FYI ON THE RPI

That ranking appearing in some papers is not the adjusted rating used by the I men's basketball committee

By Laura E. Bollig
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

It was December.

You mugged for the camera after an upset of the No. 1 team and claimed, "I don't know what this win means, but I do know we should be No. 1." Fans jumped up and down, deliriously screaming

"We're No. 1" (or maybe "We're No. 25," depending on the state of your basketball program).

But now it's February.

All of a sudden, sports reporters are writing about your RPI. Your fans are scanning the Sagarin ratings in USA Today. And those guys on television can't stop talking about your power rating.

Those still scanning The Associated Press top-25 poll at season's end are left to wonder, "What the heck's an RPI?"

RPI stands for Rating Percentage Index, and since its creation in 1981, it has become a topic of conversation a little earlier every college basketball season. Listen to any television sportscast or read the sports page within one month before the NCAA Division I men's tournament, and you're going to hear about it.

Supplemental data

The index was developed by the NCAA staff with the intention of providing supplemental data for the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, which selects and seeds the championship bracket. It has been refined often over the past 15 years, but the foundation on which it was built has remained the same.

Since the RPI's invention, the committee has come to rely on it less than when it was first created. At the same time, the perception grows that the RPI is the only tool the committee uses to select at-large

Football Forum adds a few wrinkles

After 18 years, the NCAA's annual College Football Forum can still pack a few surprises.

This year's forum, scheduled for February 11-13 at the Dallas/Fort Worth Airport Marriott in Irving, Texas, will feature two "firsts." Calvin Bowers, a junior on the Bowling Green State University football team and a member of the NCAA Student-Athlete Advisory Committee, will be the first student-athlete to be a panelist at the forum. This also will be the first time the event has been held outside the Kansas City, Missouri, metropolitan area.

Missouri, metropolitan area.

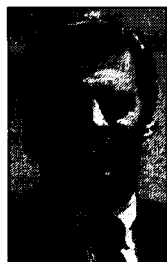

Bowers will join nine prominent coaches and three athletics administrators in panel discussions with approximately 20 sports journalists at the issue-oriented forum. He will provide the athlete's perspective to discussions of benefits for student-athletes.

Other likely topics of discussion include academic standards, cost containment, violence in sports; and a Division I-A football playoff.

Administrators attending the forum will be McKinley Boston Jr., director of men's athletics at the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities; Rolbert M. Sweazy, faculty athletics representative at Texas Tech University and member

First certification decisions coming in early March

Certification decisions for the first group of institutions to be evaluated by the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification will be announced in early March.

The decisions for all institutions in the first group probably will be announced in a single news release, said Kevin C. Lennon, NCAA director of compliance services. They will be designated either as "certified," "certified with conditions" or "not certified." For institutions that are classified as "certified with conditions" or "not certified," the committee's public announcement will include any corrective actions and a timetable for completing each action specified by the committee.

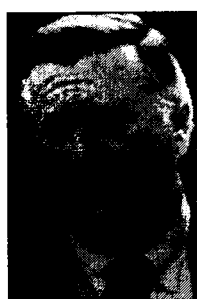

This first group will be smaller than what will become the norm; it is perhaps about half the size of the number the committee will consider at its next meeting in May. Because this is the first time for the committee to evaluate the large amount of material contained in the self-studies, it wanted to make certain it was working with a manageable number.

The two-week interval between the committee's February 20-21 meeting and the anticipated announcement in early March will allow each institution to

Football rules

Committee seeks meeting on unsportsmanlike conduct

The NCAA Football Rules Committee is seeking permission for a special meeting this spring for the purpose of achieving consistency in the enforcement of rules regarding unsportsmanlike conduct.

The committee, which met February 5-7 in Amelia Island, Florida, plans to seek input from coaches and officials before that special meeting. Ultimately, the committee hopes to produce materials — including a videotape — that would portray as precisely as possible what types of conduct are deemed illegal under the rules.

The action was prompted by concern among committee members that unsportsmanlike-conduct rules are not applied consistently across the nation.

In another action, the Football Rules Committee authorized an exception to the rules that would permit the use of the NCAA tie-breaker in bowl games, beginning next season.

A complete report of the committee's meeting will be published in the February 15 issue of The NCAA News.

Title IX

Materials mailed for April seminars

The NCAA will conduct two seminars in April to aid institutions in complying with Title IX.

The seminars — April 10-11 at the Sheraton Grand Hotel in Dallas and April 20-21 at the Omni Inner Harbor Hotel in Baltimore — will feature panel discussions, breakout sessions and opportunities for one-on-one conversations with athletics directors. Office for Civil Rights representatives, attorneys and other administrators who have first-hand experience working with Title IX and gender-equity issues will attend the seminars.

Information packets on the seminars were mailed January 30 to chief executive officers, athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives and senior woman administrators.

The seminars are designed primarily for NCAA members, but a few openings for non-NCAA members exist. Space is limited and will be reserved on a first-come, first-served

Certification

First decisions to be announced in early March

Certification decisions for the first group of institutions to be evaluated by the NCAA Committee on Athletics Certification will be announced in early March.

The committee will make its decisions at a February 20-21 meeting. The institutions being reviewed will be designated either as "certified," "certified with conditions" or "not certified." For institutions that are classified as "certified with conditions" or "not certified," the committee's public announcement will include any corrective actions and a timetable for completing each action specified by the committee.

Due process

Maine and Mississippi considering legislation

State legislatures in Maine and Mississippi are considering so-called "due-process" laws that are similar to statutes that have been overturned in Federal courts.

Legislation was introduced in Maine January 17 that would require collegiate athletics associations to provide certain procedural protections in enforcement proceedings.

The proposal is similar to one that was introduced January 10 in the Mississippi legislature. Both would impose procedural due-process requirements on athletics enforcement proceedings, establish time frames within which hearings must be held, restrict the ability of an association to impose penalties on member institutions and provide remedies for violations.

Similar laws have been struck down by Federal courts in Nevada and Florida. They remain in Illinois and Nebraska.

NCAA Visitors Center growth

Attendance and revenue at highest levels ever

A total of 63,305 people used the NCAA Visitors Center in 1993-94, the largest number ever and an increase of almost eight percent over the previous year.

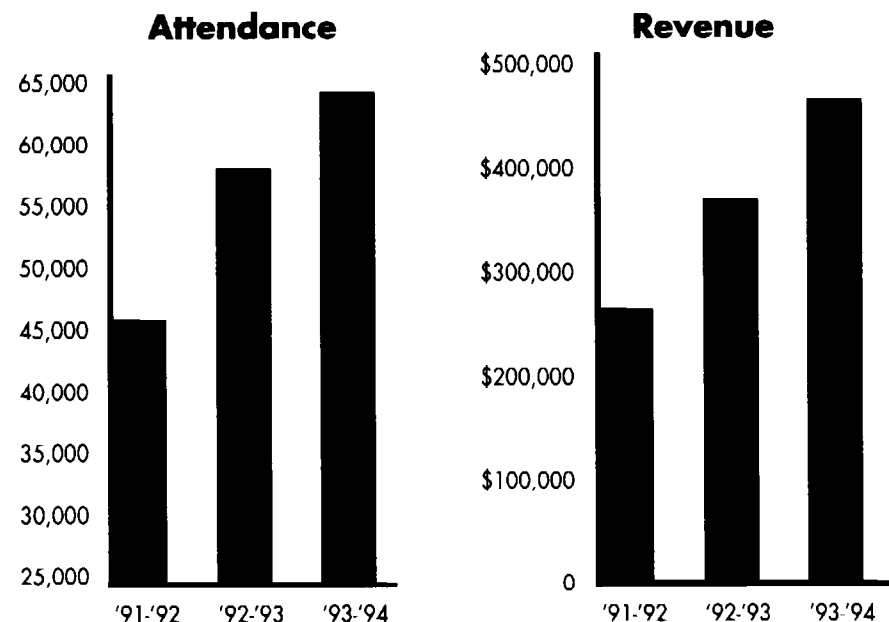

In addition, the Visitors Center — through its gift shop, catalog sales and admission fees — also set a record of $456,236 in revenue, an increase of more than 19 percent from 1992-93.

The Center also hosted 75 events such as banquets and receptions in 1993-94. About $10,000 in revenue is expected from such functions in 1994-95.

Will J. Rudd, NCAA Visitors Center director, said he anticipates further growth this year. New attractions include

John Martin's mural depicting the history of intercollegiate athletics and a number of new interactive basketball displays.

Briefly in the News

A little height goes long way

Basketball purists might say rebounds are the exclusive property of the tall trees in the paint. But that axiom is careening off backboards in Division III women's basketball this season.

Sybil Smith of Bernard M. Baruch College dominates the rebounding category in Division III statistics so thoroughly that one might assume she is some kind of giant. Not so.

At 5 feet, 4 inches, she has yanked down an average of 23.9 rebounds per game through January 29. Her nearest competitor on the Division III rebounding chart is more than six rebounds per game behind.

"You see her under the basket going for a rebound and she's the shortest one under the rim," Baruch coach Penny Weiner told Roger Rubin of New York Newsday. "But then she gets the ball. It's amazing to see how she gets off the ground."

Smith offers no magical explanation for her rebounding prowess.

"I am small, but I can jump well," she said. "I kind of like it that way because I surprise people."

Smith has surprised a lot more people than just the competition. In addition to holding down a 30-hour-per-week job as a bookkeeper for an electrical contractor, she participates in the Army Reserve. She not only pays for her own education, but also foots the bill for a niece who attends college in New York City.

Smith's busy schedule does not allow her to practice with her team, and her treks from the office to the game occasionally have resulted in her missing the start of a contest.

"There's nothing worse than the feeling I get when I know the game's starting and I'm sitting in my car in traffic," the 28-year-old Smith said. "It's such a pain."

Once she does arrive at a game, she quickly becomes a pain to the opposition. Last season, after arriving at half time during a game against York College (New York) in which Baruch trailed, 28-2, Smith orchestrated a near come-from-behind victory. She finished the game with 29 points and 15 rebounds and Baruch lost by just five points.

Her tireless dedication has not been lost on the people around her.

"The big joke about Sybil is that she spends every waking hour thinking about sleep," a classmate said.

"She is doing a lot and has plenty of responsibilities, but she is excelling at everything she does," Weiner said.

Oh, by the way, Smith also is 11th in scoring in Division III with an average of 22.9 points per game.

"Sybil Smith is the exemplary CUNY athlete," said Ted Hurwitz, executive director of the City University of New York Athletic Conference. "She blends excellence in many areas. It's quite amazing."

So much, so quickly

In Hofstra University's 81-74 women's basketball victory over Delaware State University January 28, two Hofstra players combined to score 11 points in six seconds.

Diane Hobin scored six points in two seconds and teammate Meg O'Brien punched in five points in four seconds.

Hobin scored the first two of her six-point flurry on a layup with 1:28 left in the game. Hofstra called a timeout after the basket. On the inbounds play, a Delaware State player pushed off on Hobin and was whistled for a foul, sending Hobin to the free-throw line. She sank both ends of the one-and-one. On the next inbounds play, Hobin stole the pass and was fouled in the process. She again sank two free throws with 1:26 on the clock.

O'Brien's feat came in the second half. With 11:15 remaining, she hit a jump shot as she was being fouled. After sinking the free throw, she stole the inbounds pass and was fouled in the process. With 11:11 to go, she sank two free throws to complete her quick scoring barrage.

All-for-one league

The merger of the Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference and the Midwest Athletic Conference for Women into a combined men's and women's conference called the Midwest Conference has the league's new president in a good mood.

"Our spirits are high and the level of work that went into the merger shows in the unity of purpose," said conference President Tom Warren, a professor of education and faculty athletics representative at Beloit College. "There is still some fine-tuning that needs to be done, but I am optimistic that it can be accomplished effectively with an opportunity for everyone to be heard."

The two conferences were merged last year, effective July 1. Ruth Peterson of Beloit and Ralph Shively of Lake Forest College were elected cocommissioners. Peterson previously served as commissioner of the Midwest Athletic Conference for Women and Shively led the Midwest Collegiate Athletic Conference.

The Midwest Conference's 12 member institutions are Beloit, Carroll College (Wisconsin), Coe College, Cornell College, Grinnell College, Illinois College, Knox College, Lake Forest, Lawrence University, Monmouth College (Illinois), Ripon College and St. Norbert College.

Deadline for submitting CHOICES proposals is March 31

The NCAA CHOICES Alcohol Education Grant Program has issued its 1995 call for proposals.

The call for proposals was mailed February 2 to every NCAA chief executive officer, athletics director and conference commissioner.

Since 1991, the NCAA Foundation has awarded grants to NCAA colleges and universities for the development of innovative alcohol-education programs. Thirty awards have been made through the support of the Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc., to the NCAA Foundation.

Beginning in 1995, the CHOICES program has a new focus. The NCAA education services group has assumed responsibility for administration of the CHOICES program, and the focus turns from development of alcohol-education programs to program implementation.

The deadline for submitting proposals is March 31. Awards will be announced May 19.

Additional information can be obtained from Emily Ward or Frank D. Uryasz of the NCAA education services group; telephone 913/339-1906.

Why a special day for girls in sports?

By Andrea Wickerham

February 2 was National Girls and Women in Sports Day. This marked the ninth year that one day has been set aside to honor, acknowledge and validate young girls and women who participate in sport all across America.

This special day serves to bring national attention to the achievements of female athletes, amateur and professional alike. On this day, young girls throughout the United States are honored by their communities for their participation in sport.

One year ago at this time, I was the director of athletics at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. We celebrated National Girls and Women in Sports Day by sponsoring a day of activities entitled "Girls Need Heroes, Too." It included a videotape from the Women's Sports Foundation, as well as current and former Luther student-athletes and coaches sharing their experiences in sport.

From the moment I planned that celebration, I received a variety of questions and inquiries as to the history of National Girls and Women in Sports Day. Each question was phrased differently, but the message was the same: Why isn't there a National Boys and Men in Sports Day?

I could have answered that disheartening question rather rudely with an abrupt response such as, "There are 364 other days when boys and men are recognized for their athletics achievements. Is one day asking for too much?" However, I chose a more subtle way to explain the history and importance of National Girls and Women in Sports Day. Thus the title of the program, "Girls Need Heroes, Too."

Women's athletics is at a crossroads. More girls and women play or watch sports than ever before in America. In 1972, Congress passed the education amendments to the Civil Rights Act, and this included Title IX, which forbade sex discrimination in any schools receiving Federal funds. Title IX gave girls and women permission to participate in sport at every level: recreational, inter-scholastic, intercollegiate and professional.

In 1993-94, 2,124,755 girls participated in high-school sports, an all-time record. The number of youth sports programs for girls also is on the rise. On the collegiate level, women can and do receive athletics scholar-

Let colleges admit as they see fit

I often wonder if those making the decisions regarding NCAA regulations, particularly decisions regarding initial eligibility, are perhaps wearing their neckties entirely too snug and thus restricting the flow of oxygen-rich blood to their highly developed brains. It certainly seems so when they are constantly coming up with increasingly complicated, ever-changing and highly unnecessary rules, regulations and, of course, sliding scales.

We are constantly hearing that it's time for the presidents of our institutions to establish firm control of our athletics programs. I strongly agree; however, I wish to say that it is not the coaches and athletics departments who have attempted to usurp the presidential powers, but the NCAA itself.

Universities all across the country already have (and have had) the necessary eligibility requirements in place. They are called admission requirements! In this way, presidents and board of trustee members already decide what level of academic stature they wish to achieve and what sector of prospective students they wish to attract. Institutions such as Harvard, Duke, Rice and Stanford Universities and others have used standards higher than the NCAA minimums for their students for some time.

Other institutions with completely different agendas are presently restricted by the NCAA from executing their presidential and administrative powers—those with admission requirements that are below the NCAA minimums. For example, an institution that has chosen a 2,000 grade-point average on a 4,000 scale as the only standard for admission already has predetermined its role and purpose in the overall academic arena, and although it serves a much different segment of society than the Stanfords, it still serves a very important role in continuing the education of our population.

Initial eligibility would be all too easy if we simply said those who were admissible to a university by established and published standards are also eligible for athletics competition. Those who are admitted by a waiver of admission policy (as is the case at almost all institutions, including the Stanfords) should be considered partial qualifiers—eligible for scholarship and practice but not for competition in their first year. And a nonqualifier simply becomes defined as nonadmissible by that university (although he or she may be a qualifier or partial qualifier at another institution).

It is all too clear that this simple system places all the power in the hands of the university president and his or her administration, according them the sole authority in balancing academic prestige (or lack thereof) and athletics prestige (or lack thereof) based on the segment of potential students the individual institution chooses to attract and serve.

Amazingly, this would put the decision (or prediction) of a prospective student-athlete's chance to graduate in the hands of the admissions office, where it should be, and not in the coaches' office. It would place graduation-rate pressures on the university as a whole for all students and not just the athletics department. It also would eliminate the need for this albatross called the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse, which is nothing more than a financial ripoff for thousands of high-school students across the country.

Sure, some will complain that a few universities gain an unfair athletics advantage due to their lower academic requirements. Yet this will allow the prospective student-athlete to weigh the importance of academic prestige in the decision-making process as it relates to his or her goals. It also will encourage those of us who recruit to seek out the prospects who are most likely looking for what we have to offer and compel us to focus on the positives and differences that distinguish us from other institutions. (Besides, if one does not like the unfair athletics advantage perceived to be gained by institutions with lower academic standards, then don't schedule them. Eventually, the free-market concepts will effectively balance things out.)

The NCAA rules already recognize a university's desire to function within different levels by establishing labels such as I-A, I-AA, II and III, and these schools often still schedule each other during their athletics seasons. Why do we refuse to recognize the academic differences between universities and continue to insist on these unnecessary minimum requirements? It's time we stopped trying to make the playing fields level. They were never meant to be in the first place.

Bubas editorial praised

Just a short note to say thank you for the guest editorial of January 18 written by Victor A. Bubas ("Good sportsmanship needs team effort").

Although we are only a small college (550 students, 140 student-athletes) located in northeastern Wisconsin, our athletics personnel consider it a great privilege to use athletics as a tool for building right character in our student-athletes' lives. Mr. Bubas' comments were well-spoken. His challenge to coaches, officials and students to take courage in this area was greatly encouraging.

We are not members of the NCAA (we belong to the National Christian College Athletic Association) but receive your publication to stay abreast of current trends and perspectives. In light of our culture and its trend away from a proper respect for authority, this article was refreshing.

Thank you for your decision to print articles of this caliber and emphasis.

Many factors aid women's sports boom

Ailene Voisin, staff writer
The Atlanta Journal

Discussing factors contributing to increased interest in women's sports:

"In conversations with numerous athletes, coaches, athletics directors, television executives, etc.—virtually all of whom sensed some degree of progress within the past year—the shift seems motivated by a combination of altruism, economic viability and common sense, and is further enhanced by a confluence of the following factors:

"Sheer volume. Young girls are turning to soccer, basketball, gymnastics, and softball in record numbers, and the figures at the prep level are even more impressive. According to the Women Sports Foundation, one in 27 girls competed in high-school athletics in 1971. The figure this year stands at one in three. Further, as universities comply with Title IX gender-equity guidelines, the NCAA reports annual increases in all participatory sports, particularly soccer, softball and golf.

"Purchasing power. A nationwide study conducted by American Sports Data Inc., revealed that females are horribly underrated as a marketing target, both as participants and fans. Among other things, they represent 55 percent of frequent fitness participants, 53 percent of health-club members, and 36 percent of those who train with free weights. An accompanying study also concluded that women are acutely aware of the various sporting goods brands and are the primary purchasers of goods for children.

"Overexposure of men's sports. Joining the chorus begun years ago by National Basketball Association Commissioner David Stern, who, convinced that the domestic market was exhausted, turned to an international venue, television executives and corporate sponsors are seeking new faces and fresh ideas here at home. The public's displeasure over labor problems in the National Hockey League and Major League Baseball, along with the recurring scandals in men's NCAA Division I sports and the increasingly negative image of many of today's young NBA stars, also is thought to contribute.

"Cable television and enhanced media coverage. Final scores and updates of the premier women's basketball teams appear on the Headline News and ESPN ticker tapes. The number of televised games in many cases has tripled. ESPN alone swiped the NCAA Tournament from CBS with promises of more regional coverage and a willingness to grant a day between the semifinals and finals."

Discussing new, more restrictive NCAA legislation on scouting opponents:

"One of the differences is the fact you don't see the emotional aspects of the other team. We've been one of those teams that have over-scouted in the past. It's had an effect on us. We may be prepared about the same, but we don't feel as good about (it) as when we could watch teams in person."

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending before state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes of NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 32 bills from 20 states. The report includes 29 bills that have been introduced, and three pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (January 25 issue of The NCAA News). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills identified by previous reports on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

The State Legislation Report is based largely on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of February 2, 1995. The bills selected for inclusion in this report were drawn from a larger pool of measures that concern sports and therefore do not necessarily represent all of the bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending before the governing bodies of the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on an on-line basis and are not included in this report. The NCAA has not independently verified the accuracy or completeness of the information provided by Information for Public Affairs and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

ships. Although women still do not have their share of scholarships, financial rewards or media coverage, the gains have been great. Litigation regarding lack of Title IX compliance also has increased, thus forcing institutions to increase opportunities for women. Litigation will continue as long as colleges and universities fail to offer equitable opportunities.

Unfortunately, every gain also includes a loss. As women's sports became more popular and financially lucrative, men have claimed leadership positions. For example, the NCAA, which governs women's and men's collegiate athletics, is predominantly male; more than half of all women's college teams are now coached by men; and there are only four women in charge of Division I-A athletics programs. With statistics such as these, it is evident that girls and women in sport still have hurdles to jump and glass ceilings to shatter.

The purpose of National Girls and Women in Sports Day is not to enlist young girls and women to fight our battles. It is to educate them and to validate their experience in sport; to introduce them to women athletes, coaches and administrators who are wonderful role models; and to encourage young girls and women to consider a career in athletics.

I would like to have young girls dream about their sporting experiences. I would like them to be recognized and validated on more than one day out of the year. How can they dream if they aren't aware of the cultural images to show them the way? National Girls and Women in Sports Day is one small way of saying it is OK to play.

Andrea Wickerham is former director of athletics at Luther College. She now works for a law firm in Fairway, Kansas.

NACDA scholarship nominations due soon

The two postgraduate scholarship programs operated by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics (NACDA) Foundation — the NACDA/Disney Scholar-Athlete Awards and the Sears Directors' Cup Postgraduate Scholarship Awards — are underway and nominations are being accepted.

Nominations for both programs must be in the NACDA office (not postmarked) by February 24.

Nomination forms for the NACDA/Disney Scholar-Athlete Awards program were sent to all NACDA-member athletics directors at four-year institutions. Student-athletes from all sports are eligible for these awards.

To be nominated, a student-athlete is required to have a minimum grade-point average of 3.000 or above (4.000 scale) in undergraduate study and to be named to at least the all-America or all-conference team in the nominee's sport. The nomination process for football players has been completed; nominations now are being accepted for all sports but football.

Ten winners — five from football and five from other sports — will each receive a $5,000 grant to be used toward postgraduate study. The $50,000 in scholarships is funded by the Walt Disney Company.

Nomination forms for the Sears Directors' Cup Postgraduate Scholarship Awards were sent to all NACDA-member athletics directors at NCAA Division I institutions. Students who serve as a member of the athletics support staff (academic support, band members, cheerleaders, student coaches, equipment room managers, facility staff, sports information assistants, team managers, trainers) are eligible for the awards.

Nominees must maintain full-time undergraduate enrollment during the 1994-95 year as a senior and have a minimum GPA of 3.000 (4.000 scale).

Five winners — one from the institution that wins the 1995 Sears Directors' Cup Trophy and four at-large recipients — each will receive a $5,000 grant for postgraduate work. The $25,000 in scholarships is funded by Sears.

Nominations for both programs can be mailed to the NACDA Foundation, P.O. Box 16428, Cleveland, Ohio 44116; faxed to 216/892-4007; or shipped by overnight mail to 24651 Detroit Road, Westlake, Ohio 44145. It is not necessary to both fax and mail nomination forms.

Nomination forms may be completed by any member of the athletics staff, but must be signed by the athletics director.

Winners will receive the awards at NACDA's 30th annual convention June 18-21 in Las Vegas. The Scholar-Athlete Awards luncheon will be June 20.

Questions about the programs or requests for additional information can be directed to Laurie Garrison at NACDA, telephone 216/892-4000.

Water polo focuses on new format for championship

Beginning next season, the event will consist of four instead of eight teams

Changes in the 1995 championship dominated discussion at the NCAA Men's Water Polo Committee meeting January 29-February 1 in Coronado, California.

At its annual meeting, the committee reviewed all aspects of the National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship, which will for the first time comprise four teams in 1995. Since its inception in 1969, the championship has featured eight teams.

The NCAA Executive Committee reduced the field size of the championship when it revamped championships in 1992 to better reflect the membership's sponsorship of various sports. Men's water polo currently is sponsored by 42 member institutions.

In discussing the four-team format, the committee focused on championship team advancement or selection procedures, and dates and site of the championship.

In regard to team advancement or selection procedures, the committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that three conferences (Mountain Pacific Sports Federation, Western Water Polo Association and Eastern Water Polo Association) receive automatic qualification to the 1995 championship.

The fourth championship team would be selected at large, using current championship selection criteria.

As for dates and site, the committee will recommend to the Executive Committee that the championship be held December 1 and 3 (a Friday/Sunday format). The two semifinal games would be on Friday and a third-place game and the final would be on Sunday.

Sites for the 1995 and 1996 championships have not been determined. Interested institutions should contact Thomas A. Jacobs at the NCAA national office for more information.

Other highlights

In other actions during its January 29-February 1 meeting in Coronado, California, the Men's Water Polo Committee:

- Voted to survey all head men's water polo coaches regarding Rule 8-6, involving the center throw. Coaches will be asked if they prefer to retain the center throw taken between the 2- and 4-meter lines without undue delay or if they prefer to return to the corner throw as the site to put the ball in play when the ball passes over the goal line after last touched by the defensive team. The committee also voted to survey coaches concerning the maximum length of the field of play (25 meters or 30 meters).

- Met with Bruce Wigo, Tom Hermstad and Barbara Kalbus, representatives of U.S. Water Polo, Inc.

- Agreed to develop a bid process for selecting future championship sites.

In regard to rules, the committee:

- Revised the definition of Rule 2-9 to state that the referee will issue a yellow card as a means of warning to coaches or players whose conduct interferes with the control or progress of the game. If the interference occurs a second time, the referee will issue a second yellow card (resulting in the penalty described in Rule 2-9). Previously, coaches or players were warned verbally.

- Added taunting as a personal foul. A yellow card will be issued for the first incident of taunting. A second incident of taunting from any member of the same team will result in that player being ejected for 20 seconds and receiving a personal foul.

- Revised Rule 1-5, to state that teams shall be located diagonally at either end of the pool.

- Amended Rule 7-5, to include fighting as a major foul. Specifically, the committee adopted language stating:

In the opinion of the referee, if any brutality foul is deemed to be a fight, the fighting penalty shall be invoked. This could include, but is not limited to, an attempt to strike an opponent with the arms, hands, legs or feet, or a combative action by one or more players, a coach or team personnel. Combative action includes but is not limited to:

a. A player, coach or other team personnel attempting to punch or kick an opponent, whether or not there is contact with an opponent.

b. A player, coach or other team personnel who, in the opinion of the referee, instigates a fight by perpetrating an unsporting act toward an opponent that causes the opponent to retaliate by fighting.

Any squad member, coach or other team personnel who participates in a fight or leaves the bench area during a fight shall be assessed a brutality foul. The first time that individual participates in a fight during the season (including exhibition games), the individual will be suspended from participating in the team's next game. If the same individual participates in a second fight, that individual will be suspended for the remainder of the season, including tournament competition. If an individual participates in a fight during his team's final game of the season, that individual will be suspended from participating in the team's next regular-season game for which that player or coach, or other team personnel, would be eligible. Any player, coach or other team personnel under suspension for fighting may not sit on the team bench. It is the responsibility of the institutions and their respective conference offices to ensure that the carryover penalties (i.e., suspension) for fighting are invoked.

NCAA, USOC form task force to review Olympic sports relationship

The NCAA and the United States Olympic Committee have created a special task force to strengthen the relationship between the two bodies.

The task force will be cochaired by NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey and USOC Vice-President George Steinbrenner. Dempsey is a member of the USOC Executive Committee.

"The NCAA and its institutions are a tremendous source of training and development for Olympic athletes," said USOC President LeRoy T. Walker. "In a time of severe financial stress at many colleges and universities with Olympic sports on their programs, we need to work together to help those athletes who dream of Olympic participation.

"The NCAA schools have tremendous facilities that can be utilized, and we also need to see how we can expand our financial support to Olympians who have had their education interrupted."

The primary mission will be to look at the relationships that can be developed between the USOC and the NCAA to assist emerging and elite athletes who are taking part in Olympic sports at NCAA institutions.

"We will concentrate on three key areas — facilities usage, scholarships and financial support, and programs that will help collegiate athletes attain their goals of becoming Olympians," Walker said. "We also want to assist Olympians who are in college to reach their goals without undue financial strain."

Besides Dempsey and Steinbrenner, the task force members are Robert A. Bowlsby, athletics director, University of Iowa; Judith

A. Holland, senior associate athletics director, University of California, Los Angeles; Micki J. King, special assistant to the athletics director, University of Kentucky; Robert F. Kanaby, executive director, National Federation of State High School Associations; and Bill Stapleton of Austin, Texas, a former Olympic swimmer and representative on the USOC Athletes' Advisory Council.

Virginia Commonwealth, Virginia Tech settle suit in Metro Conference

A dispute involving Virginia Commonwealth University, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the rest of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference was settled February 2 without a lengthy legal battle.

The Virginia schools believed that the five other members of the conference, which are leaving at the end of the season to start a new league, owed them millions of dollars in penalty fees and television revenue.

Those five schools — the University of Louisville; Tulane University; University of Southern Mississippi; University of South Florida; and University of North Carolina, Charlotte — considered expelling the Virginia schools from the conference in response.

After Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech went to court seeking a restraining order, both sides agreed to use a mediator to try and solve the problem.

Under the agreement, the five schools will pay Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech $2.27 million for the two schools' equity in the conference, according to The Associated Press.

The Virginia schools had demanded that the other five schools pay a $2.5 million penalty for leaving the conference, as specified in league bylaws, plus $1.2 million in NCAA tournament revenues and $500,000 in other league revenues such as television money.

After 1½ days of negotiations, it was decided to pay each of the Virginia schools $960,000 for their equity in the conference. An additional $350,000 for settlement purposes will be divided between the two schools at a later date.

Under the agreement, Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech have agreed to resign from the conference June 30, without penalty.

Football

For the first time, forum will be held outside Kansas City and include a student-athlete panelist of the NCAA Council; and Grant Teaff, executive director of the American Football Coaches Association.

Coaches attending will be Frank Beamer, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; Rich Brooks, University of Oregon; Fisher DeBerry, U.S. Air Force Academy; Fred Goldsmith, Duke University; Steve Logan, East Carolina University; Joe Paterno, Pennsylvania State University; Bill Snyder, Kansas State University; Gene Stallings, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa; and Pat Sullivan, Texas Christian University.

The first day of the forum will include registration and an informal dinner for panelists and media. The second day, February 12, will feature panel discussions with coaches at 10 a.m. and 3:15 p.m. NCAA Communications Committee chair Christine A. Plonsky, associate director of athletics at the University of Texas at Austin, will moderate the sessions. Panelists will be available for individual interviews at the end of the day.

Between the panel discussions, NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey will address the group at 1 p.m. and then field questions from the media. Dempsey was a member of the research group formed by the Joint Policy Board in 1993 to study the feasibility of a Division I-A football championship.

The forum will conclude with a panel discussion with Boston, Bowers and Sweazy at 9 a.m. February 13.

Following is information on the panelists scheduled to attend the 1995 College Football Forum.

Beamer

The first alumnus to guide the Virginia Tech football program in more than 40 years, Beamer took over the Hokie reins in 1987. He returned the Tech program to national prominence by 1993, when Tech posted a 9-3 record, including a 45-20 victory over Indiana University, Bloomington, in the Independence Bowl.

Last season, Beamer's squad posted its second consecutive 8-3 regular-season mark, finished second in the Big East Conference and made its second consecutive bowl appearance (a 45-23 loss to the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, in the Gator Bowl). The Hokies finished the season ranked in the top 20 of all major polls.

Before coming to Tech, Beamer spent six years as head coach at Murray State University, where he compiled a 42-23-2 record. His career record as a head coach is 83-70-4.

He began his college coaching career as a graduate assistant at the University of Maryland, College Park, after receiving his bachelor's degree from Tech in 1969. He then went to The Citadel, where he worked six seasons under current San Diego Chargers head coach Bobby Ross and served as defensive coordinator for the final two years before accepting a similar position at Murray State in 1979. He was named head coach in 1981.

Boston

Boston was named Minnesota's

10th director of men's athletics in 1991 after serving three years as athletics director at the University of Rhode Island. Before his stint at Rhode Island, he was director of athletics at Kean College for two years and, before that, director of students at Montclair State University for 12 years.

Boston is no stranger to Minnesota athletics. He lettered in football for the Golden Gophers from 1965 through 1967, earning all-Big Ten Conference honors and helping Minnesota win a share of its last conference title in his senior year.

After four years playing professional football, he received his bachelor's degree in 1972 at Montclair State. He earned a master's degree from the same institution in 1973, and received a doctorate from New York University in 1987.

Among his numerous honors, Boston has received the Outstanding Alumni Education Award from Montclair State in 1991 and citizenship awards from the Lions Club of West Orange, New Jersey; The Boys Club of Newark, New Jersey; and Newark's St. Joseph School for the Blind.

Bowers

A 6-2, 270-pound starting center for Bowling Green, Bowers is a two-time member of the Mid-American Athletic Conference's all-academic football team. He has a 3.470 grade-point average (4.000 scale) and is majoring in sports management.

The junior offensive lineman has the versatility to play guard — something he was called upon to do in his first two years — as well as center. He started all 11 games last season for 9-2 Bowling Green and helped the Falcons to their best rushing season (2,057 yards) since 1979. They finished eighth in the nation in scoring, averaging a conference-record 35.5 points per game.

Bowers was a standout in football, wrestling and track at DeKalb High School in Auburn, Indiana. In football, he earned all-conference honors three times and was a first-team all-state selection as a senior. He also served as his school's class president as a senior and was a member of the National Honor Society.

Brooks

Brooks just completed the most successful of his 18 seasons as head coach at Oregon, leading the Ducks to a school-record-tying nine wins and their first Rose Bowl appearance since 1958. His tenure at one school is surpassed by only five other Division I coaches: Bobby Bowden, Terry Donahue, LaVell Edwards, Tom Osborne and Paterno.

Brooks has coached Oregon to a 61-55 record over the past 10 seasons, and the Ducks have set school attendance records regularly since 1987. His overall mark as coach of the Ducks is 91-109-4.

Brooks graduated from Oregon State University in 1963 and became a high-school assistant coach. After a year, he returned to his alma mater as defensive ends coach. In 1970, he became linebackers coach at the University of California, Los Angeles, and a year later he became special teams coach for the NFL's

Los Angeles Rams. After brief stints with Oregon State and the San Francisco 49ers, Brooks returned to UCLA in 1976 and was named head coach at Oregon shortly after that season.

DeBerry

In 11 seasons at Air Force, DeBerry has compiled an 84-50-1 record and fashioned a wishbone offense that is annually one of the most explosive and highest-scoring in Division I-A. He has led the Falcons to seven of their 12 bowl appearances, posting a 4-3 bowl record. His 1994 team was 8-4 and tied for second place in the Western Athletic Conference.

A football and baseball star at Wofford College, he graduated in 1960 and began a six-year stint coaching high school in South Carolina. He then returned to Wofford as an assistant coach for two years.

DeBerry's big coaching break came at Appalachian State University, where he served as offensive coordinator for nine seasons before accepting Ken Hatfield's invitation to head the Air Force offense in 1980. When Hatfield departed for the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, four years later, DeBerry was tabbed as his successor.

Goldsmith

Goldsmith came to Duke before last season fresh from turning around Rice University's fortunes with back-to-back 6-5 seasons after inheriting an 18-game losing streak in 1989. The 1994 season did nothing to dispel the notion that Goldsmith is a master of the quick fix: The Blue Demons' 8-4 record was their best since 1989, and they earned just their second bowl bid in 24 years (a 34-20 loss to the University of Wisconsin, Madison, in the Hall of Fame Bowl).

Goldsmith began his coaching career at the high-school level while still an undergraduate at the University of Florida. He earned a bachelor's degree in 1967, and he became freshman coach at his alma mater in 1971. From 1974 through 1978, he was the defensive coordinator at Florida A&M University; under his guidance, the Rattlers allowed only 149.9 yards per game in 1978, still a Division I-AA record.

He went to Rice after serving five years as defensive coordinator and inside linebackers coach at Arkansas. He also has been defensive coordinator at Air Force and head coach at Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania.

In his seven seasons as a collegiate head coach, Goldsmith's record is 33-42-1.

Logan

The third time was a charm for Logan. After two seasons of struggle, during which his Pirates went 7-15, Logan may have turned the corner in his rebuilding program in 1994 by leading East Carolina to a 7-4 record and a berth in the Liberty Bowl.

Logan developed much of his coaching philosophy under the tutelage of several successful head coaches. His collegiate coaching career began in 1980 under Jimmy Johnson at Oklahoma State University, where he was tight ends coach. After one year, he became head coach at Hutchinson (Kansas) Junior College, earning Jayhawk Conference coach-of-the-year honors in 1982.

The next year, he became offensive coordinator at the University of Tulsa under current Ohio State University head coach John Cooper. In 1985, he left for the University of Colorado, Boulder, to serve as running backs coach under Bill McCartney. In 1987, he began a two-year stint as quarterbacks coach at Mississippi State University. He joined the Pirate staff in 1989 as running backs coach, then was promoted to offensive coordinator in 1990.

Paterno

With a career record of 269-69-3 in 29 years as head coach of the Nittany Lions, Paterno has more wins than any active Division I-A coach and is surpassed in all-time career I-A victories only by legends Bear Bryant (323), Pop Warner (319) and Amos Alonzo Stagg (314).

Last season, Paterno engineered Penn State's triumphant return to the Rose Bowl after a 72-year absence, coaching his team to a 38-20 victory over Oregon. The victory gave Paterno his 16th bowl victory, breaking a tie with Bryant for the most wins in bowl history, and enabled him to become the first coach ever to win all four of the traditional New Year's Day games.

The team's undefeated 1994 regular season (11-0) was the seventh in his tenure, and it marked the 116th time that Paterno's charges had won 10 or more games in a season.

Paterno is the only active coach ever honored by the College Football Foundation with its Distinguished American Award, which goes to someone who "has made significant contributions to the betterment of amateur football in America" over a long period of time.

Snyder

When Snyder arrived at Kansas State six years ago, the national media were calling the Wildcat program the worst in the nation. In fact, Kansas State won just one of its last 38 games in the 1980s.

But in the 1990s, under Snyder's direction, the Wildcats have raced to a 35-21-1 mark. In the last two years alone, Kansas State has posted an 18-5-1 record, including a win in the 1993 Copper Bowl and a loss in the 1994 Aloha Bowl, and back-to-back third-place finishes in the Big Eight Conference. This year's 5-2 league record was the school's best since 1970.

Snyder was named national coach of the year by ESPN in 1991 and 1993, and he is only the second person to be named Big Eight coach of the year by The Associated Press three times in a four-year period. In six years at Kansas State, Snyder has compiled a 36-31-1 record.

Snyder began his college coaching career in 1974 as offensive coordinator at Austin College. He joined the University of North Texas staff in 1976, and he left in 1979 to accompany Hayden Fry to the University of Iowa. He served 10 years as offensive coordinator at Iowa before leaving for his current position in 1988.

Stallings

Stallings has guided Alabama to a 52-10-1 mark, a school record for wins by a coach in his first five seasons. In that time, his Crimson Tide also has won a mythical national championship, a Southeastern Conference championship and three SEC Western Division titles.

His 1994 squad finished with an 11-1 regular-season mark and then downed Ohio State, 24-17, in the Citrus Bowl. Alabama finished the season ranked fourth in the USA Today/CNN poll and fifth in the AP poll.

Stallings played under Bryant at Texas A&M University, College Station, from 1954 to 1956 and remained as a graduate assistant until 1958, when he moved to Tuscaloosa to serve under Bryant as a full-time assistant. In 1965, he returned to Texas A&M and posted a 27-45-1 record in seven seasons, including a Southwest Conference championship in 1967.

In 1972, he began his professional career with a 14-year tenure as an assistant coach for the NFL's Dallas Cowboys. He was named head coach of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1987, compiling a 23-34-1 record before returning to Alabama in 1990. His career college coaching record is 79-55-2.

Sullivan

In just his third year as the head coach at Texas Christian, Sullivan led the 1994 Horned Frogs to only their second winning season in 10 years and a share of the Southwest Conference title for the first time since 1959. The team's 7-5 record included a 20-10 loss to the University of Virginia in the Independence Bowl, the Horned Frogs' first postseason appearance since 1984.

These accomplishments were enough to earn Sullivan coach-of-the-year honors in the Southwest Conference.

If Sullivan is as talented on the sidelines as he was on the field, he will make an impact on Texas Christian football. While a quarterback at Auburn, he led the Tigers to a record of 27-7 over three seasons (1969-71) and three postseason appearances. He won the 1971 Heisman Trophy and earned all-American honors twice.

After five years playing professional football, Sullivan entered private business. In 1986, he rejoined his alma mater as quarterbacks coach and remained on the staff for six years. Since being named head coach at Texas Christian in 1992, he has posted a 13-20-1 record.

Sweazy

In addition to serving as the school's faculty athletics representative, Sweazy is the chair of the Texas Tech Athletic Council. He is in his 17th year on the council, his 14th as chair.

Sweazy currently is a member of the NCAA Council, and his term as chair of the Eligibility Committee expired last September. He also has been active in the College Football Association, serving on the board

1995 Column No. 6

1995 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 123 Evaluations — Olympic Festival tryouts — women's basketball

With the adoption of Proposal No. 123 (effective immediately) in the sport of women's basketball, Divisions I and II institutions are permitted to count evaluations that take place during three consecutive days of official tryouts for the USA Basketball Olympic Festival as a single evaluation. Thus, the evaluation of multiple contests at official tryouts for the USA Basketball Olympic Festival for women's basketball will be consistent with the treatment given to the evaluation of multiple contests in a tournament occurring on consecutive days.

1995 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 121 Evaluation activities during contact period — Division I football

NCAA Bylaw 13.1.2.7.1

Division I-A head football coach restrictions — off-campus contact

With the adoption of Proposal No. 121 (effective August

1, 1995) in Divisions I-A and I-AA, any evaluation activity that occurs during a permissible football contact period shall be counted as a contact for the involved prospective student-athlete. This includes evaluation activities that take place on or off the campus of a high school, preparatory school or two-year college.

Mid-year graduate Initial-eligibility standards

Divisions I and II institutions should note that in accordance with NCAA Bylaw 14.3.1.5, a prospect's initial eligibility may be based on the initial-eligibility standards in effect at the time the prospect graduated from high school or the standards in effect at the time of initial collegiate enrollment.

During its December 12, 1994, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that a prospect who graduates from high school at midyear, but who initially enrolls during the fall term of the subsequent academic year, may use the initial-eligibility standards in effect at the actual time of his or her graduation or the standards in effect at the time of his or her initial, full-time collegiate enrollment.

For example, a prospect who graduated from high school in December 1994 and entered a collegiate institution for the first time in August 1995 may use the initial-eligibility standards in effect at the actual time he or she graduated from high school (December 1994), even though the standards may have changed prior to his or her initial collegiate enrollment (August 1995).

I men's basketball committee relies much less on the Rating Percentage Index than the public believes

Committee chair and University of Kansas athletics director Robert E. Frederick probably will be heard saying this a time or two during selection Sunday: "The RPI is just one of the many things we use. I know it's been said before, but it really is true."

Frederick said the perceived importance of the RPI is understandable, since it is a quantifiable measure. But the men's basketball committee uses it more as a comparison tool when faced with filling the few remaining openings in the bracket — "the nitty gritty," as it's referred to by the committee.

"My observation has been that we've gotten more and more away from reliance on the RPI. It has a great value to us in putting teams in categories of 1 through 25 or 1 through 50, so that then we can look at teams and how they did against the top 25, the top 50 or top 100. It's really valuable in that regard, but as a single factor, it's not significant.

"We've made a conscious effort to delay the introduction of the RPI into the process. We cast an initial ballot, in which each member of the committee selects 34 at-large teams, which is turned in on the night before we start the process. We still have not seen the RPI at that point. We don't get all that information until Friday (before selection Sunday)," Frederick said.

Different factors considered

Don't get excited if you think your team's RPI is 34 or higher.

"The difference between the No. 25 team and the No. 40 team may really be slight, because those teams might be so close within that range," Frederick explained. "The difference between the numbers 25 and 40 is great, but the difference between the index No. 25 and the No. 40 position might not be that great. That's the reason in my mind that you can't put much stock in one index.

"We're picking the teams based on what we think are the best 34 teams available, and we look at a lot of different factors other than the RPI. If a team didn't get selected, they were probably on the bubble. We analyze hour upon hour over two teams, sometimes over two days. We've looked at a lot of different things. I don't have any problem at all defending that," Frederick said.

Frederick and the men's basketball committee have spent the last several years trying to take some of the mystery out of the selection process in hopes of convincing coaches in particular that not just one factor affects their team's selection.

"We're making an effort to provide as much information about the selection process as possible," Frederick said. "We've made a presentation to the National Association of Basketball Coaches at its issues summit. I made a presentation to all the (on-air broadcasting) talent for ESPN's college broadcasts in November. We will talk to the CBS talent about the selection process. Actually, we have distributed for general public consumption just about all we do. There really aren't too many secrets left."

Adjusted measurement

One component of the RPI that isn't made public is the formula for the adjusted measurement.

Three factors in the equation are public knowledge — a team's Division I winning percentage, a team's opponents' winning percentage and a team's opponents' opponents' winning percentage.

Any computer hack who has the results of all 302 Division I teams can figure that, right?

But the men's basketball committee sees an adjusted RPI that figures in a system of bonuses and penalties.

Teams receive positive weightings for scheduling 50 percent of their nonconference games against opponents ranked in the top 50 by the RPI, and for wins against all teams ranked in that grouping. Negative weightings are assigned for scheduling 50 percent of the non-conference schedule against teams ranked 150 or lower by the RPI and for losing to any team in this grouping.

Because of the perception that the RPI is the all-important component of the selection process, several individuals publish their own version of the ratings.

Jim Sukup, publisher of the Collegiate Basketball News, sells an unadjusted RPI to subscribers. The Associated Press makes Sukup's RPI available to newspapers. Schools and conferences also can purchase Sukup's RPI, which contains only the first three factors mentioned in formulating the NCAA's index.

In addition to Sukup's ratings, USA Today publishes ratings devised by Jeff Sagarin.

All three measurements use a different formula, NCAA statistics coordinator Gary K. Johnson explains.

"The RPI that appears in the paper out of Indianapolis (Sukup) is similar to the RPI that the committee sees," Johnson said. "Adjustments are made for bonuses and penalties, which could move some teams up or down as many as five spots.

"With the NCAA's RPI, at the beginning of the season, everyone is even. It's all objective and goes by the numbers. Sagarin's teams at the beginning of the season are already ranked. It's very subjective. It becomes more objective as the season goes on because it's based more on this year's numbers, but at the beginning, he bases a lot of things on past performance — his opinion of how teams should do."

Doesn't release ratings

The men's basketball committee does not release the final RPI to schools. It has agreed to give information to conferences, but only for a conference's members; for example, the Big Ten Conference receives the index for its 11 members only. The conference office will know where Indiana University, Bloomington, and the University of Michigan ranked, but not the University of California, Los Angeles.

Since the complete RPI is not made public, some schools have found the "copycat" versions of the NCAA's RPI useful.

Like others, the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, athletics department purchases the RPI produced by Collegiate Basketball News. For $120, the Cornhuskers get 12 issues of the RPI Report. Associate sports information director Nick Joos says the information comes in handy for future scheduling. In order to improve the RPI, teams should play opponents with good RPIs.

The men's basketball committee has discussed the pros and cons of releasing the entire index to schools at the end of the season.

"We've talked about it at length and thought it was working well the way we are currently doing it," Frederick said. "We thought that releasing information for all the schools to everybody might put too much emphasis on the measurement."

of directors from 1984 to 1987.

He was a football letter-winner at Wichita State University, where he earned bachelor's and master's degrees. After earning a doctorate at the University of Oklahoma, he came to Texas Tech in 1970 as an assistant professor of civil engineering and assistant director of water resources.

Sweazy served as director of water resources and taught civil engineering until 1985, when he was promoted to director of the Office of Research and associate vice-president for research. In 1988, he was named vice-provost for research.

Teaff

Teaff retired as head coach at Baylor University in 1992 and remained as the school's director of athletics until 1993, when he took over the AFCA post from Charles McClendon.

In his 21 seasons as the Bears' coach, he compiled a record of 128-105-6. He was named national coach of the year in 1974 and was the Southwest Conference's coach of the year six times. He ranked 34th on the all-time coaching victories list at the time of his retirement.

Teaff's college coaching career began as an assistant football and track coach at McMurry University in 1957, and he was the school's head coach in both sports from 1960 to 1965. From 1966 to 1968, he was an assistant football coach at Angelo State University. He then assumed the head-coaching job at Angelo State for three years before going to Baylor in 1972.

Teaff has served on the NCAA Football Rules Committee and Gender-Equity Task Force, and has chaired the AFCA's ethics committee.

Certification

Decisions to be announced in March release information regarding its certification status concurrent with the committee's announcement.

To help facilitate the process, the NCAA's public information staff will work with an identified communications liaison on each campus.

The announcement probably will involve a telephonic news conference to answer questions that may be raised by media representatives.

Certification for Division I athletics programs was approved at the 1994 NCAA Convention. It requires each institution to conduct a comprehensive self-study of its athletics program, which then must be evaluated by peers.

After the peer review, the Committee on Athletics Certification determines whether the institution is "certified," "certified with conditions" or "not certified."
