I-A playoff group to hear views from student-athletes

The group that is gathering information about a possible Division I-A football championship will hear from an especially important constituency when it meets in mid-March.

The research group will discuss the prospect of a playoff with Division I-A football student-athletes, possibly including players representing most of the teams that appeared in the most recent New Year's Day bowls.

Questions have been raised about the effect a playoff would have on players, especially the effect a championship would have on their physical and academic welfare.

Learning student-athletes' attitudes toward a playoff will complement a large amount of information that already has been collected by the research group.

At its February 21-22 meeting, the group met with several interested parties and heard a constant desire for a thorough examination of the matter and also for an organized release of data once the special playoff committee is in place. That committee will be announced in about a month.

The research group met with coaches who were attending the annual College Football Forum, representatives of the top tier of the bowl coalition plus the Rose Bowl, the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, the Division I-A Athletic Directors Association, the Collegiate Commissioners Association, the Football Writers Association of America and The Associated Press Sports Editors.

All of the football coaches seemed receptive to seriously considering a playoff. American Football Coaches Association Executive Director Grant G. Teaff also met with the research group. He was told that if the NCAA should decide to move forward, the AFCA will be involved in developing the format.

Representatives of the bowls also expressed a desire to participate if the recommendation is for a playoff. Concern was raised over attendance at neutral-site quarterfinal games, and bowl representatives said that their ability to sell tickets locally would be aided if semifinal and championship games were rotated so that they periodically had a chance to host them.

Big Eight growth brings a new look to Division I-A

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

In what may be the most significant temblor yet to shape the changing landscape of intercollegiate athletics, four members of the nearly 80-year-old Southwest Conference accepted invitations to join the Big Eight Conference.

The departing Southwest Conference members — Baylor University; Texas A&M University, College Station; Texas Tech University, and the University of Texas at Austin — bolster an already rich football tradition in the Big Eight and instantly make the expanded league one of the most powerful forces in Division I-A. Their membership in the Big Eight, formally announced February 18, is effective in 1996.

The expansion also makes the conference more attractive to television networks, which are continuing to seek rights to games involving College Football Association members as that organization's television pact moves toward its 1996 expiration.

Already, the Southeastern Conference has agreed to a broadcast contract with CBS Sports for a reported $95 million. CBS Sports announced a similar football package with the Big East Conference February 15. That deal is reported to be worth $65

Academic committee seeks special meeting

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, meeting February 23-24 in Kansas City, Missouri, reviewed its charge as a result of the adoption of Proposal No. 174 at the 1994 NCAA Convention.

Proposal 174 directs appropriate NCAA committees, including the Academic Requirements Committee, to review 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16 (now Bylaw 14.3) regarding initial-eligibility standards to determine its impact on minority student-athletes. Those committees will report to the NCAA Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission in June with recommendations to maintain or to amend, delay or otherwise change the 1992 proposal, which is scheduled to go into effect August 1, 1995.

Toward that end, the committee will request permission from the NCAA Administrative Committee to conduct a special meeting April 13-14 in Kansas City to review additional information that will be available regarding the Academic Performance Study.

The committee heard a presentation from the NCAA national office research staff regarding the basic structure and research created by the Academic Performance Study and in particular focused on research that formed the basis of the committee's recommendation to the Council and the Presidents Commission in 1991 regarding the strengthening of the

BCA concerns

NCAA, BCA officials meet in mediation session

After a pair of false starts, the NCAA and Black Coaches Association conducted their first mediation session March 1.

Scheduling difficulties prevented the groups from getting together in person, so the meeting was conducted instead via a telephone conference. Representatives of the Community Relations Service of the U.S. Justice Department also participated in the call in the CRS's role as mediator.

Earlier, February 20-21 and February 6 meetings had been postponed because of scheduling conflicts involving both the BCA and the NCAA.

Among the issues on the March 1 agenda were academic standards for eligibility, gender equity, limited access to student-athletes and minority opportunities in athletics.

The mediation is in response to the controversy resulting from the defeat of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 42. That proposal would have increased the number of permissible scholarships for Division I men's basketball programs from 13 to 14.

Details on the March 1 session will appear in the March 9 issue of The NCAA News.

For more detail, see the January 19 and January 26 issues of The NCAA News.

Academic committee discusses Proposal No. 174

The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee has reviewed its charge as a result of the adoption of Proposal No. 174 at the 1994 NCAA Convention.

The committee met February 23-24 in Kansas City, Missouri. A complete report on the meeting appears on page 1 of this issue.

Proposal 174 directs appropriate NCAA committees — including Academic Requirements, Minority Opportunities and Interests, and Research — to review 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16 (now Bylaw 14.3) regarding initial-eligibility standards to determine its impact on minority student-athletes.

Those committees will report to the NCAA Council and the NCAA Presidents Commission in June with recommendations to maintain or to amend, delay or otherwise change the 1992 proposal, which is scheduled to go into effect August 1, 1995. Among other things, the committees studying the legislation are to examine the quality of the research that preceded its adoption and how well the new standards were communicated to high-school prospects, counselors and

Certification

Committee discusses training of peer reviewers

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification has approved five sites at which to train those who will be serving as the first peer reviewers for the program.

Three sessions will be conducted in conjunction with NCAA regional seminars in May and June in San Francisco; Washington, D.C., and New Orleans, while the other two will be at the summer meetings of the Big Ten and Southwest/Southland Conferences.

Training for peer-review team chairs likely will be done by teleconference. Most peer-review team chairs will be chief executive officers, and the peer-development subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification believed a teleconference would be the best way to deal with their demanding schedules.

The committee also has approved about 80 additional names for the pool of potential peer reviewers. Progress was made in getting more representatives from Division I-AAA institutions and from female and ethnic minority chief executive officers, but the potential peer-reviewer list still has few Division I-A athletics directors.

The peer-selection subcommittee will meet March 8-9 to assign teams to the 24 schools scheduled for fall 1994 visits.

For more detail, see page 18.

Staff contact: John H. Leavens.

Next meeting: May 11 in San Francisco.

Regional seminars

Dates and sites set for regional seminars

The NCAA membership services group will conduct three regional seminars in late May and early June in an effort to provide a continuing-education forum for Divisions I and II institutional and athletics administrators.

The seminars will provide information about NCAA legislation and interpretations and will address the roles of various campus constituents in establishing and maintaining institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs.

The 1994 seminars will be conducted May 11-13 in San Francisco; May 25-27 in Arlington, Virginia, and June 1-3 in New Orleans.

Information will be furnished to participants about the most common eligibility problems and rules violations that occur in athletics programs (and the procedures for resolving those problems).

The opening session for all of the seminars will be at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday and adjournment will be at 12:30 p.m. Friday. Also, a hands-on training session for the NCAA Compliance Assistant software will be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to noon Wednesday.

There is no registration fee.

Division I-A football

Playoff group plans to hear from student-athletes

The research group that is collecting information about a Division I-A football playoff plans to meet with selected student-athletes at its next meeting later this month.

The academic and physical welfare of student-athletes has been cited as a concern by those who have reservations about developing a I-A football championship. The research group concluded that the best approach would be to discuss the matter directly with football players, perhaps a group representing teams that appeared in the most recent New Year's Day bowls.

The research group last met February 21-22 in Kansas City, Missouri, in conjunction with the annual College Football Forum.

In a presentation to media attending that event, University of California, Los Angeles, Chancellor Charles E. Young said that revenue potential for the event appears to be on the high end of what had been estimated at the beginning of the process. The research group also met February 3-4 with representatives from the major television networks, plus Fox, Turner Broadcasting and ESPN.

Those in the group are Young; University

Her loyalty to University of South Dakota men's basketball and football is crystal clear. Ninety-two years have not dampened Nellie Bergman's spirit for her favorite teams. Although her hearing and eyesight are not what they used to be, Bergman maintains her routine of tuning the radio to KVHT and catching South Dakota basketball and football games.

Recently, South Dakota men's basketball coach Dave Boots and seniors Randy Rosenquist and Shane Murphy paid their greatest fan a visit.

"When I'm listening to the games, I often wonder what you (players) look like," Bergman said to the 6-foot-4 and 6-8 players as they towered above her. "And I bet that sometimes you wonder what your fans look like, too."

Bergman is such a dedicated fan that she keeps statistics during games on an outdated telephone directory. She spent 17 years serving pregame meals to Coyote players many years ago. Bergman asked if the pregame fare still consisted of toast, tea, honey and steak.

"We can't afford the steaks anymore," Boots told her. "We go with spaghetti."

Boots asked Bergman if she recalled a thrilling overtime victory last year over the University of North Dakota that earned South Dakota a berth in the Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

"It was terrible," Bergman said, shaking her head. "I don't like overtime games."

Bergman shares her devotion for South Dakota athletics with her friend Mae Hubert, who is also 92.

"Nellie and I like all the Coyote teams," Hubert said.

"I went because it was a chance of a lifetime, and I didn't know if the chance ever would come up again," Buckner said. "It was difficult for me to make the decision. I know that after I graduate, basketball won't be there. I'll have the memories, but there is no memory like Costa Rica."

Added Roarke: "It was definitely an experience that changed my life forever. It's something I can teach now that I have my own experiences. Basketball is really important, but those five games that I missed won't add up to what I got when I was down there (in Costa Rica)."

Buckner and Roarke's 20-day visit to Central America was part of a study tour led by a Keuka professor.

Giving in return

Drew Bledsoe, former quarterback at Washington State University and now a starter with the New England Patriots, recently announced his establishment of an endowed athletics scholarship at his alma mater. The Albert S. "Stu" Bledsoe football scholarship, established with a $150,000 endowment, is named in honor of Bledsoe's late grandfather.

"I have been put in a unique situation, especially for a person my age," Bledsoe said. "There aren't many 21-year-olds in a position to give something concrete back to the people who helped them. Washington State is one of the primary groups of people that got me where I am right now, and I feel very fortunate that I am able to give something back to them."

"My grandfather was one of the few great people I got to know in my life. He was a very influential man throughout the Northwest, and he also was a graduate of WSU. It seemed logical to put this endowment in his name. I think he deserves that legacy."

Blazejowski one of 16 named Sports Ethics Fellows

A newly elected member of the Basketball Hall of Fame is among 16 people who have been named Sports Ethics Fellows for 1994 by the Institute for International Sport.

The fellows, who also include a former NCAA Presidents Commission member and administrators and coaches at Association institutions and conferences, were announced in conjunction with the March 1 observance of National Sportsmanship Day.

Carol Blazejowski, a three-time basketball all-American at Montclair State College who will be inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame this year, leads a list of fellows who will be called on to write essays relating to sportsmanship and to assist the institute in formulating programs for National Sportsmanship Day.

Other fellows include Wake

Forest University President Thomas K. Hearn Jr., a recent member of the Presidents Commission and chair of a Commission-sponsored study on integrity, ethics and sportsmanship.

Coaches and administrators selected as fellows include George Blaney, men's basketball coach at College of the Holy Cross and president of the National Association of Basketball Coaches; John Gerdy, associate commissioner of the Southeastern Conference; Linda C. Hackett, athletics director at Bryant College; Jeffrey H. Orleans, executive director of the Council of Ivy Group Presidents, and Wendy Smith, women's soccer coach and facilities manager at Haverford College.

Approximately 4,000 schools in the United States were expected to participate in this year's National Sportsmanship Day activities, along with international schools and agencies in 35 countries as the event was celebrated globally for the first time.

The goal of the event is to stress the importance of ethics and fair play, both on the playing fields and in the classroom.

"Our Sports Ethics Fellows have been an important resource, providing us with many outstanding concepts relating to sportsmanship," said Daniel E. Doyle Jr., founder and executive director of the Institute for International Sport, which is based at the University of Rhode Island.

"They have helped make National Sportsmanship Day an important educational program in more than 7,000 schools during the event's first three years."

Other fellows for 1994 are Mary Chrobocinski, an alternative secondary school teacher in Corpus Christi, Texas; Russell Gough, a member of the humanities faculty at Pepperdine University; Barbara Johnson, vice-president of Armand Hammer United World College in Montezuma, New Mexico; Richard Lapchick, executive director of the Center for the Study of Sport in Society at Northeastern University; Dr. Douglas McKeag, professor of family medicine at Michigan State University; Susan Summons, head women's basketball coach at Miami-Dade Community College in Florida; Doug Warshaw, an Emmy-winning television writer, producer and director; Robert Weygand, lieutenant governor of Rhode Island, and Patrick Wolff, chair of the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports in Guam.

BCA in right church but the wrong pew

By Daniel T. Regan
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

In January, the NCAA voted not to reinstate one of the two scholarships it previously had removed from the allowable total for Division I men's basketball.

The Black Coaches Association interpreted this decision as one that denies opportunities to the socially disadvantaged youth of the inner cities and rural communities. To some, it is another in a series of NCAA legislative errors that, consciously or not, deprives many students of one of their few available means to higher education.

The BCA also believes that Proposition 48 should be reexamined. The BCA feels that this NCAA legislation is clearly prejudicial and is ill-conceived, yet the NCAA not only persists in this legislation, it seems intent on making it more and more difficult for the culturally deprived.

The present legislation that has evolved from Proposition 48 is prejudicial. Well-meaning members of the academic community in the NCAA spend far too many hours making more rigorous adjustments to these rules. They do so, I feel, with the idea that they will force our high schools to do a better job in the economically and socially deprived areas of our country. This effort, unfortunately, is as misguided as Proposition 48 is unfair.

However, the BCA, in regard to the reduction of men's basketball scholarships, is equally wrong-headed. On this issue, its vision is myopic.

There is another injustice at work in intercollegiate athletics. It is the historical injustice done to women.

Recent court decisions following Federal legislation under Title IX have compelled all NCAA member institutions to evaluate and, for many, to restructure the allocation of funds in their athletics department budgets. These issues impact on one another. The reduction of men's basketball scholarships must be viewed in this larger context.

For instance, at a private institution such as Villanova University, this scholarship reduction in a men's sport will allow an increase in women's scholarships at no additional cost to the university. Moreover, it in no way reduces the opportunity of economically or socially deprived students from our inner cities or rural areas to earn a college degree. It simply

To distrust is to be distrusted

For the NCAA to succeed, suspicion must be set aside

By Russell Gough
PEPPERDINE UNIVERSITY

Gender equity, racial equity, budgets, rules, ethics, character and, consummately, student-athlete welfare: These are, of course, the watershed issues that confront us.

During a recent class discussion on Machiavelli, my mind drifted aimfully to these urgent issues as two students volleyed back and forth about the relative merits and demerits of human relations as envisioned in Machiavelli's political and moral theory.

In his penetrating treatise on political power, "The Prince," Machiavelli noted that humans act most harmfully out of fear and distrust, as well as hatred. He therefore admonished his ideal Prince never to show, among other things, distrust toward one's subjects. To do so would only guarantee a reciprocal distrust, with the menacing possibility of political chaos.

Machiavelli's insight underscores a vital concern on which satisfactory resolutions to the NCAA's imminent issues depend: Trust. A spirit of trust must prevail if effective and meaningful reform is to ensue. At this critical juncture in the life of college athletics, we have neither the time nor the resources to distrust.

To ask whether intercollegiate athletics, as well as higher education generally, suffers from an abiding public distrust is unrevealing. We are all too well aware of the degree to which college athletics is being scrutinized from the outside. What would be very revealing, however, is to inquire concerning the degree to which the NCAA community itself engenders a basic spirit of trust or distrust.

Do we trust each other? Do administrators, academic or athletics, trust the motives and words of coaches? Do coaches trust the motives and words of administrators? To what extent do coaches trust coaches? Are we fostering a spirit of trust in our student-athletes? Are we taking the necessity of trust seriously enough in our efforts to reform?

Ultimately, of course, these questions will be determined collectively according to our own individual heartfelt actions. Moreover, responses to these urgent questions will need to take account of the fact that in human relations trust is often, if not always, in conflict with distrust. The point, then, is neither to trust always nor to trust blindly.

A degree of distrust in human relations is often realistic and advisable. But if we as an Association — a community of people — reach the point at which distrust dominates our collective ethos, then we run the serious risk of stillborn reform, if not institutional collapse.

Successful reform depends on trust precisely because trust is one of the most important aspects of membership in any institution or society. It is trust that in large measure sustains institutions or societies. In the words of Sissela Bok, "Trust in some degree of veracity functions as a foundation of relations among human beings; when this trust shatters or wears away, institutions collapse" (emphasis added).

Part of the problem with invoking Machiavelli's words at the beginning of a discussion on trust is that his vision of the political process is couched in an ideology that often offends our own democratic, even ethical, sensibilities. His Prince's modus operandi, for example, is straightforwardly deceitful: What is important for the Prince is not to trust — he is, in fact, supposed to distrust — but not to show distrust. Hence, the term "Machiavellian" is now used to connote duplicitous, forked-tongue strategy.

Though very few of us in contemporary higher education would desire to defend Machiavelli's call for duplicitous leadership, it still would be instructive for the NCAA community to reflect on the kind of trust that typifies our rhetoric, processes and interrelations.

Is it an open and honest trust, a Machiavellian "trust," or an overt distrust? At least this much is clear: A preponderance of either of the latter two will not sustain us.

With respect to Machiavellian "trust," it is difficult to deny that there is the perception (perhaps artificially exacerbated by the media or general gossip) that university presidents and coaches — both of which frequently are the most salient ambassadors of a given university — often give the appearance of trusting each other in public but actually harbor feelings of distrust in private.

Whatever the case may be, it is at least relatively easy to see how and why suspicions of duplicity might abound, given the enormous pressures on both groups from inside and outside the university milieu. Let us hope that this perception is largely baseless, especially regarding those presidents and coaches who wield the most influence on the national scene.

With respect to overt distrust, the NCAA Manual itself gives disturbingly powerful, albeit prima facie, testimony. This observation is not comforting, but it is crucial. It is often maintained that the rule book has evolved into its present extensive and complex form primarily because of an overarching need to ensure a level playing field.

While true, this claim does not capture the following deeper insight: Rules governing behavior flourish in a seedbed of distrust. We cannot fail to recognize the extent to which the number of NCAA rules has grown over the years in proportion to an increasing and abiding competitive distrust. More than

"Maybe it is coincidence that the four collegiate survivors (from the Southwest Conference) are anchored in locales without professional teams. This wouldn't be the first time that pro operations have soured the well for collegiate enterprise. Think about Chicago and New York. New Orleans. San Francisco. Washington. Philadelphia.

"For that reason, we may find it ironic that colleges continue to serve as conduits for the pros. Unpaid gardeners, furnishing free rent and food and grooming for many lads who couldn't find the campus library with a road map and are interested only in the quickest, easiest route to a lucrative pro contract.

"There is naught wrong with that ambition, mind you. There are ways that could be handled. We find it shameful that colleges often subordinate their real purpose — to educate — to serve as lackeys for the pros.

"Perhaps you anticipated the subject would eventually get around to our subversive Single Platoon Party. Oh, I'm not saying that our revolutionist cell has the complete answer. Single Platooners wouldn't solve all campus problems.

"But then again, forcing players to serve both offensively and defensively could reduce college football to a manageable monster.

"Certainly Single Platoon rules would greatly reduce costs and would eliminate many of those using the college game for a handy stepladder, to be discarded at first opportunity. And as a byproduct, it would divorce the college game from the pros, eliminating comparisons, presenting a different concept of football, yes, maybe even marketable to boob toobers. As for youths whose only interest in college is preparation for the pros, heck, let the NFLs row that boat. Let them form and finance minor leagues, house their own minions, pay their own coaches. Harumph."

"Television, right or wrong, has become a driving force in intercollegiate athletics in the past 10 years. Not that it wasn't before. But increasingly since the 1980s, television has been a predominant force in determining the fate of intercollegiate athletics."

Tournament selection process

"Our responsibility is to select the 34 best at-large teams, and that is my concern and my argument to those that say those that have a losing conference record should be excluded. A case in point: There's a fine ballclub that has a key injury at midseason and that team's troubles pick up, and it doesn't win as consistently, but then they come back to win at the end of the season. Should they, if we are going to select the best 34 teams, be precluded? My answer is they should not."

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending before state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes of NCAA member institutions. Set forth below is a list of 27 bills from 17 states. The report includes 16 bills that have been introduced, and 11 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (February 16 issue of The NCAA News). Newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills identified by previous reports on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

The State Legislation Report is based largely on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of February 24, 1994. The bills selected for inclusion in this report were drawn from a larger pool of measures that concern sports and therefore do not necessarily represent all of the bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending before the governing bodies of the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on an on-line basis and are not included in this report.

The NCAA has not independently verified the accuracy or completeness of the information provided by Information for Public Affairs and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

The bills set forth below address the following subjects:

BCA

Editorial: Coaches chose the wrong ground upon which to make a stand about opportunity

changes the sex of the recipient of that scholarship.

That is why the BCA chose the wrong ground on which to make a stand. Unless the BCA is an organization of sexist coaches who are masquerading as social advocates for the underprivileged in order to stockpile talent to overcome their poor selection of recruits, they should avoid this fight.

Something should be done to get out from under the nonsense of foolish and prejudiced NCAA legislation. The improper use of SAT/ACT scores, which is the real mistake in initial-eligibility rules, must be addressed. Initial eligibility ought to be the province of the institution itself. There is no finer criterion than one year of academic record at that institution. In short, the NCAA made a grievous error when, in the name of cost control, it allowed freshmen to be eligible for varsity competition.

College presidents and coaches do not see the wisdom in this. In testifying before the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, this writer suggested that the straight highway to the pros from grade school through high school and college ought to be broken. If it is not, the student-athlete becomes too conditioned toward professionalism. Let the college athlete spend a year being a college student with no practice and no games.

Those athletes who are not interested in anything but a career in the pros should play in the minor leagues of the National Football League and the National Basketball Association. Of course, there are none. The fact that our professional teams do not have to finance minor leagues in football and basketball is one of the major contributing factors in the present intercollegiate mess.

Rest easy, presidents. It is not the talent of the players that brings people to the game. It is the affiliation with the school. Any Continental Basketball Association team with the worst coach available would beat Bobby Knight's or Dean Smith's best-ever teams four out of five games. There is a great deal of talent in the CBA and relatively fewer fans and less television interest than in the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, or Indiana University, Bloomington. When Dean and Bobby are long gone, that income will still be there.

Coaches, this year you tried to get five years of eligibility for your athletes. Physically, socially and psychologically, your athletes would be better off with only three years of play and with your institution's eligibility rules the only ones of concern.

The logic of academic success in the high-school core curriculum and the validity of the press toward the degree rules make eminent sense. There is no justification for the application of the SAT/ACT scores in the NCAA mix.

Hopefully, the BCA will continue to focus on the true source of injustice and not risk the chance of siding with the coaches whose only concern is covering their fannies.

Distrust

For rules reform to take place, effort must be made to trust each other's motives and words ever before, we need to see that trust, not rules, is the mulch of level playing fields.

If the present rules structure is to be reformed effectively, we must, among other things, make a concerted effort to trust each other's motives and words. Whatever our respective roles — NCAA administrator, university president, academic dean, head coach, assistant coach, athletics support staff or faculty member — we cannot afford to wait for "the other side" to trust us. At our own peril do we distrust; to distrust is to be distrusted.

Thus, for example, when large numbers of coaches request greater flexibility in the rules in the name of student-athletes' best interests, we must trust them. When NCAA administrators and university presidents ask for our trust in their managerial efforts to reform, we must grant it to them. When student-athletes voice their own concerns about "student-athlete welfare," God help us, their hearts and minds should be trusted.

None of these suggestions is meant to preclude open and honest debate; on the contrary, trust is the best facilitator of candid deliberation.

With the specter of distrust threatening our institutional effectiveness and vitality, we would do well to remember this Emersonian dictum:

"Trust men and they will be true to you; treat them greatly, and they will show themselves great."

■ Championships previews

Erick Walder of Arkansas is a two-time defending champion in the long jump and triple jump. The Razorbacks are favored heavily to win their 11th straight team title.

Division I Men's Indoor Track

Latest Arkansas team lays claim to title of 'best ever'

Event: 1994 Division I Men's Indoor Track Championships.

Overview: Championships are always up for grabs, right? Wrong. These championships have been dominated by one team—Arkansas, which has won the last 10 team titles. And the 1994 Razorbacks may be coach John McDonnell's best team ever. Led by two-time long-jump and triple-jump champion Erick Walder, 400-meter-dash champion Calvin Davis, and a gang of all-America distance runners in Niall Bruton, Frank Hanley, Michael Morin, David Welsh and Brian Baker, the Razorbacks are far and away the class of the field. No other teams have comparable depth. Tennessee, with standouts Jose Parrilla (800-meter run), Lawrence Johnson (pole vault) and Randy Jenkins (high jump), is loaded with talent, but even the Vols fall short of seriously challenging the Razorbacks. The Volunteers, however, have more than enough talent to give the Southeastern Conference a 1-2 finish. UTEP, Providence and Ohio State, among others, also will be near the top of the standings. UTEP, with the senior duo of Andrew Tynes (200-meter dash) and Mika Laaksonen (35-pound weight throw), appears to be Tennessee's primary competition in a battle for second.

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum field of 270 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis. Butler and USA Track and Field are cohosts.

Television coverage: The championships will be broadcast tape-delayed by CBS at 3 p.m. (Eastern time) April 16.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Arkansas' 66-30 margin of victory last year over Clemson was the first time since 1986 that the Razorbacks outdistanced the field by more than 10 points....Clemson has finished second at the last two championships....Iowa State has claimed the last four 5,000-meter-run titles....Arkansas' 66 points in 1993 was the championships' highest point total since 1985, when the Razorbacks scored 70.

What they are saying

Doug Brown, head coach Tennessee

"We're not in the same area code with Arkansas. This is the best team I've seen (John McDonnell) have. We'll be very happy with a solid second-place showing. I have no aspirations of catching Arkansas. I think you could add the points of the next five teams and they wouldn't beat Arkansas. This is the best team I've had since we won the '91 (outdoor) championship, and we're not even sniffing Arkansas."

Division II Men's Indoor Track

Abilene Christian's edge is slight

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Indoor Track Championships.

Overview: A year ago, Abilene Christian edged St. Augustine's by eight points for the closest team-title finish in championships history. This year, the teams once again should battle for the title. The Wildcats return what coach Wes Kittley says is "a better team than last year." Defending champions Brian Amos (55-meter hurdles), Robert Guy (400-meter dash), Mike Edwards (pole vault) and Joseph Tengelei (800-meter run) are among a group of returnees that make Abilene Christian the favorite—but not by much. St. Augustine's coach George Williams counters Abilene Christian's depth with some of his own. The Falcons will rely on Michael Francis (long jump), Marco Morgan (55-meter hurdles), Joseph King (800-meter run) and Rodney Thomas (shot put) in seeking their seventh championship. New York Tech, with 400-meter-dash standouts Lenvail Laird, Evan Clarke and Donovan Rowe and 800-meter-run specialists Troy Elvie and Glenroy Soltau, also could enter the fray.

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum field of 126 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at North Dakota State.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: St. Augustine's (six titles) and Abilene Christian (two) have combined to win all but one of the eight team championships (the teams shared the 1988 title)....Abilene Christian's 69 points last year was the lowest total by a champion since 1988, when the Wildcats and St. Augustine's tied with 62 points....North Dakota State is hosting its third championships. North Dakota State also hosted the 1985 and 1987 championships.

What they are saying

Wes Kittley, head coach
Abilene Christian

"I feel good about our chances, but I'm a little more cautious. St. Augustine's has a very good team, and it seems like New York Tech has brought a lot of people in. They're going to bust some people up. We're pretty much the same team that we were last year, although we're stronger in the middle-distance and distance events. That's where we hope to score a lot of our points."

Division III Men's Indoor Track

Low-scoring winner is expected

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Indoor Track Championships.

Overview: Wisconsin-La Crosse, Lincoln (Pennsylvania) and St. Thomas (Minnesota) finished Nos. 1, 2 and 3, respectively, a year ago. Graduation inflicted heavy losses on all three teams, but they should once again battle for position at the top. Three-time defending champion Wisconsin-La Crosse is primed to win once again, but if the Eagles are to repeat, they'll need strong performances from David Coates (400-meter dash) and Doug Clary (pole vault). Coates was third in the 400 a year ago, while Clary tied for third in the pole vault. Lincoln (Pennsylvania)—runner-up at four of the last five championships and team champion in 1990—boasts a squad led by defending 400-meter-dash champion Jeff Taylor and standouts Willard Fairweather (400-meter dash) and Don Waldron (55-meter dash).

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum field of 158 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Lincoln (Pennsylvania) has been team runner-up at five of the nine championships.

What they are saying

Mark Guthrie, head coach
Wisconsin-La Crosse

"Right now, I'm picking St. Thomas....I don't think there's a clear winner. If we win, I'll be ecstatic and very surprised."

Joe Thompson, head coach
St. Thomas (Minnesota)

"There's no doubt this year is an off year, at least in my opinion. This year there were tons of seniors graduated, and they hit all teams. I still say (Wisconsin-La Crosse), given how the honor roll is floating, will be the favorite. I don't care what Mark (Guthrie) says. They may not be as heavy a favorite as a year ago when they won by nearly 25 points, they may only be a 10-point favorite, but they will be the favorite."

Leonard Jones of St. Thomas (Minnesota) is the defending champion in the triple jump and also is an all-American in the high jump and long jump.

Division I Women's Indoor Track

Louisiana State hopes to maintain hold on team title

Event: 1994 Division I Women's Indoor Track Championships.

Overview: Louisiana State has won four of the last seven titles, but the Tigers have yet to win back-to-back crowns. All indications are that they will make it two titles in a row this year. Returning four senior all-Americans (including defending shot-put champion Danyel Mitchell and long-jump titlist Daphnie Saunders), coach Pat Henry's Tigers are, barring injury, the class of the division. But even though the Tigers are favored to win, teams such as Texas, Villanova, Arizona State and 1993 runner-up Wisconsin also have title aspirations. Texas, which has won three titles, looks to end a three-year championship drought. Coach Beverly Kearney's squad is led by defending triple-jump champion Telisa Young, Eileen Vanisi (shot put) and Marlene Frazier (55- and 200-meter dashes). Villanova, with distance standout Carole Zajac, and Wisconsin, with defending 800-meter-run champion Amy Wickus, also are potential victors.

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum of 240 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis. Butler and USA Track and Field are cohosts.

Television coverage: The championships will be broadcast tape-delayed by CBS at 3 p.m. (Eastern time) April 16.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Louisiana State has won four titles, all in odd-numbered years, while Texas' three titles have come in even-numbered years....Two of the last three titles have been decided by fewer than 10 points....Tennessee has won a championships-record 13 individual titles....Indiana State's Holli Hyche is vying to become only the second athlete to win both the 55- and 200-meter dashes back to back. Carlette Guidry of Texas (1990 and 1991) is the only athlete to complete the feat....Wisconsin has won two consecutive 3,200-meter relays. Villanova is the only team to win more than two consecutive titles in that event; the Wildcats won four in a row (1987 through 1990).

What they are saying

Beverly Kearney, head coach
Texas

"We're in a situation where if everything falls right for us and the points are spread out, we have a chance (to win). LSU definitely has more proven points returning. The points we have are not proven, but are very competitive. For the first time, I think this is a meet where no one team is coming in totally dominant. There are a number of teams with unproven and untested athletes that will factor in at nationals. I think LSU is the only team that, if they do what they're capable of, should win. Everyone else needs a little help. I definitely think the top four spots will be a battle."

Louisiana State's Daphnie Saunders is the defending champion in the long jump and also is one of four senior all-Americans on the Tigers' team.

Division II Women's Indoor Track

Path clears for Abilene Christian

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Indoor Track Championships.

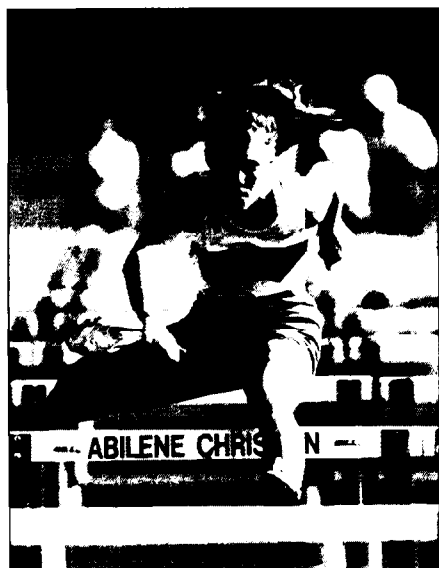

Overview: Abilene Christian is the defending champion. Alabama A&M won the 1992 title. Those teams appeared to be on a collision course for this year's championships, but the battle will not happen. Alabama A&M will not make the trip to North Dakota State, having opted for reimbursement and per diem for the outdoor championships. That leaves the Wildcats as the clear favorite for the team title. That is not to say Abilene Christian would not repeat as champion even if Alabama A&M were present. On the contrary, the Wildcats again have a strong team. With standouts such as Hermin Joseph and Bigna Samuel, defending champions in the 55-meter dash and 1,500-meter run, respectively, and Revoli Campbell (400-meter dash) and Chelsea Istra (55-meter hurdles), coach Wes Kittley's squad has few weaknesses. Among contenders vying for a top-five finish are Norfolk State, Adams State, South Dakota and host North Dakota State. Norfolk State is led by Chandra Sturup, defending long-jump champion and 55-meter dash standout, and senior Robin Turner (55-meter hurdles), while North Dakota State showcases defending high-jump champion Penny Ensrud and shot putters Julie Beck (a transfer from Oregon) and Rebecca Pettit.

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum field of 114 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at North Dakota State.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Abilene Christian has won team titles at five of the eight championships....St. Augustine's won team titles at both of the previous championships hosted by North Dakota State (1985 and 1987)....Abilene Christian's

Abilene Christian University

Chelsea Istra and Abilene Christian are looking for another team title.

24 1/2 point margin of victory last year marked the third consecutive year the team champion has won by more than 20 points....The Wildcats have dominated the 55-meter dash, winning five of the last six titles.

What they are saying

Jerry Gores, head coach
North Dakota State

"Without a doubt, Abilene (Christian) will walk away with (the team title). They'll double everyone's scores. Looking at them on paper and at the performance lists, there's no one in the same class. After that, I think Norfolk State and Adams State are very strong. I think we're one of the strongest total teams...we have kids who have qualified provisionally in almost every event, but we don't have the big-hitter...athletes. I think we're a top-10 team. We'd like to be in the top four, but we have to get a little lucky to do that. After Abilene (Christian) and Norfolk (State), anything could happen."

Division III Women's Indoor Track

Titans hoping for home-track victory

Event: 1994 Division III Women's Indoor Track Championships.

Overview: No school ever has hosted the championships and won the team title in the same year. Wisconsin-Oshkosh may end that streak. The Titans, runners-up at three of the last four championships, appear ready to claim the title after four consecutive top-four finishes. With Melissa Mueller (55-meter hurdles and long jump), Tara Harding (triple jump), Rhonda Legler (high jump) and Brenda Biskobing (800-meter run), the Titans have all the ingredients of a championship team. The Titans' only obstacle may be 1992 team titlist Christopher Newport, which has won a championships-record four titles and is back in contention after a rebuilding year. Leading the way for coach Vince Brown's experienced and talented squad are Vandisha Wilder and Vanessa Lindsay (55-meter dash), Antoinette Bass (55-meter hurdles), and Lai Madden (long jump and triple jump). Wisconsin-La Crosse, runner-up a year ago, also will be among the top finishers. The Eagles are led by Kim Dankemeyer (shot put) and Jennifer Kocent (1,500-meter run).

Field: The NCAA Executive Committee has approved a qualifying procedure that allows for a maximum field of 138 student-athletes.

Dates and site: March 11-12 at the Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Wisconsin-based teams have finished as runner-up at the last four championships. Wisconsin-Oshkosh placed second in 1990, 1991 and 1992 and Wisconsin-La Crosse finished second in 1993.

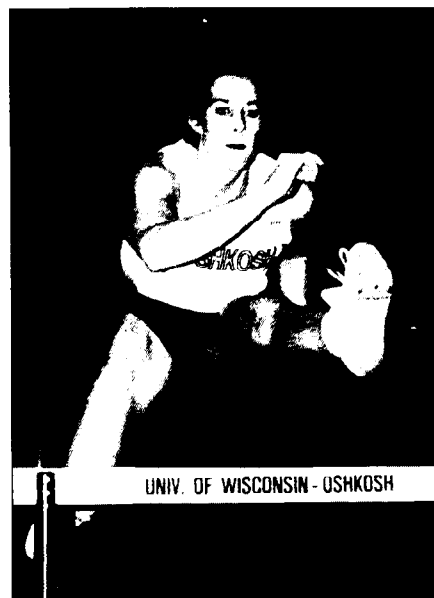

What they are saying

Pat Healy, head coach
Wisconsin-La Crosse

"I think (Wisconsin-Oshkosh) is the team to beat. They look really strong...they have some front-running-type people. I think Christopher Newport also looks very strong. Those two teams should battle it out. We're a very young team. Our team is almost all freshmen and sophomores. We're going to have some pretty good kids at the meet, but I don't think we'll have the really top scorers to push for the title."

Vince Brown, head coach
Christopher Newport

"We're not to the point that we want to be. We need to qualify some more athletes and if we can do that, I think we'll be OK. We have no idea what anyone else has been doing so I can't say who the top teams are. I'm certain that Pat (Healy) has a strong team. I know nothing about (Wisconsin-Oshkosh) but they're always strong. And you can't forget about Lincoln (Pennsylvania). I think we can be in the top five, but that's about all I can say at this time."

Division II Women's Basketball

Another Dakota squad steps forward

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Basketball Championship.

Overview: North Dakota State has been synonymous with Division II women's basketball, but this year, another team from the state has claimed the top ranking nationally. North Dakota is 22-1 and is undefeated through 14 conference games. Similar to rival North Dakota State, the Sioux have NCAA tournament experience, making seven appearances since 1984. Coach Gene Roebuck's team was eliminated from competition last year in the first round of the regional, but he returns a strong nucleus from that team. Sheri Kleinsasser is one of three Sioux who score in double figures. She leads the team in both scoring and rebounding with 19.4 points and 7.2 rebounds a game. Stonchill, another perennial tournament team, has put together a 21-3 record.

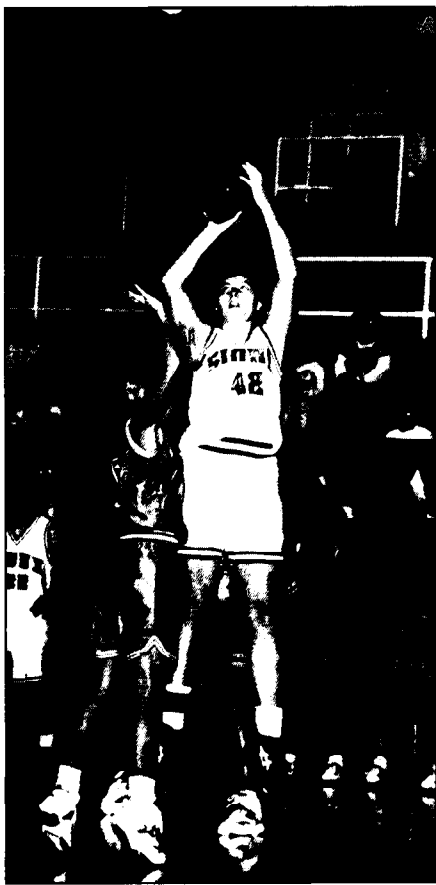

Field: The Division II Women's Basketball Championship provides for a maximum field of 32 teams. The top two seeded teams in each of the eight regions automatically advance to regional competition. Sixteen play-in games (two per region) will be conducted to determine the remaining half of each four-team regional tournament. Automatic qualification has been redefined to ensure that each conference is guaranteed a berth in play-in or regional competition, rather than an automatic bid into the 32-team field. Twenty conferences have been granted berths in the championship. Teams will be selected for the tournament by March 6.

Dates and sites: Play-in games will be conducted March 8 or 9. Regional tournaments will be March 11-12 or March 12-13. Eight regional winners will advance to the Women's Elite Eight March 23-24 and 26. All games, including the Women's Elite Eight, will be played on the campuses of competing schools.

Results: Scores from play-in and regional games will be published in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News. Results from the Women's Elite Eight will appear March 30.

Television coverage: The championship game will be telecast tape-delayed by ESPN, beginning at 1 p.m. (Eastern time) March 28.

the past five years coaching in the final game of the Division II Women's Basketball Championship. The past two years, their teams have gone head-to-head, with Delta State taking the title in 1992 and North Dakota State winning last year.

What they are saying

Gene Roebuck, head coach
North Dakota

"I think we have a mixture of the inside-outside game. (Sheri) Kleinsasser is a junior, but she's closing in on our career scoring record. She's pretty much been taking up the inside. Our outside game consists of a lot of players who shoot the three-point shot. We try to push the ball up the floor as much as we can, but we try to be patient once we get it down the floor."

Division II Men's Basketball

Three Pennsylvania teams rank high

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

Overview: Three teams from the traditionally strong Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference currently are ranked in the nation's top 20, including undefeated Indiana (Pennsylvania). The Indians' average margin of victory in 23 games is 16.6 points. Indiana (Pennsylvania), which did not qualify for the NCAA tournament field last year, features a team with depth and balanced scoring. Four Indians score in double figures, while nine players average double figures in minutes played. Forwards Yancey Taylor and Derrick Freeman lead the way with 16.1 points per game each. After going undefeated in 1992-93, defending champion Cal State Bakersfield is hanging around the top 10 with a 17-4 record through 21 contests. Southern Indiana, a relative newcomer to Division II's upper echelon, has put together a 20-3 record.

Field: The Division II Men's Basketball Championship provides for a maximum field of 32 teams. The top two seeded teams in each of the eight regions automatically advance to regional competition. Sixteen play-in games (two per region) will be conducted to determine the remaining half of each four-team regional tournament. Automatic qualification has been redefined to ensure that each conference is guaranteed a berth in play-in or regional competition, rather than an automatic bid into the 32-team field. Twenty conferences have been granted berths in the championship. Teams will be selected for the tournament by March 6.

Dates and sites: Play-in games will be conducted March 8 or 9. Regional tournaments will be March 11-12 or March 12-13. All play-in games and regionals will be played on the campuses of competing schools. Eight regional winners will advance to the Elite Eight March 23-24 and 26 at the Springfield Civic Center in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Results: Scores from play-in and regional games will be published in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News. Results from the Elite Eight will appear March 30.

Television coverage: The championship game will be telecast live by CBS Sports, beginning at 1 p.m. (Eastern time) March 26.

Championship notes: Several current or former Division I coaches have taken Division II teams to national titles. Ray Mears, a long-time coach at Tennessee, led Wittenberg to the Division II title in 1961. Temple's John Chaney coached Cheyney to a championship in 1978. In 1983, Ralph Underhill led Wright State to the Division II crown. The Raiders, still coached by Underhill, made their first appearance in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship last season.

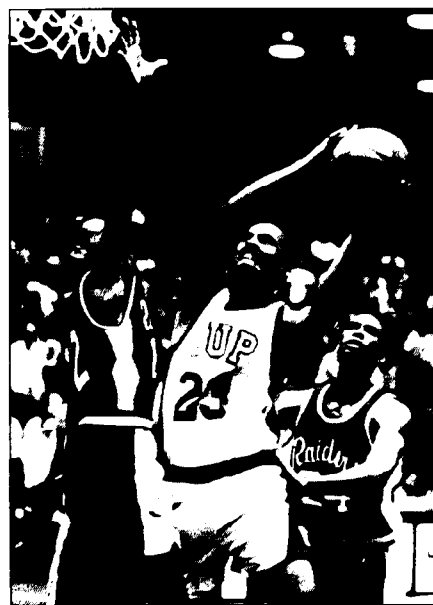

What they are saying

Kurt Kanaskie, head coach
Indiana (Pennsylvania)

"Our depth is really our strength. The other thing we do very well is pass the ball. (This is) a really unselfish team, and they enjoy getting each other the ball. It's created a lot of balance on our team. The best thing about our team is that we only have one senior on our roster, so we will have everybody back next year."

Bruce Pearl, head coach
Southern Indiana

"I think Chris (Bowles), if he gets a look at the basket, you can put it in the scorebook. He runs the floor like a forward, and he's got terrific hands. I think that's why a lot of NBA scouts are excited about him."

Men's and Women's Rifle

Alaska Fairbanks closing gap on long-time team champion West Virginia

Event: 1994 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Rifle Championships.

Overview: West Virginia is shooting for its seventh consecutive team title, but this is likely to be the closest competition in years. The Mountaineers lost a match for the first time since 1987 when they fell to 1993 runner-up Alaska Fairbanks, 6,133 to 6,146, January 14. Last year's championships hinted at a new trend, when the runner-up Nanooks came up just 10 points shy of West Virginia—the narrowest team-championship margin of victory since the Mountaineers' current string of titles began in 1988. The Nanooks are led by Jennifer O'Neal, who was fourth in individual air rifle last year, and Cory Brunetti, who was third in individual smallbore. West Virginia's Trevor Gathman, last year's individual air rifle champion, missed much of the season—including the Alaska Fairbanks match—with a broken collarbone but is back and recently shot a personal air rifle best of 395 (390 won the 1993 title).

Field: A maximum of 56 competitors will qualify. Within the guidelines of championships policy, the top eight or fewer teams in each team event and 40 or fewer individuals in each individual event (air rifle and smallbore) qualify. Teams may qualify for either air rifle or smallbore, or both. The overall team champion is determined by adding the air rifle and smallbore scores into an aggregate score.

Dates and site: The individual competition will be March 11; the team championship will be March 12. Both will be at Murray State.

Results: Championships results will be published in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: West Virginia has won nine of the last 11 championships....1993 runner-up Alaska Fairbanks outshot the Mountaineers in air rifle by seven points at last year's championships....West Virginia also has won the last four air rifle individual titles and the last two smallbore championships. Marsha Beasley, who is the only woman to have coached an NCAA championship rifle team, has piloted the Mountaineers to their last four team titles.

What they are saying

Randy Pimey, head coach
Alaska Fairbanks

"This year is the best chance we've had of winning. We feel pretty positive about the season we've had so far. If we don't win, it won't be for lack of preparation or intensity."

Men's and Women's Skiing

Utah leads field packed with individual standouts

Event: 1994 National Collegiate Men's and Women's Skiing Championships.

Overview: Utah is looking to become the first repeat team champion since Vermont (1989-90). The Utes, one of the West's top teams, are led by Louis Francois Gagnon, ranked first in men's Alpine as of February 22. Utah also has returning men's slalom champion Mark Bonnell, who is ranked 10th in Alpine. Marcus Nash, who competed at the 1994 Winter Olympics and will compete in the championships if healthy, leads the Utes' men's Nordic effort. New Mexico's Agneta Hjorth is the top-ranked women's Alpine skier. Colorado is strong in women's Alpine, with three of the top six ranked skiers. Vermont appears to be the class of the East, led by returning women's slalom champion Gibson LaFountaine, who is tied for the No. 1 ranking in Alpine with Middlebury's Kirsten Rogers. Vermont also has the top three ranked skiers in men's Nordic—Trond Nystad, Aki Partanen and Knut Nystad—and the top two in women's Nordic—Astri Syse and Nina Hamilton. Dartmouth's J. P. Daigneault is the top-ranked men's Alpine skier. Teams from the East and West do not meet during the regular season.

Field: 160 competitors (80 men and 80 women).

Dates and site: Colby will host the championships March 9-12 at Sugarloaf/USA in Carabassett Valley, Maine.

Results: Championships results will be published in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Since 1980, Vermont and Utah both have finished in the top two, with four exceptions—Colorado won in 1982 and 1991, Wyoming won in 1985 and New Mexico was runner-up in 1992....Denver leads in all-time team championships but hasn't won since 1971....Colorado leads in all-time individual championships with 58.

What they are saying

Chip LaCasse, head coach
Vermont

"You need to be consistent through all the events to win the NCAA championships. We've been very consistent in cross country, but we're not seeing that in Alpine."

Pat Miller, head coach
Utah

"It's hard to say if we can repeat. Last year's team wasn't the quality of this year's team, but we were very timely. We've done well in the West, but it's hard to say how we will do against teams from the East."

Division II Men's Ice Hockey

'Bama team contends for berth

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Overview: Alabama-Huntsville, Bemidji State and St. Anselm are among the contenders for berths for the two-team championship. The Chargers from Alabama-Huntsville are seeking their first invitation to the Division II tournament. After eight years in which no Division II championship was played, Bemidji State defeated Mercyhurst last year, 10-6 and 5-0, to win its second consecutive Division II crown (the Beavers defeated Merrimack, 6-3 and 8-1, to win a two-game, total-goals series in 1984, before the championship was discontinued).

Field: Two teams will be selected March 6.

Dates and site: The competition will be March 11-12 on the campus of one of the competing institutions. The format will be a two-game series with a "minigame" tie-breaker, if necessary.

Results: Championship results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Massachusetts-Lowell was a dominant Division II team during the first seven years of the tour-namment (1978 through 1984). The Chiefs won three national championships (1979, 1981 and 1982) in five years of competition....Bemidji State's Joel Otto holds the tournament record for most goals in a tournament; he scored seven in four games in 1984....Merrimack set the tournament record for most goals in a game in the first year for the championship, when it defeated Lake Forest, 12-2, in 1978.

What they are saying

Doug Ross, head coach
Alabama-Huntsville
Currently ranked No. 1

"We have been first in the poll since December, and we feel pretty good about where we are right now. We just finished our regular-season schedule with four straight wins, and we played very well the last half of the season (8-3 won-lost record). We have won some big games this year, including wins over Merrimack and Providence. When you look and see that Providence is in third place in (Division I) Hockey East, it makes us look a little stronger."

Division III Men's Ice Hockey

Pointers lead championship field

Event: 1994 Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship.

Overview: Among the top contenders in the West region are Wisconsin-Superior, Wisconsin-Stevens Point and Wisconsin-River Falls. In the East, Fredonia State, Elmira and Salem State are among the teams vying for top seeds. In last year's championship, Rich Teece scored the game-winning goal at 3:51 of Elmira collected a championship-record six points (two goals and four assists) in one game in a 10-4 first-round victory over Salem State last year. His assists tied a championship record for most assists in one game....In 1991, Wisconsin-Stevens Point became the first Division III team to claim three consecutive ice hockey championships....Wisconsin-Stevens Point and Salem State set championship records in 1992 when they combined for 46 points and 19 goals in a 12-7 victory by the Pointers....Wisconsin-Stevens Point is the all-time leader with 20 victories in six appearances at the Division III championship....Of the seven schools with 10 or more victories in the tournament, Rochester Institute of Technology (14-4-1) has the best winning percentage (.763)....A total of 24 schools have participated in the championship through the first 10 years....Babson is the only school that has participated in all of the championships.

What they are saying

Steve Nelson, head coach
Wisconsin-Superior
Currently ranked No. 1 in the West

"The NCAA championship is what all of us in our conference point toward. I think our chances are as good as any team in our conference. I'm sure the other teams in our league feel the same way.

"We have a young but solid team. We have played very strong defensively all year (58 goals allowed in 28 games); you have to play strong defense to win the NCAA championship.

"I would have to say that this has been one of my favorite teams to coach. They are so unselfish; no one cares who does what as long as we win. They have been a dream to coach.

"We've accomplished our season goal, but now everything else is up for grabs. The national championship is what everyone shoots for. You play all season to play in March—to play in the NCAA tournament."

overtime to give tilist Wisconsin-Stevens Point a 4-3 victory over Wisconsin-River Falls at Maplewood, Minnesota. It was the fourth Division III championship for the Pointers in the past five years.

Field: Eight teams will be selected March 6.

Dates and sites: All competition will be at on-campus sites. The four winners of first-round competition March 11-12 will advance to the campus of one of the competitors for the semifinal, third-place and championship games, which will be conducted March 19-20.

Results: Championship results will appear in the March 23 issue of The NCAA News.

Division II Men's Swimming and Diving

Champions follow new coach

Event: 1994 Division II Men's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: Coach Chuck Warner may be the new kid on the block at Cal State Bakersfield, but his Roadrunners are not, having won the last eight team titles. Warner succeeds Ernie Maglischo, who won eight team titles at Cal State Bakersfield in addition to three at Cal State Chico and one at Oakland. The new coach has a strong senior nucleus in David Huston, Rasmus Jensen, Marc Rinzier and Lee Hendrick. Oakland, runner-up in six of the last seven championships, and UC Davis, with last year's four-time individual champion John Keppeler, should make a three-team race.

Field: The meet is open to all qualifiers who have met the NCAA's established minimum standard in an event. Entries are unlimited in number; however, no team is allowed more than 18 competitors. An entrant who swims is counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives is counted as one competitor, and an entrant who dives only is counted as one-third of a competitor.

Dates and site: The championships will be March 9-12 at the C. T. Branin Natatorium in Canton, Ohio. Ashland will serve as the host institution.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Oakland's roster is loaded with international talent. Coach Pete Hovland has imported six swimmers from Brazil, England, Denmark, Canada and Venezuela. Hovland also went long-distance for his domestic stars, including defending 100-yard-butterfly champion Chris Zoliak from Oklahoma and 50-yard-freestyle runner-up Morgan Bailey from New Mexico....UC Davis coach Jerry Hinsdale will retire after this season, wrapping up a 31-year career at the Aggie helm. Hinsdale could go out a winner if seniors John Keppeler and Brad Winsor match their 1993 accomplishments. Keppeler won four events and Winsor finished second and third in the 500-yard and 1,650-yard freestyles, respectively.

What they are saying

Pete Hovland, head coach Oakland

"Last year, we finished second with 10 qualifiers; this year we've qualified 13 swimmers and two divers, so I'm pleased with the team we have. We're pretty strong in most all events, particularly in the relays and the short- and middle-distance freestyles. UC Davis has a lot of intangibles working for them. They return the most points from last year, they've got Keppeler, and this is Jerry's (UC Davis coach Jerry Hinsdale) last year, so they could be dangerous. And Bakersfield is Bakersfield, though there should be a race this year instead of Bakersfield winning it the first day."

Oakland's Morgan Bailey finished second in the 50-yard freestyle at last year's championships.

Division II Women's Swimming and Diving

Oakland seeks fifth straight title

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: Oakland looks to stretch its record string of championships to five behind defending individual titlists Amy Comerford, Ellen Lessig and Kristen Nagelkirk. Clarion, Air Force and Florida be March 9-12 at the C. T. Branin Natatorium in Canton, Ohio. Ashland will serve as the host institution.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: North Dakota returns two individual champions in Tisha Yantzer (200-yard breaststroke) and Shelly Ebbighausen (100-yard butterfly). Andrea Rudser, who finished second last year behind Ebbighausen and third in the 200-yard butterfly, also boosts Sioux hopes. North Dakota also has qualified five divers....Air Force freshman Claudine Tjho became the first Falcon to swim faster than 24 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle earlier this season. She'll team with individual medley specialist Erika Schenaver to pace the Falcons' national title hopes.

North Dakota's Tisha Yantzer is the defending champion in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Atlantic appear capable of a run at the title, and perennial challenger Northern Michigan also could push the Pioneers despite losing a trio of champions.

Field: The meet is open to all qualifiers who have met the NCAA's established minimum standard in an event. Entries are unlimited in number; however, no team is allowed more than 18 competitors. An entrant who swims is counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives is counted as one competitor, and an entrant who dives only is counted as one-third of a competitor.

Dates and site: The championships will

What they are saying

Tracy Huth, head coach Oakland

"We've qualified 10 swimmers and two divers, and of those 12, five are freshmen and four are sophomores. Last year, our freshman class was outstanding at the championships, and we'll need that kind of effort again this year. They can't be there strictly to gain experience—they need to contribute. If they do, we'll be looking fairly strong. We should also be good in the relays again. Air Force is a strong contender. Clarion's balance between swimming and diving makes it tough as well."

Casey Converse, head coach Air Force

"We've got strong senior leadership and a good freshman class. I think we'll be a top-three team, but it may take more depth than we have to beat Oakland."

Division III Women's Swimming and Diving

Ten-time consecutive champion Kenyon again holds edge over rest of field

Event: 1994 Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships.

Overview: Kenyon, in quest of its 11th consecutive team title, appears to be at least a full length ahead of the field. UC San Diego, however, has enough weapons to make it a race. Several quality teams will battle for third, including Hope, Denison, Johns Hopkins, Williams and Emory.

Field: The maximum number of participants allowed is 216. All qualifiers who have met the "A" time standard will be admitted in the meet; those who have met the "B" time standard will be considered for the field. No team is allowed more than 18 competitors. An entrant who swims is counted as one competitor, an entrant who swims and dives is counted as one competitor, and an entrant who dives only is counted as one-third of a competitor.

Dates and site: Williams will host the championships March 10-12.

Results: Championships results will appear in the March 16 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: The championships return to Williams, where they were last held in 1990. The host Ephs, team champions in 1982 and 1983, are the only team other than Kenyon to have won a crown. Williams, which competes in the New England Small College Athletic Conference, should be stronger in the relays this year because the conference has lifted its requirement that relay swimmers must qualify in an individual event before being part of a relay team....UC San Diego coach Doug Boyd is getting the most out of a small squad. Of the 12 swimmers and divers on his roster, 11 have qualified for the championships.

What they are saying

Jim Steen, head coach Kenyon

"We've got Carla Ainsworth and Jessica Berkowitz back as our top two swimmers, and we've got some experience on this team. Tasha Willis (1992 50-yard freestyle champion) also returns after a year abroad. This team is pretty alert. They're motivated by pride and desire—you know, those old coaching clichés that are grossly overused. There haven't been any surprises so far—we hope they will come at nationals, which is usually the case."

Doug Boyd, head coach UC San Diego

"Our strength will be in our divers. We had four of the top five last year and three of them return, and we've added a freshman who's qualified, so we look to score some major points there. We lost a lot of swimmers from last year, so at the beginning of the season I thought our women's team might be a little weak, but we're much better off than I thought we'd be."

Carla Ainsworth (right) of Kenyon has had plenty to celebrate the last few years. Not only has Kenyon won the last 10 team titles and is the favorite to win again, but Ainsworth is a five-time individual champion. At last year's championships, she won the 50-yard, 100-yard and 200-yard freestyles.

Safeguards committee addresses two welfare principles

The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, meeting February 14-16 in Kansas City, Missouri, responded to two of six general principles regarding student-athlete welfare that were outlined in December by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity.

One of those principles considered by the competitive-safeguards committee (a complete list appears in the January 5 issue of The NCAA News) states that "each institution has a fundamental responsibility to protect the health and safety of each of its participating student-athletes."

The competitive-safeguards committee particularly noted the first two of five "needs" identified by the special committee for bringing the Association in step with that principle:

- "Support educational efforts among student-athletes, coaches and administrators related to proper nutrition, eating disorders, drug (including alcohol) abuse, HIV and other blood-borne pathogens, etc."

- "Heighten awareness of health and safety issues that derive from student-athletes' participation in intercollegiate athletics, including training methods, medical care/training room procedures, injury surveillance and stress management."

The committee—which sent two members to a February 28 meeting in Raleigh, North Carolina, addressing the "health and safety" principle—agreed to forward the following to the special committee as additional areas of concern: gambling, ways in which institutional health insurance for student-athletes may have to be changed if new health-care proposals become law, equitable medical care for male and female teams, and Association responsibility for the safety of spirit groups such as cheerleaders and dancers.

As a result of its discussion regarding insurance, the committee also recommended to the special committee that a group similar to the old NCAA Insurance Committee be formed to continue to monitor changes in health-care law as they relate to athletics.

The other principle considered by the competitive-safeguards committee states that "each institution has a fundamental responsibility to establish and maintain an environment that fosters a positive relationship between the student-athlete and coach."

Specifically, the competitive-safeguards committee is interested in the following needs listed by the special committee:

- Providing opportunities for professional development of coaches.

- Emphasizing the role of coaches as educators of and role models for student-athletes.

- Providing education about the nature and effects of psychological and physical abuse of student-athletes, and

- Studying the appropriate role of coaches in the areas of academic support, medical treat-

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 14-16 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports:

- Discussed its charge (as listed in the NCAA Executive Committee Handbook) to assist in the development of standards for athletics equipment that could prevent catastrophic injuries. The committee will seek to redraft the directive to better describe its specific intent and review that language at its June meeting.

- Noted that two cases of HIV transmission in a household setting had been reported by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, but that the mechanism for transmission was such that it should not prompt a change in the committee's policy on bleeding.

- Responded to an NCAA Wrestling Committee question on what is a reasonable time to allow for stoppage of bleeding during a match. The competitive safeguards committee decided that the time varies so greatly depending on the situation and individual that the committee should consider fairness to the opposing (nonbleeding) wrestler rather than medical reasons in writing a rule that pertains to such a situation. As an example, the committee suggested that the wrestling committee use the criteria it used for developing its injury-time restriction to develop a similar rule for bleeding.

- Discussed sports-science related legislation adopted at the NCAA Convention, specifically Proposal No. 95, which permits a wrestling coach to be present during voluntary individual wrestling workouts in the institution's regular practice facility and to provide safety or skill instruction without the workouts being considered as countable athletically related activities. The committee discussed the possibility of similar deregulation for out-of-season practice in other sports, noting that should such action be taken, there is institutional liability for proper medical care.

- Endorsed the NCAA Football Rules Committee's recommendation to the Executive Committee to eliminate a rule requiring the receiving team to have at least five men within five yards of the restraining line on a kickoff.

- Recommended pursuing opportunities to give presentations at the 1994 summer meetings of the American College of Sports Medicine, since attendees include a significant number of team physicians. The committee believes that involvement with such groups is a convenient and effective forum for addressing such professionals.

- Reviewed a concern expressed about medical coverage at the 1993 NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships. The committee decided to remind sports committees of the importance of complying with medical procedures outlined in the championships handbooks and of maintaining communication with institutional athletics trainers, so that they know the areas where they are permitted to go when a student-athlete is hurt and also know what medical coverage is provided by the host institution's staff.

- Discussed the NCAA Research Committee's new structure for awarding research grants, and asked that committee to consider pursuing the following projects: evaluation of the equity of medical care as it relates to gender and athletics teams; development of a tool to quantify and identify overuse injuries; examination of causative factors in musculoskeletal injuries, and establishment of data-collection studies to annually measure the substance-abuse habits of college student-athletes.

Drug testing and education

The Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports has recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that it add Division II football to the year-round drug-testing program, beginning in August 1994.

The recommendation is based on results of the 1993 replication of the Michigan State University Drug-Use Study. The study showed an anabolic-steroid usage rate of 4.3 percent among Division II student-athletes, a figure nearly mirroring the 4.8 percent usage rate found in Division I testing for anabolic steroids after year-round testing began in 1990.

The Division I steroid-use rate in the 1993 study was 1.9 percent. The committee attributes the Division I decrease in steroid use in part to the year-round drug-testing program.

The committee also approved phasing in private firms for specimen collection for the year-round drug-testing program, beginning in August 1994. Currently, all collection is done by NCAA drug-testing crews.

The committee's recommendation is based on the results of a pilot program—conducted September through November 1993—that used a private firm for collection at selected NCAA member institutions. The pilot program showed significant cost savings and received favorable marks from institutions involved.

The United States Olympic Committee and USA Track and Field currently are using private collection firms in their out-of-competition drug-testing programs.

In other drug-testing actions, the committee:

- Awarded a partial grant to a consortium of 17 Connecticut colleges and universities for the implementation of a statewide drug-education program for athletics staff members and student-athletes, titled "The Campus Partnership."

- Awarded funds to the University of Virginia for Athlete Prevention Programming and Leadership Education (APPLE) conferences for NCAA member schools in 1995. It will be the fourth year the university has conducted conferences to enable NCAA schools to develop alcohol and other drug (AOD) programs for student athletes and staff.

- Discussed the feasibility of recognizing drug-testing results from other national and international sports organizations and directed the national office staff to gather additional information for final committee review in June. The discussion was prompted by student-athletes' positive tests in other organizations' programs, which do not affect eligibility for competition at NCAA member institutions. The committee agreed that it wishes to recognize other organizations' results, but acknowledged that the logistics of such a move need to be more closely examined before such an action is taken.

- Reviewed the selection process for year-round drug testing in Division I track and field and approved in concept a focus on events that may have a higher incidence of anabolic-steroid use. Currently, four men and four women from the squad list are selected randomly by the NCAA, regardless of the event in which they compete.

- Agreed to develop a standardized form to be used for drug-testing-selection purposes at NCAA team championships.

- Reviewed an educational video, "Spit Tobacco: A Dangerous Game," that was developed in a collaborative effort of Major League Baseball and the National Cancer Institute. The committee recommended distribution of the video to each NCAA member institution. Distribution of the video would be a continuation of NCAA-funded educational efforts aimed at cessation of spit-tobacco use by coaches, athletics trainers and student-athletes. The committee also expressed support for development of an educational program to assist in the implementation of the year-round tobacco ban that was adopted by the membership at the 1994 NCAA Convention.

- Recommended that the per diem for drug-testing crews be increased from $80 to $100 for 1994-95. The current per diem has been in place since the inception of the program in 1986.

Sports sciences research

The sports-sciences research subcommittee of the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, meeting February 14-16 in Kansas City, Missouri, addressed a variety of issues.

The subcommittee discussed a new long-range plan, which will be finalized in time for the committee's June meeting. That plan will address four primary areas: the ongoing commitment of the NCAA to high-quality sports sciences research; the committee's educational efforts, including those involving the Sports Medicine Handbook, smokeless tobacco and attendance at seminars; competitive-safeguards issues, including a review of current playing rules that deal with safety and medical issues, and expansion or continuation of interaction with other medical groups.

The subcommittee also discussed the possibility of adding three guidelines to next year's edition of the Sports Medicine Handbook. Those guidelines would describe preferred procedures when dealing with concussions, "burners" and "stingers" (short-term nerve injuries), and competing or practicing in cold weather. The proposed guidelines will be evaluated in June, when it will be determined whether they will be published in the 1994 handbook.

The subcommittee also reviewed and endorsed a public-service announcement on eating disorders that will air during telecasts of winter and spring championships. The subcommittee also recommended a review of the current NCAA nutrition and eating disorders materials (produced in 1990) to determine their correct applicability.

I-AA football group studies possible sites for future title games

A review of the 1993 Division I-AA Football Championship and consideration of a site for the 1994 and 1995 title games highlighted discussion at the NCAA Division I-AA Football Committee meeting February 16-17 at Hilton Head, South Carolina.

After examining preliminary financial data and game statistics, the committee expressed its pleasure with the fiscal success and competitive balance of the championship games.

The 1993 playoffs generated approximately $400,000 in net receipts, which is comparable to the $421,000 generated by a successful 1992 tournament. In addition, nine of the 15 games were decided by a touchdown or less, and eventual champion Youngstown State University posted four of the six victories of more than seven points.

The last two tournaments culminated with sold-out title games in Huntington, West Virginia, and the committee met with local representatives to review a proposal to return the title game to Huntington in 1994 and 1995. The committee is continuing to negotiate with the Huntington Sports Committee regarding the specifics of the pro-

Division I-AA Football Committee

In other actions at its February 16-17 meeting in Hilton Head, South Carolina, the Division I-AA Football Committee:

■ Agreed to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that $50,000 of the receipts from the 1994 Division I-AA Football Championship be used to help pay for television coverage of semifinal games and to develop other programs promoting the playoffs and Division I-AA football in general. This money would supplement approximately $40,000 in promotional funding from Rawlings. Over the past few years, the committee has earmarked these funds for production of a Division I-AA football highlights program; however, the committee asked the NCAA national office staff to consider other types of promotional broadcasting.

■ Agreed that the scenario necessary for each team to host a game in the next round will not be announced during the Friday night meeting before first-round and quarterfinal games. Site determination will not be announced until participants are known. It was noted that it is important to ticket sales to announce before the crowd leaves the stadium if the home team will host the next game.

■ Discussed the possibility of expanding the committee to six or eight members, but tabled the issue until Association restructuring is finished.

The committee reviewed the process it uses to select host institutions for playoff games and agreed to retain the existing policies. The committee noted that it understands the critical nature of site selection and indicated that every effort will be made to select higher-seeded teams as hosts while maintaining fiscal responsibility for the championship.

In 1993, lower-seeded teams hosted only three of the 14 games for which sites were determined by the bid process.

II committee approves regional reassignments

The NCAA Division II Football Committee approved adjustments in the composition of Division II regions at its annual meeting February 19-22 in Kansas City, Missouri.

If approved by the NCAA Executive Committee, the changes would take effect in 1995.

The plan calls for three conferences and the states in which their institutions are located to be reassigned to neighboring regions:

■ Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association institutions and independents in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina would move from the South region to the Northeast.

■ Midwest Intercollegiate Football Conference schools and independents in Michigan, Indiana and Ohio would move from the Northeast to the Midwest.

■ Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association schools and independents in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma would move from the Midwest to the West.

Arkansas already is set to move from the Midwest region to the South because the two Division II football-playing institutions in the state are joining the Gulf South Conference, which remains in the South region.

The committee recommended the adjustments to balance the number of institutions in each region and divide the power base of traditionally strong teams among the regions as equally as possible.

If the plan is approved, the Midwest region will include the Midwest Intercollegiate Football, North Central Intercollegiate Athletic and Northern Sun Intercollegiate Conferences; the Northeast region will include the CIAA and the Pennsylvania State Athletic and West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conferences; the South region will

Division II Football Committee

In other actions at its February 19-22 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Division II Football Committee:

■ Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that pairings within each region be based on seeding and not geographical proximity. The committee recommended that No. 1 seeds play No. 4 seeds and No. 2 seeds play No. 3 seeds. Exceptions would be made only to prevent two conference members from playing each other in the first round.

■ Reviewed the championship selection process and agreed to retain the current procedures (as detailed in the 1993 championship handbook). However, the committee recommended that selections be made at an in-person meeting in Kansas City instead of by telephone conference. The committee acknowledged the need for each region to have its selections reviewed by the full committee and believes the best way to accomplish this is at an in-person meeting where the rationale for each selection can be discussed thoroughly. This proposal is subject to Executive Committee approval.

■ Voted to increase from two to three the number of game films that participating teams are required to exchange. The committee also voted to recommend to the Executive Committee that live scouting of opponents be prohibited during the championship.

■ Agreed to continue conducting national poll rankings if no other organization expresses interest in assuming the responsibility. The committee noted that Division II coaches want to maintain a national poll in addition to the regional polls the committee conducts.

■ Voted to award an honorarium to the University of North Alabama for its exemplary efforts as host institution for the 1993 championship game.

■ Discussed Portland State University's and North Dakota State University's interest in bidding to host future championship games and decided it is not interested in moving the game from Florence, Alabama, at this time. The committee reaffirmed its satisfaction with the current site and indicated that Florence provides a positive atmosphere for the championship.

include the Gulf South, South Atlantic and Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conferences, and the West region will include the Lone Star, Mid-America Athletics, Northern California Athletic and Rocky Mountain Athletic Conferences.

The 1995 season will be the first year of championship eligibility for the Northern Sun and West Virginia conferences.

III approves host-site policy

The NCAA Division III Football Committee has approved a policy that would allow higher-seeded teams to host all first- and second-round games if they meet the requirements necessary to host a Division III playoff game.

The committee made the recommendation at its February 15-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri. It is subject to approval of the NCAA Executive Committee.

Under the previous policy, teams occasionally had to play second-round games on the road against lower-seeded teams, even if the institution met all site-selection criteria. This was most likely to occur if the No. 3 or No. 4 seed won in the first round.

The rationale was to spread hosting opportunities among participating institutions.

However, the committee felt that it is unfair to place higher-seeded teams at a disadvantage after they had earned their status by playing well all year.

The committee's proposal will not change the selection of sites for semifinal games.

Division III Football Committee

In other actions at its February 15-18 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Division III Football Committee:

■ Approved a more detailed film-exchange policy that allows the exchange of specific regular-season and playoff-game films. The committee expressed its concern about the quality of film exchanged and urged all institutions to exchange first-generation tapes with wide-angle views.

■ Reviewed championship-selection criteria and agreed to retain the primary and secondary criteria approved last year.

■ Reviewed regional alignments and agreed to retain the current alignments.

■ Reviewed preliminary financial figures from the 1993 championship and expressed concern about the wide disparity in budgeted game expenses.

■ Discussed the possibility of holding a conference call of all game representatives before first-round games to review administrative procedures for conducting competition.

If approved by the NCAA Executive Committee, a new policy would allow higher-seeded teams to host all early-round games in the Division III football playoffs if they meet hosting requirements.

TV penalties' effect on other schools discussed

Do television sanctions levied against institutions that violate NCAA legislation also penalize institutions that have not committed violations? The NCAA Communications Committee is studying the matter.

At its meeting February 22 in Kansas City, Missouri, the committee discussed at length its concern that television penalties assessed against institutions in infractions cases place an undue burden on institutions that have not violated NCAA legislation. Included in the discussion were possible alternatives to television sanctions (such as recruiting and scholarship limits) that would lessen the impact of infractions sanctions on institutions that were not involved in the violations.

Television sanctions forbid—with the exception of a closed-circuit telecast to the campus of the opponent of the ineligible institution—an institution from entering into any contracts or agreements to appear on television. The ban, while preventing an institution from appearing on television, effectively imposes the same penalty on the institution's opponent.

The committee directed the staff to gather information on the intent of the legislation regarding television sanctions for the purpose of continuing discussion of the issue at its July meeting.

Offered Briefings planned on emerging sport

the adoption of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 12. That legislation permits member institutions to use emerging sports for meeting the Association's minimum sports-sponsorship and financial aid award criteria.

The briefing sessions are designed to give athletics administrators an opportunity to become acquainted with the sport, make contacts and get a jump on planning for next year.

The zone championships sites and contacts at those sites are:

■ South zone, March 5, University of Richmond. Contact: Peg Hogan, 804/794-7297.

■ North zone, March 5, Ohio State University. Contact: Mary Jo Ruggieri, 614/299-9438.

■ East zone, March 5-6, Wheaton College (Massachusetts). Contact: Mary Kay Adams, 508/285-8200, Ext. 2609.

■ West zone, March 6, Stanford University. Contact: Andy Maisel, 415/336-0281.

The U.S. Collegiate Synchronized Swimming Championships will be March 24-26 at Walsh College in Canton, Ohio.

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 22 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Communications Committee:

■ Commended the NCAA Committee on Infractions on its methods for announcing infractions decisions. The committee specifically lauded the Committee on Infractions' use of telephone news conferences that permit media representatives to question the committee chair.

■ Met with Francis M. Canavan, NCAA group executive director for public affairs, who informed the committee of the status of the current discussions between the leadership of the NCAA and the leadership of the Black Coaches Association.

■ Noted its continuing disagreement with the criteria used by the National Football Foundation to select nominees for the College Football Hall of Fame. The committee, which voted to forward its concerns to the NCAA Council, believes the criteria are discriminatory against non-Division I-A players. Current requirements include the proviso that eligible players must have been named to a major all-America team.

■ Discussed the NCAA College Football Forum and suggested that the staff consider alternative dates on which to conduct the forum in order to ensure the highest media representation at the event. The committee's position is that the event can attract more media, and that including student-athletes as well as coaches and administrators is one possible avenue to ensure a greater media representation.

■ Endorsed two proposed additions to the statistics section of the existing executive regulations to further clarify the interpretation of how career coaching records are determined. The proposals are as follows:

31.10.6.4 Determination of Head Coach at an Institution. For a coach to be credited with wins, losses or ties at an institution, that individual must be designated the institution's head coach for the entire sports season. Specifically excluded shall be individuals serving on an advisory or prescason basis only.

31.10.6.5 Interim Coaches. Should the head coach not be present at a contest solely due to illness or other unexpected circumstances, or otherwise be unable to complete the sports season, the win, loss or tie for that game(s) still may be credited to that coach or may be awarded to an interim or assistant coach as determined by the institution before the contest(s) being played.

Certification peer training moves forward

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification concentrated on peer training during its February 17-18 meeting in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Members of the committee and the NCAA compliance services staff will be responsible for training peer reviewers, beginning in May.

Peer reviewers are those who will visit Division I campuses as part of the athletics certification program and evaluate the required institutional self-study.

The committee also reviewed peer-training materials and discussed the format of the peer-training sessions.

Five peer-training sites have been established. Three sessions will be conducted in conjunction with NCAA regional seminars in May and June in San Francisco; Washington, D.C., and New Orleans, and the other two will be at the summer meetings of the Big Ten and Southwest/Southland Conferences.

The committee's peer-development subcommittee recommended that training for peer-review team chairs be done by teleconference. Most peer-review team chairs will be chief executive officers, and the subcommittee felt a teleconference would be the best way to deal with their demanding schedules.

The committee approved about 80 additional names for the pool of potential peer reviewers. Progress was made in getting more representatives from Division I-AAA institutions and from female and ethnic minority chief executive officers, but the potential peer-reviewer list still has few Division I-A athletics directors.

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 17-18 meeting in Scottsdale, Arizona, the Committee on Athletics Certification:

■ Discussed the process for making certification decisions. It also asked the NCAA compliance services staff to compile questions related to this topic for a thorough discussion at the next meeting May 11.

■ Heard an update on the communication plans that are designed to educate local constituencies on the purpose and process of athletics certification. The committee will be sending educational material to the chair of each institution's self-study committee and to the institution's sports information director so information can be distributed to appropriate parties, especially media, in the institution's area. Also, a presentation about athletics certification will be made at the summer meeting of the College Sports Information Directors of America. College alumni associations also are to be apprised of athletics certification at their national meeting this summer.

■ Agreed to ask the NCAA Council to make changes to NCAA Bylaws 23 and 33.

Players to have voice

Another topic addressed by the research group was how to compensate for funding (for example, the coaches' retirement fund) that would be lost through the possible elimination of preseason games.

The football writers expressed their desire to be eliminated from the present process for determining a national champion. They also said they do not want to have their regular-season rankings used as a basis for seeding if the NCAA adopts a championship.

The full committee, which will be a diverse group including chief executive officers, athletics directors, coaches and women, will meet May 5-6 after the NCAA Executive Committee meets.

Community service

Jacksonville raises more than a ton of food for community

Jacksonville University and Winn-Dixie teamed up recently to offer free general-admission tickets for a Jacksonville men's basketball game to anyone who donated four or more cans of food to the Second Harvest Food Bank in Jacksonville, Florida.

The promotion raised slightly more than 2,600 pounds of food, and more than 500 fans participated.

"We are extremely excited about the outpouring of support this event generated," said Tim Davis, director of the food bank. "This food will allow us to provide meals to hundreds of needy people in the Jacksonville community."

Catawba coach volunteers to be an amigo to youth

Catawba College football coach J. D. Haglan wants to be a good friend—an amigo—to his players and to the middle-school students he meets during his involvement in the Amigo program.

Haglan signed up for the program through Volunteer Catawba, a program at the college formed to match students with volunteer opportunities in the community.

Haglan said the program is a win-win situation for everyone involved, including his players.

"The younger generation has it hard growing up with all the things that are available on the streets," Haglan told Juanita Bouser of Catawba for an article in the Salisbury (North Carolina) Post. "Some of the things they see on TV are not very pleasing. By volunteering and working with young people, we can be positive role models and teach them respect...."

"We learn just as much outside the classroom as we do inside the classroom. Book work only takes us so far."

■ Eligibility appeals

Because recruiting violations involve the possibility of an advantage being obtained in the recruitment of a prospect, those cases are published separately from other matters.

Also, please note that any actions taken by the institution, conference or NCAA Committee on Infractions regarding the institution's responsibility for the occurrence of the violation that caused the ineligibility of the student-athletes are reported as part of that particular eligibility case.

The representative initially was hired by the coaching staff to serve as an interpreter but, after a few attempts to contact PSA from coaching staff offices, he began to contact members of PSA's family from his own home. During these calls, the representative assisted the young man and his father with an application to attend a preparatory school in the United States and with necessary travel arrangements. Upon PSA's initial arrival in the United States, he was provided airline transportation by the representative from New York to the representative's hometown. Additionally, the representative provided lodging, meals and ground transportation on a number of occasions to the PSA, both before and after he signed a National Letter of Intent with the institution. Furthermore, before signing the letter of intent, PSA participated in a pick-up basketball game arranged by a member of the institution's coaching staff. Finally, members of the institution's coaching staff were aware of most, if not all, of the representative's actions involving the young man and his family.	Eligibility not restored.	This matter is being reviewed by the NCAA enforcement staff and will be submitted to the NCAA Committee on Infractions for consideration as a major or secondary case and imposition of appropriate penalties.
2.	Men's track, indoor; men's track, outdoor	B 13.02.4.4	PSAs made unofficial visit to campus during dead period. Head coach erroneously scheduled visit during dead period.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	Institution reprimanded head coach and prohibited recruiting contact with PSAs for a two-month period.
3.	Football	B 13.02.4.4	Assistant coach contacted junior college PSAs during a recruiting dead period.	Eligibility restored on basis of institutional action.	Secondary violation; no further action.	Institution ceased recruiting any prospect at the junior college, pending notification of restoration of eligibility by the NCAA eligibility staff. Additionally, the institution forfeited an additional contact opportunity with each young man.
4.	Women's basketball	B 13.1.6.2	PSA visited the institution and had in-person contact with an athletics department academic counselor during the fall dead period. The coaching staff was unaware of the PSA's visit until she arrived on campus.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	The institution will reduce by one the number of allowable on-campus visits for women's basketball during 1993-94.
5.	Football	B 13.1.6.2	PSA made an unofficial visit to the institution's campus before his participation in a high-school football contest later that same day.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
6.	Men's basketball, football	B 13.1.6.2 and 13.11.1	Assistant football coach had contact with two-sport PSA before a competition in order to confirm travel arrangements for an impending official paid visit. In addition, comments of head baseball coach about PSA's athletics ability were published in a local newspaper.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action. However, institution is cautioned to take steps to avoid similar violations.	Institution reduced by one the number of permissible evaluations of PSA in each sport.
7.	Football	B 13.11.1	Head coach commented generally about PSA's athletics ability in a newspaper article.	Eligibility restored after PSA is prohibited from signing a National Letter of Intent with the institution, should he choose to do so, for a three-day period after the initial date when letters may be signed.	Secondary violation; however, this matter will be evaluated by the Committee on Infractions in conjunction with other matters being reviewed by the enforcement staff.	Institution issued written reprimand to head coach and prohibited him from recruiting off-campus for a three-day period.
8.	Men's basketball	B 13.4.1	PSA received recruiting materials during sophomore year.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.

SA's participation occurred before his initial enrollment at the institution, and the institution learned of the young man's participation as a result of a conversation he had with the head coach after his initial enrollment.	Eligibility restored.		Institution required SA to return the prizes to the awarding agencies and withheld him from the first two regularly scheduled contests of the 1994 indoor track season.

SA did not have to document actual hours worked. SA was one of several football SAs who became aware that a telephone call to the representative would trigger a paycheck without regard to the number of hours actually worked. SA went to work for one day and never returned but continued to cash checks totaling $2,800 over the next three vacation periods. SA transferred to current NCAA Division I-AA institution at conclusion of 1993 academic year. SA also competes in track.	Eligibility restored upon repayment and after SA has been withheld from all intercollegiate competition for 1993-94 academic year.	The previous institution's responsibility in this matter was treated by the Committee on Infractions as a major case. Penalties included five years' probation for football and prohibition of football telecasts in 1994.	Previous institution required repayment of $1,600 and withheld SA from 1993 bowl game. After further information about extent of SA's involvement surfaced, previous institution withdrew its request for restoration.

SA did not have to document actual hours worked. SA was one of several football SAs who became aware that a telephone call to the representative would trigger a paycheck without regard to the number of hours actually worked. SA received a total of $2,010 in unearned wages during the summers of 1991 and 1992. SA transferred to current I-AA institution.	Eligibility restored upon repayment and after SA is withheld from first four regularly scheduled intercollegiate contests of 1993 season.	The previous institution's responsibility in this matter was treated by the Committee on Infractions as a major case. After further information about level of SA's involvement surfaced, previous institution withdrew its request for restoration. Current institution required repayment of $2,010.
4.	Football	B 12.4.1-(a), 16.12.2.1 and 16.12.2.4	SAs received pay for work not performed during vacation periods from a representative of institution's athletics interests. SAs did not have to document actual hours worked. SAs were aware that a telephone call to the representative would trigger a paycheck without regard to actual hours worked. One SA worked for some pay; other SA was being paid at another job site during same time period and earned none of the $1,400 he was paid. Other SA's unearned pay was $2,850.	One SA restored upon repayment and after being withheld from the first four, rather than first two, regularly scheduled contests. One SA restored upon repayment and after being withheld from 1993 football season and charged with the loss of one season of competition. Institution appealed decision regarding both SAs to Division I Eligibility Committee, which upheld staff decision.	These and other matters were treated by the Committee on Infractions as a major case. Penalties included: five years' probation, no postseason football in 1994, prohibition of football telecasts for 1994 season and disassociation of the involved athletics representative for a minimum of five years.	Institution withheld one SA from 1993 bowl game and first two contests of 1993-94 season, and required repayment. Institution required repayment by other SA and determined he should be withheld from first four contests of 1993-94 season.
5.	Football	B 12.4.1-(a), 16.12.2.1 and 16.12.2.4	Three SAs received pay during vacation periods from a representative of institution's athletics interests for work not performed. SAs did not have to document actual hours worked. SAs were aware that a call to the representative would trigger a paycheck without regard to actual hours worked. One of the SAs was receiving pay at another job site during the same time period. Other two SAs worked for some of the pay received and were not withheld for the bowl game. Impermissible pay ranged from $680 to $2,850; time period ranged from one to at least six vacation periods.	Eligibility restored upon fulfillment of the institution's actions for two SAs in addition to institution's repayment conditions. One SA restored after being withheld from three rather than four contests.	These and other matters were treated by the Committee on Infractions as a major case. Penalties included: five years' probation, no postseason football in 1994, prohibition of football telecasts for the 1994 season and disassociation of the involved athletics representative for a minimum of five years.	Institution withheld one SA from 1993 bowl game and required repayment. (Same conditions imposed by institution for two other involved SAs who transferred to other NCAA member institutions.) Institution also withheld SA from its first two contests of the 1993-94 season. Upon learning that other SAs did not earn all pay, institution required repayment and withheld them for first four contests of the 1993-94 season.
6.	Football	B 12.5.1.3	Two SAs appeared in a printed advertisement promoting a local car dealership with head coach. SAs were not identified by name and were not compensated. Coach and SAs were not told the photo would be used in an advertisement.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action. However, institution is cautioned to take steps to avoid similar violations.	Institution immediately required the discontinuance of the advertisement.
7.	Men's basketball	B 14.3.5.1.1	SA practiced beyond the permissible two weeks and competed in four contests before the institution certified his official SAT score. SA was otherwise eligible.	Eligibility restored upon the institution's receipt of the official test score.	Secondary violation; no further action.
8.	Men's ice hockey	B 14.5.4	During fall 1991 semester, transfer SA competed in 14 contests while ineligible under satisfactory-progress requirements. SA failed one class during his first semester of enrollment at the institution, which erroneously applied credits earned at a previous institution toward satisfactory progress. SA was not misadvised by institution about satisfactory-progress requirements. SA signed NCAA Student-Athlete Statement in 1990 and 1991. Institution appealed staff decision to Eligibility Committee for Division I, which upheld the decision.	Eligibility restored after SA is withheld from first 14 contests of 1993-94 season. Institution appealed decision to Division I Eligibility Committee, which upheld staff decision.	Secondary violation. Under B 32.4.2, institution was requested to forfeit the 13 contests it won while SA participated while ineligible. Institution did forfeit the contests.
9.	Men's basketball	B 14.6.1 and 16.8.1.2	SA received travel expenses to one away contest while completing transfer year in residence.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.
10.	Women's skiing	B 14.6.5.3.10-(e)	Division III transfer SA received athletically related aid during transfer year in residence.	Eligibility restored.	Secondary violation; no further action.	Institution required SA to repay the impermissible aid.

13.	Women's swimming	B 14.3.2	SA, who was a partial qualifier, practiced and competed in one contest during her initial year in residence. Head coach erroneously believed SA was eligible to compete.	Eligibility restored. (Note: SA used a season of competition per B 14.2.4.1.)	Secondary violation; no further action. However, institution is cautioned to take steps to avoid similar violations.
14.	Wrestling	B 16.12.2.1	Head coach provided automobile transportation to SA from railroad station to campus for start of second-semester classes. Coach provided transportation after SA was unable to find an alternative means of transportation.	Eligibility restored after SA repays cost of transportation.	Secondary violation; no further action. However, institution is cautioned to take steps to avoid similar violations.

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 2 February 3, 1994

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Transfer/one-year residence
1. Student-athlete serving academic year of residence who transfers to Division III institution. A student-athlete who has not satisfied the applicable transfer regulations and, thus, is subject to a one-year residence requirement at a Division I or II institution may transfer to a Division III institution and participate immediately in intercollegiate competition if the student-athlete satisfies the provisions of

NCAA Bylaw 14.6.5.3.11. [References: 14.6.1.1; 14.6.5.3.11 (Division III exception), and IC 12/15/93, Item No. 15]

Recruiting/precollege expense
2. Payment to display institutional banner in facility or club in which prospects participate. An institution may not provide funds to a sports club or athletics facility in exchange for displaying the institution's banner that promotes the institution's sports program if prospects are members of or regularly use the club or facility. [References: 13.2.1 (offers and inducements—general regulation) and 13.16.1 (prohibited expenses)]

Prospective student-athlete/precollege expense
3. Institution assisting in fund-raising activities for athletics youth groups that involve nonprospect-aged participants. An institution may provide items (e.g., autographed balls, jerseys) to assist in fund-raising efforts of athletics youth groups that include individuals who have not started classes for the ninth grade without causing such individuals to be considered prospective student-athletes. [References: 13.02.8 (prospective student-athlete) and 13.16.1 (prohibited expenses)]

Preseason squad limit
4. Preseason squad limit—replacement of student-athlete who withdraws or is injured during preseason practice period (Divisions I-A and I-AA). A student-athlete who has voluntarily withdrawn from an institution's team and departed the practice site and no longer will engage in any preseason practice activities may be replaced with another student-athlete without including that individual in the limitation of student-athletes who may engage in preseason practice activities prior to the institution's first contest or first day of classes, whichever is earlier. The committee noted that it is not permissible to replace a student-athlete who is injured during the preseason practice period. [Reference: new Bylaw 17.7.2.1.1]

Volleyball/playing season
5. Exempting practice and competition in National Invitational Volleyball Championship (NIVC) (Division I). An institution that participated in the NIVC during the traditional fall segment of the current academic year may exempt such practice and competition from counting in the institution's declared playing season in the sport of volleyball for the current academic year. [Reference: 17.1.8-(h) (NCAA or NAIA championships participation in team sports)]

Basketball/contest exemptions
6. Permissible starting date for engaging in preseason exhibitions (Division I). Inasmuch as the permissible date for beginning on-court practice is October 15, the committee recommended that the Council consider using the provisions of Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial amendment) to amend the provisions of 17.3.3.1-(c) to permit a Division I institution to engage in a preseason exhibition against a club member of USA Basketball and a foreign team in the United States after November 1 (as opposed to after November 15). [References: 17.3.2.1 (on-court practice) and 17.3.3.1-(c) (USA Basketball, Tip-Off Classic, foreign team games, Great Alaska Shootout, Maui Invitational)]

Meeting

Committee seeks meeting to review additional information on initial-eligibility requirements

Association's initial-eligibility requirements.

Clearinghouse issues

The committee also addressed issues relating to the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse, including a confirmation of a previous interpretation that it is necessary under Bylaws 14.3.1.3.6 and 14.3.5.2 to convert high-school grading systems that award only four letter grades (i.e., A, B, C and F) to a 4.000 scale.

The committee will recommend that the Council's Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers, if necessary, consider requests from students who are adversely affected by this interpretation.

In addition, the committee reviewed policies regarding the application of initial-eligibility legislation related to secondary course work completed through home schooling. The committee will recommend that the Council amend Bylaw 14.3.1.3.3 to specify that such course work may not be used to satisfy core-course curriculum requirements without approval from the initial-eligibility-waiver subcommittee.

The committee also endorsed policies that the subcommittee may use to review and approve such course work. Further, a subcommittee of the Academic Requirements Committee will undertake additional research to determine the extent to which various state education associations conduct an independent review of

Other highlights

In other actions at its February 23-24 meeting in Kansas City, Missouri, the Academic Requirements Committee:

■ Forwarded to the NCAA Council an interpretation that the application of the "50," "25-50-75" and "90-95" provisions of satisfactory progress are based upon the individual student's terms and academic years of enrollment rather than the institution's academic year. The committee also recommended that the Council revise 1994 Convention Proposal No. 69 to be consistent with this interpretation.

■ Confirmed an interpretation that remedial course work cannot be used to fulfill the "50" and "25-50-75" provisions unless the institution considers such course work applicable toward the student-athlete's specific degree program.

■ Recommended that the Council revise the effective date of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 72 regarding two-year college transfer students from immediately to August 1, 1994.

■ Distinguished between correspondence course work and extension course work by specifying that extension course work meet the following conditions: (1) The course must be a regularly scheduled offering that follows the institution's regular academic schedule; (2) it must award a regular number of credit hours and a regular number of hours of classroom instruction; (3) a regular grading scale must be used; (4) it must involve classroom instruction taken from the certifying institution, although such instruction may occur at a location other than the institution's main campus, and (5) it must count toward full-time enrollment. The committee established a rebuttable presumption that a course that does not meet this standard is a correspondence course.

■ Recommended that the Council amend 1994 Convention Proposal No. 70 regarding part-time enrollment and satisfactory-progress requirements to specify that (1) it is acceptable to use hours earned prior to initial full-time enrollment at the certifying institution to fulfill satisfactory progress, and (2) the proposal does not apply to a term during which the student is subject to satisfactory progress because of full-time enrollment during a previous term during the same academic year.

■ Established a subcommittee to assist the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse in its review of would-be core courses.

■ Reviewed preliminary information regarding a new version of the SAT and a revised grading scale that will begin in April 1995.

■ Reviewed a draft of materials to assist in the implementation of satisfactory-progress legislation that will first affect student-athletes during the 1994-95 academic year and recommended that the information be included in the 1994-95 NCAA Guide to Rules Compliance.

■ Reviewed correspondence from the NCAA's legal counsel regarding application of the Americans With Disabilities Act to the Association's legislative requirements related to full-time enrollment and satisfactory progress. The committee will recommend to the Council that waiver provisions be created to permit the committee to waive the 12-hour requirement for full-time enrollment and the 24-hour/12-hour requirement of satisfactory progress for learning-disabled students.

■ Reviewed a recommendation from the NCAA Two-Year College Relations Committee that Bylaw 14.6.4.4.4 be amended to give the Academic Requirements Committee the authority to make judgments regarding whether the two-year college degree is academic, rather than vocational or technical, in nature. The committee agreed to recom-home-schooling course work.

Second-language instruction

With regard to second-language instruction, the committee reaffirmed an interpretation that English-as-second-language courses cannot be used to fulfill initial-eligibility requirements because they are designed for individuals with limited or no English proficiency and therefore are remedial or compensatory in nature.

The committee emphasized that where appropriate, the Council's Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers can consider on a case-by-case basis whether such course work should be accepted for core-curriculum requirements in English.

The committee also reaffirmed an existing interpretation that other courses taught in a second-language context cannot be accepted to meet core-curriculum requirements. The committee noted that the initial-eligibility waiver subcommittee also can review the acceptability of this course work where appropriate.

Further, the committee agreed that courses taught in a native language can be accepted as core courses provided they meet all other applicable core-curriculum requirements.

Big Eight expansion instantly makes new league one of the most powerful in the nation million.

Replacing CFA revenues

University of Kansas athletics director Robert E. Frederick said the Big Eight has been seeking ways in which to supplant money that currently is coming from the CFA. By expanding the conference, the Big Eight becomes more attractive.

"Our goal was to replace the revenues that we were getting from the CFA," Frederick said. "(The expansion) is going to greatly strengthen our ability to attract a deal. I think there is a good chance for us to meet or exceed the revenue we were getting through the CFA."

"The Big Eight has strengthened itself tremendously," said Thomas C. Hansen, commissioner of the Pacific-10 Conference. "And it could help bring stability to college sports."

"They're going from an integrated market of eight institutions to 12 schools in an integrated market," said Big Ten Conference Commissioner James E. Delany. "Their market share is increased. The quality of their inventory is significantly improved. They'll have some blockbuster games."

DeLoss Dodds, men's athletics director at Texas, said he believes the expansion of the Big Eight will be a boon to existing conference

Big East CEOs: No mergers, expansion yet

Chief executive officers of Big East Conference institutions also have studied the possibilities of expansions and mergers, but decided to continue researching their options at a February 25 meeting in Boston.

"After much discussion, the CEOs concluded it would be appropriate to return to their respective campuses to further study the issue," the conference said in a one-paragraph statement. "The CEOs will meet again in the near future and have agreed not to comment further."

Conference members Boston

College, University of Miami (Florida), University of Pittsburgh and Syracuse University are pushing for four football-only members to be granted full membership, according to The Associated Press. The schools have indicated that without such a move, they will drop their Big East membership and take a lucrative football television rights deal with them.

Last week, CBS reached an agreement with the football-playing Big East schools — including football-only members Rutgers University, New Brunswick; Temple University; Virginia Polytechnic Institute, and West Virginia University — for a reported five years and $65 million. In addition, the football-playing members agreed to a five-year deal worth about $35 million with ESPN and ESPN2, thus placing 10 to 12 games annually on those two networks.

The conference's non-Division I-A football-playing members are the University of Connecticut, Georgetown University, Providence College, St. John's University (New York), Seton Hall University and Villanova University.

Southwest Conference Commissioner Steven J. Hatchell began preliminary discussions with the remaining Southwest Conference members February 28 to consider options, said Bo Carter, director of media relations for the conference. Houston, however, is not participating in those discussions.

Carter said the conference regards those discussions to be confidential and will not publicly comment on the options its remaining members will pursue.

But Hatchell has told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram that the league's prospects should not be regarded as grim.

"The reality is these schools have many opportunities," he said. "Their (television) value is most significant and will continue to be so."

The Southwest Conference was left vulnerable by a number of factors, the most important of which were image problems resulting from NCAA penalties levied against most of its members in the 1980s and the defection of the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, from the league in 1990. When Arkansas joined the Southeastern Conference, that left the SWC as the only Division I-A conference with all of its members within one state.

Some information for this story was provided by The Associated Press.

"We take to the Big Eight about seven to eight percent of the television market in the nation. They help us. We help them. I think it's a great marriage."

■ DeLoss Dodds

members and the four Texas institutions.

"We take to the Big Eight about seven to eight percent of the television market in the nation (with Dallas and Houston)," Dodds said. "The Big Eight has had great traditions, great successes. They help us. We help them. I think it's a great marriage."

Discussing options

While the Big Eight jumps to 12 institutions, the Southwest Con-

The remaining Southwest Conference institutions are the University of Houston, Rice University, Southern Methodist University and Texas Christian University.

CORRECTIONS

The position to which Greg Beals was appointed at Kent was reported incorrectly in the NCAA Record section of the January 16 issue of The NCAA News. Beals was named assistant baseball coach at the school.

Cutlines accompanying two photographs in the February 16 issue of the News listed the wrong school as sponsor of community-service programs in the Indianapolis area. Indiana University/Purdue University at Indianapolis is the sponsor of the Metros' Mentor Program, which was featured in a photograph in the Briefly in the News section of that issue of the News. Student athletes from that school also participated in a Habitat for Humanity project, which was featured in a photograph published elsewhere in that issue.

Deaths

Huey Cranford, men's basketball coach at Northwestern State from 1957 to 1965, died February 21 when a fire destroyed his home. He was 66. Cranford was 116-98 during his eight seasons as coach of the Demons. He coached Gulf States Conference championship teams in 1957-58 and 1959-60. His 1959-60 squad had a 23-5 record, equalling the mark of the 1948-49 team as the best single-season record in school history.

James D. McComas, former president at Virginia Tech and a former member of the NCAA Presidents Commission, died February 10 in Columbus, Ohio, after a long illness. He served at Virginia Tech for five years after stints at Toledo and Mississippi State. While a member of the Presidents Commission, McComas chaired the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity.

Championships travel program designed to save time

NCAA championships travel during March always presents Worldtek Travel, the official NCAA travel agency, with its toughest challenges in its attempt to deliver the best possible service to NCAA travelers.

To meet those challenges, Worldtek has devised a program that can save considerable time and inconvenience.

Even though institutions participating in the Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships are not officially known until the March 13 announcement date, many institutions have a reasonable idea ahead of time that they may be selected. If an institution believes that it is likely to be selected, it can assist Worldtek in the following ways:

■ Before the announcement date, team administrators should prepare a list of individuals most likely to be included in the traveling party. Players must be included in the official traveling party. Those names may be changed at any time. Team administrators should indicate whether the individual in the traveling party is a player, coach, athletics administrator, cheerleader, band member, faculty, alumnus or other.

■ Administrators should review, with members of the traveling party, alternatives in case they have to be split up due to airline or charter availability; some may be traveling two days before the game, others one day before the game and others on game day. Administrators should indicate how the party would be divided.

■ Administrators should send those names and possible configurations via facsimile machine to the Worldtek/NCAA Travel Service (fax number 203/865-2034 or 203/777-1483).

■ The expanded bracket for the Division I Women's Basketball Championship presents a new challenge. Administrators making reservations to the first round of the women's basketball championship should reserve round-trip flights from campus to the first-round site and back to campus. Once the first-round competition is completed, institutions can call Worldtek and change their flights if they need to travel to the second-round sites. The original return tickets must be returned immediately to Worldtek for refund.

Traveling parties also may assist Worldtek by calling the NCAA Travel Service (800/243-1800, 800/243-1723 or 203/772-0470) on March 13 as soon as official notice of the selection is received. The administrator responsible for making travel arrangements is advised not to wait to call.

As a rule, airlines will not hold group reservations without individual names, but the procedures provided in the four steps listed will enable Worldtek to provide better service to the participating institutions.

Institutions planning to use charters also would benefit by calling early.

During the basketball championships, institutions' return flights are subject to change based on the outcome of the games. Travel administrators should be prepared to split their travel party and take alternate commercial flights. Charter flights, in most instances, do not offer the flexibility for time changes on return flights without substantial cancellation or change fees.

Questions about these procedures should be directed to Karen LaRose or Shelley Mongillo at Worldtek (800/243-1800) or Keith E. Martin at the NCAA national office (913/339-1906, extension 7435).

School finds humor in quake

After nearly a month of earthquake-related exile, the California State University, Northridge, men's basketball team returned to its home floor February 15 for the first time since a powerful earthquake rocked the Southern California area January 17.

The 6.7 magnitude quake was centered in Northridge, where many structures, including those on the Cal State Northridge campus, sustained heavy damage.

Unofficial T-shirts touting the "Northridge Quakes now playing at the Epi Center" have been seen around campus. The Associated Press reported.

"The fight song would be 'Shake, Rattle and Roll,' the cheerleaders would be the 'Tremors' and the pep band the 'Aftershocks,' or vice versa," said men's basketball coach Pete Cassidy. "I think you take what life throws you. It always has been the American way to make humor of tragedy."

ketball grant for Division I men's basketball programs) at the 1994 NCAA Convention. The BCA claimed at the time that the vote meant a denial of educational opportunities for minorities, although the question of the 14th grant was only one of several concerns the BCA presented to the NCAA.

The BCA considered some form of boycott in response to the vote but delayed that action after the Congressional Black Caucus suggested the Community Relations Service process as an alternative.

A review of the March 1 meeting will appear in the March 9 issue of The NCAA News.

"Let's touch bases before the meeting."

"There are a lot of hurdles on your career path. I'm one of them."

"Give them the one-two punch: gross revenues then earnings."

"How many at-bats do we get on the new business pitch?"

"Your promotion was a slam dunk."

"I need a quarterback for this project."

1994 Column No. 9

1994 NCAA Convention Proposal Nos. 44 and 45

Divisions I-A and I-AA football—preseason squad limit

Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions should note that with the adoption of Proposal Nos. 44 and 45 (as amended by 45-2 and 45-3) (effective immediately), a maximum of 105 student-athletes (in Division I-A) and 90 (in Division I-AA) student-athletes may participate in preseason football practice prior to the institution's first day of classes or the institution's first contest, whichever occurs earlier. In addition, as set forth in 45-2, Division I-AA institutions that sponsor junior varsity teams that compete in at least four intercollegiate contests are not subject to the limit. Further, as set forth in 45-3, in Division I-AA football, an institution may permit a limit of 110 student-athletes to engage in preseason practice activities if the institution establishes its first preseason practice date based on 27 (as opposed to 29) practice opportunities (including practice for first-time participants).

During its February 3, 1994, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that a student-athlete who has withdrawn voluntarily from an institution's team, departed the practice site and no longer will engage in any preseason practice activities may be replaced with another student-athlete without including that individual in the limitation on the number of student-athletes who may engage in preseason practice activities prior to the institution's first contest or first day of classes, whichever is earlier. The committee noted that it is not permissible to replace a student-athlete who is injured during the preseason practice period.

Finally, during its February 16, 1994, meeting, the NCAA Administrative Committee, acting for the NCAA Council, utilized the provisions of Constitution 5.4.1.1.1 (modification of wording) to amend the provisions of Proposal No. 45-3 to specify that the application of 45-3 is limited to institutions that award financial aid in the sport of football only on the basis of need, and that the application of the legislation shall not accrue to the disadvantage of multisport student-athletes.

NCAA Bylaw 11.02.5

Undergraduate assistant coach— Division I

Division I institutions should note that an undergraduate student coach is any coach who is an undergraduate student who has exhausted his or her eligibility in the sport or has become injured to the point that he or she is unable to practice or compete ever again, and who meets the following additional criteria:

1. Is enrolled at the institution at which he or she participated in intercollegiate athletics;
2. Is participating as a student coach within the five-year/10-semester eligibility period per Bylaw 14.2;
3. Is completing the requirements for his or her baccalaureate degree;
4. Is a full-time student, unless during his or her final semester or quarter of the baccalaureate program, per 14.1.6.2.2.1-

(a);

5. Is receiving no compensation or remuneration from the institution other than the financial aid received as a student-athlete and expenses incurred on road trips that are received by individual team members, and

6. Is not involved in contacting and evaluating prospective student-athletes off campus or scouting opponents off campus.

Please note that in accordance with Bylaw 11.02.5.1, the above definition applies only to those sports that have limitations on the numbers of coaches who may be employed. Further, during its October 7, 1993, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a student-athlete who is employed as an institution's undergraduate assistant coach, in accordance with 11.02.5, may not receive compensation from employment in the institution's athletics department that exceeds the value of a full grant (i.e., tuition and fees, room and board, books). The committee noted that an undergraduate assistant coach is permitted to receive compensation from employment outside the institution's athletics department without including such compensation in the individual's full grant aid limitations.

In its discussion of the principle, the committee emphasized the importance of the coach's position as a role model regarding use of smokeless tobacco and alcohol. It also was noted that coaches need to be aware of mandatory protective equipment rules in a sport and ensure that student-athletes observe those rules in both practice and games.

The committee also discussed the possibility of requiring coaches to be certified on selected medical issues, with the NCAA Sports Medicine Handbook possibly being used as the source for certification.

Injury Surveillance System

In a discussion of the Injury Surveillance System (ISS), the committee's sports-sciences research subcommittee:

- Reviewed the data-collection procedure for monitoring bleeding student-athletes. An article on the results of this analysis will appear in a later issue of the News.

- Reviewed and endorsed a personal-computer-based format for the ISS.

- Recommended that all dental injuries be included in ISS data, regardless of whether the injury keeps the student-athlete out of practice or competition.

- Recommended to the NCAA Men's Ice Hockey Rules Committee that it make use of a four-point chin strap mandatory and require that helmets be certified by the Hockey Equipment Certification Council (HECC). Currently, HECC-certified helmets are recommended but not required under NCAA rules. The subcommittee also recommended that the ice hockey rules committee require stricter enforcement of its mandatory mouthpiece rule. The rationale for these recommendations is that ISS data show a concussion rate for ice hockey that is higher than those for football and men's lacrosse—contact sports that require four-point chin straps, mouthpieces and helmet certification.

- Met with statistical consultant John Flueck to discuss ISS sampling and reliability. The discussion centered on better understanding of injury and exposure definitions, answer reliability, and possible conference participation in the system.
