Restructuring report tops Commission agenda

The report of the Oversight Committee on the NCAA Membership Structure will be among the most significant items discussed at the March 30-31 meeting of the NCAA Presidents Commission in Seattle.

Other major topics on the agenda include examinations of Title IX and need-based aid matters.

The oversight committee, which is responsible for developing a restructuring proposal for the entire Association, met March 13, at which time it considered the restructuring recommendations of three division task forces.

Although all of the task forces agree on the desirability of greater federation among the divisions and on the concept of more presidential control in general, some differences exist over the role of a proposed Executive Committee and over budgetary matters. The oversight committee devoted most of its time at its March 13 meeting to those subjects.

A paper describing the recommendations of the oversight committee currently is being drafted for the Presidents Commission's consideration. That report will appear in the April 5 issue of The NCAA News.

The report is expected to address the top structure of the Association and not the committee structure, which will be dealt with in a subsequent phase of discussions.

Title IX

Regarding Title IX, the Commission will focus on the prospect of Congressional hearings that have been proposed by the American Football Coaches Association and the College Football Association. Although the hearings could take place at any time, some Congressional staff members have indicated that they probably will not begin before May.

The AFCA and CFA want Congress to review the law to ascertain whether its current application is in keeping with

Basketball arenas put on a full-court press to show off facilities during March Madness

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Most fans won't give any thought to the time and effort that has been spent to prepare arenas and stadiums for the 1995 NCAA Division I Men's and Women's Basketball Championships.

But workers at facilities have spent substantial time making those buildings' best qualities shine during the NCAA's most visible championships.

The hedges that flank the exterior need to be trimmed just so, and the flower beds arranged for a maximum display of color. The restrooms need to sparkle as if the building contractor has just placed the final coat of wax on the ceramic floor tiles before unveiling the building to the public for the first time. The media need working accommodations that are convenient, pleasant and — most important — operable.

Dressing up facilities for the NCAA tournaments demands a committed staff. In newer buildings, the need to beautify is not as great as it is for older venues, but one thing is constant — a desire to show off an arena in its best splendor and character.

'Best foot forward'

"It's been a constant reminder to all our staff to put our best foot forward," said Ron Dubois, associate

NYSP goes on the offensive in preparation for funding battle

By Ronald D. Mott
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

For the past several years, Federal funding for the National Youth Sports Program has been absent from presidential budgets submitted to the U.S. Congress. Ultimately, however, Congress annually has appropriated funds to cover the program's expenses.

But this year's budget lobbying effort on behalf of NYSP may be the most critical in the 27-year history of the program. Not only has the composition of the Congress changed, but the NCAA Administrative Committee decided in February that the Association would not subsidize the program should Federal funding be lost.

"We're doing a good job and it's a proven track record," said Brenda L. Edmond of Southern University-Baton Rouge and chair of the NCAA National Youth Sports Program Committee. "Why would you want to drop this program after 27 years? We certainly are going to fight to get funding. Our voice is the voice of a lot of children."

"I think it would be a tragedy not to have this program," said Daniel Boggan Jr., NCAA group executive director for education services. "This is a program that benefits almost 70,000 people, most of whom are disadvantaged. Exposure to the things that the NYSP program offers to young people is awfully important."

This summer alone, the NYSP program is expected to enroll more than 65,000 boys and girls ages 10 to 16. Last year's participants numbered nearly 66,000 — 35 percent of which were returnees to the program.

The NYSP program — which offers instruction in a variety of sports to participants — provides an alternative to the difficult and negative choices facing many disad-

Limited space will restrict attendance at April seminars

Only those who have preregistered should plan on attending either of the two NCAA Title IX seminars that will be conducted in April.

Janet M. Justus, NCAA director of education resources and women's issues coordinator, said the problem is with the number of people that the meeting rooms can accommodate. She said some individuals appear to believe the limitation involves sleeping-room space, but that is not the case.

Justus encouraged those who have preregistered but will not be able to attend to let her know as soon as possible so that others can be placed on a waiting list.

The seminars, designed to help the membership comply with Title IX, will be April 10-11 at the Sheraton Grand Hotel in Dallas and April 20-21 at the Omni Inner Harbor Hotel in Baltimore. Justus said more seminars may be conducted in the fall.

In related matters, the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics has asked the Association to take a more vocal and public stance regarding its position on Title IX matters. Also, USA Volleyball President Jerry Sherman announced March 14 that he will propose to that association's board of directors that the organization go on record as supporting the current interpretation and enforcement of Title IX.

recommended against passage of "due-process" legislation that was introduced in January.

The bill would require collegiate athletics associations to observe judicial-like due-process requirements in enforcement proceedings and would provide that such associations would be liable for damages caused by any penalties that are not determined in accordance with those requirements.

In February, similar legislation in the Mississippi legislature died when a state senate committee failed to report the bill before its deadline for passage.

Federal courts have struck down similar laws in Nevada and Florida. They remain in Illinois and Nebraska.

Rules compliance

Three regional seminars scheduled for May and June

Dates and sites have been set for the 1995 NCAA regional rules-compliance seminars for Divisions I and II.

They will be conducted May 1-3 (Monday-Wednesday) in Washington, D.C.; May 10-12 (Wednesday-Friday) in Orlando, Florida; and May 31-June 2 (Wednesday-Friday) in San Diego.

The seminars will provide information regarding NCAA legislation and interpretations and assistance in establishing and maintaining institutional control of intercollegiate athletics programs.

Each seminar will have a resource center that will feature updated compliance materials from the NCAA resource file, along with compliance-monitoring materials from various member institutions and conferences.

To assist in this effort, interested individuals (even those not attending a seminar) are asked to submit a single copy of material from any of the categories listed below. Those responding are asked to submit the materials by March 31 to Chrystal L. Gates at the NCAA national office.

The desired material includes:

- Institution mission statement.
- Fund-raising policies.
- Business operation policies (for example, budget and travel policies).
- Job descriptions for compliance coordinator, faculty athletics representative and senior woman administrator positions.

Committee recommends against 'due-process' bill passage at its March 13 meeting to those subjects.

A paper describing the recommendations of the oversight committee currently is being drafted for the Presidents Commission's consideration. That report will appear in the April 5 issue of The NCAA News.

In a related matter, the chairs of the Division III restructuring task force have selected Jeff A. Ankrum, faculty athletics representative at Wittenburg University, to join the task force.

Basketball attendance

Total attendance for men's Division I basketball is being sustained at a high level while the growing popularity of the women's game is reflected in a steady attendance climb.

Men's attendance has ranged between 23 and 24 million every year since 1989, while total women's attendance climbed consistently to reach a record of 3.6 million in 1994.

Larger arenas also have contributed to higher average attendance in the Division I Men's Basketball Championship, where each session in the previous five tournaments of the 1990s has averaged 18,053 fans. The expansion to a 64-team bracket in the women's championship resulted in a smaller per-session average in 1994, but the '94 event did set a total attendance record for the event at 280,494.

Emory athlete a b—g w—nn—r

Emory University tennis player Aaron Cohen says he has told the story "millions" of times now, but that's a small price to pay for having been a two-time winner on "Wheel of Fortune."

Cohen, now a sophomore at Emory, was crowned in 1991 as "Teen Week" champion on the popular television game show. He won $29,500 in cash and a sparkling new Chevrolet Camaro sports car. The car helped get him around in style and the money helped him attend tennis' most prestigious event — Wimbledon.

Cohen, from Los Angeles, was signed up for a tryout on the show by his mother. He survived the cut against approximately 50 would-be contestants, but did not realize he would play on the air until six months later when a "Wheel of Fortune" staff member called him at home.

"They told us they would send us a letter within three weeks if we made the final cut," Cohen said. "I never got a letter. But six months later the phone rang, and it was a guy from the show inviting me to appear as a contestant."

Five shows were taped that Saturday and Cohen appeared in the fourth show. He solved two of the four puzzles ("Prince of Wales" and "Having a Change of Heart"), winning $18,000 and the right to compete in the bonus round. He did not solve the bonus puzzle ("Car Key") despite having four of the six letters revealed. That cost him a $25,000 prize.

"I screwed up," he said. "I had mixed feelings, knowing I had won the show but also knowing that I could easily have won the 25 grand."

He changed clothes for the next taping and solved three of the five puzzles ("Soviet Union, Capitol," "Protein-Rich Foods" and "Edward Scissorhands"). He won $11,500 to win the show and an opportunity to redeem himself in yet another bonus round for a 1992 Camaro.

He was given a seven-letter, two-word phrase with two letters revealed:

"— — R R — — —"

Quickly recognizing the answer, Cohen gave the four letters — H, U, Y and P — that contestants are permitted to help complete the puzzle. "Hurry Up" was the answer and he hurried to London that summer to work for HBO as a production assistant at Wimbledon.

"Winning those shows is among the top

Geographic soccer

The University of Notre Dame men's soccer team's travel itinerary is being used to help promote learning about geography by grade-school students in the South Bend, Indiana, area.

Nearly 4,000 students in 76 classrooms are participating in the Notre Dame Soccer/Sporting Geography education activity-kit program.

As the Fighting Irish and opponents travel, lesson plans are formulated for the students.

"This has been a unique and educational program for everyone involved," said Mike Berticelli, men's soccer coach at Notre Dame. "We're proud to be a part of a program that has involved so many students in the community. We emphasize with our teams at the University of Notre Dame that there is much more than on-the-field and in-the-classroom performance and this is an example of that."

"We feel our student-athletes at Notre Dame are great role models for area youths. Being able to be involved with Sporting Geography gives an outlet to do so."

The kits were developed by Geography Insights from Today's Sports, Inc., a not-for-profit organization in Chesterfield, Missouri. More information can be obtained from Karen Fox, director, at 314/458-1009.

Milestones

Jeannie Milling, women's basketball coach at the University of Alabama at Birmingham, won her 300th game February 19 when the Lady Blazers defeated Marquette University, 78-69.

University of New Orleans baseball coach Tom Schwaner earned his 300th career victory as a college coach — all at New Orleans — in a 7-1 victory over Southeastern Louisiana University February 14.

Dave Webster, men's ice hockey coach at Plymouth State College, captured career victory No. 200 February 7 in a 10-3 win over Suffolk University.

Susan Dunagan, women's basketball coach at Roanoke College, won her 400th game February 3 in a 83-67 win over Guilford College.

The men's basketball program at Monmouth College (Illinois) won its 1,000th game February 14 against Coe College, 83-64. It took 95 years and one week after the program's first victory to reach that milestone. Also, the team's head coach, Terry Glasgow, earned his 350th win February 4 in a victory over Illinois College.

Dan Fitzgerald, men's basketball coach at Gonzaga University, won his 200th game December 1 with a 90-75 win over the University of Nevada.

Jim McEwen, men's basketball coach at Westminster College (Missouri), won his 150th game when the Blue Jays beat Greenville College, 82-76.

Sue Gunter, women's basketball coach at Louisiana State University, won her 500th game in her 31st year as a coach and her 13th season at LSU. She accomplished the feat in a 92-62 victory over Jackson State University February 9.

Florida International University baseball coach Danny Price won his 600th game as the Golden Panthers' skipper March 10 with a 13-0 defeat of Samford University. Price, coach at Florida International since 1980, held a 602-311 career mark through March 11.

Rich Martin, baseball coach at Hofstra University, recorded victory No. 200 with a 15-2 win over La Salle University earlier this season. He is in his sixth season as coach of the Flying Dutchmen.

Jonathan Halpert, men's basketball coach at Yeshiva University, won his 200th career game this year with a 68-54 win over St. Joseph's College (New York).

The NCAA needs a new agenda

By Eugene P. Trani

VIRGINIA COMMONWEALTH UNIVERSITY

In the process of creating a new "super-conference" with the Great Midwest Conference, members of the Metropolitan Collegiate Athletic Conference threatened to expel my institution, Virginia Commonwealth University, as well as Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, from the conference.

Nothing we had done prompted this move. The main difference between us and the universities asked to be part of the new configuration appeared to center on football and television. Virginia Commonwealth's location in Richmond made our market less appealing than that of other schools located in bigger regions. And Virginia Tech's major television draw, football, was affiliated with another conference.

To forestall this move on the part of the Metro presidents, I asked the NCAA to get involved. The NCAA declined. The NCAA's stance has been to stay out of conference affairs in the view that these are parochial matters and to get involved might show favoritism. But, in this instance, I believed the Metro incident had far-reaching implications.

Increasingly, the NCAA's Division I conferences are aligning not around regional or institutional similarities but around the potential for earnings from television. The Big Eight Conference will add four members of the Southwest Conference in 1996, creating the Big 12. Pennsylvania State University recently left the Atlantic 10 to join the more prominent Big Ten. Conferences like the Big East, the Southeastern and the Western Athletic no longer really represent the geographic regions that their names imply.

The Metro strategy, however, went further. To arrange a new conference of the size that the Metro presidents preferred, but to avoid departing the Metro and risking financial penalties for breach of contract, the presi-

Let capitalism apply to the players

In the March 1 issue of The NCAA News, on this Comment page, University of Georgia Director of Athletics Vince Dooley made a number of statements that inaccurately characterize my views on paying college athletes and that further cloud the issues surrounding the subject. As a result, I want to clarify my position as well as shed light on the issues.

First, I do not believe universities should pay college athletes. Division III sports is a fine, working model of college sports that meets all of the goals set forth in the NCAA Manual regarding competitive, educational, physical and social benefits. Every university is free to adopt this model. The major universities have chosen to professionalize college sports, not me. Multibillion-dollar contracts with CBS were not forced on the major universities. They have freely chosen to enter into the sports-entertainment industry.

I advocate only that college athletes be treated like all other American citizens — free to benefit in the marketplace from their popularity and special talents. Universities were never chartered with the idea of suppressing anyone's economic opportunities; yet today, NCAA rules are prohibiting literally thousands of American families (many of them minorities below or not much above the poverty line) from enjoying financial enrichment.

When I sent $100 checks last year to 100 college football players, the NCAA was not "steadfast in responding to the challenge," as Mr. Dooley claimed. Instead, the NCAA backed off and did nothing. Not one penalty was inflicted on any school, although 22 athletes cashed those checks in clear violation of NCAA rules prohibiting athletes from receiving "promises to pay." The purpose of my effort was not to get any athlete declared ineligible but to open the door to deferred compensation (via promises to pay and trust funds) to all athletes.

Point by point, here are brief responses to Mr. Dooley's questions regarding his claim that all of the ramifications of paying college athletes would be detrimental to college sports:

1. There is no need to pay athletes across the board nor to decide who should get what. America has a wonderful method of responding to Mr. Dooley's insurmountable problem: It's called capitalism. Let each athlete receive whatever anyone offers. No more, no less. The universities could regulate all moneys by requiring they go into trust funds, available to athletes only after graduation. (What a terrific incentive for education.)

Letter

2. Should just revenue-producing athletes get money? Any athlete could get money, and no doubt many "minor sport" athletes — and hundreds of female athletes — would begin receiving increased money and benefits as recruiting "wars" intensified in all sports.

3. The top high-school athletes would indeed tend to select the universities that permitted athletes to be paid, and the "rich would get richer," according to Mr. Dooley. When was the last time that Valparaiso State got a football player that Notre Dame wanted? The rich are already richer! If some schools elected to play at a lower level, fine. The value of different divisions is well-known. Not every school needs or wants to play each sport at the top level.

4. Where would the money come from? What difference does it make whether money to pay athletes came from Nike (to players instead of coaches), from Toyota (to a family scholarship fund instead of to a general fund) or from a wealthy coach? (Could Rick Pitino live on $5.2 million instead of $6.2 million in case he had a chance to sign a star who could assure him of remaining the millionaire coach of Kentucky?)

5. Would players need agents? No one needs an agent more than a young man or woman with tremendous economic value but who is receiving just $10,000 to $25,000 a year. Remember, universities don't have to participate in professional sports as they do now; they are always free to adopt the Division III model — or drop sports — any time they want to or any time they find their level of participation too onerous.

6. Yes, of course college athletes should be permitted to sign endorsement contracts and run camps and do what every other American citizen is free to do. Mr. Dooley acts as though the NCAA has shown great benevolence by allowing athletes to work "after student-athletes have completed their eligibility." That statement seemed ludicrous to me. The NCAA should have nothing to say about any person's right to work or his or her right to receive whatever salary is being offered, as long as no money is obtained for some illegal purpose.

7. What effect would paying have on gender equity? It would lead to payments for thousands of female athletes and would be a boon to the growth and popularity of women's sports.

Finally, Mr. Dooley has said that revenue-producing athletes should "take special pride in knowing" that they have provided scholarships for thousands of athletes in other sports. They don't. But they could be very proud of providing scholarships for little brothers, sisters and friends. Can you imagine directors of athletics being proud if their salaries were suddenly cut by even $10,000 so that more scholarships could be given? Would they be proud?

Although many people throw their hands up in despair over changes that have come and inevitably will continue to come to college sports, I think we all have to remember to relax with change and not jump to conclusions that changes will necessarily be bad. Although many of us don't like the intense commercialism that has crept into big-time college sports, universities are diverse places that are managing professional sports on campus reasonably well; they simply are denying the athletes and their families the opportunity to benefit financially as so many others are.

What would be the impact on college sports if athletes were allowed to receive money and if "bidding wars" for athletes were allowed to enrich athletes the way they have enriched coaches? No one knows for sure. Personally, I believe the games would become more competitive and enjoyable, and the system would be less hypocritical and many sports would enjoy much more exposure and popularity.

Many families and athletes in a variety of sports would benefit financially. We don't know ultimately if this would be better or worse overall, but we do know that the social benefits to thousands of enriched American families would be undeniable. Therefore, I think allowing payments to college athletes would easily be worth any risks that must be taken. Treat college athletes like all other American citizens. I think universities, athletes and college sports all would benefit from such a novel concept.

Discussing NCAA restructuring:

"It used to be that only football coaches and athletics directors were involved, but now that the presidents have had some first-hand experience of what is good and isn't good about the Association, they want a simpler system. They want something that is more responsive to their needs. It's a much different faction than it was seven or eight years ago."

"There are people who feel you lose the closeness of an

"I hate domes. You play all year in smaller arenas, and you need four or five games to get used to a dome. The crowd is so spaced out and it's hard to get in a shooting groove."

A two-sport star at Central Oklahoma, Joe Aska overcomes the loss of an eye and proves to the world that...

NO CHALLENGE IS TOO TOUGH

By Stephen R. Hagwell
THE NCAA NEWS STAFF

Every time Joe Aska steps up to the starting line at a track and field meet, he feels challenged to improve.

Regardless of the race, or the opponent, or whether he wins or loses, Aska's primary objective is to better his last performance.

"I'm not the type of guy who goes around always thinking I'm No. 1. I never think I'm No. 1 because I feel I can get better every time I run," said Aska, a senior sprinter with the University of Central Oklahoma track and field team and a member of the Bronchos football team.

"Every time I run, I want to improve. I'm willing to do what I have to do to get better."

Aska has more than met his challenge.

Since his arrival at Central Oklahoma in 1993, Aska not only has improved, but excelled. The Bronchos' top sprinter, Aska became the first student-athlete in school history to win an NCAA individual-event title.

If that isn't enough, Aska also became the top offensive threat on the Bronchos football team. A walk-on, Aska not only earned a starting position at running back, he also earned all-Lone Star Conference honors and set several school rushing records as a senior.

"Joe is a competitor. That's the biggest compliment I can pay him," said Paul Parent, men's track and field coach at Central Oklahoma. "He's willing to do whatever he has to get the job done. Whether he wins or loses, he is always looking for ways to improve. He doesn't take anything for granted."

Accustomed to challenges

That Aska has met all athletics challenges at Central Oklahoma is not surprising. He faces and overcomes challenges of all sorts every day.

Aska, a native of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, has attained athletics success with only one eye. He lost vision in his right eye after a childhood accident in the second grade. He currently has a glass replacement.

"A lot of people ask me what it's like (to have only one eye)," said Aska, a two-time state track champion and all-district football performer in high school. "I tell everyone that it happened so long ago, I just can't say. I've been focusing and working with one eye for so long, I'm used to it."

If Aska seems to treat his lack of a right eye as a nonissue, it is because he considers it to be just that. Aska did not even tell teammates about it until last year, and then only because he was asked by several National Football League scouts about his medical history.

"It's not a big deal to him," said Gary Howard, football coach at Central Oklahoma. "It's not something he goes around telling people or worries about. He's more or less accustomed to it."

"Joe couldn't care less," said Parent. "I've been with him and watched how he reacts; it doesn't bother him. Joe has learned to compensate more than anyone I know. He's so active, you'd never know (about the blindness)."

Intense pain

While Aska says the eye has never stopped him from doing what he wants, he admits that there were times when the eye caused him great physical pain.

Aska says the pain, usually a headache, was so intense that it prompted him to have the eye removed.

"I never wanted (to have the eye removed)," said Aska, recalling the decision in 1991. "I had to make a decision to remove it if I wanted to continue life feeling comfortable and not wake up with headaches. That's the reason I had it (removed). I feel a lot better."

Aska's lack of a right eye apparently has not affected his athletics career. He more than makes up for it in talent, specifically speed.

In less than two years, Aska has rewritten Central Oklahoma's records books in track and football. In track, Aska, a two-time state high-school champion, captured the 1994 NCAA Division II 55-meter-dash title indoors with a time of 6.21 seconds. He also earned all-

America status outdoors, placing eighth in the 100-meter dash at the national championships.

Aska enjoyed similar success on the football field, accumulating a school-record 1,629 yards on 278 carries in 1994. His performance earned first-team all-Lone Star Conference honors as well as Lone Star Conference offensive-back-of-the-year honors.

"Joe has achieved a great deal based on his attitude and his work habits," said football coach Howard. "From the first day (he joined the football team), he had a great attitude and worked very hard. He has never let his injury hinder him in any way I can see."

"Joe's injury hasn't hurt his running," said Parent. "He is not like a hurdler; he just has to look straight ahead and run as hard and fast as he can. In some ways, the injury may help him because he knows that he has to excel every time. He can't take anything for granted."

Busy senior

Aska's biggest challenge these days is time, or more specifically, a lack of it.

During the 1995 indoor track season, Aska competed in only three meets, due largely to football commitments such as the Blue-Gray Senior Game, the Hula Bowl and workouts in front of NFL scouts. He failed to qualify for the finals in the 55-meter dash at this year's national indoor championships.

Aska hopes his final outdoor campaign is more productive. An eighth-place finisher in the 100-meter dash at the 1994 championships, Aska is focusing on improving on that performance.

As for the future, Aska would love to have the opportunity to play in the NFL. His top goal, however, is to compete at the Olympic Games.

"I just want to be there one time," said Aska. "To say I was there."

Based on past performances, that is just another challenge for Aska.

Editorial: NCAA needs to rethink its position regarding neutrality toward conference affairs dents arrived at a unique solution: Remain in the conference, invite the Great Midwest schools in, and kick Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech out.

I pursued mediation to protect the financial equity that Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech had earned in the conference. This course resulted in a settlement of $2.27 million for the two institutions in return for our departure from the Metro. I was prepared to sue had we been unable to reach a settlement with Metro presidents.

Members of the public have come to believe that "hyper-commercialism," cynicism and unscrupulous practices dominate intercollegiate athletics. This shuffling among the major Division I conferences and the NCAA's apparent indifference to it will do little to convince the public otherwise.

While the efforts to force Virginia Commonwealth and Virginia Tech out of the Metro were unfolding in January, delegates at the annual NCAA Convention bogged down in the minutiae of academic eligibility of athletes. It is not that academic eligibility is unimportant. It is that, in the face of potent economic forces, the NCAA's bold statements about the academic integrity of institutions are increasingly unconvincing. Too many athletes continue to leave college unprepared for something other than sports. Yet, the NCAA just signed a $1.75 billion contract with CBS to broadcast Division I men's basketball tournaments for the next eight years.

Moreover, while officials and presidents at the NCAA

Convention were exhorting one another to reaffirm the value of amateurism in college sports, some of those same presidents were planning the Metro strategy to maneuver their colleagues out of conference affiliation for the sake of bettering their own revenue prospects.

Such actions conflict directly with the principles proclaimed by athletics conferences, and the Metro constitution offers a case in point. In contrast to the Metro machinations, members are, according to the constitution, to treat their athletes in the same "sportsmanlike manner" that they are expected to display at all times. Members also may not seek to protect their institutions' interests "to the detriment of other members of the conference as a whole."

Even more significant, reformers on the Knight Foundation Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics have called the lure of television sports revenues "fools gold." Not only do the riches of big-time sports benefit only a select few, but the money-driven decisions of conference alignments are eating into athletics travel budgets and the academic time of all student-athletes. The growth of televised competition also means fewer fans attending games. And, students and faculty are beginning to weary of the increased student-fee support going to athletics budgets, despite television revenues.

Most presidents believe that college sports play a valuable role in higher education and that reform of intercollegiate athletics to protect that role is long overdue. When the NCAA, however, holds presidents accountable for running clean athletics programs, then fails to support them when their athletics future is at stake, such presidents stand alone against the forces of the marketplace. And that sets us — and reform — up for failure.

It is time for the NCAA to rethink its position of neutrality toward conference disputes. To start, the NCAA should review conference bylaws to guard against provisions that could be used to disenfranchise member institutions. The NCAA also should enforce charter provisions when the conference members themselves are unwilling to do so. Such checks will prevent presidents from undercutting their colleagues, leaving the expelled institutions out in the cold and unable to plan for the future.

It also is time for the NCAA to become as concerned about the eligibility of conferences as it now is about the eligibility of individual athletes. The NCAA, for example, might start requiring conferences to certify their compliance with NCAA and conference principles before they can receive bids to tournaments.

The commercial interests of a few Division I institutions are proving to be antithetical to reform and to the welfare of the rest of college sports. We need some new thinking about intercollegiate athletics — and it is time for some of that thinking to come from the NCAA.

Iowa wrestlers crush field, clinch I title early in competition

Iowa clinched the 1995 Division I Wrestling Championships team title early — during the second day of the three-day event — but the last day of individual championships delivered plenty of surprises, some unwelcome, for much of the partisan, sold-out crowd of 14,064 March 18 at Iowa.

The host Hawkeyes racked up 134 points to outdistance Oregon State (77½), whose second-place finish was its best since claiming runner-up honors in 1973. Michigan State, Arizona State, Penn State and Nebraska, which finished in that order after Oregon, each scored in the 60-to-69-point range.

The Hawkeyes, who claimed the team championship for the fourth time in the last five years, had three finalists — including two-time defending champion Lincoln McClravy at 150 pounds and defending 190-pound champion Joel Sharratt. Neither had lost this year, but both were defeated in the championships finals. The Hawkeyes' other finalist, 126-pound sophomore Jeff McGinness, outmaneuvered Penn State's Sanshiro Abe, 6-4, to win that title and finish 30-0 for the season.

Two bids for records also disappeared with upsets of 1994 champions who had seemed destined to step into wrestling history.

Defending heavyweight champion Kerry McCoy of Penn State, whose 88-bout unbeaten streak had raised expectations that he would eclipse Iowa coach Dan Gable's record of 98 consecutive victories sometime next season, was edged by 1994 runner-up Justin Greenlee of Northern Iowa, 4-3.

And junior McClravy surrendered his hopes of winning four individual titles — a feat achieved only by Pat Smith of Oklahoma State — when he lost in the 150-pound event. McClravy, who won at 142 pounds as a true freshman and at 150 pounds last year as a sophomore, actually had a chance to do Smith's record one better by winning four times in four years; Smith redshirted one year.

McClravy carried a 57-match winning streak into the 150-pound final against Illinois' Steve Marianetti, whom he had beaten in the Big Ten Conference finals, 6-4. But the second-seeded Illinois wrestler led from whistle to horn to win the first of his team's two championships, 13-10.

"To prepare for this, I studied the way I wrestled and the way McClravy does," the new champion said. "I started right after our match at the Big Ten. My coaches prepared special drills for me because you don't see his kind of wrestling very much in the practice room. (All through the previous week's practice) I was trying to push myself out of my comfort zone because McClravy never lets you wrestle there."

Gable spoke of the fall of McClravy, who left the mat in tears.

"He was on track to be the best all-time wrestler," said the man who many feel currently holds that distinction. "I wanted to see it happen. I'm in shock myself."

Another defending champion fell at 167 pounds when Arizona State's Markus Mollica, who won at 158 pounds in 1993, defeated Oklahoma State sophomore Mark Branch, 5-3.

Although "upset" turned out to be the theme of the finals, the evening started typically enough as second-seeded Kelvin Jackson of Michigan State defeated fourth-seeded Eric Ivins of Oklahoma at 118 pounds and Iowa's McGinness won his bout.

North Carolina senior T. J. Jaworsky defeated Oregon State's Babak Mohammadi at 134 pounds for the second consecutive year to claim his third consecutive championship. Jaworsky was honored as the tourney's most outstanding wrestler after finishing 42-0 for the season.

A six-session, tournament-record 81,028 fans paid to watch the 65th annual championships, breaking the previous mark of 70,323 in 1991 — the last time the event was held at Iowa. All sessions were sold out a month before the first bout.

Stanford swimmers win last two events to claim another I women's title Stanford won the final two events of the Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships to vault past Michigan and earn a fourth consecutive team title March 16-18 at Texas.

Stanford trailed by 21 points before senior Eileen Richetelli, who missed competition last year with a back injury, won the platform diving competition to help the Cardinal compile 32 points in the event. Stanford then won the final event, the 400-yard freestyle relay, while Michigan placed third.

Stanford's total of 497½ points was 19 better than Michigan, which represented the closest margin of victory since Texas defeated Stanford by 9½ points in 1990.

Richetelli, who won the platform and three-meter diving events in 1992 and 1993, was part of a Cardinal diving contingent that scored 66 points in the three diving events, while Michigan scored none. The Wolverines' top diver, Carrie Zarse, finished 13th in both the three-meter and platform events last year, but was absent this year to compete in the Pan American Games.

Michigan was vying for its first crown and had overcome a slight Stanford margin to build a 15-point lead heading into the final day of competition. Alecia Humphrey led the Michigan charge with wins in the 100- and 200-yard backstrokes.

Arizona State's Beata Kaszuba set a U.S. Open and two meet records in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes. Kaszuba, who was one of five multiple-event winners, was named swimmer of the meet. Stanford's Jenny Thompson also grabbed the spotlight, winning three individual titles and participating in two winning Cardinal relays.

But Stanford's Jenny Thompson stole the spotlight, winning three races and participating in two victorious Cardinal relays. Her win in the 100-yard freestyle on the final day was her fourth consecutive in the event, making her the fifth swimmer in championships history to accomplish that feat. Thompson then swam the anchor leg in the Cardinal's 400-yard freestyle relay victory to close out the meet.

Beata Kaszuba of Arizona State, Ashley Tappin of Arizona and Florida's Mimosa McNeerney joined Thompson and Humphrey as multiple-event winners. Kaszuba set a U.S. Open and two meet records in the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes and was named swimmer of the meet. She took nearly a second off the mark she set last year in the 100-yard breaststroke, then topped the previous best in the 200-yard breaststroke set by Southern California's Kristine Quance last year.

Tappin, who transferred from Florida, won the 50- and 200-yard freestyles and finished second behind Thompson in the 100-yard freestyle. McNeerney, who won the 1,650-yard freestyle in 1993, won that event again this year along with the 500-yard freestyle.

Southern Methodist's Cheril Santini won the one-meter dive after finishing second in that event last year, then placed second in the three-meter and third in the platform event and was named diver of the meet.

Michigan was the first team other than Stanford, Texas or Florida to finish in the top three. Texas finished third this year, while Southern Methodist edged Arizona for fourth place.

Bemidji State makes history with ice hockey title

Bemidji State became the first NCAA school in any division to win four consecutive men's ice hockey titles when it defeated Mercyhurst, 6-2 and 5-4, to win the Division II Men's Ice Hockey Championship March 17-18 in Erie, Pennsylvania.

Bemidji State's Eric Fulton scored three third-period goals to lead the Beavers to victory in the second and final game of the championship. Fulton's natural hat trick erased a two-goal deficit and propelled the Beavers to the title.

Mercyhurst broke open a 1-1 tie with two goals in the second period of that game. John Evangelista scored at 8:01 with help from John Tsakanikas and Kevin McKinnon, and Craig MacDonald scored just more than a minute later to give the Lakers a 3-1 lead.

But the Beavers narrowed the gap at 11:27 of the third period when Jude Boulianne scored a power-play goal on a feed from Troy Edwards and Craig Matatall. Fulton then scored the first of his goals a minute later during another power play and knotted the score at 3-3.

After Mercyhurst captain Jon Johnson scored at 13:42 to give the Lakers a one-goal lead, Fulton scored an unassisted shorthanded goal at 15:01 and followed with an empty-net goal with 21 seconds left to win the game and the championship.

Mercyhurst had left its own goal untended in the final moments because it needed a victory to force a tie-breaking minigame. But the strategy failed when Fulton scored.

In the opening game, first-period goals by Matatall and Aaron Novak at 0:14 and 1:28, respectively, gave the Beavers a 2-0 lead they never relinquished. Eric Monsrud scored a shorthanded goal to close out the first-period scoring at 17:25 and then followed with a second goal at 7:29 of the third period to extend the lead to 5-1.

The opener was filled with penalties, as both teams racked up a combined 90 penalty minutes on 45 penalties.

Fulton and Boulianne each scored five points to tie for most points scored during the two-game championship. Fulton scored three goals with two assists, while Boulianne scored one goal and four assists. Bernie Adlys of Bemidji State tied Boulianne for most assists in the tournament with four.

Bemidji State ended its championship run with a 24-7-2 record, while Mercyhurst finished 23-3-2.

Sweet sixteen: Kenyon enjoys big bash in III men's swimming

Seven Kenyon swimmers won individual events and the Lords racked up a championships-record 687 points on their way to a 16th consecutive Division III Men's Swimming and Diving Championships team title March 16-18 in Oxford, Ohio.

Kenyon scored more than half its points in the eight freestyle events, winning six, including all three freestyle relays.

■ See complete results: Page 9.

Kenyon set the tone for the meet in the first event. The Lords' 200-yard freestyle relay team of Ken Heis, Andrew Eaton, Chris Churchill and Matt Miller posted a record time of 1:21.11, buoyed by Miller's 19.96-second anchor leg. The four record-setters then swept the top four spots in the 50-yard freestyle, won by Miller in 20.43 seconds.

The Lords piled up 279 points during the first day and built a comfortable margin that never was threatened. Hope finished second for the first time, followed by Denison, Union (New York) and Johns Hopkins.

Kenyon seniors John Cave and John Rule posted back-to-back victories in the 100-yard breaststroke and 100-yard backstroke during the second day of the meet to solidify the Lords' margin of victory.

In addition, Kenyon got wins from freshman Torsten Seifert in the 1,650-yard freestyle — making him the third swimmer on Kenyon's current roster who has won the event

Kenyon's Pedro Monteiro not only won the 200-yard butterfly, he set a meet record in the event.

— and John Butcher in the three-meter dive. Butcher, who also won that event in 1993, returned to the Kenyon squad after studying abroad last year.

Other Kenyon winners were David Phillips in the 500-yard freestyle and Pedro Monteiro in the 200-yard butterfly — his second consecutive win in that event.

In all, Kenyon won 11 events, tying its own record set in 1992. The other nine events were won by swimmers from nine different schools.

Two meet records — both in preliminary heats — were set in addition to Kenyon's mark in the 200-yard freestyle relay. Kenyon's Monteiro posted a meet-best time of 1:48.11 in the preliminaries of the 200-yard butterfly before winning the event, and Denison's Tom Richner swam his trial in the 100-yard butterfly in a record 49.02 seconds before finishing second to Matt Johnson of Johns Hopkins.

Capital women storm back to grab III basketball crown

After rallying from 12 points down, host Capital defeated Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 59-55, March 18 to become the first Division III women's team to repeat as champion.

In beating Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Capital capped a 33-0 season, establishing the Crusaders as the only Division III women's team to go through an entire season without a loss. In addition, Capital extended its consecutive-game win streak to 53 — another Division III record — and its home win streak to 68.

"To accomplish this (back-to-back titles) was never even a thought of mine. These kids are unbelievable," Capital coach Dixie Jeffers said. "It hasn't set in completely what these kids have done. We beat a very good basketball team tonight. It is exactly how a national-championship final is supposed to be played."

Wisconsin-Oshkosh stretched a five-point half-time lead to 12 points midway through the second half when Sarah Heckmann's free throws put the Titans up, 45-33. Capital answered with an 8-0 run, including two three-pointers from Katie Mang, to cut the margin to four points with 6:45 remaining.

After giving up a three-pointer to the Titans' Tracy Johnson, Capital outscored Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 13-2, over the next five minutes to take the lead at 52-50 on a shot by Kami Roeder. The Titans tied the game at 52 with 1:33 left, but a jumper by Carmen Ellis and five-of-six shooting from the free-throw line clinched the Capital victory.

"I thought we played, in the first half, the best defense we have played all year," Wisconsin-Oshkosh head coach Kathi Bennett said. "In the second half, we played great defense also, but they always had an answer for what we were doing."

Ellis led the way for Capital with 13 points. Kristin Long and Mang contributed 12 points each. Dietz paced the Titans with 11 points and five rebounds.

Named to the all-tournament team were Mang and Jill Walker of Capital, Natalie DeMichei and Wendy Wangerin of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, and Laura Witte of St. Thomas (Minnesota).

Wisconsin-Oshkosh earned a place in the championship game with an 82-69 win over Salem State. Capital advanced to the title game by defeating St. Thomas (Minnesota), 68-59. St. Thomas slipped by Salem State in overtime, 82-79, in the third-place game.

Wisconsin-Platteville men finish season perfect in III

Something had to give: Wisconsin-Platteville at 30-0 vs. Manchester at 31-0 in the title game of the Division III Men's Basketball Championship.

Using a relentless pressing defense and holding Manchester to 38.9 percent shooting, Wisconsin-Platteville defeated the Spartans, 69-55, March 18 to become only the second Division III men's team to go through a season undefeated.

The teams played at Buffalo State.

"What I watched these young men over the past four years put themselves through is why we're in coaching," Pioneer head coach Bo Ryan said. "I really like to see people get better, and I can't ever remember a group of young men in four years that ever got any better than this team."

Manchester head coach Steve Alford was equally complimentary of the Wisconsin-Platteville squad.

"First off, I need to congratulate Wisconsin-Platteville. They are the best team we've played all year," said Alford, a former all-American at Indiana.

"They showed it tonight like a championship-caliber team. Their defense gave us a lot of problems and we didn't handle it. This is a game where you have got to — especially a championship game — you have got to come out and set the tone early. They did a very good job of setting the tone. They were the aggressor, and when you do that, you set the tone for the game."

The Pioneers established a double-digit lead seven minutes into the game when a jump shot by Mike Uppena put them ahead, 14-4.

The Pioneers built a lead of 14 points before Manchester scored seven consecutive points and cut the margin to seven on a three-point shot by Tony Frieden at the two-minute mark of the first half.

Wisconsin-Platteville was able to take a 10-point lead into the locker room.

After that, Manchester could get no closer than nine points, while the Pioneers enjoyed as much as a 17-point cushion.

Ernie Peavy, the tournament's most outstanding player, led the Pioneers with 17 points. Peavy was one of three Wisconsin-Platteville players in double figures. Aaron Lancaster had a game-high 10 rebounds for the Pioneers.

Burt Paddock and Brad Knoy scored 17 and 16 points, respectively, for the Spartans.

The title is the second Division III championship for Wisconsin-Platteville. Ryan's 1991 squad claimed the first title.

Wisconsin-Platteville earned a spot in the final with an 82-59 victory over Trinity (Connecticut) in the semifinals. Manchester made its way into the championship game with a 79-66 win over Rowan. Rowan defeated Trinity in the third-place game, 105-72.

Joining Peavy on the all-tournament team were Knoy and Kyle Hupfer of Manchester, Lancaster of Wisconsin-Platteville, and Charles Grasty of Rowan.

Wisconsin-Platteville and Potsdam State are the only men's teams to go undefeated in Division III. In 1982, Potsdam State was 32-0.

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending before state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes of NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 27 bills from 15 states. The report includes 12 bills that have been introduced, and 15 pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (March 8 issue of The NCAA News). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills identified by previous reports on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

The State Legislation Report is based largely on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of March 16, 1995. The bills selected for inclusion in this report were drawn from a larger pool of measures that concern sports and therefore do not necessarily represent all of the bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending before the governing bodies of the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on an on-line basis and are not included in this report.

The NCAA has not independently verified the accuracy or completeness of the information provided by Information for Public Affairs and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

The bills set forth below address the following subjects:

Subject	Number of Bills
Trainers.....	5
Tickets/scalping.....	4
Athlete agents.....	3
Academic standards.....	2
Anabolic steroids.....	2
Athletics facilities and schedules.....	2
Gender equity.....	2
Taxation.....	2

Eight finalists selected for Byers scholarships

Eight student-athletes — four men and four women — have been selected as finalists for the two Walter Byers Scholarships that will be awarded later this month by the Association.

The finalists, who were selected by the Walter Byers Scholarship Committee, will travel to St. Louis for interviews with the committee April 9 and 10. The two recipients of the annual awards are expected to be named at that time.

Three finalists are swimming and diving standouts, including Kenyon College's Carla Ainsworth, a three-time winner of the Division III Women's Swimming and Diving Championships swimmer-of-the-meet award. Two other finalists are football players, including Today's Top VIII winner Rob Zatechka of the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, and 1994 Johnny Unitas Golden Arm Award nominee Terry Dean of the University of Florida.

The remaining finalists are soccer player Darren Eales of Brown University, the 1994 Ivy Group player of the year; swimmer Denica Rudy of Pennsylvania State University, an all-American freestyler in last year's Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships and holder of five school records; track and field athlete Ginny Ryan of Cornell University, current team captain and a 1994 GTE academic all-American; diver Cheril Santini of Southern Methodist University, who was named diver of the meet at last week's Division I Women's Swimming and Diving Championships; and tennis player Paul Stevens of Georgia Institute of Technology, team captain and two-time GTE academic all-American.

Each Byers scholar receives a $10,000 scholarship from the Association. The awards were established in 1988 to recognize the contributions of the former NCAA executive director by encouraging excellence in academic performance by student-athletes.

Award recipients are required to have at least a 3.500 grade-point average (4.000 scale), show evidence of superior character and leadership, and demonstrate that participation in athletics has been a positive influence on personal and intellectual development, among other qualifications.

Sportsmanship Day enjoys big bash

National Sportsmanship Day was celebrated March 7 at more than 5,000 colleges, high schools, middle schools and elementary schools throughout the nation and 48 other countries.

Sponsored by the Institute for International Sport, National Sportsmanship Day provided students, teachers, parents and coaches with an opportunity to share their thoughts and solutions about sportsmanship.

A key event in the celebration was the Rhode Island Sportsmanship Town Hall Meeting, which was cosponsored by the Institute for International Sport. More than 400 parents, students and coaches discussed the state of sportsmanship in a panel format. The panel included Brian Burke, director of hockey operations for the National Hockey League; Michelle Glassman, executive director of the National Youth Sports Safety Foundation; Arlene Gorton, associate athletics director at Brown University; Steve Nelson, former all-pro linebacker with the New England Patriots; Jim Donaldson, sportswriter for the Providence Journal; Fred Smerlas, former all-pro nose guard with the Patriots; and Shannon Feaster, student-athlete at Brown.

Panel members discussed why sportsmanship is declining and possible ways to reverse the trend.

"It is what sells," Donaldson said about the trend toward taunting and fighting. "If (National Basketball Association player) Dennis Rodman wasn't as 'colorful' as he is, he wouldn't have a TV commercial."

Many panelists agreed that coaches and administrators should take a stronger role in deterring unsportsmanlike behavior by punishing it heavily when it does occur.

"Whether we like it or not and whether we know it or not, we are role models in sport, from the youngest participant all the way to the pros," Gorton said. "Whatever is seen in sports is copied. We lead by example."

Honors Program nomination folders mailed Nomination folders for winter and spring sports candidates for the 1996 Honors Program were mailed March 10 to athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives and sports information directors at all member institutions.

Nominations must be received at the NCAA national office by July 1.

The folders contain nomination forms for the 1996 Today's Top VIII, Theodore Roosevelt and Silver Anniversary Awards. The awards will be presented during the honors dinner at the 1996 NCAA Convention in Dallas.

A second folder to nominate Top VIII Award candidates participating in fall sports and candidates for the Award of Valor will be sent this summer.

Winter/spring Top VIII Award nominees must be varsity letter-winners who will complete their intercollegiate athletics eligibility in the winter or spring of 1995. There is no set male-female ratio, and at least one winner will be selected

Top seeds all survive in I men's tournament

By Richard M. Campbell
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

All eight No. 1 and No. 2 seeds — including No. 2 seed North Carolina, which has been in 13 of the last 14 regional semifinals — have made the Sweet 16 of the 57th Division I Men's Basketball Championship.

All the No. 1 seeds — Kansas, Kentucky, Wake Forest and UCLA — as well as the four No. 2 seeds — Arkansas, Connecticut, Massachusetts and North Carolina — managed to sidestep a rash of upsets in the 1995 tournament.

It is only the second time since seeding began in 1979 that all of the top eight seeds advanced to the regional semifinals. The other year was 1989.

A veteran group of five schools — defending champion Arkansas, Connecticut, Kansas, Maryland and Tulsa — return from last year's field of 16.

In the last 10 tournaments, North Carolina failed to advance to the Sweet 16 only in 1994. Kansas has made it six times, Arkansas five and Connecticut four. They are joined by two teams — Arizona State and Mississippi State — that have not been in the Sweet 16 since the bracket was expanded to 64 teams in 1985.

Top coaches

Three national-championship coaches remain in the field — North Carolina's Dean Smith (two titles), Arkansas' Nolan Richardson and Georgetown's John Thompson. Kansas' Roy Williams is in his seventh year and already has six tournament appearances and two Final Four trips.

Five remaining coaches have taken teams to the Final Four. Smith leads all active coaches with nine appearances, including wins in 1982 and 1993. Thompson has three appearances, Kentucky's Rick Pitino and Richardson each have two, and Oklahoma State's Eddie Sutton has one.

Smith is closing in on the all-time career victories record with 828 wins (trailing only Kentucky's Adolph Rupp, who has 876). Sutton has 551 career wins, Thompson has 524 and Connecticut's Jim Calhoun has 437.

Mississippi State's Richard Williams is the only coach making a first appearance in the Sweet 16.

Overtime, Inc.

One more overtime game in the remaining 15 contests of the tournament will establish another record. The six overtime contests in the 48 first-and second-round games already have tied the tournament record, set in 1975.

As for close games (overtime games plus any games decided by three points or less), this year's bracket has offered 13 so far. The record, set in 1990, is 24 close games out of 63 played.

Seeding

Last year's Final Four seeding group kept alive a string in which only two teams seeded below eighth have reached the Final Four. This year's 16 teams will do the same thing; no seed below No. 6 remains in the field.

One of those low seeds that have appeared in the Final Four was LSU, a No. 11 seed in 1986, when it reached the national semifinals before losing to eventual champion Louisville, 88-77. The other was Pennsylvania, a No. 9 seed in 1979 that also lost to the eventual titlist, Michigan State, 101-67.

Villanova, a No. 8 seed in 1985, remains the lowest seed to win the championship, beating defending champion and No. 1-seeded Georgetown. Seven No. 1 seeds have captured the NCAA title, including last year's champion, Arkansas.

In 1994, the Final Four produced the fourth lowest number derived from seeds — totaling eight. No. 1 seed Arkansas, the eventual champion, teamed with No. 2 Duke, No. 2 Arizona and No. 3 Florida.

The all-time lowest (and therefore best) combination of seeds was in 1993, when No. 1 seeds North Carolina, Michigan and Kentucky and No. 2 Kansas posted a total of five.

Since 1985, when the men's bracket expanded to 64 teams, a No. 1 seed never has lost a first-round game — meaning no No. 16 seed has pulled the ultimate upset.

No. 1 seeds have the best record in the tournament, 193-58 for a .769 winning percentage. They are followed by No. 2 seeds at 143-60 (.704) and No. 3 seeds at 97-65 (.599). No. 6 seeds have a better winning percentage than No. 4 or No. 5 seeds. Since 1985, in first-round games, No. 9 seeds are 25-19 over No. 8 seeds.

If you disregard the opening round, in which teams do not have the opportunity to meet the highest seed, then Villanova in 1985 had the toughest route to the championship. The Wildcats had to meet five opponents after the opening round whose seeds added up to only 11 (the lower the total number of seeds combined, the more difficult a team's journey).

Villanova faced opponents seeded 1-5-2-2-1, while North Carolina State in 1983 faced a total of 19 in combined seeds (3-10-1-4-1). These two squads, along with Michigan State in 1979, were the only championship teams to face at least two No. 1 seeds en route to the title.

The 1994 champion, Arkansas, faced a total of 28 in combined seeds (9-12-3-2-2).

Major upsets

If Arizona survives the first round, the Wildcats usually have a good tournament —

as they did last year when they made it to the Final Four. However, in the past six years, Lute Olson's squads have been seeded high every year, but were upset by lower-seeded teams four times.

We define a major upset as involving a difference of at least five places in the seedings (such as No. 11 over No. 6 or No. 7 over No. 2) because that means the two teams were at least 16 places apart in the rankings used for regional seeding.

Arizona's loss this year as a No. 5 seed to No. 12 Miami (Ohio) is not the most surprising of the Wildcats. In 1990, No. 2 seed Arizona was upset by No. 7 Alabama, 77-56, in the second round; in 1992, No. 3 Arizona lost to No. 14 East Tennessee State, 87-80, in

No. 1 women's seeds cruise into Sweet 16 field

All four No. 1 seeds advanced to the Sweet 16 field and none was even slowed down in the first and second rounds of the 14th Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Five former titlists remain in the elite field. No. 1 seeds Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Connecticut and Colorado all advanced with ease. Of the eight games involving the No. 1 seeds, none was close. The closest game was a 27-point second-round game in which Vanderbilt downed Memphis, 95-68. The average victory margin in the eight games was more than 37 points.

Tennessee, winner of three national championships, and two-time winners Louisiana Tech and Stanford have advanced to regional semifinals, along with defending champion North Carolina and 1993 titlist Texas Tennessee is the only team to make the Sweet 16 field all 14 years, while Louisiana Tech has been in 12, Southern California 10, and Auburn, Long Beach State, Mississippi and Virginia nine each.

The 11 teams returning from the 1994 tournament are Alabama, Colorado, Connecticut, Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Purdue, Stanford, Tennessee, Texas Tech, Vanderbilt and Virginia.

Of course, getting to the Sweet 16 is only part of the journey to the Women's Final Four — and not many schools have made it that far.

Only 22 schools have appeared in the Women's Final Four, out of 145 different teams that have made appearances in the championship from 1982 through 1994.

Here is a list of most Sweet 16 appearances through the second round of the 1995 tournament:

A table on page 13 reports the number of major upsets — those involving teams at least five places apart in seeding — in tournaments since 1979.

Five different seeds have won a national title since 1979, with No. 1 seeds capturing the most — seven. The following chart shows the farthest seeds have gone in the tournament since 1979:

First-time teams

The success of first-time teams in the tournament is best measured by how far they advance. Before the 64-team bracket in 1985, it was common for such teams to do well, even to the point of winning the national title. In fact, 10 teams since 1939 won the championship in their first appearance in the tournament, but none of those won after 1963.

All five first-time teams in this year's tournament — Colgate, Florida International, Gonzaga, Mount St. Mary's (Maryland) and Nicholls State — lost in the first round.

Conferences

The Atlantic Coast Conference

has four of the 16 teams left, while the Southeastern Conference has three remaining. The Big Eight Conference, Pacific-10 Conference and Big East Conference each have two teams left. The Big Ten Conference, which started with six teams in the bracket, has none left.

Since expansion to the 64-team bracket in 1985, the Atlantic Coast Conference has placed 10 teams in the 40 Final Four slots and has won three of the 10 championships.

Here is a chart of the success of men's conferences in the Final Four since 1985:

Survival

No team seeded below No. 9 survived the second-round games last weekend. It is the first time since the bracket expanded to 64 teams in 1985 that a double-digit seed has not made the Sweet 16.

Seeding success

If you need any further proof that the Division I Women's Basketball Committee has a golden touch for seeding teams, then take a look at the Sweet 16 matchups.

The top four seeds advanced to the Sweet 16 field in three of the four regions. In the other region — the Midwest — No. 7 seed North Carolina State upset No. 2 Penn State, 76-74; otherwise, all four regions would have been stocked with the top four seeds.

Major upsets

A major upset is defined by a difference of at least five places in seeding (such as No. 11 over No. 6 or No. 7 over No. 2). Here is a list of 1995 upsets thus far:

1995 Major Upsets

Rd	Winner (Seed)	Loser (Seed)	Score
1	Montana (12)	San Diego St. (5)	57-46

Top seeds

In the 13 previous NCAA women's tournaments, top-seeded teams have dominated the field. Since seeding began in 1982, a No. 1 or No. 2 seed has won all but one Division I championship. The lone exception was No. 3 North Carolina last year.

Last year, North Carolina was joined in the Women's Final Four by No. 1 Purdue, No. 4 Louisiana Tech and No. 6 Alabama. The No. 1 seeds with NCAA titles are Louisiana Tech (1982), Southern California (1983 and 1984), Old Dominion (1985), Texas (1986), Tennessee (1989 and 1991) and Stanford (1990 and 1992). No. 2 seeds with championships are Tennessee (1987), Louisiana Tech (1988) and Texas Tech (1993).

Tennessee and Louisiana Tech have dominated the seeding process since 1982, garnering No. 1 seeds nine and seven times, respectively. In fact, Pat Summitt's Lady Vols have received eight consecutive No. 1 seeds. Texas and Southern California have four No. 1 seeds and Auburn, Georgia, Long Beach State, Old Dominion, Stanford and Virginia all have received three.

Following is a history of No. 1 seeds in the tournament:

Team (No.)	Yrs. as No. 1 Seed
Tennessee (9)	83-88-89-90-91-92-93-94-95
Louisiana Tech (7)	82-83-84-85-87-89-90

Others with one year as No. 1 seed: Cheyney (83), Colorado (95), Maryland (89), Ohio State (93), Purdue (94) and Washington (90).

Conferences

The Southeastern Conference still has four teams in the field and leads in overall Sweet 16 appearances with 53, including 14 by Tennessee. The Atlantic Coast Conference has three teams still alive; the Sun Belt and Pacific-10 Conferences have two each. Purdue is the lone Big Ten Conference school remaining in the men's or women's brackets.

The Southeastern Conference never has failed to place at least four teams in the women's tournament since 1982, and overall has dominated tournament appearances with 80 in 14 years. The Atlantic Coast Conference is next with 53 teams, followed by the Big Ten with 43, Pacific-10 Conference with 35, Atlantic 10 Conference with 34 and Big Eight Conference with 32.

Winning streaks

Undefeated Connecticut, now 31-0, has the longest winning streak of the season, followed by Colorado at 24. In home-court winning streaks, Tennessee extended its skein to 62 and could add two more when it hosts the Mideast regional.

Virginia upped its home-court streak to 55 with two wins. Connecticut — which will host the East regionals — has 35 straight home victories.

First-time teams

Since 1983, 38 teams have won first- or opening-round games in their first appearance in the tournament. (The 1982 tournament is not included because all participants were making their first appearance.)

In 1995, none of the seven first-time tournament teams survived the first round. Connecticut remains the only team to advance to the Women's Final Four in its first appearance in the Sweet 16.

Final Four seeds

The 1992 tournament opened the door to the Women's Final Four for teams other than top seeds. No. 4 Western Kentucky and No. 8 Southwest Missouri State broke a five-year streak where the seeds in the finals totaled only seven or less.

Repeater from 1994 Sweet 16.

Virginia and Stanford were No. 1 seeds in 1992, adding up to a record seeding total of 14.

But the 1994 Women's Final Four seeding total tied that mark, with No. 1 Purdue, No. 3 North Carolina, No. 4 Louisiana Tech and No. 6 Alabama.

The 1989 Women's Final Four quartet of Auburn, Louisiana Tech, Maryland and Tennessee had the lowest total of seeds at four (all were No. 1 seeds).

Team notes

■ Twenty wins once was a reliable measuring stick of good teams in the past, but that standard is losing its weight in this era of automatic conference berths and few independent teams. In 1995, there was only one independent team — Oral Roberts (15-12). Thirty-two conferences received automatic bids.

Fifty of the 64 teams chosen in this year's field won at least 20 games this year, but seven teams received at-large bids without the magic 20 wins.

■ Alabama's second-round 121-120 win over Duke in four overtimes eclipsed the tournament record of three extra periods (twice). The combined scoring by both teams of 241 points broke the mark of 201 set in Stanford's 114-87 win over Arkansas in 1990.

Men/women

Only Georgia in 1983 managed to place both its men's and women's teams into the respective Final Fours in the same year. Purdue in 1994 is the only school that has had both its men's and women's teams seeded No. 1 in the same year.

Morgan State receives three years of probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has placed the athletics program at Morgan State University on probation for three years, reduced scholarships in 10 sports and banned postseason play in those sports for one year for NCAA rules violations.

The sports involved were football, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's tennis, wrestling, men's and women's track and field, and men's and women's cross country.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions cited a lack of effective policies and procedures for many of the violations, which included numerous instances of ineligible student-athletes practicing and competing. The committee noted the multiple job responsibilities of several athletics department staff members and the failure of the university to commit the needed resources to compliance and monitoring. Morgan State has since removed coaching from the responsibilities of the athletics director, among other corrective actions.

The Committee on Infractions heard this case February 3, 1995. Representatives of the university appeared before the committee. The former director of athletics, who also was head track and field coach, and the former head men's basketball coach involved in this case also were present.

The Committee on Infractions found NCAA rules violations, including:

- During the 1988-89 through 1993-94 academic years, 12 student-athletes from six sports who were not enrolled as full-time students practiced and competed while ineligible. In addition, one student-athlete who was not enrolled as a full-time student practiced while ineligible but did not compete.

- During the 1989-90 through 1992-93 academic years, 13 student-athletes from six sports who did not meet satisfactory-progress academic requirements competed while ineligible.

- During the 1990-91 through 1992-93 academic years, 11 student-athletes from three sports who had not designated a degree program by the beginning of their third year competed while ineligible.

- Four student-athletes who were ineligible for reasons other than those mentioned above practiced, competed or received athletically related financial aid.

- The institution failed to certify properly the initial eligibility of several student-athletes, at least one of whom practiced, competed and received athletically related financial aid while ineligible.

- One student-athlete who was not eligible under transfer rules participated in intercollegiate competition and another transfer student-athlete improperly traveled with the men's basketball team and received travel expenses as a student manager.

- The university routinely provided impermissible waivers of the institution's admissions processing fee at the request of the athletics department for the majority of prospective student-athletes.

- An academic advisor allowed student-athletes to use her automobile on several occasions.

- The institution and its former director of athletics, who also was head track and field coach, arranged for and provided impermissible airline transportation for the mother of a prospective student-athlete.

- There was a lack of institutional control, including a failure of university officials to undertake appropriate supervision of the institution's intercollegiate athletics programs to ensure compliance with NCAA legislation.

The committee considered the following corrective actions taken by Morgan State:

- Assigned the executive assistant to the president to monitor the athletics department's compliance with NCAA, conference and institutional policies and regulations.

- Stressed to the athletics department staff the need for all departmental personnel to learn about and abide by NCAA rules and regulations and stressed that violators of rules and regulations will be subject to disciplinary actions.

- In 1991, adopted the Board of Regents' five-year plan to improve the overall operations of the athletics department.

- Eliminated coaching as a responsibility of the director of athletics.

- Reassigned the academic advisor to the athletics department to other duties in March 1993 and did not renew her contract on its expiration in June 1993.

- Hired a full-time compliance coordinator in August 1993.

- Relieved the vice-president for student affairs of his oversight responsibilities for the athletics department in September 1993.

- In August 1993, reassigned the athletics department business manager to other duties and hired an assistant director of athletics in charge of finances.

- Required several staff members to participate in an NCAA compliance seminar and procured NCAA compliance software.

- Implemented a policies and procedures manual for the athletics department.

The committee imposed the following penalties:

- Three years of probation from February 3, 1995.

- Limit the football team to 50 scholarships, 13 fewer than the maximum of 63 allowed, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- Limit the men's basketball team to 11 scholarships, two fewer than the 13 allowed, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- Limit the women's basketball team to 13 scholarships, two fewer than the 15 allowed, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- Reduce the number of men's and women's tennis scholarships allowed by one each during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years. That lowers the men's limit from 4.5 to 3.5 and the women's limit from 8 to 7.

- Limit men's track and field and cross country to three fewer scholarships, a reduction from 12.6 to 9.6, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- Limit women's track and field and cross country to one fewer scholarship, a reduction from 16 to 15, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- Limit wrestling to 8.9 scholarships, one fewer than the 9.9 allowed, during the 1995-96 and 1996-97 academic years.

- The institution is prohibited from participating in postseason team competition during the 1995-96 academic year in football, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's tennis, wrestling, and men's and women's track and field and cross country. For sports that sponsor postseason individual competition, student-athletes may compete if eligible.

- The institution shall forfeit the team and individual records for all regular-season contests in which the ineligible student-athletes participated.

- Public reprimand and censure.

- Requirement that the institution develop a comprehensive athletics compliance education program.

- Recertification of the university's athletics policies and practices.

As required by NCAA legislation for any institution in a major infractions case, Morgan State is subject to the NCAA's repeat-violator provisions for a five-year period beginning February 3, 1995.

Should Morgan State wish to appeal this decision, the university must submit a written notice of appeal to the NCAA executive director no later than 15 days from the date of this release. The Infractions Appeals Committee, a separate group of people, hears such appeals.

The members of the Committee on Infractions who heard this case are Richard J. Dunn, associate dean of the college of arts and sciences, University of Washington; Jack H. Friedenthal, dean of the school of law, George Washington University; Roy F. Kramer, commissioner, Southeastern Conference; Frederick B. Lacey, attorney, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene and MacRae, and a retired judge; Beverly F. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel, Brown University; James L. Richmond, retired judge and attorney; Yvonne (Bonnie) L. Slotton, chair of the department of physical education and sports studies, University of Iowa; and committee chair David Swank, professor of law, University of Oklahoma.

The complete report of the Committee on Infractions will be published in the March 29 issue of The NCAA Register.

■ Interpretations Committee minutes

Conference No. 1 February 16, 1995

Acting for the NCAA Council, the committee issued the following interpretations:

Awards/National Championship

1. National Wire Service Polls. It is not permissible for awards to be presented to an institution's team that is designated as a national champion by an entity (e.g., newspaper, athletics publication) other than a national wire-service poll or the national coaches association in that sport. The committee directed the staff to consult with the communications staff for the purpose of clarifying what constitutes a national wire service. [Reference: NCAA Bylaw 16.1.4.3.1 (national championship not conducted by NCAA)]

Advertisement/Endorsement/ Ballot/Promotion

2. Student-Athletes Appearing on Ballots in Commercial Establishments. It is not permissible for the names or pictures of student-athletes with remaining eligibility to appear on a ballot displayed in a commercial establishment that is being used for the purpose of selecting a recognition award (e.g., player-of-the-year, freshman-of-the-year). [References: 12.5.1.1.1 (promotions involving commercial locations/sponsors) and 12.5.2.1 (advertisements and promotions subsequent to enrollment)]

Publicity/Media/Comments

3. Presence of Media During On- or Off-Campus Contact. It is not permissible for a media entity to be present during any on- or off-campus recruiting contact that is made by an authorized institutional coaching staff member with a prospect. [References: 13.2.1 (offers and inducements (general regulation)), 13.11.1 (comments prior to signing) and 13.11.1.1 (evaluations for media/recruiting service)]

Membership/Reclassification/ Scheduling Requirement

4. Compliance With Divisional Scheduling Requirements in Football and Basketball (Divisions I, II and III). An institution that sponsors either the sport of football or basketball (or both) is not required to participate in the minimum number of contests set forth in the legislation for that division if the institution is not using the sport in meeting the division sports-sponsorship requirements or the four-sport/three-season requirement. Thus, a Division II or III institution may satisfy the requirement that it play at least 50 percent of its football or basketball contests in an academic year against institutions classified in its division (or a higher division) if the institution participates in at least half of its actual scheduled contests in that sport against institutions classified in its division (or a higher division). The committee recommended that the Divisions II and III Steering Committees consider whether they wish to sponsor legislation that would require institutions sponsoring either the sport of football or basketball to schedule the minimum number of contests in those sports necessary for meeting division sports-sponsorship requirements, even if the institution does not use the sport in meeting the minimum division sports-sponsorship requirements or the four-sport/three-season requirement. [References: 20.9.5.1 (men's basketball four-game limit), 20.9.5.3 (women's basketball four-game limit), 20.10.4.1 (football — Division II), 20.10.4.2 (basketball — Division II), 20.11.5.1 (football — Division III) and 20.11.5.2 (basketball — Division III)]

Division II Membership/ Sports Sponsorship

5. Use of Division I Sport to Satisfy Division II Four-Sport Requirement (Division II). A Division II institution that sponsors a sport in Division I may not use that sport in satisfying the requirement that the institution sponsor in Division II a minimum of four varsity intercollegiate sports. [References: 20.10.3 (sports sponsorship) and 20.10.3.1 (sport(s) sponsored in Division I)]

Football/Division I-AA/ Postseason Bowl

6. Division I-AA Institution Representing Division I-A Conference in Certified Postseason Football Contest (Division I-AA). A Division I-AA institution that is a member of a Division I-A conference may represent that conference in a certified postseason bowl contest if it meets the criteria for a "deserving winning" team (i.e., one that has won a minimum of six contests against Division I-A opponents and has more wins than losses). The committee recommended that the Postseason Football Subcommittee of the NCAA Special Events Committee review this issue to consider whether it wishes to amend the postseason bowl certification requirements set forth in 30.9.2 to restrict participation in postseason bowl contests to Division I-A institutions. [Reference: 30.9.2 (contest status)]

Playing Season/Required Day Off/Championships

7. Issues Related to Elimination of One-Day-Off-Per-Week Requirement During Conference and Postseason Championships (Division I). The committee reviewed 1995 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 90 (playing and practice seasons — required day off during playing season), which in Division I eliminates the one-day-off-per-week requirement during all conference and postseason championship participation, and determined the following:

a. The one-day-off-per-week requirement is applicable to a non-NCAA postseason championship (e.g., national governing body championship) unless the event is open only to collegiate teams or collegiate competitors.

b. An institution that participates in multiple conference championships is not subject to the one day-off-per-week requirement in the one conference championship that it exempts from its maximum contest limitations.

[References: 1995 Convention Proposal No. 90 and 17.1.5.4 (required day off — playing season) and 17.1.5.3(a) (annual exemptions — conference championship)]

Basketball/Contests Exemptions/ Home Exhibition

8. Home Exhibition Contests Against Foreign Team or USA Basketball Club Member (Division I). A home exhibition basketball contest against a foreign team or USA Basketball club member may be exempted from the institution's limitations on basketball contests only if such a contest is conducted in the arena in which the institution regularly plays its home contests. [References: 17.3.5.2-(e) [annual exemptions (foreign team in United States)] and 17.3.5.2-(f) [annual exemptions (USA Basketball club)]]

Initial Eligibility/Test Scores

9. Retroactive Application of Legislation Modifying Test-Score Time Limitation in Division I (Division I). The committee reviewed 1995 Convention Proposal No. 147, which amends the current deadline for achieving the required test score from July 1 immediately preceding an individual's initial full-time enrollment in a collegiate institution to any time prior to an individual's initial full-time enrollment in a collegiate institution, and determined that such legislation may be applied on a retroactive basis only to those student-athletes whose initial full-time enrollment in a collegiate institution occurred during the 1994-95 academic year. [Reference: 1995 Convention Proposal No. 147 (test-score time limitation — Division I) and 14.3.1.4.1-(a) (test-score time limitation — Division I)]

Twenty-nine named finalists for Giant Steps Awards

Twenty-nine people have been selected as finalists for the Giant Steps Awards.

Winners of the awards will be announced April 6 on National Student-Athlete Day, an event sponsored by Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society, the National Consortium for Academics and Sports, and the NCAA.

Giant Steps Awards are given annually to individuals and organizations who exemplify the ideals and provide the support necessary for student-athletes to achieve academic and athletics success.

Recipients of this year's awards will be honored November 8 at an awards banquet in Boston.

The finalists by category, and activities for which the finalists are being recognized:

Sport in social issues

■ Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. After years as a quiet, consistent, positive role model throughout his basketball career and then in his professional life, he established "Kareem's Kids" in 1989. The organization encourages children in Los Angeles to overcome obstacles and achieve their dreams by getting a firm educational foundation.

■ Donna Lopiano. Currently executive director of the Women's Sports Foundation, she is ranked as one of the "100 most powerful people in sports" by The Sporting News as a result of her commitment and unequalled impact of creating opportunities for women in sports.

■ Greg Louganis. After years as a spokesperson for children with dyslexia, the HIV-positive champion Olympic diver is using that same selfless generosity to help others afflicted with AIDS.

■ Johann Olav Koss. The Norwegian Olympic hero and humanitarian recently was awarded the International Amateur Athletic Federation's Jesse Owens International Award for sportsmanship, work for global cooperation and athletics achievement.

■ Billy Payne. A former all-American athlete at the University of Georgia, he exemplifies the message to today's youth of fulfilling dreams and realizing potential through hard work and determination. He is seeing his dream to fruition by bringing the 1996 Olympic Games to Atlanta.

■ Curtis Pride. A Montreal Expos outfielder who is 95 percent deaf, he uses the off-season to teach special education to children in the Montgomery County (Maryland) school system.

■ Mo Vaughn. The Boston Red Sox first baseman established the Mo Vaughn Youth Development Program in Dorchester, Massachusetts, for children ages 13 through 16.

Female coach

■ Marianna Freeman. Head women's basketball coach at Syracuse University and member of the Women's Basketball Coaches Association and Black Coaches Association.

■ Susan Summons. Women's basketball coach at Miami-Dade Community College who revitalized the school's program and also served as a coach at the 1993 U.S. Olympic Festival.

■ Marian Washington. University of Kansas women's basketball coach whose accolades include being the first black woman to coach the United States women's team in international competition and to head the Black Coaches Association.

Male coach

■ Geno Auriemma. Head coach of the University of Connecticut's top-ranked women's basketball team and chair of the Why Me of New England Foundation for breast cancer research.

■ Al Mitchell. United States Olympic Education Center boxing coach whose youth program encourages education and cultivates self-respect.

■ Eddie Robinson. Legendary Grambling

State University football coach who has garnered almost every award possible in collegiate coaching, including induction into the College Football Hall of Fame.

■ Eugene L. Shirk. The late civic leader, professor and athletics administrator at Albright College was the oldest active NCAA coach (men's cross country) at the time of his death. He was 92.

■ Zoran Zupcovic. Bosnian basketball coach who led his war-torn country's junior Olympic team to a safe haven in the United States.

Parent

■ Sheila Agee and Emma Gates. Mothers of the young basketball players featured in the movie "Hoop Dreams" whose ceaseless support for their sons' education and dreams provided the glue that kept their families together.

■ Elaine Bogues. Mother of four, including National Basketball Association standout Muggsy Bogues. She kept her children away from drugs and crime when their father was incarcerated.

Courageous female student-athlete

■ Monika Black. A University of Michigan indoor and outdoor track team member who achieved a personal best this year, was selected as a Big Ten Conference all-academic student, and maintains a vigorous role as a motivational speaker and community volunteer.

■ Dominique Dawes. The 1994 USA Gymnastics sportsperson of the year and multiple-medal winner in Olympic competition. Dawes has been an active participant in the Say No to Drugs and Stay in School programs. She plans to attend Stanford University.

■ Tanya Hughes. The four-time NCAA high-jump champion from the University of Arizona was selected as the 1995 NCAA Woman of the Year, an award recognizing achievement in athletics, academics and community leadership.

■ Kelly Kovach. The University of Michigan senior softball star was a first-team GTE academic all-American, maintaining a 3.490 grade-point average (4.000 scale), and she volunteers as a tutor and counselor with youth organizations in the Ann Arbor area.

■ Missy Lehman. A Watertown, Wisconsin, high-school student who competes on the cross country team despite the fact that she is completely blind.

Courageous male student-athlete

■ Vince Carter. Ranked as one of the top five high-school basketball players in the nation, this notable student-athlete also performs outreach, sings in his church choir and is the drum major at Mainland (Florida) High School.

■ Phillip Castillo. The seven-time all-American runner from Adams State College coordinates the summer outreach program for Wings of America, a youth development program for Native Americans.

■ Harold Dennis. University of Kentucky football kicker who overcame the consequences of a drunk-driving accident to excel as a student-athlete and inspirational public speaker.

■ Doug Dormu. Starting guard on the Washington, D.C., Roosevelt High School basketball team who averages 15 points a game despite having the use of only one arm.

■ Michael Jones. Fitch (Connecticut) High School senior running back who emerged from a life of guns, drugs and crime to become active in community outreach and to win the National Football Foundation's Southeast Connecticut Scholar-Athlete of the Year Award.

■ David Mayfield. An exemplary student and all-Big East Conference safety at West Virginia University whose numerous outreach and volunteer efforts include the highly successful Books and Balls summer camp.

Northwestern selected to host I men's golf championships in 1997

The NCAA Administrative Committee has approved the recommendation of the Division I men's golf subcommittee of the NCAA Men's and Women's Golf Committee that Northwestern University host the 1997 Division I Men's Golf Championships at Kemper Lakes Golf Club.

The May 28-31 championships will mark only the fourth time the Chicago area has hosted a national championship in collegiate golf and the first time it has hosted the NCAA championships since the 1943 tournament at Olympia Fields.

Although the NCAA did not begin conducting golf championships until 1939, the 1997 championships will mark the 100th anniversary of men's collegiate golf championships. The United States Golf Association conducted the championships from 1897 through 1938. Individual champions include Jack Nicklaus, Ohio State University (1961); Hale Irwin, University of Colorado, Boulder (1967); John Mahaffey, University of Houston (1970); Ben Crenshaw, University of Texas at Austin (1971, 1972 and 1973); Tom Kite, Texas (1972); Scott Simpson, University of Southern California (1976 and 1977); Phil Mickelson, Arizona State University (1989 and 1990); and Justin Leonard, Texas (1994).

Since 1939, the University of Houston has won more than 16 team championships, more than double those of any institution over the same period.

William F. Miller, Men's and Women's Golf Committee chair and men's golf coach at Furman University, said that Northwestern was selected during the committee's most recent meeting.

"The subcommittee is pleased with the site that has been selected for the 100th anniversary of a collegiate golf championship and believes that Kemper Lakes Golf Club and Northwestern University will provide an outstanding golf championship atmosphere for the student-athletes and spectators," Miller said.

The 1995 championships will be conducted on the Scarlet Course at Ohio State, May 31-June 3.

The 1996 championships will be hosted by the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga on the Honors Course in Chattanooga.

its original intent. Meanwhile, the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators (NACWAA) has objected to the actions of the AFCA and the CFA, claiming that Title IX has been effective in providing athletics opportunities that previously did not exist for young women.

The Commission is expected to discuss the issue in general and also the NCAA's role in the hearings.

Need-based aid

The Divisions I and II subcommittees of the Commission also will review a report from the NCAA Committee on Financial Aid and Amateurism concerning need-based aid.

The financial aid committee has asked the Commission and the NCAA Council to provide Divisions I and II institutions with an opportunity to adopt a need-based aid system. That committee, which is in the process of completing a study that began in December 1993, has recommended that the 1996 NCAA Convention consider a financial aid model that would retain tuition, fees and books as elements of a full grant but would award aid for room and board on the basis of demonstrated need. A story describing the issue appeared in the March 1 issue of the News.

Other issues

Other issues that will be considered either by the full Commission or its division subcommittees include:

■ An update on the Division I athletics certification program.

■ A preliminary report from the special committee to develop an athletics certification plan in Division II.

■ A report by William E. Shelton, president of Eastern Michigan University and chair of the Commission's Committee on Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics.

Committee ends sanctions against coach

Restrictions will end August 17, committee rules

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has agreed to lift all restrictions — effective August 17, 1995 — imposed on the employment of a former assistant football coach who was involved in a major infractions case at Auburn University.

Larry Blakeney, currently head football coach at Troy State University in Division I-AA, has been subject since March 1993 to restrictions that were placed on Blakeney by Troy State as a result of the case. He also has been subject to additional sanctions imposed by the Committee on Infractions in August 1993.

Blakeney appeared before the committee earlier this year to ask that all sanctions against him end June 30, 1995.

The committee determined that all sanctions will end August 17, at which time Blakeney will have completed two complete years under the committee-imposed sanctions. The committee based its decision on the fact that Blakeney has been coaching at the Division I-AA level, has attended numerous seminars and sessions on NCAA rules, has complied with the sanctions imposed by the committee and has not been involved in other major violations of NCAA legislation.

A complete report of the committee's decision will be published in the March 29 issue of The NCAA Register.

Facilities

Basketball arenas enjoy spotlight athletics director for operations and facilities at the University of Connecticut, whose attractive Harry A. Gampel Pavilion played host to first- and second-round women's games and is hosting the women's East regional this year. "We want teams and fans that come here to leave here thinking this was the best tournament they've ever seen, from security to the freshness of our popcorn."

Dubois will serve as tournament manager of the women's East regional. He said perhaps the most challenging aspect of preparing for an NCAA basketball tournament event is setting up for the higher concentration of media representatives who will attend.

That need, however, presents less of a dilemma for Dubois and his staff at Connecticut because its basketball programs regularly attract one of the largest media followings in the nation. It also doesn't hurt that Connecticut's women's team spent most of the recent season as the No. 1-ranked team in the country, generating even bigger fan and media followings.

"We've been dealing with full houses for most of our women's season," Dubois said. "For us, it's a matter of polishing the place up. As far as taking care of our fans, we are in a mode to do that."

Finest hour

For Ron Spencer and the facilities staff at the Tallahassee/Leon County Civic Center, which was the site of first- and second-round games for this year's men's tournament, the reality of readying the 14-year old building for perhaps its finest hour excited the staff.

"This was our first time hosting," said Spencer, director of the center. "We consider this a prestigious event — probably the most prestigious event we have had."

Florida State University plays its home games at the Civic Center, so having a basketball tenant has given the facilities staff plenty of practice turning the floor from a hockey configuration (the building also is home to a hockey team) to a basketball setup. That generally takes eight hours to accomplish, Spencer said.

But strategizing how to accommodate several hundred media members for the event required much more time, Spencer said.

"This definitely was the largest media we will have," he said. "We had to try to accommodate 350 members of the press. We got that worked out."

Limit to neutrality

At the University of Tennessee, Knoxville — site of first- and second-round women's games and host of the women's Mideast regional — making over sprawling, 25,000-seat Thompson-Boling Arena from its traditional orange and white motif to colors more neutral is the challenge. There is, however, a limit on what the staff will do to make Thompson-Boling more impartial.

"Typically for a home event everything would be orange and white because that's who we are," said Donna Thomas, Mideast regional tournament manager and assistant athletics director for compliance and operations in the women's athletics

Special attention given to Kingdome

This year will mark the third time that the Final Four will be played under the roof at Seattle's Kingdome. But neither of the previous Final Fours in the arena required the kind of facility preparations that this year's event demanded.

The Kingdome, which will turn 19 years old March 27, underwent installation of a new roof last summer. Leaks had allowed moisture to enter and weaken glued ceiling tiles, a number of which eventually fell into seats below. Fortunately, the tiles fell at a time when no events were occurring.

Today, the Kingdome boasts a leak-proof roof on the outside and sprayed acoustic ceiling material inside. Fans attending this year's Final Four will encounter a new and improved Kingdome.

"They did a remarkable job," said Carol Keaton, promotions and media relations manager for the Kingdome. "The outside is much brighter. It's beautiful. We've been painting and sprucing up everything. We have repainted our yellow brick road. We will work with the City of Seattle to clean up the streets around the Kingdome as a special spruce-up job."

The Final Four last was played at the Kingdome in 1989. Since that time, a pavilion has been built adjacent to the Kingdome to better accommodate the hundreds of media members who cover the Final Four. The pavilion also will serve as the site of a reception sponsored by the local organizing committee for basketball coaches.

"It's a much-needed facility," said David E. Cawood, NCAA assistant executive director for marketing and broadcast services and media coordinator for the Final Four. "It's a nice facility."

While some aspects of preparing the Kingdome for the Final Four were difficult, the staff earned valuable experience setting the arena for basketball during the recent Washington state high-school tournament, when two games were played simultaneously.

The setup for the Final Four, obviously, will be different. From an organizational standpoint, the Final Four should not present too many new challenges for the experienced Kingdome staff.

"This, to us, is just another event, work-wise," said Ray Eldridge, event officer at the Kingdome and facility liaison to the NCAA for the Final Four. "We have 39,000 people coming in here and a contingent of press. In the fall we have 60,000 people here for football. Obviously, the magnitude (of the Final Four) is greater. It calls for that extra spit and polish. But in many ways, it's like another event for us."

Eldridge is the person primarily responsible for making sure everything goes without a hitch inside the Kingdome and for ensuring that if something does go awry, it is attended to in swift fashion. Although he will have a seat on press row — and near NCAA officials should problems arise — he said he is unlikely to be able to enjoy much of the competition on the court.

"I probably won't see much," he said. "During the event itself, we will have under our responsibility any maintenance problems from a backboard being shattered to a plugged toilet. You would hope to say that when the ball is tipped that everything is in place and working and nothing breaks down. You just hope you've got it done well."

If the 1984 and 1989 Final Fours were any indication, the 1995 event is indeed in good hands.

— Ronald D. Mott

department at Tennessee. "When we bring in pipe and drape, we will use blue. But we don't paint the floor, and we don't take down national-championship banners."

Doug Ewing, operations manager of the Knapp Center at Drake University, site of the women's Midwest regional tournament, said transforming various rooms into needed space for the tournament has been interesting. For example, an aerobics/dance room will become the media interview room during the tournament. The arena offers a cozy atmosphere — just 7,200 seats — and tight quarters for the burgeoning numbers of media.

"Our main trouble is with the large media following," Ewing said.

"We had to move from 24-inch tables down to 18-inch tables. For overflow media, we'll have to move them up to the mezzanine level. The flexibility of the building will be tested with this regional."

And if the job is well done, most fans will not notice. For facilities personnel, that is a stamp of approval.

Lobo, Amaechi lead GTE Academic All-America teams

Rebecca Lobo of top-ranked Connecticut and Penn State's John Amaechi have been selected as men's and women's basketball 1995 GTE Academic All-America team members of the year in the university division.

Lobo, a leading candidate for national women's player-of-the-year honors, is the all-time leading rebounder and second-leading scorer for Connecticut, which was undefeated entering play in the Division I Women's Basketball Championship. The senior forward, who was honored this year as Big East Conference player of the year, is a political science major with a 3.600 grade-point average (4.000 scale).

Amaechi, a graduate student at Penn State, led the Nittany Lions to a berth in this year's National Invitation Tournament. He compiled a 3.240 GPA as a psychology major at Penn State.

Leading the college division as team members of the year are Steve Diekmann of Grinnell and Emilie Hanson of Central (Iowa).

Diekmann, a senior economics major with a 3.450 GPA, leads Division III in scoring with a 37.3-point average. Hanson, a senior English major with a 3.890 GPA, leads Division III women in scoring with a 27.8-point average.

1995 Column No. 12

1995 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 90

Playing and practice seasons — required days off during the playing season — Division I

Division I institutions should note that with the adoption of 1995 Convention Proposal No. 90, an institution is not subject to the one-day-off-per-week restriction during the week (i.e., the seven-day period as designated by the institution) in which the institution begins conference or postseason championship participation until the institution has concluded its participation in the conference or postseason championship. Further, during its February 16, 1995, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed Proposal No. 90 and determined the following:

1. The one-day-off-per-week requirement is applicable to non-NCAA postseason championships (e.g., national governing body championship) unless the event is open only to collegiate competitors, in which case the one-day-off-per-week requirement would not apply.

2. An institution that participates in multiple conference championships is not subject to the one-day-off-per-week requirement in the one conference championship that it exempts from its maximum contest limitations.

Please note also that during its January 12, 1995, post-Convention meeting, the NCAA Council, pursuant to Constitution 5.3.1.1.1 (noncontroversial amendment), revised the effective date of Proposal No. 90 from August 1, 1995, to an immediate effective date.

NCAA Bylaws 14.6 and 30.2.1.1 High-school all-star games

Institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 14.6, a student-athlete shall be denied the first year of intercollegiate athletics competition if, following completion of high-school eligibility in the student-athlete's sport and prior to the student-athlete's high-school graduation, the student-athlete competes in more than two all-star football contests or two all-star basketball contests. In this regard, pursuant to Bylaw 30.2.1.1, a high-school all-star contest is any contest in the sport of football or basketball that meets all the following criteria:

1. The teams participating in the contest involve individuals who have completed their high-school eligibility in the sport and have not yet enrolled in and attended classes during a regular term at a collegiate institution.

2. The contest is scheduled and publicized in advance.

3. The competition is sponsored and promoted by an individual, organization or agency.

4. The individuals are selected for participation in the contest on an invitational basis and have not competed together previously as members of a team that played a regular schedule of games in an organized recreation or interscholastic program.

Further, during the February 23, 1981, telephone conference of NCAA officers (the group that was responsible at that time for issuing official interpretations between meetings of the Council), it was determined that all-star contests involving prospective student-athletes would be subject to the high-school all-star game criteria even if other individuals whose eligibility is not affected (i.e., prospective student-athletes who have not exhausted their eligibility for high-school competition) are involved as participants. Accordingly, if a high-school basketball all-star contest involves some individuals who have completed their high-school eligibility and some individuals who have not completed their high-school eligibility, the participants who have exhausted high-school eligibility would be subject to the limitations set forth in Bylaw 14.6.

Contest exemption committee proposes certification criteria

A special committee studying exceptions to legislation limiting the number of contests a team may play in a season will provide a preliminary report of its ideas to the NCAA Council in April.

The NCAA Special Committee to Review Contest Exemptions, which met March 14 in Dallas, will provide to the Council proposed criteria for evaluating events requiring exemptions — including criteria for an event-certification process.

It also will propose philosophical principles for use in reviewing requests for exemptions.

In addition, the special committee proposes convening a June meeting at which representatives of existing events that could be affected by legislation affecting contest exemptions would be provided an opportunity to present information about those events.

In its preliminary report, the special committee will propose the following criteria for consideration in evaluating events seeking exemptions:

■ Costs to institutions that participate in such events.

■ Degree of interference with student-athletes' class attendance.

■ Possible competitive inequities resulting from opportunities for teams to participate in exempted competition.

The committee also proposes the following philosophical principles for use in determining whether to grant an exemption:

■ The event should benefit all Division I institutions.

■ It should provide, over a period of time, participation opportunities for all institutions.

■ Financial implications for institutions should be considered.

■ Consideration should be given to maintaining the integrity of legislation governing season length and to preventing adverse effects on student-athletes' classroom attendance and graduation rates.

■ Events in the contiguous United States should be managed by Division I institutions.

The committee discussed a possible certification process for events seeking exemptions from contest limits — similar to the procedure currently used for special events such as bowl games and all-star contests.

The committee proposes that the following criteria be considered in granting certification:

■ The amount of missed class time required by the event.

■ Whether the event limits the frequency of participation by a conference (for example, permitting only one conference representative per year to participate).

■ Whether the event limits the frequency of participation by an institution (for example, permitting a school to participate only once in four years).

■ Whether the event solicits the participation of teams from every Division I conference at least once during a set period of time (for example, at least once in 12 years).

■ Whether the event pays the expenses of participating institutions.

The committee proposes that the NCAA Special Events Committee assume responsibility for such a certification procedure.

The committee's proposed criteria and philosophies are intended to apply to existing events as well as events that may be proposed in the future. The committee, however, indicated that it does not wish to present recommendations that could cause damage to or elimination of existing events.

Committee members will review feedback to its proposals from the Council and from event representatives before forming its final recommendations for the Council. Those recommendations, including any proposed legislation for the 1996 NCAA Convention, will be completed in time for the Council's August meeting.

vantaged youth each summer.

The program's positive impact isn't measured merely by the numbers of former NYSP participants who later become collegiate student-athletes.

The program offers instruction on alcohol and drug prevention, nutrition and personal health, careers, job responsibilities, and the importance of higher education in one's life, among other social topics. In addition, participants receive instruction in mathematics- and science-related programs.

The multiweek NYSP program curriculum is offered by more than 170 colleges and universities in 47 states and the District of Columbia.

Federal funding of the program comes from a $12 million grant through the Office of Community Services. Participating institutions generally contribute twice that amount on an annual basis.

Currently, the NCAA's financial support of the program is limited to a youth programs staff at the national office and National Youth Sports Program Committee expenses.

Edward A. Thiebe, NCAA director of youth programs, has begun his annual campaign to rally NYSP project personnel and state coordinators to contact Congressional representatives for support. The program already is Federally funded for its 1995-96 fiscal year (June 1, 1995, through May 31, 1996). The approaching appropriations process in Congress — which would provide funding for the 1996-97 fiscal year — is expected to begin in April, Thiebe said.

This year's budget campaign by NYSP workers is unique because of the number of new representatives elected to Congressional seats last November. For Thiebe, that presents a rare occasion to develop a new base of support in Washington.

"Our intent is to have as broad-based support in the House for this program as we can have," Thiebe said. "There is an opportunity for the new members to find out what we are about. Building relations with Congress is an ongoing process."

Rainbow Commission set to collect information for 'fairness index'

By the end of March, the Rainbow Commission for Fairness in Athletics (RCFA) hopes to begin distributing to NCAA Division I institutions a questionnaire from which it can calculate a "fairness index" to judge minority presence in a variety of areas — including sports participation and athletics administration.

Last November, the National Rainbow Coalition announced it would formulate a fairness index to gauge the progress Division I institutions have made with regard to minority inclusion. Charles S. Farrell, national director of the RCFA, said each institution should know from the beginning that the index will not be used as a vehicle for racial attacks against the institution.

The questionnaire will be delivered to chief executive officers, and athletics directors will be notified of that delivery. Farrell said he will reiterate to chief executive officers the commission's commitment to use survey results in a positive manner.

"We do not want this to be perceived as an adversarial thing," Farrell said. "Our goal is to rate Division I institutions on a variety of factors. We will break down the data to determine those institutions doing well and those that have areas in which to improve. Our job is not to berate those institutions that are not doing well. Our job is to challenge them to do better."

The questionnaire will include areas such as graduation rates; numbers of head coaches, athletics administrators and faculty members; the number of minority vendors doing business with the athletics department; and whether the athletics department has an equal-employment policy. The data will be charted by racial groups — "White," "Black," "Latino," "Asian," "Native American" and "Other." Farrell offered the NCAA an opportunity to review the questionnaire and make suggestions.

In cases where institutions do not fare well with the index, Farrell said the commission probably would seek dialogue between the campus and local minority leaders.

For institutions with better-than-average numbers, Farrell said complacency should be avoided.

"We're not going to say, 'You're a horrible institution that Blacks should not attend,'" Farrell said. "We're going to have our local Rainbow people engage these institutions in helping to develop plans on how to improve. We'll get those local people involved because they are most affected."

"Institutions at the top (of the index) shouldn't rest on their laurels. I don't think any of them should stop enhancing diversity."

Farrell said he did not know if the ratings effort would extend beyond this year.

"I'm not sure if it's going to be an annual process," he said. "Our affirmative action/cultural-diversity plan calls for a three- to five-year plan by an institution. (Progress) is not something that is going to happen overnight."

He hopes questionnaires will be returned and analyzed in time to be released at the Rainbow Coalition's national summit on minorities in intercollegiate athletics, scheduled for June 23-24 in Washington, D.C.
