NCAA, CBS agree on $1.725 billion contract

The NCAA has announced two new television contracts — one with CBS granting it the exclusive rights to the Division I Men's Basketball Championship through the year 2002 and another with ESPN to expand coverage of the Division I Women's Basketball Championship from three games to 23.

"Taken together, these agreements provide valuable resources for our member institutions and invaluable exposure for one of our finest and fastest-growing championships," NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey said.

CBS will pay the NCAA $1.725 billion for exclusive television rights to all rounds of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, two games of the Division I Baseball

Agreement also signed with ESPN

Championship, the National Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Championships, the Division I Men's and Women's Outdoor Track and Field Championships, and the Division II Men's Basketball Championship.

The new agreement replaces an existing seven-year, $1 billion contract, which was to run from 1990-91 through 1996-97. The new contract begins with the 1994-95 academic year and runs through 2001-02.

Annual payments under the new contract will average $215.6 million, compared to $143 million under the previous agreement.

Despite the higher rights fees, commercial minutes during the games of the Division I Men's Basketball Championship will not be increased.

Dempsey noted that the partnership between the NCAA and CBS has been positive and beneficial for both organizations. "I am extremely pleased that it will continue into the next century," he said.

"The challenge to expand, or simply maintain, opportunities for students to participate in intercollegiate athletics is enormous and can be expected to grow in the coming years.

The CBS agreement will provide needed resources for NCAA members that are struggling to finance comprehensive sports programs."

Dempsey chaired the NCAA Special Television Committee that negotiated the contracts. Other members were Tom Butters, Duke University; Linda Bruno, Atlantic 10 Conference; John J. Crouthamel, Syracuse University; Robert E. Frederick, University of Kansas; and Charles S. Harris, Arizona State University.

ESPN will provide coverage of the following championships on ESPN and ESPN2: Division I women's basketball; Division I-AA

Restructuring moves toward discussion by membership

The three task forces evaluating the NCAA membership structure are looking toward the 1995 NCAA Convention as a forum for discussing their work to date.

The general business session on Presidential Agenda Day (January 9) will begin with a forum to report on the status of restructuring efforts. In addition, time has been set aside during the Divisions II and III Convention business sessions to discuss restructuring.

Division I has much less time together as a full group than II and III because of subdivision business sessions, but discussion will occur as time permits.

The Division III Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure soon will be mailing a document to the Division III membership that reflects its preliminary recommendations. Task force cochair Daniel Bridges, California Institute of Technology, and James R. Appleton, University of Redlands, are asking the Division III membership to review the material carefully and to send any reaction to the task force as soon as possible.

Bridges and Appleton also are asking for the Division III mem-

Gender-related grants face resistance

Proposals should be referred to committee first, Council urges

This is the fourth in a series of six articles on legislation that has been submitted for the 89th annual NCAA Convention January 7-11, 1995, in San Diego. This installment features the 15 proposals in the financial aid and amateurism grouping.

A pair of proposals that attempt to address gender-equity concerns is among legislation dealing with financial aid and amateurism issues that will be considered at the 1995 Convention.

One of the proposals, sponsored by the Southwest Conference and other institutions, would increase limits on permissible numbers of grants in aid for Division I women's sports other than basketball. The other proposal, sponsored by the Atlantic Coast Conference, would establish women's gymnastics, tennis and volleyball as equivalency sports and permit institutions to divide grants in those sports among a larger number of team members.

The proposals, however, will attract opposition from the NCAA Council unless they are withdrawn. The Council prefers that the proposals be referred to the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism, which currently is attempting to recommend principles for determining grant-in-aid limits for all Divisions I and II men's and women's sports.

The NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics, which has reviewed the proposals, also favors referral.

If adopted, the Southwest

Executive Committee considers budget surplus

The NCAA Executive Committee is expected to determine how to apply the unallocated surplus from the 1993-94 budget year — an amount that exceeds $21 million — when it meets December 4-5.

The Executive Committee previously had determined that two-thirds of this surplus would be returned to the Division I membership through the revenue-distribution plan and the remaining one-third would be applied to the funded operating reserve.

Among other items on the Executive Committee's agenda are reports from the Special NCAA Television Committee; the Divisions I, II and III Task Forces to Review the NCAA Membership Structure; the NCAA Presidents Commission Subcommittee on Minority Issues; the NCAA Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee; and a joint report from the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics, Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee, and the National Youth Sports Program Committee.

Updates also will be provided on NCAA marketing, licensing and promotions activities, along with a review of NCAA playing rules, especially as they apply to fighting.

Restructuring

Division task forces look toward Convention

The three task forces evaluating the NCAA membership structure are looking toward the 1995 Convention as a forum for discussing their work to date.

Time has been set aside during the Divisions II and III Convention business sessions to discuss restructuring. Also, the full membership will discuss restructuring at the beginning of the January 9 general business session.

Each of the three task forces met in late November.

The Division I task force considers its restructuring assessment as "a work in progress" and is expected to release detailed information after its next meeting (December 13 in Chicago). Generally, the Division I task force's plan involves an Association that is substantially more federated by division than the current version with a body of presidents as the authority in Division I.

The Division II task force spent a substantial amount of its time at its most recent meeting reacting to a tentative concept of a new governance structure that had been discussed by the Division I task force.

The Division III task force soon will be mailing a document to its membership that reflects its preliminary recommendations. Among those recommendations are that any revisions to the Association's overall governance structure should guarantee that:

■ The current quality and accessibility to NCAA championships for Division III institutions must be maintained.

■ Any restructuring of the Association must maintain the opportunity for Division III members to participate in the Association's catastrophic-injury insurance program.

■ Services available to the Division III membership through the NCAA national office (such as legislative interpretations, statistics and research) must continue.

Sportsmanship

Committee continues work on ethical-conduct issue

The NCAA Presidents Commission Committee on Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics will meet December 13-14 in Dallas.

At the group's most recent meeting October 19-20, it heard from several experts in the athletics field and also identified a number of themes pertaining to ethical conduct and sportsmanship.

The committee is working toward the 1996 NCAA Convention. The Presidents Commission has identified sportsmanship and ethical conduct as the 1996 topic in its strategic plan.

The committee is chaired by William E. Shelton, president of Eastern Michigan University.

Men's basketball rights, fees and exposures

With one exception, rights fees for the Division I Men's Basketball Championship have increased every year since 1977.

Between 1988 and 1989, the rights fee took a small dip from $55.8 million to $55.0 million. But in 1990, they increased to $61.5 million, and in 1991 — the first year of the Association's seven-year contract with CBS — they rose to $112 million.

Briefly in the News

Male athletes bring 'madness'

Before this year, Endicott College was a women's institution. But recently, the school opened its doors to male students, and "madness" resulted.

The Division III institution added four men's sports — including basketball — and that's how "Midnight Madness" found its way to the small Massachusetts campus.

"Not many Division III schools have it," Stephen L. Woodcock, Endicott athletics director, told Paul Leighton of the Beverly (Massachusetts) Times. "We thought that (because) this was the first time we've gone coed, we'd try it."

Approximately one-quarter of the student body — 175 of 715 students — showed up for the event. But this was not an ordinary Midnight Madness.

The players — female and male — appeared dressed in sweaters and skirts, or coats and ties. They watched fans participate in free-throw and three-point-shooting contests. Then, the madness moved to Tupper Hall, where an early breakfast of sausages and eggs was served.

"We didn't get out of there until 3 o'clock, after mopping the floors," Woodcock said. "It was a nice time. There's a whole new spirit with the men there. We're getting kids out now to watch both the women's and men's soccer teams. The spirit really has grown. I don't think the campus today is anything like it was a year ago."

About 65 males attend Endicott and approximately 45 of them are members of the baseball, basketball, cross country or soccer teams. The addition of males has helped the women's programs, said women's basketball coach Nancy Bal.

"It's been great for the school," Bal said. "It's doubled the support for all the teams. It was nice to see the men and the women basketball players interacting. I hope we can end up being the type of teams that support each other and don't compete against each other. When you're on the road with a double-header, there's nothing better than having the men's team cheering for you."

Brown University's athletics department recently was honored as the 1994 Outstanding Civic Organization by the Rhode Island Special Olympics. Bill Almon (above), head baseball coach at Brown, serves as president of the organization's board of directors.

Rhode Island Special Olympics. The award recognizes Brown's staff and student-athletes for their contributions to Special Olympics.

"All of us at Brown experience enormous satisfaction from our contact with Special Olympics athletes and workers," said athletics director David T. Roach. "We benefit just by witnessing the courage and spirit of these very special athletes."

Since 1992, Brown's athletics department has hosted the "Spring Jamboree," a training and competition opportunity for more than 500 Special Olympics athletes and coaches.

"From a pure training standpoint, Brown has provided tremendous resources to our athletes and coaches through the use of first-class facilities and through the time and effort of their volunteers," said Chris Hopkins, director of competition and training for Rhode Island Special Olympics. "Because of Brown, Rhode Island Special Olympics coaches are better and, most importantly, our athletes are better."

Calling all British

The British Universities Sports Association (BUSA), the governing body for athletics at higher education institutions in the United Kingdom, is attempting to contact British student-athletes in the United States — including those enrolled at NCAA institutions — who wish to be considered to represent Great Britain at the next World University Games.

The Games will be August 23 through September 3 in Fukuoka, Japan.

The BUSA is similar to the NCAA in that it is responsible for the administration of championships and other events. Approximately 150 institutions are members of the BUSA. The association also is responsible for the organization and promotion of the Great Britain team that competes at the biennial World University Games.

The association is seeking players in men's basketball, fencing, gymnastics, judo, soccer, swimming, tennis, and track and field. For more information, contact Pete Rhodes, British University Sports Association, 11 Allcock Street, Birmingham, B9 4DY. The association may be reached by telephone (country code 44, city code 121) at 766-8855 or by fax at 766-8997.

That's 'outstanding'

The University of Miami (Florida) athletics department has joined WEDR radio, McDonald's, Traz-Powell Stadium and Dade County (Florida) Public Schools in an "Outstanding Students of the Week" program that will honor Dade County high-school students throughout the 1994-95 academic year.

Each week, the university is donating tickets to home football or basketball games to students who have shown excellence in the areas of citizenship and academics. These students also appear as guests on a WEDR radio show and receive an engraved trophy, and are treated to lunch with the radio station's on-air personalities.

"It's very important that our program stay involved in the community by recognizing the achievements of these students," Miami football coach Dennis Erickson said. "This is a win-win situation for everyone involved."

Looking back

40 years ago: Thirteen agencies and institutions sponsoring invitational athletics events join with the NCAA in a "cooperative boycott" program, in which institutions that are ruled ineligible for National Collegiate Championships also will be ineligible for the invitational events. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

50 years ago: Rather than hold a full-fledged annual Convention in 1944, the NCAA brings together its officers, the Executive Committee and the chairs of rules committees for a December 29-30, 1944, meeting in New York City. The wartime meeting is regarded as the Association's 38th annual Convention (there was no Convention in 1943). ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

60 years ago: The NCAA Eligibility Committee is created December 28, 1934, during the Association's 29th annual Convention in New York City. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

70 years ago: The NCAA membership is reorganized into eight geographical regions during the 19th annual Convention, held December 30, 1924, in New York City. The Association's membership numbers 135 at the time — including 123 active member institutions and six conferences. ("NCAA: The Voice of College Sports")

Fact file

NCAA member sponsorship of each of the following 16 sports has increased by 20 or more schools since 1992-93: Division II baseball; Division II men's and women's basketball; Divisions II and III women's cross country; Division I-AA football; Division II men's and women's golf; Divisions I, II and III women's soccer; Division II women's softball; Divisions II and III women's tennis; and Divisions II and III women's volleyball. The biggest increase was in Division I women's soccer, where an increase of 52 sponsors was recorded.

Papers with betting lines to keep credentials

Division I Men's Basketball Committee considered denying media passes to tournament

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee announced November 30 that it would not attempt to withhold tournament credentials from newspapers that publish daily betting lines on college games.

"We thought we would be on firm legal ground if we did it, but we decided we didn't want to take away from the event and the focus from the student-athletes," committee chair Robert E. Frederick told The Associated Press.

"After meeting with members of the Associated Press Sports Editors and the United States Basketball Writers Association, we thought we would attack the problem from a different direction. They have pledged to cooperate," said Frederick, athletics director at the University of Kansas.

The committee earlier had acknowledged that it was exploring the possibility of denying credentials to publications that carry point spreads involving college sports. Several newspapers, news agencies and organizations wrote letters to the NCAA protesting any attempt to affect content.

Paul Anger, executive sports editor of the Miami Herald and president of the Associated Press Sports

Editors, said colleges need to attack the problem of gambling on campus with means available to them, such as education and enforcement.

Frederick said the problem has increased in recent years.

"College basketball is at its zenith," he said. "We want to avoid embarrassment. We'll do things on our own to increase awareness."

News to resume Wednesday publishing schedule

This issue of The NCAA News completes the fall Monday publication schedule.

Beginning December 14, the News will be published weekly on Wednesdays through July 5 — except for December 28.

Last year, the News discontinued publication of an issue during the last week of December — a week when many campus offices are closed for the holidays.

Advertisers and others who provide copy for publication in the News are being reminded that the final issue of 1994 will be published

December 21. The first issue of 1995 will be the annual Convention issue, which will be published January 4.

The final Monday issue of the News also closes out publication of 1994 football statistics for Divisions I-A, II and III (final Division I-AA statistics appeared in the November 28 issue of the News).

Beginning with the December 14 issue, the News will publish basketball statistics. Final Divisions I, II and III women's volleyball statistics will appear in the January 11 issue of the News.

Current eligibility rule serves as a motivator

By Christopher B. Morris

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, KNIGHT FOUNDATION
COMMISSION ON INTERCOLLEGIATE ATHLETICS

The recent commentary by Alonzo Freeman (The NCAA News, November 14) is a remarkably eloquent and inspiring account of one young man's struggle to overcome a bitter, personal disappointment and replace it with a dream. His life, it seems, is a patent rejection of Herbert Spencer's theory that "once you fail, you're down for good."

Mr. Freeman's goal of graduation from Arkansas State University is applaudable and worthy of our support and encouragement; however, his proposal for an extra year of eligibility for "partial qualifiers" is not. Under the current system, the fourth year of eligibility serves as an important means of motivating prospective student-athletes during their secondary-school years. Changing this rule would send a very wrong message.

A fair and viable solution to Mr. Freeman's dilemma can be found in the first report of the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, "Keeping Faith with the Student-Athlete." Among other recommendations, Knight Commission members offered this alternative:

"Athletics scholarships should be offered for a five-year period. In light of the time demands of athletics competition, we believe that athletics scholarship assistance routinely should cover the time required to complete the degree, up to a maximum of five years. Moreover, the initial offer to the student-athlete should be for the length of time required to earn a degree up to five years, not the single year now mandated by NCAA rules. The only athletics condition under which the five-year commitment could be broken would be if the student refused to participate in the sport for which the grant-in-aid was offered. Otherwise, aid should continue as long as the student-athlete remains in good standing at the institution."

This approach retains the "fourth year" as a motivational tool for precollege preparation while removing a major hurdle from the path of the "partial qualifier" who is intent upon college graduation.

What better way for Arkansas State University to honor the hard work and determination of Alonzo Freeman than to draft legislation based upon this recommendation and submit it for consideration at the 1996 NCAA Convention? What better way for all of us to "keep faith" with our student-athletes and our educational principles than to support this legislation next January?

More skill instruction desirable

Current NCAA legislation (Bylaw 17.5.5.2) limits a student-athlete's participation in strength and conditioning activities to a total of eight hours per week outside the playing and practice season.

In addition, student-athletes are not permitted to participate in such activities for more than two hours per day and must receive one complete day off. A proposal by the Atlantic Coast Conference (No. 20 in the Official Notice for the 1995 Convention) seeks to amend the current rule to include individual skill development sessions. Specifically, this proposal would allow coaches to supervise student-athletes in sport-specific skill training during not more than two of the eight hours currently permitted for strength and conditioning activities. (This proposal also would limit these skill sessions to two student-athletes at any one time.)

In effect, this would leave six hours for strength and conditioning activities. The rationale for this proposal is that student-athletes want to improve their abilities in their particular sport rather than spend extra time on strength and conditioning.

There is no question that perfecting sports-specific skills will have a greater impact on a student-athlete's performance than either strength training or conditioning activities. The question then becomes, "Is six hours per week enough time to produce improvements in muscular strength and cardiovascular conditioning?"

Science has been unable to discover one strength and conditioning method that is superior to another. Research has shown only that there are a variety of methods that can increase muscular strength and cardiovascular ability. One of the greatest misconceptions in the strength and conditioning profession is that an increase in the volume of the activity produces better results. The truth is that more isn't necessarily better when it comes to strength and conditioning activities.

The most important factor in determining the response from strength and conditioning activities is the student-athlete's level of intensity or effort. An inverse relationship exists between intensity and the duration of the activity: As the time of an activity increases, the level of intensity decreases. Stated otherwise, a student-athlete cannot train at a high level of intensity for long periods of time.

Essentially, the primary purpose of strength and conditioning activities is to reduce a student-athlete's risk of injury. Six hours of time each week is more than enough to prepare a student-athlete for the rigors of competition. A number of different possibilities exist to schedule strength and conditioning activities during a weekly six-hour time frame. For example, a productive one-hour strength training workout can be performed three times per week on nonconsecutive days (for example, Monday, Wednesday and Friday) and a one-hour conditioning session can be done on alternate days (for example, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday).

Limiting strength-training workouts and conditioning sessions to one hour has an important physiological basis. Carbohydrates are the body's preferred fuel source during intense exercise. Most individuals exhaust their carbohydrate stores after about one hour of intense exercise. As such, both strength training and conditioning sessions should be limited to one hour.

Strength and conditioning activities should emphasize the quality of the workout rather than the quantity of the workout. The most efficient program is one that produces the maximum possible results in the least amount of time. Coaches who insist, encourage or coerce their student-athletes to invest excessive amounts of time in strength and conditioning activities beyond that which is needed to strengthen the musculoskeletal system against injury are providing a tremendous disservice to them.

A six-hour restriction on strength and conditioning activities will encourage strength coaches to finally let go of the traditional competitive-weightlifting-inspired programming and seek more practical and time-efficient methods for training their student-athletes. Rather than waste inordinate amounts of time in the weight room learning absolutely useless competitive weightlifting skills, student-athletes will have more time to practice and perfect sports-specific skills that will be used in their competition.

"(W)hen Oklahoma and Georgia sued the NCAA on property rights and accused the NCAA of being a monopoly, (that) ultimately did away with the NCAA television plan as we knew it. When it got to the Supreme Court, they ultimately ruled in favor of the people who sued the NCAA, and that changed the television situation forever. I will go to my grave believing it was greed — the Oklahomas and Georgias of this world felt that if they were not governed by the NCAA in terms of television, they'd be on television every week, and they'd get all those rights fees. They got on television a little bit more, but the rights fees dropped, and they're still not getting what they were getting 10 years ago."

"The most fun in coaching I ever had was when I was at Washington State, because there was a different set of circumstances. The rules were different, the kids were different and the expectations were different. It was just fun to coach then. You really were a coach then. Today, it is coach, slash-slash-slash. Coaching is the easiest part. Now, you have to deal with so many other things, from NCAA rules changes to public relations...."

"If my son (Mark) came up to me and asked me whether he should get into coaching or not, I would tell him, 'Don't do it.' The reason is that everything is so much different today. On the differences between college and professional coaching:

"It'd take two hours to talk about that. I'd first start with (dealing with) the NCAA. I can start with 120 players vs. 50. I can start with every crisis and personal problem an athlete has (in college), he comes to see me. He doesn't walk through my door to say, 'Coach, I made an A on my test', or 'how's your day going.' He comes in there with a problem I've got to deal with."

"There's tremendous pressure day to day, academics, I can go on and on and on. I don't even want to talk about it. But, hey, I don't have those problems here. I'm only dealing with 50 (players), they're professionals and it's a job for them."

"It remains...a harsh land out there for the men in the head-phones. The popular outcry of anguish these days is over the lack of a playoff, as if this besmirches the game. But much more embarrassing for major college football is what has happened to the job of coaching it."

"Fed by inane call-in shows, fueled by ridiculous expectation, flamed by media, this fire is out of control. We talk of honesty and integrity, but reward only victory."

HAND IT TO HANK

The general public may not know him, but Hank Nichols holds two powerful positions in men's basketball

By Laura E. Bollig
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Division I men's basketball is high-profile. Even the casual fan has heard of the Final Four, March Madness, Coach K and Dicky V.

Anybody heard of Hank Nichols?

While his name is not recognizable to most armchair coaches, Nichols holds two of basketball's most influential behind-the-scenes positions — secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee and national coordinator of men's basketball officials.

As secretary-rules editor, Nichols is the spokesman for the rules committee and the official interpreter of playing rules. As coordinator of officials, Nichols oversees the officiating improvement program and assists the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee with selection of officials for the championship.

Most of the basketball community would agree that Nichols does an excellent job.

"I believe Hank has done a superb job of handling both positions," said John Guthrie, associate commissioner of the Southeastern Conference and supervisor of officials for three conferences. "I do not know of anyone else in the entire country who could have been accepted in the position of national coordinator and during the same period of time be involved as the rules interpreter."

University of South Carolina, Columbia, head coach Eddie Fogler echoes Guthrie's praise.

"I have no problem with Hank Nichols doing both jobs. I think he's extremely qualified to do both positions, as long as he has the time," Fogler said. "They're not letting you coach football and be the director of athletics anymore because of the time demands, but again, if someone is capable of handling both, it's Hank Nichols."

Splitting the jobs

No one disputes Nichols' credentials for both jobs. Still, several basketball constituencies have suggested that it's time to divide the positions between two people.

So, beginning in September 1996, Nichols will give up his duties as secretary-rules editor and concentrate solely on the national coordinator's duties.

Nichols has held both positions since 1990, when long-time rules editor Edward Steitz died unexpectedly. There was a need to fill Steitz's position with someone knowledgeable about the rules. Nichols was the logical choice, even though he already was working with officials.

It's unclear, however, what caused a return to the "two-party" system. Was there too much power in the hands of one individual? Not enough balance of opinion?

Nichols, who also is chair of the department of education and human services at Villanova University, attributes the decision to perception.

"I believe it came from a perception from coaches and others that I had too much influence and too much power — that there's too much of an impact from one person," Nichols said.

Checks and balances

He is quick to point out, however, the checks and balances in both positions.

"From the secretary-rules editor position, the rules committee itself makes the vote and makes the final decision on any rules changes. I don't have a vote," Nichols said. "Any interpretations that are made eventually have to be approved by the rules committee. So my role as secretary-rules editor, besides making interpretations as they come up, is to bring pertinent issues to the committee regarding rules and explain history where it's appropriate and, to the best of my ability, explain the positives and negatives to any rule that is changed or isn't changed. Then the committee takes action."

"From the national coordinator position, all of the things that are done are overseen and agreed upon by the Basketball Officiating Committee, the basketball tournament committee, and I also have superiors in the NCAA office who monitor the direction that I take the program," Nichols said. "All in all, the checks and balances are there so that these committees have constituencies — coaches, administrators, officials, supervisors — that have final analysis for what I do in both positions."

Dual roles studied

C. M. Newton, director of athletics at the University of Kentucky and former rules committee chair, recently chaired an NCAA ad hoc committee that studied the dual roles of rules editor and coordinator of officials. The ad hoc committee recommended to the NCAA Executive Committee that two people hold the separate positions.

"I don't know if it's a question of power as much as a question of balance," Newton said. "When this whole concept (of two positions) was started — and I was involved from the beginning — it was thought at that time that two different people would hold those positions and that they would be able to bounce things off each other."

"The kind of balance I see is a rules editor coming out of all the discussion and all the research involved in rules-making. You can only have one interpreter. That person comes from that sort of background."

"That's not to say that person shouldn't have an understanding of officiating and mechanics. Someone with great officiating expertise — this person can bring a whole other perspective. They can say, 'That's a great idea for a rule, but you can't enforce it.' That's the kind of thing I see. You can have an optimum balance in what's best for basketball," Newton said.

Newton explained that the rules editor's interpretations would reflect committee-based opinion and a coach's perspective. The national coordinator, on the other hand, would approach issues from the perspective of supervisors of officials and conference commissioners.

New rules editor

The Executive Committee decided to fill the positions with two people. It approved a recommendation by the men's rules committee that Edward Bilik, director of athletics at Springfield College, assist Nichols with duties as secretary-rules editor until September 1996. At that time, the rules committee will appoint a replacement for Nichols.

"I understand the thinking behind some elements in basketball that the job should be split; however, I am of the opinion that the situation doesn't necessitate a change at this time," the Southeastern Conference's Guthrie said. "In view of the fact that it is a change that will take place over two years, I don't see that it will be anything but a positive, because each day the responsibilities and demands on Hank increase and there's no doubt he does need an assistant."

Although Nichols would prefer to keep both jobs, he admits some good may result from splitting the positions.

"I guess if there's a positive, it would be to negate the perception of one person having too much to say."

Twenty-four student-athletes make Hitachi/CFA Scholar-Athlete Team

Gilmore, Taffoni, Zatechka make repeat appearance on squad

The College Football Association has announced members of this year's Hitachi/CFA Scholar-Athlete Team — including three returnees from last year's team.

The 24 members of the team are being honored for successfully balancing athletics and academics. In recognition of the honorees' accomplishments, Hitachi will contribute $1,000 to each of the high schools attended by team members.

Sports information directors and academic advisors at the CFA's 67 member institutions nominated team starters or significant reserves on the basis of criteria that included a cumulative grade-point average between 3.000 and 4.000 (4.000 scale), standing as a junior in athletics, completion of 50 percent of degree requirements, and completion of at least one full academic year in residence at the nominating institution.

The team was selected by a CFA panel that included a faculty athletics representative, two athletics administrators, a football coach, a university dean and a sports information director.

Among the members of this year's team are three student-athletes who also were honored last year. They are Michael Gilmore of Florida, Matt Taffoni of West Virginia and Rob Zatechka of Nebraska.

Two schools are represented by two players. Nebraska placed Zatechka and Terry Connealy on the team, and Kansas State is represented by Matt McEwen and Laird Veatch.

The complete team, with GPAs and majors:

Offense

Linemen — Michael Blanchard, LSU, senior, 4.000, zoology; Christopher Hennie-Roed, North Carolina State, senior, 3.500, biological sciences; Matt Williams, Duke, senior, 3.200, economics; Mark Zataveski, Notre Dame, senior, 3.500, history; Rob Zatechka, Nebraska, graduate student, 4.000, biological science.

Quarterback — Stoney Case, New Mexico, senior, 3.300, biology/communications.

Receivers — Eric Chenoweth, Syracuse, senior, 3.400, environmental engineering; Bryce Doan, Brigham Young, senior, 3.200, economics; Ed Glenn, Clemson, senior, 3.900, biochemistry.

Backs — Ryan Christopherson,

Wyoming, senior, 3.200, business administration; Eric Lewis, Vanderbilt, senior, 3.200, electrical engineering.

Kicker — Matthew Hawkins, Auburn, junior, 3.800, finance.

Defense

Lineman — Terry Connealy, Nebraska, senior, 3.800, agribusiness; Marc Pedrotti, Missouri, 3.400, mechanical engineering.

Linebackers — Derrick Brooks, Florida State, senior, 3.300, communications; Matt McEwen, Kansas State, junior, 3.900, mechanical engineering; Mike Morton, North Carolina, senior, 3.300, biology; Eric Oliver, Army, senior, 3.900, mathematical sciences; Matt Taffoni, West Virginia, senior, 3.500, psychology; Laird Veatch, Kansas State, senior, 3.300, marketing.

Defensive backs — Michael Gilmore, Florida, senior, 3.700, pre-medicine/zoology; Greg Myers, Colorado State, junior, 3.700, biological science; Tony Pittman, Penn State, senior, 3.600, industrial engineering.

Punter — Brandon Brookfield, Louisville, senior, 3.200, communications/Spanish.

Washington (Missouri) sweeps to fourth straight III women's volleyball crown

Washington (Missouri) volleyball coach Teri Clemens had an ace up her sleeve for the Division III Women's Volleyball Championship.

Thirteen aces, in fact.

Clemens' five-time champion Bears pounded out 13 service aces on their way to a 15-10, 15-4, 15-9 victory over Wisconsin-Oshkosh in the title match December 3 at Ithaca.

The title was the fourth in a row for Washington (42-2) and the third straight championship-match three-game sweep for the Bears.

Washington all-American and American Volleyball Coaches Association Division III player of the year Amy Albers scored 17 kills and second-team all-American Shelly Swan added 12 in 16 attempts during the three games.

Anne Quenette and Nikki Gitlin had three aces apiece for the Bears, who scored nearly one-third of their points via the serve.

Washington was dominant during the entire tournament, losing just one game in five matches. The Bears breezed past host Ithaca in the semifinals, 15-3, 15-7, 15-7, behind 19 kills from Albers, who headed the all-tournament team along with teammates Swan and setter Stephanie Habif.

Wisconsin-Oshkosh (38-11) rallied its way to the title match with a 6-15, 11-15, 15-7, 15-7, 15-11 semifinal win over Juniata. Shanon Martini, Holly Luedeke and Bridget Griepentrog combined for 30 kills in the victory.

Juniata (37-9) beat Ithaca (53-4), 15-12, 15-3, 15-11, in the third-place match. Juniata finished among the nation's top four for the 11th time in the last 12 years, while Ithaca made its first semifinal appearance.

Amy Ward and Jean Harmsen of Wisconsin-Oshkosh joined the Washington trio on the all-tournament team. Senior setter Heather Blough represented Juniata.

Tampa captures II men's soccer title

Tampa used two overtime goals by Martin Nebrelus and a smothering defense to down Oakland, 3-0, in the Division II Men's Soccer Championship December 3 at Tampa.

The Spartans won their second title and first since 1981 in front of a Division II record crowd of 4,336.

Tampa (15-2-1) failed to score in its semifinal match and during regulation time in the final match, but Nebrelus gave the Spartans all the scoring they ultimately needed in the title game when he converted a rebound of a missed shot eight minutes into the first overtime period.

The senior forward found the net again in the second overtime period, taking an Anders Paulsson cross and drilling a shot past Oakland goalkeeper Amir Tal. Adrian Bush added an insurance tally three minutes later.

Tampa goalkeeper David Winner allowed just one goal in four tournament games, including a 150-minute semifinal match against three-time champion Southern Connecticut State.

"I'm overwhelmed," Winner said of the title. "It's the perfect ending to a fairy tale season. I always remember what Martin (Nebrelus) said to me: 'If you don't give up any goals, we can't lose.'"

"This was a dream come true," Nebrelus said. "And in front of our own people — the biggest crowd ever."

The semifinals brought together the same four teams that battled for the 1992 championship, and at the same site. That year, Southern Connecticut State took the crown with a 1-0 win over Tampa.

But this year, Sergio Jaramillo's conversion on Tampa's sixth penalty kick ousted unbeaten Southern Connecticut State (16-0-4) after the two teams had battled to a scoreless tie.

Oakland (17-2-2) and defending champion Seattle Pacific (14-5-4) combined for 10 goals in the other semifinal match. Oakland's Eli Tiomkin scored his third goal of the game in the second overtime period to thwart the Falcons' bid for a sixth title.

Coverage of the 1994-95 Division I Women's Basketball Championship will be the same as in recent years, with the Women's Final Four on CBS (April 1 and 2), the regional semifinals on ESPN and the regional semifinals on Prime Sports Network. Beginning in 1995-96, however, ESPN will have exclusive rights to that championship, featuring 23 games on ESPN or ESPN2.

At that time, the semifinal and final games will be moved to a Friday-Sunday format, adding a day of rest that currently is not available.

"We had two priorities for the women's basketball championship: a day of rest between the semifinals and the final, and live coverage of earlier rounds," Dempsey said. "ESPN will help us do both, starting in 1996."

"The women's tournament has grown in popularity, and we want to give fans a chance to see more games. With the move to ESPN, fans will be able to see their favorite teams through more of the tournament," Bruno said.

The increased revenue from the CBS contract comes at a critical time. According to a recent NCAA study, the average NCAA Division I-A athletics program posted a net loss of $174,000 in 1993 if financial support from its college or university was not counted. In Division I-AA and I-AAA, the deficits were about $1.4 million and $1.1 million, respectively.

Dempsey stressed that the distribution of the additional revenue will be carefully considered by the Association.

"Our challenge is to use these resources prudently and in the best interests of student-athletes," he said.

After the last NCAA-CBS contract was signed in 1989, the NCAA formed the Special Advisory Committee to Review Recommendations Regarding Distribution of Revenue. That committee, currently chaired by former NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, developed a formula that deemphasized the importance of winning a particular NCAA tournament game (payouts are based on a conference's performance over a six-year period) and rewarded programs sponsoring many sports and providing large numbers of athletics grants-in-aid. Money also was provided for a special-assistance fund for student-athletes with unmet financial needs and for academic enhancement ($30,000 for each Division I member).

This year, the NCAA is distributing slightly more than $81 million to its membership through the revenue-distribution plan.

Other programs that were funded through the last contract were catastrophic-injury insurance for all 287,000 NCAA student-athletes, an expansion of the championships program in all three divisions and a Division II enhancement fund.

The Executive Committee will review the Association's membership trust as a result of the new contract. The trust was created to provide funding for existing Association programs and services in case a decline in future television rights fees caused a funding shortfall.

The Executive Committee agreed to set aside any revenue from CBS exceeding the average payout over the seven-year contract ($143 million). Currently, the NCAA has $8.9 million in the trust.

The distribution of that money will be discussed by the Executive Committee since the purpose of the trust no longer exists.

Restricted-earnings court motions heard

Motions for summary judgment by both sides in a lawsuit concerning Division I basketball restricted-earnings coaches were heard November 30 by the U.S. District Court for the District of Kansas.

It is not known when the court will act on the motions.

Five then-restricted-earnings coaches filed the class-action suit, alleging violations of Federal antitrust law as a result of the application of NCAA Bylaw 11.02.3. The suit was filed originally in November 1993 in the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California and was moved to the Kansas court at the request of the NCAA.

The plaintiffs, on behalf of all restricted-earnings coaches in Division I men's basketball, claim that the NCAA rule prevents Division I member institutions from freely negotiating with them for compensation for their services.

On November 30, the court heard separate motions by the coaches and by the NCAA seeking summary judgment on the issue of liability. Once those motions have been decided, the court will determine whether it is necessary to proceed with other aspects of the case.

A finding in favor of the NCAA on the summary judgment motion would eliminate the need for further action by the trial court. A decision in favor of the plaintiffs on the question of liability would set the stage for further determinations, including a trial on the question of damages.

Damages can be significant because any actual damages found are tripled under Federal antitrust law. The amount could be compounded further if the plaintiffs are found to properly represent the class of all Division I men's basketball restricted-earnings coaches.

In addition to this matter, another lawsuit has been filed in the same court by a men's lacrosse restricted-earnings coach. That coach makes similar claims on behalf of all restricted-earnings coaches in Division I in sports other than men's basketball.

The status of each of these cases was reviewed by the NCAA Administrative Committee at a December 5 meeting in conjunction with the Executive Committee's regular December meeting. The committee noted the importance of closely monitoring the progress of the cases because of the significant potential damages if the Association does not prevail and the need to keep the membership informed of future developments.

Smith to emcee honors dinner

Harry Smith, CBS News correspondent and coanchor of "CBS This Morning," will serve as master of ceremonies at the 1995 NCAA honors dinner.

The dinner will be January 8 at the 89th annual NCAA Convention in San Diego.

Smith has served as coanchor of "CBS This Morning" since the program premiered November 30, 1987. He has covered stories from around the world, including one month of live broadcasts from Saudi Arabia during the height of the Persian Gulf war in 1991. He also has originated "CBS This Morning" broadcasts from Japan, Poland, Hungary, Cuba, France, Italy, Egypt, Israel, Jordan, England, Russia and Spain.

In February, 1994, Smith served as the cohost of CBS's weekday morning coverage of the 1994

Smith

Winter Olympic Games in Lillehammer, Norway.

Smith's domestic assignments have included covering the San Francisco earthquake in 1989, Hurricane Hugo, the Reagan/Gorbachev summit in Washington, and the 1988 and 1992 Republican and Democratic National Conventions. Most recently, Smith covered the collapse of the Bosnian homeland and the floods along the Mis-

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 15 November 10, 1994

Acting for the NCAA Council, the Interpretations Committee issued the following interpretations:

Amateurism/Apparel/Equipment

1. Prospect Receiving Free Equipment and Apparel Items. The committee reviewed several issues related to prospects receiving free equipment and apparel items for personal use from apparel or equipment manufacturers or distributors and determined the following:

a. A prospect (as opposed to a student-athlete) may receive apparel or equipment items related to the prospect's sport directly from an apparel or equipment manufacturer or distributor without jeopardizing the prospect's eligibility for intercollegiate athletics in that sport.

b. A prospect may not enter into an arrangement (e.g., open account) with an apparel or equipment manufacturer or distributor that permits the prospect to select apparel and equipment items from a commercial establishment of the manufacturer or distributor without jeopardizing the prospect's eligibility for intercollegiate athletics in that sport.

c. It is not permissible for a member institution's coach to be involved in any manner in identifying or assisting an apparel or equipment manufacturer or distributor in determining whether a prospect is to receive any apparel or equipment items.

The committee also noted that instances of prospects receiving items from apparel or equipment manufacturers or distributors appear to be more prevalent. Thus, the committee recommended that the NCAA Special Committee to Review the Relationship of Apparel Manufacturers to the Intercollegiate Athletics Community and the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism further review this issue to determine whether it wishes to recommend that prospects be held to the same standards as enrolled student-athletes in this area.

IC 3/11/93, Item No. 2]

Noninstitutional Publications/ Financial Donations

2. Noninstitutional Publication Making Financial Donations to Institution's Athletics Program. The committee reviewed issues related to noninstitutional publications dedicated primarily to reporting on an institution's athletics program and determined the following:

a. A noninstitutional publication dedicated primarily to reporting on an institution's athletics program that contributes a percentage of subscription sales to an institution's athletics program or makes a flat-rate donation to the institution's athletics program is not, per se, considered to be an institutional publication for purposes of applying NCAA regulations.

b. A noninstitutional publication dedicated primarily to reporting on an institution's athletics program that makes any financial donations to an institution's athletics program is considered to be an athletics representative of the institution and is subject to applicable NCAA recruiting regulations in that area.

c. An institution may not in any manner financially subsidize a noninstitutional publication that reports on its athletics program without causing the publication to be considered an institutional athletics publication.

Out-of-Season Practice/Employment

3. Employment of a Student-Athlete by Local Sports Club Owned or Operated by Student-Athlete's Coach. An institution's coaching staff member who owns or operates a local sports club or organization may not employ a student-athlete who is a member of his or her own team as a coach/counselor for the club or organization outside the institution's playing season. The committee noted that the employment of such a student-athlete during the playing season is considered a countable athletically related activity, and further, the provisions of 12.4.2.1 preclude the student-athlete from receiving compensation for such employment. [References: 12.4.2.1 (coach or physical education instructor), 13.12.2.4 (local sports club), 17.02.1.1 (countable athletically related activities) and 17.8.1.4.1 (involvement of coaching staff)]

Scouting/Opponent/Relative

4. Coaching Staff Member who is Parent or Spouse of Participant in Contest Involving Future Opponent (Division I). The prohibition against off-campus scouting of opponents in Division I basketball or football does not preclude a coaching staff member from attending a contest that involves a future opponent if the coaching staff member is the parent (or legal guardian) or spouse of a participant (e.g., player, coach) in the contest. [Reference: 11.6.1.1 (basketball and football prohibition)]

I-A Football Attendance/Permanent

5. Use of Removable Bleachers in Meeting I-A Football-Attendance Requirements (Division I-A). An institution may use "removable" seats in meeting the minimum 30,000 permanent-seat requirement, provided such seats will be installed in the institution's stadium during each of the institution's home football contests. [Reference: 20.9.6.3-(b) (I-A football-attendance requirements)]

Proposals

Financial aid and amateurism grouping includes two proposals dealing with gender equity

Conference measure would increase the number of counters in three "head-count" sports — women's gymnastics (from 10 to 12 counters), women's tennis (eight to 10) and women's volleyball (12 to 14). Equivalency limits would be increased by 20 percent in other sports, with new limits ranging from six each in the sports of archery, bowling, fencing and synchronized swimming to 21.6 in women's ice hockey.

The sponsors believe the increases will ease pressures to add women's sports programs and eliminate men's programs by improving proportionality of financial aid for men's and women's sports.

If that measure fails, the Atlantic Coast Conference proposal seeks to change the head-count sports of gymnastics, tennis and volleyball to equivalency sports. Limits on the permissible number of grants would remain unchanged, but the proposal would permit schools to divide a grant among two or more women, thus increasing the number of participants who may receive athletics aid in the involved sports.

Basketball grants

Two other proposals also address grant limits — this time in the sports of Division I men's and women's basketball.

The proposals offer a new approach to what is becoming an old controversy: the discrepancy in the number of grants permitted for men and women. Currently, Division I women's basketball programs are permitted 15 grants, while Division I men's basketball programs are limited to 13 grants.

Sponsors of the proposals argue that grant limits should be equal for men and women. Therefore, the proposals — which separately address men's and women's limits — would place men and women on the same footing if both are adopted. As a result, aid would be awarded on an equivalency rather than head-count basis, with 13 grants available to a maximum of 15 counters in each gender.

The women's proposal would have the effect of reducing the number of full grants currently available to women, which has prompted the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism to oppose the measure. The committee, however, supports the men's proposal, because it could increase participation in men's basketball without increasing the number of grants.

Recurring issues

Basketball-grant limits is not the only recurring issue in this grouping. Other issues from previous Conventions that will be addressed again in San Diego include:

■ Legislation adopted last year to permit basketball student-athletes to enter a professional draft and retain eligibility for intercollegiate competition, as long as that student-athlete declares the intention to return to collegiate play within 30 days after the draft. The Pacific-10 Conference is sponsoring a proposal to rescind that legislation.

Implementation of the legislation earlier this year prompted widespread criticism from professional basketball interests as well as most college coaches. Complaints centered on the timing of the National Basketball Association draft, which occurs in late June. That leaves programs unsure until only a month before school starts whether a drafted player will return to college competition.

The Council, acting on a recommendation from the NCAA Professional Sports Liaison Committee, has agreed to oppose the proposal. The committee, which proposed the current legislation, believes the rule should remain in place until it has been fully tested; it also believes that the benefits student-athletes receive from the legislation outweigh the concerns of the critics.

■ State reciprocity tuition agreements. For the third straight year, the Council is sponsoring a proposal recommended by the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism that would require institutions that have reciprocal tuition agreements with neighboring states to consider such agreements institutional financial aid for student-athletes.

The Division I sports of football and basketball would be exempted from the legislation, since in those sports, student-athletes can be considered counters without receiving athletically related financial aid.

Other Council positions

The Council also has taken positions on other proposals in the grouping:

■ It is sponsoring a proposal recommended by the NCAA Olympic Sports Liaison Committee to permit student-athletes to receive educational expenses from the U.S. Olympic Committee, as long as any assistance received is counted against an institution's sport-by-sport financial aid limitations and against the recipient's full grant-in-aid limit. Adoption could result in reduced financial aid costs for institutions with student-athletes who receive such assistance.

■ It opposes a proposal to permit nonrecruited student-athletes to receive financial aid that is awarded by an outside source and is not disbursed through the student-athlete's institution — a provision that would be applicable only to individuals who receive such aid before initial enrollment at an NCAA institution.

■ It opposes a proposal to permit an institution to reduce or cancel a student-athlete's financial aid on or after the date that the student-athlete voluntarily leaves a collegiate team. Currently, aid must be provided through the end of the semester or quarter in which the student-athlete leaves the team.

Other proposals

Other proposals in the financial aid and amateurism grouping would:

■ Liberalize opportunities for

Divisions I and II student-athletes to receive outside, nonathletics aid.

■ Permit aid for a student-athlete who is receiving compensation from a professional sports organization and is within one term of completing graduation requirements.

■ Permit nonrecruited Divisions I and II student-athletes to be noncounters in instances where institutional aid is granted without regard to athletics ability.

■ Allow a Division I-A or I-AA student-athlete who participates in more than one sport to practice in football as a noncounter until he engages in intercollegiate competition.

■ Permit a charitable foundation funded by a professional sports organization to provide a camp or clinic participant with "actual and necessary expenses" without jeopardizing the individual's eligibility for intercollegiate competition.

■ Lessen the impact of amateurism legislation on a student-athlete who accepts a prize won in a promotional activity related to a sport — such as the opportunity to make a half-court basketball shot or participate in a "money scramble." The student-athlete would lose eligibility only in the sport in which the promotional activity occurred, rather than in all sports as is currently required.

Summary

Following is a summary of the 15 proposals in the financial aid and amateurism grouping. Also indicated in the summary are sponsors, positions (if any) taken on the legislation by the Council, actions resulting from committee review of a proposal (if any), and the business sessions in which a proposal will be acted upon.

No. 73: Permit individuals to receive educational expenses from the U.S. Olympic Committee, provided the financial assistance counts against the institution's sport-by-sport financial aid limitation and counts against the individual's full-grant-in-aid limit. Sponsored by the Council; recommended by the Olympic Sports Liaison Committee.

General business session; all divisions vote together.

No. 74: Require that state reciprocity tuition agreements be considered institutional financial aid for student-athletes participating in sports other than Division I football and basketball. Sponsored by the Council; recommended by the Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism. General business session; all divisions vote together.

No. 75: In Divisions I and II, permit a student-athlete to receive an outside educational grant awarded on bases having no relationship to athletics ability up to the cost of attendance, provided the awarding agency does not restrict the recipient's choice of institutions and the donor is not a representative of an institution's athletics interests or an athletics booster group of a member institution. Sponsored by the Big Ten Conference. Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism position: None. Divisions I and II business sessions.

No. 76: Permit a nonrecruited student-athlete to receive financial aid from an outside source that is not disbursed through the institution, provided the aid is awarded prior to the student-athlete's initial enrollment at a member institution. 1994 Column No. 44

NCAA Bylaws 16.5.1-(e), 17.1.9-(d) and 17.1.1

Vacation-period expenses

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.5.1-(e), an institution may provide the cost of room and board to individual student-athletes who are required to remain on campus for practice or competition during a vacation period, provided the institution's team has competition remaining during its playing season or is preparing for post-season competition. Further, any practice sessions or competition during the vacation period must be included in the institution's playing season in that sport.

Revision

Division II football recruiting calendar

Division II football coaches should note that the initial signing date for the National Letter of Intent has been changed from February 8, 1995, to February 1, 1995. As a result of this change, the Division II football recruiting calendar set forth in figure 13-6 of the 1994-1995 NCAA Manual has changed and should read as follows:

"(f) December 1, 1994, through March 13, 1995 [except for (1) below]:

"(1) January 30 (8 a.m.) through February 1 (8 a.m.) — Dead Period"

Subparagraphs (g) and (h) remain the same.

Clarification — Bylaw 14.1.7 Eligibility between terms

NCAA institutions should note that a recent Legislative Assistance column (reference: Column No. 41; November 14, 1994, edition of The NCAA News) suggests that Bylaw 14.1.7-(b) is available only to a student-athlete who initially is enrolling at an institution between terms. Please note that Bylaw 14.1.7-(b) is applicable to student-athletes who are continuing enrollment as well as students who are returning to or enrolling initially at the certifying institution between terms.

This material was provided by the legislative services staff as an aid to member institutions. If an institution has a question or comment regarding this column, such correspondence should be directed to Nancy L. Mitchell, assistant executive director for legislative services, at the NCAA national office. This information is available on the Collegiate Sports Network.

Restructuring

Three division task forces point toward Convention for forum discussions by membership

bership to be prepared for a comprehensive discussion at the Convention.

The Division II task force also will be mailing a document to its membership to assist with discussion at the Division II business session.

The Division II task force met November 28, while Division III gathered November 28-29. Those groups also conducted a joint session November 28. The Division I task force met November 30.

Division I

The Division I task force, chaired by Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw of Syracuse University, considers the matter "a work in progress." It will release more information after its next meeting (December 13 in Chicago).

Generally, the Division I task force's plan involves an Association that is substantially more federated by division than the current version, with a body of presidents as the authority in Division

I. However, it continues to discuss the best means of achieving presidential control and how to streamline the management of the Association.

At its most recent meeting, the task force also discussed championship access issues within Division I and talked about Association-wide funding matters.

Division II

The Division II task force spent a substantial amount of its time reacting to the tentative concepts for a new governance structure that are being discussed by the Division I task force.

The group discussed a more representative form of rules-making in Division II in a federated governance structure and expressed some support for representation through conferences at a proposed "management" level. It did not reach a consensus that conference representation would necessarily be appropriate for a proposed "presidential" level, however.

It also reviewed several funding issues, including its desire to be assured that the Division II championships program will continue to be adequately financed and that the Division II enhancement fund will not be jeopardized as a result of restructuring efforts.

Reports were submitted by subcommittees examining governance/structure, financial/revenue issues and the legislative process.

A document reviewing the work of the Division II task force will be developed for consideration at the Convention.

The joint session involving the Divisions II and III task forces focused mostly on the activities of Division II, which had convened earlier in the day (the Division III meeting followed the joint session). The groups did discuss whether the three divisions under the current structure would best serve the interests of the Association, considering the growth of Divisions II and III in recent years and the prospect of additional growth in the future.

Adam W. Herbert, president of the University of North Florida, and NCAA Division II Vice-President Charles N. Lindemann, Humboldt State University, cochair the Division II task force.

Division III

The Division III task force believes that any revisions to the Association's overall governance structure should guarantee that:

■ The current quality of and accessibility to NCAA championships for Division III institutions are maintained.

■ Any restructuring of the Association maintains the opportunity for Division III members to participate in the Association's catastrophic-injury insurance program.

■ Services available to the Division III membership through the NCAA national office (such as legislative interpretations, statistics and research) continue.

In general, the Division III task force is receptive to a more federated structure as has been discussed by Divisions I and II. The Division III task force believes strongly in the one-institution, one-vote principle for Division III legislation, but it noted that such an approach would continue to work in a federated context.

The group also discussed responsibilities for whatever group would have ultimate authority over the entire Association. In one model that has been discussed, that group would be responsible for making sure that each division is adhering to a set of "core values" that should be met by institutions conducting intercollegiate athletics; beyond that, administration of each division would be autonomous. However, the Division III task force expressed a desire for such a body also to have authority over administration of the Association budget and the national office.

At the Convention, the Division III task force will present a number of structural models that will address the many differences within the Division III membership, including enrollment and sports sponsorship. The models will illustrate how new divisions, division subgroups and terminal regional championships could be employed.

Mississippi River.

In addition to coanchoring "CBS This Morning," Smith is a frequent contributor to "48 Hours," "Eye to Eye with Connie Chung" and CBS News' "Sunday Morning." He substitutes for Charles Osgood as host of "Sunday Morning" and for Dan Rather as anchor of the "CBS Evening News with Dan Rather." He and coanchor Paula Zahn were the first anchor team assigned to the "CBS Sunday Evening News."

Smith has earned numerous broadcasting honors, including two Emmy Awards for his work on "48 Hours." In 1990, he received an Emmy for his series of essays on "CBS This Morning" titled "The Record of Who We Are."

Smith joined CBS News in 1986

as a Dallas-based reporter. He was named a correspondent in 1987 and reported primarily for the "CBS Evening News with Dan Rather."

Before that, he was a reporter and anchor for the CBS affiliate in Denver for three years.

An Illinois native, Smith played football at Central College (Iowa) and received a bachelor's degree in communications and theater.

He is married to Andrea Joyce, a studio host and reporter for CBS Sports. They have two young sons, Jake and Grady, and live in New York.
