Pat Smith (top) of Oklahoma State University became the first participant in the history of the NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships to win four individual titles when he beat the University of Michigan's Sean Bormet, 5-3, in the final of the 158-pound division March 19. Oklahoma State also won the team title. See championships story, page 7.

Student-athletes voice opinions on football playoff

Twelve student-athletes met March 20 with an NCAA working group that is researching the possibility of a Division I-A football championship.

The student-athletes, who played in last season's football bowl games or in the Division I-AA championship game, indicated that they believe a national championship should be determined on the field, depending upon resolving concerns including academic issues, erosion of their free time and possible extra compensation for the student-athletes. Opinions in the group were divided.

"In general, they were positive about a national-championship concept," said Cedric W. Dempsey, NCAA executive director and a member of the working group, which requested the meeting with the student-athletes. "As they indicated, one of the reasons they play the game is to find out who's the best. But they also raised important concerns that would have to be addressed as we examine this issue."

Their concerns include how the timing of the playoffs would relate to academic calendars.

Another concern related to an erosion of the student-athletes' free time. The student-athletes at the meeting believed that the playoff should not extend beyond the first two or three weeks in January. One suggestion was to trade the elimination of spring football practices for the additional postseason time that a playoff might require.

Another discussion surrounded whether extra compensation in some form might be possible or desired for student-athletes. Ideas for that compensation ranged from direct pay to expansion and liberalization of programs that help student-athletes, including the special-assistance fund and the degree-completion program.

Commission subcommittees to tackle top issues of next year

Subcommittees of the NCAA Presidents Commission will focus on several of the major topics for the approaching year as the Commission meets March 31-April 1 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Subcommittee sessions actually will begin March 30, with the Subcommittee on Strategic Planning and the Subcommittee on Minority Issues meeting that evening. The strategic-planning subcommittee is to replace Thomas K. Hearn Jr. of Wake Forest University as its chair; the chair of the minority-issues subcommittee is David G. Carter of Eastern Connecticut State University.

Other subgroups that will meet are the Commission's executive committee (its four elected officers) and the Divisions I, II and III subcommittees.

Among the items on the agendas of the division subcommittees are:

■ Division I: Continuing review of the concept of a Division I-A football playoff.

■ Division II: Issues related to student-athlete welfare, a report of the Division II subcommittee discussing athletics certification, restructuring issues related to Division II and issues related to cost containment.

■ Division III: Restructuring issues related to Division III.

On April 1, the full Commission will:

■ Hear a status report from the Presidents Commission Liaison Committee, chaired by Richard E. Peck, University of New Mexico.

■ Hear from the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity, chaired by Donald F. Behrend, University of Alaska Anchorage.

■ Discuss the concept of a Division I-A football playoff.

■ Discuss the NCAA membership structure.

■ Discuss 1994 Convention Proposal No. 20 (biennial Convention).

■ Hear a report from Commission Chair Judith E. N. Albino, University of Colorado, on the implementation of 1994 Convention Proposal No. 174.

■ Hear a report from Albino on mediation between the NCAA and the Black Coaches Association.

■ Form a Commission subcommittee to prepare recommendations for the 1996 NCAA Convention topic—Integrity: Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics.

Albino will chair the full Commission sessions and the executive committee meeting.

The division subcommittee meetings will be chaired by Eamon M. Kelly, Tulane University, Division I and Division I-A; Judith A. Ramaley, Portland State University, Division II, and Claire L. Gaudiani, Connecticut College, Division III.

A report on the meeting will appear in the April 6 issue of The NCAA News, and the minutes will be printed in an issue in May.

BCA concerns

NCAA meets with BCA in first in-person session

The first in-person mediation session between the NCAA and the Black Coaches Association was conducted March 15 in Chicago.

After that meeting, the Community Relations Service (the division of the U.S. Department of Justice that is serving as mediator) issued the following statement:

"During this session, there was lengthy, substantive and constructive discussion. The parties discussed academic standards for eligibility, gender equity for black females, access to student-athletes and minority opportunities in athletics."

The parties have agreed to not comment publicly on the progress of the talks. The first discussion between the organizations was a March 1 telephone conference.

For more detail, see the January 26 and January 19 issues of The NCAA News.

Players from top programs meet with research group

Student-athletes, most of them representing teams that played in the most recent New Year's Day bowl games, met March 20 with the research group that is collecting information about a Division I-A football playoff.

The meeting was the last for the research group, which now is in the process of finishing its report. That report will be provided to a special committee that will recommend for or against a Division I-A playoff. The members of that committee are expected to be announced soon.

At its other meetings, the research group met with representatives from the three major networks, plus Fox, Turner Broadcasting and ESPN, and later met with Division I-A coaches and representatives from several organizations whose membership would be affected by a playoff.

For more detail, see page 1 and the March 2, February 23 and January 19 issues of The NCAA News.

Certification

Panel seeks I-A administrators to serve as peer reviewers

The NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification again is asking Division I-A athletics administrators — especially those representing large programs — to volunteer to serve as peer reviewers.

The lack of athletics administrators is causing the committee some difficulty in forming peer-review teams that are good matches for the institutions undergoing review.

To apply to be a peer reviewer, an individual must submit a candidate form to the committee. To be considered for placement in the pool, an individual must be from a Division I institution or conference (or have retired recently). Among the guidelines for selection is five years' campus experience, including three in Division I.

Candidate forms, along with other requirements and guidelines for peer reviewers, can be obtained by contacting David A. Knopp, director of compliance services, at the national office.

For more detail, see the March 16 and March 2 issues of The NCAA News.

Staff contact: John H. Leavens.

Next meeting: May 11 in San Francisco.

Institutional funding

As realignment has occurred among Division I-A conferences, some discussion has focused on whether research-oriented institutions should group with one another.

Here are the 25 institutions with the most money in government grants in 1990-91, the most recent year for which data are available:

Briefly in the News

Dooley's giving inspires growth

University of Georgia athletics director Vince Dooley pledged $100,000 in 1988 to help strengthen the university's library system. His generosity has spurred a flurry of donations that has expanded the Dooley Library Endowment Fund to more than $2.1 million.

Gifts from hundreds of donors, including some of Dooley's former football players at Georgia, has the library endowment fund on sure footing. The endowment will generate more than $100,000 annually to help the libraries purchase books, computer equipment and electronic databases.

"I want to express my deep appreciation to everyone associated with the library-endowment-fund campaign who were so generous in giving both their time and money in making the effort such a success," Dooley said.

"I believe all the donors received a good feeling that we were able to make a contribution to a vital part of the university that, as a matter of course, usually does not receive a great deal of attention."

The 1966 and 1968 Bulldog football teams — both Southeastern Conference champions under Dooley — celebrated their 25th reunions by giving more than $100,000 each to the fund.

NACDA forum is set

The National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will sponsor its third annual Division I athletics directors forum April 3-4 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

This year's forum features general sessions for Division I athletics directors and breakout sessions specific to Divisions I-A, I-AA and I-AAA. General sessions on the agenda include "Televised Sports in the Year 2000," presented by Ken Haines of Raycom Sports, and "Life After the Directorship," presented by a panel of former athletics directors consisting of Rick Bay, formerly of the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, and now president of the Greater Cleveland Sports Commission; Dave Maggard, formerly of the University of Miami (Florida) and now director of sports for the Atlanta Committee for the 1996 Olympic Games; Lou Mariciani, formerly of Western Kentucky University and now executive director of the Amateur Athletic Union, and Steve Miller, formerly of Kansas State University and now director of sports mar-

Lady Vols top draw

The University of Tennessee, Knoxville, women's basketball team cruised to victory in the first National Women's Basketball Attendance Challenge for the 1993-94 season.

The Lady Volunteers were the top draw out of the 10 participating institutions. Tennessee averaged 10,885 fans for each game since the challenge began January 1.

The rankings of the remaining nine institutions with average attendance per game: Ohio State University, 8,970; University of Texas at Austin, 8,364; Southwest Missouri State University, 8,078; Texas Tech University, 7,308; University of Iowa, 7,131; University of Connecticut, 6,849; Vanderbilt University, 6,508; Stanford University, 5,850, and the University of Virginia, 4,681.

For more information on the challenge, contact Dave Gallagher or Brook Peterson of the Iowa sports promotion office at 319/335-9431.

Sandwiching a victory

It wasn't exactly the toughest win he's posted, but Moravian College junior wrestler Andrew Canale did have to do some fancy maneuvering to record a February 5 victory.

That afternoon, Moravian hosted Susquehanna University, which informed the Greyhounds that it would forfeit the 177-pound division match. That was the easy part for Canale, who competes in that division.

One of Canale's teammates called him at the sandwich shop where he worked and told him to head over to the gym so the team could get credit for the forfeit victory. Canale raced home, changed into his uniform, and walked out on the mat to have his hand raised in victory.

Five minutes later, he was at work preparing sandwiches again.

Milestones

Bert Hammel, men's basketball coach at Merrimack College, recorded win No. 200 January 12 as his Warriors defeated Bryant College 75-73. Hammel reached the milestone in his 14th season at Merrimack, where he is the most victorious coach in the college's history. Incidentally, Hammel's 100th victory was earned with a victory over Bryant December 5, 1987.

John Beilein, men's basketball coach at Canisius College, recorded the 200th win of his career with a 71-63 victory over Niagara University January 15. Beilein previously coached at Nazareth College (New York) and LeMoyne College.

Bill Morse, men's basketball coach at Mercyhurst College, recorded his 500th career victory January 24 in a defeat of St. Vincent College. Eighty of those victories came while Morse coached Alpena (Michigan) Community College.

Glenn Van Wieren, men's basketball coach at Hope College, reached his 300th career victory January 26 when the Flying Dutchmen beat Adrian College 99-72. Van Wieren's victories have come in 17 seasons as a head coach.

University of South Carolina at Spartanburg men's basketball coach Jerry Waters recorded his 300th win at the institution with a January 29 win over Central Wesleyan College.

Nick Lambros, men's basketball coach at Hartwick College, chalked up his 300th college-coaching victory January 29 when Hartwick defeated Alfred University 84-73. Lambros has spent the past 17 seasons as head coach at Hartwick.

Fact file

The top three women's basketball games for paid attendance were played in Thompson-Boling Arena at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. Two of those were sessions at the 1990 NCAA Women's Final Four; the semifinal games were attended by 19,467 fans and the championship game by 20,023 fans. The largest crowd, however, attended a 1987 regular-season game in which the University of Texas at Austin defeated Tennessee, 97-78. Attendance for that game was 23,912.

Former NCAA president Dorricott, 80, dies

Herbert J. Dorricott, the oldest surviving NCAA president, died March 14 after a long bout with diabetes. He was 80.

Dorricott, who led the Association from 1959 to 1961, was faculty athletics representative from Western State College when he was elected to serve as NCAA president.

He chaired the NCAA's first Television Committee, which negotiated early contracts with the networks and established policies for distributing television income.

Dorricott worked for Western

State, his alma mater, for 33 years.

He was director of public services and extension, registrar, director of admissions, chair of the division of arts and crafts, assistant to the president, and director of business affairs. He retired in 1975.

Dorricott

Dorricott was elected conference and district delegate from the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference in 1954. He served on the NCAA Council before being elected president.

A star athlete at what is now Palmer High School in Colorado Springs, Colorado, he attended Colorado College for a year before enrolling at Western State in 1936. For the next three years, he was an all-Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference guard for the football team. He eventually was named to the all-time Western State all-star team.

He also was a timer and judge for ski events at the 1962 Winter Olympic Games in Squaw Valley, Idaho.

Survivors include his wife, Virginia; a son, Jerry, of Littleton, Colorado; a daughter, Judy, of Saigon, Vietnam; four grandchildren; a sister, Bernice Platz of Columbia, Missouri, and a brother, Ernest, of El Segundo, California.

A memorial service was conducted March 18 on the Western State campus.

Crowley selected as finalist for Giant Steps Awards

Twenty-nine finalists, including NCAA President Joseph N. Crowley, have been chosen as finalists for the National Student-Athlete Day Giant Steps Awards.

The selections were made by Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society, the National Consortium for Academics and Sports and the NCAA. The awards are given annually to individuals and organizations that exemplify ideals and that provide the support necessary for student-athletes to achieve academic and athletics excellence.

The winners will be announced on National Student-Athlete Day April 6. They will be honored November 2 at an awards banquet in Boston.

The finalists:

We must reconnect with our children

By Richard W. Riley
U.S. SECRETARY OF EDUCATION

The state of American education today is not about the latest ranking of schools or students. It is about whether American society is changing fast enough to educate and save this generation of young people and whether the quality of education has kept up with the rapid changes in the economic and social structure of our nation.

Can a nation be truly connected to its children and committed to their futures when it allows one out of every five children to grow up in poverty and often with violence? When children kill children, can we say we have listened to them with all due care?

It goes without saying there is great disconnection.

I am troubled most by the fact that we seem, as a nation, to be drifting toward a new concept of childhood that says a child can be brought into this world and allowed to fend for himself or herself. There is a disconnection so pervasive between adult America and the children of America that it seems we are all losing touch with one another.

There is a moral urgency to our coming together, a need to act, to reconnect, to make our schools the best in the world. Yes, public education has many problems. Education, like any institution in our society, can be intolerant of new thinking, bureaucratic, and reluctant to give up old habits.

But we also must recognize that public education is at ground zero of almost every social, economic and cultural tension of our times. Long before public policy is politely debated in Washington, teachers and principals already have been directly confronting violence, the breakdown of the family, ethnic and racial tension and the growing mismatch between the classroom and the job market. They are dealing up front with the education needs of new immigrants, the rise of teenage pregnancy, the abuse of drugs, alcohol and the crisis of AIDS.

Yet these teachers and principals, parents and volunteers tell me that the cause of education is not lost. They see — as I see in my travels throughout America — the resiliency, the capacity for innovation, the beginnings of a fundamental shift away from the old assembly-line version of education to something new.

Broaden the application of Title IX

The column by Jim Livengood on gender equity (The NCAA News, December 15, 1993), along with NCAA efforts to address the issue in general, suggests an opportunity to apply a totally unconventional perspective to the problem.

Why does the Title IX mandate have to be construed as pertaining strictly, and exclusively, within athletics? Why not interpret the relevant Title IX universe as all extracurriculars? In other words, if financial support opportunities are equalized between the male and female student segments across all extracurricular activities, would that not legitimately meet the statutory requirement?

□ Letter

For example, if females tend to self-select into nonathletics activities, such as fine arts, and males disproportionately choose sports, it therefore would be allowable for universities to offer a disproportionate number of athletics grants-in-aid to male students (presumably if balanced by nonathlete aid for females).

It would seem that such an interpretation would be compatible with the letter and spirit of Title IX. Successful advocacy of such a standard could be the "Holy Grail" for financially strapped athletics departments.

Why not pursue it?

Stature grows, but salaries are lagging

Chris Gobrecht, women's basketball coach
University of Washington
The Atlanta Journal

"Few things in the world of athletics have taken such jumps in stature as the sport of women's basketball has. Even in men's basketball there's never been the type of jump women's basketball has had. When the sport started taking these huge leaps in popularity and exposure, a lot of people decided to take a serious look at why these two jobs are treated so differently."

Editorial

The Atlanta Journal

"To some, paying the coaches of women's college teams salaries that match the pay of men's coaches is a simple matter of gender equity. They believe universities should provide women's sports with resources similar to those men receive.

"But the issue also concerns what college athletics have become as opposed to what they purport to be. The controversy serves as a reminder that in these amateur competitions, big money has become the driving force.

"University of Georgia coaches Andy Landers and Suzanne Yoculan are cases in point. Landers' women's basketball teams and Yoculan's women's gymnastics teams have made them two of Georgia's most successful coaches, both in terms of winning and in having athletes succeed in the classroom. You would think that would place them among the school's best paid coaches.

"It doesn't. Landers, after 14 years at Georgia, earns $58,000 a year. Yoculan makes $47,700. That compares with base salaries of $118,080 for football coach Ray Goff and $99,080 for men's basketball coach Hugh Durham. (In addition, Goff and Durham are able to boost their incomes considerably through endorsements and other options not open to Landers and Yoculan.)

"If college athletics truly were about adding to students' education by involving them in activities that make them more well-rounded, then coaches like Landers and Yoculan would be getting top dollar for excelling at their jobs.

"But college sports have become bottom-line businesses. Most cost lots of money. A few — like football and men's basketball — are revenue producers that help subsidize the rest. The men who coach those profit centers are the ones who make the most money.

"One of the side benefits of having universities confront the gender-equity question is that it forces them to decide whether big money is really what makes athletics valuable on their campus. No matter how that question is answered, the issue of fair compensation for all coaches remains.

"Responsibilities of coaching vary from university to university. But no coach should automatically be paid less because the athletes she or he coaches are women. If that is why coaches Landers and Yoculan make less than their peers, then some adjustments must be made."

Recruiting

"Any time you talk to college coaches, you'd think the first thing they'd mention is something about playing basketball. That isn't true at all.

"The first thing they mention is how your grades are."

Role models

Susan Campbell, sportswriter
Hartford Courant

"Most afternoons, Donnie Lawrence can be found playing pickup basketball at the park down the street from his Hartford home.

"He's got it bad. The 10-year-old watches Nets games any time they're on television. His uncle took him to the Boston Garden once to watch the Celtics. He stayed to get autographs. It was like being in church.

"On his bedroom wall hangs a photo of him and his hero, Rebecca Lobo, standout center for the University of Connecticut women's basketball team, taken after a February game against Seton Hall University. The all-America Lobo hung around for 35 minutes after the rest of the team left, and Donnie was one of the last people to get a picture with her.

"You could call Lobo the perfect example of a '90s woman: She has great hair, and she plays with pain — she suffered a broken nose in a tournament semifinal win and was on the court in a plastic face mask the next day. The scholar/athlete proceeded to score 17 points, pull down nine rebounds and block four shots.

"Add to the list of perfect '90s women (with apologies to the press-bummed Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding) Olympians Bonnie Blair, a five-time speed-skating medalist, and Picabo Street, a silver medalist in skiing, among others, and you have a solid group of women athletes who are becoming role models not just for little girls but for little boys, too.

"I think Rebecca has her own fan club among young girls and boys," said Barbara Kowal, senior associate director of athletics communications at Connecticut. "There are a lot of young boys. We're talking grammar school. I was talking to a friend of mine who has two boys, ages 12 and 10, and one of their prized possessions are the women's basketball trading cards."

"For Donnie's part, he's succinct in describing his love of Lobo rather than, say, his namesake on the men's basketball team — Donny Marshall.

"She's quick under the boards, and she can shoot from anywhere," he said.

"Could this be the future, where a good basketball player is just that — no matter male or female?"

Sudden deaths of athletes

Laneh Fananapazir, National Institutes of Health
The New York Times

"(The sudden death of young athletes) a lot more common than people think because so many of these asymptomatic patients go undiagnosed. I think for every one diagnosis, there is probably another athlete who has not been diagnosed. It's not a problem that can be ignored."

Jack Kramer, internist
Charlotte Hornets NBA team
The New York Times

"We're still sort of flying by the seat of our pants. The people who are clearly abnormal are easy to detect. But everybody knows that there are some folks out there at risk and we're having a problem identifying them or you wouldn't have as many who die unexpectedly."

Committee moves ahead with report on deregulation

The NCAA Legislative Review Committee has begun its deregulation and simplification of eligibility legislation and will submit its recommendations to interested groups within the membership for comment before its May 2-4 meeting.

Meeting March 14-16 in Kansas City, Missouri, the Legislative Review Committee discussed deregulation and/or simplification in the following areas within Bylaw 14: the transfer rule, hardship waiver, initial-eligibility legislation, satisfactory progress, high-school all-star games and the 20-year age rule.

The committee earlier solicited from the membership ideas and recommendations for deregulation of Bylaw 14 legislation. At its meeting, the committee reviewed recommendations it received from the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association (FARA) and committee members themselves.

The committee will put together a summary of its work in Bylaw 14 and submit the report to several membership groups, including FARA, the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, the National Association of Academic Advisors for Athletics and the Collegiate Commissioners Association compliance coordinators. The committee will request feedback from those groups in time for its May meeting.

After reviewing responses received on the proposals in May, the Legislative Review Committee will assemble its final recommendations and submit them to the NCAA Council in August.

The Legislative Review Committee is in its second phase of making NCAA legislation easier to understand and apply. Last year, the committee proposed 14 deregulation proposals focusing on Bylaw 13. Of the 14 proposals, 12 were adopted by the 1994 NCAA Convention.

Big South Conference sues school

The Big South Conference has gone to court to stop Campbell University from leaving the conference.

An attorney told The Associated Press March 17 that the conference was forced to take the step because Campbell's departure will make the conference ineligible for automatic qualification to the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The lawsuit was filed March 15 in a state court in Myrtle Beach, where the conference has its headquarters.

Campbell's departure would leave the league with only five members that have been Division I members for five consecutive years—one short of the required six members.

Editorial: The time has come to move from a negative crisis of education to a positive solution

We know what we have to do. The time has come to move from the negative crisis of education to a positive solution. As we look to reconnect our children, I want to stress four new connections that deserve our special attention:

First, the break-up of the American family and the isolation of family members from each other, even in intact families, has had a profound effect on the education of our children.

As I have said many times before, parents need to slow down their lives to help their children grow. Increasingly, we Americans seem to live in a world of fax machines, car phones and beepers — technology that is meant to speed up our lives and make us all more productive.

But in a 1993 survey on violence in schools, half the students with below-average grades reported that their parents had spent little or no time with them on school work. I wonder whether this oversight by some parents sends a subtle but powerful message to our children that they are "on their own" when it comes to their education and learning. I believe all parents, regardless of their station in life or their level of education, have the capacity and obligation to teach their children a love of learning.

To that end, I have announced a new family involvement campaign to encourage every adult — parents, grandparents, uncles, aunts and stepparents — to take a special interest in the lives of our young people, to act as mentors and tutors. But we must do more. Businesses, churches and community groups all must extend themselves even more than they do now to help families nurture their children to their full potential.

A second new connection vital to the success of American education is the reconnection with our alienated minority youth. In 1994, too many young people are giving up on America and dropping out; growing cold with fury, living lives of anger, poverty and spiritual numbness. And, too many Americans are separated from each other by the pernicious belief that children who are poor and disadvantaged do not have what it takes to reach high levels of achievement and that no amount of learning will alter this circumstance.

This is not just an African-American problem. I am deeply concerned about the high dropout rate among our Hispanic-American young people and the growing sense of disconnection that so many young people of all races feel because they have no sense that a future is possible for them.

How do we begin to alter this enormously negative dynamic in our society? Could it be that in our attempt to do good — offering pull-out programs and overlabeling students into special education classes — we have contributed in some significant way to a sense of classification and racial stereotyping that tells these young people early on that they will not make it in life, so why even try?

This fallacy that all children cannot reach their full potential because of their race, their native language, or their parents' income is an enduring impediment to the progress of American education.

No child in America of any race, color or ethnic group can succeed if he or she falls for the lie that using your mind is a sign of weakness. If our children grow up thinking that excellence is only for somebody else, they will succumb to the very prejudice, stereotype and injustice that have done so much to damage others before them.

Third, there is an absolute and vital link between reform of elementary and secondary education and ongoing reform efforts in higher education. The United States should be justly proud of its remarkable achievement of creating the finest higher education system in the world. At the same time, we are, I think, at the threshold of a new and important public dialogue on the meaning of accountability and standards for higher education.

In time, as standards take root and as expectations are raised, the reform at the elementary and secondary level will better prepare the next generation of students to do college-level work. This, in turn, will redefine how college faculty teach and what is taught, and will allow colleges to shift resources from remedial work to more challenging and engaging material earlier in the process.

Finally, education has to connect with technology. We are determined that Vice President Gore's challenge to link up every classroom in America to the Information Superhighway will become a reality for all students. I intend to do all I can to make sure that when the final deals are cut, the classroom won't be cut out, because every child must be computer-literate, and a new generation of teachers needs to learn new skills to make interactive learning a real experience.

These four powerful connections — involving parents, reaching out to our minority youth, linking the reform at the elementary and secondary level to new standards of excellence in higher education, and ensuring education gets ahead of the game with new technology — are all part of our expanding effort to connect all America's children to a world-class education for the 21st century.

I believe that the power to make these connections, to help our young people, lies in every community, with the millions of teachers and business leaders, parents, and senior citizens who understand that our children are a living report card of America and a reflection of the caring and attention of every community.

Let's make 1994 the beginning of a new era of excellence in education, and a new time of hope and promise for America's children.

Richard W. Riley is U.S. secretary of education. These remarks were made in his first "State of American Education" address February 15 at Georgetown University.

International scoring system gaining advocates in track

By Steven R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

With the exception of championships meets, the current NCAA-recommended scoring system is not an integral part of collegiate track and field.

Many coaches want that to change.

Frustrated by a continuing decline in scored regular-season track meets and by what they perceive as a decline in interest and athlete participation, a growing number of coaches advocate adopting an international scoring system they believe will renew interest in the sport.

"I think international scoring is definitely one way to get interest back in our sport," said Chick Hislop, men's track and field coach at Weber State University and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track Committee.

The theory is not new. Coaches have, for some time, discussed using such a system. Unlike past years, however, when international scoring was considered solely as an alternative to the current system, many coaches now consider it as a replacement.

"One of the reasons coaches have gone away from holding scored meets is because they don't feel the (current scoring) system is fair," Hislop said. "Very often, people have a four- or five-way meet and don't score it. We've got to get back to a system that's a little more fair, a system that will put the emphasis back on scoring."

International scoring certainly does that.

Limited scoring

Under the international scoring system, each team is limited to two scoring places per event, with the exception of relays, which limit teams to one scoring place. Thus, a team that sweeps the four top places in the 100-meter dash in a dual meet, for example, would be awarded points for first and second place; the remaining points would be awarded to the other team. Also, the number of scoring places allotted is based on the number of teams competing. In a dual meet, four scoring places, based on a 5-3-2-1 system, are allotted, while a quadrangular (four teams) provides for eight scoring places per event (9-7-6-5-4-3-2-1).

Under the current system, scoring places are based solely on finish. Thus, a team sweeping the four top places in a tri-meet, for example, would garner all awarded points; the remaining teams would not score. In addition, a dual meet limits to three the number of scoring places per event (5-3-1), while a tri-meet or quadrangular provides for only four scoring places (5-3-2-1).

"(International scoring) provides incentive," said Andy Sythe, men's and women's track and field coach at Long Beach State University. "It provides success for as many athletes as possible. Only one (athlete) can win. We want to provide success, and this (system) allows for a bit more success for more people. I think it encourages participation to stay high and provides for more exciting meets."

System in use

It's already happening. Coaches, most notably in the West, have been using the system for some time. For the past two years, many Division I coaches have been using the system almost exclusively.

"What (the international scoring system) does, and what I see it doing more of, is bringing back more tri-meets and quadrangulars," said Jim Sackett, men's and women's track and field coach at California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, and a member of the NCAA Men's and Women's Track Committee.

"Right now, coaches don't want to score a meet because it could end up 102 to 40. They have to answer to the AD when they get home. The current system wipes away the closeness of scores. That's what has driven teams away from scoring meets."

International scoring would, in all likelihood, reverse that trend. By limiting a team to two scoring places per event and guaranteeing points to teams whose individuals who enter and finish events, proponents say chances of a lopsided score are all but eliminated. The result: More teams will be inclined to score track meets.

In addition to all but eliminating lopsided results, the international system also places a greater emphasis on the team aspect of track and field.

Over the past several years, as nonscored meets have increased, many teams have focused on specialties, such as sprints or field events. By emphasizing each event, proponents say international scoring would in all likelihood force teams to focus on all events.

"(The system) puts more emphasis on trying to enter people and having people in every event," Hislop said. "Many teams have become sprint teams or distance teams. This puts emphasis on having individuals in each event. The system in and of itself tries to emphasize having a well-rounded team."

Sythe agrees. "International scoring holds teams more accountable to provide broad-based programs," he said. "It makes for more team-oriented events and also makes things a little easier to understand for the public and ADs."

That in itself, for many coaches, is reason enough to adopt the system.

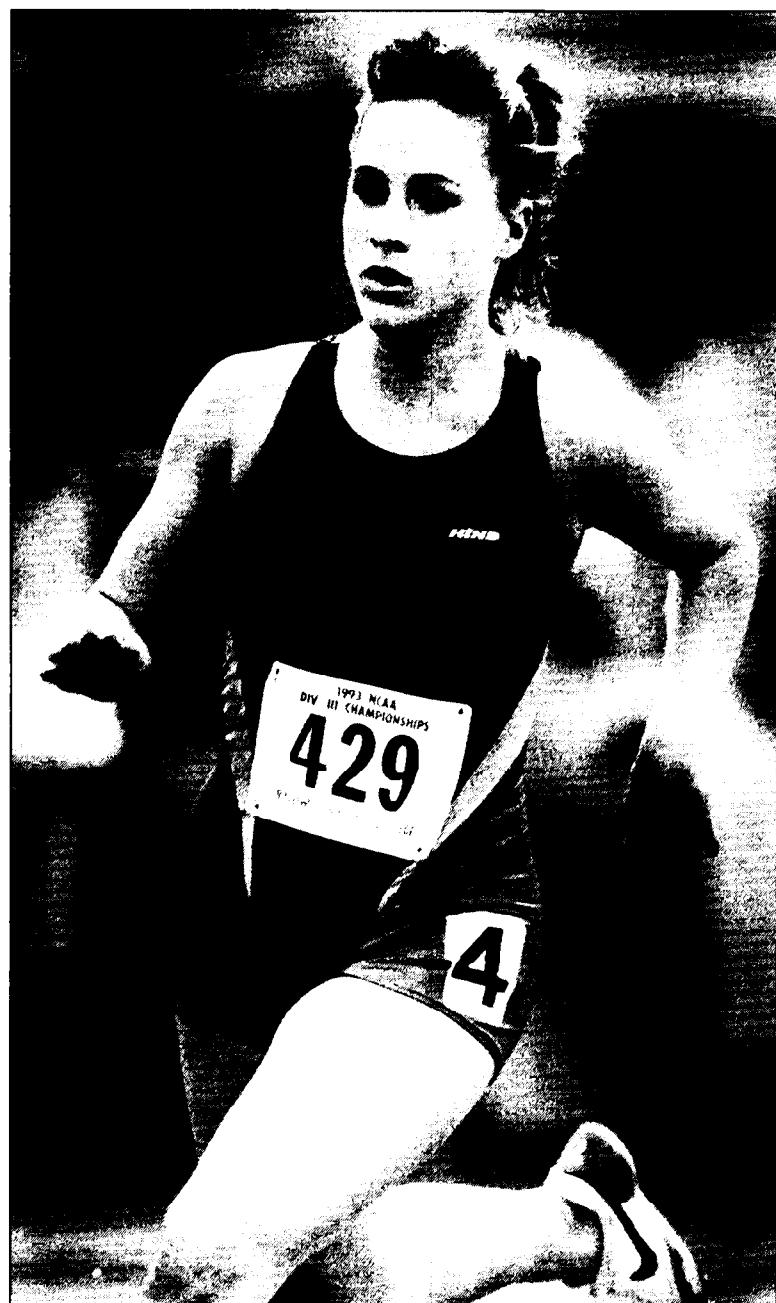

With fewer and fewer scored meets being held, coaches argue that it has become almost impossible to gain adequate media coverage.

"The first question whenever you report a meet to a newspaper is 'Was it scored?' If you say no, they will want to know less than if it was scored," Hislop said. "If more people score meets, I think it will help coverage."

Critics cite problems

The system is not without its detractors.

Critics say the scoring system does nothing more than falsify results, and that by awarding points to teams whose individuals simply enter and finish, teams will be more inclined to enter individuals who might not otherwise compete in an event (for example, sprinter in the javelin throw), simply to score points.

Under the international scoring system, each team is limited to two scoring places per event.

Critics also charge that limiting teams to two scoring places will negatively impact stronger teams. They charge that a team with four outstanding sprinters, for example, has no incentive to enter all four if only two can score.

Sackett disagrees.

"The quality kids are still going to compete," he said. "They're still going to have the opportunity to meet the qualifying standard. You're not taking away that opportunity."

"What will happen is that the kids who are not great, those kids who might otherwise not run, will get a chance to be part of the team. They'll get a chance to contribute."

The question is: When will they get that chance? No one is sure, but coaches agree that if international scoring is adopted, it must be division-wide.

"We need to standardize things as much as we can," Sythe said. "If we adopt an international scoring system, we need to do it nationally. We can't jump around. We need to unite as an association and decide on one way. That way we provide consistency and can educate the public."

Freedom Forum winners picked

Winners of the Freedom Forum-NCAA Foundation Sports Journalism Scholarships for 1994-95 have been announced.

The eight winners of the $3,000 awards were chosen from a field of 108 applicants.

This is the second year of a three-year program, for which the Freedom Forum has provided $150,000.

The winners are Czar Nicholas Bloom, Delaware State University; Jin Yong Chung and Katina Nicole Johnson, University of Texas at Austin; Jeffrey Wayne Griesch, University of Nebraska, Lincoln; Jack Martin Michaels, Ithaca College; R. Shaun Rachau, Arizona State University; Stephanie Lee Storm, Kent State University, and Brian Thomas Timpone, University of Missouri, Columbia.

Four-time champ leads Cowboys to I wrestling title

"Smith" is the most ho-hum of surnames in most circles, but not in the wrestling world. There it means champion.

First came Lee Roy (one NCAA title, current Arizona State coach). Then came John (six consecutive world titles, two NCAA titles, current Oklahoma State coach). What could brother Pat possibly do to add to that legacy?

Only what no one from his, or any other, family had done before.

■ See championships results: Page 11.

Powering his brother's Cowboys to their 30th Division I Wrestling Championships team title March 17-19 at North Carolina, Pat edged Michigan's Sean Bormet, 5-3, in the 158-pound final. With the victory, Smith became the first four-time individual champion since the event began in 1928.

Though he had known the goal was within reach for two years (he redshirted last season), the Del City, Oklahoma, native was still awed at finally having achieved it.

"Coming to this tournament, the two things I tried to do were stay focused and stay relaxed, but for some reason in the final match, I got tensed up," he said shortly after receiving a standing ovation from the 11,868 in attendance. "I didn't wrestle a great match, but I'm happy with the national championship. I'm still stunned. I really don't know how to react. I thought I would be really prepared for this, but I guess I'm not."

His coach spoke of the pressure his younger brother overcame.

"I think we ought to rename the (Dean E. Smith) Center for Pat Smith," he said. "I don't think I had anything in comparison to that (pressure) at the Olympics. It's incredible that he could keep his frame of mind."

Kerry McCoy of Penn State beat Justin Greenlee of Northern Iowa, 7-4, and won the heavyweight division of the Division I Wrestling Championships.

Chances are anyone wearing Oklahoma State colors was ecstatic. After being ruled ineligible for last year's championships because of NCAA sanctions for violations committed under another coach, the Cowboys snapped Iowa's three-year clutch on the team trophy with 94½ points to the runner-up Hawkeyes' 76½.

Two other Cowboys, Alan Fried (142 pounds) and freshman Mark Branch (167 pounds), also won individual championships. Fried, a two-time runner-up who carried a 30-0 mark into the final against 1993 runner-up Gerry Abas of Fresno State, trailed, 3-2, with 15 seconds left in the first period after Abas took him down. A Fried reversal with one second left turned the tide.

"I guess it took something like what happened at the end of the first period to get me back into it more than I was at the start," he said.

While Fried's work surprised no one, the same cannot be said about the unseeded Branch, who had gone 8-9 in the regular season but scored a major-decision, 12-2 victory over second-seeded Chad Renner of Oregon State in the first round of the championships. That built momentum that carried him to the title. Branch met another Cinderella in the finals, unseeded Laszlo Molnar of Cal State Fullerton, whom he handled, 4-2.

"I didn't find this intensity until I came to this tournament," he said. "Everything felt better. All season my intensity and motivation weren't there. It hit me this tournament."

The three champions increased the Cowboys' tournament-record total to 114. Their coach said he was proud of his team's resiliency in light of the pressure they endured in dealing with the NCAA investigation.

"This is a team that has been through a helluva lot of adversity," he said. "It was really rewarding to see a group of guys accept that rather quickly and move forward."

Fried said the problems made the team title even more sweet.

"The championship is a real source of pride; from the worst (NCAA penalties) came the best," he said.

In addition to Pat Smith, three other champions repeated — Clemson senior 118-pounder Sam Henson, who finished 37-0 on the year; Iowa sophomore Lincoln McIlravy (150 pounds), and host North Carolina's 134 pound T. J. Jaworsky, who transferred to Chapel Hill two years ago from Oklahoma State. Jaworsky defeated Oregon State's Babak Mohammadi, 12-4, in the final.

The fifth-seeded Mohammadi had advanced to the final by surprising two undefeated wrestlers, including top-seeded sophomore Cary Kolat of Penn State, who had Jaworsky's number in all three meetings this season after the Tar Heel beat him, 6-4, in last year's championship bout. Jaworsky acknowledged Mohammadi's feat by raising the runner-up's arm as his own was raised as champion.

Perhaps the tournament's biggest surprise came in the semifinals at 177 pounds, where unseeded Reese Andy of Wyoming pinned top-seeded Les Cutches of Oregon State at 1:39.

As noteworthy as the accomplishments of Henson, McIlravy and Jaworsky were in an event full of shocks, the winner of the most outstanding wrestler was no surprise. It went to the guy with his last name on the front of the building—Smith. Pat, that is.

Title, title, title: Stanford women win again in I swimming

Cardinal wins third straight championship behind the efforts of Thompson, Loveless

Stanford's Jenny Thompson and Lea Loveless combined for 111 points to lead the Cardinal to its third consecutive team title in the NCAA Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships March 17-19 in Indianapolis.

Stanford won eight fewer events than it did last year but used superior depth to outdistance runner-up Texas by 91 points and third-place Florida by 124½ points. Southern Methodist and Auburn rounded out the top five.

The title was Stanford's fourth in the last six years. Texas finished second for the third time in the same span.

Thompson won the 100-yard freestyle for the third consecutive year and added a victory in the 100-yard butterfly to her six career championships. She also anchored Stanford's winning 200- and 400-yard freestyle relay teams.

■ See championships results: Page 10.

Loveless also became a three-time winner, capturing the 100-yard backstroke during the meet's second day when Stanford scored 201 points and stretched a narrow seven-point lead to 75. Loveless also finished second in the 200-yard backstroke and the 200-yard individual medley.

Southern California freshman Kristine Quance was the meet's top scorer, winning both the 200- and 400-yard individual medleys and setting a meet record in the 200-yard breaststroke. Quance also swam on Southern California's winning 800-yard freestyle relay team and helped the Trojans finish sixth.

Florida's Nicole Haislett won her fourth consecutive 200-yard freestyle crown in becoming only the fourth swimmer to win an event four times.

Berit Puggaard of Southern Methodist won the Division I women's 200-yard butterfly in 1 minute, 57.99 seconds.

She also won the 500-yard freestyle to add to her six career wins in three different events.

Colorado State's Amy Van Dyken, named the swimmer of the year by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America, established a meet and U.S. Open record of 21.77 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle and dethroned Thompson, who was bidding for her third consecutive title.

Van Dyken, who transferred from Arizona this year, placed second behind Thompson in last year's event.

Texas swimmers won three events, including Whitney Hedgepeth in the 200-yard backstroke (an event she also won in 1992), Tobie Smith in the 1,650-yard freestyle and CSCAA diver-of-the-year Robin Carter, a winner in the three-meter event.

Other individual winners included Beata Kaszuba of Arizona State, who set a meet and U.S. Open record in the 100-yard breaststroke; Berit Puggaard of Southern Methodist, who won the 200-yard butterfly after finishing third last year; one-meter diving champion Vanessa Thelin of Brigham Young, and platform diving champion Susie Ryan of Louisiana State.

Wisconsin-River Falls wins III hockey title over in-state rival

Wisconsin-River Falls scored the first three goals of the game but had to hold on late in the third period as it defeated Wisconsin-Superior, 6-4, to win the NCAA Division III Men's Ice Hockey Championship March 19 in Superior, Wisconsin.

The Falcons turned the pain of an overtime loss to Wisconsin-Stevens Point in last year's championship game into a positive this year.

Senior forward Brandon Ferraro told the Duluth (Minnesota) News-Tribune that his team was much hungrier this year.

"The only goal we had this year, the only thing that would have satisfied us, was winning the national championship," said Ferraro, who played on teams that won only six games in both his freshman and sophomore seasons. "That (last year's championship-game loss) was the worst loss I have ever experienced."

The Falcons received power-play goals by Chris Brown and Ferraro late in the first period to take a 2-0 lead. Dan Carney then scored a break-away goal three minutes into the second period to give Wisconsin-River Falls a three-goal advantage.

Wisconsin-River Falls held a 5-2 lead until the Yellowjackets scored two third-period goals to make it 5-4. But Brian Wilson converted on a behind-the-net pass from Russ Johnson at 17:33 that gave the Falcons a 6-4 lead and the title.

"We are not a Cinderella team because we didn't sneak up on anybody," Wisconsin-River Falls coach Dean Talafous said. "Tonight we just wanted to go out and play the best 60 minutes we could. And whatever happened, we could live with it."

Wisconsin-River Falls ended its championship run with a 21-8-4 record, while Wisconsin-Superior finished 22-7-4.

Kenyon wins III men's swimming

Kenyon scored 213 points during the second day of the NCAA Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships to cruise to its 15th consecutive team title March 17-19 at Williams.

Despite winning only three individual events and two relays, Kenyon placed in the top five in 14 events to build a total of 615½ points, 226 more than runner-up UC San Diego, which finished second for the fifth time in six years. Johns Hopkins edged Denison and Hope in a tightly contested battle for third place.

Kenyon freshmen David Phillips and Pedro Monteiro won the 1,650-yard freestyle and 200-yard butterfly, respectively, to pace the Kenyon attack. Phillips beat teammates Kevin Fease, last year's winner and runner-up this year, and fourth-place finisher Chad Stedman, who won the event in 1992.

Junior John Cave was the Lords' other individual winner, capturing the 100-yard breaststroke over Trenton State's Matt Stoll, who won the 200-yard breaststroke. Cave also swam on Kenyon's winning 200- and 400-yard medley relay teams.

UC San Diego was within striking distance of Kenyon after the first day but suffered a blow during the second day when its contending 200-yard medley relay team was disqualified in the trials. Kenyon won the event, gained 40 points on the Tritons and eventually built its margin to 152½ going into the final day of competition.

The Tritons' Travis Miller was named swimmer of the meet after winning three events for the second consecutive year. His victories in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes and the 200-yard individual medley gave him a record nine career titles. He set the only record in the meet with a time of 1:48.13 in the 200-yard backstroke, .35 seconds better than his 1993 time.

Several swimmers scored repeat victories, including Louis Petto of New Paltz State, who won the 200- and 500-yard freestyles for the third consecutive year. Eric Steidinger of Johns Hopkins successfully defended his 50-yard freestyle title, and Oberlin's Michael Heithaus won his second consecutive 400-yard individual medley.

Brian Forster of Pomona-Pitzer was a double winner, sweeping the one- and three-meter diving events over Scott Wolf of Allegheny. John Flowers of UC San Diego also won two events, capturing the 100-yard butterfly and sharing the 100-yard freestyle crown with Lake Forest's Daniel Tarkowski.

Patrick O'Brien of Rensselaer placed third in the 200-yard breaststroke.

III basketball titles go to Capital, Lebanon Valley

Capital women don't let crown get away this year

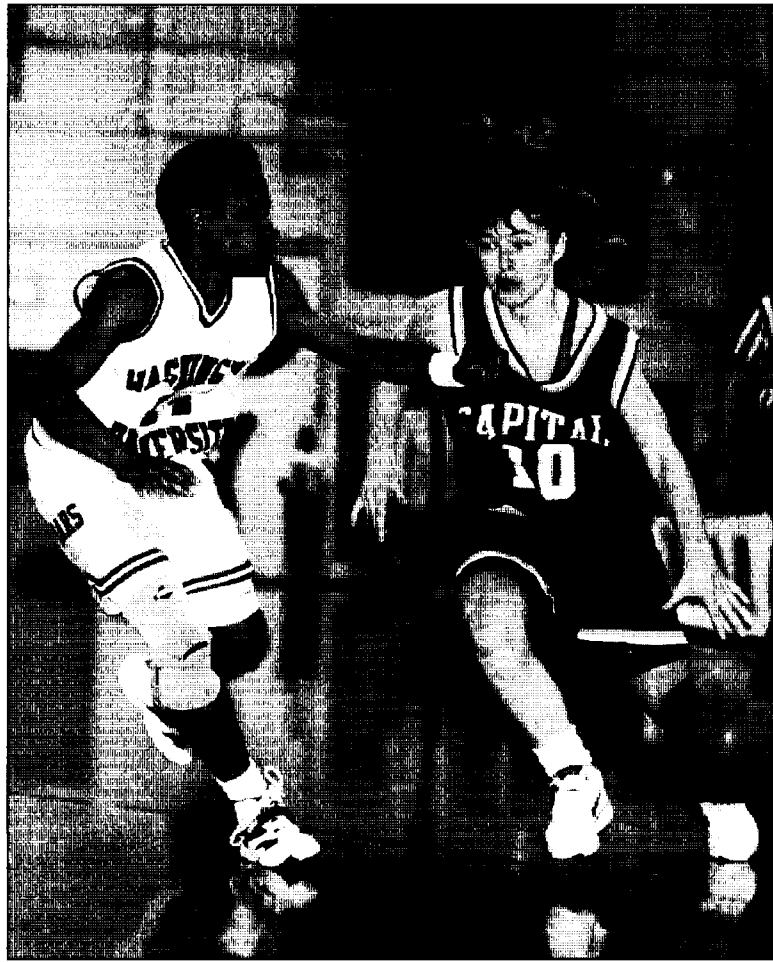

Capital, which settled for second place last year, returned to the NCAA Division III Women's Basketball Championship in 1994 and left with its first national title, defeating Washington (Missouri), 82-63, March 19 in Eau Claire, Wisconsin.

The Crusaders placed four players in double figures and broke the game open with a 17-2 run in the first half in claiming the championship. Laura Schmelzer was 10 of 12 from the field to lead Capital with 21 points. She also contributed eight rebounds. Also scoring in double figures for Capital were Kristin Long and Carmen Ellis with 14 each and Lora Vandembark with 12.

"Our kids were so doggone disappointed last year," Capital coach Dixie Jeffers said. "That's why we're back here today. That's why our dreams came true."

Eight minutes into the first half, Washington (Missouri) tied the game at 17 on a shot by Jennifer Hendricks. After a timeout, Capital outscored the Bears, 17-2, over the next seven minutes to go up, 34-19, on a basket by Kami Roeder. Washington cut the lead to 11 by half time when Stacy Leeds hit a three-pointer with 12 seconds left. Washington got no closer as Capital built a 26-point advantage in the second half.

The Bears were led by Sarah Goldman, who was nine of 17 from the field and had 23 points. Starters Carletta Taylor and Renee Foster were held scoreless.

"We didn't get any continuity on offense tonight," Washington (Missouri) coach Nancy Fahey said. "They (Capital) have very good quickness inside. If you don't win underneath the boards, you'll have a long night. We had a long night."

Capital defeated Wheaton (Massachusetts), 72-54, to gain a spot in the title game. Washington (Missouri) beat host Wisconsin-Eau

Flying Dutchmen, behind late-game heroics by Rhoades, takes men's title

Mike Rhoades scored seven of his 20 points in overtime to lead Lebanon Valley to a 66-59 victory over New York University in the title game of the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship March 19 in Buffalo, New York.

Rhoades' jumper from the right corner cut a New York University lead to two points with 3:22 left in the extra period. He converted one of two free throws to cut the margin to one. A three-pointer by teammate Steve Zeiber put Lebanon Valley up for good at 61-59. Rhoades hit four free throws in the last 19 seconds to secure the win for the Flying Dutchmen.

"He's the toughest competitor I've ever had in the program," Lebanon Valley coach Pat Flannery said of Rhoades. "He struggles sometimes because every one of our opponents stacks up against him. I've known him since he was a little kid. The biggest thing between us is respect. He'll stay with it until it's over."

Lebanon Valley, which led by three at half time, built a 10-point advantage eight minutes into the second half. The Violets answered with an 11-2 run over the next three minutes to climb back into the game. Adam Crawford's three-point jumper made the score 42-41 in favor of Lebanon Valley with slightly more than nine minutes remaining in regulation.

The Flying Dutchmen made another run to go up by five points with five minutes left in the second half, but again the Violets countered. Layups by Crawford and Jonathan Gabriel and a conventional three-point play by Danny Stevens put New York University in front, 55-53, with nine seconds left. Jason Say's tip-in with one second remaining tied the game at 55 and forced the extra period.

"It hurts us to end the season like this," Crawford said. "It's a terrible way to go out. We played one of our best halves of the year (in the second half). We went out with heart and character. We were two even teams."

Crawford led all scorers with 21 points and 12 rebounds. Rhoades grabbed 10 rebounds for the Flying Dutchmen. Rhoades and Crawford shared honors as the tournament's most outstanding players. Joining them on the all-tournament team were Gabriel, John Harper of Lebanon Valley and Matt Croci of Wittenberg.

Lebanon Valley, which ended its season with a 28-4 record, beat Wittenberg, 93-83 in overtime, to advance to the championship game. New York University defeated St. Thomas (Minnesota), 75-68, to gain a spot in the final. The Violets finished the year with a 25-5 record. Wittenberg beat St. Thomas (Minnesota) in the third-place game, 73-62.

Upset bug bites a No. 1 seed in men's tournament

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

North Carolina, which had a string of 13 consecutive Sweet 16 appearances, was the only No. 1 seed that failed to make the regional semifinals of the 56th NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

The other three top seeds—Missouri in the West region, Arkansas in the Midwest and Purdue in the Southeast—all avoided first- and second-round pitfalls. North Carolina was dispatched by No. 9 seed Boston College, 75-72, in the East.

Indiana now has appeared in three consecutive Sweet 16 fields, the longest active streak.

Undoubtedly, major upsets are the result of parity and an aggressive attitude by the lower seeds—turning both the tournament and regular-season rankings upside down.

In the USA Today/CNN weekly poll this season, six teams—Arkansas, Duke, Kansas, Kentucky, North Carolina and UCLA—held at least a temporary grip on the top spot.

Last year was the first time since 1979 that more than two No. 1 seeds reached the Final Four, and only six No. 1 seeds have won the national championship in that 15-year period.

Last weekend's Louisville-Minnesota game, won 60-55 by Denny Crum's Cardinals, was the 1,800th game played in the NCAA men's championship.

Top coaches

Four former national-championship coaches remain in the field—Indiana's Bob Knight (three titles), Louisville's Crum (two), and Michigan's Steve Fisher and Duke's Mike Krzyzewski. Kansas' Roy Williams, in his sixth year as a head coach, already has delivered five tournament appearances and two Final Four visits.

Eight remaining coaches have taken teams to the Final Four. Crum and Krzyzewski have six appearances, Knight has five, Fisher has three, Arizona's Lute Olson and Williams have two, and Syracuse's Jim Boeheim and Arkansas' Nolan Richardson have one.

Knight has won 640 career games, followed by Missouri's Norm Stewart with 639 and Crum with 546.

Marquette's Kevin O'Neill and Tulsa's Tubby Smith are the only coaches making a first appearance in the Sweet 16.

More seeding talk

Last year's Final Four teams sported the highest seeds since seeding began in 1979.

Only two teams seeded lower than eighth have reached the Final Four.

One of those teams was Louisiana State, a No. 11 seed in 1986 when it reached the Division I semifinals before losing to eventual champion Louisville, 88-77. The other was Pennsylvania, a No. 9 seed in 1979 that also lost to the eventual champion, Michigan State, 101-67.

Villanova, a No. 8 seed in 1985, remains the lowest seed to win the championship. The Wildcats beat defending titlist and No. 1-seeded Georgetown. Six No. 1 seeds have captured the national title, including last year's champion, North Carolina.

In 1993, the Final Four produced the field with the lowest-numbered (and therefore, best) combined seeds—five. Last year's group of three No. 1 seeds (North Carolina, Michigan, Kentucky), and a No. 2 (Kansas), was the highest-seeded quartet ever in the Final Four.

Seedings for all Final Four teams since 1979 appear in an accompanying table.

Since 1985, when the men's bracket expanded to 64 teams, a No. 1 seed never has lost a first-round game—meaning no No. 16 seed has yet pulled the ultimate upset.

No. 1 seeds have the best record in the tournament, 179-56 for a .762 winning percentage, followed by No. 2 seeds at 130-57 (.695) and No. 3 seeds at 91-59 (.607) (see accompanying chart). No. 6 seeds have a better winning percentage than No. 4 or No. 5 seeds. Since 1985, in first-round games, No. 9 seeds are 23-17 over No. 8 seeds.

If you disregard the opening round, in which teams do not have the opportunity to meet the highest seed, then Villanova in 1985 had the toughest route to the championship. The Wildcats had to meet five opponents after the opening round whose seeds added up to only 11 (the lower the total number of the seeds combined, the more difficult a team's journey).

Villanova faced opponents seeded 1-5-2-2-1, while North Carolina State in 1983 faced teams boasting a total of 19 in combined seeds: 3-10-1-4-1. Those two squads, along with Michigan State in 1979, were the only championship teams to face at least two No. 1 seeds en route to the title. The 1993 champion, North Carolina, faced a total of 17 in combined seeds: 8-4-2-2-1.

Major upsets

Major upsets are defined as involving teams separated by at least five places in the seedings (such as No. 11 beating No. 6 or No. 7 over No. 2), because that means the two teams were at least 16 places apart in the rankings used for regional seeding.

The lowest seed remaining is No. 12 seed Tulsa. Tulsa is the eighth No. 12 seed to make it to the Sweet 16. The others were George Washington in 1993, New Mexico State in 1992, Eastern Michigan in 1991, Ball State in 1990, Wyoming in 1987, DePaul in 1986 and Kentucky in 1985. No 12th seed or lower has advanced beyond the Sweet 16.

Top seeds hanging tough, all reach women's Sweet 16

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

All four No. 1 seeds advanced to the Sweet 16 of the 13th NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship relatively easily, and five former titlists also moved forward.

Tennessee, winner of three national championships, and two-time winners Louisiana Tech, Southern California and Stanford all have made it to the regional-semifinal round. Interestingly, all of the No. 2 seeds also survived—Southern California, Stanford, Texas Tech and Vanderbilt.

Tennessee, the No. 1 team in the regular-season polls, had the closest game of any of the No. 1 seeds—a 78-66 victory over Clemson in the second round. The other No. 1 seeds had no game closer than 17 points.

Nine of the remaining teams also were in last year's Sweet 16, while four are first-time entrants in the regional semifinals—Alabama (No. 6 seed), Seton Hall (No. 4), Southern Mississippi (No. 4) and Texas A&M (No. 13) and the lowest seed still in).

Fourteen home teams in the 16 second-round games advanced. The exceptions were Texas A&M's 75-72 overtime win at San Diego State and Alabama's 84-78 victory at Iowa.

Fifty-eight different teams have made the Sweet 16 in the history of the women's championship.

Tennessee is the only team to make it every year, while Louisiana Tech has been in 11, Southern California 10, and Auburn, Long Beach State and Mississippi nine each. The nine teams returning from the 1993 field are Colorado, Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Southern California, Stanford, Tennessee, Texas Tech, Vanderbilt and Virginia.

Of course, getting to the Sweet 16 does not necessarily mean a trip to the Women's Final Four.

Only 20 schools have made it to the Women's Final Four out of 126 institutions that have appeared in the championship from 1982 through 1993.

Here is a list of most Sweet 16 appearances through the second round of the 1994 tournament:

Major upsets

A major upset is defined as a difference of at least five places in seeding (such as No. 11 over No. 6 or No. 7 over No. 2). Here is a list of 1994 upsets thus far:

Top seeds

In the course of the 12 previous NCAA Division I women's tournaments, top-seeded teams have dominated the field. Since seeding began in 1982, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won every Division I championship.

Last year, Texas Tech continued the trend as a No. 2 seed. The 1993 Final Four also had two No. 1 seeds (Ohio State and Vanderbilt) and another No. 2 (Iowa). Tennessee in 1987 and Louisiana Tech in 1988 join Texas Tech as the No. 2 seeds crowned champions.

Through the second round of this year's tournament, the Big East Conference and Big Ten Conference still have three teams in the Sweet 16 field. The Atlantic Coast, Big Eight and Southeastern Conferences have two each and the Great Midwest, Metropolitan, Missouri Valley and Pacific-10 all have one team remaining.

Game sites

The East Regional at Miami Arena will be the first NCAA play-off game in Miami, and the first regional action in Florida. The other three regional sites all have hosted tournament games before.

In fact, Reunion Arena in Dallas and the LA Sports Arena in Los Angeles each have hosted an NCAA Final Four. Reunion Arena hosted the 1986 championship, and Tennessee and Louisiana Tech have dominated the seeding process since 1982, garnering No. 1 seeds eight and seven times, respectively. In fact, Pat Summitt's top-rated Lady Vols have received seven consecutive No. 1 seeds. Texas and Southern California have had four No. 1 seeds, and Auburn, Long Beach State, Old Dominion, Stanford and Virginia all have received three.

Following is the history of No. 1 seeds in the tournament:

Conference success

The Southeastern Conference still has three teams in the field and leads in overall Sweet 16 appearances with 49, including 13 by Tennessee. Conferences with two teams still alive include the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten, Pacific-10 and Southwest Conferences.

The Big Eight, Metropolitan and Sun Belt Conferences all have one team remaining.

The Southeastern Conference since 1982 never has failed to place at least four teams in the women's tournament, and overall has dominated with 73 teams. The Atlantic Coast Conference is next with 49 teams, followed by the Big Ten Conference with 39, Atlantic 10 and Pacific-10 Conferences with 30 each, Big Eight Conference with 28, and Southwest Conference with 27.

Trends

With 48 games already played in the new 64-team format, the women's trends at this stage can be favorably compared to the 47-game, full-tournament trends of the past five years.

So far this year, three-point field-goal attempts (25.46) per-game, both teams combined, is well ahead of the all-time mark of 23.11, set in 1992. Three-point field goals made (8.27) also is ahead of the record of 7.7, also in 1992, and the three-pointer percentage of 32.49 is a small improvement over last year but still under the tournament average since 1988.

Overall field-goal percentage is at 42.87, which would be the lowest in tournament history. Free-throw shooting, up at 70.52 percent, appears on track for an all-time record.

Scoring per game (both teams) is at 143.85, which is well below the all-time record of 149.97 in 1988 but ahead of last year's 139.94. Rebounds per game (both teams) is at 83.4, which would be the second-best mark in tourney history, behind 86.03 in 1985.

Winning streaks

Some of the top winning streaks going in women's basketball still are on the line. Louisiana Tech is the leader with a 23-game streak, followed by Connecticut's 21, Tennessee's 18 and Stanford's 14.

In home-court winning streaks, Tennessee goes into next year with the longest at 49 games, followed by Virginia at 41, Montana 32, Hawaii 29, Southwest Missouri State 28, Colorado 27, Texas Tech 21 and Connecticut 19.

None of those leaders will play at a home site for the remainder of the tournament.

First-timers win

Since 1983, 38 teams have won first- or opening-round games in their first appearance in the tournament. (The 1982 tournament isn't included because all participants were making their first appearance.)

In 1994, only three of the 19 first-time tournament teams survived the first round (see accompanying table). Minnesota, Seton Hall and Texas A&M were the only first-timers to win, and only Minnesota was able to win on the road.

Both Texas A&M and Seton Hall went on to win second-round matchups and advance to the Sweet 16 for the first time. Connecticut in 1991 remains the only squad that advanced to the Women's Final Four in its first appearance in the Sweet 16.

Top seeds

The 1992 tournament marked a rare departure from the trend of top seeds advancing to the Women's Final Four. No. 4 Western Kentucky and No. 8 Southwest Missouri State broke up a five-year string where the seeds in the Women's Final Four (numbers added together) totaled only seven or less.

In 1992, Virginia and Stanford were both No. 1 seeds, yielding a seeds total of 14, the all-time high. Southwest Missouri State also became the first team to have to beat four opponents to reach the select group.

The 1989 Women's Final Four quartet of Auburn, Louisiana Tech, Maryland and Tennessee had the lowest total of seeds at four (all were No. 1 seeds).

Team facts

Twenty-win seasons used to be an indicator of a team bound for the NCAA tournament, but times have changed. In fact, 71 women's teams finished the regular season with at least 20 victories in 1994, but only 48 made the women's 64-team field.

That means 23 teams with 20 victories did not make the bracket. A combination of factors probably is at work. More parity among teams, of course, is one. And the 32 automatic conference qualifiers in the women's bracket allows more teams without 20 wins into the tournament by winning a league's post-season tournament.

Women/men

Only Connecticut and Purdue have both women's and men's teams in both the men's and women's Sweet 16 fields.

In the driver's seat

Lebanon Valley College's Mike Rhoades drives to the basket during the NCAA Division III Men's Basketball Championship March 19 in Buffalo, New York. And it was a good thing he did. The Flying Dutchmen got 20 points — including seven in overtime — from Rhoades to help overcome New York University, 66-59, in the title game. Lebanon Valley finished the season 28-4. See championship story, page 9.

Student-athletes discuss playoff

the meeting were Derrick Brooks, Florida State University; Marc Burkholder, University of Michigan; Lake Dawson, University of Notre Dame; Todd Duncan, Marshall University; Larry Jones, University of Miami (Florida); Mike Malinoski, Pennsylvania State University; Stephen Miller, University of Tennessee, Knoxville; Craig Novitsky, University of California, Los Angeles; Mike Roan, University of Wisconsin, Madison; Tobie Sheils, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; Dan White, University of Arizona, and Rob Zatechka, University of Nebraska, Lincoln.

Dempsey characterized the meeting as productive.

"Their insight was extremely helpful," he said, noting that the student-athletes shared a variety of opinions and experiences with the working group.

This was the final meeting for the group, which has held sessions with other interested parties, including coaches, athletics directors, bowl commissioners and television networks. Besides Dempsey, members of the group are University of Oklahoma athletics director Donnie Duncan; NCAA Deputy Executive Director Thomas W. Jernstedt, and UCLA Chancellor Charles E. Young, chair.

The group will report its findings to the NCAA Special Committee to Study a Division I-A Football Championship, which is expected to be named soon. That committee will analyze the findings of the research group and make recommendations to the NCAA Council regarding whether a Division I-A football championship should be held, and if so, under what conditions.

The committee may formulate legislation establishing a championship, which would be considered by the NCAA membership at the annual Convention in January 1995.

The NCAA Joint Policy Board, during a March 22 conference call, agreed that two student-athletes will serve on that special committee.

1994 Column No. 12

NCAA Bylaws 16.12.1.5 and 16.12.1.6 Retention of athletics apparel and equipment

Institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.12.1.5, a student-athlete may retain athletics apparel items (not equipment) at the end of the individual's collegiate participation. Used equipment may be purchased by the student-athlete on the same cost basis as by any other individual interested in purchasing such equipment.

During its October 21, 1993, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that the requirement that used equipment may be purchased by a student-athlete on the same cost basis as any other individual interested in purchasing such equipment does not preclude an institution from initially offering its student-athletes the opportunity to purchase the equipment at the fair market value. Under such circumstances, it is not permissible to provide such equipment to a student-athlete free of charge, even if the institution receives such equipment at no cost.

Please note that during its October 23, 1986, telephone conference, the NCAA Administrative Committee determined that apparel items that are not reusable by other team members in subsequent seasons (subject to the discretion of the institution) may be considered the property of the involved student-athlete and, thus, could be retained prior to the end of the student-athlete's collegiate participation.

In addition, in accordance with Bylaw 16.12.1.6, a student-athlete may retain and use institutional athletics equipment (per the institution's normal equipment policy) during a summer vacation period. A student-athlete would not be charged with a season of competition per Bylaw 14.02.6 for the use of such equipment during a summer vacation period. Summer is defined as the period following the last date of final examinations for the spring term through the first permissible day of preseason practice or first date of classes, whichever occurs earlier.

Further, during its March 11, 1993, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a student-athlete who is provided athletics apparel by the institution at the end of the playing season (because such apparel no longer will be used by the institution) may wear such apparel in outside competition during the academic year without using a season of competition (or contest/date of competition).

Finally, a student-athlete who purchases apparel or equipment items that include institutional identification may use such items in outside competition during the academic year without using a season of competition (or contest/date of competition).

Tuition waivers and state reciprocity statutes Bylaw 15.02.3.1

Institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 15.02.3.1(a), tuition waivers administered by the institution for student-athletes would constitute institutional financial aid and must be included in applying any of the Bylaw 15 limitations on financial aid. In accordance with Bylaws 15.02.3.1 and 15.5.3.5 (calculation of equivalencies), a member institution that waives the out-of-state tuition and fees for nonresident student-athletes must include the value of the tuition waiver in the numerator and denominator when calculating the student-athlete's equivalency value.

In this regard, during its June 7, 1990, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee reviewed a situation in which a waiver of tuition and fees for student-athletes is made available contingent upon the individual's receipt of a minimum level (e.g., $100) of scholarship assistance from the member institution. The committee concluded that under these circumstances, such a waiver must be included when calculating the equivalency value of the student-athlete's grant-in-aid. Specifically, the amount of the waiver credited to each nonresident student's account must be included in both the numerator and denominator of the institution's equivalency calculations for that student. In addition, the committee reviewed state reciprocity statutes (i.e., an agreement between two states to waive the out-of-state tuition and fee rate for nonresident student-athletes) and determined that it would not be necessary to count such a waiver in the calculation of equivalency awards, inasmuch as the tuition waiver is mandated by state law and is not contingent upon any conditions subject to the control of the institution.

The following examples demonstrate the differences in calculating equivalencies based on a tuition waiver vs. a state reciprocity statute:

Situation I—Tuition waiver

Sue, an out-of-state resident, participates in soccer at University of X. University of X allows student-athletes who live outside the state to waive the nonresident tuition and fees, and pay the same amount for tuition and fees as in-state students. Costs per academic year at University of X are:

Tuition and fees for in-state residents.....	$5,000
Tuition and fees for out-of-state residents.....	$10,000
Room and board.....	$4,800
Required course-related books.....	$200

Sue lives on campus and receives athletically related financial aid that covers the full cost of room and board, and required course-related books.

Calculating Sue's equivalency:

Total amount of institutional financial aid that student-athlete receives
Value of full grant-in-aid for that student-athlete

$$\frac{$4,800 \text{ (room and board)} + $5,000 \text{ (tuition waiver)} + $200 \text{ (books)}}{$4,800 \text{ (room and board)} + $10,000 \text{ (out-of-state tuition and fees)} + $200 \text{ (books)}}$$

$$\text{Sue's equivalency: } \frac{$10,000}{$15,000} = .6666 \text{ or } .67$$

Situation II—State reciprocity statute

If an applicable state reciprocity statute permits Sue to pay the same educational expenses as in-state students, her equivalency would be calculated as:

Total amount of institutional financial aid that student-athlete receives
Value of a full grant-in-aid for that student-athlete

$$\frac{$4,800 \text{ (value of room and board)} + $200 \text{ (books)}}{$4,800 \text{ (room and board)} + $5,000 \text{ (in-state tuition and fees)} + $200 \text{ (books)}}$$

$$\text{Sue's equivalency: } \frac{$5,000}{$10,000} = .50$$

Reformatted legislation

The NCAA Legislative Review Committee has reformatted two areas of legislation that will appear in the 1994-95 NCAA Manual, which is scheduled to be mailed to the membership in late March.

Legislation regarding telephone calls to prospective student-athletes (Bylaw 13) and satisfactory-progress legislation (Bylaw 14) has been reformatted in an effort by the committee to group topics together in a more cohesive and understandable manner.

Although the material is organized differently, no revisions other than those necessary by action at the 1994 NCAA Convention were made to existing legislation. The content of each regulation is exactly as it appeared in the 1993-94 Manual, with the exception of rules adopted or revised at January's Convention. The wording in some headings was changed in order that it be more descriptive of the content.

Following are outlines for sections of Bylaws 13 and 14 that have been reformatted by the Legislative Review Committee:

13.1.3 — Telephone Calls to Prospects

13.1.3.1 Time Period for Telephone Calls—Divisions I and II Football.

13.1.3.2 Time Period for Telephone Calls—Divisions I and II Sports Other Than Football.
