institute for major violations of NCAA legislation.

In addition, the university shall forfeit its 1990 Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference men's cross country championship. The committee also instructed Virginia Tech to develop and implement a comprehensive educational program to instruct coaches and athletics department personnel on NCAA legislation.

The committee also accepted as its own the following penalties self-imposed by Virginia Tech:

- Dismissal of the head coach.
- The permanent ineligibility of one of the student-athletes involved and the loss of one year of eligibility of the other student-athletes involved.
- Return of the conference championship trophy.

The violations found by the committee included that the former head coach instructed student-athletes to compete under assumed names, submitted false participation sheets to the institution and to the conference, and used institutional funds to pay lodging and transportation costs for a student-athlete to compete in a club event. In addition, the former head coach was found knowingly to have provided false and misleading information to university investigators concerning his involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to possible violations of NCAA regulations.

In 1985, the NCAA membership implemented specific minimum penalties for cases involving major violations. These penalties include: a two-year probationary period; elimination of expense-paid recruiting visits for one year; elimination of off-campus recruiting for one year; possible termination of the employment of all staff members who condoned the violations, and the loss of post-season competition and television opportunities for one year.

The NCAA membership has, though, given the committee the authority to impose lesser penalties if it determines that a case is unique. The committee concluded that this case was unique because of the university's prompt and thorough investigation and reporting of the violations to the NCAA; cooperation in the processing of the case, and the initiation of strong disciplinary procedures designed to ensure full compliance with NCAA legislation.

As a result of these mitigating circumstances, the committee imposed less than the minimum penalties required in such cases.

In addition, if the former head coach seeks employment as an athletics department staff member at an NCAA member institution during the next seven years, he and the involved institution will be asked to appear before the Committee on Infractions. The committee at that point will consider whether that member institution should be subject to the show-cause procedures of NCAA legislation. Those procedures could limit that coach's athletically related duties at the new institution for a designated period.

- Dismissed the head cross country coach.

■ Declared involved student-athletes ineligible without appeal for immediate restoration, thereby resulting in a loss of one season of eligibility.

In the case of one student-athlete, restoration was never requested.

- Returned the conference championship trophy.

All eligibility issues related to student-athletes in this report have been resolved.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by the Committee on Infractions.

A. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1, 10.1, 11.1.1 and 14.01.5.3-(b)]

During the period from late October to early November 1989, the head cross country coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct in that he provided instructions to redshirt student-athletes that they reasonably understood to mean they were to participate under assumed names in the open race held immediately preceding the November 4, 1989, Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference Cross Country Championships. Specifically, the head coach: (a) provided such instructions at a team meeting in which he made entry forms available; (b) responded to a student-athlete's post-team meeting request for clarification by specifically stating that all redshirt student-athletes should run under assumed names, and (c) directed another student-athlete to complete his entry form using a different name. As a result of the coach's instructions, six student-athletes ran under assumed names.

B. [NCAA Bylaw 13.1.1.3]

On July 20, 1988, the head cross country

coach offered institutional financial aid to a cross country student-athlete who was enrolled at another NCAA member institution. The institution did not obtain an official release or permission from the first member institution to talk with the young man, as required under NCAA recruiting legislation.

Specifically, the student-athlete telephoned the head coach to discuss the institution's cross country program and the possibility of the young man transferring to the institution. Subsequently, the student-athlete's father telephoned the head coach on at least one occasion to further discuss this issue. The head coach informed the young man that they should not talk with him until the student-athlete was released from his former institution. The coach met with the young man's family and a family friend July 20, 1988, at a sporting goods store owned by the head coach where recruiting information, including the offer of a grant-in-aid from the institution to the student-athlete, was discussed. As a result of the head coach's actions, the young man received an impermissible grant-in-aid from the institution during the 1988-89 academic year.

C. [NCAA Bylaws 16.10.2.4 and 16.12.2.1]

During the period from April 26 through 28, 1989, the head cross country coach used institutional funds to pay lodging and transportation costs for a student-athlete. This was done in order for the young man to travel to participate in competition for a racing team that was sponsored by a sporting goods store in Blacksburg, Virginia, owned by the head coach. At the time, the young man was not eligible to receive such expenses because he was fulfilling his one-year residency requirement at the institution after transferring from a previous four-year institution.

D. [NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.1]

From the summer of 1989 until the summer of 1990, the head cross country coach entertained a cross country student-athlete on at least four occasions by providing meals in restaurants in the Blacksburg, Virginia, area and other sites, at no cost to the young man.

E. [NCAA Bylaws 10.01.1 and 10.1-(d)]

The involved head cross country coach acted contrary to the principles of ethical conduct, inasmuch as he did not, on all occasions, deport himself in accordance with the generally recognized high standards of honesty and sportsmanship associated with intercollegiate athletics. He knowingly submitted false participation sheets for competition to the institution and the conference. During his interview with university investigators November 25, 1991, the coach knowingly furnished false and misleading information to university investigators concerning his involvement in or knowledge of matters relevant to possible violations of NCAA regulations. Specifically, the head coach knowingly provided false information concerning his involvement in or knowledge of: (a) redshirt student-athletes participating in an open race under assumed names November 4, 1989, as described in Part II-A, and (b) payment of lodging and transportation expenses for a student-athlete to participate in competition April 27, 1989, as described in Part II-C.

For the reasons set forth in Part I of this report, the Committee on Infractions found that this case involved several major violations of NCAA legislation that occurred after September 1, 1985. NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.2, as adopted by the Association's membership, requires prescribed minimum penalties, "subject to exceptions authorized by the Committee on Infractions in unique cases on the basis of specifically stated reasons," that include: (a) a two-year probationary period (including a periodic, in-person monitoring system and written institutional reports); (b) the elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the institution in the involved sport for one recruiting year; (c) a requirement that all coaching staff members in the sport be prohibited from engaging in any off-campus recruiting activities for one recruiting year; (d) a requirement that all institutional staff members determined by the Committee on Infractions knowingly to have engaged in or condoned a major violation be subject either to termination of employment, suspension without pay for at least one year or reassignment of duties within the institution to positions that do not include contact with prospective or enrolled student-athletes or representatives of the institution's athletics interests for at least one year; (e) one year of sanctions precluding postseason competition in the sport; (f) one year of sanctions precluding television appearances in the sport, and (g) institutional recertification that the current athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The Committee on Infractions determined that the appropriate penalties that the institution should receive should be less than the full set of minimum penalties otherwise required by NCAA legislation. Mitigating circumstances included: prompt and thorough investigation and reporting of violations to the NCAA; cooperation in the processing of the case, and initiation of strong disciplinary and corrective actions, including the establishment of administrative procedures designed to ensure full compliance with NCAA legislation. The committee believed that this case primarily resulted from the deliberate actions of an individual coach who violated the basic trust of the student-athletes with whom he worked, as well as of the institution. Accordingly, the penalties imposed by the committee are as follows:

A. The university shall be publicly reprimanded and censured, and placed on probation for a period of two years from the date these penalties are imposed, which shall be the date the 15-day appeal period expires or the date the institution notifies the NCAA executive director that it will not appeal, whichever is earlier, or the date established by NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee action in the event of an appeal by the university.

B. Virginia Polytechnic Institute shall be subject to the provisions of NCAA Bylaw 19.5.2.3 concerning repeat violators for a five-year period beginning on the effective date of the penalties in this case.

C. During this period of probation, the institution shall: develop and implement a comprehensive educational program (e.g., seminars and testing) to instruct coaches and athletics department personnel on NCAA legislation; submit a preliminary report by December 31, 1993, setting forth a schedule for establishing this compliance and educational program, and file annual progress reports with the NCAA enforcement staff by July 1 of each year thereafter during the probationary period with a particular emphasis on outside competition, club activities and housing requirements.

D. The institution shall recertify that all of its current athletics policies and practices

Black universities prepared to seek I-A classification

Athletics directors and representatives from a group of historically black universities say they are ready to act—specifically, to seek classification in Division I-A—if NCAA Division I-AA reduces football grants-in-aid.

"The purpose is to know exactly how to react...be ready to react if in fact the proposals (to reduce scholarships) aren't defeated," Jackson State University athletics director W. C. Gorden told The Associated Press November 11 after a second meeting of the group to discuss options.

"We want something in place in case the scholarships are reduced," he said.

Two proposals to reduce I-AA scholarships are to be considered at the NCAA Convention in January. The measures (Proposals No. 87 and 88 in the Official Notice of the 1994 Convention) would reduce the number of football scholarships for Division I-AA teams from 65 to 55 or as low as 45.

If one of the proposals passes, the group of teams plans to seek Division I-A football status.

Athletics directors from Jackson State; Southern University, Baton Rouge; Grambling State University, and Florida A&M University first met September 23. Representatives from North Carolina A&T State University and Alcorn State University now have joined the discussions.

Other schools contemplating the move include Howard University, South Carolina State University and Tennessee State University.

Gorden said the group's main objective is to defeat the proposed legislation. He said the schools are happy with the status quo—a scholarship limit of 65 with a mandated reduction of two scholarships next year.

"That is our primary wish and fantasy, that the scholarship schedule remain as it is presently," Gorden said.

"We are a group of schools who feel we can't function with a limitation of 45 scholarships. We want to be ready to set into motion what our destiny would be if in fact the proposals are passed."

Gorden said the second meeting focused on permitting officials from each school to determine what steps each must take to meet Division I-A criteria.

Criteria to achieve I-A status include: A school must sponsor at least seven men's and seven women's sports, schedule at least 60 percent of its football games against other Division I-A schools and meet certain attendance requirements.

The move could be made by as early as next year.

Another meeting is planned in Atlanta in conjunction with the January 1 Heritage Bowl.

■ Infractions appeals case: University of New Mexico

Editor's note: The following is the report of the decision of the NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee on an appeal of a 1992 Committee on Infractions ruling involving the University of New Mexico.

I. Introduction.

On December 7, 1992, the Committee on Infractions issued Infractions Report No. 78 in which the committee found separate violations of NCAA legislation in the University of New Mexico's men's track and women's gymnastics programs. On the basis of these findings, the committee determined that this was a major infractions case and imposed penalties accordingly. See The NCAA News, December 16, 1992, page 14.

This case began in March 1990 when the NCAA eligibility staff received information questioning the eligibility of a track student-athlete. After an investigation into the men's track program in which the institution participated and cooperated, the staff issued an Official Inquiry March 5, 1991. A month later, the state of Nevada, the then residence of the institution's former track coach, passed legislation that made it impossible for the NCAA and the institution to complete the case at that time. A year later, the institution self-discovered and self-disclosed violations in women's gymnastics. In April 1992, the NCAA prevailed in the Nevada litigation, clearing the way for the enforcement staff and the institution to complete the processing of the case. The institution appeared before the Committee on Infractions in August 1992 and, as indicated above, that committee subsequently issued Infractions Report No. 78.

The institution filed a timely notice of appeal December 21, 1992. At the time the institution's notice of appeal was filed, a legislative proposal to establish an NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee was pending before the 1993 NCAA Convention. Once the proposal was adopted, the institution's appeal was deferred by agreement so that the appeal could be heard by the Infractions Appeals Committee, rather than by the Division I Steering Committee of the NCAA Council.

II. Violations of NCAA legislation, as determined by the Committee on Infractions.

The Committee on Infractions found that the following violations occurred in the institution's men's track program:

A. Representatives of the institution's athletics interests signed forms guaranteeing substantial amounts of financial assistance for seven prospective track student-athletes from foreign countries. These forms were needed in order to obtain admission to the university.

B. The head coach entertained a student-athlete at a restaurant with a representative of the institution's athletics interests, providing a meal and local automobile transportation. The athletics representative subsequently lent funds to the student-athlete so he could participate in a track meet.

C. The head coach permitted a student-athlete to participate on behalf of the institution at an NCAA/The Athletics Congress-sanctioned track meet, providing institutional funds for expenses, although the coach knew the student-athlete was not eligible to compete.

D. Representatives of the institution's athletics interests provided lodging, meals and local transportation for a student-athlete and a prospective student-athlete during a three-week period in the summer. Although the students were supposed to perform domestic duties for the representatives in exchange for these benefits, the duties performed were insufficient.

E. A representative of the institution's athletics interests was used to obtain academic transcripts of a prospective student-athlete from a foreign country in order to expedite review of the young man's eligibility for enrollment.

F. The institution failed to exercise appropriate institutional control and monitoring in administering its intercollegiate men's track program.

The institution reported, and the Committee on Infractions found, that the following violations occurred in the institution's women's gymnastics program:

A. The head coach provided lodging and meals in his home and provided other living expenses to a prospective student-athlete who was a highly regarded prospect. He tried to justify the provision of such benefits by obtaining a document executed in the young woman's home country that attempted to establish the head coach as her legal guardian, which, in fact, it did not.

B. The head coach knowingly participated in a fraudulent scheme in which a former student-athlete took a Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the Michigan Test for English Proficiency (MTEP) for a prospective student-athlete by falsely representing herself to be the prospective student-athlete.

The Committee on Infractions also found that the following violations of the principles of ethical conduct had been committed by the former gymnastics head coach:

A. Knowingly operating the institution's women's gymnastics program contrary to NCAA rules.

B. Providing false and misleading information to the institution when representatives of the institution asked him who had taken the SAT and MTEP for the prospective student-athlete.

C. Encouraging the prospective student-athlete to misrepresent the facts to the institution about the circumstances surrounding the taking of the SAT and MTEP submitted on her behalf.

III. Issues raised on appeal.

New Mexico raised the following six issues for consideration by the Infractions Appeals Committee:

A. The first issue concerns a matter the institution characterizes as a "factual discrepancy" involving the academic eligibility of a track student-athlete.

B. The second issue is the institution's contention that it had self-reported the track violations and that the self-reports should have been considered by the Committee on Infractions in assessing the penalty.

C. The third issue is the institution's contention that the Committee on Infractions' finding of a general lack of institutional control over eligibility matters in the track program should have been limited to a lack of institutional control over the admission and eligibility of foreign student-athletes.

D. The fourth issue is the penalty prohibiting the men's cross country team from competing in postseason competition at the end of the 1993 season.

E. The fifth issue is the three-year probationary period imposed by the Committee on Infractions.

F. The sixth issue is the institution's request that the penalty prohibiting the track team from competing in postseason competition be postponed one year.

IV. Appellate procedures.

Before ruling on the institution's appeal, it is instructive to review the jurisdiction and authority of the Infractions Appeals Committee. NCAA Bylaw 19.1.2.3 authorizes the Infractions Appeals Committee to hear and act on an institution's appeal on the findings of major violations by the Committee on Infractions. Bylaw 19.6.2 provides a member institution with the right to give written notice of appeal of the Committee on Infractions' findings of major violations, the penalty or both to the Infractions Appeals Committee. Bylaw 32.9.2 further provides that determinations of fact and violations shall not be set aside on appeal, except on a showing that:

A. The committee's finding clearly is contrary to the evidence presented to the committee.

B. The facts found by the committee do not constitute a violation of the Association's rules; or

C. A procedural error affects the relevancy of the information that was used to support the committee's finding.

The legislation does not provide similar standards when an institution appeals all, or a portion, of the penalty imposed by the Committee on Infractions. However, in reviewing the appeal of a penalty, the Infractions Appeals Committee will consider whether the penalty is appropriate or excessive based on the particular facts and circumstances of the case, including the nature, number and seriousness of the violations, the conduct and motives of the individuals involved in the violations, and what the institution has done to correct the problem.

In considering New Mexico's appeal, the Infractions Appeals Committee reviewed the institution's notice of appeal, the Committee on Infractions' response in the form of an expanded infractions report as required by Bylaw 32.9.5 and the transcript of the institution's appearance before the Committee on Infractions. At the hearing, conducted in accordance with procedures adopted by the committee, the president, the faculty athletics representative and the director of athletics appeared on behalf of the institution. The chair of the Committee on Infractions appeared on behalf of the Committee on Infractions. The NCAA assistant executive director for enforcement accompanied the chair of the Committee on Infractions. Also in attendance was the NCAA staff liaison to the Infractions Appeals Committee. After the hearing, parties and staff were excused while the members of the committee deliberated and reached a decision by majority vote.

V. Infractions Appeals Committee resolution of issues raised on appeal.

The first issue concerns a matter the institution characterizes as a "factual discrepancy." The introduction to the Infractions Report indicates that the track case began after the NCAA eligibility staff received information from an NCAA member institution alleging that New Mexico admitted a track student-athlete based on a fraudulent high-school transcript and West African Examination Council (WAEC) certificate. Upon receipt of this information, the institution declared the young man ineligible. After review of additional information and pending a more complete investigation, the institution again declared the young man ineligible after restoring his eligibility for a brief period of time.

Approximately two months later, it was determined that the young man had been involved in violations of recruiting and extrabenefit legislation unrelated to his academic status. The NCAA eligibility staff subsequently restored his eligibility.

The Committee on Infractions did not find that the institution admitted the young man based on fraudulent transcript. Since there is no finding on the issue of a false academic record, there is no appealable issue. Any reading of the Committee on Infractions report that implies that the student-athletes knowingly was admitted by the institution on a falsified transcript is incorrect.

The second issue concerns the institution's contention that it self-reported the infractions found in the track program, that this fact should have been referenced in the Infractions Report and that the self-report should have been considered by the Committee on Infractions in determining the penalty.

A self-reported violation is one in which the institution discovers and reports a violation without prior inquiry or discovery by the NCAA enforcement staff. In this case, the violations in the men's track program were discovered as the result of initial inquiries made by the enforcement staff and to that extent were not self-discovered and reported by the institution. It is important to note that the institution fully cooperated with the enforcement staff to develop the information. It is agreed by the institution and the Committee on Infractions that the institution self-discovered and reported the violations in the women's gymnastics program (see Infractions Report). In addition, the Committee on Infractions reported that the institution self-reported an additional violation of a secondary nature in track.

As to the question of whether the Committee on Infractions considered the institution's self-reports and cooperation in assessing the penalty, the Infractions Appeals Committee concluded, after review of all the evidence, that these matters were taken into consideration by the committee. Whether the Committee on Infractions adequately considered the institution's cooperation and self-reporting in determining the penalty is discussed below in consideration of the institution's appeal of the three-year probation.

The third issue is the institution's contention that the evidence does not support a finding of lack of institutional control over eligibility matters in the sport of men's track but that the evidence relates only to the lack of institutional control over the eligibility of foreign student-athletes. In particular, the institution contends there is no evidence to support a finding of lack of institutional control over the cross country program. The institution concedes that it failed to control the administration of eligibility decisions as they related to foreign student-athletes.

The Infractions Appeals Committee concluded that the general finding of lack of institutional control in the men's track program clearly is not contrary to the evidence notwithstanding changes recently instituted by the institution to develop institutional control. The evidence of serious violations, the active role of two head coaches in violating NCAA legislation, and violations committed by athletics representatives with the knowledge and participation of the head coaches is evidence of lack of institutional control in the track program beyond the eligibility of foreign student-athletes.

The fourth issue is the institution's contention that the penalty assessed by the Committee on Infractions prohibiting the men's cross country team from competing in postseason competition at the end of the 1993 season is not supported by the evidence and, therefore, excessive. In considering this issue, the Infractions Appeals Committee noted that the Committee on Infractions did not make a specific finding of a violation in the sport of cross country.

The former head men's track coach also was the head men's cross country coach and two of the foreign student-athletes involved in the violations were participants in both men's cross country and men's track. The two student-athletes competed for four years and one year, respectively. In each instance, the former head men's track and cross country coach arranged for representatives of the institution's athletics interests to sign institutional statements guaranteeing substantial amounts of financial assistance in order for them to gain admission to the institution. Further, during the institution's appearance before the Committee on Infractions, the former head track and cross country coach stated that he had operated all of his programs the same way he operated the men's track program for many years, not only at New Mexico, but at other institutions where he had been employed.

The penalty on the cross country team was imposed by the Committee on Infractions because ineligible student-athletes participated in cross country and because of the coach's general disregard of NCAA rules. The Infractions Appeals Committee concludes that the penalty prohibiting the cross country team from competing in postseason competition in 1993 neither is excessive nor inappropriate under all the facts and circumstances of this case.

The fifth issue is the institution's contention that the three-year probationary period imposed by the Committee on Infractions is excessive. The Infractions Appeals Committee, after reviewing the evidence, concludes that the three-year probation is not excessive for the following reasons:

A. This case involved major, serious and intentional violations in the men's track and women's gymnastics programs as well as competition by ineligible student-athletes in cross country.

B. The head coach of each sport actively was involved in, and primarily responsible for, the violations.

C. The violations in the women's gymnastics program were particularly egregious in that the head coach attempted to justify flagrant and deliberate violations of clearly understood rules of recruiting and eligibility on the basis of his own personal judgment.

D. The violations in the women's gymnastics program involved the submission of fraudulent admissions credentials to establish the eligibility of a student-athlete that constitutes violations of the Association's most basic principles.

E. The violations provided the institution with significant competitive advantages in men's track and cross country and women's gymnastics.

The Infractions Appeals Committee, in considering this issue, noted that the institution has imposed the penalties assessed against it, that the delays in processing this case were not the fault of the institution, including the delay in processing the appeal, and that the institution has taken steps to correct the problems disclosed in this case. Thus, the committee concludes that the probation is to run for a period of three years, beginning December 7, 1992, the date of the Infractions Report issued by the Committee on Infractions.

The sixth issue is the institution's request that the penalty prohibiting the men's track program from competing in postseason competition be postponed for one year. The institution requested that the sanctions imposed on the men's track program be postponed until the end of the 1993-94 season. Since the appeal process was delayed because of the change in legislation in January 1993, the institution was permitted to compete in the 1992-93 NCAA Indoor and Outdoor Track and Field Championships. The institution's men's indoor and outdoor track teams shall conclude their 1993-94 season with the playing of their last regularly scheduled in-season contest and shall not be eligible to participate in any postseason competition, including a foreign tour, after that season. The prohibition in this penalty on participation by the institution's teams in postseason events also prohibits the participation on behalf of the institution of any individual on these teams from participating in any of these postseason events on behalf of the institution.

Except as otherwise provided in this report, the penalties imposed by the Committee on Infractions remain in full force and effect.

APPEALS COMMITTEE

Eleven are nominated for Basketball Hall of Fame

University of Louisville men's basketball coach Denny Crum, whose teams have won two NCAA championships, and Carol Blazejowski, a shooting whiz of the women's game, were among 11 players and coaches nominated for the Basketball Hall of Fame November 10.

Other coaching nominees were Gene Shue and Chuck Daly of the National Basketball Association and Cesare Rubini, whose Milan teams have won 10 Italian championships. Rubini was nominated by the hall of fame's international committee.

Nominated as players were Richie Guerin, Buddy Jeannette, Johnny Kerr, Vern Mikkelsen and Jamaal Wilkes. Joan Crawford, an AAU star from the 1950s, was proposed by the women's committee along with Blazejowski. Jeannette, a standout backcourt player during the 1940s, and Mikkelsen, one of the NBA's first power forwards, were nominated by the veterans committee.

The nominees need at least 18 votes from the 24-member Honors Committee to be inducted. The committee's selections are to be announced February 8, said hall of fame President Joe O'Brien.

"Now we wait," Crum told The Associated Press, adding that the nomination is "a very great honor."

Crum coached Louisville to NCAA Division I men's titles in 1980 and 1986 after serving as an assistant to John Wooden at the University of California, Los Angeles. One of the last players he recruited for UCLA was fellow nominee Wilkes.

Crum credited his players—he has sent 22 on to the NBA—for keeping him in the game.

"They are all different and each year is different," said Crum. "Just being around them with all their ups and downs is fun and real rewarding."

"Fantastic," said Blazejowski, who now is a director of consumer products for the NBA. "I've waited a long time for this...the big hall of fame."

The most prolific scorer in the history of women's basketball,

Blazejowski—who graduated from Montclair State College in 1978—holds the women's career collegiate scoring record with an average of 31.7 points a game and the single-season record of 38.6 points a game.

No college player, woman or man, has scored more points in Madison Square Garden than the 52 she recorded against Queens College (New York) in 1976. Later that year, she led Montclair State

Six more victories to be added to 'Pop' Warner's career record

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Paul "Bear" Bryant's position as the all-time leader in Division I-A football coaching victories is safe—at least for the foreseeable future. Amos Alonzo Stagg, however, has lost his hold on the No. 2 spot.

After nearly three months of weighing evidence presented by a researcher, the NCAA statistics staff has concluded that six additional victories will be added to the career total of Glenn "Pop" Warner, whose new total of 319 victories moves him past Stagg into second place. Bryant remains No. 1 in Division I-A victories with 323, and Stagg's 314 victories now rank third. Eddie Robinson, in his 51st season at Grambling State University (Division I-AA), leads all four-year college coaches with 387 victories through November 6.

Iowa State tenure

In mid-August, researcher, Mike Bynum, who is authoring a book on Warner's career that is scheduled to be published later this month, informed the NCAA statistics staff that Warner's tenure as coach at Iowa State University was not accounted for in the NCAA Football records book.

Bynum claimed that Warner registered 22 victories as a coach at Iowa State from 1895 to 1899 while simultaneously coaching at the University of Georgia (1895 to 1896), Cornell University (1897 to 1898) and Carlisle College (1899). In examining Warner's history, the researcher determined that five victories at Carlisle and one at the University of Pittsburgh were missing from Warner's career total as well.

The NCAA statistics staff acknowledged and added the victories from Carlisle and Pittsburgh to Warner's total, but was unable to credit Warner with additional victories or losses from Iowa State. The reasons are that most existing research of that era indicates that Warner was a preseason or advisory coach, and many of Iowa State's games took place on dates when it would have been impossible for Warner to be present because he was coaching at another institution.

Posed difficulties

The Warner case posed difficulties for the NCAA statistics staff. On one hand, records recognized by an institution normally are included in NCAA football records. Iowa State long has regarded Warner as its football founder, even though the program was organized several years before his arrival by a group of athletes.

However, a 1991 book on the 100-year history of Iowa State football did not agree entirely with the institution regarding Warner's position with the football program.

"There is no one alive who can say one way or the other what happened," said James F. Wright, NCAA statistics services manager.

Iowa State will not change its records regarding Warner's coaching career, said Tom Kroeschell, Iowa State media coordinator. Kroeschell said that he learned while doing research of his own in 1991 that Warner's victories at Iowa State were not accounted for in the NCAA Football records book. He added that he made no effort to contact the NCAA about the omission.

"First, we really consider 'Pop' Warner the father of Iowa State football—the individual who helped put us on the map," Kroeschell said. "We've always considered him our first coach. I don't see us changing our numbers."

"Let's face it, when you go back 100 years there is nobody around who went to those games. If you go back through many schools' records, you will find a lot of discrepancies.... When you go back in time to that era there will be tough calls."

Unique problem

The Warner case also confronted the NCAA statistics staff with a unique problem regarding the tallying of coaching victories. The staff was faced with the question of whether an individual's coaching record is affected when that person is physically not in attendance.

Currently, if a coach is physically unable to be on the sidelines for an extended period of time, the statistics staff contacts the institution to determine who should be credited with those contests.

To help it rule on cases similar to Warner's in the future, the statistics staff is drafting a recommendation for a policy to be included in the national statistics program section of the NCAA Manual. The recommendation, which will be forwarded to the NCAA Communications Committee and eventually the Executive Committee for approval, will state that a person must be designated as head coach for the entire athletics season and cannot be an advisory or preseason coach.

"We encourage the member schools and conferences to accept our statistical records," Wright said. "However, there is no NCAA rule or a penalty if an institution or conference opts to disagree with our records."

Principles

Committee changes approach

early view of the committee is that legislation probably will not be a primary result of its work.

Instead, the committee believes it ultimately will produce a "map" to student-athlete welfare, access and equity that the Association will be asked to endorse and follow.

The committee has discussed—but made no decisions about—several other possible results of its work, including the following:

■ Sponsorship of educational forums for the discussion of issues pertinent to student-athlete welfare, access and equity.

■ Creation of a sourcebook much like that currently under development by the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force.

■ Research to qualitatively analyze whether student-athletes are affected by reform efforts within the Association.

As it moves closer to forming recommendations, the committee continues to recognize the importance of involving coaches and administrators in its deliberations.

It plans to ask representatives of those groups to review and comment on its guiding principles, and will continue to consult with those individuals and with appropriate NCAA committees and external groups as it prepares to report its findings to the NCAA Presidents Commission and NCAA Council in summer 1994.

Other highlights

In other actions at its November 4 meeting in Dallas, the Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity:

■ Invited approximately 20 student-athletes representing six NCAA institutions in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to meet with five committee members for the purpose of discussing how student-athletes can express concerns about and become better informed about aspects of intercollegiate athletics. The student-athletes described experiences with such entities as campus athletics councils and student-athlete advisory committees. Committee members attending the session noted the student-athletes' interest in becoming more involved in athletics issues not only at the campus level, but through NCAA committees.

■ Discussed at length the potential for conflict between efforts by the Association to protect student-athletes from adverse results of cost-cutting efforts and recommendations that may result from efforts to enact need-based-only financial aid for student-athletes. The special committee decided that it will alert the Presidents Commission executive committee of the potential for conflict and inform that group that it wishes to discuss the issue with members of the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism.

Legislator wants game rescheduled

A legislative leader has asked the University of Wisconsin, Madison, to reschedule this season's final Big Ten Conference game rather than play it at Tokyo December 4.

Michael Ellis, the majority leader in the Wisconsin Senate, wrote athletics director Pat Richter November 8, calling it an "absolute shame" that the Badgers will play Michigan State University so far from their home fans.

School officials said the Badgers are contractually bound to play in Japan. Wisconsin agreed two years ago to play in the Coca-Cola Bowl.

Gov. Tommy Thompson has scheduled a trade mission to the region that will put a group of 38 business leaders, lawmakers and other officials in Tokyo at the same time.

"I think the scheduling of this game, in light of the team's superb performance this year, raises troubling questions...concerning financial matters, team and fan morale and the very real possibility of jeopardizing our first Rose Bowl appearance in 30 years," Ellis told Richter.

"In light of all that, I ask you, is it at all possible to reschedule that game and bring the Badgers back home to Madison where they belong?"

The athletics department reported it has received advance payments of about $375,000 for the agreement to move what had been scheduled as an October 2 home game with Michigan State.

into the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women championship semifinals, where the team lost to UCLA and hall-of-famer Ann Meyers.

Shue, during his 22 seasons as an NBA coach, earned the reputation of taking struggling franchises and turning them into title contenders. He is the NBA's No. 7-ranked coach with 784 victories with the Bullets, 76ers and Clippers.

Daly, who now coaches the New Jersey Nets, also has had a winning touch with faltering teams. In 1983, he took over at Detroit, a team that never before had back-to-back winning seasons, and led the Pistons to NBA championships in 1989 and 1990. But Daly, who also led the University of Pennsylvania to four Ivy Group championships in the 1970s, never had it so easy as when he led the Dream Team to the Olympic gold medal last year in Barcelona, Spain.

Wilkes, a three-time academic all-American as well as frontcourt standout, helped lead UCLA to NCAA titles in 1972 and 1973 and a third-place finish in 1974. He also played 12 professional seasons with the Warriors, Lakers and Clippers.

Guerin played for 11 years with the New York Knicks, where he became the first guard in the league to score more than 2,000 points. He spent his last six years in the NBA as player-coach of the Hawks and was named NBA coach of the year in 1967-68.

Jeannette played on nine professional championship teams in four cities—Detroit; Sheboygan, Wisconsin; Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Baltimore.

Kerr, a 6-9 center who led the University of Illinois, Champaign, to the NCAA Final Four in 1952, averaged 13.8 points and 11.2 rebounds over his 12-year professional career. In 1966, he became head coach of the Chicago Bulls and led the team into the playoffs, establishing a NBA record of 33 victories by an expansion team.

Mikkelsen, who led Hamline University to a National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics title in 1949, played on four NBA championship teams during his 10-year career with the Minneapolis Lakers.

NCAA Bylaw 12.5.4-(b)

Use of logos on uniforms

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 12.5.4-(b), a student-athlete may wear athletics apparel that bears the trademark or logo of an apparel manufacturer or distributor in athletics competition, provided that in the case of the student-athlete's institution's official uniform and all other items of apparel (e.g., socks, head bands, T-shirts, wrist bands, visors or hats, swim caps and towels), the clothing bears only a single manufacturer's or distributor's normal label or trademark, not to exceed a 1½-inch square in size.

During its December 3, 1992, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that a single manufacturer's or distributor's normal label or trademark (not to exceed a 1½-inch square in size) may appear on both the playing shorts and playing shirt of a student-athlete's uniform.

Please note that it is necessary to consult the playing rules for each sport to determine if a sport has a more restrictive standard regarding the use of logos on uniforms. For example, in the sport of basketball, Rule 3, Section 5(a), of the 1994 NCAA Men's and Women's Basketball Rules and Interpretations indicates that decorations such as mascots, stars and logos of any kind, including a manufacturer's label or trademark, are not permitted on the team shirt. An undershirt is considered to be part of the shirt and must be a color similar to the shirt. No logos, decorations, trim, lettering or numbering may be used on an undershirt.

NCAA Bylaw 14.8.1

Outside competition, sports other than basketball

Division I institutions should note that a student-athlete in any sport other than basketball who participates during the academic year as a member of any outside team in any noncollegiate, amateur competition becomes ineligible for intercollegiate competition. A student-athlete is, however, permitted to practice on such a team. In Divisions II and III, a student-athlete is prohibited from participating as a member of any outside team in any noncollegiate, amateur competition (e.g., tournament play, exhibition games or other activity) during the institution's intercollegiate season in the sport. During its July 14, 1992, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that once a student-athlete enrolls in a Division I institution as a full-time student during any portion of an academic term, the student-athlete may not participate as a member of an outside team for the remainder of that term without jeopardizing his or her eligibility in that sport, even if the student-athlete later becomes a part-time student during that term.

NCAA Bylaw 16.13.1

Incidental-expense waivers

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaws 16.02.3 and 16.12.2.1, student-athletes are prohibited from receiving extra benefits [i.e., any special arrangement by an institutional employee or representative of the institution's athletics interests to provide a student-athlete or the student-athlete's relative(s) or friend(s) a benefit not expressly authorized by NCAA legislation]. Receipt of a benefit by student-athletes or their relatives or friends is not a violation of NCAA legislation if it is demonstrated that the same benefit generally is available to the institution's students or their relatives or friends or to a particular segment of the student body (e.g., foreign students, minority students) determined on a basis unrelated to athletics ability.

During the 1988 NCAA Convention, the membership adopted legislation to provide for an incidental-expense waiver. In accordance with Bylaw 16.13.1, the NCAA Council may approve an institution's request to provide additional expenses incidental to a student-athlete's participation in intercollegiate athletics when the information presented persuades the Council that such a waiver is warranted because it may be applied on a basis of defined, objective standards; does not create an unfair competitive advantage for the involved institution, and does not compromise the intent of the governing legislation. Incidental-expense waivers that have been approved have included, but are not limited to, providing transportation to a student-athlete to return home to attend the funeral of a family member or to enable a student-athlete to visit a member of his or her immediate family who is seriously ill or injured. All requests for waivers per Bylaw 16.13.1 should be submitted to Craig W. Angelos at the NCAA national office.

This material was provided by the NCAA legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question it would like to have answered in this column, the question should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Proposals

Smallest consent package in NCAA Convention history heads a total of 193 proposals and division business sessions and then in an afternoon general session.

Included in that group are 43 basic proposals that appear in the Presidents Commission grouping. A summary of those proposals will be published in the November 22 issue of The NCAA News.

The 282-page Official Notice includes 173 basic proposals and 20 amendments-to-amendments. A new feature of the Official Notice is the inclusion of NCAA committee positions on membership-sponsored proposals, as directed by legislation adopted at the 1993 Convention.

Bring Notice

As before, delegates are being reminded of the importance of carrying the Official Notice to the 1994 Convention in San Antonio.

Under a policy enacted two years ago by the Council, legislation for the Convention will not be reprinted in the Convention Program, as it was before 1992.

The Official Notice has been mailed to the chief executive officer, faculty athletics representative, director of athletics and senior woman administrator at each NCAA institution; additional individuals identified by some members as a fifth recipient of NCAA materials; every member conference, and every affiliated and corresponding member.

Accompanying the copy of the Notice that was mailed to the chief executive officer was a form on which the CEO appoints that member's delegates to the Convention.

Summary

Following is a summary of the 10 proposals in the consent package, with the sponsor indicated in each case:

No. 1: Specify that an interim appointment to the NCAA Council is for the remainder of the term of the individual being replaced, rather than only until the next Convention. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Committee on Review and Planning.

No. 2: Specify that an amendment-to-amendment or a resolution sponsored by a conference must be signed by the chair of the conference's official presidential administrative group or by at least two chief executive officers of the conference's member institutions if the conference has no such group, as is already required for the submission of amendments. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Legislative Review Committee.

No. 3: Delete references to voting and alternate Convention delegates from legislation pertaining to the submission of amendments-to-amendments and resolutions, because of the October 15 deadline for submission.

No. 4: Permit the Council to approve the limited replacement of a coaching staff member when the coach is unable to perform some aspect of coaching duties because of an extenuating circumstance. Currently, the circumstance must prevent performance of all such duties. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Interpretations Committee.

No. 5: Permit a transfer student-athlete to receive institutional financial aid at a certifying Division III institution, even if the student-athlete did not obtain permission to discuss the transfer with the institution. Sponsored by the Council.

No. 6: Permit a student-athlete who has made use of the discontinued/nonsponsored-sport exception to the transfer residence requirement to use the one-time transfer exception later, provided all other conditions of the one-time transfer exception are met. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Administrative Review Panel.

No. 7: Confirm that the NCAA Eligibility Committee may restore a student-athlete's eligibility before the expiration of a period of ineligibility specified in the Association's outside-competition legislation. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Eligibility Committee.

No. 8: Specify that the NCAA Men's and Women's Committees on Committees each shall include at least three ethnic minorities, with at least one from each division. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Committee on Review and Planning.

No. 9: Specify that there shall be at least five men and five women on the NCAA Nominating Committee; delete the requirement that at least one committee member shall be from each of the eight geographical districts; specify that the committee must include at least one ethnic minority each from Divisions I, II and III; require that eight committee members be former NCAA officers or Council members, and specify that committee members are limited to two (rather than three) terms in any five-year period. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Committee on Review and Planning.

No. 10: Clarify that the NCAA Eligibility Committee, in considering cases under its jurisdiction, has the authority to restore the eligibility of a student-athlete immediately, restore eligibility at a later time, impose conditions upon restoration of eligibility or determine that eligibility should not be restored. Sponsored by the Council, recommended by the Eligibility Committee.

Philadelphia. She also was a charter member of Athletes Against Alcohol and has been a speaker at local hospitals and youth groups.

"My dream is to open a network of community and after-school centers for underprivileged youth," Lynch told The Associated Press.

Villanova track coach Marty Stern called Lynch "one of the greatest female runners in the history of collegiate track, who is an exceptional student and who also takes the time to help people."

Champion Products donated a total of $15,000 to the women's athletics program at Villanova—including $5,000 for Lynch's selection as a regional winner and $5,000 for her selection as a finalist, as well as $5,000 for her selection as NCAA Woman of the Year. A total of $310,000 in donations was made to the women's athletics programs of the regional winners.

The other finalists were Christie Allen, Pittsburg State University; Jennifer Carbone, University of Georgia; Sarah Edmonds, Gustavus Adolphus College; Lisa Fernandez, University of California, Los Angeles; Karen Jennings, University of Nebraska, Lincoln; Anu Kaljurand, Brigham Young University; Cynthia Elizabeth Oyler, William Smith College; Lisa Pikalek, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and Andrea Wieland, University of Iowa.

Flood cleanup

Central College (Iowa) women's basketball player Kelly Miller, along with other members of Central's (Iowa) women's basketball and softball teams, spent a day in October working in a flood-ravaged area of West Des Moines, Iowa. The student-athletes ripped out drywalls, tore up floors and performed other tasks necessary so homes could be rebuilt.
