Government releases rules for athletics disclosure act

The Department of Education has published final regulations associated with the Equity in Athletics Disclosure Act, which will require institutions to publicly report information about intercollegiate athletics programs.

The regulations, published November 29, grew out of the Improving America's Schools Act, which Congress approved in 1994.

The rules require that all coeducational institutions of higher education that participate in any federal student financial aid program and have an intercollegiate athletics program provide annual information pertaining to the athletics program.

The information to be included in the report appears in a list that accompanies this story.

First reports are to be made available for inspection by students, prospective students and the public by October 1, 1996, and by October 15 every year thereafter.

Although institutions are required to inform students of their right to request the information contained in the annual report, the specifics of such notification are not spelled out. A number of acceptable methods are provided in a section accompanying the regulations. Examples include notice in an institution's catalogue or in relevant athletics department publications distributed to all students

The statute also does not specify where the reports are to be made available, other than that they are to be easily accessible. Possible distribution points include intercollegiate athletics offices, admissions offices and libraries.

Also, no mandatory format exists for the report. The Department of Education provided optional reporting forms with its final regulations, but institutions may design their own formats.

The Department of Education did reemphasize that

Smith new Commission

Samuel H. Smith, president of Washington State University and chair of the Division I subcommittee of the NCAA Presidents Commission, has been elected chair of the Commission.

He will replace Judith E. N. Albino, former president of the University of Colorado, at the conclusion of the 1996 NCAA Convention in Dallas.

Ballots have been sent to the Commission to elect a Division I subcommittee replacement for Smith.

Proposal seeks to relax limits on practice for Olympics

This is the fourth of six articles on legislation that has been submitted for the 90th annual NCAA Convention January 6-10 in Dallas. This installment features the 13 proposals of the eligibility grouping and the 15 proposals of the playingand-practice-seasons grouping.

A collaborative effort between the NCAA and the United States Olympic Committee (USOC) to relax Association restrictions on Olympic hopefuls has resulted in the proposal that will head the eligibility grouping of legislation at the 1996 Convention.

The measure — which will be considered separately by Divisions I, II is enrolled in less than a full-time proand III as a federated proposal - would open up opportunities for prospective Olympians by permitting them to practice with teams at NCAA institutions.

The proposal would permit a student-athlete who has eligibility remaining but either is not enrolled or gram of studies to practice with a team at that athlete's institution. The proposal also would permit a former student-athlete to practice with a team at the institution that athlete previously attended. In both cases, the USOC or a national governing body (NGB) would be required to recommend that the athlete be permitted to practice.

Such practice would be limited to individual sports and the team sports of crew or synchronized swimming. The athlete would not be permitted to participate in coaching activities, and if he or she has eligibility remaining, such practice would be permitted only during the academic year imme-

Jack Waters, NCAA director of licensing, is leaving the Association staff after 36 years on the job

NCAA's Waters to retire December 31

BY DAVID PICKLE

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.THE NCAA NEWS

They say that wisdom comes with experience, so it should come as no surprise that Jack Waters is a very wise man.

With 36 years of experience on the national office staff, the NCAA's director of licensing is wise enough to know that there is no perfect time to leave. So even though the NCAA's licensing effort seems ready to leap to the next level, Waters will retire December 31.

Waters is aware that the NCAA's commitments and opportunities to licensing and marketing are greater than they ever have been. On December 5, a blue-ribbon committee charged with developing this area held its first meeting. International markets are opening up like never before. The public's appetite for sports merchandise is extreme. The opportunities provided by the Internet are immense.

So why leave now?

"I thought about it," Waters said, "There are new challenges now, but that will always happen. So even if I waited three years, there would still be something new then."

Seen so much change

Indeed, the prospect of change isn't especially daunting for Waters. After all, he has seen so much of it.

Although he officially became an NCAA staff member in 1959, as a practical matter his tenure goes back to 1950, when he joined the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau as an editor and statistician. In 1959, the NCAB

Blown away — Soccer fans came to the rescue of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, November 11, answering pleas to remove snow from the McClimon Soccer Complex field before the first round of the NCAA Division I Women's Soccer Championship. Heavy rain earlier in the week prevented traditional snow removal methods because of potential damage to the wet field. So, several individuals with snow blowers blew the snow to the middle of the field, where young shovelers filled trash barrels and took it away. Wisconsin beat the University of Minnesota, Twin Cities, to advance to the second round, where it lost to the eventual champion, the University of Notre Dame.

■ Briefly in the News

Alma in action against violence

More and more student-athletes are in the news — not just for heroics on the field or court but also for violent behavior outside the stadium or arena

It was concern over student-athlete violence that prompted the football administration at Alma College to invite Stephen Thomas to campus. Thomas is a counselor at Central Michigan University and author of the book "No More Fear" — a treatise on athlete issues such as violence and date rape.

"When our football staff presented the idea for this program, we thought it would be beneficial for all of our athletes to be aware of this issue," said Denny Griffin, athletics director at Alma. "We are trying to prepare athletes to be role models and avoid the problems other schools have experienced."

Thomas presented some disturbing statistics to the more than 150 male and female student-athletes who assembled. He said one of every two women present would be sexually victimized at some time in their lives and that 70 percent of female suicides and drug abuse are related directly to sexual abuse or assault.

Focusing on three target areas, Thomas encouraged the athletes to be aware of the consequences of their actions. He said athletes need to maintain situational awareness and learn more about the people with whom they associate. Third, he stressed communication with members of the opposite sex regarding intentions or expectations.

"The coaches felt that this was a very worthwhile event for their athletes," Griffin said. "Alma plans on implementing more of these programs throughout the year, possibly on substance abuse and making career choices in coaching."

Aggies take act to prison

The Texas A&M University, College Station, women's basketball team recently performed community service in an unusual place — prison. The Lady Aggies visited the federal women's prison in Bryan, Texas, to host a clinic during the inmates' exercise breaks.

The prison is home to more than 600 inmates, ranging in age from 19 to 92. The prison is divided in two sectors, including a pilot "boot camp" program that offers inmates reduced sentences in exchange for a disciplined daily regimen. Although they are limited in their "outside" access, some inmates have served as volunteers in the Bryan-College Station area for the Special Olympics and the Games of Texas.

Members of the Texas A&M University, College Station, women's basketball team held a clinic for inmates at the federal women's prison in Bryan, Texas. The players and coaches gave one-on-one instruction in ball-handling skills and other areas.

To show appreciation for those volunteer efforts, the Lady Aggics invited the inmates to attend a game on campus. But governmental procedures and a climate demanding "no frills" prison reform made the trip impossible, said Tina Cheatham, assistant athletics director for women's athletics at Texas A&M.

So, the Lady Aggies took their show to the prisoners, providing one-on-one instruction in ball-handling skills and drills mixed with contests between the two groups.

"For a brief time, the inmates, whether participating or watching, shared a laugh and a smile with the youthful, exuberant and talented Lady Ags," Cheatham said. "The Lady Ags, on the other hand, looked reality in the face, understanding how fortunate they are in their present lives and how quickly that could change pending certain circumstances. It truly was a memorable occasion for all."

School gets Ripkenmania

Bowling Green State University is the recipient of a piece of Major League Baseball history.

When Baltimore Orioles shortstop Cal Ripken Jr. broke the consecutive-games-played record of 2,130 held by Lou Gehrig September 6, Larry Barnett was the home-plate umpire. Part of his duty that evening was to keep the official lineup card. That card and a game program — both signed by Ripken — were donated to the university.

While it is not certain what plans the university has for the memorabilia, sports information director Steve Barr said the institution one day may sell the souvenirs and establish a scholarship in Barnett's name.

"I think the university is just going to sit on it for a few years and hope it appreciates in value," Barr said. "Any moneys will be used for a scholarship that he's starting."

Ankle snaps streak

Bill Merris had not missed a men's basketball game at Illinois College since taking over the program in 1958 — until recently.

A fall in his office sidelined Merris with a broken ankle, and he missed his team's November 29 game against Fontbonne College. The absence snapped a streak of 842 consecutive games coached by Merris.

Merris' assistant, Dick Schone, filled in for his boss and guided the Blueboys to a 92-75 victory. Merris was expected to miss another four games before the team returns home for a December 12 contest against Webster University.

Griese to emcee honors dinner at NCAA Convention

Former Purdue quarterback in ninth year as broadcaster for ABC game of the week

Television sports commentator Bob Griese will serve as master of ceremonies at the 1996 NCAA honors dinner.

The dinner will be January 7 at the 90th annual NCAA Convention in Dallas.

Griese, one of network television's most respected football analysts, is in his 14th year of broadcasting and in his ninth season as the expert commentator with Keith Jackson on ABC's college football game of the week.

A former all-pro quarterback with the Miami Dolphins professional football club, Griese played a major role in the Dolphins' dominance of the National Football League in the early 1970s. He helped lead Miami to a 17-0 mark in 1972 and the first of two consecutive Super Bowl titles.

His professional career spanned 14 years and included six Pro Bowl appearances and two American Football League All-Star games. Griese directed the Dolphins to a 91-39-1 mark (.698 winning percentage) and became the 14th quarterback in NFL history to pass for more than 25,000 yards. His No. 12 jersey is the only one that has been retired by the Dolphins.

An Indiana native, Griese was a two-time all-American quarterback at Purdue University. He was runner-up in the 1966 Heisman Trophy voting and helped lead the Boilermakers to a 14-13 triumph over the University of Southern California in the 1967 Rose Bowl. Griese was voted the all-time quarterback for Purdue's first 100 years of football

He is a member of the National Football Foundation's College Hall of Fame, Indiana Football Hall of Fame and Florida Sports Hall of Fame. In 1990, Griese was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio.

Griese is president of the Jack Harding Miami Chapter of the National Football Foundation and College Hall of Fame. He also serves on the board of the Don Shula Foundation and on the advisory council of the Orange Bowl Committee.

Griese has three sons, the youngest of whom just completed his junior season as quarterback at the University of Michigan. He and his wife, Shay, live in Coral Gables, Florida.

Restructuring proposal reflects compromises

BY KENNETH A. SHAW AND JAMES JARRETT DIVISION I TASK FORCE TO REVIEW THE NCAA MEMBERSHIP STRUCTURE

The membership-restructuring proposal (1996 NCAA Convention Proposal No. 7) that will be considered at this year's Convention is the result of two years of meetings, conference calls, negotiations and compromises. The men and women who worked on the Division I restructuring plan brought a variety of ideas and issues to the table.

As the cochairs of the Division I Task Force to Review the NCAA Membership Structure, we believe that Proposal No. 7 provides our membership with the best governance system to ensure this Association's and our division's success for years to come.

Our task force can trace its beginning to the 1994 Convention, when the membership unanimously adopted Resolution No. 13. This resolution, sponsored by the NCAA Council and the Presidents Commission, charged all three divisions to develop a restructuring model for consideration by the membership not later than the 1996 Convention.

In the summer of 1994, all three divisions selected restructuring task forces to carry out this responsibility. The group selected to represent Division I's interests included men and women, ethnic minorities, and representatives from Divisions I-A, I-AA and I-AAA. It also included chief executive officers (CEOs) and administrators from a variety of athletics and faculty positions.

This task force has met numerous times during the past 18 months. We believe that the diversity of this group has allowed us to develop a representative plan that should satisfy all constituencies in Division I.

Early in the process, all three divisions agreed to three fundamental principles to govern restructuring. Those principles included: (1) clear presidential authority, (2) greater division autonomy and (3) a simplified administrative structure. Obviously, it is necessary to establish presidential authority to provide

Student-athletes deserve right to work

UNIVERSITY OF HAWAII, MANOA

We are constantly being told that the lone purpose of the NCAA is to better the college experience for the student-athlete. If this is true, then why aren't Division I scholarship student-athletes allowed to

All of America is feeling the pressure of tough economic times, and it is a crime to tell anybody that they are not allowed to work to earn for themselves a little extra money, especially a college student. Many students are fortunate to be recipients of some sort of financial aid, such as Pell Grants, academic scholarships or athletics scholarships. This money helps in a lot of ways, but in no way, in any state or at any institution, is this enough money to survive. In more cases than not, there are elements and factors that are unknown that make it necessary for an added source of income.

The "regular" scholarship student is not restricted from holding down a part-time job. He or she is able to work for an added source of income, and there are no caps placed on how much money that person can or cannot earn. Why should it be any different for the student-athlete? These two types of students still have the same wants

Location is another factor that should be mentioned. It is a fact that the cost of living varies across America. Some areas are extremely high, while others are extremely low. Not only does the cost of liv☐ Student-athlete view ing vary, but so do family incomes. How can you tell a student-athlete who has gone away to college on an athletics scholarship to an extremely expensive part of the country and who comes from a family with a low income that he or she is restricted from earning an income? What sort of life can that person

This restriction will only force these student-athletes to find an income in a fashion that could jeopardize their eligibility.

Brooks

Off-season only

Student-athletes should be allowed to work just like any other scholarship students. I understand that certain sports, especially high-profile and high-revenue sports, don't allow for much spare time during their season. I personally could not imagine going to class full-time, practicing and training the hours we did, and working during the season. But it does seem that employment opportunity during the offseason would have been - and could be to the advantage of not only the student-athlete but to his or her institution and families, too. For example, this could open a lot of doors for upper-division students to partake of internship programs and accept wages if they were offered.

Coaches, parents, athletics directors and deans always are talking about how they want their student-athletes to go out and become successful business people straight out of college. As a recent college graduate, I was hesitant about facing the working world with no "real" job experience or references on my resume.

I think it is about time that the NCAA reevaluate its position on the banning of employment for Division I scholarship student-athletes. The cost of living in America is just too high to tell people that they cannot work. If a student-athlete has an opportunity to earn some money legally, then he or she should be allowed to.

I also do not think that it is necessary for there to be a cap of only $1,500 on the earnings. Not only is this an unrealistic number, but it will be impossible for any institution to keep track of every single dollar that every student-athlete carns.

The bottom line is this: Student-athletes should have the same opportunities for employment that every other student in America has. No one should be restricted from earning a living.

"I've been told by top-20 football coaches they don't feel they can pursue agents who are trying to contact their players because of the fallout. CEOs with the same type of accountability in the Association as they have on their campuses. This authority will guarantee a continuation of the Association's reform movement. Next, greater division autonomy is desired so that each division has a simplified system to properly address needs unique to its members. Finally, anyone who has ever tried to explain the Association's current organizational chart understands why a simplified administrative structure is important. These three principles constitute the restructuring legislation that will be considered during the general business session on Presidential Agenda

Consistent with these principles, it was agreed that each division would develop its own governance system. These division governance structures will be considered by members in each division during their division's business session (immediately following the general business session).

After considering numerous models, the Division I task force agreed that a representative system of governance was necessary in order to operate more efficiently in responding to the needs of the Division I membership. This representative, rather than a town-meeting, form of governance will provide our division with a governance system that allows for a more immediate response to changing conditions. The task force also recognized that this system will provide greater control of their own destinies to those members that are the focus of most of the public attention on intercollegiate athletics and that devote the greatest amount of resources to their athletics programs. Accordingly, this Division I governance system will provide greater representation and authority to such institutions than their number in the membership otherwise would justify.

While the Divisions I-AA and I-AAA representatives on the task force agreed that such changes to Division I governance were important, they insisted that some guarantees be set forth in this new system to ensure that Division I-A will not abuse this authority. As a compromise, Division I-A representatives agreed to establish checks and balances on its authority in this governance structure.

For example, a process will exist that permits Division I member institutions to "override" action taken by their representatives. This process requires a call for a membership vote from at least 30 Division I institutions. This "call for a vote" will initiate a process that may require a Division I membership vote to rescind a Division I legislative change. If such a vote occurs, only a five-eighths majority vote of Division I institutions is required to change the action taken by the Division I representatives.

We believe that this "check in the system" is one of the most crucial elements of the Division I governance plan. This process maintains the concept of institutional votes while incorporating the concept of an efficient, responsive Division I governance system. This check is an excellent example of compromise that was reached during one of our task force sessions. Divisions I-AA and I-AAA representatives urged the adoption of a simple majority (while the Division I-A representatives suggested a two-thirds majority) for a successful override vote. Task force members soon compromised on a five-eighths majority vote that would give Divisions I-AA and I-AAA a legitimate check on the authority vested in Division I-A.

The organizational chart for the proposed Division I governance system that accompanies this article sets forth the composition and duties for each representative group in Division I. We think you will agree that this organizational chart will be much simpler to explain than our Association's current administrative structure.

In Division I, the Board of Directors will have ultimate responsibility for establishing the division's general policy and approving changes to the rules for Division I. These changes can occur at any time during the year, unlike the current Convention process for conducting business. The Management Council will be charged with the responsibility for developing these changes and handling the detail of rules-making consistent with the policy for the division as established by the Board of Directors.

Even though we wanted to develop a governance system that could react efficiently to the changing conditions in intercollegiate athletics and the needs of our Division I membership, the task force also wanted to establish a method to ensure that responsible and informed decisions will be made by the Division I representatives.

Therefore, the task force agreed to establish notice requirements throughout this Division I legislative process. These requirements will keep Division I informed of legislative changes being considered (and legislative action being taken) as a proposal works its way through the Division I system. This will provide each institution with a method of reviewing proposed legislation and communicating its comments and position to its representative.

Even though this representative system eliminates the need to conduct the business of the division at a Convention, we believe there will be a continuing need for Division I institutions to attend the Association's annual Convention. The Convention will be an opportunity to come together to discuss critical issues and to plan for the future. Also, professional development activities, celebratory activities and meetings with colleagues from other divisions may occur at the Convention. It also is possible that there will be a need for occasional legislative action in a Division I business session to review possible "overrides" of Board of Directors or Management Council action.

One recurring question we hear regarding this new governance system is whether institutional CEOs will have the time necessary to oversee this structure. While we agree that this plan provides CEOs with ultimate authority and additional responsibilities, we believe that CEOs will delegate many of their day-to-day duties to the professional athletics administrators and academic personnel serving on the Division I Management Council. Thus, the Division I Board of Directors will function in an oversight capacity to approve actions of the Management Council and to focus on areas of particular presidential concern.

The Division I task force realized early that most of the restructuring issues for our division relate to revenue distribution and championships access. Thus, the task force decided that there had to be a legislated guarantee to continue to apply the current distribution formulas for Division I as to revenue generated through current revenue streams. This guarantee is set forth in the constitution and may be changed only by a two-thirds vote of the Division I membership.

In addition, the task force agreed to guarantee that the current level of access to championships competition in Division I will be maintained. Again, this constitutional guarantee may be changed only by a two-thirds vote of the Division I membership.

With regard to diversity, the Division I task force concluded that it was inappropriate to establish numbers of positions for specific genders, ethnicities or staff positions in a representative system. Rather, representatives should be selected based upon the needs of each conference. The oversight committee, the Presidents Commission and the Council have supported this position.

While guaranteed positions have not been included as part of the proposed Division I governance system. we are confident that the new structure will provide women and ethnic minorities with more opportunities to participate in the management of Division I. For example, for the first time, the responsibility for assuring diversity of representation will rest specifically with CEOs. Thus, the Division I institutional CEOs on the Board of Directors will have the authority to require any subordinate body (for example, the Division I Management Council) to alter its membership to achieve such diversity.

Obviously, for this new system to be successful, the onus for developing a diverse group of individuals eligible for service in the new structure must be placed at the conference and institutional levels. The Division I task force report states that "each of the membership units (for example, conferences and subdivisions) that is authorized to select individuals to serve in the governance structure is to be directed to include plans for assuring diversity among those individuals it identifies." Further, the report states that "the [Division I] institutional CEOs can assist this process by assuring that their campus appointments provide a diverse pool of potential nominces for all NCAA positions."

While restructuring is a relatively simple concept, it has become a complex and complicated action. Many of you have asked that the additional details and the specifics of the new governance system be codified at this year's Convention. However, we are confident that after you review the restructuring proposal in the Official Notice, you will understand why restructuring has always been envisioned as a two-step process.

At this year's Convention, you will be asked to simply approve the foundation and framework of the Association's new structure and ratify the three general principles of presidential authority, greater division autonomy and a simplified administrative structure. Then, each institution will have an opportunity to vote at the 1997 Convention regarding the specifics of each division's restructuring plan. These additional details will be developed by a "transition team" working in 1996 as a model of the ew Division I governance structure The new structure is scheduled to go into effect in August 1997. Thus, the membership will have approximately 18 months to fine-tune the various division governance systems.

While no individual philosophy wins in a process that spans two years, multiple meetings and a series of compromises, we believe that as a group we all win, because we have a plan that takes this Association and our division into a new century. This is why we join the Council and Presidents Commission in wholeheartedly supporting the restructuring legislation. We encourage your institution to join this support.

Basketball committee votes to clarify two interpretations

National Collegiate Men's

In response to questions from schools seeking Division I membership and as a result of conference realignment, the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee has voted to recommend that two existing interpretations regarding automatic qualification be clarified.

At its November 28-30 meeting in Indianapolis, the committee agreed to ask the NCAA Executive Committee to reaffirm the eight-year waiting period currently required before a new Division I member is eligible to serve as a conference's automatic qualifier. In addition, the committee will seek to clarify that the eight years must be the preceding eight years.

Schools that previously were members of Division I but reclassified or dropped their NCAA membership also will be required to be a member of Division I for the preceding eight years before being eligible to serve as a conference's automatic qualifier.

These clarifications do not change the fact that a school may be selected to the tournament field as an at-large selection immediately upon becoming a Division I member.

In addition, the basketball committee will ask that NCAA Bylaw 31.3.4.3.1-(b) be clarified to ensure stability and continuity of conference membership. Currently, if a conference is to regain its automatic berth, after fulfilling a oneyear waiting period it must retain at least three members who were conference participants for the five preceding years.

The basketball committee wants to further specify that at least six of the same schools that were members during the one-year waiting period shall be retained. Currently, the bylaw does not specifically state that the same six schools are required to be members of the conference the previous year.

In other action at its meeting, the basketball committee recommended first- and second-round and regional sites for the 1999 tournament. If approved by the Executive Committee, the following arenas will host tournament competition:

First-/second-round sessions

East: FleetCenter, Boston, March 11 and 13 (Boston College, host); Charlotte Coliseum, Charlotte, North Carolina, March 12 and 14 (University of North Carolina, Charlotte, host).

UCLA lives up to No. I ranking in men's water polo

Nick Kittredge scored three goals for California, but it wasn't enough to stop UCLA from edging the Golden Bears, 10-8, in the championship final.

It took nearly the entire 1995 campaign for UCLA to earn the No. 1 spot in the men's water polo coaches poll, but the Bruins proved worthy of the ranking.

Jim Toring scored four goals and Jeremy Braxton-Brown broke an 8-8 deadlock with 1 minute, 44 seconds, remaining to push the Bruins past California, 10-8, in the National Collegiate Men's Water Polo Championship December 3 at Stanford.

UCLA (20-6), which didn't earn the No. 1 ranking until week No. 10 of the poll, claimed its fourth championship — but first since 1972. The Bruins, who defeated UC San Diego, 21-10, in the semifinals, rank third behind California (11) and Stanford (eight) for most water polo championships.

California (20-7), which defeated UCLA in the Mountain Pacific Sports Federation championship game, finished as runner-up for the sixth time. The Golden Bears gained their championship-record 17th appearance in the final by knocking off Massachusetts, 10-6, in the semifinals.

UC San Diego beat Massachusetts, 8-7, in the third-place game.

For the first time in its 27-year history, the championship featured a four-team format. Previously, the championship included eight teams.

The final marked the fourth time in championship history that UCLA and California have played each other for the title. Both teams have won twice — California in 1988 and 1991. UCLA also defeated the Golden Bears for the 1969 title.

"This team is balanced, and we play very well as a team," said UCLA coach Guy Baker, who earned his first title. "We can hurt you a lot of different ways. Lots of guys have stepped up, different guys at different times."

Against California, the trio of Toring, Braxton-Brown and senior Adam Krikorian stepped up for the Bruins, combining for eight of UCLA's 10 goals. Braxton-Brown and Krikorian each scored twice

"All four times we played UCLA, the way they beat us was very similar," California cocaptain Nick Kittredge said. "They really use their speed. We found ourselves chasing them a lot during today's game on the counterattack."

UCLA displayed its speed early in the contest in jumping out to a 5-2 second-quarter lead behind Toring's four goals. Three of Toring's game-high total came in the first three minutes of the second quarter.

California rallied to tie the score at 6-6 with 1:46 remaining in the third quarter when freshman Phinney Gardner flipped the ball over Bruins goaltender Matt Swanson. The two teams then traded goals until Braxton-Brown secured the victory with his first goal with 1:44 remaining.

In the third place game, UC San Diego earned its highest championship finish by holding off Massachusetts behind three goals from senior Michael Nalu.

UCLA's Toring, Braxton-Brown, Swanson and Krikorian all were selected to the all-tournament team. Also named were Pat Cochran, Brent Albright and Kittredge of California; Nalu of UC San Diego; and Massachusetts' Luis Limardo.

New face, familiar face grab spotlight in II, III volleyball

Barry defeats defending champs to claim II crown

What's that cliche? If at first you don't succeed, try, try again? In the case of Barry's women's volleyball team, make that just one

After departing quickly from last year's tournament in quarterfinal action, the Buccaneers needed only one more opportunity to win the title. They knocked off two-time defending champion Northern Michigan in four games to claim the Division II Women's Volleyball Championship December 4 in Miami Shores, Florida

Cindy Yuan and Mickisha Hurley led Barry with 14 kills apiece. Yuan recorded a hitting percentage of .370, while Hurley hit .364 for the match and added nine block assists.

The Buccaneers blocked well at the net and held Northern Michigan to a hitting percentage of .066.

Barry got off to a slow start, losing the first game, 15-6, before a home-court crowd of 1,650. However, the Buccaneers rebounded to win the next three games, 15-11, 15-10, 15-9, and take the match — their second win over the Wildcats this season.

Northern Michigan was led by Pauline Schuette and Kathy Jewell, who combined for 33 of the Wildcats' 62 kills. They, however, were unable to overcome double-digit errors.

Barry ended its season with a 34-2 record. Northern Michigan finished the year at 34-3.

Barry bested St. Cloud State (27-5) in the quarterfinals, 15-11, 15-6, 15-12, and eased past Cal State Bakersfield in the semifinals, 15-6, 15-6, 15-6,

Northern Michigan's trek to the final included three-game sweeps over West Virginia Wesleyan (39-3), 15-0, 15-12, 15-6, and Central Missouri State (37-8), 15-8, 15-6, 15-6. The Wildcats held Central Missouri State to a hitting percentage of .010 in the semifinal match while Schuette and Liu Jun combined for 20 kills, 35 assists and 18 digs.

The Roadrunners came back in the thirdplace match to post a five-game win over Central Missouri State, 3-15, 15-12, 10-15, 15-9, 15-13

Barry's Yuan, Hurley and Sonia Gubaidulina were named to the all-tournament team. Also selected were Schuette, Jewell, Liu and Kim Falkenhagen of Northern Michigan; Rachel Gatewood, Krista Geick and Kerri Mears of Central Missouri State; Christy Wieneke of Cal State Bakersfield; and Courtney Powers of St. Cloud

Rally lifts Washington (Missouri) to its fifth straight III championship

Washington (Missouri) was pushed to the brink of defeat but rallied past Cal Lutheran in five games to win the Division III Women's Volleyball Championship December 2 at Wisconsin-Whitewater.

The 15-6, 17-19, 13-15, 15-11, 15-11 victory carned Washington its fifth straight title and sixth in the last seven years. It also was the first time since 1991 that the Bears had been taken to five games in the championship match.

Washington (42-3) scored the final seven points in the first game to take an early lead, but Cal Lutheran (26-3) — which reached the championship match for the first time in its second tournament appearance — won the second and third games to grab a 2-1 advantage.

The Bears rallied behind American Volley-ball Coaches Association Division III player of the year Shelley Swan and bolted to an 11-2 margin in the fourth game before the Regals closed the gap to 12-11. Swan then put away three kills down the stretch to knot the match at two games apiece.

Neither team held more than a two-point advantage in the rally-scored fifth and deciding game until Washington strung together four straight points to stretch a 10-9 lead to 14-9. Swan registered the final kill moments later to secure the crown.

"Shelley played like the player of the year tonight," said Washington coach Teri Clemens, whose Bears are now 32-3 in nine tournament appearances. "Cal Lutheran also has the best backline defense we've played all year. They're a fun team to watch and a fun team to play."

Swan finished the match with 31 kills. Teammates Jennifer Martz and Emmy Sjogren combined for 46 more. Stephanie Habif set most of those kills with 80 assists.

The Bears' 99 kills established a tournament record for most kills by one team in a match.

The Regals were paced by Tracy Little with 20 kills, followed by Darcy White and Karen Kasper with 14 apiece.

Washington advanced from the semifinals past Ithaca in three games, 15-5, 15-4, 15-11. Swan and fellow senior Nikki Gitlin helped the Bears score the first eight points of the first game to set the tone.

Cal Lutheran had to rally from two games down to beat host Wisconsin-Whitewater, 10-15, 6-15, 15-7, 15-11, 15-13, in its semifinal match. Little, Kasper and Jennifer Pappas combined for 40 kills Wisconsin-Whitewater (36-4) swept past Ithaca (41-4), 18-16, 15-9, 15-12, in the third-place match.

Unusual score in overtime lifts Notre Dame to its first I women's soccer championship

Chris Petrucelli nor junior midfielder Cindy Daws even saw turned out to be an eye-opener for women's collegiate soccer as the Fighting Irish downed Portland, 1-0, in the title match of the Division I Women's Soccer Championship December 3 at North Carolina.

Daws' goal off a direct free kick just over five minutes into sudden-death overtime gave Notre Dame its first championship.

"I couldn't see the goal," Petrucelli said. "In the end, it was just a big-time play from a big-

"I actually didn't see the ball go in," Daws said. "There were some people in the way. The next thing I knew, I was mauled over. I guess it did

The goal was part of a Notre Dame strategy that was born moments earlier, Daws said, when some of the Irish players noticed that Portland was slow in setting up the wall on direct free

"When they set up the wall," Daws said, "I realized that the goalie was trying to set up the wall and a lot of the players were turned around, so I just saw the far right open goal."

Daws' kick came from about 25 yards out and bounced once before finding its way just inside the far post

Notre Dame completed the season with a 21-2-2 record, while Portland suffered its first loss of the season and finished 20-1-2.

The lone goal in the championship game may have been unusual, but it was an even more unusual "own goal" in the semifinals that vaulted the Irish past previously unbeaten and topranked North Carolina — a team that posted

A goal that neither Notre Dame head coach a 5-0 win over Notre Dame in last year's title

North Carolina, dominant in women's soccer since championship play began in 1982, saw its reign of nine straight championships end after Daws headed a ball that ricocheted off North Carolina's Cindy Parlow into the Tar Heel net with fewer than 20 minutes gone in the game. The Notre Dame defense took over from there and protected the 1-0 victory. Jen Renola made five saves in posting her third of four consecutive shutouts in the tournament.

The loss was just the second in 44 tournament games for North Carolina (25-1), and just the second at home (including regular- and postseason play) in Tar Heel history.

"If we are to lose a game, I love for it to be to a team who plays an attractive style and a team who always plays at the highest level," said Tar Heel coach Anson Dorrance, who had guided North Carolina to 12 titles overall. "That's what we saw with Notre Dame."

"I could tell before the game that we were ready to play," Petrucelli said. "Right before we came on the field to warm up, I went into the locker room and they were all singing, 'Lean on Me' together. To me, that meant they were loose and excited."

Portland advanced to the championship game with a 4-2 win over Southern Methodist (23-1-1). Pilot all-American Shannon MacMillan had a goal and an assist in the victory.

Portland coach Clive Charles, who also coaches Portland's men's soccer team, went coast-to-coast during the weekend, coaching the women in Friday's semifinal match, then flying to Santa Clara Saturday night to coach the men

Notre Dame upset nine-time defending champion North Carolina, 1-0, in the Division I semifinals, then followed with a 1-0 victory against Portland in the title match.

Owls' two first-half goals enough to win II men's soccer

Southern Connecticut State wins fourth title

Southern Connecticut State scored two goals in a six-minute span midway through the first half and then made them stand up for a 2-0 victory over host South Carolina-Spartanburg in the Division II Men's Soccer Championship December 3.

Gil Hokayma found the net first for Southern Connecticut State, volleying a throw-in from teammate Chris Houser for a 1-0 lead. Hokayma then fed Carlos Rocha on a corner kick six minutes later to pad the Owl margin.

It was the fourth championship for the Owls — all in the past nine years and the victory completed a 21-1-1 campaign

South Carolina-Spartanburg (17-5-2) was making its first title-game appearance and fifth tournament appearance overall.

"Southern Connecticut is the best team in the country and they showed that today," South Carolina-Spartanburg coach Greg Hooks said. "But I was proud of our team to get this far. Our players played hard all day to-

"This summarizes our theme for the year," Southern Connecticut State coach Ray Reid said. "Unlike past years, we set our team goal to win the NCAA championship and really earned it. This was our best defensive effort of the year."

Both teams had to survive suddendeath overtime in the semifinals. Southern Connecticut State outlasted Cal State Bakersfield (18-3-1) when Sherwin Mullin beat two Roadrunner defenders and scored from 18 yards out just over nine minutes into sudden death for a 2-1 win.

South Carolina-Spartanburg needed a goal by reserve Peter Kirkelos 10 victory over Mercyhurst (12-7-3).

"Two of our goals were scored by players who didn't start," South Carolina-Spartanburg's Hooks said. "The hardest thing we have to do is decide which 11 players to start each game. We have a lot of depth when we're

Both Southern Connecticut State and South Carolina-Spartanburg bested previously unbeaten teams in the second round. Southern Connecticut State downed Franklin Pierce, 4-2, in overtime, while South Carolina-Spartanburg won at Tampa, 1-0.

Legislation

Proposals include measures to modify '2 I-year-age rule'; event-certification procedure also on agenda in Dallas

diately preceding the Olympic Games.

The proposal resulted from meetings of a joint NCAA-USOC task force that was formed to strengthen the relationship and improve cooperation between the two organizations.

'21-year-age rule'

Two other eligibility proposals would amend the Division I rule establishing the age after which a newly enrolled student-athlete is charged seasons of competition for participation in organized sports competition.

One of the proposals would revise that legislation — known as the "21-year-age rule" — to include students first entering a collegiate institution on or after August 1, 1992, rather than August 1, 1995. The purpose of the proposal is to include a relatively small number of studentathletes who already were enrolled in NCAA institutions before the current rule went into effect and who were adversely affected by the previous rule, which set the age at 20.

The other proposal seeks to create an exception to the "21-year-age rule" in men's ice hockey. That exception would permit a prospect to avoid losing a season of competition due to participation in organized noncollegiate competition if that prospect enrolls in a collegiate institution during the 12 months following the 21st birthday.

That proposal has drawn opposition from the NCAA Legislative Review Committee, which originally proposed the current rule that was adopted at last year's Convention. The committee, which proposed the rule for purposes of deregulation and simplification, believes the proposed exception runs counter to those purposes.

Previous organized noncollegiate competition also is the focus of a proposal involving Divisions I and II tennis.

This proposal would require any student-athlete who does not enroll in college within one year after completion of high school to forfeit a season of competition for every year between high-school graduation and college enrollment in which that athlete participates in organized tennis competition. The proposal also would require the athlete to complete an academic year in residence at the college before competing in collegiate competition.

Other proposals

A variety of other eligibility issues also are addressed in the grouping.

Included is a proposal recommended by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports that would render permanently ineligible any student-athlete who tests positive for a second time for use of an NCAA banned substance — regardless of when the positive test occurs.

Current legislation penalizes only studentathletes who test positive a second time after regaining eligibility following an initial positive test. The committee believes a second positive test should result in permanent ineligibility even if it occurs during the initial period of ineligibility.

Other proposals in the eligibility grouping would:

- Eliminate a potential source of academic abuse by discontinuing the use of eighth-grade courses to satisfy core-curriculum requirements for initial eligibility. Students who complete legitimate core courses during eighth grade still could have such courses accepted through waivers granted by the Council Subcommittee on Initial-Eligibility Waivers.
- Extend the temporary initial-eligibility certification period for nonrecruited student-athletes through the nontraditional season in women's crew. The NCAA Academic Requirements Committee and Special Committee to Oversee Implementation of the NCAA Initial-Eligibility Clearinghouse oppose providing such sport-specific exceptions to the temporary-certification provision.

- Amend Division II satisfactory-progress legislation to require that grade-point averages be calculated only on the basis of course work taken at the institution that is certifying a studentathlete's progress. The Academic Requirements Committee supports the proposal.
- Simplify legislation assigning to the Academic Requirements Committee authority to waive restrictions on use of correspondence and extension courses in determining a student's academic standing or satisfactory progress. Another proposal would broaden the committee's authority to consider all waiver requests related to satisfactory progress.
- Amend transfer regulations. One of these proposals would permit a student-athlete who completes an undergraduate degree at one institution and enrolls in another school's graduate or professional school to use the one-time transfer exception and become immediately eligible for competition at the second school, provided that the student has eligibility remaining. Another proposal would modify the "4.2.4" transfer rule to permit a student who enrolls but does not compete at a two-year college to transfer and be eligible immediately for competition at a four-year institution, under the two-year nonparticipation exception applicable to "4.4" transfers.

A third proposal relating to transfers would specify that a student who was not a qualifier and who transfers to a Division II institution shall not be eligible for subvarsity competition during the first academic year in residence at that insitution.

Playing and practice seasons

The playing-and-practice-seasons grouping is headed by a Council-sponsored proposal that would change the procedure for granting exceptions to limits on the number of contests an NCAA team may play in a season.

The proposal, recommended by the NCAA Special Committee to Review Contest Exemptions, would establish criteria for evaluation of events seeking such exemptions and make the NCAA Special Events Committee responsible for certifying events' compliance with those criteria.

Currently, exceptions to legislation limiting contests in a season are considered on a case-by-case basis at Conventions. Concerns about the growing number of events seeking exemptions in recent years and a lack of criteria for consideration of those requests prompted the formation of the Special Committee to Review Contest Exemptions and the resulting proposal.

Member institutions have proposed five amendments-to-amendment to modify various aspects of the special committee's proposal. The most significant of those amendments-to-amendment would permit a Division I institution to participate in an exempted preseason football contest once every four years, instead of the eight years proposed by the committee, and would loosen a provision permitting only one team from a Division I conference to participate in exempted preseason football events in an academic year.

The NCAA News will publish more information on this proposal — including a detailed list of proposed exemptions for existing events — in its December 18 issue.

Two other proposals seek specific exemptions for events that otherwise would be subject to certification under the Special Committee to Review Contest Exemptions' proposal.

One of the proposals seeks again to permit institutions to exempt annually one contest in the Great Eight Basketball Festival from the limit on basketball contests. Division I members rejected such a proposal last year, despite the Division I-A Athletic Directors Association's arguments that the festival benefits all Division I institutions by generating funds for the CHAMPS/Life Skills Program.

Another proposal seeks to exempt annually participation in one season-ending tournament in each of five sports — baseball, field hockey, lacrosse, soccer and softball — from limits on contests and dates of competition.

Other proposals

Other proposals in the grouping would:

- Limit out-of-season, voluntary workouts permitted under the safety exception in Division I and eliminate the two-hour limit on individual skill workouts within the permissible eight hours of weekly out-of-season participation in countable activities.
- Adjust the beginning of practice for the nontraditional season in Divisions I and II tennis and for Divisions I and II institutions that conduct their traditional segment in tennis during the fall.

Alabama penalties reduced, but postseason ban upheld

The NCAA Infractions Appeals Committee has vacated one of the violations and reduced two of the penalties in the infractions case involving the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, but has upheld the ban on competing in a postseason bowl game following the 1995 football season.

The committee held a hearing on Alabama's appeal November 16, 1995, in Atlanta. The committee eliminated the third year of probation and third year of grants-in-aid penalties previously imposed by the NCAA Committee on Infractions, and vacated a finding of unethical conduct against the institution's former faculty athletics representative after determining that adequate notice had not been provided.

The infractions case concerned violations involving a lack of institutional control, impermissible loans, unethical conduct and use of an ineligible student-athlete in its football program.

The university appealed the finding that the institution's former faculty athletics representative violated NCAA standards of ethical conduct by providing false and misleading information to the NCAA eligibility staff. It sought a reduction from three years of probation to two, a removal of the ban on postseason competition in football during the 1995-96 academic year and a removal of the penalty reducing initial football scholarships for the 1997-1998 academic year.

With respect to the unethical-conduct finding, the university and the former faculty athletics representative argued that a procedural error affected information that was used to support the finding. The institution maintained that no notice was given that an unethical-conduct violation was being considered and, as a result, no opportunity was available to present a defense to that charge.

The Committee on Infractions asserted that it had provided notice concerning a possible unethical-conduct violation in several communications. The Committee on Infractions also noted that it is empowered to make new findings of violation resulting from information developed or discussed during a hearing. All parties agreed that the former faculty athletics representative never was formally charged with a possible violation of the specific bylaw covering unethical conduct.

The Infractions Appeals Committee referred to NCAA bylaw provisions that emphasize the importance of notice. It also stated that while the NCAA is not bound by the due-process clauses of the U.S. Constitution, the enforcement program should provide those protections that are necessary for fairness, which is reflected in the bylaws.

The committee found that the Committee on Infractions' communications did not provide adequate notice of the charge in this instance, and agreed that the lack of notice affected the information used to support the finding. As a result, the committee vacated the finding.

Alabama also appealed several of the penalties imposed by the Committee on Infractions on the grounds that they were excessive and inappropriate based on the evidence and circum-

In examining the penalties, the committee looked at factors such as the nature, number and seriousness of the violations, corrective action taken by the institution, proportionality of the penalties imposed, institutional cooperation with the investigation, the impact of penalties on innocent student-athletes and coaches, and the purposes of the NCAA enforcement program.

The committee found that the institutional-control violation in this case, while serious, did not include some of the elements contained in previous cases in which it had upheld serious penalties. Those elements included numerous or repeated violations, violations that were flagrant and deliberate, and violations of recruiting rules that were intended to provide the institution a competitive advantage. In addition, the institution took appropriate corrective action and cooperated fully in the investigation.

The committee concluded that the third year of probation and the reduction in the number of initial football scholarships by nine during the 1997-1998 academic year were excessive and inappropriate. It set aside those penalties.

The committee did conclude that the ban on postseason competition in football during the 1995-96 season was neither inappropriate nor excessive and let that penalty stand. The committee noted that this penalty is standard under NCAA bylaws in cases in which any one of the following three factors are present: (1) involved individuals remain active in the program; (2) a significant competitive advantage results from the violation(s); or (3) the violation(s) reflect a lack of institutional control. The committee noted that all three factors were present in

In a final section of the report, the Infractions Appeals Committee commented on the summary-disposition process under which this case was initially submitted. That process is used when the NCAA member college or university and the NCAA enforcement staff agree on the violations that occurred. Instead of a hearing, the two groups jointly prepare a report for review by the Committee on Infractions tee noted that under the summarydisposition process, the Committee on Infractions must decide if it can accept the findings in the joint report. It cannot direct the enforcement staff to make different or additional findings nor can it make such findings on its own prior to a full hearing. It acknowledged that the Committee on Infractions can recommend that the enforcement staff and institution reconsider the agreed-upon statement of findings or can direct that the case be presented in a full hearing. The Infractions Appeals Committee commented that the summary-disposition process provides a beneficial alternative to the official inquiry and hearing procedures, has worked well, and its use, when appropriate in future cases, is encouraged.

The members of the Infractions Appeals Committee who heard this case are Marshall M. Criser (acting chair), Katherine E. Noble, David Price and John W. Stoepler. Michael L. Slive, chair of the committee, recused himself from this case because he is being represented in an unrelated personal matter by a member of the same law firm with which the institution's independent legal counsel is associated.

The complete report of the Infractions Appeals Committee will be published in the December 25 issue of The NCAA Register.

Committee gives Miami (Florida) three-year probation

The NCAA Committee on Infractions placed the University of Miami (Florida) on probation for three years for NCAA rules violations in its football, baseball, women's golf and men's tennis programs.

The university also will be banned from postseason football competition for one year and receive reductions in scholarships in all four sports, including a reduction by 13 in new football scholarships for the 1996-97 academic year and by 11 for 1997-98.

The committee found violations including more than $223,000 of impermissible financial aid distributed among 141 football student-athletes and $188,000 in the three other sports and extra benefits totaling more than $212,000. The committee also found a lack of institutional control and monitoring of the athletics program.

The Committee on Infractions heard this case November 10, 1995. Representatives of the university, the Big East Conference and the NCAA enforcement staff appeared before the committee.

The Committee on Infractions found NCAA rules violations, including:

- During the 1990-91 through 1993-94 academic years, the university awarded more than $412,000 in excessive financial aid. The institution improperly calculated the off-campus room and board stipends for 141 football student-athletes and an undetermined number of baseball, women's golf and men's tennis student-athletes. Instead of using the cost of the university's normal meal plan available to all students, as required by NCAA rules, the higher cost of the training table meal plan was used to calculate financial aid.
- During the 1989-90 and 1990-91 academic years, an athletics department staff member provided extra benefits to 60 to 77 studentathletes by assisting them in fraudulently obtaining a total of a maximum of $212,969 in Pell Grant funds. The staff member provided this service only to student-athletes and a few students with ties to the athletics department. Fifty-five of the students were members of the football team; the others participated in basketball, swimming, golf, baseball, track, tennis and crew. The average of funds received by the student-athletes was approximately $1,970 each. The job description for the staff member did not include any responsibilities with relation to financial aid. His immediate supervisor became aware that he was assisting student-athletes with financial aid matters but did not inform her supervisor or the director of athletics.

- During the 1985-86 through 1991-92 academic years, numerous football student-athletes were compensated during the academic year for employment arranged by two former student-athletes. That compensation should have counted toward their total financial aid package. Because it was not counted, the student-athletes received financial aid in excess of a full athletics scholarship.
- During the 1986 through 1992 football seasons, numerous football student-athletes received cash awards between $20 and $200 for their performances in regular-season and postseason football games from a pool contributed to by the student-athletes and on at least one occasion by a former student-athlete. The head football coach and an associate director of athletics were aware of the existence of the pool.
- During the 1993-94 and 1994-95 academic years, the institution's athletics department failed to follow the institution's drugtesting policy and permitted three football student-athletes to compete without being subject to the required disciplinary measures specified in the policy.
- The assistant director for academics in athletics support services violated NCAA standards of ethical conduct by his knowing effort to provide student-athletes with extra benefits by creating a fraudulent system that allowed student-athletes to receive a federal grant for which they did not qualify.
- From the 1989 fall semester through the 1993 fall semester, the university permitted approximately 40 to 60 student-athletes each semester to receive an average of $110 in books that were not course-related or were not required. These impermissible book awards resulted in excessive financial aid to student-athletes.
- The scope and nature of the violations and the length of time that some went undiscovered demonstrate a lack of appropriate institutional control and monitoring of the university's athletics program.

The university disputed its responsibility for the extra benefits that occurred because of the Pell Grant fraud since they resulted from the criminal activity of an employee. The committee noted that while NCAA bylaws do not address criminal activity, that does not preclude the finding of an NCAA violation that results from or is related to criminal behavior. The committee wrote, "In this case, the Pell Grant funds with few exceptions were obtained for student-athletes, which thus constituted a violation of NCAA extra-benefits legislation as well as federal criminal law."

The committee considered corrective actions self-imposed by Miami (Florida), including:

- Revamped its Pell Grant application assistance, including instituting new checks and balances and monitoring systems beyond federal regulations.
- Developed and adopted a new drug-testing policy drafted by nationally recognized experts.
- Assigned a high-level task force to review the administrative structure within the athletics department with particular attention focused on the drug-testing policy.
- Indicated it will refine its procedures concerning student-athlete employment, volunteering and public appearances during the academic year.
- Issued a letter of reprimand to the two individuals involved in securing employment for the student-athletes.
- Established procedures regarding the presence of former student-athletes in the team locker room and on the sidelines during football games.
- Placed all responsibility with the compliance office for purchasing books for student-athletes and tutors and instituted an issuance and retrieval policy for books for all student-athletes.
- Indicated it will issue a letter of reprimand to the assistant athletics director for academic support and student services regarding providing student-athletes with only course-related books.

The Committee on Infractions adopted as its own the following penalties self-imposed by the institution:

■ The number of initial football scholarships was reduced by seven during the 1995-96 academic year, which limited the institution to 18 initial scholarships.

■ The total number of football scholarships allowed was reduced by five during the 1995-96 academic year, which limited the institution to 80 scholarships.

The Committee on Infractions imposed additional penalties, including:

- Three years of probation, beginning November 10, 1995, the date of the hearing.
- The institution's football team will end its 1995 season with the playing of its last regularly scheduled, in-season contest and will not be eligible to participate in any postseason competition.
- The number of initial football scholarships allowed will be reduced as follows: for 1996-97, Miami will be able to offer 12 new scholarships, a reduction of 13; for 1997-98, Miami will be able to offer 14 new scholarships, a reduction of 11.
- The maximum total number of all football scholarships, new and renewed, will be reduced by five during each of the 1996-97 and 1997-98 academic years, limiting the university to 80 football scholarships each year.
- The number of baseball scholarships will be reduced by 6.12 over three years. The maximum allowed in baseball each year is 11.7; Miami's total over three years must add up to a maximum of 28.98 instead of 35.1.
- The number of men's tennis scholarships will be reduced by 1.98 over three years. The maximum allowed in men's tennis each year is 4.5; Miami's total over three years must add up to a maximum of 11.52 instead of 13.5.
- The number of women's golf scholarships will be reduced by 1.06 over three years. The maximum allowed in women's golf each year is six; Miami's total over three years must add up to a maximum of 16.94 instead of 18.
- Recertification of the university's athletics policies and practices.
- Develop and implement a comprehensive educational program on NCAA legislation.

Eye-catching change

Officiating crew for I women's basketball championship in '96 will expand from two to three

BY LAURIE BOLLIG

Two plus one equals six.

Go ahead: Check the math. The equation works out just right for coaches and officials who will participate in the 1996 Division I Women's Basketball Championship.

Beginning next year, the traditional two-person officiating crew will be expanded to three members, meaning six eyes will be trained on action during the tournament.

"Thank goodness," Sylvia Hatchell said emphatically.

Hatchell, head women's coach at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, has reason to be concerned with court coverage. Her 1994 team won the national championship on a less-than-last-second three-point shot.

"There's no question it makes a difference, because you've got six eyes out there. The physical play away from the ball, the referee having people in place to watch all the three-point shots.

It doesn't matter how good they are, when you've got six eyes, that's better than four eyes."

The Division I women's tournament and the Division III Men's Basketball Championship will use three-person officiating crews for the first time in 1996. The Division I men's championship has used three officials in games for 17 years, while the Division II men's tournament has employed three officials

Playing under different rules

"One of the things we do with most major rules changes we make is that we wait until half of the conferences are utilizing the rule," said Linda Bruno, chair of the NCAA Division I Women's Basketball Committee and commissioner of the Atlantic-10 Conference. "We weren't quite at half the conferences using the three-person crew, but we found that the majority of teams going on to postseason play were not used to the two-person crew. We really felt we had an obligation to the coaches and student-athletes not to make them play under two different sets of rules."

Three-person officiating crews have been used in regularseason women's basketball competition for three years, said Marcy Weston, NCAA national coordinator of women's basketball officials and senior associate athletics director at Central Michigan University.

Weston said 23 Division I conferences will use three-person crews during conference play in 1995-96.

Veteran official Dee Kantner has begun her second year officiating exclusively as part of a three-person crew. Kantner said officials who made the transition from three-person crews during the regular season to two-person crews during the tournament shared one collective emotion.

"Frustration — on behalf of the players and coaches and maybe the spectators as well. We knew that we couldn't get everything in a two-person crew," Kantner said.

Athletes' strength dictates change

Kantner said the reasons for going to three officials in the men's game now are present in the women's game.

"Definitely, the athletes are bigger and stronger," Kantner said. "They are fast. We're not far from seeing above-the-rim play. The athletes' strengths dictate that we need three officials."

"No. 1, the game will be covered more completely endline to endline, meaning referees will be in position to make calls with much more frequency than in two-person crews," Weston said. "There will be another pair of eyes on the play. That means your off-ball play, screening and post play will be much better monitored than it is in a two-person crew."

Weston's duties will become more challenging as she works to increase an already small pool of experienced women's officials.

"There is less court you're responsible for with having a third person on the floor; therefore, a third person with less experience is a valuable member of a three-person crew," Weston said. "Three officials perhaps with a little less experience could do a better job than perhaps two officials with more experience because of fewer responsibilities on the court."

Not that two experienced officials will try to protect a less-qualified official, adds Kantner.

"There are people out there who are striving to work Division I women's basketball. Those bodies are out there," Kantner said. "I have no fear we can develop three strong officials. With two other bodies out there, maybe we can get them seasoned better."

Baylor sues former coach

Baylor University has filed suit against former basketball coach Darrel Johnson, alleging that academic fraud in his program caused substantial damage to the school.

Baylor, which fired Johnson and imposed sanctions on its basketball program after the scandal broke, is seeking unspecified damages.

However, Baylor's attorney told The Associated Press that damages to Baylor could exceed $750,000.

"I'm talking about hard damages from loss of revenue and money you had to pay out," said Kirk Watson of Austin, who filed the suit November 27 in U.S. District Court in Waco, Texas.

Johnson was acquitted earlier this year of federal fraud charges stemming from the scandal.

However, Watson said Johnson's contract included ensuring that the program complied with NCAA, Southwest Conference and university rules.

"He was the person responsible for that basketball program," Watson said. "He failed to meet the terms of his contract by not being knowledgeable of all the rules, by not complying with all the rules and by not assuring compliance of all the rules."

Magazine recognizes top gender-equity achievements

Athletic Management magazine has announced the winners of the first "Atalanta Awards for Women's Athletics."

The magazine noted that many athletics programs are "ignoring the rhetoric and quietly achieving gender equity in their sports programs in unique and creative ways. These schools are taking that extra step to ensure the success of women's sports at their institutions without antagonizing the men's programs."

The Atalanta Awards are designed to recognize, honor and publicize such programs.

Atalanta is a Greek mythological figure famous for being the best athlete in Calydon. She was the fastest runner in Greece and a hunter with great courage and skill.

The college winners are:

Starting New Sports: University of California, Berkeley. California won for its implementation of new women's water polo and golf teams. The athletics department conducted an extensive and impressive genderequity review before deciding to implement those two sports. It then hired high-quality coaches and started fund-raising campaigns.

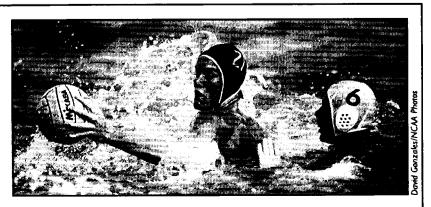

University. Harvard won for a symposium it conducted on eating disorders in female athletes and for implementing several special programs to assist its women athletes. Those programs include leader ship seminars for team captains, educational programs for coaches, education of student agencies on athletics culture and addition of medical support staff. The program also was honored for the Harvard Radcliff Foundation for Women's Athletics.

■ Role Models: Vivian Fuller, athletics director at Northeastern Illinois University. Fuller is one of only a handful of female athletics directors in Division I. She was a member of the NCAA Gender-Equity Task Force and is active in the Black Women in Sports Foundation.

■ Successful Teams: The University of Winnipeg, for its women's basketball team. This team has won 88 games in a row, won three Canadian Interuniversity titles and changed the sport in Canada. Team members also have worked hard to be role models for younger athletes in Manitoba.

1995 Column No. 44

NCAA Bylaw 14.5.5.4 Competition in the year of transfer

NCAA Divisions I and II institutions should note that in accordance with Bylaw 14.5.5.4, a transfer student from a four-year institution who has received a waiver of or exception to the transfer residence requirement pursuant to 14.5.5.3 is not eligible to compete during the traditional segment at the certifying institution if the student-athlete has competed during the traditional segment during the same academic year in that sport at the previous institution. During its May 25, 1995, telephone conference, the NCAA Interpretations Committee determined that if a student-athlete competes for an institution that determines the length of its playing season by using the 144-day traditional-segment option (i.e., individual sports) or competes for an institution that conducts one continuous traditional segment, the student-athlete may not compete during the traditional segment of the same academic year in that sport upon transfer to another Division I or II institution.

NCAA Bylaw 12.1.2-(g)

Entertainment expenses for parents or legal guardians

NCAA institutions should note that in accordance with 12.1.2-(g), a nonprofessional organization sponsoring an athletics competition may provide actual and necessary expenses or other expenses (e.g., entertainment) to the parents or legal guardians of individuals participating in a competition without jeopardizing the individual's amateur status in that sport, provided the expenses are made available to the parents or legal guardians of all participants in the competition. Further, during its August 24, 1995, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a nonprofessional organization sponsoring a competition (e.g., postseason bowl game) may provide entertainment "free of charge" to the parents or legal guardians of all participants in the competition, provided the institution is not involved in any manner in the sponsorship arrangements

Extra benefits/preferential benefits

NCAA institutions should note that during its October 23, 1995, telephone conference, the Interpretations Committee determined that a student-athlete is determined to have received an improper benefit at the time the student-athlete accepts a benefit associated with an item that is not otherwise permissible under NCAA legislation. The committee noted that in situations in which a student-athlete accepts, but does not actually use, the impermissible item, such information may be considered as a mitigating factor in any appeal for restoration of the student-athlete's eligibility. For example, if a student-athlete receives an item from an agent from which a benefit may accrue, the student-athlete jeopardizes his or her eligibility at the time the student-athlete accepts the item, even if the student-athlete does not actually use the item.

In a related matter, an auditing requirement was enacted as part of the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, which became effective July 1, 1994.

"Back then," Waters recalled, "we would get football stats sent to us by Western Union, straight from the press boxes. All sorts of things could happen. They could miss a page, players might not be listed, Western Union might fail to deliver.

"Columns of figures would be entered by hand and totaled using an adding machine. Then the stats would be typed up, stenciled and reproduced and then folded and metered by hand. And we would get them out on Sunday night."

Which, as it happens, is when statistics are distributed now, 45 years later, except that now they are compiled and distributed through the use of high-tech fax machines and com-

Although Waters is comfortable with change, he does marvel at the advances in technology that have taken place in his professional life-

In many ways, the contrasts between now and then are enormous, but in other ways things are remarkably the same.

But we've all felt that we're dealing with a wholesome product that needs nurturing. This is not to knock another industry, but this is not like selling insurance."

Waters has been involved in marketing and promotion since 1966, when the National Collegiate Sports Service was established. Over time, his job evolved to the point that his primary responsibility has become overseeing the Association's licens-

NCAA licensing has grown steadily and well under his stewardship, and the Association now has one international and 43 domestic licensees, some of whom offer 12 to 15 products. But, as Yogi Berra might say, the future is all ahead of us.

"It's the most intense emphasis I've seen placed on this area," Waters said. "There have been some Whether they arrive with talent or smaller commitments in the past, but this is much broader-based. Good humor and common sense

That information comes from the business side of Waters. His coworkers respect that part of him, but what they like most is his constant good humor and common sense. Whether telling a story or performing a goodnatured mimic, he is always fun to be around. If you don't pay attention, you can overlook his intellect, which is substantial. He is a voracious reader who usually has several books

After December 31, Waters is opening a new consulting business called Evergreen Enterprises in Overland Park, Kansas. He enjoys travel and hopes to do more of it with his wife,

It was when he was traveling earlier this year that he committed himself to retirement.

"Volney Meece (a newspaper sports writer and executive director of the Football Writers Association of Amcrica) died in July and Jim Van Valkenburg (retired NCAA director of statistics) died in September, and that got me to thinking," he said. "I was in Europe on a vacation/business trip and was having a lot of fun, and I thought, 'I should do more of this.''

He's right, of course, but his absence will leave a void on the staff.

How much will his peers miss Jack Waters?

'If I were to be marooned on a desert island and could choose only one companion, I would choose Jack Waters," says Ursula Walsh, the NCAA director of research.

It probably won't come to that, but those who know Waters can appreciatc the sentiment.
