All smiles

Tanya Hughes receives congratulations from University of Arizona athletics director Jim Livengood moments after she was honored as the 1995 NCAA Woman of the Year November 14 in Washington, D.C. Hughes, a four-time NCAA high-jump champion at Arizona and a member of the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team, was selected from among 10 national finalists. The award recognizes excellence in athletics, academics and community leadership.

Convention delegates to consider 41 proposals in Commission grouping

This is the second of six articles on legislation that has been submitted for the 89th annual Convention January 7-11, 1995, in San Diego. This installment features the 41 proposals identified by the officers of the NCAA Presidents Commission for inclusion in the Commission's special legislative grouping and scheduled for action January 9 on Presidential Agenda Day.

The entire NCAA membership will give issues of student-athlete welfare, access and equity their due during Presidential Agenda Day at the 1995 Convention, but potentially more contentious matters are looming in each of the divisions' separate business sessions.

The Convention first will tackle proposals designed to enhance the educational and athletics experiences of student-athletes — including proposals based on recommendations of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity — in morning division sessions and the afternoon general session. Twenty of the 41 proposals in the Presidents Commission grouping for Presidential Agenda Day relate to the topic, which was designated by the Commission for emphasis at this Convention.

But few of the proposals addressing student-athlete welfare are as controversial as a group of initial-eligibility alternatives that will be considered by Division I, or as likely to produce debate as proposed coaching-staff, financial aid and practice limitations in Division II.

The Association's membership structure also will be an area of focus on Presidential Agenda Day — not only because of a forum on the topic scheduled during the general business session but also because of a membership proposal to create a "Division IV" and a resolution sponsored by a large group of Division I-A institutions.

All proposals in the Presidents Commission grouping are designated for roll-call voting.

Student-athlete issues

The 20 proposals addressing student-athlete issues include 12 based on the recommendations of the special committee. Among the proposals based on those recommendations are measures to:

Due-process law in Florida struck down

The second of four so-called state due-process laws was struck down November 8 when a United States district judge ruled against a Florida statute that effectively blocked NCAA enforcement activities in that state.

Judge William Stafford noted an earlier decision in which a similar law in Nevada was invalidated and concluded that "the Florida Act suffers from the same infirmities that plagued the Nevada statute. The Florida Act ... violates both the Commerce Clause and the Contract

Silver Anniversary winners announced

Six record-setting collegiate stars who have enjoyed prominent professional careers in athletics, music, politics, medicine and education are this year's NCAA Silver Anniversary Award recipients.

The Silver Anniversary Award recognizes former student-athletes who have distinguished themselves since completing their college athletics careers 25 years ago. The award winners were selected by the NCAA Honors Committee, which is composed of athletics administrators of member institutions and distinguished citizens who are former student-athletes.

This year's honorees are Lesley L. Bush, Indiana Univer-

Convention

Membership receives 1995 Official Notice

The Official Notice for the 1995 Convention was mailed November 15 to the chief executive officer, athletics director, faculty athletics representative and senior woman administrator at every member institution. The delegate-appointment form was sent to each chief executive officer, along with his or her copy of the Official Notice.

The Official Notice contains 150 basic proposals and nine amendments-to-amendments. Delegates are reminded to bring a copy of the Official Notice to the Convention. The Official Notice will be the only publication containing all Convention legislation. The Convention Program will not contain legislation.

Also, delegates attending the Convention, which will be January 7-11 in San Diego, are requested to pick up their voting units at the Convention site as early as possible and no later than Sunday, January 8.

If voting equipment is picked up early, the Convention staff will be able to test and replace defective units in a more orderly manner. If delegates wait until Monday, time pressures resulting from the division business sessions could cause a problem.

A flat registration fee of $100 per person will be charged at the Convention. The only exception will be for individuals representing commercial enterprises, in which case a $200 fee will be assessed.

The registration fee covers delegate entertainment costs, such as the delegates reception, luncheons and the honors dinner.

Registration fees will be collected at the registration counters at the San Diego Marriott Hotel and Marina. American Express, MasterCard and Visa credit cards will be accepted, along with personal or institutional checks.

Due process

Federal judge invalidates Florida's due-process law

A U.S. district judge ruled November 11 that a so-called due-process law in Florida violates the Commerce and Contract Clauses of the U.S. Constitution.

The decision was the second in which a state law that encumbers the NCAA enforcement process had been overturned. A similar law was invalidated in Nevada in 1993.

The NCAA filed the suit because of the conflict it caused for the NCAA and its Florida members, who were put in a position of eral Florida State University football student-athletes. An injunction subsequently cleared the way for the resolution of that case.

The state "due-process" laws require the NCAA to meet judicial-like due-process standards in its enforcement process. If the "due-process" laws were permitted to stand, the result would be that the NCAA would not be able to enforce its rules equitably in all 50 states.

Similar laws are still on the books in Illinois and Nebraska.

Restructuring

Next round of meetings set for end of November

The three task forces responsible for examining NCAA restructuring each will meet again at the end of November.

The Division I task force will meet November 30 in Chicago, while Division II will gather November 28 in Dallas and Division III November 28-29 in Dallas. Divisions II and III also will conduct a joint meeting the afternoon of November 28.

It will be the second meeting for each group.

The oversight committee of the Special Committee to Review NCAA Membership Structure will meet for the first time in mid-December via a telephone conference. It will hear reports from each of the division task forces at that time.

Staff contacts: Tricia Bork and Stephen R. Morgan (I), Stephen A. Mallonee (II) and Daniel T. Dutcher (III).

For more information, see the November 7 issue of The NCAA News.

Graduation rates

Federal guidelines unavailable, so reporting method unchanged

The 1994 Division I Graduation-Rates Disclosure Form (94-6a) will be distributed to Division I members by December 1, while the Divisions II and III Enrollment and Persistence-Rate Disclosure Form will go to Divisions II and III institutions by January 15.

The United States Department of Education has not yet published final guidelines for the Student Right-to-Know Act, so the NCAA will proceed with reporting graduation rates as it has in the past.

Title IX guide distributed to membership

About 3,000 copies of "Achieving Gender Equity — A Basic Guide to Title IX for Colleges and Universities" have been sent to chief executive officers, athletics directors and senior woman administrators at all NCAA member institutions.

Additional copies will be sent to faculty athletics representatives and conference offices within the next three weeks, said Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education resources and women's issues coordinator.

"We want the membership to become familiar with the law of Title IX and, by doing so, give schools the basics on how to review their programs, the basics on the current state of case law, ideas on promotion and marketing, and information on NCAA emerging sports," Justus said.

Justus said the guide will help schools undergoing upcoming athletics certification reviews, particularly in the equity component of those reviews.

Title IX was enacted in 1972 and states that "no person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving Federal financial assistance."

"This guide is something the membership has requested for some time," Justus said. "It's going to be helpful to institutions as they take an in-depth look at their programs and how they're complying with Title IX."

The guide is broken down into five areas: Title IX basics, a section written by former Office for Civil Rights staff member Valerie Bonnette (who also co-authored the 1990 Office for Civil Rights Title IX Investigator's Manual); current case law; promotion ideas; emerging sports; and resources.

More copies will be available in mid-December for $15 and can be obtained by contacting NCAA Publishing at 913/339-1900. Those interested in more information on the guide may contact Justus at the national office.

Briefly in the News

Ex-players want football

Although football has not been played at St. Louis University since Harry Truman lived in the White House, a group of former players still gets together to reminisce about the good ol' days on the gridiron.

Nearly 250 former football Billikens are members of a 10-year-old fraternity loosely called the "Dinosaurs" because of its members' geriatric status. The club meets once a year in St. Louis for a dinner.

"We talk old times, remembrances of games and coaches we had," said Joe Kniest, a retired securities broker and manager of St. Louis' last squad, which played its final game on Thanksgiving Day 1949. "When I was a kid, I remember the 33-33 tie against the Rolla School of Mines (now the University of Missouri, Rolla). Another game, against the University of Detroit, the weather was so bad the referees had to wipe off helmets to see which players belonged to which teams."

Some of the club's members played on teams dating back to the 1920s and 1930s.

St. Louis had a football program for more than 50 years and recorded a perfect season in 1906, when a new strategy later known as the forward pass was used. One member of the Dinosaurs claims St. Louis put the passing game on the map.

"The first forward pass was thrown by a St. Louis U. player," said William Cribben, a St. Louis business executive and a member of the club. "Notre Dame used it a year later, and it was much better documented. But we actually did it first."

While "firsts" such as the forward pass and other innovations often are debatable, one thing is certain about the football program at St. Louis: It has a storied history and boasts alumni who later found distinguished careers in law, medicine and commerce.

"They just keep getting together year after year," said Doug McIlhagga, sports information director at St. Louis. He added that there has been some "underground" discussion — not much more than that — about bringing football back to St. Louis.

Date-rape awareness

Canisius College athletics administrators have instituted an "Athletes Helping Athletes" program, which aims to prevent date rape.

The program was started two years ago after assistant athletics director John L. Maddock became alarmed by statistics on sexual-abuse cases in intercollegiate athletics.

Making a point

"They were high, and my thinking was, 'Nobody is immune; maybe we should protect ourselves,'" Maddock told the Buffalo (New York) News. "The important thing is, the program is completely student-run once we set it up."

Peer educators in the program are trained each fall by Ellen J. Christensen, director of health education and human services at the State University of New York at Buffalo. Christensen organized a similar program on that campus four years ago.

"Statistics show us that 50 percent of the date or acquaintance rapes are committed by members of athletics and fraternity groups," she said. "But only five percent of the men in those groups are committing these rapes."

"In athletics, you are taught to be very aggressive, to keep pushing to get what you want. Education is what changes this behavior, and the more effective way is to allow athletes to become the educators.

Awareness is heightened, and the athletes learn a lot."

Researchers from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, and another from Northeastern University recently released a study titled "Male Student-Athletes Reported for Sexual Assault: A Survey of Campus Police Departments and Judicial Affairs Offices" (see the November 14 issue of The NCAA News). In it, the researchers reported, among other things, that of 69 reported assaults at 10 institutions with a male student population of slightly more than 261,000, 13 of those assaults involved athletes from men's intercollegiate teams. While male student-athletes made up 3.3 percent of the student population, 18.8 percent of the sexual-abuse complaints were made against male student-athletes.

Scores with election

Cory Ehlert is a reserve receiver for the St. John's University (Minnesota) football team, where he has caught two touchdowns passes this season. But his biggest grab this year was in politics, where he gained a city council seat in St. Joseph, Minnesota.

Ehlert, a senior on the football field but a pure freshman in the political arena, was the top vote-getter in the five-candidate race, garnering more than 700 votes.

Ehlert may be following in the footsteps of another St. John's (Minnesota) student-athlete turned political candidate. Eugene McCarthy, a former U.S. senator from Minnesota and a prominent presidential candidate in 1968, is a 1935 graduate of the university and played ice hockey and baseball.

Gridiron debate II

The second annual Bermuda Bowl — which was slated for November 18-19 in Hamilton, Bermuda — featured football players from Davidson College and the University of the South battling on the gridiron and also at the debate table.

This year's debate topic was "Trash-talking: Just Part of the Game?" Davidson players were scheduled to uphold that proposition while Sewanee (University of the South) players were to argue the opposing view. Last year, Georgetown University and Washington and Lee College met in the Bermuda Bowl.

The Bermuda Bowl also featured golf and tennis tournaments and a five-kilometer run for alumni, family members and students. An estimated 500 people were expected to accompany the teams to Bermuda.

Facilities

The Pyramid — a $22 million, cobalt-blue multipurpose facility at Long Beach State University opened to the public November 5. The facility, which is the third true pyramid built in the United States (the others are in Las Vegas and Memphis, Tennessee), rises 345 feet above the ground. Inside, there is room for five volleyball courts, three full basketball courts and four half basketball courts. For athletics events, the facility opens with a seating capacity of 5,000; however, with phased expansion, the building eventually will accommodate up to 7,500. The seating is mounted on moveable platforms, which are raised hydraulically to expose 39,000 square feet of flooring when needed for physical education classes. More than 18,000 steel tubes and connection modules were joined with more than 160,000 three-quarter-inch bolts in the construction. The building was designed by Long Beach State alumnus Don Gibbs. The facility officially opens November 30 when the men's basketball team hosts the University of Detroit Mercy in a nationally televised game on ESPN.

Matthews Arena, an 86-year-old arena serving as home to the men's ice hockey, men's basketball and women's ice hockey teams at Northeastern University, will get a make-over next April. A $1.6 million capital campaign will change the dimensions of the ice surface to the commonly used configuration of 200 feet by 90 feet. The rink currently is one of the smallest in NCAA Division I at 185 feet by 87 1/2 feet.

The University of Denver announced November 11 plans for a $32.5 million sports and health center that promises to be the most visible component of the institution's five-year campus redevelopment program. The facility, funded by a $140 million fund-raising campaign, will contain a new ice hockey arena that seats 6,000 (seating capacity will be 7,200 for basketball); a 30,000-square-foot gymnasium that seats 3,000; two new pools, one of which will be Olympic-sized with 1,000 seats; a 35,000-square-foot, state-of-the-art field house; eight new tennis courts; a 2,500-seat soccer/lacrosse field; and new baseball facilities. Work on the new facility is expected to start in February 1996 with a completion date about 18 months later.

FARA's annual meeting attracts record numbers

A record number of faculty athletics representatives attended the annual meeting of the Faculty Athletic Representatives Association (FARA) November 10-11 and focused on several major NCAA issues, including initial-eligibility standards, NCAA restructuring and student-athlete welfare.

A total of 160 faculty representatives were present at the two-day event in Orlando, Florida, an increase of about 20 percent over the previous top attendance.

NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey and NCAA Presidents Commission Chair Judith E. N. Albino were among those making presentations at various roundtables and panels throughout the meeting. Dempsey spoke primarily on the role of faculty representatives, while Albino addressed the common ground that faculty representatives and the Presidents Commission have in the reform movement.

Albino was questioned in some detail about the development of initial-eligibility standards that will be considered at the January NCAA Convention. Others discussing initial eligibility were Jerry L. Kingston, Arizona State University, chair of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee; Joseph W. Helmick, Texas Christian University, a member of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards; and Larry R. Gerlach, University of Utah, NCAA Council member.

Faculty representatives also considered the annual FARA Legislative Review Committee report for proposals that will be considered at the Convention. FARA's final legislative summary will not be available until the end of November, but those attending in Orlando appeared to be united against any legislation that would weaken academic standards.

Those attending the meeting also sought greater faculty athletics representative involvement in NCAA affairs. Some discussion focused on the fact that no faculty representatives from Divisions II and III were appointed to the Special Committee to Review the NCAA Membership Structure.

They also discussed with Dempsey and Albino the possibility of designating a faculty representative as an ex officio member of the Presidents Commission, so a faculty representative could advise rather than react on legislation matters.

The student-athlete welfare roundtable included presentations from three representatives of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee (Tanya Hughes, University of Arizona; Richard Kacmarynski, Central College; and Masa Oreskovic, Valdosta State University); Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education services; Janis Sanchez, Old Dominion University; and Virginia Atwood, University of Kentucky, a member of the NCAA Special Committee to Review Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity.

The role of the faculty representative also was discussed. Those present agreed that a video recently produced for new faculty representatives should be made available to the entire FARA membership. Each FARA member soon will receive the tape with a recommendation to show it to faculty senates, institutional chief executive officers, and others in the academic community as a way to demonstrate what faculty representatives are and should be doing.

Proposal provides well-reasoned reform

By Judith E. N. Albino
UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO

The progress that the NCAA Presidents Commission and the NCAA Council recently have achieved in the area of initial eligibility illustrates the potential for reform that is possible when the interests of both students and institutions are carefully and thoughtfully considered.

The Commission's proposal for revamping NCAA initial-eligibility standards requires that student-athletes meet real and challenging academic standards. At the same time, it leaves open a window of opportunity for those students whose academic preparation has been poor, but who nonetheless are deemed a reasonable academic risk by a given institution.

The proposal, No. 36 as amended by No. 36-1, adopts the 13 core-course requirement of Proposal No. 16, which was adopted in 1992 and is set for implementation in 1995. It also stipulates that students with a grade-point average of 2.500 or above achieve an SAT score of 700 or an ACT score of 17 to be eligible for NCAA competition, and it adopts the sliding scale of grade-point average and SAT/ACT scores as prescribed by Proposal No. 16.

In so doing, it affirms the need for academic standards set by the Association, but in addition takes a bold step toward ensuring both accessibility and institutional responsibility for the academic success of our student-athletes.

After careful consideration and discussion with members of the NCAA Council, members of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee, the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards and a host of other interested parties, the Commission in September reached a consensus on requirements for partial qualifiers.

Under the Commission's current proposal, a student who earns a 2.500 GPA in 13 core courses and who achieves a standardized test score as required by the individual institution can receive athletically related aid and can practice but not compete in his or her freshman year. These student-athletes

Rising in defense of sportsmanship

The following was written by headmaster Philip Cannon of St. John's School, a small private school in Houston. It appeared in a column by Ed Fowler of the Houston Chronicle:

Once upon a time, athletes were quietly proud of their accomplishments; they felt no need to do a victory dance, nor did they taunt their opponents. In that same polite age, crowds did not interfere with games by making inappropriate noise.

We can never set clocks back in time, but we must remember who we are and be leaders in sportsmanship.

The roots of the word "compete" suggest that we seek or strive together in competition. Competing allows us to do our best, realize our potential and lift the efforts of and honor all who are competing. Defeating the opponent is a different idea. The notion of vanquishing a foe has always been a part of history. But respect often accompanies even the most serious conflicts.

Achilles came to respect both Priam and his love for his son, Hector. Priam's asking for Hector's body and Achilles' granting the request were noble acts, despite the cruelty and pain that had gone before. Japanese warriors anticipating mortal conflict first put aside their swords and ceremoniously bowed to each other as a gesture of respect. The way of the warrior was Bushido, based on honor.

Contrast that sense of honor and respect with what our students see in American sports, particularly professional athletics. The greed of players and owners alike is appalling; the fighting in professional athletics — it would be a misnomer to call it sports — is deplorable and trickles down into college and school athletics. The Olympic figure-skating disgrace hardly stands out among the shameful behavior of many professionals.

The in-your-face attitude in sports has a parallel in the marketplace where many purveyors of products or services are no longer content to offer the best they can but feel compelled to disparage the competition. The decline of sportsmanship, manners and morals and the litigiousness in our society worry many observers who recall that great nations are more apt to destroy themselves than to be conquered by others.

Whether or not we can influence others, we must do what is right.

Sports can help develop important traits.... It seems to me that there are several inherent traits of good sports. Fairness comes to mind; so do modesty, civility and empathy. Having a genuine respect for others and not taking yourself too seriously also are characteristics which I attribute to good sports and which I desperately want to see in all our students....

Parents must show restraint and show good examples for their children, supporting them but recognizing that they often are beaten by better teams, not referees who have poor eyesight or judgment. Doing your best but losing is not a sin like quitting or whining.

Opinions

Games should belong to the players

Bob Oates, sportswriter
Los Angeles Times

"Two things can be said today about the people who coach big-time basketball and football in America, college and pro alike:

"They have too much power. All coaches have more power than they need — and more than they should be allowed to keep.

"They belong in the stands. On game day, every coach should be removed from the field, or from the basketball floor, and seated in the crowd — far from the players.

"In nearly every instance, the role of America's football and basketball coaches is incompatible with modern trends in leadership.

"Most other U.S. businesses have welcomed their employees into the decision making, thereby improving production.

"By contrast, U.S. football and basketball teams are, almost everywhere, ever more autocratic. Football coaches, for example, increasingly intrude on the moment-by-moment action. And in basketball, coaches scream instructions even as a player is going for the basket.

"Large changes are due. Overdue.

"At the university level, that seems self-evident. To bring sports into line with other campus and classroom customs, college coaches should depart at game time while their players demonstrate what they learned in practice.

"The coaches wouldn't like that.

"A team is not a democracy," Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight has said.

"But why isn't it?

"In a nation that has strenuously opposed kings and dictators for more than 200 years, thousands of Americans have shown that democratic measures are clearly more rewarding than an autocrat's.

"It is the American way, when you think about it, for athletes to elect their leaders, and for coaches to instruct, not rule.

"And as instructors, they should focus on two neglected areas: teaching players to be effective play-callers and productive captains....

"If a college sport is construed as an educational experience, it follows that student-athletes should be involved in game-day leadership.

"They once were.

"Football was developed in the last century by players, not coaches. And for many years, players remained in charge. Indeed, coaching by nonstudents was forbidden.

"The penalty for hiring a coach, according to an early rule committee member, Parke Davis, was game forfeiture.

"If today's game-day decisions were made as they once were — by student-athletes instead of coaches — superior leadership training would be afforded two or three basketball captains and half a dozen football captains, different sets every season, possibly every month or two.

"There's a lot for them to do: make substitutions and adjustments, keep each player's head in the game, keep everyone's emotions right on, calm down the guys who need that, rally the team in adversity, verbalize effectively in crisis situations.

"Majoring and maturing in all that is an educational experience that in some respects beats classwork."

Initial-eligibility standards

Editorial

The New York Times

"Proposition 48 decreased the total of black collegiate athletes in Division I schools by a little less than 600 per year. But because those who made the grade were better qualified, the number who graduated actually went up, by about 150, an increase of six percent. Why the change? Athletes took higher-quality courses while in high school. The colleges provided stronger academic support.

"These are encouraging developments. The NCAA needs to continue in this vein, until every high-school coach and every sports-struck kid hears the message: No grades, no ball game."

Editorial

The San Diego Union

"Rather than assail the higher academic standards, coaches and other critics should be concentrating on what is in the best interests of minority student-athletes.

"Proposition 16 proceeds from the reasonable assumption that minority athletes should not be treated any differently than other students when it comes to admissions and academic performance.

"For far too long, student-athletes have been given too many special considerations in college, and that has devalued the goal of getting an education. Proposition 16, like the other reforms that have preceded it, sends a clear message that not cutting it in the classroom means losing out on a scholarship, regardless of a student's physical prowess.

"The sooner students learn this lesson, the sooner they are going to take seriously the importance of an education."

High-school sports

John Stevenson, baseball coach
El Segundo (California) High School
Los Angeles Times

"Our mission (in high-school athletics) is not to build college players or professional players. Our mission is to provide an education, and athletics is part of the educational process. If a kid gets a scholarship, that's nice, but I don't think kids should play just for that purpose. They should play because they love to play."

Some all-America recognition can be tied to dues payment

Winthrop AD concerned after golfer is denied spot

By Gary T. Brown
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

A major goal of any coaches association is to promote its particular sport, and one of the most visible avenues of promotion available is the awards program.

Through award programs, hundreds of student-athletes each year are honored on all-district, all-region or all-America teams.

While all-America teams in football, basketball and baseball are selected by national sportswriters, the rest are chosen by coaches associations, which are charged with searching nooks and crannies across the country to honor the best student-athletes.

Rarely do any student-athletes fall through the cracks — as long as their coaches pay their association dues.

Most coaches associations put a high priority on athletics performance in making all-America team selections. Most, when asked, also readily acknowledge that nominees must be from dues-paying institutions. That stipulation, however, often is not publicly reported when the all-America team is released.

Widespread policy

Coaches associations in track and field, soccer, swimming, volleyball, softball, and golf are among those that include the dues-payment stipulation in their all-America and all-academic selection criteria.

According to Jim Hames, executive director of the Golf Coaches Association of America, it is not unusual for a coaches association to solicit its membership to support an awards program.

"When the coaches association pays the bills for the awards it gives, it behooves any association to get financial support for those awards from the membership," he said. "If a coaches association were to give awards to nonmembers, why would anyone want to join the association? The NCAA raises millions of dollars during their championships and it doesn't turn around and give those dollars to nonmember institutions."

"In our situation, we don't have a corporate sponsor for our all-America teams, so the membership dues pay for the program," said Sandra L. Vivas, executive director of the American Volleyball Coaches Association, which also names all-America teams for its membership.

Initial eligibility

NCAA Convention is the appropriate forum for debating all aspects of this complicated topic will count against scholarship limits and may be awarded only three years of NCAA competition instead of the usual four.

It has been noted that this approach marks an evolution of the Commission's earlier position, which permitted a fourth year of competition. This is because most members of the Commission believed that a total relaxation of standardized test-score requirements for these few students should be accompanied by a strong signal about the risks of this approach. The three-year limit on competition sends a clear message to high schools that the partial-qualifier provision is not just another route to preprofessional athletics competition.

Perhaps even more important, it requires us to make not only astute judgments about the preparation of each student but also a strong commitment to the academic success of each and every one.

Allowing each institution to determine what standardized test scores are necessary acknowledges the enormous variation among our colleges and universities in their ability to work with students. Clearly, the risks involved mean that the number of partial qualifiers will be small.

Finally, this approach to initial eligibility requires that we exercise mutual trust in our institutions and also trust in the safeguards we have erected to prevent the abuses of the past. The satisfactory-progress requirements currently in place will apply to these student-athletes without exception, providing a strong follow-up message that academic success ensures athletics opportunity.

Plainly, if we deny institutions the opportunity to commit themselves to working closely with their student-athletes to achieve academic success, we deny them the chance we would readily afford if the students in question were not athletes, but simply students who needed academic support.

But we must keep in mind that our student-athletes are not just "any" students; they are students who, in addition to working hard academically, spend many hours in practice and play. Just "any" student cannot handle this balance of responsibilities, and it is appropriate that we ensure their academic readiness to undertake such an enormous task — even if that means requiring a higher level of academic preparation than would be asked of other students in some institutions.

This careful approach again sends a message to America's future NCAA student-athletes and to their high schools that rigorous academic preparation is the only credible avenue to participation in our higher education institutions and, by extension, in the athletics programs they sponsor.

As we move toward the NCAA Convention in January, it is becoming increasingly apparent that "initial eligibility" will occupy a major part of our time and attention. There are compelling arguments and positions on both sides of the issue, and the Convention should be the forum in which they are debated, discussed and analyzed from every vantage point. Fortunately, the structure of pending legislation allows us to consider separately certain critical components of initial eligibility, such as the Commission's focus on academic integrity and student welfare.

Proposal No. 36, as amended by No. 36-1, attempts to honor these important values while balancing the potentially competing needs of diverse institutions. In so doing, it deserves the strong consideration of all of us involved with intercollegiate athletics.

Judith E. N. Albino is chair of the NCAA Presidents Commission and president of the University of Colorado.

Winthrop University golfer Chris Winchip (above) was omitted from the Golf Association of America's all-America list because Winthrop wasn't a dues-paying member of the association.

"Without those dues we wouldn't be able to pay for the programs we offer," echoed Lacy Lee Baker, executive director of the National Softball Coaches Association.

Golfer excluded

The requirement of dues for all-America consideration recently caused concern at Winthrop University, where golfer Chris Winchip last spring became only the school's second student-athlete to participate in an NCAA postseason tournament. He qualified for the NCAA East regional of the Division I Men's Golf Championships.

Though Winchip narrowly missed advancing from the regional to the national tournament, his season stroke average of 71.77 and four regular-season tournament victories figured to earn him all-American recognition from the Golf Coaches Association of America. The problem was that Winthrop wasn't a dues-paying member of the association, thus rendering Winchip ineligible for nomination.

Giving awards with financial strings attached raised some questions with Winthrop's athletics director, who believed that Winchip was penalized for a circumstance over which he had no control.

"I would like to think that all-America teams are solely based on the merits of the young men and women, not on whether the coach belongs to the coaches association," said Winthrop athletics director Steve Vacendak. "That might cause some misconception on the part of the student-athletes who don't make the team."

Hames, however, said his all-America team-selection committee informed officials at Winthrop of the possibility of Winchip being an award candidate.

"It's not like they didn't have the opportunity to pay," he said. "They just didn't do it."

Benefits for schools

According to Hames, the benefits of membership go beyond student-athlete awards. For example, his association — through corporate sponsorship — awards $1,000 scholarships for academic all-Americans in the names of selected golfers to schools' general scholarship funds.

"I can't imagine that any Division I institution wouldn't join its coaches associations when there are thousands of scholarship dollars at stake," he said.

G. Robert Boettner, executive director of the College Swimming Coaches Association of America, said his association consists of about 75 percent of the institutions that sponsor swimming; by the end of the year, that figure could reach 90 percent. Boettner said most coaches who haven't paid dues have just forgotten and are happy to remit the fee when approached about an all-America candidate.

Similarly, James A. Sheldon, Boettner's counterpart at the National Soccer Coaches Association of America, said he receives several calls in the fall — usually from high-school coaches who feel they have a potential award candidate and want to join simply for that reason.

"The all-America teams are another vehicle by which we can raise awareness of the sport," Sheldon said. "Frankly, it's viewed by most of us (administrators of coaches associations) that it's our all-American team so we're going to set the rules — we determine the criteria. While the primary goal is to promote the sport, another goal is to promote membership in our association."

The NCAA Executive Committee in 1983 established criteria regarding the publication of national coaches' polls in The NCAA News including a policy that no institution shall be required to pay a membership fee in order to be ranked.

Vacendak believes a similar requirement may be in order for all-America teams.

"If it's true there is a financial requirement to be named to an all-America team," Vacendak said, "then it ought to be acknowledged in that way. I think it's fine for the coaches associations to set the criteria for all-America teams, but if there are financial considerations involved, that needs to be stated."

■ Championships preview

Division I Women's Volleyball

Top-ranked Nebraska works to avoid repeat of early ouster

Event: 1994 Division I Women's Volleyball Championship.

Overview: This is the second year for a 48-team bracket, and expectations are that this year's tournament will provide just as many surprises as the first year of the format....There is plenty of talent at the top, starting with top-ranked and unbeaten Nebraska, which looks to improve from a second-round knockout in last year's tournament. The Cornhuskers are led by national player-of-the-year candidate Allison Weston, a .340 hitter averaging 4.6 kills per game. "We're a good team that plays great at times because of our chemistry," said Nebraska head coach Terry Pettit. "Our setter, Christy Johnson, has the ability to keep us organized even when we're not playing well." Nebraska also features outside hitter Kelly Aspegren, who has helped the Cornhuskers compile a nation-leading .317 team hitting percentage. "There may be 30 teams who could beat anyone on a given night, and there may be eight to 14 more who are capable of winning three or four in a row," Pettit said....Seven of those teams may be in the Pacific-10 Conference alone. Stanford, UCLA, Southern California, Arizona, Arizona State, Washington and Washington State all are ranked in the American Volleyball Coaches Association top 25. Stanford and UCLA, the cream of the conference, split their season series, each winning at home in front of big crowds. UCLA features national player-of-the-year candidate Annett Buckner, who averages 5.1 kills per game. The Bruins also have two of the conference's top blockers in Kim Krull and Alyson Randick, who have led UCLA to a national-best 3.5 blocks per game....Other contenders include Penn State, Ohio State, Hawaii, Pacific (California), Long Beach State, Florida and Colorado.

Field: The 48-team field includes at least one team from each of four regions. Seventeen conferences have been granted automatic qualification, and 14 conferences will engage in play-in competition to fill seven more conference berths. The remaining teams will be selected at large. The field will be selected November 27.

Dates and sites: Sixteen first-round matches will be played November 30, and 16 second-round matches will be played December 3 or 4, all on the campuses of participating institutions. Four regional tournaments will be played December 8-11. The semifinals and final will be December 15 and 17 at Texas.

Results: Championship results will appear in the December 21 issue of The NCAA News.

Championship notes: UCLA head coach Andy Banachowski notched his 750th career win earlier this season. Banachowski, now 764-151 in 28 seasons, is the reigning career-victories leader in women's volleyball. UCLA men's volleyball coach Al Scates tops the list in men's volleyball....Division I volleyball attendance is on a pace this year to surpass the 1.8 million mark. Florida, Hawaii and Nebraska are among national leaders in attendance. "We've been very consistent here, and our growth has been steady over the past 18 years," said Nebraska's Pettit. "We've led in attendance in three of the last four years and our fan base has been built around great volleyball, not because of promotional gimmicks or anything like that. We've got a large number of season-ticket sales — a strong grassroots movement in volleyball in Nebraska. That's happening now in several different spots across the country. Volleyball is just now developing the kinds of traditions and expectations that, for example, men's basketball has had for years."

Salima Davidson, an all-tournament selection at last year's championship, helped lead Penn State into last season's final against Long Beach State.

Tar Heel women, Bison men capture I, III soccer titles

North Carolina wins ninth straight championship

North Carolina may have had its 101-game unbeaten streak stopped earlier this year, but the Tar Heels extended a more important streak by winning their ninth consecutive Division I Women's Soccer Championship title November 20 in front of a sellout crowd at Portland, Oregon.

North Carolina all-American midfielder Tisha Venturini scored twice and Angela Kelly scored one goal and assisted on another as the Tar Heels downed Notre Dame, 5-0, in the championship game.

Notre Dame had tied the Tar Heels in the regular season and was the top-ranked team entering the tournament, but it fell victim to a second-half Tar Heel barrage.

North Carolina (25-1-1) scored 15 minutes into the game when Sarah Dacey headed Keri Sanchez's corner kick to Kelly, who nestled the ball inside the right post for the goal.

The Tar Heels extended their lead in the second half when Venturini gathered a carom off a defender and scored past Notre Dame goalkeeper Jen Renola. Freshman forward Robin Confer drove a shot past Renola 17 minutes later for her 18th goal of the season and a 3-0 North Carolina lead.

Bethany (West Virginia) men nip Johns Hopkins

Pat Ricci of Bethany (West Virginia) broke a scoreless tie in the second overtime period of the Division III Men's Soccer Championship final to give the Bison a 1-0 victory over Johns Hopkins November 19 at Trenton State.

The title was the first for Bethany (15-5-4), which had made 12 previous tournament appearances under head coach John Cunningham — including a runner-up finish in 1982.

Ricci's goal, his eighth of the season, came two minutes into the second overtime on a pass from senior forward Steve Lindquist. Ricci fired the ball from 15 yards off the left post for the game-winner.

"Everybody has their 15 minutes of fame, I hear," Ricci said afterward.

The Bison's five tournament games all went into overtime, including three games that were decided by penalty kicks. In their semifinal match against unbeaten Wisconsin-Oshkosh (18-0-3), the Bison converted four of five penalty kicks, including one from Ricci, to advance from a scoreless draw.

Johns Hopkins (17-3-3), which made the semifinals for the first time since 1975, advanced to the championship game with a 1-0 victory over host Trenton State (19-2-2).

Adams State sweeps II cross country championships

Men's team continues its tradition of dominance

Before joining the NCAA in 1992, Adams State dominated NAIA cross country, winning 12 national men's titles.

The move didn't end the domination. Adams State placed four runners among the top 20 finishers — including two in the top 10 — and totaled 55 points to coast to its third consecutive Division II Men's Cross Country Championship team title November 19 at Nebraska-Kearney.

Adams State, which easily outdistanced Western State (73 points), joins San Diego State (1965 through 1967) and Edinboro (1986 through 1988) as the only teams to win three straight team titles.

Northeast Missouri State, host Nebraska-Kearney and Ashland rounded out the top five, registering 195, 196 and 201 points, respectively.

Hector Hernandez-Salazar and Daniel Caulfield led the way for the Indians, individually finishing fourth and fifth, respectively. Hernandez-Salazar clocked in with a time of 31 minutes, 14 seconds, while Caulfield finished one second behind his teammate (31:15.0).

Peter De La Cerda, who finished 12th

(31:37.0), and Eli Gibbons, 19th (32:04.1), also recorded top-20 finishes for coach John Kernan's Indians. Paul De La Cerda, Elphonso Curley and Jason Kayne rounded out the Indians' scoring, placing 26th, 27th and 42nd, respectively.

"These kids run well in championship races," said Kernan. "When the chips are down, these kids come through. When the pressure is on, they run well."

"We've run good as a team. You pick one of the seven, they did a great job."

Charles Mulinga of Lewis claimed the individual title, posting a time of 30:50.9. Mulinga, who swept the 5,000-meter runs at the 1994 indoor and outdoor track championships and also won the 10,000-meter run outdoors, won his first cross country crown. His time was nine seconds better than runner-up Phillip Spratley of Western State (31:00.0). Jurmain Mitchell of Emporia State finished third in 31:11.0.

Women's team wins fifth national title in six years

Like their male counterparts, the Adams State women entered NCAA competition three years ago with a rich tradition of success. And, like their male counterparts, they've continued to build on that tradition.

Holding off a strong challenge from cross-state rival Western State, Adams State chalked up 47 points for an eight-point victory and its third consecutive Division II Women's Cross Country Championships team title November 19 at Nebraska-Kearney.

Coach Damon Martin's Indians have won five national championships in the last six years. Adams State won NAIA titles in 1989 and 1991 before joining the NCAA.

UC Davis placed a distant third with 171 points, followed by North Dakota (173) and Abilene Christian (205), respectively.

Led by Karen Talamantes, who finished a team-high fourth individually, the Indians claimed five of the top 20 individual spots to record the lowest winning team-point total since Cal Poly San Luis Obispo scored 34 points in 1989.

The Indians' Pamela White was seventh individually, finishing in 18 minutes, 18 seconds. Norma Gonzalez, Nikole Sterling and Nara Hawker rounded out the Indians' top five, placing 10th, 11th and 18th, respectively. Janelle Olson, who finished 31st, and Eva Malouff, 37th, rounded out the scoring.

"We knew we couldn't let (Western State's) first three runners beat our top runner," said Martin. "This team had a lot to prove. They wanted to show people what we're capable of."

Western State's Elva Dryer won her second consecutive individual title, finishing in 17:20.9, more than 27 seconds ahead of runner-up Bigna Samuel of Abilene Christian. Dryer joined Amy Harper of Cal Poly San Luis Obispo (1982 and 1983) and Christie Allen of Pittsburg State (1991 and 1992) as the only women to repeat as Division II champions.

"This is the best I've run all year," said Dryer. "I think the low altitude helps. I was just running, I had no idea of where the next runner was."

Williams surprises field on its way to winning III men's championship

Team knocks off defending champs to win first title

After posting a championships-record score of 32 points a year ago and returning four of its top seven competitors from its victorious squad, North Central was favored to cruise to the 1994 Division III Men's Cross Country Championships team title.

It turned out to be a Williams ambush.

Jeremie Perry won the individual title and Williams claimed four of the top 23 team places — scoring 98 points — to beat runner-up North Central by 12 points and win its first Division III team title November 19 at the Lehigh

Williams' title ended North Central's two-year reign and marked the first time Williams has finished in the top two. Williams placed fifth last year with 187 points, more than 150 behind the Cardinals.

Rochester placed third with 136 points, followed by Wabash with 158 and Wisconsin-La Crosse (runner-up in 1993) with 161 points.

Only a junior, Perry surprised the field with his winning time of 24 minutes, 41.8 seconds. The time was 14 seconds better than runner-up John Weigel of North Central, who earned his second consecutive runner-up finish.

Also finishing strong for Williams were Marzuki Stevens, who placed seventh in 25:13.4; Tim Billo, 22nd overall in 25:34.4; and Creaghen Trainer, 29th overall in 25:42.8. Greg Cowther, Greg Whitmore and Pete Anastasio also contributed, finishing 61st, 88th and 107th, respectively.

Joining North Central's Weigel as top-20 finishers were teammates Jim Dickerson, third, and Brian Henz, 16th. Luther Olson, 55th overall; Matt Brill, 57th; Ryan Board, 58th; and Cam Stuber, 77th, rounded out the Cardinals' seven-man squad.

La Fleur leads Cortland State women to third straight III cross country title

Red Dragons take five of top 30 spots in individual race

When the Cortland State women won the 1993 Division III cross country championships by a mere 32 points, it supposedly was a sign that the gap between the Red Dragons and the rest of the field was closing. After all, Cortland State won the 1992 crown by a championships-record 90 points.

But Michelle La Fleur won the 1994 individual title and the Red Dragons claimed five of the top 30 individual places to easily outdistance the field and win their third consecutive team title — and fifth in six years — November 19 at Moravian served as championships host.

Sparked by La Fleur's showing, Cortland State scored 54 points, less than half the score of runner-up Calvin (115 points).

Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 1991 champions, placed third with 147 points. Williams and Wartburg finished fourth and fifth, respectively. Williams scored 151 points; Wartburg scored 197.

La Fleur became the third

Cortland State runner — but first since 1990 — to win the individual title. Marybeth Crawley and Vicki Mitchell claimed championships in 1989 and 1990, respectively. La Fleur posted a winning time of 17 minutes, 47.2 seconds, more than three seconds better than runner-up Kelly Copps of St. Thomas (Minnesota).

Joining La Fleur among the top 30 finishers were teammates Heather Swarts, ninth; Julie Donnelly, 17th; Heidi Swarts, 28th; and Dorothy Donnelly, 30th.

Calvin, which earned its third consecutive runner-up finish, was paced individually by Betsy Haverkamp and Amy Kuipers, who placed 11th and 13th, respectively.

James Madison steps on Tar Heels for I field hockey title

James Madison outshot North Carolina in penalty strokes to claim a 2-1 overtime victory and the Division I Field Hockey Championship November 20 in front of a championship-record crowd of 2,500 at Northeastern.

James Madison won the tie-breaking period's coin toss and opted to defend first. North Carolina scored on two of five attempts.

James Madison's Gwen Stoltzfus, the Dukes' fourth shooter, scored the game-winner, beating Tar Heel goalie Jana Withrow to give James Madison the decisive 4-2 advantage in penalty strokes. This is the second straight year that North Carolina has fallen in the championship game by penalty strokes.

In regulation, each team scored first-half goals, and then was blanked through the second half and two 15-minute overtimes.

North Carolina struck first with 20:28 left in the first half, when Meredith Lawrence converted off assists by Joy Driscoll and Barbara Hansen. James Madison's all-time leading scorer, sophomore Carole Thate—who also scored the Dukes' only goal in their second-round overtime victory over Penn State—evened the game unassisted with 1:33 left in the half.

James Madison finished 20-3-2.

North Carolina, whose only other loss in a 21-2 season came at Massachusetts, has been runner-up for four of the last five years after winning its only title in 1989.

Thate, Eileen Arnaldo, Kelley Bloomer and Heather Colbert represented the winners on the all-tournament team. Hansen, Lawrence, Sharon Moore and Cindy Werley of North Carolina also were honored, as were Northwestern's Gretchen Scheuermann and Jennifer Pelleriti and Iowa's Jessica Enoch.

Lions' roar

Trenton State College's Kerri Shembari (No. 12), Jennifer Massucco (No. 21) and Heather Batz (No. 1) joined their teammates in celebration November 13 after the Lions defeated the University of California, San Diego, 4-3, and won the NCAA Division III Women's Soccer Championship. It was the second straight title for the Lions, who became the third school in the nine-year history of the championship to successfully defend a title.

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 14 October 27, 1994

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Athletics Equipment/Apparel

1. Receipt of Athletics Equipment/Apparel as a Result of Family Member's Contractual Agreement. It is not permissible for a student-athlete to receive athletics equipment, supplies or clothing directly from a manufacturer or commercial enterprise under any circumstances. The committee noted that a student-athlete's family member who receives such items as part of a contract with a manufacturer or commercial enterprise may provide such items to the student-athlete at his or her discretion. [Reference: NCAA Bylaw 16.12.2.6 (athletics equipment)]

Awards/Conference Championship

2. Separate Regular-Season and Postseason Conference Championships. The provisions of 16.1.4.3 permit awards to be presented to both the regular-season conference champion and the champion of the postseason conference tournament, with a separate $250 awards limitation for each; however, if the same institution is the regular-season and postseason conference champion, the $250 limit is applicable to the combined total of all awards received by the participating student-athletes at that institution. [Reference: 16.1.4.3 (conference and national championships)]

Two-Year College/Scrimmages/Jamborees

3. Participation in Two-Year College Preseason Basketball Jamborees (Divisions I, II and III). A two-year college preseason jamboree is not considered a preseason scrimmage; thus, a two-year college student-athlete who participates in such a jamboree against outside competition uses a season of competition as a result of such participation. [References: 14.2.4.1 (minimum amount of competition) and 14.2.4.1.1 (exception — two-year college scrimmages)]

Evaluation/Observation/Videotape

4. Observation of Prospects on Videotapes (Divisions I and II). The committee reviewed several issues related to the observation of prospects on videotapes and determined the following:

a. When a videotape that includes prospects is delivered to an institutional coaching staff member at the coach's institution, the observation of prospects on such a videotape at an off-campus site (e.g., the coach's home) is not considered an "off-campus activity" and, thus, is not included in the permissible number of evaluations in the applicable sport.

b. If an authorized institutional coaching staff member visits a prospect's educational institution during the evaluation period, the institution is charged with an evaluation of all prospects at the educational institution. If the coaching staff member receives a videotape that includes prospects during the visit, the observation of the videotape at an off-campus site is not considered an additional evaluation.

c. If an authorized institutional coaching staff member makes a contact with a prospect at the prospect's educational institution, and receives a videotape that includes prospects during the visit, the observation of the videotape at an off-campus site is not considered an evaluation.

d. When an institutional coaching staff member observes a videotape of prospects at an off-campus site other than the situations set forth in subparagraphs a and b above (e.g., viewing of videotapes arranged by a scouting service or other individual or organization), the observation of prospects is considered an evaluation activity and is subject to the applicable regulations related to the evaluation of prospects.

[References: 13.02.3.1 (visit to prospect's educational institution — Divisions I-A and I-AA football), 13.02.5.1 (evaluation — Division I), 13.1.9 (limitations on numbers of evaluations — all sports), 13.1.9.1 [visit (without contact) to prospect's educational institution] and 13.1.9.8 (evaluations/contact at prospect's educational institution)]

Financial Aid/Counters/Exempt

5. Former Team Members With Remaining Eligibility Receiving Athletics Aid (Divisions I and II). The committee opposed recommending to the Council that it reverse two previous interpretations, which indicate that student-athletes with remaining eligibility who are no longer members of the institution's team but continue to receive athletics aid must be included in the institution's financial aid limitations in the applicable sport.

[References: 15.5.1.1 (athletics aid received); IC 6/4/87, Item No. 9; and IC 4/27/89, Item No. 3]

Football Attendance/I-A Membership

6. Use of Another Institution's Football Stadium to Meet I-A Football-Attendance Requirements (Division I-A). An institution may not satisfy the I-A football-attendance requirements set forth in 20.9.6.3-(b) if it participates in all of its home contests for one season at another NCAA institution's stadium (that contains a minimum of 30,000 permanent seats) and averages more than 17,000 in paid attendance per home contest played in that stadium during that season. The committee determined that a previous Council interpretation (reference: August 1, 1990, meeting, Item No. 9-b), which allowed an institution to satisfy the 30,000-seat requirement for only the most recent season, applies only to a situation in which an institution was making modifications to its existing on-campus stadium (so that it would contain a minimum of 30,000 seats) that had been used on a regular basis for many years for its home contests. [References: 20.9.6.3-(b) (football-attendance requirements) and Council 8/1/90, Item No. 9-b]

(1) Appointed Brenda McCoy, assistant to the commissioner of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference, to the Division I Women's Basketball Committee effective immediately, replacing Charlene M. Johnson, declined appointment.

(2) Appointed W. James Copeland Jr. as the Atlantic Coast Conference representative to the Special Events Committee, replacing Ferdinand A. Geiger, no longer at an ACC member institution.

(3) Appointed Kelly Higgins, athletics director at the University of Alaska

Fairbanks, to the Men's and Women's Skiing Committee, replacing Sten Fjeldheim, resigned.

(4) Determined that the chair of the Olympic Sports Liaison Committee automatically would serve as one of the Association's two representatives to the U.S. Olympic Committee board of directors; noted that Judith R. Holland, senior associate athletics director at the University of California, Los Angeles, would serve in that capacity by virtue of her position as chair.

(5) Appointed Oliver Purnell, men's basketball coach at the University of Dayton, as one of the Association's four representatives to the USA Basketball College Committee, replacing Stu Jackson, no longer at a member institution.

b. Approved a request for an incidental-expense waiver per NCAA Bylaw 16.13.1 to permit an institution to pay expenses for a student-athlete to receive corrective surgery for a physical condition that existed before her enrollment at the institution.

c. Approved a request for a waiver of the requirements of Bylaw 15.5.1.4.3 to permit an institution to consider a student-athlete a noncounter in terms of financial aid due to documentation that the original injury clearly appeared to be incapacitating and that there were not reasonable expectations that the student-athlete could participate in athletics.

d. Agreed that the preliminary report of the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism's subcommittee on need-based aid would be sent to each member of the Administrative Committee for review before its submission to the Council, at the suggestion of the financial aid committee.

2. Acting for the Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Noted that discussion of possible changes in the Association's seal and logo would be deferred until the conclusion of the review of the NCAA membership structure, but that the staff would continue to explore various options in the interim.

b. Considered a request from the president of the National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches for an in-person meeting with the Executive Committee to discuss the latter's position on legislation for the 1995 NCAA Convention affecting the National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships; noted that representatives of the coaches association previously had met with the Presidents Commission Liaison Committee on this matter; and agreed to invite the association to submit written information for the Executive Committee's review at its December meeting, rather than meet with it in person.

3. Acting for the Council and Executive Committee, the Administrative Committee:

a. Received information regarding the work of the Special Television Negotiating Committee, in progress.

b. Received a status report on the work of the Divisions I, II and III Task Forces to Review the NCAA Membership Structure; and agreed that each group should consider issues related to division membership criteria and how it wished to treat those issues, if at all.

c. Discussed the role of consultants to NCAA committees, noting that in May it had agreed that the use of all consultants would be phased out by August 31, 1996.

4. Report of actions taken by the executive director per Constitution 4.3.2. Acting for the Executive Committee:

Approved a recommendation from the Division I Women's Basketball Committee that the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference be realigned from the East to the Mideast region, for administrative purposes, effective immediately.

Carolina turned losing records in 1993 into winning marks this season, and all three teams sport five-game improvements in Division I-A. Boise State, meanwhile, has clinched the Division I-AA most-improved crown, thanks to its 10-1 record — a full seven games better than last season's 3-8.

Boise State's 1994 squad under second-year coach "Pokey" Allen already is among the all-time most-improved teams in Division I-AA history and can challenge Boston University's eight-game improvement of a year ago with a strong showing in this year's championship.

Montana State's record 9 1/2-game improvement of 1984 is safe, however, since Boise State can finish no better than 14-1 and nine games better than 1993 by winning the Division I-AA title.

Colorado State coach Sonny Lubick, also in his second year, led the surprising Rams to their first league championship in the surprising Western Athletic Conference. Colorado State, 10-1 and headed for the Holiday Bowl, put aside memories of last season's 5-6 finish with early-season victories at Brigham Young and Arizona.

The Rams then clinched the WAC title with come-from-behind victories against Wyoming and Fresno State in the final three weeks.

First-year coach Fred Goldsmith ignited Duke to a 7-0 start. Even though the Blue Devils dropped a pair of one-point decisions in the last two weeks of the regular season, Duke still has a chance for a bowl appearance and its first nine-win season since the 1941 Rose Bowl team. The Blue Devils' 8-3 record currently is their best since 1960 and a five-game improvement over last season's 3-8.

East Carolina clinched a Liberty Bowl bid with a season-ending triumph at Memphis. The Pirates, 7-4, seemed well on the way to turning a 2-9 campaign in 1993 around for third-year coach Steve Logan when they blitzed South Carolina, 56-42, in Columbia earlier this season.

In Division I-AA, four teams are sporting four-game improvements from 1993.

Appalachian State handed Marshall its only loss of the 1994 schedule, then dropped its season finale to previously winless Virginia Military. Still, the Mountaineers, 8-3, are four games better than last year's 4-7 and Jerry Moore's squad is headed for postseason play. Idaho State owns the only 1994 win over Boise State, a 32-31 decision in Pocatello. Brian McNeely's Bengals also improved by four games with their 6-5 finish.

New Hampshire needed overtime to capture the season finale at Boston University and, with it, the Yankee Conference crown. That decision lifted the playoff-bound Wildcats to 10-1 and a four-game improvement over 1993. Western Illinois and coach Randy Ball also improved their record by four games, capping an 8-3 season with a three-game winning streak.

Six teams with an improvement of three or more games are in the playoff field (see accompanying table).

NACDA Foundation announces four scholarship recipients

One member of each of the four football teams that participated in preseason football games sponsored by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) will receive scholarship grants from the NACDA Foundation.

The four recipients are Terry Connealy of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and Matt Taffoni of West Virginia University, participants in this year's Kickoff Classic, and Joseph Galloway of Ohio State University and Lance Thomas of California State University, Fresno, participants in the Disneyland Pigskin Classic.

Four $5,000 grants are awarded annually to a varsity football letter-winner representing each participant in the preseason games. Each recipient must be in his final year of eligibility and carry a grade-point average of at least 3.000 (4.000 scale).

The NACDA Foundation provides the funds for postgraduate study.

"The recipient of the scholarship can be anyone the athletics department of the school wishes; it does not have to be a star or a starter," said NACDA President Eugene D. Smith, athletics director at Iowa State University.

"This furthers the NACDA Foundation's commitment to providing advanced educational opportunities for student-athletes."

Funding for the NACDA Foundation comes from the preseason games; proceeds also help fund the National Football Foundation and the American Football Coaches Association. The two games annually generate $420,000 in scholarships, according to NACDA officials.

The recipients will be honored during NACDA's 30th annual convention June 11-14 in New Orleans.

Connealy, a defensive tackle at Nebraska, has a 3.760 GPA in agribusiness. He was a first-team all-Big Eight Conference player and first-team academic all-American in 1993 and is a three-time Big Eight all-academic player.

West Virginia's Taffoni, an outside linebacker with a 3.520 GPA in chemistry, is a three-time Big East Conference all-academic player and was a 1993 member of the College Football Association Scholar-Athlete Team. He also is a Toyota Leadership Award recipient.

Galloway, a third-team all-American last year as a wide receiver, has been a Big Ten Conference all-academic player and a Honda Scholar-Athlete. He has a 3.000 GPA in marketing.

Thomas, a free safety at Fresno State with a 3.200 GPA in speech communication, has led his team this year in solo tackles, total tackles and interceptions. He is a five-time dean's list honoree.

Legislation

Delegates to consider 41 proposals on Presidential Agenda Day at 1995 Convention

■ Require campus student-athlete advisory committees.

■ Permit on-campus lodging and meals, among other expenses, for student-athletes attending general institutional orientation sessions.

■ Provide "reasonable" local transportation to student-athletes on an "occasional" basis.

■ Add student-athletes in an advisory capacity to five NCAA general committees.

The special committee also recommended that student-athletes participating in Division I football, basketball and ice hockey be allowed to use the provisions of the one-time transfer exception, and the Presidents Commission agreed to sponsor the proposal. The NCAA Council, however, has stated its opposition — based on concerns that the legislation would encourage "raiding" among Division I programs in those sports.

Another recommendation by the special committee — to allow a coach to provide limited skill-related instruction out of season upon the request of a student-athlete — is addressed in seven proposals.

Two of those proposals would implement the recommendations in Divisions I and II and are sponsored by the Presidents Commission, but the Council is sponsoring alternatives to those measures that are based on recommendations of the NCAA Special Committee to Study Rules Federation. The latter proposals do not require that the student-athlete request the instruction.

Two membership proposals — including one from the Big Ten Conference that would eliminate the safety exception for voluntary individual workouts in Divisions I and II — offer other approaches to skill-related instruction, and another proposal — originating from the student-athlete welfare committee — would permit instruction upon request in Division III.

The student-athlete welfare committee also recommended the establishment of a standing Student-Athlete Welfare, Access and Equity Committee and a study of the effects of recent reform legislation on Divisions I and II student-athletes. But the Presidents Commission, after agreeing to sponsor those proposals at the Convention, plans to withdraw the measures. The NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee expressed concerns about the establishment of the standing committee, and the Council expressed concerns about the cost and feasibility of the study.

There are other proposals involving student-athletes issues that originated from sources other than the student-athlete welfare committee. They include:

■ Exclusion of Pell Grants from consideration in determining the permissible amount of a full grant-in-aid. (The Presidents Commission is sponsoring an amendment-to-amendment that would permit a Pell Grant recipient to receive institutional financial aid up to the cost of attendance.)

■ Permission for Division I student-athletes to earn up to $1,500 in job income beyond the amount of a full grant-in-aid, provided that athletics staff members or representatives of athletics interests do not arrange the employment.

■ Resolutions to consider requiring institutions involved in the NCAA certification process to demonstrate the existence of a grievance procedure for student-athletes, and to encourage professional-development opportunities for coaches.

Initial eligibility

Student-athlete issues are the stated emphasis of the 1995 Convention.

However, much attention also will be focused in the Division I business session on discussion of six proposals dealing with NCAA initial-eligibility standards.

The proposals have been placed by Presidents Commission officers in an order that is expected to produce a full debate of the issue. As has been done in past Conventions, the proposals are arranged so that the membership first will consider proposals that would result in the greatest modification to current legislation and proceed to those that would result in the least change.

Because 1992 Convention Proposal No. 16 is regarded as the current legislation — its standards will go into effect in August 1995 if no action is taken in San Diego — the proposals are arranged in accordance to the degree that each would modify Proposal No. 16.

In the order they are scheduled to be considered, the proposals are:

■ A Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference proposal to eliminate freshman eligibility for competition. The proposal also provides for student-athletes to earn a fourth season of competition based upon satisfactory progress.

■ A MEAC proposal to retain initial-eligibility standards now in use — commonly known as "Prop 48" — and cancel implementation of Proposal No. 16.

■ A proposal based on initial-eligibility standards recommended earlier this year by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Initial-Eligibility Standards.

■ A Council-sponsored proposal to delay implementation of the "Prop 16" index for grade-point and standardized-test-score minimums for one year, until August 1996. (The Commission and Council will sponsor an amendment-to-amendment to delete from that proposal language that would define a partial qualifier.)

■ A Commission and Council proposal to redefine partial qualifiers and nonqualifiers. The proposal is accompanied by a Commission- and Council-sponsored amendment-to-amendment that, if adopted, would incorporate the Commission's and Council's proposed definition of a partial qualifier as an individual who does not meet "Prop 16" standards but achieves a 2.500 grade-point average in 13 core courses and a standardized-test score as required by the institution. Partial qualifiers would be able to practice (but not compete) and receive athletically related aid as freshmen and would be eligible for three years of competition. The amendment-to-amendment also would delay the effective date of the new definitions until August 1996.

The membership will have the option during consideration of this proposal to provide partial qualifiers with the opportunity for a fourth year of competition.

■ An Atlantic Coast Conference proposal to redefine partial qualifiers as those who meet the current "Prop 48" standards, effective August 1995.

The NCAA News soon will publish information intended to serve as a "road map" for consideration of the proposals.

Division II issues

A prominent topic of recent Conventions — cost reduction — reappears in the form of Council-sponsored proposals in Division II to establish limits on the numbers of coaches in all sports and eliminate spring football practice.

The proposed coaching limits were developed by the Division II Steering Committee after a survey in which more than 70 percent of the respondents indicated support for such legislation. The steering committee has reported that more than 40 percent of the respondents said the legislation would result in moderate or significant cost savings at their institutions.

The proposed limits are:

■ Eight coaches in football (one head coach, three full-time assistant coaches, and four other coaches who must be either part-time, graduate assistant or volunteer coaches).

■ Three coaches in basketball (one head coach, one full-time assistant, and one other coach who must be either a part-time, graduate assistant or volunteer coach).

■ Two coaches in sports other than basketball and football.

The proposal, which specifically exempts weight or strength coaches and undergraduate coaches from the limits, also establishes definitions for coaching categories (including compensation criteria).

A group of Division II institutions has proposed an amendment-to-amendment that would permit one additional volunteer coach in basketball and an unlimited number of volunteer coaches in sports other than football and basketball.

The Division II Steering Committee also originated the proposal to eliminate spring football practice. Although cost-containment is a primary objective of the measure, student-athlete safety and time commitments also are cited as reasons for adoption.

Membership structure

The general session on Presidential Agenda Day will open with a forum on membership-structure issues — including discussion of preliminary recommendations by division task forces currently reviewing those issues.

But later in the session, delegates to the Convention may find themselves voting on two membership proposals dealing with the topic. Both are opposed by the Council and Presidents Commission, which will seek referral of the proposals to the membership-structure task forces and Oversight Committee on the NCAA Membership Structure.

One of the proposals would establish a "Division IV" for institutions that sponsor "major" intercollegiate athletics programs and share similar philosophies. Sponsors estimate that 80 to 85 institutions would qualify for Division IV membership.

The Division IV proposal would:

■ Establish football scheduling and attendance requirements.

■ Require Division IV members to adhere to provisions of Bylaws 11 through 17 that are applicable to Divisions I and I-A.

■ Permit representatives of Division IV institutions to serve as Division I representatives on the Council, Presidents Commission and committees.

■ Permit Division IV institutions to enter teams and individuals in Division I championships.

■ Exempt federated legislation adopted by Division IV from rescission by a two-thirds vote of delegates attending a Convention.

The other proposal is a resolution sponsored by the Big Ten, Southeastern and Western Athletic Conferences and other Division I-A institutions. The resolution would direct the membership-structure task forces and oversight committee to prepare for the 1996 Convention a governance-restructuring proposal that "proportionately recognizes and politically empowers" institutions and conferences in accordance with their financial and competitive equity in the Association.

Other

Various other topics also are addressed in the Commission grouping:

■ Division III philosophy. The Division III business session will feature consideration of a new statement of philosophy. The statement, developed by the Task Force to Review the Division III Philosophy Statement, attempts to better reflect Division III institutions' philosophy regarding the proper role of athletics in higher education.

■ Satisfactory-progress requirements. A membership proposal would replace the "25/50/75" rule with a similar standard that the sponsors say will be easier to administer. The Council and Presidents Commission oppose the proposal on grounds that the proposal could reduce satisfactory-progress requirements for student-athletes in four-year degree programs requiring more than 120 hours of credit.

■ Two-year college transfers. The Big Ten and Atlantic Coast Conferences each are sponsoring proposals to require a two-year college transfer who was not a qualifier under NCAA initial-eligibility standards to complete an academic year in residence at a Division I institution before becoming eligible for competition. One of the proposals would limit such transfers to 10 hours of practice per week. The Presidents Commission opposes both proposals, but the Council has taken no position.

■ Football orientation. The Council supports a Big Ten proposal to increase the orientation period for first-time participants in Divisions I-A and I-AA football from two to three days (as long as one of the days is designated for academic orientation) and opposes a membership proposal to increase the orientation period to four days.

■ Division II grant limits. Proposals in Division II are seeking to base countable aid on tuition and fees in sports that have a Division II championship, and to increase the limit on grants in men's and women's basketball from 10 to 12.

■ Division III football season. The Presidents Commission is opposing a proposal to base maximum student-athlete participation during a season on quarters rather than games. The purpose of the proposal is to permit student-athletes who compete on a limited basis in varsity competition to also play in junior varsity and freshman games.

The Council and Commission will support a proposal to exempt participation in one preseason football scrimmage.

Mississippi receives four years of probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at the University of Mississippi on probation for four years, reduced scholarships and official visits for two years, banned television appearances for one year and banned postseason play for two years for NCAA rules violations in the football program.

The violations involved improper inducements for prospective student-athletes, impermissible recruiting contacts, extra benefits and unethical conduct. In addition, the committee found a significant lack of institutional control resulting from the university's failure to monitor adequately its football program.

The Committee on Infractions placed Mississippi on probation in 1986 for violations by the football team. The committee noted in its current report that it was "troubled by these violations because of the very similar nature of the violations in both cases." The committee had reduced the penalties in the 1986 case because of the institution's complete cooperation.

This time, the committee noted that although the institution cooperated fully in this investigation, the violations involved the same program and were similar in nature. The committee chose not to reduce or mitigate its penalties because of this apparent failure of the university to create an atmosphere for compliance with NCAA rules within the football program.

The Committee on Infractions heard this case September 30, 1994. Representatives of the university and conference appeared before the committee. The former head football coach also attended the hearing. The Committee on Infractions found NCAA rules violations, including:

- Representatives of the institution's athletics interests made numerous impermissible recruiting contacts with prospective student-athletes.

- On November 21, 1992, a representative of the institution's athletics interests made an in-person impermissible contact with four prospective student-athletes who were on their official visits. The representative drove them 75 miles from campus, beyond the permissible 30-mile limit, to meet a second representative in Memphis.

A second representative provided entertainment to the prospective student-athletes at so-called "gentlemen's clubs," described by participants as strip clubs or topless bars. Following entertainment at various clubs, the athletics representative drove the prospective student-athletes to a Memphis area hotel and paid for their lodging. The representative arranged for three of the prospective student-athletes to return to campus. One prospective student-athlete returned home directly from Memphis, Tennessee.

- During the January 17-19, 1992, official visit of a prospective student-athlete, two representatives of the institution's athletics interests had impermissible in-person contact with the prospective student-athlete. One of the representatives drove him 75 miles to Memphis. While in Memphis, this representative provided the prospective student-athlete with entertainment, alcoholic beverages and a meal at a topless bar or strip club. The next day, this representative drove the prospective student-athlete to a sporting goods store, where he was permitted to select items of clothing that the representative purchased.

- On at least two occasions in November 1992, two representatives of the university's athletics interests made impermissible in-person contacts with prospective student-athletes and provided them with free meals and transportation.

- On several occasions during January 1992 and 1993, student-athletes entertained prospective student-athletes on official visits beyond the permissible 30-mile limit from the university's campus.

- A representative of the institution's athletics interests offered a new automobile to a prospective student-athlete if he would commit to the university.

- A member of the football staff offered cash to a student-athlete in return for signing a National Letter of Intent. He also offered airline tickets for the prospective student-athlete's mother and girlfriend to use in traveling between the institution's campus and his home.

- A representative of the institution's athletics interests, who owned a department store, gave free clothes, which is an improper extra benefit, to a student-athlete.

- A football staff member allowed a student-athlete to use the staff member's car, also an improper extra benefit.

- A representative of the university's athletics interests arranged for an automobile loan for a student-athlete. The loan was contrary to NCAA legislation since it had a one-year deferred payment provision based upon the student-athlete's future earnings as a professional athlete.

- The university lacked institutional control over its football program.

- There was unethical conduct by the former head football coach, who was found to show a continuing pattern of disregard for NCAA rules in the operation of the football program.

- A former assistant football coach violated the principles of ethical conduct by encouraging a former football student-athlete to recant information previously reported to the NCAA enforcement staff.

- A former recruiting coordinator violated the principles of ethical conduct by failing to adequately monitor or control the recruiting process. He also failed to report violations of NCAA legislation of which he was aware.

The committee imposed the following penalties:

- Four years of probation from September 30, 1994.

- The university will be limited to 13 initial scholarships in football during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years, 12 fewer than the maximum allowed.

- During the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years, the institution will be limited to 40 expense-paid visits for prospective football student-athletes, which is 16 less than the maximum allowed.

- Prohibition from participating in postseason competition in football during the 1995 and 1996 seasons.

- Prohibition from televising any football games during the 1995 season.

- Public reprimand and censure.

- Requirement that the institution develop a comprehensive athletics compliance education program.

- Recertification of the university's athletics policies and practices.

- Disassociation of two representatives of the institution's athletics interests.

- If the former head football coach seeks employment in an athletics-related position at an NCAA member institution during a four-year period (from September 30, 1994, to September 30, 1998), he and the involved institution will be requested to appear before the Committee on Infractions to determine whether the former head coach's athletically related duties should be limited at the new institution.

As required by NCAA legislation for any institution in a major infractions case, Mississippi is subject to the NCAA's repeat-violator provisions for a five-year period beginning September 30, 1994.

Should Mississippi or the former head football coach wish to appeal this decision, they must submit a written notice of appeal to the NCAA executive director no later than 15 days from the date that Mississippi received the infractions report. The NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee, a separate group, hears such appeals.

The members of the Committee on Infractions who heard this case are Richard J. Dunn, associate dean of the college of arts and sciences, University of Washington; Jack H. Friedenthal, dean of the school of law, George Washington University; Frederick B. Lacey, attorney, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene and MacRae, and a retired judge; Yvonne (Bonnie) L. Slatton, chair of the department of physical education and sports studies, University of Iowa; and committee chair David Swank, professor of law, University of Oklahoma.

The complete report of the Committee on Infractions will appear in the November 28 edition of The NCAA Register.

Due-process law

Clause (of the United States Constitution)."

With the Nevada and Florida laws invalidated, Illinois and Nebraska now have the only remaining due-process laws.

The suit was filed because of the conflict it caused for the NCAA and its Florida members, who were put in a position of choosing between abiding by NCAA rules and complying with state law.

Specifically, the law prevented the Association from proceeding with an eligibility case involving several Florida State University football student-athletes. An injunction subsequently cleared the way for the resolution of that case.

The state due-process laws require the NCAA to meet judicial-like due-process standards in its enforcement process. If the due-process laws were permitted to stand, the result would be that the NCAA would not be able to enforce its rules equitably in all 50 states.

In his decision, Stafford addressed that point, citing a portion of the decision by the U.S. Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in the Nevada case.

"We appreciate Nevada's interest in assuring that its citizens and institutions will be treated fairly," the Ninth Circuit ruling said.

"However, the authority it seeks here goes to the heart of the NCAA and threatens to tear that heart out. Consistency among members must exist if an organization of this type is to thrive, or even exist."
