Sports gambling an odds-on favorite for trouble

BY RONALD D. MOTT
STAFF WRITER

Over the past several years, a number of issues have dominated the landscape of intercollegiate athletics: initial-eligibility standards, gender equity, discussions of a Division I-A football playoff, "pay-for-play" and, more recently, sports agents and NCAA restructuring.

Gambling has not been as prominent an issue, but that may be changing.

Gambling in America may be as socially acceptable as it has ever been. Many cities and states have approved legalized gambling in one form or another in recent years.

Whether it is pari-mutuel racing or lotteries or riverboat gambling or casinos operated by Native American tribes, Americans are indulging in games of chance. They no longer have to travel to New Jersey or Nevada to find a blackjack or craps table.

That expansion of gambling even includes some illegal forms.

Sports betting, illegal in almost all locales, is thriving across the country, and a noted expert on compulsive gambling says that college students are especially vulnerable. Arnie Wexler, a former compulsive gambler who now consults on gambling disorders, says that last summer's disclosure that several University of Maryland, College Park, student-athletes bet on sporting events — including college games — could be repeated on hundreds of other campuses.

The FBI estimates that sports betting accounts for 50 percent of the $28 billion bet each year in the United States. NCAA Director of Enforcement Dirk L. Tait says $2.5 billion was bet illegally on the NCAA Final Four in 1995.

Studies have shown that six to eight percent of college students — a higher percentage than any other demographic group — are considered pathological gamblers, those believed to be out of control.

"I've spoken to administrators at colleges and you hear stories like, 'Well, the kids in our schools only gamble on cards,'" Wexler said. "A major college athletics director called me on the phone and said, 'We'd like for you to come and speak here, but you know our kids only play cards. They don't gamble on sporting events.' Now that's putting your head in the sand."

"Sports Illustrated ran around to 50 colleges.

Only one college person admitted there was a problem. I guarantee that you are a step away from a scandal in this country from someone shaving points. It is going to blow some college out of the water."

Previous gambling woes

Gambling troubles have plagued a number of NCAA institutions in recent years. Besides Maryland, schools that have experienced problems are Boston College; Bryant College; the University of Maine, Orono; Northwestern University; University of Rhode Island; and Tulane University. Athletes from the University of Kentucky and City College of New York were involved in major scandals in the 1950s.

"Gambling is a real concern," said NCAA President Eugene F. Corrigan, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference. "My gosh, look at our history. Gambling in basketball. Gam-

Senate tax legislation would clarify treatment of sponsorship revenue

BY RONALD D. MOTT
STAFF WRITER

A little-noted provision in the Senate version of the controversial Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1995 — a sweeping bill with big-ticket items such as cuts in Medicare, Medicaid and middle-class taxes — is of great interest to not-for-profit organizations that depend on revenue generated from corporate-sponsor agreements.

Section 12702 of the Senate bill would clarify the tax treatment of such revenue, assuring that in most instances the revenue would not be subjected to unrelated business income tax (UBIT).

The legislation, if enacted, would impact universities and their athletics programs, as well as the football bowl associations. It defines, in rather specific terms, the types of benefits that tax-exempt organizations could provide to corporate sponsors and protects revenue derived through a corporate-sponsorship agreement from UBIT.

Under the Senate's proposal, corporate-sponsorship revenue that is generated in return for the following types of acknowledgments would be exempt from UBIT:

■ Sponsor logos and slogans that contain comparative or qualitative descriptions of the sponsor's products, services, facilities or company. For example, the use of a corporation as a title sponsor of a postseason football bowl game, in and of itself, would be exempt from UBIT.

■ Sponsor locations and telephone numbers.

■ Value-neutral descriptions, including displays or visual depictions, of a sponsor's product line or services.

■ Sponsor brand or trade names and product or service listings.

"Advertising" revenue would continue to be subject to UBIT under the Senate proposal. Examples of the kind of advertising that would trigger tax liability are:

■ Qualitative or comparative language about a sponsor's products, services, facilities or company.

■ Price information or other indications of savings or value associated with a product or service.

■ An endorsement.

■ An inducement to purchase, sell or use the sponsor's product or service. Distribution of a sponsor's product to the general public at a sponsored event, whether for free or for remuneration, would not be considered an inducement to purchase, sell or use the sponsor's product.

It was the second consecutive title for the Lady Eagles and retiring head coach Sharon Taylor, who finished her 23-year coaching career at Lock Haven with five national championships. ## Basketball participation Basketball is the most popular participant sport in the United States, according to a national survey that has tracked play since 1987.

The survey, conducted by the American Basketball Council (a part of the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association), showed that 47.3 million people participated in basketball at least once in 1994.

The second most popular sport was volleyball, with 32.5 million players, followed by softball with 30.8 million.

The survey found that basketball participation has increased 32 percent since 1987. By sex, the increase has been 37 percent for males and 23 percent for females.

Restructuring

Oversight committee reviews growth issue

The Oversight Committee on the NCAA Membership Structure has agreed with a Division III recommendation that significant growth in a division should be identified as an "exceptional situation" in the proposed new governance structure for the Association.

The oversight committee's acknowledgment that membership growth in a division is an Association-wide issue is important because many administrators in Divisions II and III were concerned that, in the new governance structure, division resources might not expand as quickly as growth within a division.

For more information, see the November 6 issue of The NCAA News.

Title IX

OCR reviewing responses; guidelines release set

The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights is analyzing about 200 letters of comments and suggestions that it received in response to questions about its three-part Title IX compliance test during a recent 30-day comment period.

After reviewing the comments, the agency will release final clarification guidelines for the compliance test. OCR hopes to release the guidelines by the end of the year.

The comments forwarded to OCR ranged from suggestions to provide further clarity — particularly with the OCR's definition and interpretation of substantial proportionality (prong one) — to encouragement to refocus its efforts on enforcement, rather than interpretation, of the civil rights legislation.

Convention

Flat $100 fee to be used for delegates to '96 event

A flat registration fee of $100 per person will be charged for the 1996 NCAA Convention in Dallas.

The only exception will be for individuals representing commercial enterprises, in which case a $200 fee will be charged.

The registration fee covers delegate entertainment costs, such as the delegates reception, luncheons and the honors dinner.

Chief executive officers are reminded that NCAA Bylaw 5.1.3.1 stipulates that institutions or conferences that designate both a male and a female as voting or alternate delegates on the appointment-of-delegates form will be allowed to appoint four accredited delegates. In all other circumstances, institutions will be limited to not more than three delegates. They may have any number of visiting (nonvoting) delegates.

Registration fees will be collected at the registration counters at the Wyndham Anatole in Dallas. American Express, MasterCard and Visa credit cards will be accepted, along with personal or institutional checks.

The dates of the Convention are January 6-10, 1996.

Staff contact: Louis J. Spry.

Liaison committee

Appearance requests due by November 15

Groups that want to make an appearance before the NCAA Presidents Commission Liaison Committee have until November 15 to submit a request to appear before the committee.

Requests are to be sent to Stephen R. Morgan, NCAA group executive director for public affairs, at the NCAA national office.

The Liaison Committee will meet November 30 at the Hyatt Regency at the Dallas-Fort Worth airport.

FARA

Annual meeting begins November 16 in Atlanta

The annual fall meeting of the Faculty Athletics Representatives Association will be conducted November 16-17 at the Stouffer Renaissance Atlanta Hotel in Atlanta.

The meeting will begin at 2 p.m. November 16 with a session for all new faculty athletics representatives, and round-table discussions for all faculty athletics representatives are scheduled for that evening.

Briefly in the News

AVCA: Kansas 'record' isn't

The University of Kansas announced it broke the collegiate women's volleyball attendance record for a single match when a reported crowd of 14,300 watched the Jayhawks October 14. The feat was reported in this space October 30. Not so fast.

The American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA), which has compiled attendance statistics since 1988, says the University of Nebraska, Lincoln, retains the record with a mark of 11,529.

The AVCA concluded that the Kansas count cannot be considered a national record because of the "Midnight Madness" festivities surrounding the Kansas men's basketball program that took place shortly after the women's volleyball match.

"We want to be fair and accurate in what we represent as records," said Sandy Vivas, AVCA executive director. "Based on all of the factors surrounding the Kansas crowd, it seems clear that the attendance was not an exclusive volleyball crowd."

"It is certainly a positive experience to have that many people exposed to women's collegiate volleyball, and it was an extremely successful promotion. We will not recognize the attendance as a national record; however, we will list it for recognition in our attendance records under a separate category."

Nebraska drew a crowd of 11,529 for an October 21 match at the Bob Devaney Sports Center against the University of Colorado, Boulder. In contrast to the Kansas match, there was no other athletics event taking place immediately before or after the volleyball contest at the Devaney Center that could have affected the crowd count.

James F. Wright, NCAA director of statistics, agrees with the AVCA decision not to recognize the Kansas crowd as a national record.

The NCAA, which began compiling volleyball statistics last year, plans to produce a volleyball records book, perhaps as early as fall of 1996, Wright said.

"We'll start with what the AVCA has," Wright said. "Our bottom line is that we want to present accurate records, and we were told no official turnstile count was taken at Kansas. I would not be comfortable having that as an attendance record."

Judge allows nonqualifying basketball recruit to play

A New Mexico state district judge issued a preliminary injunction November 3 that will permit a University of New Mexico recruit to play basketball for the Lobos despite failing to meet NCAA initial-eligibility requirements.

State District Judge Daniel Schneider ruled after 2½ days of testimony in Albuquerque that Kenny Thomas would suffer irreparable harm if he is not allowed to play during his freshman year.

Thomas sued to play after an unsuccessful appeal to the Association of an NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse ruling that he lacked the required number of core courses to qualify for competition under initial-eligibility requirements.

A science course that Thomas took in the ninth grade at Austin High School in El Paso, Texas, did not qualify as one of the 13 core-curriculum courses required by the NCAA for eligibility.

Judge Schneider said his ruling was based in part on his belief that Thomas will win his lawsuit against the Association. He ordered that if the case is tried and Thomas loses, the University of New Mexico shall not be held liable by the NCAA.

In brief testimony November 2, Thomas said he had been assured by his counselor at El Paso Austin that the science class was a core course. He also said no one at the Texas school or University of New Mexico told him to send his transcript to the NCAA clearinghouse during his junior year in high school. Thomas spent his senior year at Albuquerque High School.

The clearinghouse received Thomas' transcript August 8, 1995, and notified Thomas 16 days later the science class did not qualify as a core class.

The NCAA contended that New Mexico men's basketball coach Dave Bliss and his staff, along with counselors at El Paso Austin and Albuquerque High, should have known that the science class in question — Introduction to Physical Science — was considered "lower level or remedial" by the Texas Educational Agency. The NCAA Council determined during its April 1991

Student-athlete view

Put a limit on contact by agents

BY MIKE ALSTOTT
PURDUE UNIVERSITY

The main problem with agents contacting student-athletes is how time-consuming it is. After a full day of school, practice and getting home at 8 or 8:30 at night, it gets old to get a half-dozen or dozen phone calls from agents. They all say the same stuff, and it takes up too much of our time.

What I have done is screen my calls with an answering machine. I gave agents an opportunity to talk for several months last summer, but now that we are into the season, I accept only mail, no phone calls. Agents don't take "no" for an answer, even though I want to wait until after the season to meet with them.

To solve the problem, maybe the process should be made more like high-school recruiting. Agents should be permitted to contact student-athletes only during certain time periods. Agents should be held responsible and liable under these rules, as determined by the NCAA, National Football League or other governing body.

There must be a process for agents to follow. There must be a process for them to abide by, a time period for contacts and a limit on how many phone calls they are allowed to make to individual student-athletes. And I feel that these agents must be penalized when rules are broken, just as student-athletes and schools are penalized when they break the rules.

Who should enforce the rules? That is a tough question. The NCAA is trying to figure out how to combat this issue. Maybe it is important enough for the creation of a national law.

Purdue University's coaches have educated our players by having former agents and players talk to us about this entire ordeal. They have told us what to do and what not to do when contacted by agents. This education has been very helpful and important to us as student-athletes.

Eligibility is a key word here. The student-athlete should not sign with an agent before his or her eligibility is up. Gifts or inducements should not be a part of this process; instead, the process should involve

Athletes putting a dent in date rape

BY MARK FREEMAN
ROLLINS COLLEGE

Rollins College has developed some initiatives in date-rape prevention that may have merit for replication at other athletics departments nationwide.

The counseling and athletics departments at Rollins teamed up to develop strategies for working with male athletes to change the environment of defensiveness between the genders concerning date rape.

The athletics department invited the counseling department to conduct a brief presentation for the coaches last January. In support of our efforts, a coach told a story that he heard at a Fellowship of Christian Athletes conference: A man was walking down the beach and saw a younger man wearing a shirt that said "Stamp out Virginity." The man walked up to the younger man and said, "I like your shirt. Do me a favor. When you are through wearing it, wrap it up and save it in a special place, then in 25 years — when your daughter reaches 16 — put it on her and have her wear it as proudly as you do today."

The story set the tone for the meeting. The subject of rape and women's safety became an important issue for coaches to address with their teams. The story illustrated how men can be hurt by making sex objects of women. I shared that as men, we all know loved ones, relatives and friends whose lives have been devastated by men who have sexually assaulted women.

In the coaches meeting, we noted that the percentage of men who would sexually force a woman is a minority. In fact, the University of Florida conducted a study a few years ago and found that 30 percent of men said they would rape if there was no chance they could get caught and punished. The often ignored, yet potentially helpful, news was that 70 percent said they would not rape if the opportunity were available.

We saw male athletes as an untapped resource for the positive messages of protection and safety for women on campus. High-profile athletes have been cited lately in several instances of violence against women, but our thinking was that most athletes would not tolerate women being hurt. We decided to educate the baseball and crew teams this spring in date-rape prevention workshops.

The baseball team, after the workshop, developed a contract for the women of Rollins College. The text of that contract accompanies this article. It was published in the campus newspaper and distributed by the team during Wellness Expo last spring.

The crew team decided to offer an escort service at night and to accompany anyone who wished to work out in the

Baseball players against rape

The following is a contract against date rape developed by the Rollins College baseball team:

The Rollins baseball team is starting a campaign against rape and violence toward women. Athletes across the country have been targeted as being a problem when it comes to hurting women. We want to stand up and put our energy into protecting women from the minority of men who take advantage of women.

We believe rape is as much a man's problem as a woman's problem. We plan to take a stand against men who force women into sexual relations they do not want. We will not be violent ourselves, but we will verbally challenge men who are disrespectful to women. We promote the idea that "no means no."

We do not want to have sex with a woman unless she gives consent. We think that men who take advantage of women sexually are insecure about their masculinity.

This is our contract with the women of Rollins:

1. We will be gentlemen and gain consent for intimate relations with you.
2. We will listen to your concerns about men who do not treat you with respect.
3. In the company of other men, we will verbally challenge men who fail to respect you and pass on information about who is "easy."
4. We know that we have or will have loved ones — sisters, mothers, girlfriends and daughters — who have been or may be hurt by insecure men. We can understand your feelings and choose to take a protective, caring and loving role with you.
5. We will always try to understand and relate to you with honesty and integrity.

6. You will see us wearing buttons that say: "Real Men Do It. Respecting Women is the Only Game in Town." We plan to promote this positive message on campus and in the community. Watch for us at the Wellness Expo March 8.

It's really quite simple: As baseball players, we are going to be outspoken against any violence toward women — physical or sexual. We are vocally bringing back an ethic of respect. Women deserve this treatment. We like women and do not want to see them hurt or forced by a few weak men. Creating a safe environment for women is our aim.

Go ahead and ask us what our buttons mean; we will be glad to explain ourselves.

Come enjoy our baseball games this spring at Harper Shepherd Field, just up Holt Avenue.

Opinions

Title IX controversy needs less rhetoric from both sides

Bill Campbell, columnist
New Orleans Times-Picayune

"Football coaches paint Title IX as a threat to their most pious game. Their panic-mongering has upset many a football fan, fearing that his team is going to slip in the polls so the women's crew can add two scholarships.

"Coaches of men's minor sports, meanwhile, have cried that Title IX will spell the doom of all men's athletics other than football.

"These whinings, of course, make them look shallow and — above all else — guilty. Has gender discrimination been running rampant throughout college athletics? Of course it has. Until 1972, there wasn't even a law against it. And until the 1990s, the law was virtually ignored....

"The universities had 20 years to address this issue, but it's come to the point that lawsuits had to be filed. So, yes, they deserve to lose.

"But they deserve to lose in a way that sends a fair, firm message to future potential plaintiffs and defendants, as well as a nation of confused onlookers.

"And trust me, this is an issue that can be addressed and resolved without ruining our Saturday afternoon football fests.

"But those who have supported women's issues, for the most part, haven't helped matters. They've taken the law and shaken it in the faces of their male peers like a Bible before a sinner, holding hostages with whatever shred of evidence they can find to cry discrimination."

Steroids

John Barnes, high-school football coach
Los Alamitos, California
Los Angeles Times

"I can't imagine any high-school football players who need them (steroids). Three years ago, I went to workshops on steroids and they reaffirmed everything I knew or thought. . . . They have no purpose in sports, especially in high school. They do more damage than good for the normal kid.

"We have told our kids that what they do in the weight room is fine; they don't need anything extra. I think it (steroid usage) was more widespread five to six years ago, but it may have topped out. I hope the message got out."

Bruce Rollinson, football coach
Los Angeles Mater Dei High School
Los Angeles Times

"I don't know numbers (of steroid users), but one is too many. I believe in hard work and a good, solid weight-lifting program with balanced nutrition to achieve a desired goal.

"Everything about steroids that I've had experience with, the stories have been nothing but negative. A kid blows up, and most people won't suspect (steroid use). People tell the kid he looks great, and now they're feeding a monster. But the performance level is completely based on a phony premise; that's not the real you."

WEIGHTY SUBJECT

Wrestling continues to grapple with how best to address safety concerns regarding methods used to 'cut' weight

BY MARTY BENSON
STAFF WRITER

Weight is always a sensitive subject, but especially in wrestling, where it can represent both the best and the worst of the sport.

On the positive side, dividing competition into weight classes makes wrestling more physically fair than any other sport in which the NCAA conducts championships. However, the methods some use to "cut" weight to qualify for one of the 10 weight classes can be unsafe. The reason wrestlers drop weight classes is to gain an advantage.

"The idea has always been that the athlete with the bigger frame has a better chance to win," said Kevin A. McHugh, chair of the NCAA Wrestling Committee and director of athletics at Trenton State College.

If a student-athlete drops too much weight, he could compromise both health and performance, so there is somewhat of a built-in deterrent. The athlete, however, does not have to "make" weight at match time, but at the time of the weigh-in, after which he is free to regain lost pounds. The time available to replenish fluids and nutrients between weigh-in and match, by rule, can vary from as much as 24 hours to as little as a half-hour during tournaments, and from five hours to a half-hour for dual meets.

Weight allowance

The Wrestling Committee has examined weight issues since its inception, but the subject has been especially hot in the past two years.

At its 1994 meeting, the committee reversed the weight-allowance rule that had been in effect since 1976-77. The old rule stated that for all dual meets and tournaments (except post-season tournaments), a three-pound weight allowance would be granted during the first two months of the season. An allowance of two pounds would be given in January; one pound in February ("3-2-1" rule).

The rule was replaced with a requirement that actual weight for a weight class ("scratch" or "flat" weight) be maintained throughout the season. The new rule, however, allowed for an adjustment period during which coaches could agree mutually to a variance.

"Scratch weight was supposed to encourage the wrestler to stay at a constant weight throughout the season and lessen the chances for a drastic cut for the postseason, which happens under the '3-2-1' rule," said Robert G. Bubb, secretary-rules editor and retired coach at Clarion University of Pennsylvania. "If a wrestler couldn't make scratch weight, his option was to wrestle at the next higher weight class."

The change was not well-received, as most coaches opted to stick with the familiar "3-2-1" rule. Many questioned whether scratch weight was indeed healthier, since it could move the drastic cut Bubb cited to the beginning of the season and not allow for the weight loss that occurs naturally as the season progresses.

As a result, the committee voted to go back to "3-2-1."

"Ideally, this brings the wrestler down gradually so he doesn't put himself in too uncomfortable a situation at the start of the season and has a chance to adjust to each level slowly," Bubb said.

This rule also can be worked around. "The '3-2-1' can become a trap," Bubb said. "Often, the student-athlete struggles to make the three-pound allowance (and wrestle at a lower class) at the beginning of the season, but he can do it. Occasionally, certain student-athletes from this group, when faced with making flat weight at the end of the season, find that the body won't give up that final pound."

Competitive safeguards concern

Since weight is a health issue, both changes required NCAA Executive Committee approval. The Executive Committee refers health issues to the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports, which approved the original change to scratch weight, but not the change back to "3-2-1." Instead, the competitive-safeguards committee said that it "had no medical evidence to justify one version of weight allowance over the other....However... (the committee) was unanimous in its view that either of these options did not address the larger issue of weight loss in the sport."

The result is that the "3-2-1" rule is being used this season, but both committees are working together to re-examine all weight issues and determine if more changes are needed.

Many coaches think the status quo is preferable.

"There are problems, but they are rare," said Jeff Swenson, coach and assistant director of athletics at 1995 Division III champion Augsburg College. "Unfortunately, they are very extreme cases and make the problems seem more common than they are."

McHugh said that the Wrestling Committee hopes to work with the competitive-safeguards committee to develop an extensive educational program on nutrition and weight in lieu of a rules change. The committee recognizes that there are ways of bending any rule in an unsafe way.

"I'm no social scientist, but if you hammer people over the head with rules on something like this, many times that doesn't work. The educational approach generally seems to be more effective. Otherwise, they just try to find a way around the rules," McHugh said.

Rule-change options

Most potential rules changes have been tried at the high school or international level in some form, so college coaches are familiar with them. One such idea is tying the amount of weight a wrestler can lose to compete in a class to his percentage of body fat.

Body-fat tests, along with a constant monitoring of weight, is commonplace in most if not all programs, but coaches wince at making it part of any rule. They say that test results vary widely depending on the method used and the test administrator. Further, coaches do not like the limits such rules impose on hard-working student-athletes.

"I'm not sure (a body-fat rule) is all bad, but every kid is different and some kids still are more willing and able to drop more than others (regardless of body fat) to make a team," said Mark Johnson, coach at the University of Illinois, Champaign. "If a kid knows he can't beat a person at his weight but could make the lineup by dropping to the one below, I don't think it's fair for someone outside the team to tell him he can't try."

Ernest Benion (bottom) of the University of Illinois, Champaign, won the 158-pound division at last year's NCAA Division I Wrestling Championships. To compete in that weight class this season, Benion must weigh no more than 161 pounds during November, 160 during January and 159 during February. In March, the month of the championships, he can weigh no more than 158 at the start of the competition, although he can add a pound for each day of competition at the Big Ten Conference and national championships.

John Carroll University coach Kerry Volkman — who uses body-fat tests administered by the nearby prestigious Cleveland Clinic as an aid in determining team weight guidelines — said simple observation is still the best safeguard.

"(If there's a problem), you can tell because their practice starts to suffer," he said. "If a student-athlete comes in the (practice) room and his nerves are frayed, he's losing too much. If he's doing that, he's probably missing class...so he's missing out on the most important thing."

"That's when a coach needs to step in and say, 'Son, we appreciate your effort, but this is not in your best interest.'"

Another idea is having weigh-ins one hour before competition or "at mat side," immediately before competition. A wrestler then would know he could not cut too much weight and risk being too weak to compete. Such weigh-ins also would guarantee that competitors are the same size at the time of competition.

A one-hour rule was in effect until the 1981-82 season.

The concern with such changes is that some wrestlers will continue to delay weight loss, so minimal rehydration and renourishment will take place before competition. The results could range from lethargic wrestling to serious health problems.

Pat Pecora, coach at the University of Pittsburgh, Johnstown, said that when he wrestled under the one-hour rule in college, competitors were cutting weight up to the last minute.

"If you have weight classes, people are still going to cut to make those classes," he said.

He wonders whether it is time to readjust weight classes to better reflect a physically bigger general population.

"You don't see these things happening at 190," he said. "It's the kids who weigh the least who are losing the most. Kids are bigger these days."

At the three NCAA division championships, when problems occur, they typically happen on the second and third weigh-ins. This begs the question of whether there should be a one-time, pretournament weigh-in for college competition, which would mirror international rules.

As an athlete, Oklahoma State University coach and four-time NCAA Division I champion John Smith had more success at the college level than any other American wrestler, but he is opposed to such a system for college wrestling.

"It would give the advantage to the wrestler who could lose a lot of weight in a short period of time because he could gain the weight back the next two days," he said. "That would put the disciplined athlete who controls himself properly throughout the year at a disadvantage (because he probably would weigh less during the actual competition)."

McHugh said he prefers — if research by the medical and wrestling communities points to a need — to require that a wrestler compete at a weight class for a set percentage of matches in order to be eligible to compete at that weight in the postseason.

As with seemingly every other option, there is a downside to that approach: Such a system might unjustly penalize those who suffer injuries during the regular season. It also would limit dual-meet strategy during the regular season, when coaches massage their lineups to address the strengths of a given opponent.

Given the history of weight issues, any change is likely to be the subject of constant re-examination.

evening. The crew team captain spoke out at a "Take Back the Night" rally and the team participated in the candlelight march and vigil. The crew team also has decided to help out with a presentation during orientation next year.

Both teams wear buttons that state: "Real Men Do It. Respecting Women is the Only Game in Town." The athletics department and student-affairs office designed and purchased 200 of the buttons, plus a sign for athletics and campus events.

It has been delightful to see these young men pull together and take a stand for the protection and safety of women on Rollins' campus. In some small way, we feel we are making a dent in the problem of rape on college campuses. We see using the athletes — who on our campus are generally seen as positive role models, good students and solid citizens — promoting a no-tolerance attitude toward men who are sexually assaulting women on campus.

Raising awareness in male athletes — a high-risk group in date-rape statistics — and asking them to educate other men may help curb this serious problem on college campuses.

Division I Men's Soccer

Freshmen boost Virginia's hopes for fifth consecutive title

Event: 1995 Division I Men's Soccer Championship.

Overview: Any preview of this championship has to start with Virginia, winner of the last four titles. The top-ranked Cavaliers, 15-0-2, are poised for another run behind preseason all-Americans Mike Fisher and Damian Silvera. Fisher tops the squad with 15 goals and 12 assists, and Silvera, Virginia's career assists leader with 39, has been a factor in eight of the Cavaliers' last 11 goals. Though the Cavaliers were hit hard by graduation, three freshmen have made an immediate impact this year — prep all-American Ben Olsen, who has solidified the Cavalier midfield; sweeper Matt Chulis; and defenseman Scott Vermillion. Virginia clinched the Atlantic Coast Conference title with a victory over Clemson. The Cavaliers also tied Maryland and Duke....Those three ACC opponents should factor into the national picture as well. Duke and Clemson, both top-10 fixtures in the Soccer America poll, are 11-4-1 and 10-4-1, respectively. Duke won the head-to-head meeting between the two and also owns triumphs over UCLA and Creighton. The Blue Devils are paced by freshman Jay Heaps and junior Brian Kelly, who have combined for 21 goals and 12 assists. Maryland, 11-5-1, beat Duke but lost to Clemson. The Terrapins are led by forwards Tod Herskovitz and Shane Dougherty, who have paired for 12 goals and seven assists....The West region is loaded again, topped by second-ranked UCLA, which advanced to the semifinals last year. Bruin goalkeeper Chris Snitko is third nationally in goals-against average (0.53) and senior forward Eddie Lewis and junior defenseman Greg Vanney have combined for 16 goals and 18 assists. Portland, Santa Clara, Washington, San Diego, Fresno State and UC

Santa Barbara also are teams to watch....The New England region also is strong, with Brown, Rhode Island and Boston College emerging as national contenders. Third-ranked Brown is 12-1 with key wins over Boston U., Princeton and UCLA. Top scorer Gary Hughes set a Brown record with at least one point scored in 13 consecutive games....Other national challengers include Indiana (last year's runner-up), South Carolina, Creighton, Penn State, Southern Methodist and Saint Louis.

Field: Thirty-two teams from eight regions will be selected November 13. Eleven conferences will receive automatic qualification and 10 additional conferences will compete in play-ins for the five remaining automatic berths. The remaining 16 teams will be selected at large.

Dates and sites: Preliminary-round games will be played at on-campus sites. First-round games will be completed by November 19, second-round games by November 26 and third-round games by December 3. The semifinals and final will be December 8 and 10 at Richmond.

Television coverage: The semifinals will be broadcast live on Prime Network at 2:30 and 4 p.m. (Eastern time) December 8. The championship will be televised live on Prime at 1:30 p.m. December 10.

Results: First-round results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News; second-round results will appear in the December 4 issue; third-round results will appear in the December 11 issue; and championship results will appear in the December 18 issue.

Championship notes: Virginia is 17-0-1 in NCAA tournament play since 1990. The tie came against Santa Clara in the 1991 title match, but the Cavaliers won the championship on penalty kicks.

Division II Football

Title contenders are well-grounded

Event: 1995 Division II Football Championship.

Overview: This year's championship is likely to be decided on the ground. Three of the top four teams in the October 30 poll — two-time defending champion North Alabama, Texas A&M-Kingsville and Pittsburg State — also were among the top four teams in rushing offense. Also, all three were allowing less than 90 yards rushing per game....The edge in these power matchups should go to North Alabama, which ranked second in run defense (56.4 yards per game) and has the experience of two consecutive undefeated trips through the playoff bracket. The Lions returned 19 starters and more than 40 lettermen from last year's championship squad. North Alabama's triple-option attack is engineered by quarterback Cody Gross, who has scored nine touchdowns, and features fullback A. J. Lamar (80.1 yards per game) and tailback Al Jackson (7.0 yards per carry)....Despite suffering a loss in the third week of the season, a 24-23 setback to Division I-AA Sam Houston State, Texas A&M-Kingsville could ride its ground attack to a repeat appearance in the title game. The Javelinas have three running backs averaging more than 75 yards per game and 6.5 yards per carry. To get to the finals again, however, they may have to go through third-ranked Ferris State....Led by senior quarterback Bill Love, Ferris State is the lone top-four squad displaying a balanced attack and is the playoff team most likely to be able to overcome an early deficit. Through October 28, the Bulldogs were averaging 455.5 yards in total offense per game, with Love accounting for 256 of them through the air....Pittsburg State is seeking to rebound from two consecutive first-round losses after claiming the title in 1991 and finishing second in 1992....Other top contenders include New Haven and fast-rising Angelo State.

Field: The 16-team field will include four teams from each of four regions (Midwest, South, West and Northeast).

Dates and sites: First-round (November 18), quarterfinal (November 25) and semifinal (December 2) games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. The championship game will be December 9 in Florence, Alabama; North Alabama will be the host institution.

Television coverage: ESPN will televise the championship game live at 2 p.m. (Eastern time) December 9.

Results: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the November 27, December 4 and December 11 issues of The NCAA News. Results of the championship game will appear in the December 18 issue.

Championship notes: North Alabama could become the first team to win three consecutive championships. The Lions emerged victorious the last two years in very different types of games: Their 41-34 victory over Indiana (Pennsylvania) in 1993 was the highest-scoring title game, and last year's 16-10 win over Texas A&M-Kingsville was the third-lowest-scoring final.

Division III Football

Presidents set to take command

Event: 1995 Division III Football Championship.

Overview: Could this be the year that Washington and Jefferson finally wins it all? After two runner-up finishes and a semifinal loss in the past three seasons, the Presidents are establishing themselves as the team to beat in the playoffs. Through games of October 28, they had earned their top ranking in the South region by winning all seven of their games by a lopsided average score of 42-5, and 21 of the 35 points scored on their division-leading defense had come against substitutes in the fourth quarter. Quarterback Jason Baer had passed for 18 touchdowns and a 201.7 rating, but defenses have been perplexed by a balanced attack: No other Presidents player was among the division's offensive leaders. Emory and Henry should provide the stiffest competition in the regional....One of Washington and Jefferson's wins came against Buffalo State, and a rematch in the semifinals is possible. But Buffalo State first must make its way through a balanced East region that includes Cortland State, Plymouth State, Rowan and Union (New York). Buffalo State's 36-33 victory over Cortland State, ranked fourth in the region in the October 30 poll, indicates how wide open the East regional will be....Mount Union, averaging nearly 45 points per game and featuring one of the division's top defenses, appears to be the favorite in the North region. Other contenders in the competitive North include Hanover, Thomas More, Wheaton (Illinois) and Wittenberg, all undefeated through October 28....Wisconsin-La Crosse is one of the favorites in the West. The Eagles will be prepared for the playoffs by their regular-season schedule in the tough Wisconsin State University Conference, which has had three other teams in the West rankings this season. The other likely contender from the West is Central (Iowa).

Field: The 16-team field will include four teams from each of four regions (East, West, North and South).

Dates and sites: First-round (November 18) and quarterfinal (November 25) games will be played on the campuses of competing institutions. Semifinal games will be hosted by the North and South regional winners (December 2). The championship game will be December 9 in Salem, Virginia; the City of Salem and the Old Dominion Athletic Conference will cohost the game.

Television coverage: ESPN2 will televise the championship game live at 1 p.m. (Eastern time) December 9. The game will be rebroadcast on ESPN at 2 p.m. (Eastern time) December 11.

Results: Scores and pairings from preliminary rounds will be published in the November 27, December 4 and December 11 issues of The NCAA News. Results from the championship game will appear in the December 18 issue.

Championship notes: This year's title game will be the third straight in Salem.... Offenses have taken a liking to Salem Stadium. The 111 points scored in the last two championship games is the highest total in consecutive years since 134 were scored in 1976 and 1977, when the game was played in Phenix City, Alabama.

Division I Women's Cross Country

Villanova poised to dominate again

Event: 1995 Division I Women's Cross Country Championships. *

Overview: In most circles, the word champion begins with the letter "C." But for the past six years in the Division I Women's Cross Country Championships, the word has been spelled V-i-l-l-a-n-o-v-a. In short, Villanova has dominated the championships, sweeping the team and individual crowns during that period. Chances are good that the Wildcats' dominance will continue this year. Currently ranked No. 2 behind Colorado, the Wildcats boast a talented squad led by Jen Rhines, the defending individual champion. Rhines, who finished as runner-up at the 1993 championships, is vying to join former Wildcats Sonia O'Sullivan and Carole Zajac as the only women to successfully defend individual titles. Joining Rhines in the Wildcats' bid for an unprecedented seventh consecutive crown are Krestna Sullivan (who finished 21st at the 1994 championships), Carrie Tollefson, Kristine Jost and Stacy Robinson....Colorado and Providence, fourth and fifth, respectively, at the 1994 championships, have the best chances of ending Villanova's reign. Colorado, ranked No. 1, sports an experienced squad that looks to improve on last year's fourth-place finish. Patty Roberts, who placed 13th at the 1994 championships, and Heather Burroughs lead the way for the Buffaloes. Roberts has garnered four top-four showings this year, including a pair of individual titles, while Burroughs has registered three top-three showings in four outings. The Buffaloes finished first at five of six meets this season, including the Big Eight Conference championships. Providence, Big East Conference champion, is seeking its first team title. The Friars boast a consistent lineup from top to bottom, led by Marie McMahon, Maria McCambridge, Susan Murnane and Krissy Haacke. McMahon, who placed 20th at the 1994 championships, finished first this year at the Big East championships....Stanford and Georgetown, ranked Nos. 4 and 5, respectively, also will battle for the team title. Last year, Stanford placed seventh, while the Hoyas finished sixth.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-two teams of seven individuals — at least two teams from each of eight districts — plus 30 individuals (at least three individuals from each district) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: District qualifying will be November 13 at eight sites. The championships will be November 20 at Iowa State.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: In what was billed as a prechampionships meet, Colorado outdistanced Villanova and Stanford for the team title at the Iowa State Memorial Classic October 14. The Buffaloes compiled 61 points, while Villanova and Stanford placed second and third, respectively, with 76 and 82 points....Providence bolstered its national-title hopes by claiming the Big East Conference championships team title, outdistancing Villanova and Georgetown.

Division II Women's Cross Country

Adams State bounces back quickly

Event: 1995 Division II Women's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: This was supposed to be a rebuilding year for Adams State after losing four of the five top runners from its 1994 championship team. Few observers expected Adams State to have a legitimate shot at a fourth consecutive title, but the Indians not only have a shot, they now are favored once again to claim the championship. The No. 1-ranked team in Division II may not possess the experience of many teams, but Adams State coach Damon Martin says his team certainly has the talent. "I know there are some good teams out there, but at the same time I think we've got as good a team as we've ever had," Martin said. "That doesn't mean we're at our peak, because I feel we have a lot of room for improvement. At the same time, I think we'll continue to get better." Adams State proved just how talented a squad it has when it blew away the field at the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference (RMAC) championships. The Indians claimed six of the top seven individual places to easily outdistance Western State, 20-49. At the head of the Indians' running corps is junior Nikole Sterling, who placed 11th at last year's championships and was runner-up at the recent RMAC championships. Adams State also boasts sophomores Denise Summers and Janelle Olson and freshmen Kim Bugg and Esther Tillman....The biggest threats to Adams State may come from Air Force, Western State and Abilene Christian....Air Force, ranked No. 2 behind Adams State, has made great strides this season and should greatly improve on last year's 14th-place finish. The Falcons' hopes rest on sophomore Michelle Truesdale, who has registered four top-four finishes, including a pair of first-place showings. Truesdale is joined by the senior duo of Dolly Patel and Sara Whittingham and freshman Irene Hobbs....Western State, runner-up a year ago, again is entrenched near the top of the rankings. Ranked No. 3 in the top-25 poll, the Mountaineers are led by standouts Tuma Urio and Nicole Jefferson. Urio, who placed ninth at last year's championships, is one of the top individual contenders, while Jefferson looks to bolster Western State's team chances by improving on last year's 22nd-place showing. The Mountaineers also will rely on freshman Katiana Castaneda and Jennifer Ziemer....Abilene Christian, currently ranked No. 4, possesses a solid nucleus led by Ruth Jaime, Karen Vann and Casi Florida. Jaime placed eighth individually at last year's championships.

Field: A total of 132 individual competitors will be selected. Seventeen teams of seven individuals — at least one team from each of six regions — plus 13 individuals (at least two individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: Regional qualifying was November 4 at six sites. The championships will be November 18 at South Carolina-Spartanburg.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Western State's Urio prevented an Adams State sweep of the top spots at the RMAC meet, winning the individual title....The nation's top four ranked teams — Adams State, Air Force, Western State and Abilene Christian — all are in the South Central region.

Division III Women's Cross Country

Dominating Dragons favored to win fourth straight title

Event: 1995 Division III Women's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Cortland State has dominated the championships over the past six years, winning five team titles — including the last three — and earning one runner-up finish. This year, the Red Dragons easily could make it four consecutive victories. Currently ranked No. 1 in the top-25 poll, the Red Dragons return a veteran squad led by twin sisters Heidi and Heather Swarts, Julie Donnelly, and Michelle Franklin. Heather and Heidi Swarts are the squad's Nos. 1 and 2 performers. Heather Swarts, who finished ninth at last year's championships, has enjoyed a stellar senior campaign, including winning the State University of New York Athletic Conference championships individual title. Heidi Swarts has been equally impressive, chalking up three top-five finishes, including a first-place showing at the Cortland Invitational. Donnelly, 17th individually at the 1994 championships, and Franklin, a graduate student who will compete in her first championships since placing 17th in 1989, both will vie for position among the top individual finishers....Two teams looking to end the Red Dragons' reign will be Calvin and Wisconsin-Oshkosh. Calvin, which has finished as runner-up for three consecutive years, is searching for its first team title. The Knights, currently ranked No. 2, return two of the nation's top performers in Betsy Haverkamp and Amy Kuipers, who posted 11th- and 13th-place individual finishes, respectively, at the 1994 championships. Haverkamp enters the championships having won four individual titles this season, while Kuipers has registered four top-five showings, including three runner-up finishes behind Haverkamp. Joining Haverkamp and Kuipers in the Knights' title bid are Erica Smit and Sarah Gibson. Wisconsin-Oshkosh, which claimed the 1991 title by edging Cortland State by five points, again should be in the title hunt. The Titans, who return an experienced and talented squad in their bid for a fourth team title, enter the championships having claimed their 11th consecutive Wisconsin Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference team title. Leading the way for the Titans are sophomore Tiffany Speckman and juniors Joey Balsis and Amanda Dabalack. Speckman, who placed 27th at the 1994 championships, is the squad's top performer and placed third individually at the conference meet.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-one teams of seven individuals — at least one team from each of eight regions — plus 37 individuals (at least three individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: Regional qualifying was scheduled November 11 at eight sites. The championships will be November 18 at Wisconsin-La Crosse.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Cortland State's 61-point margin of victory over runner-up Calvin (54 points to 115 points) at the 1994 championships was the second largest in championships history. The Red Dragons also outdistanced runner-up Calvin by 90 points at the 1992 championships.

Division I Men's Cross Country

Big Eight duo are newcomers to top of national rankings

Event: 1995 Division I Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Colorado and Oklahoma State haven't been teams that typically come to mind when talking about national cross country title contenders — until now. "When I look at the top tier of teams that have the personnel to win (the national team championship), I look at Colorado, Oklahoma State and Arkansas," said Wisconsin coach Martin Smith, whose Badgers occupy the No. 1 spot in the top-25 poll. "Those are the three strongest programs with the right elements that it takes to win a national title. They all have the up-front power, good talented athletes in back and good depth."...Colorado, runner-up at the 1994 championships, returns four of its top five competitors in the bid to claim its first team title. Sophomores Adam Goucher (individual runner-up last year) and Clint Wells and seniors Alan Culpepper and Jon Cooper lead the way for the Buffaloes, who are ranked No. 2 nationally. Goucher has enjoyed an outstanding sophomore campaign, earning four first-place individual finishes in four outings, including the Big Eight Conference championships....Oklahoma State, fresh off winning the Big Eight team title, looks for a similar outcome at the national championships. Showcasing returnees Jon Wild, Patrick Kiptum and Daniel Mutai, the Cowboys are vying for their first championship since 1954. Wild, fifth individually a year ago, has enjoyed similar success this season, highlighted by a runner-up finish at the Big Eight championships. Kiptum and Mutai also had strong conference outings, placing third and sixth, respectively....Arkansas, which has won four of the last five team championships, places its hopes behind Godfrey Siamusiye, Ryan Wilson and Matt Kerr. Siamusiye, like Goucher, has registered four first-place showings in four meets....Other teams also can be regarded as serious contenders, including Wisconsin, defending champion and meet host Iowa State, and Stanford. Wisconsin will attempt to return to the winner's circle for the first time since 1988. Led by James Menon, Pascal Doherty and Phil Downs, the Badgers have won all four of their meets, including their 10th Big Ten Conference title in 11 years. Menon has been particularly impressive, posting four top-three finishes in four meets, including a runner-up showing at the Big Ten championships. Iowa State is led by Dmitry Drozdov, Corey Ihmels and Saul Patla.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-two teams of seven individuals — at least two teams from each of eight districts — plus 30 individuals (at least three individuals from each district) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: District qualifying meets were scheduled November 11 at eight regional sites. The championships will be November 20 at Iowa State.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Michigan State is the only institution that has won the team title in a year it served as championships host. The Spartans, who hosted the meet from 1938 through 1964, accomplished the feat eight times, most recently in 1959....Arkansas (seven titles), Wisconsin (two) and Iowa State (two) are the only teams to win team championships since 1984.

Division II Men's Cross Country

Western State ready for biggest step

Event: 1995 Division II Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: For the past three years, Western State has been perched near the top of the Division II cross country mountain. Unfortunately, the Mountaineers never have reached the peak, finishing second, third and second, respectively, in the team race. This year, however, the team is ranked No. 1 and appears primed to put an end to Adams State's three-year reign. "We're stronger from (runners Nos.) 1 through 7 than we were last year," said Western State coach Duane Vandebusch. "Last year, we had four pretty good runners, but our fifth runner was our Achilles heel and that cost us. This year, we're a lot stronger from top to bottom." At the top, the Mountaineers showcase Philip Spratley and Hector Hernandez-Salazar, a transfer from Adams State. Two of the nation's top runners, Spratley and Hernandez placed second and fourth, respectively, at last year's championships. Joining Spratley and Hernandez are seniors Mark Burgess and Andy Bruckner and juniors Preston Aronson and Hamish Smith. Bruckner, who placed 10th at the 1994 championships, may be the key to the Mountaineers' hopes. After missing the entire regular season due to a stress fracture, Bruckner will return to the Mountaineers' lineup at the regional-qualifying meet....Abilene Christian, Edinboro, Central Missouri State and South Dakota State also are title hopefuls. Abilene Christian, ranked No. 4 nationally, is led by the junior trio of Thomas Korir, Musa Gwanzura and Fallody Moonga. They claimed the top three individual spots at the Lone Star Conference championships October 21, finishing within eight seconds of each other. Gwanzura claimed the individual crown, finishing one second ahead of Korir. Edinboro, runner-up at the 1993 championships and sixth a year ago, is vying for its first championship since 1990. The Fighting Scots, who have claimed a record four titles, are led by senior Carl Leonard, who finished ninth overall last year.

Field: A total of 132 individual competitors will be selected. Seventeen teams of seven individuals — at least one team from each of six regions — plus 13 individuals (at least two individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: Regional qualifying was November 4 at six sites. The championships will be November 18 at South Carolina-Spartanburg.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Lewis' Charles Mulinga, defending individual champion, is vying to become the eighth competitor in championships history to successfully defend his title....No team has won four consecutive championships. San Diego State (1965 through 1967), Edinboro (1986 through 1988) and Adams State (1992 through 1994) each have won three in a row....Edinboro has placed first or second at eight of the last 11 championships. The Fighting Scots have won four titles during that span.

Division III Men's Cross Country

Contenders remain side by side

Event: 1995 Division III Men's Cross Country Championships.

Overview: Williams and North Central finished first and second, respectively, at the 1994 championships. Williams and North Central have been ranked Nos. 1 and 2, respectively, in each of this year's top-25 polls. Those facts provide a clue to the likely order of finish at this year's championships. A year ago, Williams ended North Central's two-year title reign, outdistancing the Cardinals by 12 points to claim its first team crown. This year, the Ephs return seniors Jeremie Perry and Marzuki Stevens and junior Tim Brillo, the squad's top three finishers at the 1994 championships. Stevens has been the Ephs' top performer this season, registering five top-two individual showings, including three first-place finishes. Perry, the defending Division III individual champion, and Brillo also have been impressive, combining for five top-three finishes....North Central, vying for its 10th team title, has finished in the top three at 21 of 22 championships. Fresh off their 22nd consecutive conference title, the Cardinals' talented squad is led by John Weigel, Matt Brill, Ryan Board and Luther Olson. Weigel, individual runner-up at the last two championships, and Brill enter the championships as the top two finishers at the College Conference of Illinois and Wisconsin championships. "I think we've had a lot of growth through the year," North Central coach Al Carius said. "There are steps that remain in front of us that need to be taken, but I feel real good about the progress we have made and hope we can continue (to progress)."....Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Calvin, Wisconsin-La Crosse and Wabash are among other championships contenders. Wisconsin-Oshkosh, which has claimed three team titles, is ranked No. 4. The Titans, who claimed the Wisconsin State University Conference championships title October 28, are led by Joel Jaeger, Tony Bolz and WSUC individual titlist Andy Esten. Calvin, in search of its first title, is ranked No. 3. The Knights are led by David Riemersma, Geoff Van-Dragt and Ryan LaFleur. Wisconsin-La Crosse, hosting its first championships, looks to return to the form that earned a runner-up finish at the 1993 championships. The Eagles are led by Brad Wilson, Dan Murphy and Brett Altergott.

Field: A total of 184 individual competitors will be selected. Twenty-one teams of seven individuals — at least one team from each of eight regions — plus 37 individuals (at least three individuals from each region) will make up the field.

Dates and sites: Regional qualifying meets were November 11 at eight regional sites. The championships will be November 18 at Wisconsin-La Crosse.

Results: Championships results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News.

Championships notes: Three of the top four individual finishers from last year's championships — Williams' Perry, North Central's Weigel and J.J. Castner of UC San Diego — return for this year's race....One point and one first-place vote is all that separated Williams and North Central in the October 24 top-25 poll. Williams received five first-place votes and 221 points....North Central has claimed a championships-record nine team titles.

Division II Women's Volleyball

Barry enjoys top ranking after defeating defending champs

Event: 1995 Division II Women's Volleyball Championship.

Overview: Northern Michigan has won the last two championships, each time with a different coach, but Barry is top-ranked this year heading into tournament play. Barry, atop the American Volleyball Coaches Association poll much of the year, is 26-2, including a 3-0 win over the defending champion. Barry also is 11-0 in Sunshine State Conference play and has swept rivals Tampa, Eckerd and Florida Southern. Four Buccaneers are hitting higher than .350, including Mickisha Hurley (.422), Wei Liu (.414), Sonia Gubaidulina (.379) and Cindy Yuan (.351). Senior setter Marya Morusiewicz (.757 assists) also has been busy....Northern Michigan (27-2) will contend for its third straight title behind seniors Pauline Schuette and Emily Carrick, who have combined for 501 kills. Freshman Joy Hanzal has contributed 192 kills. The Wildcats won a fifth consecutive Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title and are 10-2 against nationally ranked teams, although the two losses were to championship contenders Barry and Cal State Bakersfield, both by 3-0 counts....Cal State Bakersfield, runner-up in each of the last two years, will challenge again behind 1994 AVCA Division II player of the year Christy Wicneke, who leads the 24-5 Roadrunners with 465 kills. Veterans Felicia Crisp and Torie Sumner also have hit more than .370 on the year and have combined for 493 kills. In addition to its win over Northern Michigan, Cal State Bakersfield has beaten No. 8 Cal State Los Angeles, No. 10 Regis (Colorado), No. 14 Portland State and No. 19 UC Riverside....No. 3 Northern Colorado, which finished third last year (its highest finish in 10 championship appearances), is 26-2 behind seniors Debbie Ponis (497 kills) and Terri McNair (383 kills)....Other teams to watch include Central Missouri State, Hawaii-Hilo, Nebraska-Kearney and St. Cloud State.

Field: The Division II championship includes 28 teams. Four teams each will be selected from the North Central, Northwest, South Central and Southwest regions, and three teams each will be selected from the Atlantic, Great Lakes, Northeast and South regions.

Dates and sites: Regional competition will be November 17-18 or November 18-19 on the campuses of competing institutions. The finals will be December 2-4 on the campus of one of the participating institutions.

Results: Regional results will appear in the November 27 issue of The NCAA News. Championship results will appear in the December 11 issue.

Championships notes: Northern Michigan has a Division II-record 58-match winning streak at home and 49 of those victories have been by 3-0 counts. The Wildcat senior class has accumulated a 133-11 slate and two national championships. Coach Mark Rosen led the Wildcats to the 1994 title after Jim Moore won the school's first crown in 1993. Rosen, who lost to Moore in the 1993 title match as coach at Cal State Bakersfield, beat his old team in 1994 in the championship match....Northern Colorado's Debbie Ponis became the school's all-time leader in kills with 1,675....No team has appeared in all 14 championships. UC Riverside appeared in 13 straight tournaments before missing last year's championship. Portland State also has made 13 appearances.

Lock Haven coach goes out a winner in II field hockey final

Lady Eagles defeat Bloomsburg, 1-0, for second straight title

The Lock Haven field hockey team sent retiring coach Sharon Taylor out on a winning note, defeating Bloomsburg, 1-0, November 5 to capture its second consecutive Division II Field Hockey Championship.

Taylor, who will remain at the school as director of athletics, finished her coaching career with five national championships (including one in Division III) in 23 years at Lock Haven. Her career record is 331-96-27.

"Coach Taylor deserved to go out on a note like this," said sophomore Diana Drumheller, who was named to the all-tournament team. "Considering that Bloomsburg is my hometown and the toughness of deciding to go to Lock Haven instead, this has been a dream season and I realize that this is the best place I could be."

The Lady Eagles' win in front of their home fans was their 21st of the season without a loss.

Taylor said she did not realize her team's capabilities until midway through the year.

"This is a storybook ending to a storybook season," she said. "I think I really didn't consider us as strong (as other years) in the first half of the season. But when we beat (Division III) William Smith in overtime, I began to realize that our record was an indication of how good we were...or could be."

The winning goal came with 15:09 left in the game. Bloomsburg goalie Bev Hartley stopped a shot by Lock Haven's Carri Hogg, but Tracy Wilcox drilled the rebound into the lower right-hand corner of the cage.

Lock Haven dominated the remainder of the game, but was not able to score an insurance goal. Bloomsburg had a chance to tie on a penalty corner with two minutes left, but Eagle goalie Caroline Gillich made her only save of the day to preserve the shutout.

Bloomsburg, Lock Haven's main rival in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference, finished 19-3. All of the Huskies' losses came against Lock Haven.

The all-championship team included Bloomsburg's Nicole Mower and Michell Martin and Lock Haven's Drumheller, Melanie Helm and Debbie Wilkins.

Bill

NCAA's Dempsey, institutional CEOs push House to adopt Senate version

The Senate-passed provision is very similar to UBIT regulations proposed by the Internal Revenue Service in 1993. The IRS is operating under the tenets of those regulations despite not finalizing them. A major difference, however, between the proposed regulations and the Senate legislation is the so-called "tainting rule" proposed by the IRS.

Generally, the IRS regulations subject to UBIT all revenue that a tax-exempt organization receives through a corporate sponsorship agreement if any of the benefits afforded the corporation amounts to advertising. The Senate bill protects from UBIT revenue in which the participating donor organization receives no substantial return benefit other than the use or acknowledgment of the donor's name or logo.

In effect, the Senate proposal distinguishes payments made in exchange for advertising from all others.

House and Senate leaders have begun the process of negotiating a compromise working out the differences of their two versions of the bill, and ultimately will send what is called a conference report to President Clinton. House members must agree to adopt the Senate's language regarding UBIT. In passing its version of the bill, the House did not address UBIT provisions.

Support from NCAA

NCAA Executive Director Cedric W. Dempsey and a selected number of institutional chief executive officers have contacted House and Senate conferees, encouraging House members to accept the Senate provision.

In letters sent to House and Senate conferees, Dempsey described the decreasing financial assistance institutions are receiving and how the corporate sponsorship provision in the Senate budget reconciliation legislation "brings much needed clarity to the issue of the tax treatment of corporate sponsorship payments to tax-exempt organizations."

He wrote further: "Corporate sponsors are playing a critical role in helping our member institutions provide quality athletics programs for their students. Please support the inclusion of the Senate corporate sponsorship provision as part of the budget reconciliation conference agreement."

Even if House members accept the Senate provision, that is no guarantee the provision will become law. Clinton is threatening a veto of the legislation, particularly because of the proposed cuts to Medicare and Medicaid. In addition, the Clinton administration opposes the Senate's UBIT proposal, claiming it would result in a loss of $67 million to the Federal treasury.

If a presidential veto occurs — and there is every indication that it will — the president and House and Senate leaders will try to negotiate an acceptable bill. The UBIT provision could be attached to such a bill or it could be dropped.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kansas, said he expects the conference report to be completed by November 13, and that the Senate would vote on the measure by November 17. House leaders are targeting November 16 as the date it could vote on the reconciliation act.

■ State legislation relating to college athletics

This report summarizes legislation currently pending before state legislatures that could affect, or is otherwise of interest to, the intercollegiate athletics programs and student-athletes of NCAA member institutions.

Set forth below is a list of 10 bills from five states. The report includes four bills that have been introduced, and six pending bills on which action has been taken, since the last report (August 30, 1995, issue of The NCAA News). The newly introduced bills are marked with an asterisk. Pending bills identified in previous reports on which no action has been taken do not appear in this report.

The State Legislation Report is based largely on data provided by the Information for Public Affairs on-line state legislation system as of October 31, 1995. The bills selected for inclusion in this report were drawn from a larger pool of measures that concern sports and therefore do not necessarily represent all of the bills that would be of interest to individual member institutions. Bills pending before the governing bodies of the District of Columbia and U.S. territories are not available on an on-line basis and are not included in this report.

The NCAA has not independently verified the accuracy or completeness of the information provided by Information for Public Affairs and is providing this summary as a service to members. For further information regarding a particular bill, members should contact the state legislature concerned.

The bills set forth below address the following subjects:

meeting that such courses cannot be used as core courses for the purpose of meeting initial-eligibility requirements.

Thomas' attorneys argued that the NCAA did not officially notify the membership of that action until after Thomas enrolled in the course. Thomas took the course in the fall semester of 1991.

The Council action was reported in meeting minutes that were published in the May 29, 1991, issue of The NCAA News. The action was reported again in the legislative assistance column of the September 9, 1991, issue of The NCAA News. Thomas' attorneys argued that the second publication — which occurred after Thomas began the course — should be considered official.

NCAA attorney Paul Bardacke argued that more than three years elapsed between the Council's decision and the time that Thomas learned the course was not acceptable. He said there was ample time and opportunity for the coaching staff or counselors to check on whether the course was acceptable and for the problem to be corrected.

In issuing the preliminary injunction, Schneider said he was impressed by Thomas' persistence in pursuing academic eligibility for competition.

"He could have given up and gone to a junior college or he could have given up after failing the ACT test the first couple of times," the judge said.

"But he busted his butt and got it done. I'm convinced he is smart enough to play with any dumb jock out there in the world."

Schneider also said he agreed with Bliss' testimony that Thomas would be treated as a social leper and pariah on campus if he is not permitted to practice and play with his teammates.

With the intention of providing more involvement with officiating and rules interpretation, the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee has appointed two people to assist Marcy Weston with her duties as the national coordinator of women's basketball officials and secretary-rules editor of the NCAA Women's Basketball Rules Committee.

At its October 29-30 meeting in Charlotte, North Carolina, the committee selected Dana Senders and Jennifer Alley as Weston's assistants.

Senders is a former official from Washington state and currently is in sales of sportswear manufacturing. Alley is currently assistant athletics director at the University of North Carolina, Wilmington, and is a former head women's basketball coach at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

The committee's plan is to have one of the women assist Weston with the coordination of women's basketball officials. The other would help Weston in areas of rules writing and interpretation.

Weston has served as national coordinator since the 1986-87 season and has been the secretary-rules editor of the women's rules committee since its inception in 1985.

ling back in the '50s. If we lose our focus on how devastating this can be, we've made a huge mistake.

"I think we've gotten a little soft on it. As a conference, and I'll use the ACC as an example, we always had the FBI people come in at the beginning of the year and talk to student-athletes, particularly from football and men's basketball because they play the games that get bet on. Gradually, because we haven't had a problem, it just kind of slipped away.

"The Maryland thing was one of those things that caught everybody by surprise, because it's been a while since there was any real publicity about anybody gambling on games or doing anything like that. Not that they gambled on the games they were playing, but just the fact that they were involved in gambling. You hate to have those things happen but it did. It drew our people's attention very quickly."

The proliferation of gambling also has captured the attention of lawmakers. The U.S. Senate Committee on Government Affairs conducted a hearing November 2 on a bill that would establish the Gambling Impact Study Commission. The hearing explored two issues — whether the proposed study of the impact of gambling on states, government and Native American tribes is necessary and, if so, whether the establishment of a national commission is the best way to study the issue.

The bill is expected to be considered by the U.S. House of Representatives before the Thanksgiving holiday recess. It is unclear when the full Senate will discuss the matter.

Easy access

Regardless of how it is regulated or monitored, sports gambling creates problems, says NCAA Chief Operating Officer Thomas W. Jernstedt. Sports gambling can threaten the integrity of intercollegiate athletics, he said, adding that the NCAA membership must keep the topic high on its agenda.

"For young people growing up in America now, gambling is so accessible," Jernstedt said. "I think it's got some long-range problems that we're already seeing. I have even more concerns down the road for the next five, 10, 15 years. There is a sense that it's OK: 'Everybody gambles and that's OK.' As it relates to our industry and athletics, it's not OK. I think it's a tremendous, tremendous problem."

Jernstedt said the membership may need to consider establishing a standing committee or task force to monitor gambling activities on a national level.

Taitt, who tracks gambling issues on a day-to-day basis at the national office, says the number of gambling-related cases investigated by the NCAA enforcement staff has increased recently. Most of the cases involve institutions seeking restoration of a student-athlete's eligibility.

Taitt, who speaks on the issue during the NCAA's regional compliance seminars, said athletics administrators should be concerned and responsive if they suspect any of their student-athletes are gambling.

Taitt challenges the oft-stated position that gambling is harmless, as long as student-athletes wager on professional sporting events or bet on college games not involving their own team.

"The issue arguing that gambling is not as significant a problem if it is limited to pro sports is patently false because all of the pitfalls associated with gambling on intercollegiate sports are the same as with pro sports," Taitt said. "There is no distinction. The pitfalls are the same."

"The athlete is hooked, so where does he turn? He no longer is in control. The bookies

Nebraska's schedule toughest among unbeaten teams

BY SEAN W. STRAZISCAR
NCAA STATISTICS COORDINATOR

Of the four undefeated teams in Division I-A, Nebraska is playing the toughest overall schedule.

The Cornhuskers' Division I-A opponents this season have a .568 winning percentage vs. other I-A teams when not playing Nebraska. That ranks 22nd nationally.

Nebraska's two remaining foes — Kansas and Oklahoma — have a combined .750 winning percentage (13-4-1) against I-A teams, which ranks seventh among future schedules through November 5.

Of the other three unbeaten teams, Ohio State has the highest-ranked combined schedule. The Buckeyes' remaining three opponents have a combined percentage of .520 (13-12-0). Ohio State has an overall strength-of-schedule ranking of 28th.

Toledo, which tied Miami (Ohio) October 14, has the toughest past schedule of the undefeated teams. The Rockets' past opponents have a winning percentage of .613 (38-24-0). Toledo's overall schedule strength ranks 37th.

The only other unbeaten team, Florida, has the lowest ranking of the undefeated teams with a schedule ranking of 38th. The Gators' remaining opponents have a .479 percentage.

Only two teams have had a perfect regular-season record and faced a top-20 schedule since the NCAA's tough-

Four conferences and two independents are represented in this year's top 10. The Southeastern, Southwest and Pacific-10 Conferences each have one team ranked in the top 10. Notre Dame and Cincinnati are the independents ranked there.

The Big Ten Conference has the most teams ranked in the top 10 with five members — including Illinois, which has the toughest overall schedule in the nation. The Big Ten has eight teams in the top 20.

Of the teams with the toughest schedule based on past opposition, Cincinnati holds the No. 1 slot. The Bearcats have faced teams with a .690 winning percentage through November 5.

California basketball violations determined to be secondary

The NCAA Committee on Infractions has found violations concerning the recruitment of a men's basketball student-athlete at the University of California, Berkeley. The committee determined that the violations in the case were secondary in nature.

California will be limited to a total of 10 expense-paid official visits by men's basketball prospective student-athletes in 1995-96, two less than NCAA rules allow. The student-athlete's eligibility should not be affected.

The violations concerned the prospective student-athlete's unofficial visit to California and the involvement in that visit of a California graduate student who had developed a friendship with the prospect and his family. Most of the contacts between the graduate student and the prospective student-athlete were allowed under NCAA rules because the friendship, although developed through basketball contacts, was based on common religious beliefs. The graduate student is a practicing Muslim and an Islamic leader on the institution's campus.

In September 1994, the prospective student-athlete had not qualified for an official paid visit. He wanted to commit to California but wished to visit the campus before making a final decision. The student-athlete's mother purchased an airline ticket for him to visit the institution and the graduate student, who had been visiting the prospective student-athlete, arranged to accompany him.

During the visit, the graduate student provided local transportation, made arrangements with the head men's basketball coach for meeting with the prospective student-athlete, and accompanied the prospective student-athlete to the meeting with the head coach. After the visit, the graduate student discussed the visit with the head coach and arranged for another mutual friend of the prospective student-athlete to pay for the cost of the return airline ticket.

The head men's basketball coach knew of the graduate student's friendship with the prospect and knew of his active involvement in the unofficial visit. The committee ruled that the graduate student's activities with regard to the unofficial visit assisted in the recruiting of the prospective student-athlete, thus changing the graduate student's status to a representative of the university's athletics interests. Had the head men's basketball coach disassociated himself with any involvement in the unofficial visit, the graduate student would not have become a representative of the university's athletics interest. Because the graduate student was a representative of the university's athletics interest, several of his activities regarding the visit violated NCAA rules.

The violations were limited to the one weekend involved in the unofficial visit and were inadvertent in nature. Because the violations were limited and inadvertent, the committee decided that the violations were secondary and that the involved student-athlete should not be affected.

The committee commended the student-athlete and his mother for their efforts in taking appropriate steps to avoid NCAA rules violations, for providing information to the NCAA enforcement staff and for his testimony at the hearing.

The student-athlete and his mother had, during the summer of 1994, asked to join the NCAA's Big Brother/Big Sister program, which provides highly recruited prospective student-athletes with information on NCAA recruiting rules and eligibility requirements. As part of this program, the prospective student-athlete and his mother reported all recruiting contacts during August and September 1994, including those involved in this case.

The complete report of the Committee on Infractions will be published in the December 4 issue of The NCAA Register.

education. I am offering a type of compromise. A set time period should be established for agents to contact student-athletes; in return, agents must agree to follow the direct guidelines set forth by whatever governing body is appropriate. The purpose of the contact should not be to have the student-athlete sign a contract. Rather, it should be to educate the student-athlete and describe the opportunities that may lie ahead for him.

1995 Column No. 40

Dead periods

Change in starting time for signing National Letter of Intent

NCAA Divisions I and II institutions should note that the start of the permissible period for signing the National Letter of Intent (NLI) has been changed from 8 a.m. to 7 a.m. In Division I, under current legislation, a dead period (i.e., the time period when it is not permissible to make in-person recruiting contacts with prospects on or off the institution's campus) exists 48 hours before and after the initial signing date in the applicable sport. In Division II, a dead period exists 48 hours before the initial signing date in the applicable sport. Consistent with the change in the start of the permissible period for signing the NLI, the NCAA Administrative Committee amended (effective immediately) all applicable provisions of NCAA Bylaw 30.10 (i.e., all Divisions I and II sports except Divisions I-A and I-AA football) to indicate that, in Division I, the dead period surrounding the NLI is 48 hours before and after the initial signing date that begins at 7 a.m. (as opposed to 8 a.m.). In Division II, the dead period now is 48 hours prior to 7 a.m. (as opposed to 8 a.m.) on the initial signing date for the NLI. The Administrative Committee also amended relevant provisions of the recruiting legislation set forth in Bylaw 13 to reflect the time 7 a.m. (as opposed to 8 a.m.) when such legislation makes reference to the initial signing date for the NLI.

NCAA Bylaw 16.5.1-(e)

Vacation-period expenses

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 16.5.1-(e), an institution may provide the cost of meals to student-athletes during the institution's vacation period during the regular academic year when student-athletes are required to remain on the institution's campus for organized practice sessions or competition. If the student-athlete lives at home during the vacation period, the institution may not provide the cost of room and board to that student-athlete, other than to permit the student-athlete to participate in team meals incidental to practice sessions. During its August 24, 1995, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that an institution may provide a cash allowance (in lieu of an actual meal) to cover the cost of meals during the institution's vacation period during the regular academic year when student-athletes are required to remain on the institution's campus for organized practice sessions or competition. Under such circumstances, the allowance may not exceed the flat-fee meal rate for walk-ins (i.e., individuals who visit the campus and wish to purchase a meal) or the amount determined by the institution's office of financial aid as being commensurate with the average cost a student at that institution normally would incur eating in off-campus facilities.

NCAA Bylaws 14.7.1.1 and 17.1.9 -(d)

Outside competition, sports other than basketball — Division I

Division I institutions should note that a Division I student-athlete in sports other than basketball may participate as a member of an outside team in any noncollegiate, amateur competition during official vacation periods published in the institution's catalog, provided such participation occurs outside the institution's declared playing and practice season in that sport. During its August 7-9, 1995, meeting, the NCAA Council, upon a recommendation from the Interpretations Committee, reversed a previous decision and determined that a student-athlete may engage in competition on an outside amateur team outside of the institution's playing season during the institution's official vacation period that occurs between terms after completion of the student-athlete's final exams (as opposed to the day after the institution's last final exams). Finally, during its January 20, 1994, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee reviewed the provisions of Bylaw 14.7.1.1.1 and determined that a student-athlete (in sports other than basketball) may compete as a member of an outside amateur team during an institution's official vacation period published in the institution's catalog that occurs prior to the completion of the institution's playing season [pursuant to Bylaw 17.1.9-(d)] but during an official vacation period that is not considered a part of the institution's playing season.

NCAA Bylaws 13.1.5.1.3, 13.1.5.3.1, 30.10.1 and 30.10.2

Visits during evaluation period — Division I basketball

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 13.1.5.1.3, in Division I basketball, institutional staff members may visit a prospect's educational institution on not more than one occasion during a particular week within an evaluation period. Further, per 13.1.5.1.3.1, a visit to a prospect's educational institution on consecutive days during a particular week to observe a tournament or a tier of a tournament shall count as a single visit. However, during the permissible 20-day evaluation period from November 16 through March 15 in men's basketball and from October 8 through the last day in February in women's basketball, if an institutional staff member visits a prospective student-athlete's educational institution on consecutive days during a particular week to observe a tournament or a tier of a tournament, each day at the prospect's educational institution counts as one of the permissible 20 days of evaluation.

are. Organized crime is, potentially. That's when point-shaving typically is introduced. The only way out may be to fix the game in which you are participating."

To help address the problem, the NCAA Council will sponsor a proposal at the 1996 NCAA Convention (Proposal No. 2-8 in the Second Publication of Proposed Legislation) that would prohibit student-athletes from wagering on professional athletics events.

Media influence

Even though sports betting generally is illegal, most major daily newspapers offer betting odds and lines for upcoming events. Readers also may see advertisements from popular Las Vegas bookmakers offering a "free" tip on a game.

No one disputes the legality of publishing such information, but many are concerned that the practice promotes illegal gambling.

On a practical level, Ron Asher, chief of enforcement of the Nevada Gaming Control Board in Las Vegas, says illegal bookmakers do not have much use for the odds that are printed in the newspaper.

"Most of the illegal books operating are not getting their lines out of the newspaper," said Asher, a former FBI employee. "They need better information than that normally."

The NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee, however, believes that the question goes beyond whether the published betting lines are accurate. It believes that the publication of betting lines contributes to a social acceptance of sports betting.

Last winter, the committee seriously considered denying press credentials for the Final Four to reporters whose newspapers publish betting odds, but the committee ultimately rescinded that plan.

Jernstedt, the primary liaison to the committee, said the men's basketball committee continues to be concerned about gambling and will discuss the topic again in December.

"The committee was serious about it," Jernstedt said of the proposal to deny credentials. "That prompted a real flurry in the media. It was destined to be troublesome. We checked with our legal counsel and were advised it was within our purview to do that, but we would subject ourselves to lawsuits. The committee ended up abandoning it — at least temporarily, not necessarily forever. It was very uneasy about detracting from the focus on the tournament and the student-athletes who play the games.

"We met with the media representatives and decided that perhaps we would be better served to work together to raise the level of sensitivity and do what we can jointly to help people become more familiar with the problems of gambling.

"In the past year, there have been more articles written about it. There has been a level of exposure that we have not had in some time."

Warning signs

Educating the general public about the dangers of sports gambling is desirable, but educating student-athletes is essential, experts say.

Are there warning signs that can alert administrators to a student-athlete in trouble?

Wexler said few solid indicators exist, but one clear sign is if student-athletes are heard discussing point spreads. "If they are talking about point spreads rather than winning or losing, that's a real big one," he said.

Warning signals, however, can be faint, because gambling can be such a private indulgence.

Michal Gorman and David Osinga agree that early warning signs of a compulsive gambling problem are few. Gorman is director of clinical and professional staff development at Sierra Tucson, an Arizona treatment center for addiction and other mental and behavioral disorders. Osinga is a licensed primary therapist there.

"It certainly can be characterized by some preoccupation with sports at school or a preoccupation with the sports page," Osinga said. "It might be preoccupation with televised sports.

"If you're talking about students, you're talking about college kids who are going back for more money from their parents after they've been given some. There's secrecy about money. Family history of gambling is a pretty good predictor. If there's a family history of gambling, it is likely they have learned something about getting their needs met that way."

Compulsive gamblers, experts say, exhibit certain characteristics such as boastfulness, arrogance, unbounded optimism and extreme competitiveness, among others. In addition, they often are quite intelligent. But picking a compulsive gambler out of a crowd is next to impossible, Gorman said.

"I think what is difficult about compulsive gambling is that there aren't necessarily very many signs that are distinguishable, particularly in the early stages," she said. "Gambling is something that lots of people do and so it falls into a realm like alcohol consumption. So that alone wouldn't appear out of place. It's when there are negative consequences to gambling when you may start to notice."

The case of Art Schlichter is a case study in consequences. A quarterback at Ohio State University in the late 1970s and early 1980s, Schlichter progressed from being an occasional visitor at race tracks to betting with a bookie on pro sports to becoming a full-fledged compulsive gambler. His addiction to gambling and the actions he took to secure money to fulfill it resulted in his sentencing earlier this year on Federal and Indiana charges.

Wexler contends that there are many more student-athletes like Schlichter.

"He's most remembered only because he got caught," Wexler said. "I'm telling you that there are tons of them doing it. I know there have been shenanigans with point spreads. They just haven't been caught yet."
