III task force addresses two key governance issues

Group discusses committees, membership growth

The Division III Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure recently developed a preliminary list of committees that it believes should develop policy for the entire Association, rather than for a particular division.

The list is similar to a preliminary list previously developed by the Division II task force.

Both task forces agree that major NCAA committees such as the Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, the Committee on Women's Athletics, the Minority Opportunities and Interests Committee and the Research Committee should transcend all divisions. They also agree that several ad hoc committees, such as the Honors Committee and the National Youth Sports Program Committee, should involve all divisions.

However, the lists also were significant because of which committees were not included by either group. The Divisions II and III task forces agree at this point that each division should be free to chart its own course in fundamental areas such as academic requirements, eligibility, financial aid and amateurism, and recruiting.

The identification of Association-wide committees was one of two primary governance questions addressed by the Division III task force, which met September 13 in Chicago. The other was the task force's conclusion that the Oversight Committee on the NCAA Membership Structure should stipulate in its report that the significant growth of a division should be designated as an exceptional situation that would justify additional funding for that division. The NCAA Administrative Committee recently placed a moratorium on membership expansion until restructuring matters are settled, but the Division III task force is concerned that rapid expansion could occur in that division once the moratorium is lifted.

The Division III meeting was attended not only by the task force but also by the Division III Subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission and the Division III Championships Committee. The full group discussed championship bracket and field sizes and will submit a report to the Presidents Commission for its September 26-27 meeting that will suggest the following:

■ The group agreed to recommend that brackets and field sizes for team and individual sports should be determined through ratios previously determined by the task force. Previously, the task force had determined that for team sports, the field size should fall between 8:1 and 12:1 sponsoring institutions/participating teams and 16:1 and 24:1 for individual sports.

■ In addition, the group will recommend that where funding is available, all championships be fully funded.

Regarding championship and membership criteria for Division III, the group agreed that both are transitional issues that could be better addressed legislatively at the 1997 NCAA Convention. A subcommittee, chaired by Richard A. Rasmussen, executive secretary of the University Athletic Association, was appointed to examine various suggestions for championship and membership criteria. The subcommittee will report to the Division III task force, which then will create a report that will be discussed at the Division III business session of the Convention.

The Division II task force, which met September 13 in Atlanta, spent much of its meeting reviewing the restructuring legislation that will be considered in January.

In response to a request from the Division II Steering Committee, the task force discussed the proposed composition of the Division II Management Council, which would include representatives from each Division II multisport playing conference. After discussing the plan, the task force reaffirmed its belief that the proposed approach works best because it provides broader access to the division's governance structure.

DeFleur joins Commission

Lois B. DeFleur, president of the State University of New York at Binghamton, has been appointed to the NCAA Presidents Commission as a Division III representative.

She replaces Carol C. Harter, who resigned as president at State University College at Geneseo to become president of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

DeFleur became Binghamton's fifth president in 1990. She previously was provost at the University of Missouri, Columbia.

She also served as a professor of sociology at Missouri and at Washington State University, where she held the position

Agents confirm problems run deep

BY STEPHEN R. HAGWELL
AND RONALD D. MOTT
STAFF WRITERS

Nearly a decade has passed since the world of intercollegiate athletics was shaken by revelations about sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.

Walters and Bloom recruited 58 student-athletes at 32 institutions and made payments to them reportedly in excess of $800,000. Memories of the Walters-Bloom scandal have faded, but recent events again have turned the spotlight on sports agents.

None of the recent events alone is as visible as the Walters-Bloom case. But taken together, the incidents — including an infractions case at the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, involving a sports agent; the conviction of Joel Segal for violating a Florida law regulating sports agents; and statements of payouts to student-athletes by Jesse Martinez, a former "runner" for several sports agents — point to a trend that could crack the foundation of intercollegiate athletics.

To those working in intercollegiate athletics, the latest string of agent-related trouble is disturbing. But agents themselves say it is just more business as usual.

Talk to agents and insiders, and you will hear stories of substantial cash transactions involving student-athletes and their parents; of coaches and athletics directors "on the take" to help steer new clients into an agent's hands; of unbounded access to student-athletes; of agents influencing elite, young student-athletes (as early as seventh grade); and of agents stealing clients from one another.

"After two years in the trenches, (I can tell you) it is a problem," said Lynn Lashbrook, former athletics director at Southern Illinois University, Edwardsville, and the University of Alaska Fairbanks and now senior vice-president of Sports Management Group, a St. Louis-based sports-representation firm. "The biggest issue I see is there doesn't seem to be the deterrent of penalty that can impact the student-athlete or agent in the risk that might be taken for improprieties."

Problems are serious

No one is certain how deep the problems run. Conservative estimates place at 50 percent the number of agents who offer and provide inducements to student-athletes with remaining collegiate eligibility. Some place the figure as high as 90 percent.

Some agents say inducements are so common, so ingrained in the practice of doing

GRASS-ROOTS MOVEMENT

The already active movement toward natural playing surfaces in Division I-A football became even more active this year.

A total of seven Division I-A members switched to grass fields for the 1996 season, which means that 66 of the 108 I-A members play their home games on natural surfaces. That is 61.1 percent, which is the highest percentage of grass surfaces since Division I-A was created in 1978.

Teams playing on new grass surfaces are Arkansas (both at Razorback Stadium in Fayetteville and at War Memorial Stadium in Little Rock), California, Georgia Tech, Missouri, Southern Methodist, Utah and Virginia. Southern Methodist moved its home games from Owenby Stadium, which had an artificial surface, to the Cotton Bowl, which has grass.

North Texas, the new member of Division I-A, plays on an artificial surface.

Title IX

OCR developing clarification statement

Progress is underway in the Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) on a statement of clarification for Title IX compliance for colleges and universities.

The statement was to be distributed sometime in mid-September, but a Department of Education spokesperson said it will be delayed for a couple of weeks, if not longer.

A number of Congressional representatives have joined in urging OCR to clarify how institutions can comply with the 1972 Federal anti-discrimination law. Specifically, OCR is being encouraged to more clearly demonstrate how colleges and universities can meet the requirements of prongs two and three of the so-called three-part compliance test. Prong two involves showing a history and continuing practice of program expansion for the underrepresented sex, and prong three deals with effectively meeting and accommodating the interests and abilities of the underrepresented sex.

Once finalized, the statement of clarification likely will be distributed to chief executive officers in the form of a "Dear Colleague" letter, said Department of Education spokesperson Roger Murphey.

In legislative developments, in a September 13 markup for the 1996 funding bill, the Senate Labor/HHS/Education Appropriations Subcommittee did not include any of the Title IX language that was included in the companion bill from the House. Also, no amendments were offered at the full committee markup September 15.

NCAA seminars

Dates and sites determined for '96 Title IX seminars

Dates and sites have been determined for two NCAA Title IX seminars next April.

The first will be conducted April 11-12 at the Fairmont Hotel in San Francisco. The second will be April 29-30 at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston.

Janet M. Justus, NCAA women's issues coordinator and director of education services, said the format will be similar to the one used for the 1995 seminars. The seminars are designed to educate the membership on how to comply with Title IX.

Staff contact: Janet M. Justus.

Three 1996 NCAA regional rules-compliance seminars will be conducted May 8-10, St. Louis (Hyatt Regency Union Station); May 22-24, Boston (Park Plaza Hotel); and May 29-31, Newport Beach, California (Marriott). All dates are Wednesday through Friday.

Registration materials and a tentative agenda will be mailed February 8 to Divisions I and II athletics directors, faculty athletics representatives, senior women administrators and compliance coordinators. Those who attended regional seminars in 1995 also will receive registration materials and a tentative agenda.

Restructuring

Association-wide committees discussed by task force

The Division III Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure addressed a pair of primary governance questions at a September 13 meeting in Chicago.

The first question involved which committees should continue to have Association-wide responsibilities in a restructured NCAA. The other was the task force's conclusion that the Oversight Committee on the NCAA Membership Structure should stipulate in its report that the significant growth of a division should be designated as an exceptional situation that would justify additional funding for that division.

The Division III meeting was attended not only by the task force but also by the Division III Subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission and the Division III Championships Committee. The full group discussed championship bracket and field sizes and will submit a report to the Presidents Commission for its September 26-27 meeting.

The Division II Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure met September 13 in Atlanta and discussed the proposed composition of the Division II Management Council, which would include representatives from each Division II multisport playing conference. After discussing the plan, the task force reaffirmed its belief that the proposed approach works best because it provides broader access to the division's governance structure.

The complete restructuring proposal appears in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation, which was mailed September 23.

Briefly in the News

Time ticks fast in Washington

As each year passes, American workers seem to become more and more busy with their work. The traditional 40-hour work week for many has become 60, 70 or even more hours per week.

And some — like the vice-president of the United States — honestly can claim that their work is never done.

Aaron Walters, a senior football player at Hampden-Sydney College, saw that first-hand this past summer as an intern in the office of Vice-President Al Gore.

"It's really amazing how little control (Gore) has over his schedule," Walters said. "Any free time has to be planned into the schedule. If he wants to see his daughter play lacrosse, then that time has to be scheduled."

"The vice-president usually is in his office by 7:30 in the morning and from then on, he constantly is on the go. Whether it's meetings in Washington or traveling across the country, he has very little time off. It is a very physically wearing schedule and the vice-president really is never off the clock. They (President Clinton and the vice president) go through so much in a day that you almost have sympathy for what they have to endure."

Walters' once-in-a-lifetime summer job provided some once-in-a-lifetime experiences. He met the president and all of the cabinet secretaries, and had an opportunity to speak by phone with the vice-president's well-known college roommate — actor Tommy Lee Jones.

Walters maintains an extremely busy schedule himself. In addition to being the starting tight end at Hampden-Sydney, the political science major is a peer tutor, a school newspaper layout editor and a resident advisor.

"At most schools, being involved in one extracurricular activity is too demanding of your time," Walters said. "But here they encourage you to be involved and really help you do as many things as you want to. It takes a lot of time management and knowing what's important, but I like being involved."

It must be noted that Walters is involved in the classroom as well. He carries a cumulative 3.715 grade-point average, earning him a place on the dean's list, selection as a Hampden-Sydney merit scholar and Old Dominion Athletic Conference all-academic honors.

Convention(al) rooms?

NCAA Associate Executive Director Louis J.

Aaron Walters enjoyed a once-in-a-lifetime experience as a summer intern for Vice-President Al Gore (left).

Spry, who will observe his 15th year as NCAA Convention director in January, wants to do something unconventional for the Association's 90th annual meeting at the Wyndham Anatole Hotel in Dallas.

As a result, delegates to the 1996 Convention probably will notice meeting rooms bearing some very familiar names.

As Spry constructed blueprints for meeting-room space at Trinity Hall, an auxiliary exhibition hall owned by the Anatole, he decided he wanted to name the 11 temporary rooms he is arranging there something more original than "Trinity A" or "Trinity B."

"That's really kind of bland," Spry said. "I thought, 'Here's a chance to do something different and it might be kind of neat.'"

Spry decided to honor 11 Association presidents who are still living and who served most recently in the position. Thus, meeting rooms in Trinity Hall will bear the names of Joseph N. Crowley (NCAA president, 1993-95), Judith M. Sweet (1991-93), Albert M. Witte (1989-91), Wilford S. Bailey (1987-89), John R. Davis (1985-87), John L. Toner (1983-85), James Frank (1981-83), William J. Flynn (1979-81), J. Neils Thompson (1977-79), John A. Fuzak (1975-77), and Alan J. Chapman (1973-75).

Two other former presidents, Earl M. Ramer (1971-73) and Harry M. Cross (1969-71), also are still living.

In addition, Spry said he will schedule the meeting of the Southwestern Athletic Conference, whose commissioner is Frank, in the room bearing that name.

The Southwest Conference's meeting will be held in the Chapin Room, named for the longtime Convention parliamentarian and former faculty athletics representative at Rice University, where he remains on the faculty.

The Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC) executive committee will meet in the room named after Toner, who was active in ECAC affairs when he served as athletics director at the University of Connecticut.

Former NCAA statistics director Van Valkenburg dies

James M. Van Valkenburg, retired NCAA director of statistics, died September 11 in Overland Park, Kansas, at age 66. Van Valkenburg, who retired in 1992, joined the NCAA staff in 1968 to publicize the 100th anniversary of college football in 1969. In a news report noting his death, Van Valkenburg was remembered by The Associated Press as "someone with a talent for translating statistics into an easily understood form that fans could follow."

The following is excerpted from a profile of Van Valkenburg that was published in October 1989 in Home Court, a monthly newsletter for NCAA employees.

What kind of person spends 20 years writing countless articles about Saturday afternoon heroes, about which team has the toughest schedule, about who best can run the length of a hardwood floor and put an orange ball through a metal ring?

What kind of person does that?

"On my income tax return, I put down that I'm a sports publicist," Jim Van Valkenburg said. "I don't particularly enjoy just putting in numbers. I'm trying to illuminate for other people who might be interested in the broad scope of football and basketball."

Until (former NCAA Associate Director of Statistics) Steve Boda's retirement (in 1989), Van Valkenburg was one half of a bookend set. What Boda collected, Van Valkenburg wrote about....

"I would come up with a brainstorm of an idea and go to Steve and say, 'I wonder if so-and-so has ever been done.' And he would say, 'It just so happens that I have been collecting some material on that.' He would haul out 10 years' worth of research he had been doing, and I wouldn't have known a thing about it."

Like many others of his vintage in the college sports business, Van Valkenburg has pioneered in his field, defining the job as he went along. He points out that the job of writing about the major-college football and basketball figures for the NCAA has been done by just three people since 1937 — Homer Cooke Jr. (who is considered by most as the father of football and basketball statistics), Larry Klein (who took over the collection of and writing about those statistics) and himself.

FARA enhancing role of faculty

BY PERCY BATES AND JERRY L. KINGSTON
FACULTY ATHLETIC REPRESENTATIVES ASSOCIATION

The membership of the Faculty Athletic Representatives Association (FARA) welcomes readers to a new feature, the voice of the faculty athletics representatives. We will be speaking from this corner on a monthly basis and addressing issues that are important to faculty members and the intercollegiate athletics community.

In most instances we will be addressing issues related to academic integrity, institutional control and student-athlete welfare. As the reform movement in intercollegiate athletics evolves, and in particular as restructuring of our governance systems occurs, we feel that it is very important that the voice of the faculty be heard and carefully considered.

As many of you know, the role of the faculty athletics representative is not consistent either within or among NCAA divisional classifications. FARA has been working to bring more consistency and clarity to the role of the faculty athletics representative. A recent publication (the Faculty Athletics Representative Handbook) outlines our essential responsibilities:

- Ensure, either directly or indirectly, that student-athletes meet all NCAA, conference and institutional requirements for eligibility for practice, financial aid and intercollegiate competition.

- Develop, or arrange to have developed, periodic statistical reports on the academic preparation and performance of student-athletes for each sports team.

- Be responsible, either directly or indirectly, for the coordination of institutional compliance activities or responsibilities, which involve campus entities outside the athletics department.

- Be an active member of the campus intercollegiate athletics board or committee.

- Be knowledgeable about the NCAA and conference rules related to academic eligibility, transfer requirements and restrictions, and enforcement procedures.

- Have direct contact with student-athletes on a systematic and periodic basis (for example, orientation, team eligibility meetings, stu-

Black female athletes need more support

BY NANCY LIEBERMAN-CLINE
THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS

The term "gender equity" has become part of the athletics vocabulary, but it's still closer to fantasy than fact. Even accounting for recent gains, women are underrepresented throughout the spectrum of sports.

African-American females, meanwhile, are in double jeopardy.

Discriminated because of their race and their gender, they represent less than five percent of high-school athletes and less than 10 percent of college athletes, according to the most recent figures. African-American women make up less than five percent of female college coaches, two percent of all college coaches and less than one percent of college administrators.

Just as African-American males are underrepresented at quarterback in football, so are African-American females in "control" positions — setter in volleyball, point guard in basketball. African-American women are plentiful in certain sports, such as basketball and track and field, but are nearly invisible in sports such as swimming and golf. There are virtually no African-American women in the officiating ranks, and those few who are head coaches generally are short on assistants, recruiting dollars and other resources.

Among elite athletes, African-American females gets fewer speaking engagements and fewer commercial endorsements than their white counterparts. Their ranks include athletes such as Florence Griffith Joyner and Jackie Joyner-Kersey, yet they were unable to crack a recent list of the 10 highest-paid sports spokespersons, compiled by the Sports Marketing Letter. Still, the civil rights movement has not taken to her cause, and the feminists think sports is either frivolous or part of the male culture that women shouldn't emulate.

Yet we know that sports are important for all girls and women.

Teen-agers who take part are far more likely to graduate from high school, far less likely to get pregnant or get involved with drugs.

Women who exercise reduce their risk of breast cancer and have higher self-esteem.

So somehow, we need to create more opportunities for African-American females in sports.

Here's how I would start:

- Encourage sports organizations to conduct research each year on how many African-American women are involved in every sport at every level, how much they're earning, how many scholarships and endorsements they're getting and how much coverage they're receiving in the media. This material could compose an annual report card that would drag discrimination into the public's view and serve as a catalyst for change.

- Organize a summit on racism in sports to create a national agenda to address the problem.

- Press the U.S. Olympic Committee and its various national sport governing bodies to fulfill their obligations under the 1978 Amateur Sports Act, which committed to introducing sports at the grass-roots level without discrimination.

- Insist that the NCAA and other organizations that hand out grants refuse to fund organizations that have no programs to address racism in sports.

- Develop and distribute a guidebook for principals, superintendents and college presidents that explains how they can address the problem.

- Use posters and public-service announcements to celebrate the image of the African-American female athlete.

Perhaps most important, we must criticize schools and organizations that fail to act. Until they're aware of the problem, there will be no solutions.

Nancy Lieberman-Cline, who lives in Dallas, is a former Olympian and professional basketball player. She writes a weekly column for The Dallas Morning News.

□ Opinions

Civility missing from too many debates

Jim Minter, columnist
The Atlanta Constitution

"College football is a strange and paradoxical animal. Some parts represent the best of human behavior, others the worst.

"Once upon a time there were myths about lessons learned on fields of friendly strife. Maybe they were only myths not much akin to reality, but they beat what we have today, which is an astonishing lack of civility and a meanness we ought to seriously worry about.

"It goes beyond the barbecuing of every coach who doesn't win every game, a mathematical impossibility since teams play each other and for every winner there has to be a loser, except for ties, generally considered a loss for both teams.

"Last week on WSB radio, 50,000 watts, clear channel. Voice of the South, Neal Boortz called the mayor of Atlanta a 'union whore dog.' So we shouldn't be surprised when grammar-school dropouts call shock talk radio and slander a college football coach publicly placed on probation by his boss.

"I was surprised when my favorite sports section, on the near eve of the season's opening game, published a column calling for the coach to become an ex-coach. I'm thankful that in my earlier life as a sportswriter some coach didn't call the publisher after one of my bad days and suggest I become an ex-sportswriter. When I first went to work, suffering from what my boss Ed Danforth diagnosed as 'acute youth,' he told me my job description didn't include hiring and firing coaches."

Gary Shelton, columnist
St. Petersburg Times

"So the question is asked again. When a fan buys a ticket, what comes with the seat? The right to cheer? To boo? To call names? Where does it stop?

"We have become a nation that demands instant gratification. Perhaps it is the emphasis on the polls. Perhaps it is the venting commonplace with radio talk shows. Perhaps it is realization college sports are such a big business.

"Either way, fans are increasingly demanding, and athletes are less people as uniforms. At Florida, where the Southeastern Conference championship has gone from being a long-pursued goal to being taken for granted with blinding speed. At Florida State, where a top-five finish is now a bad year.

"I think fans have changed somewhat because of pro ball," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said. "Booing is acceptable in pro ball. Players are making a lot of money. Maybe that rubs off."

"Perhaps it does. From the stands, a 6-3, 250-pound player looks pretty much the same whether he is in college or pros. Sometimes, perhaps it is easy to forget if the player is 28 or 18."

Media guides

Ivan Maisel, president
Football Writers Association of America
Greensboro News and Record

Discussing oversized college football media guides, which frequently are designed with recruiting in mind:

"To call them media guides anymore is a misnomer. They are not published for the ease and use of the media.

"And to think, I got into this job because I didn't want to do any heavy lifting."

Football bowl alliance

Charles M. Neinas, executive director
College Football Association
The New Orleans Times-Picayune

"I thought the coalition brought a more orderly arrangement for bowl football, and I think the alliance, at the top end, is even more orderly. I think it's a test. There could be an evaluation after three years.

"The Big Ten has made some noise about finding ways to be involved in the alliance. ABC may encourage the Rose Bowl to be part of it in some fashion. That way, you could have the four winners move on to a playoff. That could be a precursor."

Minor leagues for pros

L. B. Hughes, Knoxville, Tennessee
Letter to the editor
The Sporting News

"As for the problem with collegiate athletics and NCAA regulations, wouldn't it be better for all concerned if professional football and basketball were encouraged to develop minor-league systems similar to that of Major League Baseball? This would allow true student-athletes to stay in college (with or without scholarship is a separate issue) and others to pursue their professional dreams without hypocrisy. College baseball does not draw millions of TV viewers each week, but nor has it been a focus of NCAA rules violations investigations. Just a thought."

NCAA penalties

Editorial
The Los Angeles Times

"NCAA sanctions should be humbling. They should lead to college administrators and athletics departments cleaning house, not restocking with talent for an immediate run at the NCAA championship. Yet aside from Southern Methodist University, whose football program was shut down for two years in the late 1980s, few schools have suffered any major consequences for egregious behavior on the part of boosters, alumni, coaches, players or others."

More students taking part in high-school athletics

For the sixth consecutive year, participation in high-school athletics programs has shown an increase.

Based on figures from 51 state high-school athletics/activity associations that are members of the National Federation of State High School Associations, participation in high-school athletics during 1994-95 was 5,794,429, an increase of 179,446 from 1993-94. The 1994-95 figure is the second-highest mark in the 25 years that the survey has been compiled, topped only by the "baby boom" figure of 6,450,482 in 1977-78. Data from the 1994-95 survey indicated another record participation for girls at 2,240,461, an increase of 115,706 from the previous year. Boys participation also increased, up 57,829 to 3,536,359, the highest mark for boys since 1978-79. In addition to the 2,240,461 female participants and 3,536,359 male participants, the 5.8 million total includes 17,609 participants in coeducational sports.

The National Federation has compiled the survey since 1971. With the exception of a slight decrease from 1987-88 to 1988-89, participation has risen each year since 1984-85. The 1984-85 total stopped a six-year downward spiral for participation numbers.

Soccer registered the largest gain in girls athletics programs, with an additional 25,177 participants. Participation in girls' soccer has increased from 23,475 in 1979 to 191,350 this year. It has moved from No. 12 to No. 5 in popularity.

In addition to soccer, four other girls' sports gained more than 10,000 participants over 1993-94 figures, including fast-pitch softball (an increase of 21,277), outdoor track and field (14,523), basketball (14,371), and volleyball (12,560).

Tennis registered the top increase in sponsorship among girls' sports with an additional 1,490 schools, followed by soccer (increase of 549), golf (469), fast-pitch softball (465) and cross country (457).

With an increase of 27,113 participants, football registered the largest gain among boys' sports, followed by soccer (increase of 17,272), outdoor track and field (11,049), and basketball (10,201).

Cross country registered the largest increase in school sponsorship among boys' sports with an additional 503 schools, followed by soccer (increase of 460), golf (349), and swimming and diving (168). Ironically, although football had the largest gain in participants, it also had the largest drop in sponsorship, losing 161 schools and falling to fourth in the number of sponsoring schools behind basketball, outdoor track and baseball.

Basketball remains the most popular girls' sport with 426,947 participants, followed by outdoor track (360,223), volleyball (340,176), fast-pitch softball (278,395) and soccer (191,350).

Football is still the most popular boys' sport with 955,247 participants, followed by basketball (540,269), baseball (440,503), outdoor track (430,807) and soccer (272,810).

The 17,609 participants in coeducational programs includes 711 in Minnesota's coed programs adapted for participants with disabilities, as well as 16,898 involved in the coed team tennis program in Texas.

In the listing of athletics participants by state, Texas remains No. 1 with 664,098, followed by California (488,411), New York (301,702), Illinois (283,594) and Ohio (282,776).

As part of their cultural, educational and social development, the children toured the Georgia campus, including stops at the library, computer center and athletics complex. Between shooting baskets and signing autographs, Smith talked to the children about being responsible and being good citizens.

Woman of the Year finalists announced

Ten selected from state-level winners

Fifty-two state-level winners — including 10 national finalists — have been announced in the 1995 NCAA Woman of the Year program.

The NCAA Woman of the Year will be selected from among the 10 finalists. The winner will be honored October 22 in a banquet in Kansas City, Missouri. All 52 state-level winners — including two women who tied for honors in Iowa and also were named national finalists — will be invited to attend the banquet.

The NCAA Woman of the Year award recognizes excellence in athletics, academics and community leadership. The state-level winners and finalists were selected by a special committee chaired by former NCAA President Judith M. Sweet, director of athletics at the University of California, San Diego.

The 1995 Woman of the Year will be selected by the NCAA Committee on Women's Athletics.

This year's finalists are Michelle Carlson, Trenton State College; Amy Clements, Eastern Kentucky University; Sofie Ericksson, University of Tulsa; Heidi Rae Hamlin, Seattle Pacific University; Emilie Hanson, Central College (Iowa); Heather Killeen, California State University, Fullerton; Rebecca Lobo, University of Connecticut; Robyn Olson, Wartburg College; Cheril Santini, Southern Methodist University; and Rebecca Spies, Villanova University.

The selections of Hanson and Olson gave Iowa not only two state-level winners, but two of the 10 finalists.

The state-level winners are listed in the accompanying box. Following are profiles of the 10 finalists:

Michelle Carlson, softball, Trenton State College, 3,810 grade-point average (4,000 scale), major: health and physical education; played third base; 1994 and 1995 National Softball Coaches Association player of the year; 1995 GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-America college-division first team; volunteer youth softball coach.

Amy Clements, track/cross country, Eastern Kentucky University, 3,980 GPA; eight-time Ohio Valley Conference champion and three-time OVC cross country runner of the year; two-time GTE/CoSIDA first-team Academic All-America; four-year dean's list member; Special Olympics volunteer; substitute teacher during vacation periods.

Sofie Ericksson, golf, University of Tulsa, 3,900 GPA, major: accounting; first-team all-American and first team all Missouri Valley Conference; rated seventh-best woman collegiate golfer by Golfstat; three-time Golf Coaches Association of America all-American; youth golf camp volunteer.

Heidi Rae Hamlin, track/cross country, Seattle Pacific University, 3,810 GPA, major: nursing; 400, 800 and 1,500 meters, two-time all-American; finished third in 1993 NCAA Division II 800-meter championship and fourth in 1994; graduated magna cum laude; dean's list member every quarter; volunteer in nursing program, gave flu shots to the elderly.

Emilie Hanson, basketball, Central College (Iowa), 3,890 GPA, major: English; forward; selected as 1995 Rawlings/Women's Basketball Coaches Association player of the year; two-time Division III scoring leader; member of 1993 NCAA Division III championship team; set school records for most points scored in a game and most consecutive free throws; two-time GTE Academic All-America selection; high-school tutor and motivational speaker.

Heather Killeen, track, California State University, Fullerton, 3,760 GPA, major: English; 1994 cross country all-America and all-Big West Conference; three-time all-Big West Conference cross country and track honoree; dean's list member in eight of nine semesters; president of Cal State Fullerton student-athlete advisory committee; YMCA volunteer; elementary school volunteer.

Rebecca Lobo, basketball, University of Connecticut, 3,637 GPA, major: political science; forward; member of 1995 NCAA Division I women's championship team; 1995 Women's Final Four most valuable player; member of 1995 USA Basketball national team; 1995 GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-America; three-time Big East Conference academic all-star team; Big Brother/Big Sister charity work.

Robyn Olson, track/cross country, Wartburg College, 3,848 GPA, major: biology; eight-time all-American; 14 Iowa Conference championships; NCAA postgraduate scholarship winner; three-time GTE/CoSIDA Academic All-America; six-time Iowa Conference all-academic team; physical therapy volunteer.

Cheril Santini, diving, Southern Methodist University, 3,910 GPA, major: German/chemistry; competed in board and platform diving; two-time NCAA Division I one-meter champion, 1992 and 1995; fourth on one-meter board at 1994 World Championships in Rome; 1994 Goodwill Games competitor; 1995 GTE/CoSIDA at-large Academic All-America of the year; president of SMU Amnesty International chapter.

Rebecca Spies, track/cross country, Villanova University, 3,870 GPA, major: biology/philosophy; six-time all-American; three top-four finishes in NCAA championships; member of three NCAA Division I championship cross country teams; graduated magna cum laude; NCAA postgraduate scholarship winner; Rhodes Scholarship recipient; AIDS peer-education counselor.

Legislation regarding correspondence courses concerns committee

The NCAA Committee on Review and Planning will express its concern regarding proposed legislation that would prohibit the use of correspondence courses to meet the transfer requirements for two-year college student-athletes.

At its September 11-12 meeting in Monterey, California, the committee agreed to urge the NCAA Council to take more time to study the impact of this legislation.

It also expressed concern about Council-sponsored proposed legislation that would mandate a "redshirt" year in Division I for two-year college transfer students in men's basketball and football who are not qualifiers.

The committee was especially concerned that such a mandate would be limited to only two sports.

The Council agreed at its August meeting to sponsor the two pieces of proposed legislation.

The review and planning committee also will recommend to the Council that the NCAA Presidents Commission Committee on Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics, which will make its report to the NCAA Convention in January, be continued and that its charge be extended.

On another matter, the committee noted that the NCAA Legislative Review Committee reported to the Council its plans to publish future Manuals containing only legislation that is in effect for the academic year immediately succeeding a Convention.

The review and planning committee agreed that the new format, which

Committee accepts Baylor's self-imposed penalties

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has accepted as its own the penalties self-imposed by Baylor University for NCAA rules violations in its men's basketball program.

The committee did place restrictions on the future employment by NCAA member institutions of the four former men's basketball coaches involved in the case. The university, as part of its own corrective actions and penalties, replaced all members of the men's basketball coaching staff, reduced scholarships and expense-paid visits, held the team out of postseason play and did not allow the team to appear on television for one year.

The committee found violations involving academic fraud and unethical conduct. It also found a lack of control over the men's basketball program by the former head coach. The committee described the violations as "significant, intentional and egregious."

All four involved coaches were tried in Federal court on charges related to the academic fraud involved in this case. The former head men's basketball coach was found not guilty. The jury found the three former assistant coaches guilty on various counts. That trial concluded April 6, 1995. The assistant coaches provided new information to the institution following the trial.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions heard this case on August 11, 1995. Representatives of the university appeared before the committee, as well as the former head men's basketball coach and two former assistant men's basketball coaches. The third former assistant declined to respond to the official inquiry or to attend the hearing.

The Committee on Infractions found NCAA rules violations, including the following:

- During the summer of 1993, members of the men's basketball coaching staff were involved in arranging fraudulent academic credit for four prospective student-athletes who were transferring from two-year colleges. They assisted the prospective student-athletes with their enrollment in correspondence courses and assisted them with the course work, including supplying answers on final examinations and materials for course assignments and papers. For example, a former assistant coach administered two examinations himself and provided the answers to the examinations. In another case, a prospective student-athlete was improperly allowed to take an examination home to complete. When he failed the examination, an assistant men's basketball coach completed an extra-credit assignment for the prospective student-athlete.

- Without the fraudulent credit, the four prospective student-athletes would not have graduated from the junior colleges and would not have been certified as eligible for intercollegiate athletics participation. The institution, as a result, awarded the student-athletes scholarships and permitted them to practice when they were not eligible.

- The former head men's basketball coach demonstrated a lack of control over the men's basketball program and his assistant coaches. The committee noted that the head coach completely neglected to conduct any of the monitoring activities expected of a Division I men's basketball program and thus was directly responsible for fostering an atmosphere in which major violations occurred. Except for one course for one prospective student-athlete, the committee did not find sufficient credible evidence that the head coach was aware of the academic fraud while it was occurring. However, the committee believed "it was clear that he should have been aware of the academic fraud and could have prevented its occurrence."

- All four coaches involved in this case violated NCAA standards of ethical conduct. In addition to the involvement in arranging for fraudulent academic credit, all three assistant coaches provided false and misleading information to the university, conference and NCAA.

- A friend of a fifth prospective student-athlete received impermissible free lodging, meals and entertainment during the prospective student-athlete's official visit.

- There were also several secondary violations uncovered during the investigation involving improper contacts with prospective student-athletes and improperly providing meals and lodging.

The committee considered the following corrective actions self-imposed by Baylor:

- Placed the institution's men's basketball program on institutional probation for two years, beginning October 7, 1994.

- Declared the involved student-athletes ineligible for intercollegiate athletics at the university at the beginning of the investigation.

- Replaced all members of the men's basketball coaching staff who were employed at the time the violations occurred.

- Hired a full-time compliance coordinator.
- Relocated the men's basketball offices from the Ferrell Center to the athletics department offices to better monitor the program.

The Committee on Infractions adopted as its own the following penalties self-imposed by the institution:

- The men's basketball team ended its 1994-95 season with its last regular-season game and was not allowed to participate in any postseason competition.

- The institution's men's basketball team was not allowed to appear on television during the 1994-95 season, with the exception of one away game that was televised in the opponent's locale because of an existing television contract. The institution did not accept any revenue for this broadcast and forfeited all television distribution money for men's basketball.

- The institution reduced the number of available men's basketball scholarships by two in 1994-95 (from 13 to a maximum of 11) and by three in 1995-96 (to a maximum of 10).

- Reduced the number of expense-paid visits during 1994-95 by three to a maximum of nine.

- Reduced the number of men's basketball coaches by one from the number allowed for the 1994-95 season.

- The institution's president shall recertify that all athletics policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

The committee commended the university for its quick and decisive responses during the processing of the case and for its significant self-imposed penalties, which were consistent with NCAA penalties for major violations. The committee praised the university's quick acceptance of responsibility for the violations. As a result of these actions, the committee declined to impose any further penalties on the university. Had the former coaches involved in the case still been employed at Baylor, the university could have been subject to additional penalties.

The committee did impose a show-cause requirement on each of the four former coaches. The show-cause requirement means that if the coach seeks employment in an athletically related position at an NCAA member institution during the period of the penalty, he and the involved institution will be asked to appear before the Committee on Infractions to determine whether the coach's athletically related duties should be limited at the new institution.

The show-cause requirement for the head men's basketball coach will remain in place for a five-year period ending September 1, 1999. The committee imposed two years of this penalty for the head coach's involvement in academic fraud and extended it for three additional years for his lack of control over the men's basketball program. One former assistant men's basketball coach is under a show-cause requirement for seven years, ending September 1, 2001. The other two former assistant men's basketball coaches face five-year show cause requirements, ending June 1, 1999.

As required by NCAA legislation for any institution in a major infractions case, Baylor is subject to the NCAA's repeat-violator provisions for a five-year period beginning on August 11, 1995.

Should Baylor or any of the three coaches who participated in the processing of this case wish to appeal this decision, they must submit a written notice of appeal to the NCAA executive director no later than 15 days from the date of this release. The NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee, a separate group of people, hears such appeals.

The members of the Committee on Infractions who heard this case are Richard J. Dunn, divisional dean of humanities, University of Washington; Jack H. Friedenthal, dean of the school of law, George Washington University; Roy F. Kramer, commissioner, Southeastern Conference (acting chair); Frederick B. Lacey, attorney, LeBoeuf, Lamb, Greene and MacRae, and a retired judge; Beverly F. Ledbetter, vice-president and general counsel, Brown University; James L. Richmond, retired judge and attorney; and Yvonne (Bonnie) L. Slatton, chair of the department of physical education and sports studies, University of Iowa. Committee chair David Swank, professor of law, University of Oklahoma, recused himself from this case because of his connection to an institution that, next year, will be in the same conference as Baylor.

The complete report of the Committee on Infractions will be published in the October 2 issue of The NCAA Register.

I soccer community targets bylaw that it claims unfairly puts the squeeze on club participation

BY GARY T. BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Division I soccer coaches have a two-pronged opinion regarding presidential reform: They don't dispute the need to keep the "student" in "student-athlete," but they want to put a little more soccer back in the player.

The focus of their concern is NCAA Bylaw 14.7.1.1, which prohibits Division I student-athletes in sports other than basketball from playing for any outside teams during the academic year. The rule, which became effective in August 1991, essentially ended the marriage between collegiate soccer and outside club teams, an outlet many college players previously had used to further their game.

Coupled with cutbacks in the number of regular-season games and the number of nontraditional-segment playing dates, the restriction ignited discontent among Division I coaches that continues to smolder.

But recent attempts to amend the bylaw, part of the NCAA's presidential reform package, have been squashed. Although feelings on the issue run deep in the soccer community, coaches have failed in each of the last two years to find the eight sponsors necessary to propose legislation.

Divisions II and III gained relief from the rule in 1993 when legislation was passed allowing participation outside the regular season, but Division I wasn't included in the exemption.

No evidence exists

Jim Sheldon, executive director of the National Soccer Coaches Association of America (NSCAA), has headed attempts to get legislation on the table, but has been unable to get a foot in the door.

"We made a pitch last year to the Presidents Commission Liaison Committee," Sheldon said. "And the message we got back was that the reform was an attempt to put the 'student' back in 'student-athlete.' We support that goal, but there's no empirical evidence that allowing kids to play on club teams will hurt academic performance any more than the kid who plays in a local band or is a stringer for a local newspaper or is holding down a part-time job at Burger King."

"This is symptomatic of a lot of rules that single out the student-athlete and try to separate them from the student body. You end up restricting some of their personal freedom and decision-making in ways that other students are not restricted."

Coaches say the goal is to provide players access to club teams in order to further their development, and they argue that those players should be free to participate in a chosen field. They say the effect of the bylaw is the same as prohibiting a member of a school's marching band from playing in a pick-up band on weekends.

Violates rights?

Bruce Arena, coach at four-time defending Division I men's soccer champion University of Virginia, goes one step further. He thinks the rule violates constitutional rights.

"How can the NCAA tell kids what to do with their free time?" he said. "Students can play on club teams — why can't student-athletes? How would you like it if your season ends the second week of November and then you're told you can't play soccer for the rest of the year? And the reason given is that it interferes with study time. The people who say that can't be aware of anything happening on a college campus. Not only is it unfair, but it doesn't interfere with academics, it's not a cost-containment issue, and it's what the kids want to do."

"Many players have grown up in the club system," said Indiana University, Bloomington, men's coach Jerry Yeagley. "We need these games to continue to develop players. Many schools don't have the facilities or the staff to have good off-season training programs."

Sheldon cites some incongruities in the rule, including the exemption for Divisions II and III. He also noted that players from individual sports can compete with clubs in the off-season (as long as they do not represent their schools), while a team sport player cannot.

He said the restrictions have prompted fears that a serious soccer player does not play enough games during the year to allow that athlete to reach the next level of competition.

"I'm not saying that college soccer is in the business only to produce professional players," Sheldon said, "but if a kid wanted to reach the next level, he is restricted in the amount of games he can play."

Affects other sports

Sheldon said the desire to amend the legislation exists not only in soccer, although soccer apparently is the most impacted because of its traditional relationship with club teams.

Since the restriction was adopted, in fact, 14 men and four women soccer players have been involved in appeals for restoration of eligibility as a result of violations of rule. Women's volleyball had the next highest number of infractions, with five.

Other coaches associations have voiced support, particularly the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA), but Sheldon said the AVCA board believed legislation would be defeated even if it reached a vote. Presidential reform was cited as the roadblock.

The NSCAA approached the Big East Conference with a proposal last spring, but talks stalled when Big East compliance coordinators said they believed an amendment would not be viewed favorably by a reform-focused membership. And in March, the Collegiate Commissioners Association's compliance administrators discouraged "opening up further" an Atlantic Coast Conference-sponsored proposal adopted in 1994 that allows outside competition during a school's published vacation period.

Many coaches believe soccer is caught in a crossfire of reform aimed primarily at football and basketball. Hence, some think that schools and conferences are hesitant to sponsor legislation regarding sports other than football or basketball.

Overshadowed

Joe Morrone, men's soccer coach at the University of Connecticut and chair of the NSCAA Division I soccer coaches committee, believes conferences' increasing impact on legislation has made individual needs tougher to address.

"Most conferences are concerned more with football and basketball," he said. "When conferences put their chips down and ask other conferences to support them, they look for issues regarding football and basketball. Few conferences want to use up a favor for something other than football or basketball."

Compounding the problem now is a sense of urgency as Major League Soccer gears up to begin play. There is a feeling that premier players may be enticed to choose the professional ranks over a restrictive college game.

"If there is a perception that a good player can't reach his or her potential because of these restrictions," said Sheldon, "then they may leave college early or bypass it altogether. That's been just a ripple so far because of players having to go overseas to play professionally, but now that Major League Soccer is on the horizon, that ripple could become a much larger disturbance."

Looking at alternatives

The NSCAA, while continuing to pursue a revision of legislation, also has researched alternative solutions — including possible extension of a waiver procedure for players selected to participate in Olympic, Pan American or World University Game competition to include those who participate in national championships conducted by national governing bodies.

Morrone said that even an increase in nontraditional-segment playing dates would help.

"The majority of schools would be better served if they were allowed to have more playing dates," he said. "Most schools would accept that. Then the outside-competition legislation wouldn't be as much of a factor."

"The five games in the off-season is better than nothing," said Yeagley, "but still not what is needed to develop players."

Arena said the NSCAA will continue to pursue the issue, but without widespread support from athletics administrators, it is not likely that anything short of a lawsuit will bring change.

"I really believe that if someone chose to sue over this issue, it would stand up in the courts," he said.

"The NSCAA has tried very hard," Yeagley said. "It may just be a matter of when rules become federated, then, hopefully.... But we'd like to not have to wait until then."

"Maybe the NCAA isn't looking at it like we do. I don't think we're being unrealistic or doing something that's not in the best interests of the student-athlete. But different people look at the issue from different viewpoints — that's why it's difficult for those of us in soccer to understand the logic."

Administrative Committee minutes

Conference No. 16 September 13, 1995

1. Acting for the NCAA Council: a. Took the following actions on committee appointments:

(1) Appointed Mike Maynard, football coach, University of Redlands, to the Football Rules Committee, replacing Robert F. Reade, retired from Augustana College (Illinois).

(2) Appointed Jody Mooradian, director of athletics, Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, to the Interpretations Committee, replacing Richard A. Johanninger, formerly at Washburn University of Topeka but no longer at a Division II institution.

(3) Appointed Jack Parker, men's ice hockey coach, Boston University, as one of the two NCAA representatives to the board of directors of USA Hockey, replacing Rick Comley, Northern Michigan University, chair of the Division I Men's Ice Hockey Committee.

(4) Appointed Dennis Bridges, director of athletics and men's basketball coach, Illinois Wesleyan College, to the Division III Men's Basketball Committee, replacing Tony LaScala, retired from Illinois Benedictine College.

b. Approved a request by the Recruiting Committee to revise NCAA Bylaw 30.15 to specify that the operator of a summer basketball event for which certification is being sought must conduct, as a component of the event, an educational session that includes a review of initial-eligibility standards; agreed to consider on the September 27 conference whether Bylaw 13.13 should be amended to apply the same requirement to institutional camps; and agreed to amend Bylaw 30.10.7.2 to specify as a dead period the Wednesday before the NCAA Division I Field Hockey Championship through noon on the day after the championship.

c. Approved a request by the University of Arizona for an incidental-expense waiver per Bylaw 16.13.1 to permit the institution to provide a continental breakfast for parents and student-athletes on parents' weekend.

d. Approved a request by Brigham Young University for permission to appeal to the Division I Steering Committee the denial by the Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers of its request for a waiver of Bylaw 14.3; and noted that the appeal would be in written form, as opposed to in person, at the Council's October 9-11 meeting.

e. Affirmed that the October 1996 Council meeting would be at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, Kansas City, Missouri.

2. Report of actions taken by the NCAA executive director per Constitution 4.3.2.

a. Acting for the Council:

(1) Granted a request from Youngstown State University to replace a football coach on a temporary basis per Bylaw 11.7.1.1.2.

(2) Granted a request per Bylaw 13.7.1.4 from the University of Kansas to use an alternate facility for home contests in the sport of women's soccer due to the renovation of its own facility.

(3) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.7.6.1(a) to permit student-athletes from two institutions to participate in qualifying tryouts for competition in the Pan American Games.

(4) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.7.6.1(c) to permit student-athletes from various institutions to participate in competition involving national teams in baseball, basketball, diving, gymnastics, rifle, swimming, tennis, and track and field.

(5) Granted waivers per Bylaw 14.7.6.2(b) to permit student athletes from various institutions to participate in all-star foreign tours through People to People Sports Committee, Inc. (Italy, Spain and Belgium).

(6) Granted residence-requirement waivers per Bylaw 14.8.1.2(c) to two student-athletes from the University of Mississippi.

(7) Granted a waiver per Bylaw 15.5.1.4.4 to provide aid to a student-athlete who originally was diagnosed with a career-ending injury to receive aid and not be considered a counter for the previous academic year.

(8) Granted waivers per Bylaw 16.13.1. to permit institutions to provide incidental expenses in these situations:

(a) To student-athletes to attend funerals of members of the student-athletes' families.

(b) To student-athletes to return to their homes to be with family members who were terminally ill, seriously injured or hospitalized.

(c) To the mothers of student-athletes to be with their sons due to surgery or serious injuries sustained from an automobile accident.

(d) To student-athletes to meet with candidates for a head coaching position.

b. Acting for the Executive Committee:

(1) Granted waivers for championships eligibility per Bylaw 31.2.1.3. to North Carolina State University, which failed to confirm annually the sponsorship of its varsity outdoor track team as specified in Bylaw 18.4.2.1(e).

(2) Granted a waiver for championships eligibility per Bylaw 31.2.1.3 to the University of Hawaii at Hilo, Lane College, Mansfield University of Pennsylvania and Stonehill College for failing to meet the deadline for submitting the enrollment and persistence-rates disclosure form (95-6b).

dent-athlete exit interviews).

■ Be a senior advisor outside of the athletics department to the chief executive officer on matters related to intercollegiate athletics.

■ Represent the institution to the NCAA and to athletics conferences.

■ Be an active member of the campus intercollegiate athletics board or committee.

FARA realizes that important differences in faculty athletics representative responsibilities almost certainly will continue to exist across our campuses. The responsibilities listed above, however, illustrate the role that FARA believes to be central to the duties of faculty athletics representatives on many campuses.

It also should be re-emphasized that faculty athletics representatives are not interested in "micro-managing" the affairs of athletics departments.

We share a partnership with athletics directors, other athletics administrators and leaders of other campus entities and wish to preserve an appropriate balance between the demands of being a student and an athlete on our nation's campuses.

This column is intended to provide a faculty voice. We therefore invite all members of FARA to consider submitting articles about their work or views on intercollegiate athletics for inclusion in future columns.

Please submit such articles to Percy Bates, University of Michigan, or Jerry L. Kingston, Arizona State University.

Percy Bates is professor of education and faculty athletics representative at the University of Michigan. Jerry L. Kingston is professor of economics and faculty athletics representative at Arizona State University. Kingston also is chair of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee.

Women's basketball gains TV exposure

Two cable networks have announced unprecedented coverage of intercollegiate women's basketball for the coming season.

A 64-game schedule of games involving NCAA teams or student athletes was announced September 13 by ESPN and Prime Sports announced a day earlier that it will televise 10 women's games on Sunday nights this season.

ESPN and ESPN2 will televise 25 Division I Women's Basketball Championship games — including prime-time coverage of the Women's Final Four March 29 and 31 in Charlotte, North Carolina — as part of its new contract with the NCAA. Fifteen of the 25 games will be on ESPN.

The networks also will present 23 regular-season games, seven conference-championship games and the Division II Women's Basketball Championship final, as well as eight exhibition games featuring the USA Basketball women's national team.

In all, 42 of the 64 games will appear on ESPN2, including a prime-time game-of-the-week series on Friday evenings from January into March.

Prime Sports announced September 12 it will televise 10 women's games on Sunday nights beginning December 17. The series will run through February 25, except for Christmas Eve.

Conference games from the Big Ten, Pacific-10, Southeastern, Southwest and Atlantic Coast Conferences will be featured on the telecasts.

The Prime Sports telecasts will be available in 45 million homes, network officials said.

University of Washington women's basketball coach Chris Gobrecht, whose team will appear twice on the Prime Sports telecasts, said the Sunday night games will do a lot for women's basketball. Too often in the past, she said, it was difficult to find out when women's games were on television.

NACDA plans seminar on fund-raising, marketing

The annual facilities, fund-raising and marketing workshop sponsored by the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics will be conducted November 12-14 at the Hyatt Regency in Atlanta.

NACDA, working in partnership with the United States Olympic Committee, will offer 12 presentations. Six of the sessions will focus on new or renovated facilities and topics specific to athletics facilities in the 1990s. Three sessions are devoted to athletics fund raising and development ideas for paying for new or renovated facilities. Three sessions focus on athletics or facility marketing issues.

NACDA will offer a special Olympic Venues Tour from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday, November 14.

Registration fee for the workshop is $85 for NACDA members and $35 for spouses. The fee includes the Sunday evening reception, Monday luncheon, a bus ticket for the Olympic Venues Tour and all workshop sessions.

Registration cards are due October 9.

Individuals interested in more information can contact Pat Manak or Dorothy Sikkila of NACDA at 216/892-4000.

Here is a description of planned workshop sessions:

would not retain both the current legislation and the new legislation, would help eliminate confusion. The committee, however, recommended that Manuals continue to include legislation that will take effect in a year following the academic year covered by a Manual.

In a review of gender and ethnic representation on NCAA committees, the committee agreed to express its concern to the Council regarding the low number of minority representatives on sports committees. According to a report reviewed by the committee, the percentage of minorities on sports committees is only 4.1 percent, compared to 13.2 percent on special committees, 18.3 percent on general committees and 15.4 percent in the Association's administrative structure.

Noting that the NCAA Administrative Committee had agreed more than a year ago that it would be desirable to phase out the use of consultants, the review and planning committee expressed substantial concern regarding what appears to be a blanket prohibition on the use of consultants by NCAA committees. The committee requested that Association policy provide for appropriate use of consultants, at the request of a committee and with the approval of the appropriate governing body.

Nine new interns enter NCAA national office program

For the eighth year, the Association has awarded internships at the NCAA national office under a program to enhance career opportunities in intercollegiate athletics for minorities and women.

The length of each internship will be approximately one year, during which on-the-job learning experiences will be provided for the ethnic-minority and female graduates who have expressed an interest in pursuing a career in intercollegiate athletics administration.

"Besides the work experience they will receive in specific NCAA areas, the nine new interns will be assigned mentors who will assist in their supervision, guidance and development," said Stanley D. Johnson, NCAA director of professional development.

"In addition, the interns will receive training to complement their academic and career exposure."

Following are the individuals (with undergraduate institution and field of study, and assigned NCAA area) who began 1995-96 internships September 11 under the ethnic-minority and women's enhancement programs:

Lia D. Camara (University of San Francisco, political science), championships — After obtaining a bachelor's degree in 1992, Camara stayed at San Francisco and earned a master's degree in sports and fitness management. Camara also served as a public relations assistant for the West Coast Conference, where she was responsible for the production of weekly press releases and league publications. She was a sports information assistant at San Francisco before that and also spent several months as a volleyball promotions assistant for Mizuno USA in San Francisco.

Camara

Jennifer Rae Chmel (Kutztown University of Pennsylvania, business administration), marketing and promotions — Chmel received a master's degree in sport management from the University of Connecticut in August. She has served in several different sport marketing and management capacities, including selling advertising for Host Communications, Inc., for the 1994 NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Championship East regional program. She also worked with the athletics marketing department at Connecticut while earning the master's degree. Chmel ran cross country and track and field while at Kutztown and was one of the school's top five distance runners.

Chmel

Mira J. Colman (Ball State University, journalism), education services — Colman earned a master's degree in sport administration from Bowling Green State University in August, compiling a 3.900 grade-point average. She graduated cum laude from Ball State after working both as a sports information assistant and as an assistant to the women's athletics director, where she helped coordinate a Title IX self-study. She served as an administrative intern at the Mid-American Athletic Conference for two years, in which time she assisted with various championships, marketing efforts and media guides. In addition, Colman served as a graduate teaching assistant at Bowling Green in 1994, assisting with undergraduate sport law courses.

Colman

Felicia D. Hall (University of Iowa, elementary education), marketing and promotions — Hall added a juris doctor from the University of Iowa College of Law to her vita last May. During her studies, she worked in the Sixth Judicial District Court of Iowa in Iowa City, assisting with research, writing projects and trial preparation. A four-year member of Iowa's varsity basketball team, Hall also has served as a research assistant for the men's athletics department, using research, analytical and writing skills to help upgrade the university's compliance manual.

Hall

Lori Ann Hendricks (Mount Holyoke College, politics and economics), education services — A captain of both the cross country and track teams at Mount Holyoke, Hendricks also received certification as a TAC Level I track and field coach from Union College (New York). She obtained a master's degree in sports management from Ohio State University, where she served a graduate assistantship with the department of recreation and intramural sports. She spent six months in 1993 as a physical education instructor at two primary schools in South Africa, where she developed an intramurals program including 12 schools in soccer, softball and basketball.

Hendricks

Heather Renee Lyke (University of Michigan, education), eligibility/enforcement — A four-year letter-winner and former team captain in softball at Michigan, Lyke established Wolverine records in stolen bases and was named to the all-Big Ten Conference academic team. She went on to earn a law degree from the University of Akron School of Law, where she graduated in the top third of her class. She was a law clerk at the Stark County Prosecutor's Office in Canton, Ohio, in 1994, where she interviewed potential plaintiffs and prepared juvenile criminal cases. She also spent four months as an intern for the International Management Group, Inc., working in client management and designing new client payment structures.

Lyke

Israel Negron (Robert Morris College, sports administration), legislative services — Negron has spent the last two years as a sports programmer in the Arlington County Department of Parks, Recreation and Community Resources in Arlington, Virginia, where he served as commissioner of the youth basketball and softball programs. He also was a liaison for the American Soccer League and several local youth soccer and lacrosse leagues. Negron was an assistant in the Robert Morris sports information department in 1992 and an administrative assistant in the school's basketball office from 1990 through 1992.

Negron

George K. Wynn (University of Georgia, criminal justice), compliance services — Wynn earned a master's degree in sports management from Georgia, where he served as an assistant to the recruiting coordinator, monitoring compliance and managing ticket reservations. Wynn was a National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame scholar-athlete while playing football as an undergraduate at Georgia. He also earned Southeastern Conference all-academic honors. Wynn spent a year with the Saskatchewan Roughriders professional football team from 1992 through 1993.

Wynn

Melanie L. Young (Iowa State University, English), public information — Young will receive a master's degree in sport management from Iowa State in 1997. For the past several months, she has been a graduate assistant in the athletics director's office and has assisted with the implementation of the university's new varsity women's soccer team. Young also researched and coordinated information for the school's commitment-to-equity portion of the NCAA self-study for athletics certification. A four-year letter-winner for Iowa State's varsity women's basketball team, Young was a two-year captain and was named Iowa State's female student-athlete of the year in 1994. She is a 1994 first-team all-Big Eight Conference scholar-athlete.

Drug-testing session scheduled at NACWAA conference

The NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports will offer a session at this year's National Association of Collegiate Women Athletic Administrators national conference on current topics in collegiate sports drug testing.

The session is scheduled for September 25 at the conference in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Speaking at the session will be

Topics include an overview of NCAA drug-testing programs, procedures for appealing NCAA drug tests and current trends in drug use, including use of masking agents.

Cindy A. Thomas, NCAA assistant director of sports sciences; Dr. Chris McGrew, chair of the drug-testing and drug-education subcommittee of the competitive-safeguards committee and chair of the department of family, community and emergency medicine at the University of New Mexico; and Dr. Larry Bowers, scientific director, sports medicine drug-identification laboratory, Indiana University Medical Center.

Topics include an overview of NCAA drug-testing programs, procedures for appealing NCAA drug tests and current trends in drug use, including use of masking agents. The program is designed to help collegiate administrators become knowledgeable about drug use and drug testing in the collegiate setting.

The competitive-safeguards committee identified the NACWAA organization as a target group since many directors, associate directors and assistant directors of athletics are administratively responsible for institutional-based drug-prevention programs and also handle compliance matters related to NCAA drug legislation.

Agents

Many say top prospective student-athletes commonly have agreements with agents as early as high school

everyday business, that those who do not offer them are at a significant disadvantage — if they are even still in business.

As for current student-athletes in the high-profile sports of football and men's basketball, insiders estimate that upwards of 70 percent are in contact with, and in many cases receive benefits from, sports agents. These insiders add that contact with the projected first- and second-round National Football League draft prospects and the top 50 college basketball players declaring annually for the National Basketball Association draft approaches 100 percent.

"There's a statement (in the business) that if you've got a first- or second-round draft choice on the team, that he's had contact (with an agent)," said Bobby Korsten, who operates the Krider Basketball Camp in Cincinnati. "I would agree with that."

Most, if not all, sports agents also appear to agree that recruitment of prospective professional athletes is occurring earlier in student-athletes' lives than ever before.

With abundant material available on high-school student-athletes and a growing number of football and basketball camps, agents have ample opportunity to scout and solicit student-athletes long before they think about attending college — let alone before they are eligible for a professional draft. In fact, recruitment has become so widespread that many agents and insiders say that all blue-chip student-athletes entering college already have an agreement — either in principle or on paper — with a sports agent.

"As soon as an individual is recognized as a potential professional athlete, I will guarantee you the mechanisms are in place already to establish a relationship with some agent somewhere," said Jim Grossman, a financial consultant at First Financial Strategies in Phoenix who coordinates investment opportunities for a number of professional athletes.

Recruitment is not limited to blue-chip prospects. In fact, more and more agents — specifically those looking to gain a niche in the business — are recruiting student-athletes with little professional potential on the chance that the athlete may show unexpected development. In short, agents are willing to gamble several thousand dollars on a potential future payoff of three to five percent of a professional contract — the traditional agent's fee.

"You can't believe sometimes the kid who is just average — and whose chances, at best, are free agency — who signs with an agent," Lashbrook said. "They will make promises about where (the student-athletes) will be drafted. There is no accountability. If the kid does not make it, (the agent) will sign another kid."

Two recruiting methods

Agents generally use two standard methods for soliciting prospective clients. One is through a so-called runner, a third-party individual hired by an agent to develop a relationship with student-athletes. Runners typically receive a percentage of the agent's cut of a realized professional contract.

The other method — an even more disturbing one for intercollegiate athletics — is for sports agents and runners to work through a coach or athletics department administrator in lining up clients.

Runners typically are young men, just a few years older than the student-athletes. They attend parties with athletes, take them to dinner and buy them clothes, among other things, to strike up a friendship. That friendship, the runner dreams, will develop into a contract with the agent for whom the runner toils.

Many runners work for nothing other than the commission they receive when a player agrees to sign with the agent the runner is pushing.

"You have to remember, most of these agents are attorneys who graduated from schools who have a connection, and a lot of times they've handled legal stuff for the coach," Korsten said. "That was their 'in.' Usually, a coach will take his star player and say, 'You've got a chance to do this, this and this. You don't want to go with a bad guy, here's what I would recommend.' You give that guy access. He makes the first contact. That's where they are feeding the agent."

Once a relationship is developed, it must be cultivated. In many cases that translates into a sports agent providing the student-athlete and/or his family and friends with financial or other benefits.

"As soon as an individual is recognized as a potential professional athlete, I will guarantee you the mechanisms are in place already to establish a relationship with some agent somewhere."

JIM GROSSMAN

Financial consultant, First Financial Strategies in Phoenix

Other runners receive salaries and other benefits from an agent. Still others are employees at sports-representation firms.

Runners befriend student-athletes directly or through friends and acquaintances of the prized student-athlete. They strike up friendships with current and former teammates, parents, girlfriends, and just about anyone with whom the student-athlete comes into contact regularly.

Agents increasingly are providing benefits to student-athletes who possess little to no professional potential, simply because they can help reach a star player.

More often than not, runners solicit several members of a team at once. They often recruit for more than one agent at any one time. A source for cash and other benefits, he becomes part of the student-athlete's, and in some instances the team's, inner circle.

"You're usually in contact with a player by his junior year," said Martinez. "If they're having a good or outstanding sophomore season, you're usually on them already."

Cultivating relationships

In most cases, runners have unlimited and unlimited access to student-athletes. Blending in with the student population, they make contact at campus parties, at the student-athlete's dormitory or apartment, and in restaurants, shopping malls or other places student-athletes are known to frequent. They also may receive credentials from athletes to attend games and may travel to road games as well.

"What rules the day is establishing a relationship," Grossman said.

If a runner is unable to successfully steer a student-athlete into a signed contractual agreement with an agent, the agent may work through a student-athlete's coaches to make a more powerful pitch. Many times an agent simply will ask the coach for his help in bending the student-athlete's ear toward the agent. Depending upon the circumstances, kickbacks may be involved.

Depending on the potential of a student-athlete, tens of thousands of dollars may be spent on that athlete or directed to those close to the athlete — before a contract ever is signed.

"The proven way (of obtaining clients) is the way that agents have conducted themselves," Grossman said. "That is, if you want to get in the business, you can buy their interest. Does it make sense? Certainly it makes sense if you can go out and spend $50,000 and know you may be able to invest $5 million."

Spending heaps of money on a potential client is no guarantee of a "hit." The sweepstakes winner is not always the sports agent who spends the most money.

Legal ramifications

With an estimated 3,000 self-proclaimed agents currently scouring college campuses, agents are finding their biggest challenge to be other agents. Client-stealing has become the norm. The practice has become so rampant that earlier this year, the NFL Players Association incorporated a regulation into its agents' code of ethics specifically addressing client-stealing.

"There are a lot of agents out there now," former runner Martinez said. "Guys trying to break into the business. Every year, you have an influx of new agents and they will compete very hard. It just makes it really rough."

Agents routinely find themselves in court as plaintiffs or defendants in cases involving what amounts to raids on other agents' stables of clients.

"The agent who breaks the rules can defend himself by claiming it's jealousy," Lashbrook said. "It's always one lie leads to another."

The lies not only have led sports agents into run-ins with one another, but confrontations with state lawmakers.

One of the consequences of the Walters-Bloom case was the crop of states that passed agent-related laws — legislation designed to deter sports agents from repeating the transgressions of the Walters-Bloom case.

North Carolina is one of the states with tough sports-agent legislation. People interested in discussing their services with a student-athlete at any North Carolina college or university must complete a 10-page application and pay a registration fee. Background checks are made on applicants to reduce the likelihood that agents with problem-filled backgrounds are authorized to act as sports agents in the state.

North Carolina is unique in that its sports-agent registration process focuses not just on registration, but certification.

"You've got to understand that whether you're a lawyer or a janitor

In Texas, sports agents are required to register with the state, not only to pursue intercollegiate student-athletes at Texas higher-education institutions, but to represent professional athletes affiliated with Texas franchises. Recently, the Texas state legislature strengthened the law by giving lawmakers subpoena power to obtain information needed in the enforcement of the legislation.

"Texas probably has gone further than a lot of states in putting forth this bill and with the requirements that it has," said Guy Joyner, chief of the legal-support unit for the statutory-documents section of the Texas secretary of state's office. "As with any sort of enforcement, it's a matter of finding the violation and getting the evidence to prove a violation exists."

Both Newsom and Joyner concede that relatively few cases have led to convictions under their respective state laws. But many see the efforts states have taken as one of the few keys to preventing cases from becoming as severe as the Walters-Bloom case.

"As cutthroat as that business is and as hard as they need to work to get clients — because there's a limited client base out there — to get the best ones they have to get in their ear," said Bill Morgan, assistant athletics director for compliance at the University of Arizona. "Unless we can get something going with our state legislature to make it some kind of criminal offense to mess with these guys, then nothing is going to happen."

Martinez would go a step further — intervention by the Federal government.

"I think the only agency that could police these agents is the FBI," he said. "Those are the only people that could police this. It's just impossible to control."

Next week: Former student-athletes discuss their experiences with sports agents and the circumstances that lead many of them to accept enticements.

MASTERS OF SCIENCE IN SPORT ADMINISTRATION CANISIUS COLLEGE

Sport Administration. It's more than a traditional physical education program. It combines business management, marketing, promotions, operations, finance, and much more!

We are seeking individuals who

- are current professionals in this industry seeking an advanced degree;
- wish to explore another career option;
- are recent undergraduates, looking for a career in sport management.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

INTERNSHIPS

We offer a wide variety of internships, from the Bills to the Bisons and Sabres to the Yankees and Mighty Ducks of Anaheim, across the USA and Canada. Although Internships provide the student with professional experience, they do not guarantee a permanent position.

PROGRAM

Tailor your program for summer study! MSA students are required to successfully complete MBA-foundation courses.

Graduate housing is available!

SOUND INTERESTING?

Students must meet the admission criteria of our AACSB-accredited MBA program. A personal interview and a written essay are required.

Men's, women's all-academic gymnastics teams named

Nebraska wins women's team crown

The National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches/Women has announced its all-academic team and individual awards for 1995.

Nebraska claimed the academic team title with a cumulative grade-point average of 3.561 (4.000 scale). Nebraska finished second in 1994.

Southern Utah, which claimed the 1994 academic team title, earned runner-up honors with a 3.488 GPA. Cal State Fullerton (ninth in 1994), Bridgeport and Western Michigan rounded out the top five.

Ten teams joined Nebraska, Southern Utah and Cal State Fullerton as repeat honorees from 1994: Texas Woman's University, Michigan, George Washington, Illinois, Stanford, Yale, Oregon State, Washington, Alabama and Denver.

Individually, 184 individuals were honored as all-America scholar-athletes, including Beth Wymer of Michigan, 1995 individual uneven bars champion. Wymer posted a GPA of 3.740.

Twenty-six gymnasts, including Joy Taylor and Kim DeHaan of Nebraska, Angela Howard of Michigan State, and Monique Taylor of Texas Woman's University, earned perfect GPAs. Taylor, DeHaan, Howard and Taylor all posted perfect GPAs in 1994.

Following are the team and individual honorees, with grade-point averages provided by the coaches association:

Teams

1. Nebraska, 3.561 grade-point average; 2. Southern Utah, 3.488; 3. Cal State Fullerton, 3.430; 4. Bridgeport, 3.400; 5. Texas Woman's University, 3.372; 6. Western Michigan, 3.360; 7. George Washington, 3.357; 8. Illinois, 3.335; 9. Yale, 3.330; 10. Michigan, 3.315; 11. Cornell, 3.281; 12. Oregon State, 3.276; 13. Washington, 3.275; 14. San Jose State, 3.270; 15. Bowling Green, 3.260; 16. Denver, 3.257; 17. Alabama, 3.241; 18. Stanford, 3.180; 19. LSU, 3.173; 20. Pittsburgh, 3.159.

Oklahoma grabs men's team title

The National Association of Collegiate Gymnastics Coaches/Men has announced its all-academic team and individual awards for 1995.

Oklahoma claimed the academic team title with a cumulative grade-point average of 3.300 (4.000 scale). Oklahoma finished 12th academically in 1994.

Brigham Young finished second, while CCNY moved up eight spots from 1994 to claim the third spot. Syracuse and New Mexico rounded out the top five. Nebraska, team runner-up at the 1995 National Collegiate Men's Gymnastics Championships, finished ninth.

Individually, 49 individuals were honored as all-America scholar-athletes, including four-time all-academic honorees Rick Kieffer of Nebraska and Todd Mercer of James Madison. Kieffer, 1995 NCAA individual horizontal bar champion, posted a 3.530 grade-point average in mechanical engineering, while Mercer compiled a 3.900 GPA in health sciences.

Ten gymnasts, including Ted Harris of Nebraska, earned perfect GPAs. Harris also posted a perfect GPA in 1994.

Massachusetts' Calipari signs 10-year pact

John Calipari, head men's basketball coach at Massachusetts for the past seven years, has signed a new 10-year contract to remain in that post.

Calipari has led the Minutemen to Division I Basketball Championship appearances in the last four seasons. Last season, the Minutemen went 28-7, were ranked No. 1 nationally (by United Press International) for the first time in school history and advanced to the East regional final.

Calipari is the first Massachusetts coach to string together four consecutive 20-victory seasons. Since the beginning of the 1990-91 season, he has not lost more than two straight games, and he has a 68-13 career home record (.840).

The former point guard began his collegiate playing career at North Carolina-Wilmington and graduated from Clarion, where he averaged 10 points per game. After graduation, Calipari was appointed volunteer assistant coach at Kansas. In 1983, he was hired as the recruiting coordinator at Vermont, but was convinced to return to Kansas as a full-time assistant. He moved to Pittsburgh as recruiting coordinator in 1985, and played a role in two NCAA and one NIT tournament appearances by the Panthers. He was selected as head coach at Massachusetts in 1988.

Deaths

Damon Terrell, an Arizona football player, died September 7, a month after collapsing during a workout. Doctors said he might have become dehydrated during a training run and that a series of related traumas then affected his muscles, kidneys and large intestine. Terrell, a 6-foot-3, 246-pound senior, caught six passes last year for 56 yards as a reserve. He transferred to Arizona from El Camino Junior College in Torrance, California.

Rob Crowley, No. 1 assistant women's soccer coach at St. Mary's (California) for the past five years, died August 6. The 1978 Texas Tech graduate helped guide the soccer team to a berth in the 1995 NCAA Division I championships.

Ted Collins, head men's tennis coach for 16 years at St. Mary's (California), died March 26. Collins compiled a career coaching record of 220-196 in his 16 years with the Gaels and led his teams to eight consecutive third-place finishes at the West Coast Conference championships.

Hugo Hollas, football defensive back from 1965 to 1967 at Rice, died September 6. He was 49. He earned all-Southwest Conference honors in 1967 when he led the Owls in interceptions with five for 63 yards. He later played professional football for the New Orleans Saints (1970 to 1972) and San Francisco 49ers (1974).

Bill Esposito, retired sports information director at St. John's (New York), died of a heart attack at his home September 9. He was 67. Esposito, who retired last year, also served at St. John's, his alma mater, as assistant director for public relations. He served the College Sports Information Directors of America (CoSIDA) as president in 1976-77 and was elected to its hall of fame in 1984. That same year, he received the Arch Ward Award, CoSIDA's highest honor. Esposito also served the National Invitation Tournament and Heisman Trophy in various public relations capacities.

The Market

Readers of The NCAA News are invited to use The Market to locate candidates for positions open at their institutions, to advertise open dates in their playing schedules or for other purposes relating to the administration of intercollegiate athletics. In addition, individuals seeking employment in intercollegiate athletics also are welcome to place positions-wanted advertisements.

Rates: 65 cents per word for general classified advertising (agate type) and $32 per column inch for display advertising for member institutions. (Commercial display advertising is available only to NCAA corporate sponsors, official licensees and members, or agencies acting on their behalf.) Positions-wanted advertisements are placed on a prepayment basis only.

Word-counting example: "Position wanted. Retired athletics administrator seeks part-time work. Contact: John P. Doe, 1234 Main Street, Anytown, KS 99999-1234, or call 999/555-5555." (22 words x 65 cents = $14.30)

1995 Column No. 33

NCAA Bylaw 13.4.1

Printed recruiting materials

Divisions I and II institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.4.1, it is not permissible to provide recruiting materials to a prospect (including general correspondence related to athletics) until September 1 at the beginning of the prospect's junior year in high school. It is permissible, however, to send prospects summer camp brochures, questionnaires and NCAA educational materials prior to September 1 of the prospect's junior year in high school. Please note that institutions are permitted to provide only the printed materials listed in Bylaw 13.4.1 to prospects, coaches of prospects or any other individual responsible for teaching or directing an activity in which the prospect is involved. An institution is not permitted to provide prospects with any recruiting materials not listed in Bylaw 13.4.1.

Effective August 1, 1995, Division I institutions are permitted to provide to prospects with general correspondence recruiting materials that are printed on plain white paper with black ink. Thus, photocopies of items, including newspaper clippings (which may not be assembled into any form of a scrapbook), may be attached to the general correspondence that is sent to the prospects, provided it appears on plain white paper with black ink. Further, during its March 16, 1995, meeting, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that such legislation does not restrict institutions to providing only photocopies of magazines and newspaper clippings. It is permissible for an institution to provide prospects other low-cost information (e.g., photocopy of schedule card) that is printed on plain white paper with black ink (as attachments to general correspondence).

During its June 22, 1995, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that it is not permissible for an institution's admissions department to provide information to a prospect related specifically to the institution's athletics program (e.g., fact sheet, brochure) unless such information is general in nature and is included as part of an official publication or packet of information produced by the admissions department that relates to all institutional programs.

NCAA Bylaw 13.7.1.2.4

Academic requirements for official visit prior to the early signing period

Division I institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.7.1.2.4, institutions may provide an expense-paid visit to a prospect in a sport that has an early signing period for the National Letter of Intent prior to the initial early signing date in that sport only if the prospect has presented the institution with a combined SAT score of 700 (if taken prior to April 1, 1995), or 820 (if taken on or after April 1, 1995), or PSAT score of 82 or a minimum ACT or PLAN (previously PACT Plus) total score of 68, and also has presented a minimum 2.000 grade-point average in at least seven core courses. A prospect in the applicable sports who does not present these academic credentials may not begin an official visit until 24 hours after the last day of the early signing period in that sport.

During its December 3, 1992, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that the requisite ACT or SAT score that a prospect must achieve in order to receive an expense-paid visit prior to the early signing period in a sport must be achieved on a national testing date under national testing conditions. Further, in accordance with Bylaw 13.7.1.2.4.4, a prospect's fulfillment of the academic requirements for an official visit prior to the early signing period must be certified by the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse.

Academic requirements for official visit

Divisions I and II institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3, institutions may not provide an expense-paid visit to a prospect who has not presented the institution with a score from a PSAT, SAT, PLAN or ACT test taken on a national testing date under national testing conditions. The score must be presented in writing through an official high-school or testing-agency document, but does not have to be received directly from the testing agency. A foreign or learning-disabled prospect who requires a special administration of the PSAT, SAT, PLAN or ACT may present such a score upon the approval of the NCAA Academic Requirements Committee or the NCAA Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers.

During its October 22, 1992, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that an institution may use a photocopy or facsimile of an official high-school transcript for purposes of satisfying the requirement that a prospect must present the institution with a test score prior to making an official visit, even if the high school does not consider the photocopy or the facsimile an official high-school document. Further, pursuant to Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3.2, a Division I institution may not provide an expense-paid visit to a prospect who has not presented the institution with a high-school (or college) academic transcript. The academic transcript may be an unofficial photocopy of an official document from the prospect's high school (or collegiate institution). Finally, in accordance with Bylaw 13.7.1.2.3.3, a prospect's fulfillment of the academic requirements for an official visit may be certified by the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse. It is not mandatory that an institution use the clearinghouse to certify a prospect's fulfillment of these academic requirements.

Restructuring tops Commission agenda

Membership restructuring will be the primary item on the agenda of the NCAA Presidents Commission when it meets September 26-27 in Denver.

Both the full Commission and each of the division subcommittees will review the complete restructuring proposal, which will appear in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation. That publication was mailed September 23.

The proposal, which is cosponsored by the Commission and the NCAA Council, will be considered at the 1996 Convention in Dallas. If adopted, it would establish greater autonomy among the three divisions and would place a greater emphasis on presidential control of the Association.

Passage of the proposal would result in the elimination of the Presidents Commission, the NCAA Council and the current version of the NCAA Executive Committee. It also would result in a new committee structure.

In addition to reviewing the restructuring legislation, the Commission also will review its proposals (Nos. 2-1, 2-2, 2-4, 2-63, 2-64, 2-66, 2-67 and 2-121 in the Second Publication) and will review proposals submitted by the membership that relate to athletics reform.

The full Commission also will discuss the schedule for the Convention, will receive a report on a September meeting between NCAA officials and representatives of higher education and will receive a report on the membership moratorium that the Council imposed at its August meeting.

Also, reports will be presented by the Subcommittee on Strategic Planning (E. Roger Sayers, University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, chair), the Subcommittee on Minority Issues (John B. Slaughter, Occidental College, chair) and the Committee on Sportsmanship and Ethical Conduct in Intercollegiate Athletics (William E. Shelton, Eastern Michigan University, chair).

Other major items on the agenda for the full Commission include an update on the NCAA CHAMPS/Life Skills Program, a report on the academic progress of two-year college transfers and a report of a focus group reviewing benefits for student-athletes.

Other than membership restructuring, the agendas for the division subcommittees are mostly routine; however, the Division III group will discuss the proposed expansion of Division III championships, Division III membership requirements and Division III championship requirements.

Van Valkenburg

Retired NCAA director of statistics, 66, passes away September 11

"Klein passed on to me the things that Homer taught him, the special qualifying phrases needed," Van Valkenburg said. "There is a knack to writing about the extraordinary. The never-been-done-before are hard to come by. People use to ask Boda if such-and-such had ever been done before, and he would always say, 'Probably'...."

Van Valkenburg's interests in sports and research are tied together and began when he and his sister moved to Lawrence, Kansas, in 1938 — just before his 10th birthday — to be raised by his grandparents....

The interest in sports came from the next-door neighbors — his uncle R. B. Stevens and cousin Dick. Dick, then 17, got him interested in baseball. He was an avid fan of the Kansas City Blues, a New York Yankees farm club, and Van Valkenburg began collecting baseball books with money earned from a newspaper route and mowing lawns....

The interest in research was sparked by the two summers he accompanied his grandfather (who was a retired professor of botany at the University of Kansas and avid Jayhawks football fan) and grandmother on trips around Kansas to find certain species of flowers and photograph them where they grew....

By his senior year in high school, Van Valkenburg had quite a collection of sports books and was known as that "little so-and-so with a photographic memory for everything you never wanted to know" about sports history. It was the fall of 1945 and many of the Lawrence Journal-World's sportswriters were off to war.

"The sports editor came to our English class looking for someone to cover the high-school games," he said. "Everyone pointed at the little so-and-so. They paid me 10 cents a column inch and the managing editor warned me not to write long just to rake in more cash."

He continued to work for the Journal-World throughout his college career at Kansas, where he waited three years before deciding he wanted to be a journalist. In addition to covering Lawrence High School, Haskell Indian Junior College and KU games, he began researching old newspapers.

He compiled a game-by-game history of all Lawrence High School sports, which he gave to the high school; a history of Haskell football, which he gave to the publisher of Houlgate's Football Thesaurus and to Haskell; a Kansas basketball history, which he gave to the school; and a Missouri Valley Conference basketball history, which he gave to Cooke for publication in the NCAA Basketball Guide.

In 1954, he went to work for The Associated Press, first in St. Louis and then in Kansas City, covering sports.

"I was happy with The Associated Press and not seeking a new job when Lou Spry contacted me at a 1968 Missouri Valley preseason football press meeting about an NCAA job in New York," Van Valkenburg said. "The occasion was the 100th anniversary of college football coming up in 1969, and there was a need for someone to publicize it."

"That was too good to pass up, and I've never regretted it...."

"It's unbelievable how much more is being written about college sports on the national level than when I started with the NCAA," he said. "The special things I started — like toughest schedules, conference-vs.-conference statistics, most improved teams — now are being done by national publications. We used to have to beg people to take this information."

"If we had never existed, the Southern Cals, UCLAs and Nebraskas still would get the ink. But there are a lot of smaller schools that never would have. Now they do, and it perpetuates itself. That makes me feel good."
