When it comes to difficult schedules, quarterback Danny Kanell and Florida State University have one of the nation's toughest. The Seminoles rank third behind the University of Michigan and the University of Oklahoma for having the toughest Division I-A schedule. See story, page 10.

Division II group focuses on CEO control, more federation

The Division II Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure has focused on the concepts of presidential control and increased federation in its effort to determine a structure that works best for that division and for the Association in general.

The discussion at the task force's first meeting, which was conducted November 1 in Kansas City, Missouri, was preliminary and does not represent final recommendations.

In its review of structure and governance, the task force discussed a structure in which policy boards composed of institutional chief executive officers would have decision-making authority over NCAA affairs in each of the divisions. Such policy boards would be responsible for ratifying recommendations from operating groups responsible for the Association's day-to-day business in each division. The operating groups would consist of conference and institutional administrators, but would not include CEOs.

Regarding increased federation, the task force supported the concept of division-specific voting but also identified a need for an executive body to oversee all of the divisions of the Association. Such an executive body might contain, for example, the CEO representatives of each of the policy boards, plus the NCAA executive director.

The task force also discussed the need for the NCAA executive director to focus on all divisions of the Association, although increased federation could make it necessary to assign staff liaisons for each of the divisions.

On financial and revenue matters, the task force considered principles that might best accommodate Division II needs. Specifically, it addressed the concept of a constitutionally protected budget, in which a percentage of the Association's budget would be directed to Division II. Further, the task force noted

II vice-president candidate chosen

Lynn L. Dorn, director of women's athletics and senior woman administrator at North Dakota State University, has been selected by the NCAA Nominating Committee as its candidate for Division II vice-president.

If elected at the January 1995 NCAA Convention in San Diego, Dorn would serve in the vice-presidency through 1996. She would succeed Charles N. Lindemann of Humboldt State University.

Dorn has been at North Dakota State for 17 years.

Dorn

She is a 1972 graduate of Bemidji State University and holds a master's degree in physical education from the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities.

A member of the NCAA Council, Dorn also serves on the NCAA Interpretations, Women's Basketball Rules and Division II Women's Volleyball Committees. She is a former member of the Nominating Committee.

She also currently is serving a second term as a member of the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators board of directors.

The Division II office is the only vice-presidency for which an election is scheduled at the 1995

Rainbow Coalition develops diversity plan for institutions

The National Rainbow Coalition, after studying the results of a four-year NCAA study on racial demographics of member institutions that was released in August, announced plans November 1 to address a shortage of minority representation in intercollegiate athletics administration.

The Rainbow Commission for Fairness in Athletics (RCFA), which operates under the National Rainbow Coalition, said it immediately will begin a process of rating NCAA Division I institutions on a variety of levels, including the number of black student-athletes on campus, graduation rates, and the number of black coaches and administrators in athletics.

The commission drafted a seven-point diversity and affirmative action plan for NCAA member institutions. In it, the commission stressed the inclusion of minorities in every aspect of intercollegiate athletics administration. In addition, the RCFA will develop a ratings process that will yield a "fairness index" that the minority community can use to gauge the level of minority acceptance at NCAA institutions.

According to the commission, the U.S. Education, Justice and Labor Departments have been provided with race demographics compiled by the RCFA, as have the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

"It is time for a change," the Rev.

Jesse L. Jackson, who founded the National Rainbow Coalition, said in a statement. "Affirmative action must be put into play at NCAA institutions. Blacks must be able to develop and prosper beyond the playing field.

"This 'fairness index' will give our black children and our community a basis on which to judge how individual institutions are treating us," he said. "We need to stay clear of those institutions that are bastions of racism."

The NCAA study, conducted by the Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee, found that the percentage of black athletics administrators in Division I increased just one-tenth of a percentage point to 8.7 percent from 1992-93 to 1993-94. The percentage of black athletics administrators is up just three-tenths of one percent since 1990-91.

"We welcome the Rainbow Coalition in joining the efforts of

Restructuring

Division II group discusses CEO control, more federation

All three task forces responsible for examining the Association's membership structure have met once, and the second set of discussions will begin November 28 when the Division II Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure gathers in Dallas.

The Division II task force met for the first time November 1 and considered a structure in which policy boards composed of institutional chief executive officers would have decision-making authority over NCAA affairs in each of the divisions. Such policy boards would be responsible for ratifying recommendations from operating groups responsible for the Association's day-to-day business in each division. The operating groups would consist of conference and institutional administrators, but would not include CEOs.

The task force also discussed increased federation among the divisions and supported the concept of division-specific voting, although it also identified a need for an executive body to oversee all of the divisions.

The Divisions II and III task forces will conduct a joint session November 28 in Dallas, and the Division III group will meet by itself November 29. The next meeting of the Division I task force will be November 30 in Chicago.

The oversight committee of the Special Committee to Review NCAA Membership Structure will meet for the first time December 13 via a telephone conference. It will hear reports from each of the division task forces at that time.

Convention

Official Notice to be mailed November 15

The Official Notice of the Convention will be mailed to the membership November 15. The delegate-appointment form will be sent to each member institution's chief executive officer along with his or her copy of the Official Notice.

Delegates attending the 1995 Convention in San Diego are requested to pick up their voting units at the Convention site as early as possible and no later than Sunday, January 8.

If voting equipment is picked up early, the Convention staff will be able to test and replace defective units in a more orderly manner. If delegates wait until Monday, time pressures resulting from the division business sessions could cause a problem.

A flat registration fee of $100 per person will be charged at the Convention. The only exception will be for individuals representing commercial enterprises, in which case a $200 fee will be assessed.

The registration fee covers delegate entertainment costs, such as the delegates reception, luncheons and the honors dinner.

The dates of the Convention are January 7-11, 1995.

Graduation rates

Federal guidelines not set; reporting method unchanged

Legislative summary

How likely is it that NCAA Council-sponsored legislation will pass at an annual Convention?

Over the last 20 years, 82.1 percent of the legislative proposals sponsored by the Council have been approved. The highest percentage of Council proposals approved was in 1990, 92.6 percent (75 of 81). The lowest, and the lowest by far, was in 1976 when 43.2 percent were approved. The next lowest percentage was 1985 at 73.3 percent.

As for non-Council-sponsored legislation, the strongest showing over the last 20 years was at the 1994 event, when 70.5 percent passed. The lowest percentage (15.3) again was in 1976, which obviously is the 20-year standard for the lowest overall approval percentage (24.1).

■ Briefly in the News

No midnight madness here

George Mason University men's basketball coach Paul Westhead did not chew his fingernails in heightened expectation for the official start of the college basketball season October 15. While most teams opened the season with one form or another of "midnight madness," Westhead's team opened with a week-long "field trip."

Westhead's team did not hold its first full-scale practice until nearly one week after teams could begin practicing. He believes the preseason period is too long.

"We plan to try to do a lot of things that are going to be fun for the players," Westhead told The Associated Press. "Six weeks is way too long. The only thing you wind up accomplishing in that much time without playing any games is that the players really start to hate each other."

The Patriots began their workouts wearing different gear than for a normal practice. Westhead planned to remain in the background, possibly sitting in the stands, while the players were grouped to compete with one another in three-on-three pickup games, free-throw shooting contests and even nonbasketball-type activities.

One drill called for the team to be split into offensive and defensive players; then, one group ran football pass patterns and the other acted as a defensive secondary as one of the coaches threw passes.

Westhead said he got that idea from University of Southern California football coach John Robinson several years ago.

"I went to him because I had a problem on defense," he said. "Because of the way our style of play spreads out the floor, my players had to learn how to play defense with their backs to the ball, which is something football players do all the time but is completely alien to the game of basketball."

TDs for CDs

After the University of Florida thumped the University of Kentucky September 10 by a score of 73-7, there weren't too many Wildcat fans cheering. But a few managed to find a bright side.

The Salyersville National Bank is sponsoring Wildcat Touchdown certificates of deposits during the football season. The bank reported investments totaling

Making a difference

Kevin McCleave, a 6-foot-2 freshman wide receiver on the Montclair State College football team, is tough on the football field but a gentle giant at the Child Care Center on the Montclair State campus. McCleave, who moved from foster home to foster home while a youth, credits the positive influence of the Newark (New Jersey) Boys Club with saving his life. He now devotes much of his spare time to helping children and feeding the homeless. A sociology major, McCleave spends two days a week at the Child Care Center.

$460,000 in the CDs during the first two weeks of the season. The bank said about 40 percent of that money was from new customers and the balance came from savings accounts or expiring CDs.

When Kentucky scores a touchdown, the percentage of interest paid on the CDs increases by .01 percent.

Other Kentucky football accomplishments help investors. When the team wins a home game, the rate increases .05. An away victory increases the yield by .10. If Kentucky had qualified for a bowl bid this year, the rate would have increased by .10 and a bowl victory would have netted a .15 increase. A national football championship isn't going to happen, but if it had, the CD yield would have jumped a full percentage point.

"We are very pleased," said Tim W. Weddington, president of Salyersville National Bank. "You can't lose principal or interest. Your rate can only go up."

The bank plans to offer similar CD interest-rate incentives for the 1994-95 Kentucky men's basketball season and the 1995 Kentucky football season.

Isn't that grand?

The University of Northern Colorado's goal was to join the American Volleyball Coaches Association's "One Grand Fan Club" when it faced Metropolitan State College of Denver October 11.

The Bears not only drew the minimum 1,000 fans needed to gain membership in the club, they set a school attendance mark for a women's volleyball match. The previous record of 802 was improved by more than 500 people when 1,368 fans attended the match.

In conjunction with the match, there was a $1,000 cash giveaway. David Royce, a student at Northern Colorado, held the winning ticket and joined a "One Grand Club" of his own.

■ Looking back

5 years ago: A continuing trend toward greater federation in the Association's legislation is reflected in proposed legislation for the 1990 Convention, where a record 44 percent of 130 proposals submitted will be dealt with in division and subdivision business sessions instead of the general business session. (The NCAA News, November 13, 1989)

10 years ago: The NCAA Presidents Commission and Council agree to cosponsor a resolution at the 1985 Convention directing a study of possible alternative modifications to the initial-eligibility requirements of Proposition 48. Included in the proposed study is consideration of a formula that would combine the required core-curriculum grade-point average and standardized-test score. (The NCAA News, November 12, 1984)

20 years ago: The first Division III Men's Soccer Championship final, hosted November 30, 1974, by Wheaton College (Illinois), is won by State University College at Brockport. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports" and National Collegiate Championships records book)

25 years ago: The first National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship, held November 28-29, 1969, at Long Beach State University, is won by the University of California, Los Angeles. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports" and National Collegiate Championships records book)

Grad-rates data reporting remains same

The United States Department of Education has not yet published final guidelines for the Student Right-to-Know Act, so the NCAA will proceed with reporting graduation rates as it has in the past.

The 1994 Division I Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form (94-6a) will be distributed to Division I members by December 1, while the Divisions II and III Enrollment and Persistence-Rate Disclosure Form will go to Divisions II and III institutions by January 15.

For Division I, data will be collected for the freshman class of 1988-89. For Divisions II and III, a third year will be added to the persistence reports, which now will contain data from the 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94 freshmen classes.

For the second consecutive year, the forms will be unchanged from those of the previous year.

The reporting timetable for 1994-95 is included in the accompanying box.

On the relaxation of our standards

By C. W. Tong
POMONA-PITZER COLLEGES

Recent years have unveiled some interesting trends at institutions of higher learning across America, including those with which I am most familiar in Division III.

Some of these trends, such as relaxed admissions standards at many institutions, have been created by economic hardship, often in answer to the need to fill beds and avoid layoffs. Others have been in answer to the population of college-aged young people.

Tong

Today the general practice of relaxed standards in the American workplace is rampant and probably will continue to be such until exasperation with substandard products results in a rebellion of attitudes. The U.S. auto manufacturers have been dealt a crippling blow in this regard as American buying practices have leaned toward the higher-quality foreign autos.

Several Los Angeles high schools presently are weighing the option of doing away with homework, purportedly to allow students time away from the classroom to seek other pursuits. The fact is that few students are doing the homework anyway, and administrative justification for the nonassignment of homework is a far simpler solution than dealing with the recalcitrant students or parents.

Laxity in our laws and in the interpretation of laws almost endorses criminal behavior in many of the country's cities and towns. The use of praise as a desperate means of motivating young people has been carried to such extremes that, at times, some students steadfastly believe that poor performance is acceptable. And almost all of our colleges and universities have fallen into the trap of grade inflation. The plethora of magna cum laude recipients, in many instances, has so cheapened the honor that ways are sought to single out those who achieve beyond that level.

In my own freshman writing class last year, I became bewildered at the insistence by many students that their average work was truly exceptional. "C" grades have become rare at most institutions where faculty often fall into collusion with students seeking high

The 1959 view on initial eligibility

A presentation by Rixford K. Snyder of Stanford University at the faculty representatives roundtable of the NCAA Convention, January 7, 1959:

I think it is true of all admission offices and officers throughout the United States, that the highest correlation of any single admission criterion exists between the high-school grades and the college grades. If a candidate has done outstandingly well in high school, the chances are he is going to do well also in college.

This means that if you have only one admission criterion and are in a position to get only one, the high-school record, either in terms of the grade-point average or of the rank in class, is still the best single factor on which to make selections, and it has the highest prediction reliability.

The second most valid criterion for selection is the Scholastic Aptitude Test of the College Board and particularly the verbal or English section of it. All studies indicate that the second highest correlation exists between these scores and the college record.

But the two weighted together, that is, the high-school record and the Scholastic Aptitude Test, are a better prediction factor or criterion than either of them standing alone. In short, one strengthens the other.

If you have the high-school record and if you have the College Board score, and you have the proper formula to use, you probably can work out a pretty accurate prediction of the grade-point average that candidate ought to make in a freshman year in college....

I think I should call (to) your attention that there is a general tightening up of subject-pattern requirement in admission in colleges throughout the United States. More and more colleges are turning to and requiring that their candidates have more of the 15 Carnegie units in traditionally college-preparatory subjects. This is one trend.

A second trend is there is a general enrichment going on in the material covered in high school, and this is reflected by the fact that increasingly algebra, foreign language and science are being taught in the eighth grade in grammar school, with the thought in mind that high-school seniors will go further in science, further in foreign language and further in mathematics than they perhaps have been doing in the past, getting into calculus, for example, in mathematics, and getting far into the foreign language in terms of both grammar and speaking and reading ability, and getting at least three years of science instead of one or two in the senior high-school years.

Well, what is the effect of this going to be on the recruitment of student-athletes by colleges with changing entrance requirements? The first thing I think, and this is controversial and my opinion only, is that as the subject-pattern requirements become more widespread and demanding, students in high school will have less time for extracurricular activities, and inevitably varsity athletics must be included in extracurricular activities in high school. The student-athlete also will be caught between the requirements for college and the demands of extensive and intensive practice in order to become a so-called "blue-chip" athlete.

Now, if he takes more Mickey Mouse courses, which is what we refer to as the courses which are relatively easy to take and which will enable him to get good grades so he can get into college, he won't qualify for the college of his choice. If he spends too much time on his studies, he won't be so attractive to the college whose teams always must rank in the top 10 in the nation, and so he may find himself between two fires, on the horns of a dilemma, and any other simile to which he can refer.

Secondly, and secondary outgrowth only of this, in my opinion, may be reflected in schedule-making. I think there will be increased talk and concern about entrance requirements as a consideration in scheduling opponents. This is already apparent, I think, on the two coasts of our country, and I think this is going to increase rather than decrease. Those colleges with selective and with qualitative admissions, and ... I think their number will be increasing, will become more reluctant to schedule colleges with high-school graduation only as the entrance requirement, and I think this is going to have an effect on intercollegiate athletics in the next five or 10 years.

I think there may come a time when financial aid to student-athletes will be frowned upon if it is financial aid for athletics ability only. The age of rockets and of satellites will not accept the free ride for an athlete of limited academic potential while the physicist with only moderate physical prowess goes unaided financially. Even worse, of course, if this is done, will be the problem of academic competition among the two groups after they are admitted to college with the same student body containing both and the growing feeling of concern not only amongst the faculty, but amongst the students themselves, that they really have a double-standard student body.

College football has a better feel in '94

Steven J. Hatchell, commissioner Southwest Conference
Houston Chronicle

"There's just a feel that's better. There is a better mood, a feel, around the country about college football. I don't think it was down as much the past few years as other people, but you hear more conversations about games and about teams. It's been a great season."

David Downs, senior vice-president ABC
Houston Chronicle

"It can't hurt a sport like college football to be getting greater exposure. When you expose somebody to what is fundamentally a good product or service or good entertainment, you'd like to think they will come back for more."

"I don't think it will radically alter the popularity of college football. That's pretty stable. But the fact is it's been such a good season. And although the door has been opened by the baseball strike, it's possible some people came in. I'm hoping to combine great exposure and events on the field to make new fans of people who were on the fence."

Sports journalism

Donna Lopiano, executive director
Women's Sports Foundation
Minneapolis Star-Tribune

"I think the discrepancy in coverage of men's and women's sports reflects discrimination in the area of sports journalism. There's a 95 percent basically white male sports journalist population, one that has been taught to devalue women's sports or not value it as much as men's sports. Research shows that what gets in our sport pages is not based on how many people go to a game or how much money is raised by a particular sport but simply the interest of the sports editor. So we're building on a system that practices employment discrimination."

"I think we also should not ignore the fact the media has believed the operant mythology about women's sport not being as exciting because they only listen to their own voice. They've grown up valuing men's sports and they are not listening to the voice of those who value women's sports."

Clearinghouse

Marilyn Laud, letter to the editor
Chicago Tribune

Reacting to a series of articles that criticized the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse for not counting a prospect's consumer-education course as a core course:

"Don't you think many people are missing the point (about academic standards and core courses)? If you divide 11 core courses by four years of high school, the result is 2.75 courses a year. This is in a system with five to seven periods a day. It seems to me that if you are a student and/or a student-athlete, this is a ridiculously low standard at best. Parents and high schools should be dually responsible for making sure students are ready for college."

"In general, the NCAA may have a monthly collection of arbitrary rules, but let's get real! What is a student-athlete?"

Academics

Nolan Richardson, men's basketball coach
University of Arkansas, Fayetteville
The Boston Globe

"Generally, there is a 5-5-5 line. You have five players who you never have to worry about academically, five who are pretty good but need some watching and five who need some real eye contact all the time. If you get a balance on the high side, you're in much better shape. If it works the other way, you have some work to do."

MONARCHS OF THE MOUNTAIN

THREE INSTITUTIONS ACHIEVE A LONG-TERM STAY AT THE TOP OF III WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL

By Gary T. Brown
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Those who buy into the adage that it's harder to stay at the top than it is to get there may not have looked at Division III Women's Volleyball Championship records lately.

Washington University (Missouri), Juniata College, and the University of California, San Diego, obviously do not subscribe to that theory. After enjoying a rapid rise to the top, each seems to be settled in for a permanent stay.

In the 13-year history of the Division III championship, the triumvirate has combined for 10 titles, 19 appearances in the championship match and 91 tournament victories — nearly half the combined wins total of the other 82 teams that have participated.

Only once, in 1985, did all three teams fail to advance to the championship match. There hasn't yet been a year in which at least one wasn't represented in the semifinals.

UC San Diego and Juniata were the first to establish their traditions, squaring off in the first championship in 1981; they've appeared in 21 semifinals since. Washington (Missouri) did not reach the tournament until 1987, but the Bears currently dominate the sport, having won three consecutive championships and four of the last five.

Common denominator

Although the three schools are thousands of miles apart and vary in their academic missions, they share a common denominator on the court — a commitment to winning under the direction of three coaches who have built the programs from the ground up and have stayed long enough to finish the job.

Among them, Doug Dannevik of UC San Diego, Teri Clemens of Washington and Juniata's Larry Bock have logged 43 years of service to the schools and are the main attractions for talented student-athletes looking for a special place to hone their volleyball skills.

And even though the coaches have different styles, the results are similar.

"We win," said Washington's Clemens, whose winning percentage is tops among all men's and women's volleyball coaches in all divisions. "All three schools have had leadership at the top levels of the program for a number of years, with people who stay on top of the game as far as conditioning, offensive styles — any facet of the game that makes it better. We all have the best interests of the sport at heart."

"By the very nature of our schools," Bock said, "we've always been able to attract the kind of people who have their heads on straight."

All three schools boast impeccable academic reputations. Located in metropolitan St. Louis, Washington is a prestigious private school featuring a 59-acre medical campus. UC San Diego, a public institution, is one of nine University of Cali-

Bock began the Juniata program with an 11-0 regular-season record in 1977, and in 18 seasons has compiled more wins than any other Division III coach. A five-time coach of the year, most recently last season, Bock guided Juniata to seven consecutive semifinal appearances from 1985 through 1991. His 1993 squad reached the title match for the second time.

"I think it's safe to say we've worked pretty hard," he said. "The grades for admittance to graduate schools.

The trend toward the relaxation of standards has resulted in interesting phenomena occurring in the world of intercollegiate athletics, as well. For many years, the selection of Hall of Fame candidates from among the alumni of our own institution was a comparatively simple task. Participation in a national championship certainly was the most influential criterion in Hall of Fame considerations, and only a scant few achieved it. These days, such a criterion is so commonplace as to make it a ho-hum statistic. The reason for this is not that the quality of today's athlete has so sharply improved, but rather that the numbers of selected athletes and teams to participate in national championships have increased considerably during the past 15 years.

This writing has, in fact, been prompted by the most recent indulgence by the basketball coaches of the NCAA to increase the number of qualifying schools for selection to the men's and women's NCAA Division III basketball championships from 40 to 64. I'm not certain if this action was accomplished in an effort to emulate our friends in Division I, where the need for dollars to keep programs afloat excuses large fields, to escalate for coaches opportunities for wider recognition of their good achievements, or whether there truly is a sense that the quality of teams around the country has risen tremendously.

The modest increase in numbers of schools in Division III hardly seems to legitimize the growth nor does our concern with gender-equity issues, except in those women's sports previously unsponsored in national competition. My sense is growth is happening mostly to sate the appetites of coaches for longer seasons, more exposure and greater recognition for themselves and their teams.

Those are not necessarily unworthy goals, but, when gratification is so easily attained, it diminishes feelings of pride and accomplishment. Further, in some sports like soccer, even normal playing seasons, which provide the participatory opportunities for the largest number of students, are shortened to accommodate a lengthy national-championship format.

Readdressing the issue for consideration in 1995-96 would seem to make sense.

Most coaches, I think, support the contention that it is the right and even the duty of coaches in Division III to motivate and develop students to their highest possible level of achievement. Yet the relaxation of standards for qualification builds in many students a false sense of achievement. Is it possible that we have become so drawn to the race for qualification that we have become remiss in our efforts to lead students to attain their highest levels of potential? Is it possible that we so freely use praise and recognition and awards for accomplishments that are less than the best that we do students a disservice in terms of defining quality performance?

The greatest loss occurring with trends toward escalation is that it fosters a mind set toward ready acceptance of substandard performance in the measurement of our achievements. This, in due course, affects the quality of life in American society. The practices of medicine, law, teaching, indeed street-cleaning, are all improperly influenced when practitioners' performances and salaries are unaffected by inferior levels of productivity merely because of more general public acceptance with lesser levels of excellence.

We must be less enthralled with the notion that more is necessarily better, that modest performance records are deserving of consideration for national-championship competition. It would be a useful example, it seems to me, if sports objectives in Division III more closely parallel the kinds of goals that the schools in our division once held for stringent standards of academic excellence.

Only by working and aspiring to such plateaus will coaches be capable of educating and motivating people to what accomplishment truly is. Only in a teaching process inclusive of commitment to high standards of achievement, even if failure occurs in the process, will quality of character essential to success be realized.

We shall do our students a better service if we tighten our boundaries, be more guarded in our zeal to create more, be more discerning in our determinations of that which constitutes excellence, and render praise and rewards only for that which is excellent.

Women's basketball embraces championship opportunities

By Laura E. Bollig
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

The numbers game hasn't looked promising for women who play college basketball. Studies show them trailing in scholarship dollars and program budgets. A quick glance at the television schedule shows them mostly absent from the Saturday afternoon lineup. A trip to the gym highlights the lack of fan support.

However, female student-athletes are winning one numbers game — championship opportunities.

When women's championships debuted under the NCAA umbrella in 1982, 88 teams participated in three women's basketball championships. When the 1995 Divisions I, II and III basketball tournaments tip off next March, twice as many women will be able say they've competed in an NCAA championship.

"You can say what you want about winning the conference title or a big game at home. Students want to participate in an NCAA championship," said Linda M. Bruno, commissioner of the Atlantic 10 Conference and chair of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee.

Expanded brackets

For the second year, the Division I bracket will feature 64 teams. Division II has expanded to a field of 48, while the Division III tournament will involve 64 teams as well. A total of 176 schools — approximately 2,640 student-athletes — will see their seasons extended by at least one NCAA postseason game.

For Kevin Morris and his Fordham University team, last year's invitation to the Division I tournament saved some worry and a whole lot of questions.

"As soon as we got the automatic bid, it kind of changed our players' perspective,"

Morris said. "Three years ago we were 21-8 and our season was over. We didn't know whether to practice or what. It was a year in limbo. Last year, we knew right away in September of 1993 how to get into the NCAA tournament. Once we got in, our best player said 'this is something you dream about since you were little.' We had the same record in 1991-92 and 1993-94; both teams went 21-8. But the tournament was a huge incentive."

The NCAA Executive Committee decided in 1992-93 that high basketball sponsorship numbers warranted another look at championship opportunities in that sport. Since that time, tinkering with the brackets has been fast and furious.

Excited to play

Even though general reaction to bracket expansion has been positive, Division III has one negative. All 64 teams must pay their own way to participate in the first round of competition.

But while Division III coaches are anxious about the play-in format, most agree the bottom line isn't always the bottom line.

"For the most part, when I've talked to coaches in the area, they all are pretty excited about the opportunity to get into the NCAA tournament. That's the positive side," Fahey said. "I think each region has some geographical considerations, and that's the biggest concern we have to worry about."

Rita Wiggs, chair of the NCAA Division III Women's Basketball Committee, echoes Fahey's thoughts.

"A lot of coaches are getting excited now that they think their teams have a really good chance of getting into the tournament. There's a little apprehension as to how the format will work out, but overall, I think the response has been quite positive."

"A little of the anxiety is the play-in format and financially what kind of impact that will have," Wiggs said. "There are two regions — the West and South — that are very spread out geographically."

Play-ins and the financial burden that goes with them were a part of the Division II bracket last year, when 16 teams competed for eight spots in the 40-team field. This year's 48-team field does not include play-in games — a solution Division II chair Donna M. Guimont says involves recognition.

"For example, you don't put a banner in your gym that says you've participated in the NCAA tournament because it (the play-in game) was not considered part of the tournament," said Guimont, head coach and assistant director of athletics at St. Anselm College.

Quality of competition

Another factor considered by all three division committees was whether the quality of competition merited an increase in opportunity.

In 1993, when 32 teams participated in the first round of the Division I championship, the average winning margin was 14.5 points. In 1994, with all teams playing in the first round, teams won by an average of 17.9 points.

"When you expand any bracket, you're going to have an imbalance in first-round games. That will always continue to happen," Bruno said. "If you look at the men's bracket, there are always some games that are lopsided, and they usually are in the first and second rounds."

Fordham, making its first tournament appearance, traveled to Pennsylvania State University and lost by 53 points in the first round.

"People say 'we're just happy to be here.' I think it's OK to say that. We were happy to be there," Morris said. "Our goal was going to be the same — play one game at a time. Now our goal is to go back and advance a round.

"There's always going to be the problem of the No. 1 seed vs. the No. 16 seed. To my knowledge, no No. 1 seed has ever been beaten by a No. 16 seed. You have a pretty good chance of getting whacked in the first round, but I don't see that as a negative. If we have to go to Tennessee or Penn State or not play, if those are the two options, we'll go play at Penn State," Morris said.

Questions remain

Questions remain in all three divisions. Division I faces the dilemma of neutral-site games and their effect on attendance. Divisions II and III each will look at regional realignment and seeding in the future.

The positives of bracket expansion seem, however, to far outweigh the negatives in the minds of coaches and administrators.

"I think that the expansion of the brackets is probably the most positive step the sport of women's basketball has taken in a while. It's just a tremendous enhancement to the growth of the sport across the country," said Cindy Scott, head coach at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale and past president of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

"You're not going to put a statistic on the excitement it creates for fans," Bruno added.

A thought lurking in the back of many minds is that increased championship opportunities could result in a push to support women's basketball on a higher level.

"Personally, what I think will happen is that...this will be a surge for schools to place more emphasis on their programs, now that there's an expanded opportunity to get into the tournament," Wiggs said.

That added support has the potential to even up the numbers game.

Potential women's basketball hosts face tougher standards

Four teams now will be assigned to 16 sites instead of two at 32

Potential hosts for first- and second-round competition in the Division I Women's Basketball Championship will be expected to meet stricter criteria than in the past because four teams will be assigned to each of 16 sites (rather than two teams at 32 sites as in the past).

At its October 23-24 meeting in Minneapolis, the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee reaffirmed criteria used to select first- and second-round sites. The sessions will be conducted at the sites of the 16 highest-seeded teams, assuming those schools meet the specified criteria.

The criteria, which were distributed to the Division I membership in an August 2 memorandum, are listed in an accompanying box.

The committee first established the criteria at its July 1994 meeting. The NCAA Executive Committee approved the criteria in August, but schools have had questions concerning the new standards.

Institutions with questions or concerns about hosting a first- and second-round session of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship are asked to contact Tricia Bork, NCAA group executive director for championships, at the national office.

Criteria for Division I women's basketball hosts

Following are new criteria for Division I institutions wishing to serve as hosts for first- and second-round competition in the Division I Women's Basketball Championship:

1. Minimum seating capacity of 4,000.
2. Exclusive availability of the facility for practice and competition during the following times:
 - a. Day before the game: from noon to 10 p.m., for 1½ hours practice time for all four teams.
 - b. First-round game day: from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., for one hour practice time for all four teams (and for the competition that evening).
 - c. Day between games: from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., for 1½ hours practice time for the two teams.
 - d. Second-round game day: from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., for one hour practice time for the two teams (and for the competition that afternoon or evening).
3. Minimum guarantee of $8,000 in net receipts.

4. Four separate locker rooms of comparable quality.
5. Adequate space for postgame press conferences.
6. Three hotels of comparable quality and proximity to the facility. The three visiting teams should be housed in separate hotels; the media should be housed in a fourth hotel, separate from the teams, if possible. The host school will be required to reserve a minimum number of rooms at each team hotel.

The committee also will give consideration to allowing a school whose facilities do not meet these criteria, or whose facilities have other conflicts that preclude hosting, to conduct the competition in an alternate facility in the same metropolitan area, as long as the institution has conducted a regular-season men's or women's game in that facility during the year. A school that faces that situation should contact the NCAA national office immediately so that the committee has sufficient time to determine whether the alternate facility would be acceptable.

Other highlights

In other actions at its October 23-24 meeting in Minneapolis, the Division I Women's Basketball Committee:

■ Voted to recommend to the NCAA Executive Committee that the ratings percentage index for all teams be released to conference offices at the conclusion of the championship. Presently, each commissioner receives the RPI only for teams in his or her own conference. The RPI is one of several tools that the basketball committee uses for championship selection purposes.

■ Voted to increase the minimum seating requirement for hosts of the Women's Final Four from 10,000 to 15,000. This requirement will be effective with the 1999 championship. The committee also approved facility specifications that will be sent to all Division I institutions in November in preparation for the selection this summer of 1999 and 2000 Women's Final Four sites and 1998 and 1999 regional sites.

■ Voted to extend the search for an assistant coordinator of women's basketball officials/assistant secretary-rules editor. As directed by the Executive Committee, the basketball committee must recommend someone to assist Marcy Weston in her duties as national coordinator of officials and secretary-rules editor of the Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

■ Discussed the progress of the NCAA Special Television Committee, which currently is discussing the possible renegotiation of the NCAA's contract with CBS Sports.

■ Met with representatives of the local organizing committee for the 1995 Women's Final Four in Minneapolis.

Division II Football

Lions tough on both sides of the ball

Event: 1994 Division II Football Championship.

Overview: How good is North Alabama? Perhaps good enough to make the playoffs — in Division I-AA. The Lions' only loss came October 8 at the hands of defending I-AA champion Youngstown State, ranked No. 3 at the time. Youngstown State needed a field goal midway through the fourth quarter to secure a 17-14 victory. North Alabama, ranked first in Division II (rankings and statistics as of October 31), relies on a balanced running attack that features fullback Kenyatta Jones (553 yards), tailback Kevin Winfrey (394 yards) and quarterback Cody Gross (392 yards). But the strength of the team may be its defense, which allowed only seven touchdowns and an average of 172 yards through eight games....North Alabama was set for a November 5 showdown with No. 2-ranked and Gulf South Conference foe Valdosta State. The game appeared to be a classic matchup of a top offense (Valdosta State, ranked second in the division in total offense) against a formidable defense (North Alabama, first in total defense)....Third-ranked Texas A&M-Kingsville, which lost by two points to eventual champion North Alabama in the semifinals last year, could make it one step farther this season. The Javelinas have a solid defense that ranks in the top 10 against the run, against the pass and overall, and their ground-oriented offense has averaged nearly 36 points per game....Other teams expected to contend: Pittsburg State, Northeast Missouri State, North Dakota State, North Dakota and Ferris State.

North Alabama features a balanced running attack that relies in part on quarterback Cody Gross.

Field: The 16-team field, which will be selected November 13, will include four teams from each of four regions (Midwest, South, West and Northeast).

Dates and sites: First-round (November 19), quarterfinal (November 26) and semifinal (December 3) games will be played on campuses of competing institutions. The championship game will be December 10 in Florence, Alabama; North Alabama will be the host institution.

Television coverage: ESPN2 will televise the championship game live at noon (Eastern time) December 10. The game will be rebroadcast on ESPN at 1 p.m. (Eastern time) December 12.

Results: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the November 21, November 28 and December 5 issues of The NCAA News. Results from the championship game will appear in the December 14 issue.

Championship notes: This year's title game will be the ninth straight in Florence....Last year's championship game, a 41-34 North Alabama victory over Indiana (Pennsylvania), was the highest-scoring in history.

Division III Football

Defending champion fights for berth

Event: 1994 Division III Football Championship.

Overview: After five games, defending champion Mount Union seemed set for a bid to become the first team in seven years to win back-to-back Division III titles. The Purple Raiders were the top-ranked team in the strong North region, and freshman Bill Borchert was beginning to fill the huge shoes of record-setting passer Jim Ballard, who was lost to graduation. But the Raiders suffered a 23-10 loss to Baldwin-Wallace October 15, and they now are in a battle with Augustana (Illinois) for the region's fourth and final playoff berth. The region's top-ranked team is Allegheny, the division leader in total offense (statistics through October 22). Other top teams from the North include Albion and Baldwin-Wallace....The leading contender in the East appears to be Plymouth State (7-0 through October 29). Bidding for its first playoff berth will be Kean, which has climbed steadily in the polls this season and became the region's No. 2-ranked team....Washington and Jefferson was ranked atop the South region until losing to Cortland State, 24-21. The top ranking was assumed by Dickinson, which powered to an 8-0 record behind a methodical running attack that averages more than 300 yards a game....Central (Iowa) features running back Mark Kacmarynski (173.1 yards per game), who paces a running attack that averages 330 yards per game. Wisconsin-Whitewater has climbed steadily in this year's polls and reached the No. 2 spot in the West after beating Wisconsin-River Falls, 37-31. Perennial power St. John's (Minnesota) and La Verne are the leading contenders for the other West berths.

Field: The 16-team field, which will be selected November 13, will include four teams from each of four regions (East, West, North and South).

Running back Mark Kacmarynski is averaging 173.1 yards per game for Central (Iowa).

Dates and sites: First-round (November 19) and quarterfinal (November 26) games will be played on campuses of competing institutions. Semifinal games will be hosted December 3 by the East and West regional winners. The championship game will be December 10 in Salem, Virginia; the city of Salem and the Old Dominion Athletic Conference will serve as hosts.

Television coverage: ESPN will televise the championship game live at noon (Eastern time) December 10.

Results: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the November 21, November 28 and December 5 issues of The NCAA News. Results from the championship game will appear in the December 14 issue.

Championship notes: Since 1991, when four playoff games were decided by three or fewer points, only two of 30 playoff games have been as close as a field goal.

Division II Women's Volleyball

Tough regional matchups await new coaches this season

Event: 1994 Division II Women's Volleyball Championship.

Overview: Regional battles will be highlights of this year's championship, which also will feature a couple of new coaches who have inherited contending teams....Cal State Bakersfield has held the top spot in the American Volleyball Coaches Association poll throughout much of the season. The 33-2 Roadrunners, with first-year coach Carl Ferreira at the helm, will challenge for the title after finishing second last year. Ferreira, who had been an assistant coach at Stanford, places his team's hopes on returning all-Americans Christy Wieneke, Jennifer Streltsoff and Brandy Charles. Wieneke, a player-of-the-year candidate, ranks among national leaders in kills per game and boasts a .321 hitting percentage. The Roadrunners' lone setbacks both were to Division I Cal State Northridge — including a five-game thriller. Also looming large in the West is Cal State Los Angeles at 22-2. Cal State Bakersfield won the first of two meetings between these clubs....Defending champion Northern Michigan graduated four all-Americans from last year's 38-1 squad, but the cupboard is not bare for first-year coach Mark Rosen. The tandem of outside hitters Pauline Schuette and Jennie Long has helped lead the Wildcats to a 23-4 mark, including victories over Michigan Tech, Portland State and Metropolitan State. Rosen previously was head coach at Cal State Bakersfield for two years and posted a 57-12 mark before taking the Northern Michigan post vacated by Jim Moore, who departed for Kansas State. The Wildcats' toughest challengers may be in their own backyard as Michigan Tech has surged to a 26-3 record behind senior middle hitter Kim Hoppes and junior outside hitter Kristan Schuster. Michigan Tech and Northern Michigan have split their season series, each winning at home....Other contenders include Portland State, Northern Colorado, Hawaii-Hilo and Regis (Colorado).

Field: The 28-team field includes four teams each from the North Central, Northwest, South Central and Southwest regions and three teams each from the Atlantic, Great Lakes, Northeast and South regions.

Dates and sites: Regional competition will be November 18-19 or November 19-20 on the campuses of competing institutions. The finals will be December 3-5 on the campus of one of the participating institutions.

Results: Championship results will appear in the December 14 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: Until the arrival of head coach Mark Massey, Cal State Los Angeles had not won more than 10 matches in any season. Massey, now in his sixth year, already has guided the Golden Eagles to three 20-victory seasons and three NCAA tournament berths....Northern Colorado senior middle blocker Erica Wymore broke her ninth school blocking record earlier this season....Chrissy Canada of Metropolitan State became the school's all-time block leader and is on a pace to break the school mark in kills as well.

Erikka Gulbranson and Cal State Bakersfield are top-ranked this year.

Providence coach Ray Tracey thinks Amy Rudolph, shown here at the 1994 indoor track championships, is the best runner in the country.

Division I Women's Cross Country

Several teams in position to challenge Villanova

Event: Division I Women's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Villanova has won the last five team titles. Several teams, including Arkansas, Providence, Michigan and Georgetown, are primed to put that streak to an end. How close could this race be? Consider that Arkansas, Villanova and Providence all have been ranked No. 1 at some time this season. Also consider that Arkansas defeated No. 1 Villanova at Arkansas, then Villanova rebounded to knock off then-No. 1-ranked Providence....Providence has been the most consistent of the trio, occupying the Nos. 1 and 2 spots in the last four polls. "We're seven strong...that's our strength," said head coach Ray Tracey. "We're pretty strong up front. Our No. 1 runner, Amy Rudolph, is probably the best in the country. Our four and five (runners) need to move up a little, but (overall) I'm very comfortable." Rudolph, fifth at the 1993 championships, has won two of three races in which she has run, including the Big East Conference championships. Marie McMahon, Natalie Davey and Maria McCambridge join Rudolph to form a solid quartet....Villanova, which at Arkansas failed to finish first in a meet for the first time since the 1988 national championships, has enough talent to win again. The Wildcats return several standouts, including Jennifer Rhines, individual runner-up in 1993, and Becky Spies, seventh in 1993....Arkansas, which will serve as host of the championships, likewise boasts a talented lineup. Deena Drossin, a senior, is the Razorbacks' top performer. Drossin, who earned runner-up honors in 1992, placed sixth a year ago. Megan Flowers and Shelley

Taylor, a pair of juniors, add experience and depth. The duo claimed the eighth and ninth spots, respectively, last year, while Sarah Schwald, another junior, finished 14th overall....Georgetown, which finished a mere eight points behind Villanova when it finished third at the 1993 championships, returns three runners from that squad. Leading the way for the Hoyas are Caryn Landau, Miesha Marzell and Joline Stachel....In a championships preview, Arkansas defeated Villanova, Wisconsin and Georgetown, among others, at the Chili Pepper Festival III meet October 1 at Prairie Grove, Arkansas. The Razorbacks scored 72 points, while Villanova was second with 88. Wisconsin and Georgetown placed third and fourth, respectively.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-two teams of seven individuals — including at least two teams from each of eight districts — plus 30 individuals (at least three individuals from each district) will make up the field.

Date and site: The championships, which will be hosted by Arkansas, will be November 21 at Prairie Grove, Arkansas.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 28 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Arkansas is hosting its first championships....Villanova also has claimed the individual title each year it has won the team championship....The Wildcats won their last two team titles by seven and five points, respectively....Arkansas has finished as runner-up the last three years.

Division II Women's Cross Country

Adams State goes after 'three-peat'

Event: Division II Women's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: From 1982 to 1991, Cal Poly San Luis Obispo dominated the championships — winning 10 consecutive team titles. That streak came to an end when Adams State joined the NCAA in 1992. Since then, the Indians have started a streak of their own, winning the last two team titles. A third title is well within Adams State's reach, but the Indians will have to win at the expense of several talented teams, including Western State and North Dakota State (currently ranked No. 1)....With returnees Karen Talamantes (fifth individually a year ago), Norma Gonzalez, Pamela White and Nikole Sterling, Adams State has more than enough depth and talent to join Cal Poly San Luis Obispo as the only three-time champion. Sterling and White, both sophomores, are the key to Adams State's success. Sterling, who finished 40th at the 1993 championships as a freshman, is the Indians' No. 1 runner, while White, 36th in 1993, is the squad's No. 3 runner....Cross-state rival Western State poses the biggest threat to Adams State's "three-peat" hopes. Not only do the Mountaineers showcase the top runner in Division II in Elva Dryer, they also boast sophomore Sarah Horan, junior Liz Hile and senior Niki Schroer. If that isn't enough, the Mountaineers outdistanced Adams State to win the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference team title in October...."The teams to beat are Western (State) and Adams (State). Adams has probably got the tightest one-to-five split of any top six team," said North Dakota State coach Jerry Gores. "If I had to pick a favorite, I'd pick Western (State). It appears to be their year. They've got three seniors who are well-seasoned. (The title race) is more wide open than in previous years, but I think Western and Adams are the teams to beat"....North Dakota State, eighth in 1993, also should be in the title hunt. Led by two-time all-American Pam Drietz and Kristin Gfroerer, the Bison return three of their top four finishers from 1993. Other key performers for North Dakota State are Petra Gibbons and Bethany Carlson, a pair of junior college transfer students.

Field: A total of 132 individual competitors will be selected. Seventeen teams of seven individuals — including at least one team from each of six regions — plus 13 individuals (at least two individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Date and site: The championships will be November 19 at Nebraska-Kearney.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: A sign of things to come? Elva Dryer of Western State, the 1993 NCAA individual champion, won the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference individual title in October by more than a minute. Dryer earned runner-up honors at the 1992 championships.

Division III Women's Cross Country

Usual duo hopes to remain healthy

Event: Division III Women's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Cortland State and Calvin — that's been the order of finish at the last two championships. This year, both teams again are primed to fight for the top spot — if they remain healthy. The key word is "if." The Red Dragons and Knights clearly are the picks of the pack, but one thing they are not is deep....Cortland State, which has claimed four of the last five team titles, is led by veteran Michelle La Fleur, the 1992 individual runner-up. Joining La Fleur are Heather and Heidi Swarts, who finished 11th and 22nd, respectively, in 1993....Calvin boasts junior Amy Kuipers and sophomore Betsy Haverkamp. The Knights also showcase Renea Bluekamp, who won the 1993 individual title. It's uncertain what impact Bluekamp will have for Calvin. A senior, Bluekamp missed a month of the season and has not yet regained last year's championship form. "We need to get a little bit," said Calvin coach Nancy Meyer. "We're headed in the right direction. Renea didn't run for a month, but raced last weekend...so that was a positive. We do have Amy Kuipers, Betsy Haverkamp and Amy Rideout. If those three run well, and if Renea can run with Amy (Rideout), our chances improve"....If either Cortland State or Calvin falter, look for Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Bowdoin, Moravian or Hope to fill the void....Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 1991 team champion, is young and talented. Brenda Biskobing, a junior, is the Titans' top performer....Moravian, which will serve as host of the championships, looks for a big performance in front of its fans. The Greyhounds rely on sophomore Carla Thomas to lead the way.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-one teams of seven individuals — including at least one team from each of eight regions — plus 37 individuals (at least three individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Date and site: The championships will be November 19 at the Lehigh University Cross Country Course in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Moravian will be the host.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Calvin's hopes rest on Betsy Haverkamp (above), Amy Kuipers, Amy Rideout and Renea Bluekamp, last year's individual champion.

Championships notes: Cortland State or Calvin has occupied the Nos. 1 and 2 spots in the top-25 poll for eight consecutive weeks....If Renea Bluekamp claims the individual title, she will join Tori Neubauer of Wisconsin-La Crosse (1982 and 1983) as the only repeat titlists.

Division I Men's Cross Country

Arkansas faces toughest battle yet

Event: Division I Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Arkansas has been the team of the '90s; it has won every championship this decade. But Arkansas' title reign faces probably its stiffest test this year. On the positive side, the Razorbacks showcase two of the nation's finest runners in Jason Bunston and Michael Morin. Bunston, individual runner-up at the 1993 championships, appears ready to garner first-place honors. The senior, competing in only his second race of the season, claimed the Southeastern Conference individual title and guided Arkansas to its 21st consecutive conference championship (four in the SEC). Morin placed 25th at the 1993 championships. The team also has senior Graham Hood, who coach John McDonnell has rested for most of the season....Georgetown, the nation's No. 1-ranked team, is vying to end the Arkansas championships streak. Seventh a year ago — 212 points behind the Razorbacks — the Hoyas have climbed to the top of the poll behind the performances of Andy Downin, Ian Urbina, Brendan Heffernan and Brook Kintz. Paced by Downin and Urbina, the Hoyas won the Big East Conference championships in October — their first conference crown since 1989. In a possible championships preview, Georgetown defeated Arkansas, 90-97, at the Chili Pepper Festival VI meet, hosted by Arkansas....Wisconsin, ninth a year ago, is the nation's No. 2-ranked team. The Badgers, runner-up in 1992, look to claim their first team title since 1988. Coach Martin Smith's squad is led by senior Jason Casiano, who has claimed three individual titles in four races this season.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-two teams of seven individuals — including at least two teams from each of eight districts — plus 30 individuals (at least three individuals from each district) will make up the field.

Allsport/Gray Mortimore

Jason Bunston, individual runner-up in 1993, is one reason Arkansas is favored to win another team title.

Date and site: The championships, hosted by Arkansas, will be November 21 at Prairie Grove, Arkansas.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 28 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Since their victory in 1990, the Razorbacks have continued to improve their team scores. In 1990, Arkansas won the team title with 68 points. The Razorbacks claimed their next three titles with point totals of 52, 46 and 31, respectively.

Division II Men's Cross Country

Adams State represents dominance

Event: Division II Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Webster's Dictionary defines dominant as "exercising authority or influence; dominating; ruling; prevailing." It could also be defined as the Adams State's men's cross country team. At each of the last two championships, Adams State truly has been dominant. In those meets, the Indians have scored a total of only 40 points; only two team titlists have beaten that mark in a single year since the championships' inception in 1958. What's worse for other title hopefuls: The Indians return three members of last year's championships team, Peter De La Cerda, Daniel Caulfield and Hector Hernandez-Salazar — each a returning all-American. De La Cerda is the squad's top runner, while Caulfield, at No. 2, is the top returning performer (he finished fifth individually at last year's championships)...Western State, the nation's No. 2-ranked team; Edinboro, 1993 runner-up; and Lewis are the prime contenders for Adams State's throne. Western State, which placed third a year ago, returns several outstanding runners, including Hamish Smith and Philipo Spratley. Smith placed seventh in 1993 as a freshman, while Spratley was the squad's fourth-place finisher during his sophomore campaign. Edinboro, which has won a championships-record four team titles, looks to returnees Clayton Clews, Carl Leonard and Martin Lyons. The Fighting Scots have finished first or second at eight of the last 10 championships. Lewis has this year's top individual performer in Charles Mulinga. A junior, Mulinga — who swept the 5,000- and 10,000-meter runs at the 1994 indoor and outdoor track championships — has won all four races in which he has competed this season.

Field: A total of 132 individual competitors will be selected. Seventeen teams of seven individuals — including at least two teams from each of six regions — plus 13 individuals (at least two individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Date and site: The championships will be November 19 at Nebraska-Kearney.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Adams State is hoping that another celebration is in order this season. The Indians have run away with the team title the last two years.

Championships notes: Adams State is vying to become only the third team to win three consecutive team titles. San Diego State (1965 through 1967) and Edinboro (1986 through 1988) are the only teams to accomplish the feat.

Division III Men's Cross Country

Defending champion's confidence justified

Event: Division III Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Imagine being a two-time defending champion that returns five of seven runners from a squad that won the last team title by the most-lopsided score in meet history. Could anything stop such a team from winning a third consecutive crown? Anything is possible, but it's not likely that such a team will be beaten. That's the comfortable position North Central finds itself in. Returnees include individual runner-up John Weigel and fifth- and sixth-place finishers Brian Henz and Jim Dickerson, respectively. Matt Brill, who placed 25th as a freshman, also returns, giving the Cardinals the most experienced and talented quartet in the field. (Chuck Hoff, also a contestant last year, likely will miss the championships due to injury.) "There's no question about the fact that we have experience and that these guys have got some credentials," said North Central coach Al Carius. "They've got experience and have a successful record. That makes me feel real comfortable (entering the championships). That doesn't mean we aren't preparing. Obviously, (the championships) boil down to what is going to happen on that given day. That's why we have the championships — to determine who the best team is".... While North Central is the front-runner, opponents won't concede the team title. Among those looking to dethrone the Cardinals are Calvin, Williams, Rochester, Wabash and Wisconsin-La Crosse....Calvin, sixth a year ago, has been ranked No. 2 in the top-25 poll for the past four weeks. The Knights are led by Ray VanArragon, Ryan LaFleur and Robert Hyde. VanArragon, who placed 22nd individually at the 1993 championships, is the squad's top returning finisher. The Knights competed against defending champion North Central at the Parkside Invitational earlier in the year and finished second, 16 points behind the Cardinals.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-one teams of seven individuals — including at least one team from each of eight regions — plus 37 individuals (at least three individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Date and site: The championships will be November 19 at the Lehigh University Cross Country Course in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania; Moravian will serve as host.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: North Central is vying for a championships-record 10th team title and 18th top-two finish. The Cardinals have finished first or second at the last six championships.

Perfect Nittany Lions' schedule is toughest among unbeaten teams

By Sean W. Strazisar
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

Of the five undefeated teams in Division I-A, Penn State is playing the toughest overall schedule.

And if head coach Joe Paterno's team — which has won 13 consecutive games dating back to last season — wins its last three, it could become the third regular-season perfect-record team to face a top-20 schedule since the NCAA's toughest-schedule ranking started in 1977. The others with top-20 schedules were Penn State in 1978 (14th) and Texas in 1983 (18th).

No undefeated I-A team has ever finished with a top-10 schedule.

The Nittany Lions' Division I-A opponents this season have a .566 winning percentage vs. other I-A teams when not playing Penn State. That ranks 17th nationally.

Penn State's three remaining foes — Illinois, Northwestern and Michigan State — have a combined .500 winning percentage (13-13-1) against I-A teams, which ranks 59th among future schedules through November 5.

Of the other four unbeaten teams, Auburn has the highest-ranked schedule. The Tigers' remaining opposition has a combined percentage of .765. Auburn, which has won 20 straight games dating back to last year, has an overall strength-of-schedule ranking of 36th.

Alabama has the toughest remaining schedule of the undefeated teams. The Crimson Tide's two remaining opponents have a winning percentage of .882 (15-2). Alabama's overall schedule strength ranks 45th.

Nebraska has the fourth-ranked schedule among the nation's unbeaten. The Cornhuskers' overall strength of schedule is ranked 57th and their future schedule ranks 88th.

Michigan, featuring tailback Tyrone Wheatley, is facing the toughest schedule overall among Division I-A teams this season. The Wolverines' opponents have a .642 winning percentage.

The only other unbeaten team, Texas A&M (which tied Southern Methodist October 29), has the lowest ranking of the undefeated teams with a schedule ranking of 67. The Aggies' remaining opponents have a .588 percentage.

Six conferences and two independents are represented in the top-10 toughest schedules. The Atlantic Coast and Southeastern Conferences both have two teams ranked in the top 10. The Big Ten Conference has the most teams ranked in Indiana State has the toughest future schedule in I-AA. The Sycamores' lone remaining opponent is defending champion Youngstown State. Of I-AA teams with more than one game remaining, Eastern Washington has the toughest schedule. Its two opponents have an .778 winning percentage.

Among three undefeated I-AA teams, Pennsylvania is playing the toughest overall slate (ranked eighth at .568), followed by Youngstown State (55th, .471) and Grambling (65th, .445).

Lock Haven sweep of league foe brings another II field hockey title

Eagles win second championship in three years

Prognosticators claim it is difficult to beat a team three times, but that didn't bother Lock Haven November 6 as the Eagles completed a season sweep of Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference rival Bloomsburg, 2-1, and claimed its second Division II Field Hockey Championship in three years.

Taylor

"This is one of the best teams I have ever had here," said Lock Haven coach Sharon Taylor. "They are so positive, from the last person on the bench to our leading scorer; there is an excitement about this team that has pointed toward winning this game."

Playing in front of a home crowd of 500, Lock Haven took an early lead with 14 minutes left in the first half when Stephanie Teleky scored. The score came on the rebound of a shot by the Eagles' all-time leading scorer, Colette Gasparini, who drove half the length of the field but slipped before shooting.

Bloomsburg answered with nine minutes left in the second half when Chris Fink knocked in a shot after a scramble in front of Lock Haven goalie Caroline Gillich.

"I told this team (Lock Haven) at the half that we had to pick up the pace," said Taylor. "We were sitting on a one-goal lead and you cannot do that against a team as good as Bloomsburg."

Though Gasparini didn't score herself, she set up the game-winner with a cross-cage shot that rebounded to Stacy Karloski, who knocked it in with six minutes left.

"One thing we said to each other all week was that we cannot let down against Bloomsburg," Gasparini said. "When Bloom scored that goal, we knew that we had to fight them until the final buzzer."

Lock Haven finished with an 18-3 record. Bloomsburg fell to 16-3-2, with all three losses coming against the Eagles.

Southwest Texas State receives two years of probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at Southwest Texas State University on probation for two years for NCAA rules violations involving the awarding of academic credit without justification. The violations involved the former head baseball coach and six student-athletes.

The Committee on Infractions found that the former head baseball coach violated the principles of ethical conduct by giving fraudulent academic credit to baseball student-athletes. The violations occurred during the 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 academic years. The former head coach knowingly gave six baseball student-athletes fraudulent grades of "A" and academic credit for physical education courses in basketball and racquetball that he taught and which the student-athletes never attended or participated in any way.

The student-athletes did not use the credits to retain eligibility under NCAA legislation. The former head coach, however, thought the credits might be necessary for the student-athletes to maintain their eligibility or to qualify for financial aid that would allow their continued participation in baseball.

The Committee on Infractions heard this case October 1, 1994. The former head baseball coach voluntarily appeared before the committee, along with representatives of the institution and the Southland Conference.

Southwest Texas State took corrective actions, which were considered by the committee in imposing its penalties, including:

- Requiring the two student-athletes who were still enrolled at the university to repeat the physical education course.

- Requiring those two student-athletes to conduct a seminar on ethical behavior for the baseball team and to perform community service.

- Conducting rules education on ethical behavior with coaching staffs and teams.

The committee decided to impose penalties, including:

- Two years of probation, beginning October 1, 1994.

- Requirement that the institution develop a comprehensive athletics compliance education program.

- Recertification of the university's athletics policies and practices.

- If the former head baseball coach seeks employment in an athletics-related position at an NCAA member institution during a three-year period (from October 1, 1994, to October 1, 1997), he and the involved institution will be requested to appear before the Committee on Infractions to determine whether the former head coach's athletically related duties should be limited at the new institution.

As required by NCAA legislation for any institution in a major infractions case, Southwest Texas State is subject to the NCAA's repeat-violator provisions for a five-year period beginning on October 1, 1994.

Should Southwest Texas State or the former head baseball coach wish to appeal this decision, they must submit a written notice of appeal to the NCAA executive director no later than 15 days from the date that Southwest Texas State received the infractions report. The NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee, a separate group, hears such appeals.

The members of the Committee on Infractions who heard this case are Richard J. Dunn, associate dean of the college of arts and sciences, University of Washington; Jack H. Friedenthal, dean of the school of law, George Washington University; Roy F. Kramer, commissioner, Southeastern Conference; Frederick B. Lacey, attorney, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene and MacRae, and a retired judge; Beverly E. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel at Brown University; Yvonne (Bonnie) L. Slatton, chair of the department of physical education and sports studies, University of Iowa; and committee chair David Swank, professor of law, University of Oklahoma.

The complete report of the Committee on Infractions will appear in the November 28 edition of The NCAA Register.

Volleyball

Washington (Missouri), UC San Diego and Juniata dominate Division III

college has been very supportive of women's athletics in general and women's volleyball in particular. And we've probably had better athletes playing than most of our competitors; not all, but most."

"All three of us are excellent volleyball coaches who do a good job of coaching at our particular institutions," said Dannevik, now in his 15th season at the Triton helm. "We've all become good at coaching our kids at their level. I know just what it takes to get the most out of the kind of kids this campus attracts. It comes with continuity."

Dannevik, a part-time staff member, calls his program "Division III at its bare bones." Balancing a budget of just $4,500, Dannevik regularly pits his Tritons against a predominantly Division I, Division II and National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics schedule. His 1992 squad, in fact, reached the Division III championship match with a 13-18 record.

"My responsibility is to have the kids compete as best they can," he said. "We don't worry so much about wins and losses. We're not into numbers or streaks — Washington does a lot of that and Teri has decided that's important to her program. And that has worked for them — they are the most visible Division III program."

Record streak

Clemens, a self-described disciplinarian, has indeed put up some numbers. Her last five teams, including this year's 30-2 squad, are a combined 187-11, and the Bears' 59-match winning streak from 1991

how we can be so good. That's our mystery."

It's no mystery that when two of the three schools meet on the court, the competition is fierce.

The three teams have a combined 91-28 tournament record, and 13 of those losses have been to each other. Washington is 22-3

The three teams have a combined 91-28 tournament record, and 13 of those losses have been to each other.

through 1993 is an all-divisions record.

Washington was 102-89 in nine seasons before Clemens' arrival in 1985. She eclipsed that win total in just three years and won her first national title two years later. Clemens, who preaches a hard-nosed work ethic mixed with just enough humor to relieve the tension, said her coaching style is more a reflection of the value system under which she was raised than of a tactical style of play.

"I'm old fashioned as far as the work ethic goes," she said, "but I'm right on top of humor. Nobody out-works our program or has as much fun. When other teams see how much fun we have, they wonder overall, including a 5-1 mark against Juniata and UC San Diego. The Tritons are 7-3 against the other two, while Juniata is 1-9.

"It steps up a notch on the court," Bock said. "It's a healthy relationship between the teams and coaches. Our kids have the utmost respect for everything that goes on at Washington and UC San Diego."

"We want to play them every day," Clemens said of Juniata and UC San Diego. "Not to mock the other matches we play, but Juniata and UC San Diego are who we get to be tactical against. Decisions of the coaches matter at these matches."

Coaches staying put

The three rivalries have no end in sight. All three coaches, though coveted by several Division I programs, do not mince words when it comes to stating their commitments.

"My goal was to coach at a class program, regardless of division," Clemens said. "I think it would be a move up to go to some Division I schools, but a move down for most."

Dannevik agreed. "I think the best coaches are those who are loyal to their schools," he said. "I don't need the ego of coaching at a higher level to make myself work harder every year."

Bock said that balancing the Division III philosophy with winning on a regular basis isn't the magic act it might appear to be.

"We've had a significant number of players who have been offered grants from other institutions before deciding to come to Juniata," Bock said. "That makes the atmosphere special at my practices because I know those players want to be there — not because of any financial or other influences. They're playing for all the right reasons. That's the best part of the Division III philosophy, and that's why I stay. It's not a balancing act, but the best of both worlds."

And it stands to reason that neither of those worlds will find themselves without these three teams any time soon.

Closing of drug probe costs school

Arkansas will pay $100,000 penalty

Two University of Arkansas athletics trainers will plead guilty to Federal drug charges and the athletics department has agreed to pay a $100,000 penalty to close a probe into the illegal distribution of painkillers.

Prosecutors said November 2 that head trainer Dean Weber and trainer David England will plead guilty to one misdemeanor count each of refusing to make and keep records of how the university's athletics department handled Federally controlled drugs.

Student trainers distributed drugs such as Darvocet-N100 and Tylenol with codeine without proper prescriptions, labeling or instructions. For a time, the drugs were kept in an unlocked cabinet in a trailer near the football field, according to The Associated Press.

"The investigation also revealed that athletes exchanged controlled substances among each other and went to either of the trainers when they needed pain medication," the U.S. attorney's office said in a statement.

1994 Column No. 40

Contacts and evaluations NCAA Division I football

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 13.1.9, effective August 1, 1994, the permissible number of evaluations in the sport of Divisions I-A and I-AA football has decreased from four to two during the academic year. Please note that per Bylaw 13.1.9.4.1, the time period during which the permissible evaluations may take place shall be from May 1 through April 30 of the following academic year. Further, not more than one evaluation may be used during the fall evaluation period and not more than one evaluation during the May evaluation period.

Due to the August 1, 1994, effective date of Bylaw 13.1.9, during the May 1, 1994, to April 30, 1995, time period, a Division I-A or I-AA institution may use four evaluations, provided not more than two evaluations occur subsequent to August 1, 1994. For example, if an institution evaluated a prospect in May 1994 and again during the fall evaluation period of 1994, the institution would have one remaining evaluation through April 30, 1995, which must be used either during the December or January contact period.

Beginning May 1, 1995, Divisions I-A and I-AA institutions are permitted only two evaluations, not more than one during the May evaluation period and not more than one during the fall evaluation period.

Plan

Rainbow Coalition to tackle shortage of minorities in athletics administration

the NCAA and its member institutions in exploring ways to increase the hiring of minorities and women at all levels of college athletics coaching and administration," said Charles Whitcomb, chair of recreation/leisure studies at San Jose State University and chair of the Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee. "We want our member institutions and the general public to know how we are doing with regard to minority employment. That's why we gathered the data for the past four years and released the information at the start of the school year. By using our statistics, the Rainbow Coalition has helped us reinforce the message we already have sent — that we need to do a better job in this area. I look forward to hearing their ideas."

The commission said it would target institutions that have a history of low minority athletics-staff representation. Charles S. Farrell, national director of the RCFA, said those actions could include lawsuits, censure or picketing. In addition, the commission said it plans to meet with top recruits to advise on which institutions are most attuned to the recruits' best interests.

"We simply have to take action to force the hands of some of these schools (that) are comfortable with exploiting us," Jackson said. "It is not fair. On the court there is equal opportunity. Off the court there is racism and sexism. These schools receive Federal dollars, yet the laws against discrimination are not being enforced. Affirmative action is not being administered fairly at these schools, and these records of discrimination are in the most public aspect of the school's activities. What must they be like in their more private areas?"

Rainbow Commission for Fairness in Athletics diversity and affirmative action plan for NCAA institutions

A seven-point plan proposed by the Rainbow Commission for Fairness in Athletics:

1. Fair Employment Practices — Each institution will develop a three- to five-year diversity/affirmative action plan for its athletics department for the inclusion of minorities and women in all areas and proportionate to every hierarchy at all levels. This shall include, but not be limited to, coaches, athletics administrators, sports information personnel and radio/television announcers. These plans should be submitted annually to an impartial third party for voluntary monitoring and evaluation. Each plan should include a reward/liability system.

2. Recruiting — Each institution will develop a three- to five-year diversity/affirmative action plan for the recruiting of athletes so that minorities will be well represented in nonrevenue and nontraditional sports. Each plan should include a reward/liability system.

3. Vendors Participation — Each institution will establish guidelines for a fair percentage (as reflected by population) of all external purchases of goods and services to minority and/or women vendors. This should include equitable participation in the building of new stadiums/arenas or refurbishing of old ones.

4. Merchandising Licensing — Each institution will establish a three- to five-year affirmative action plan to include more minorities and women at all levels, proportionate to hierarchy, in the manufacturing, marketing and merchandising of school-licensed products.

5. Executive Assignments — Each institution will place at least two qualified candidates from the target group on a short list of "executive" and coaching assignments. This process should continue until executive assignments are representative of some reasonable combination of team composition and available labor force.

6. Player training — Each institution will provide self-help, lifestyle, career and personal development, and financial management training for all athletes.

7. Sensitivity — Each institution will provide diversity and humanities training within the entire organizational culture for athletics administrators, coaches and other athletics personnel. This sensitivity should include the concern expressed by Native Americans that some team names and mascots are offensive to them. Athletes of all ethnic backgrounds should be encouraged to take a curriculum that reflects a content of diversity.

"It is time for a change. Affirmative action must be put into play at NCAA institutions. Blacks must be able to develop and prosper beyond the playing field... We simply have to take action to force the hands of some of these schools (that) are comfortable with exploiting us. It is not fair. On the court there is equal opportunity. Off the court, there is racism and sexism."

Drug probe

School to pay penalty

In addition to the Federal penalties against Weber, the university will cut his salary by $5,000 and prohibit his outside work for a doctor who also was charged with a civil violation of Federal drug policy.

Also, Weber and England were placed on a year's probation by the school, and Weber must pay a $5,000 civil penalty. They will be sentenced in Federal court on the misdemeanor counts, with each facing a penalty of up to a year in jail and a $25,000 criminal fine.

Prosecutors said Dr. John Park, who worked for an orthopedic clinic that helped train Arkansas athletes, will pay a $75,000 civil penalty. Prosecutors said he, too, did not keep records of drug distribution.

"The audit conducted by the Arkansas State Police revealed that 9,727 dosage units were unaccounted for by appropriate records," the U.S. attorney's office said.

The Drug Enforcement Administration will prohibit Park from dispensing prescriptions for two years.

A pharmacist who sold drugs in bulk to Park was not charged. Prosecutors said the pharmacy required Park to sign for the drugs in accordance with Federal guidelines.

"I regret that we did not take the lead in complying fully with the best practices in this area," Arkansas Chancellor Daniel Ferritor said.

The possible violations were discovered by Arkansas Health Center pharmacist Bill Altland and brought to Ferritor's attention in January.

Federal officials said that despite the lack of records, there was no indication that drugs were sold, and their distribution apparently did not contribute to drug abuse.

Task force

Division II group discusses presidential control, greater federation in restructuring examination that distribution of funding should be proportional to the size of the division. Also, some flexibility would be allowed for funding for additional opportunities for women.

If greater federation were adopted, the task force noted that funding would be necessary to support such a structure (for example, staff needs and expenses related to division-specific committee meetings).

Regarding the legislative process, the task force discussed how a goal of restructuring should be to minimize the volume of legislation. The annual Convention could be used to ratify or rescind policy board decisions, with its primary purpose being a forum for discussion and celebratory activities.

The task force formed subcommittees to discuss governance/structure, financial/revenue issues and the legislative process in more depth. Those subcommittees will report at the task force's next meeting November 28 in Dallas.

The task force also discussed diversity among and within the divisions. Regarding Division II, it proposes to examine how some "lower-level" Division I members compare with the Division II membership and also how some "upper-level" Division III members compare (and also how the top and bottom extremes of Division II compare with Divisions I and III). That comparison will be based mainly on financial commitment (sports sponsorship and, where appropriate, athletics grants-in-aid).

The Division II philosophy statement was reviewed, and several possible revisions were noted.

At its November 28 meeting, the Division II task force will meet jointly with its Division III counterpart to discuss common issues and concerns.
